(Successor to A. E. Stanley)
Main and Center Sts. Drugs and Stationery.

HER SUFFERINGS ARE OVER.

After many weeks of patient suffering, Mrs. Bina B. Johnson DeLaney died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mr. Brock in this village last Thursday night. For more than sixteen weeks she seemed to hover between life and death and those who kept vigil at her bedside believed the messenger was very near many times. During her long illness she never complained, but bore her suffering with great fortitude. Everything possible was done for her comfort and to allay the ravages of the malady which had taken hold upon her.

She deceased was born in Geneva, N. Y., in 1844, and while yet an infant was brought by her mother, who was then a widow to Tuscola county, where the little one's grandparents settled. She grew to womanhood in that section and in May, 1860, was united in marriage to Lewis DeLaney. To this union was born one daughter, Mrs. M. Brock, and there has always existed a peculiar close association between mother and daughter all these years. In all their lives they had not been separated more than a year at most. Mrs. DeLaney was affectionately known as "grandma" to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She possessed a sunny disposition and was like a ray of sunshine in every circle in which she associated herself. Her life was a benediction to those who came under its influence.

Funeral services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brock Saturday afternoon at four o'clock. On Monday the remains were taken to Vassar for burial in the old home cemetery. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Brock and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Sloan.

Early in life she became a member of the Methodist church and was faithful to the cause of her Master until the last. Rev. H. J. B. Marsh conducted the funeral services.

HELEN CHAPMAN WELCH DIES

At her home in this village last Thursday afternoon Mrs. Helen Chapman Welch answered the final summons and passed through the valley of shadows. She had been suffering from a true Christian woman had gone to her reward. The deceased was born in Novi township December 27th, 1842, being one of nine children, to bless the pioneer home of her parents. At the death of her mother she took her place in the home and devoted her life unselfishly to the loved ones of the home circle. In the fall of 1890 she was united in marriage to Jackson Welch and since that time has resided here. Her whole life was spent in this community, where she endeavored to be a large circle of friends.

After Mr. Welch's death, nine years ago, she lived with her brother, the late Randall Chapman. She was a member of the Baptist church for 25 years and took an active part in its work until just before her death. Funeral services were held at the home on Friday street last Saturday afternoon being conducted by Rev. F. G. Brown. Burial took place in Novi. She is survived by two brothers and one sister.

ENJOYED "FAMILY GATHERING."

The first get-together meeting or "family gathering" of the winter was held at the Presbyterian church Friday evening, when members and friends gathered for a social hour and to partake of the splendid supper prepared by the ladies of the November committee. While the guests were visiting and waiting the announcement of supper, a number of the girls and young ladies of the church rendered musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental. It was necessary to spread the tables twice to accommodate all who gathered for the social hour.

TO ENTERTAIN WITH STORIES.

On the afternoon and evening of December 5th, Miss Matson, child librarian in the Batzel branch of the Detroit city library, will conduct story hours for the children and adults of Northville at the Library building. In the afternoon she will entertain the children with stories and in the evening the students of the High school and any one else who would enjoy an evening with stories. Miss Matson is gifted along this special line and a rare treat is in store for Northville.

A Pete Marquet freight jumped the track just north of the station in this village a few days ago, but a badly torn up track was about the only damage done by the accident.

THE UNITED GUN CLUB MET AGAIN.

The November 21 meet of the United Gun club was another fast one. For the size of the club, (there are seven active members), this outfit is rather hard to beat. Frank Hills and Clyde Merritt tied on the forty-seven mark for first place and second honors were also tied up at forty-five between Geo. McCall and H. Passage. Frank Hills was high over all for the day, breaking 98 out of an even hundred, also earning high run. The fifty target scores, regular program are:

Clyde Merritt	47
Frank Hills	47
George McCall	45
H. W. Passage	45
Lou Cammon	33

The sixteen yard practice events were:

F. Hills	49
G. McCall	18
J. Patterson	46
C. Merritt	45
Lou Cammon	44
H. Passage	21 out of 25

We have advertised the fact that we would shoot all winter, and will make good if the members will only turn out. Next regular meet will be December 5th. E. N. PASSAGE, Secretary.

TREATS FOR MUSIC LOVERS.

Percy Springer, the renowned Australian pianist, known throughout three continents as an artist, composer and conductor of first magnitude will make his Ann Arbor debut in the Extra Concert series Tuesday evening, December 2, when he will provide a program of great interest and variety. On Sunday afternoon, December 6, at 3:00 o'clock the next number in the Faculty Concert series given in Hill Auditorium, complimentary by the University School of Music will take place. A miscellaneous program of piano, voice and violin numbers will be offered. The general public is cordially invited. At the last concert in this series, more than 3,000 people were in attendance, coming from all corners of the county. Music lovers in greater and greater numbers are taking advantage of these opportunities of hearing the best music literature. In the Choral Union series Jan Kubelek, the renowned Austrian violinist, will be heard for the first time in Ann Arbor on December 15th.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION BENEFIT.

On Monday evening next at the High school gym there will be given a concert by Detroit talent as a benefit for the High school athletic association. The gentlemen to take part in the program are Albert F. Greenbaum, bass, and one of the best in the city, Norman Coates, piano and E. J. Rollins, soloist and song leader. During the special meetings here many of our people have the privilege of hearing Messrs. Coates and Rollins, and will be glad to hear them again. The program will consist of vocal selections, piano solos and community singing in which all will have a part. General admission will be 35 cents and the admission for school students will be 25 cents. The public is urged to attend this concert and to thus assist the association in its efforts to promote the proper interest and spirit in High school athletics.

WILL ASSIST HOT LUNCH CLUB.

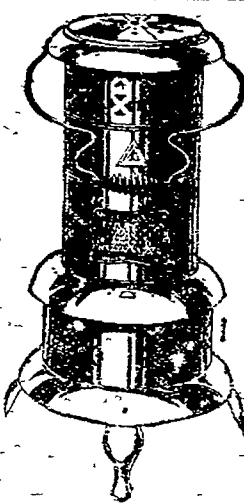

At the meeting of the Woman's club, last Friday afternoon the members had the privilege of hearing G. O. Stewart who has charge of the school hot lunch clubs in Wayne county, and Miss Elda Robb of Lansing, a state worker along this line, explain in detail the work and methods, the objects and benefits of the hot lunch plan. So well were the members pleased with the beneficial results to be obtained that it was agreed that they would assist the plan, which has just been adopted in the Northville schools.

This Friday afternoon, J. H. Russell of the Junior College, Detroit, will address the club on the "History of the Coal Situation." Mr. Russell has spent considerable time in the coal regions of Pennsylvania and has an interesting message.

LIVED MORE THAN 95 YEARS.

At his home on South Center street in this village, an old resident who had lived more than 92 years, passed to the great beyond. The person to whom the death messenger came was Andrew Milton VanTassel, who was born in New York state on October 6th, 1828, making him probably one of the oldest men in Michigan.

Mr. VanTassel came to Northville about eleven years ago from Denton, where he had resided for many years. Funeral services were held at his late home Thursday afternoon and burial took place at Denton.

THE BLUE MOON

A TALE OF THE FLATWOODS

By DAVID ANDERSON

Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

The tall form of the Pearlhunter stiffened in the gloom; his fingers gripped the revolver butt.

"You might get Bull Masterson," he said, "and wait across there on the lower point of Alpiac Island. But don't do anything unless the mob starts. I don't know much law, but I do know the law couldn't hurt you for rescuing a sheriff's prisoner from a mob."

"Law! Law!" The Boss growled. "When I know they've ketch'd the wrong man—"

He would have grumbled still further, but the Pearlhunter urged him to go. With a last whispered word, the sturdy old fellow stole away in the gloom, half reluctant still, as though he felt he was disgracing himself not to stay and fight—somebody.

The Pearlhunter strained his ears for sounds farther up the street, particularly for any loud talk or excitement back of the Mud Hen.

It was the hour just after nightfall, when village streets are most likely to be deserted—the hour when loungers go home to supper. Not a sound out of the ordinary rode the air.

At the moment a door opened on the back porch of the sheriff's house. A square of light picked out the rough boards. The sheriff appeared with a flat basket in the hollow of his arm. A woman's hand pulled back the muslin curtains at a side window and held a candle close to the pane to light him across the jail yard.

The Pearlhunter lounged down on the broken chair. A moment later a ker, scraping unbelievably loud on the dull silence of the jail, hunted its way into the lock. The heavy outer door whined back. A match scraped; the sputtering flame was laid to the stub of a candle; an arm held it through the bars of the inner door.

"Oh, you're awake! It was so quiet in here I thought maybe you might be asleep."

With the air of a man dog tired, the Pearlhunter dragged himself up off the chair, shuffled into the hall and took the stub of candle from the sheriff's hand.

The sheriff furnished three or four dishes and a tin cup of black coffee out of the flat basket and held them close to the bars. He stood well back, talking quite evident pulses to keep his revolver butt out of reach. He did not know there was a very dependable weapon already on the other side of the bars. He made no move to unlock the door or to enter the cell.

None of this escaped the Pearlhunter. The chance to use his glove leg was as good as gone; or rather, it was not going to come. Once he considered the desperate move of drawing his revolver and forcing the sheriff to open the door. But the sheriff was known to be a brave man. He might fight, and if he did, one or the other of them would be killed. The Pearlhunter dismissed the plan.

The woman didn't know there'd be company tonight, the sheriff muttered as he held the dishes within reach of the arm thrust through the bars. "I'm awfully sorry you'll be skimped a little. But I'll try to cook up a plenty in the morning."

He closed the door and turned the key in the lock. The Pearlhunter watched him until he had crossed the square of light shining out from the kitchen and re-entered the house, until the door closed and the muslin curtains fell back into place at the side window. Then he laid the stove leg by. His chance was gone.

The revolver tucked under his waistband at the flank of his back and hidden by his blouse seemed to have a personality. Its friendly presence helped his appetite, though, for that matter, it was already keen enough, as he had eaten nothing since morning. He could have eaten three such suppers as the sheriff provided.

The friendly revolver; the thought of a grizzled old river man, doubtless at that moment rowing hard up the river, took some of the smart out of his cuts and bruises. His left eye was swelling shut. He winked it limber and stood wondering whether to blow out the candle or leave it burn a while; finally blew it out, and went back to the west window.

A sound caught his ear; steps coming down the river road. He listened. The steps turned in at the jail yard, came around to the west window. A face appeared between the bars. Enough light fell from the stars to reveal its identity: the suave, handsome face of the man he least expected to see there.

The Pearlhunter came close to the window. The other backed a step away.

"Pleased to find you in," he sneered. The Pearlhunter passed by the taunt in silence. It seemed to irritate the other that his shot had missed.

"Just thought I'd call around at your—ah—your boarding place this evening and talk over a little matter of business—a sort of proposition—a—ah—bargain," he drawled.

The man on the inside of the bars made no answer. His face was as still as a mask. He hadn't heard. Neither was the other much on talk. He shot straight and talked the same way. Half petulantly he shifted to his other foot; took his thumbs out of his vest pockets. The easy smile left his face; the real man came out—a wildcat, fanged and clawed.

"Till unwork this rotten old jug," he growled, "if you'll bolt the Flatwoods and stop queerin' my game."

His lips snapped tight. His cards were on the table. The Pearlhunter pondered them in his deliberate way and cast up the sum total of their exact value.

First. There would be no mob. Otherwise he would have trusted to that. The meeting behind the Mud Hen had fizzled.

Second. He had no stomach for going into court.

Third. "Queerin'" his "game." What did he mean by his game? He couldn't have meant the Blue Moon, for he didn't know the Pearlhunter knew he had it. His game, that tense scene at the fence the evening before flashed up clear as the river bed under the jack light: a girl with a basket; frightened eyes; a yellow curl that rose and fell upon a startled bosom.

"Till stay where I am," he answered, crisp and cold. "The law put me in; the law can get me out."

The other shrugged his shoulders, furious at the baffling coolness he encountered. And yet he couldn't afford to give up his plans, or spoil them by any untimely show of his real feelings. The easy smile came back.

"Those questions you were expecting to ask—I might answer them to boot."

The Pearlhunter's fingers tightened on the bar. He breathed deep. Those questions! His life through, they had haunted him. And the man before him knew the answer. His face set hard.

"Answer or not, as you please," he said; "but I'll not bolt the Flatwoods. I was expected to ask about my father."

The other whipped a curious look at him.

"Your father," he snarled. The scowl on his face became it better than the smile. "As like you as two peas; with the same lot of fool, Sir Galahad notions about the women—angels and white lilies, and all that got he crossed my path once too often, and for the last time seven years ago. He's in hell now. And your mother—"

The first that stabbed out of the wind fell almost short, landing with a snap instead of a crash like a lash that can reach only so far. It stung the man on the point of the cheek and shot his head back.

He staggered, and threw up his hand to his face. His other hand gavelnarily dropped toward his hip. Well for him that it stopped before it got there. The Pearlhunter had snatched the revolver from under his blouse and held it just above the window ledge.

The man on the outside backed away, his face stung to flame by the blow. He lit for his knife; seemed to remember where he had left it—between the ribs of a man. Anyhow it would have been as useless as the revolver. He concluded the use of the one; walls and bars the other.

"I'd kill you," he retorted finally, his tones steady, though strained, like the current that plays across the top of a whirlpool. "Only I haven't time. There's a flock of yellow curls and a devilish trim pair of ankles waitin' for me down the road."

He was so framed the taunt as to reflect on the girl his very thought dishonored. Without another word he turned and walked away.

The Pearlhunter seriously debated whether to shoot him dead and trust to fate for the rest. The revolver crawled up over the window sill. He pressed one of the bars to steady his hand. A start of surprise came to his face. The revolver went back below the window sill. The bar was loose.

It was almost unbelievable, but it was so. For some reason or other it had not been fixed very firmly in its anger hole sockets. There was play—a heartening amount of it—between the upper and lower anchor holes. His blood missed a beat; then leaped the higher.

He jammed the bar into the lower socket. The bottom of the hole was soft. The rain had probably rotted it. He jammed the bar again and the wood gave. He put all his strength to it. Each effort drove the bar a little deeper; gave it a little more play; at the top. If he could only drive it far enough so that the top would clear! He was working like a wild man.

Bearing down with all his strength, he rotated the bar. The tremendous exertion opened the cuts and scratches on his neck and breast until they bled afresh. He jammed the bar down again; bore upon it with all his strength; rotated it again and again. Less than half an inch still held at the top.

His exertions brought the sweat out upon his face. Another effort; tremendous; to the last ounce of his power.

His hands were like fire—but the air cleared. He could move it a tiny inch to the side of the anger hole. The clearance was ever so little—but it cleared. Braced his knee against the wall and gr meat with his left hand for anchorage, he bent and worked and twisted the bar outward. At last, by a final supreme heave, it cleared the upper log. There remained only to lift it out of the lower anger hole.

The Pearlhunter dropped back panting and mopped the sweat from his face with his sleeve. The effort had been tremendous.

A minute to get his breath; another spent in listening; and he worked the loosened end a little freer; lifted out the bar; crawled outside; put it back into place again, feeling about with his fingers to make sure there were no scars on the wood or bits of chips scraped loose, and stole away under the trees.

It would probably be quite impossible for the city-bred to appreciate fully the feelings of the Pearlhunter at finding the breath of the open woods once more upon his face. The trees were like comrades in arms. The rough bark that covered their stout hearts actually felt friendly and good to his hands as he darted like a shadow from one to the other on his way out of the jail yard and up the side of the bluff.

Well knowing there would be eyes on his trail in the morning, he dared not go directly to where his misgivings urged him. The sheriff he did not fear. To the sheriff he was still the notorious Red Mark. To the mob that was sure to gather he would be the Red Mark. His escape, with lock and bolt untouched, would mystify both mob and sheriff. They would ascribe it to the dread powers with which popular fancy had invested his name.

But in the rubble that would curse and clamor about the old jail there would be one pair of eyes that the loosened bar would not escape; a pair of eyes that would find it as sure as the morning came, and read the riddle at a glance. And they would be eyes capable of finding a trail—and following it. Much as it went against him, therefore, he turned his steps east instead of west and plunged in among the dumped underbrush that grew along the top of the bluff.

Crossing the river road was the problem. Choosing a place where the grass came close to the track on each side, a short distance above where the path leaves it at the turn, he leaped across, and using considerable care to hide his trail, picked his way down along the inside of the brush-tangled fence row.

That path! It led out of an old world into a new. Peering through the bushes he spared a hurried glance toward the low place in the fence where the path crossed. The stars peopled the place with memories. A girl with a basket; round, frank eyes; the sunbonnet caught by an overhanging limb; the curl that wouldn't behave—they all came, to life out of the shadows. So many things had happened since he walked that path with her that it seemed long, long ago; and it was only yesterday.

The picture dissolved. A breath between steps it had held him, and he was off on the long, lanky jog. The memory had brought a half longing to traverse the path again, but prudence warned him to keep away. The sharp eyes in the Flatwoods would be on that path at sunrise.

If the night did hold the menace he feared—that in so many words had threatened—it would undoubtedly develop in or near the three-gabled cabin. As he drew near the place his mastery of woodcraft showed in his approach. The bushes were not allowed to give up a sound.

A light shone through the front windows of the main room of the cabin. He wondered at this. It made him uneasy, for the evening was gone and the night came. Not many candies were alight at that hour in the Flatwoods. He sank back under the bushes and crawled nearer. The muslin curtains were drawn, but no shadows crossed them. The stillness within vaguely disquieted him. He was searching for a way to crawl a little nearer, when the low tones of the cello broke across the silence, and he knew the girl was keeping her lonely vigil beside the stricken old man.

Then came the voice from a throat the gods had kissed. Each tone found a kindred sound in the cello and coaxed it forth to flutter out upon the listening night—in a lustrous wachery that somehow brought to the fancy of the listener under the bushes a picture of soft-winged swallows shimmering over sun-blessed waters.

The figure of a man slid into the gentle glow that beat the night back for a square outside the window—compact; jaunty—the man he had expected to find prowling there. The picture was gone. He had little ear for the music that followed. The hard of the listener at the window stole up against the light and dragged off his hat. The man crouching in the bushes could make out the crisp locks that clung close to the bared head.

The song ended. The last soft harmony of the cello lost itself among the listening trees. There came a muted shuffling inside the cabin; a huge shadow, as of two figures bulked together, crossed the curtain of the window at the west side of the door. The Pearlhunter knew what was happening—the girl leading the stricken man to his bed. But his eyes were upon the still figure outside the window.

One shadow came back, a slim, man shadow; there followed the making of a chair; a head, hung with loose hair, rocked back and forth across the curtain—and the man who crouched under the bushes knew the girl was alone with her thoughts.

The man at the window watched the shadow. It seemed to rouse him to recall fancies that the song had seemed to wander far. He glanced about; pulled himself together; made a last reluctant step toward the door.

The man in the underbrush shifted, slowly, noiselessly as smoke. The man approaching the door seemed to hesitate, stopped. The cello sank down again in the bushes. The heart of the cello took back and forth across the curtains.

It was a strained moment, a three-fingered game in the dark, an uneasy prearranged drama of life and death. More than life, if the honor of a woman is more than that.

The man hesitating before the door had the next play. What hold had he? The song? Perhaps his plans were not yet ripened to the full. He stepped another step toward the door; looked, jerked his shoulders up, saw the girl glared about through his eyes at the rocking shadow, swore softly, turned and started slightly down the path toward faded light.

SYSTEM IN REGULAR SAVING

Money Should Be Made Easy to Deposit and Then Comparatively Hard to Withdraw.

The only way for a man regularly to save money, unless he be one of the individuals possessed of an extraordinarily unfeeling character, according to Samuel Crowther, writing in the System, the Magazine of Business, "is to have the money to be passed into the savings account before it reaches him—that is to put him in the position, as he has made his resolution, of having to make another resolution to give saving in order to stop the process." Finally, take the convenience of withdrawal. A man will rightly hesitate about going into any system of saving which locks up his funds for any long period of time. The average world has no great margin between income and outgo and he has to be prepared for a rainy day—for a birth, for a death, for a long illness. He cannot afford to put a measurable part of his savings out of reach. If his money is to go from him for a long time he very naturally will not deed away anything like so much as he would if the money were always available. On the other hand any system of saving in which withdrawals may be easily and secretly made is faulty. The funds should be available upon short notice, there should be a penalty for withdrawal, which penalty should be large enough to stop withdrawals for frivolous purposes and yet not so large as to work anything which savors of injustice on a man who honestly needs the money.

Immunity From Second Attack.

The United States public health service says that it is well known that an attack of measles or scarlet fever or smallpox usually protects a person against another attack of the same disease. To some extent this appears to be true also of influenza. Just how long such protection lasts is not known.

Some folks' self-admiration protest that there is no accounting for taste.

Makes Hard Work Harder

A bad back makes a day's work twice as hard. Backache usually comes from weak kidneys, and if headaches, dizziness or urinary disorders are added, don't wait—get help before the kidney disease takes a grip—before dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease sets in. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought new life and new strength to thousands of working men and women. Used and recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Wm. J. Hubble, 301 E. 1st St., Holly, Mich., says: "My kidneys hurt and at times I had no control over the secretions. I had severe pains across my back and it put me past going for several days. I felt tired and wasn't much good for any kind of work. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and the trouble left me entirely."

As One Raised From Dead

STOMACH PAINS GONE

Eaton's Made Him Well

"After suffering ten long months with stomach pains, I have taken Eaton's and am now without any pain whatever. Am as one raised from the dead," writes A. Percival. Thousands of stomach sufferers report wonderful relief. Their troubles are too much acidity and gas which Eaton's quickly takes up and carries off, restoring the stomach to a healthy, active condition. Always carry a few Eatons, take one after eating, food will digest well—you will feel fine. Big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

AFTER 7 YEARS OF POOR HEALTH TAKES HYPO-COD

In Just a Few Weeks This Gentleman of Seventy Feels 100 Per Cent Better.

"My life-band, seventy years old, for several years has been in very poor health. He had something like bronchial trouble, a bad cough and for the last year he just couldn't eat anything except light foods and had become so nervous he just couldn't rest at night. The last few months he had been confined to the house, not able to get out," declared a lady whose name and address is given below.

"He had been treated by doctors and taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine and I am glad to say he found the right thing when he began taking Earle's Hypo-Cod. He had been taking Hypo-Cod for about five weeks and improved wonderfully; he goes out now, can sleep good and eats anything he wants and in every way he is 100% better. This tonic has done more for him than all the other treatments put together, including some electrical treatments he took. We can't praise Hypo-Cod too high," continued Mrs. John Gerson, 814 E. Third St., Flint, Mich.

Many people have found Earle's Hypo-Cod ideal according to their statements. It is so pleasant to taste and agrees so nicely with the weakened stomach that even children like it. There is nothing secret or magical about it. The formula is on every bottle. Read it at your druggist's tonight. Druggists, chemists and experts assert it is good and thousands of users recommend it to you. Give it a trial.

Earle's Hypo Cod is sold here by all druggists and the leading druggists in all nearby towns.—Adv.

GIVE THANKS.

Within the sacred channels,
Beyond the lowliest door,
Thanksgiving's sweet evangel
Are sung by rich and poor;
In gladness and not sorrow
May all together pray,
So that our land's tomorrow
May echo God's today,
And blessings greet all hearts that meet Where float the anthems pure and sweet.

Heap high the farmer's wintry board
Heap high the golden corn!
No richer gift has Autumn poured
From out her lavish horn.

Let other lands exulting gleam
The apple from the pine,
The orange from its glossy green,
The cluster from the vine.

But let the good old corn adorn
The hills our fathers trod;
Still let us, His golden corn
Send up thanks to God.

—John Greenleaf Whittier

BEWARE OF SMALLPOX.

Wipe out for a number of years by general vaccination which related it to the role of one of the minor diseases smallpox is again threatening to become epidemic in Michigan.

Because Michigan has acquired an unvaccinated population, and therefore a susceptible population, smallpox endangers the entire state at the present time. Dr. R. M. Olin state commissioner of health announced today: "People who were vaccinated a number of years ago outgrown their immunity and parents feeling a sense of security from the disease have neglected to have their children immunized by vaccination."

"Since January 1, 1919, cases of the disease have been reported in this department compared to the 2,076 cases in 1919. While some of the increase can be attributed to better reporting, the situation is serious enough to command the attention of every thoughtful citizen. Vaccinating smallpox has been and will continue to be a serious menace to the health of the people."

Immigrants now coming to Michigan in large numbers further complicate the problem according to Dr.
Olin. Most of these people come from countries where smallpox is common and often carry with them the infection of the disease. Should small-pox suddenly take one of its malignant trends would find whole communities highly susceptible.

"For this reason," said Dr. Olin,
"the Michigan Department of Health is urging the vaccination of all persons whose work brings them in contact with possible sources of infection. Especially does it recommend the immunizing by vaccination of all school children."

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES.

We have a baptismal service next Sunday morning. Sermon topic:
"The Word of God to the Penitent."
We had a fine time with the children last Sunday afternoon. Send your children next Sunday at 3:00 o'clock to get the benefit of these meetings. They will be greatly interested in hearing about the man who had a great burden on his back. The children need a church service of their own. The pastor is relating in a dramatic way the wonderful story of "The Pilgrim's Progress," and seeks by this means to train and teach the Lord's "lambs," as well as the "sheep."

In the evening we will have another evangelistic service. The revival spirit was still strong at last week's meeting. Many glad testimonies were given, and the attendance was good.
The evening sermon next Sunday will be: "Why they Couldn't Go On."

The Farther Lights social at the home of Mrs. Paul Bissell's last Tuesday was a splendid success. The talent users reported fifty-nine dollars as the result of turning over the quarters entrusted to them. Some who had not taken talent money were so affected by the contagious get-up-and-do-something spirit of the class that they had to get in somehow and contributed liberally to help swell the total.
The program was so interesting and the supper so good that we felt we must have another affair something like it soon.

MICHIGAN FIRE RATE DECLINES.

The public in Michigan is taking a greater interest in fire prevention as a means of saving lives and property than ever before and the result should be shown in a steadily declining number of fires per capita, according to Frank H. Ellsworth, state fire marshal.
Ellsworth and his aids have been unusually active this year in preaching the gospel of fire prevention. A special effort was made to have fire prevention day generally observed in all schools of the state, Oct. 19, and much interest was shown by the children in the work according to reports to the marshal's office.

Spirit of Service Needed.

To no one man is it given to do it all.
Each has his part, and if he do it well, does all that can be expected of him. But he will never do it well if he be not possessed of and dominated by the spirit of service.

Why Lizzie, What makes you so happy and cheerful these days?
I'll tell you, Blanch, it's a secret, but Tom and I are going to get married and we have each taken out stock in "The Loan" for we do not intend to let any minister pull this: "Stop! You are extravagant" business on us. We'll flash our Loan Books on him before the ceremony, See?

As I was saying, there were many reasons for our joining "The Loan" but the main ones were these:
1st. It pays better. I have heard that dollars increase in "The Loan" nearly as fast as Jack Rabbits up North.
2nd. We will not need our money for some time and it can be used to help some one buy or build a home, and when we get ready to build, there will be plenty paying in to help us out—you see "The Loan" is a sort of "Help-one-another" concern.

3rd. It's the style.
We'll, by what you say, I think it is a pretty good thing to belong to.

C. A. Hulston was in Lansing a few days last week.

Mrs. Archie Morris returned Monday from her St. Johns visit.

Gilbert A. Clark and Miss Lucy B. Leavenworth of this place were married yesterday.

Clarence English is lending a hand in the press room of the Record Printer this week during the rush.

John Steers, who has been managing a cheese factory at Sheridan for some time past, is home for a few weeks.

There was fairly good sleighing about town Saturday and Monday and not a few cutters were seen gliding about the avenues.

A drunken grave digger came very near being buried alive last week in the grave he had made for another party. Unfortunately he was rescued.

Mr. Irving E. Vanatta, for many years the well known book-keeper in the Dubuque Mfg. Co's office here and Miss Nora Naylor, one of Salem's most popular young ladies, were married yesterday at the bride's home by Rev. Wm. Benton. They will immediately go to housekeeping in the Jones Wilcox residence 41 Center street.

The fire alarm was put in place Saturday and it is all right. The fire chief says it is very satisfactory and will tend to "wake the natives" in a very hurried manner. The bell is forty-four inches in diameter and was cast and placed by the American Bell Foundry Co. at an expense to the village of $145. The old triangle is for sale.

If George Chadwick don't give jointers and shapers a wider berth the day will soon come when he will not have any fingers left. It was blue Monday for him and just four minutes to twelve when he pointed grabbed his hand for the fourth time and clipped off the end of a finger. Hot Grease and Chadwick are parts on this machine in the Globe factory and the former is just recovering from a similar difficulty with the same machine.

DETROIT THEATRES

Preceded in the most enthusiastic and glowing accounts, Charlotte Greenwood, the famous comedienne in Oliver Morosco's latest musical comedy, "Linger Longer Letty" will come to the Greek theatre for a return engagement commencing next Sunday night. The event assumes far more than its local importance for the players, a new Morosco musical comedy is an interesting and welcome occasion in the theatre. The visits here of Mrs. Greenwood are always eagerly awaited and it is stated that in "Linger Longer Letty" she is funnier than ever.

"It seems as if the two nations were still at war only the end part came," Mrs. Chubbuck, leader of Chubbuck's death, and the line of the words the impression of and a big dent in a skull, conveyed by Guy Bates, first a dual role in his success "The Mischance" which comes to the Shubert-Duane act Sunday night and has a continuous of much interest in the past three acts and not yet in sight.

Wixom Whisperings

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN PEACE TIME

There remain in army hospitals throughout the country more than 26,000 soldiers still being treated for wounds received overseas. Red Cross workers give them the same sort of friendly aid—only more of it—that was given during the war. Furthermore, the Red Cross is teaching these late occupations at which they can later make a living and is keeping in touch with their home folks in order that no dependents may suffer for lack of funds.

IN THE INTEREST OF EDUCATION

The Citizens' Regional Conference on education, for the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin, will hold its opening session Monday, November 29, at the LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, Ill. The purpose of the conference, which is the first in a series of twelve regional conferences to be held throughout the United States, is to emphasize the importance of education from the standpoint of statesmanship and the public welfare, and from the standpoint of the citizens' who own, support, and use the schools rather than from that of the teachers who work out plans of organization and methods of instruction.

Morning, afternoon and evening sessions will be held. The first thirty minutes of the morning session will be devoted to a statement of contemplated legislation in each of the states of the conference group. Six minutes will be assigned to each state. Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction of Illinois; L. W. Hones, state superintendent of public instruction of Indiana; Thomas E. Johnson, state superintendent of public instruction of Michigan; Vernon M. Riegel, state superintendent of public instruction of Ohio; and C. P. Cary, state superintendent of public instruction Wisconsin, have been invited to speak on the most important piece of legislation contemplated in their respective states.

Governor Lowden has been asked to extend a welcome to the conference. Invitations to attend the conference and take part in its sessions have been extended to the governors of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin.

MICHIGAN FRUIT GROWERS TO CELEBRATE 50th ANNUAL MEETING

The 50th annual meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society will be held at the Pantland Hotel in Grand Rapids, November 29th and December 2nd inclusive.

Enthusiasm is running high among the fruit growers of the state, who have harvested a bumper crop and will convene in Grand Rapids for their 50th annual convention.

Experiences of the past season have been variable. New problems must be faced for the coming year, and will be minutely handled by men who are alive to the situation of today. R. V. Goff of Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, will handle the subject of "Marketing Problems." One of the big problems foremost in the minds of fruit growers is the subject of sprays. There is a great many advocates of using a dry material in the form of a dust, while others insist that liquid sprays are the most effective. Prof. H. H. Whetzel of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will have some very interesting results which he will present to the convention. Farm Financing by Communism, the Orchard Perilifer, Transport, the Problem, Pruning and practically every subject appertaining to the fruit industry will be forcibly discussed.

The Student-Speaking Contest originated in this society some time ago and will be featured on Wednesday night, which will occur the various reports of the society and the contest of officers for the ensuing year.

Harvest reports are being made daily and every effort is being put forth to make this season's harvest the most successful the society has ever had. Further details may be ascertained upon application to George M. Jones, secretary, Grand Rapids, who is a hearty welcome to everyone connected with or interested in the fruit industry.

Selfishness Well Defined

How narrow the survey of selfishness! It is like looking at a landscape through the end of a tube, which shows it only as a spot. It is like being on a mountain top with so stiff a neck that you cannot turn your head to see any part of the vast round of vision except that which is just before your eyes.—A. M. O. A.

Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts through the blood of the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. SOLDIERS' BOUNTY FUND EX-HAUSTED.

The $20,000 appropriation, provided by the Baker Bounty Act of 1918 for payment of bounties still due men who enlisted during the Civil War, has been exhausted, according to the Board of State Auditors Saturday. A considerable number of bounties due 50 years ago remain unpaid and the legislature will be asked to make an additional appropriation.

Since the Act became effective a little more than a year ago, the board has investigated the claims of 1,618 Civil War veterans supposedly entitled to bounties. This, according to Fred B. Perry secretary of the board, is in addition to thousands of claims made by men who enlisted during periods not covered by bounty law. Of the 1,618 it was found that 1,234 never had a right to a bounty, 347 had been paid during the war, and 27 were entitled to bounties.

The bounties of these 27 together with interest at 5 per cent consumed the $20,000. One bounty was allowed Friday, but the man entitled to it was informed that no warrant can be issued until the matter goes before the legislature.

ONE WOMAN TOLD US—

"Five minutes in the morning with my Electric Iron makes wash day so much lighter."

This woman realized how often blouses, frocks and even lingerie found their way into the laundry bag ahead of time, just slightly mussed.

Even a hint of untidiness made dainty things unwearable and added to the weekly washing.

Now she uses an Electric Iron! With just a twitch of the switch and a few moments of gentle ironing, crumpled garments become smooth and lovely—altogether wearable!

HOME TOWN HELPS

PAINT IS GOOD INVESTMENT

Apart From Appearance, It Actually Adds to the Value of the House and Barn.

A prominent banker makes the statement that he is influenced in lending money to people by the appearance of their property. If their houses, barns and other buildings are painted as often as necessary in order to give them a spick-and-span appearance, he feels that they are a better risk than those who do not paint their buildings and let them go to rack and ruin through neglect.

It is a condition in almost all mortgages on buildings that the buildings shall be insured, for the protection of the lender against fire. Some lenders make the stipulation also that the buildings shall be kept painted at regular intervals. This is a wise precaution, as a building can deteriorate from lack of paint so as to lose a large part of its value in a few years. In a way, paint is also fire protection, since it is the slow combustion of the oxygen and other elements in the air that causes the decay of building material.

Besides, for any reason it is desired to sell a property, the prospective purchaser can easily be induced to pay a higher price for a well-painted house than for a shabby one. A good buyer looking over a shabby property is quick to assume that the owner is handicapped or badly in need of money if his property has a run-down appearance and makes his offer accordingly. If it is neatly painted, however, he assumes that the owner is prosperous and best rates to make an immediate bid. In short, in case of a sale, a coat of paint will bring a price much higher than could be obtained for an unpainted building, so more than cover the cost of painting.

Therefore, any way we look at it, paint is a good investment for a property owner.

PLANT 'NUT-BEARING' TREES

How Half Barren Acres and Road-sides Can Be Turned Into a Source of Revenue.

There is a remedy in England where all the roadsides have been planted in nut trees, which have not only been profitable but have been beautiful but furnished many tons of timber that were put off half price for the multitude of days that no one was willing to buy.

If such a movement as this had been taken in this country in the planting of nut trees in former years, our road sides would be more beautiful, the country more beautiful, the farmer more independent, having these crops that require little labor and that could be harvested at leisure. Our soldiers might have had a better ration of nut meats included in their rations on the European battle fronts that would have been very acceptable as food and have added little weight to their packs. Unfortunately the tree has not been much used as yet for crops, yielding staple food in places where men till the soil. They begin with crops when return annual results in exchange for labor. Now that the crops from annual plants are becoming smaller every year in proportion to the increased number of inhabitants, men will set great trees at work upon millions of half barren acres. These trees will return a larger crop for less labor than would be required for annual plant crops. People have not tried it out as yet.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Tree Screen, Rooted, Billboard.

The planting of a tree screen is a way of suppressing billboards that has been tried with success on one billboard in Boston. Directly across the way from a dignified hotel that specializes largely in long-term guests, a huge billboard was erected some ten years ago. It was built to last 25 years, with oak posts and sheet-iron paneling. The hotel proprietor obtained permission from the city to set out in front of the billboard lot a row of good-sized young poplars. Now the proprietor of the billboard has removed his ugly structure to another place, where it will be seen and, in his opinion, do him some good. What a public benefactor is the gentleman who made eight graceful trees to flourish where once a blatant billboard made desolate the view!—Christian Science Monitor.

Cultivate Responsibility.

No able-bodied child, no matter what the station in life, should be allowed to grow up without a chance to develop a sense of responsibility for individual support. The backyard garden, the school and the vacant lot garden offer the child and a few others, this chance. Emphasis upon this phase of gardening will not be misplaced by the schools, the association or individual homes.—Kansas City Times.

Good Citizen Is Handicapped.

So long as there is a neighbor who cultivates thistles, dandelions, etc., in his fields or lawn, it is well-nigh impossible for the careful, industrious neighbor to secure the freedom he pays for by his own care. Parents have a right to insist that their children be not contaminated by a careless neighbor's children.

Familiar and Welcome Gifts

THE new breakfast cups are so delightfully pretty, that whoever wakes on Christmas morn'g to find herself the recipient of one of them is certain to wear a smile that won't come off. What is the use of looking distractedly for something new when there are so many lovely, familiar gifts, made of ribbon, that are as sure of a welcome as Christmas is? Here is a little group of them that includes a cup of lace and ribbon, a longer for baby's coat, a few more for home use, a new set of cardinals and a "merry" powder box all dressed up in satin ribbons.

The cap requires about a yard and a quarter of fine net top lace, with scalloped edge, to make it three quarters of this length going to a tie the cap and the rest extended into a short ruffle across the back. Narrow satin ribbon is fashioned into ruffles and flower forms and inter-knotted loops that adorn the cap. It is drawn up at the center on top, where a full loop of ribbon not only decorates but holds the ruffles follow the line of the cap.

Coats for the Smaller Girls

THE story of coats for little girls is not lengthy as to styles; also it is brief as to materials used, the only long item in it being the prices asked for these little garments. They remain high. But this can be remedied by making these coats at home, for they are not difficult and the average needlewoman can handle them without any trouble.

The materials used are the usual wool, coatings, besides corduroy, a light weight chinchilla, and velvet for practical coats, divetyn, broadcloth, ponce velvet and faille silk for dressier ones. On the latter narrow fur bandings and small fur collars appear, made usually of beaver, imitation ermine and squirrel fur. Little bonnets to match, or tams made entirely of fur, make headwear in the same class with these elegant little coats. The manufacturers of woven furs have provided some fabrics that work up into coats and headwear for little folks most successfully.

Two of the best examples in cloth coats, as shown in the picture above, give an accurate idea of the lines on which nearly all coats for small children are cut. The home dressmaker

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Chicken is such a favorite dish with the majority of people that a new way of serving it will be enjoyed.

Stewed Chicken With Cauliflower.—Cut up the chicken as for fricassee, wash, cover with boiling water, heat to the boiling point, and after five minutes' boiling, simmer until tender. Separate the cauliflower into flowerettes, cover with boiling salted water and let cook until tender. Cook a dozen slices of carrot until tender. Arrange the chicken on a serving dish, the cauliflower and carrot slices around the chicken. Take one-fourth of a cupful of fat. In it cook the same amount of flour, add salt and pepper and one-half cupful of cream with one and one-half cupfuls of chicken broth, stir in till boiling; beat the yolk of an egg, add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and stir into the sauce; pour the sauce over the chicken and vegetables and serve at once.

Chicken Pie en Casserole.—Separate a young chicken into pieces at the joints; wash, wipe, roll in seasoned flour and cook in salt pork fat until well browned on all sides. Place in a casserole adding boiling water, salt and pepper as needed. Cover, and let cook until nearly tender; have ready for each service a small onion two slices of carrot and five potato balls. Parboil all the vegetables, the onions half an hour, the other vegetables two minutes; plunge in cold water, dry on a cloth and let cook in the frying pan when the chicken was browned until well colored, then add to the casserole. Have ready a rich biscuit crust the size of the top of the casserole, place this over the contents of the casserole, so rest on the edge of it, and bake until well browned.

Date Muffins.—Beat two eggs; add one cupful of sugar, one-quarter cupful of butter, one teaspoonful of baking powder in flour to make a thin batter, with one-quarter of a cupful of milk, add one cupful of stem and chopped dates. Fill muffin cups one-half full and bake half an hour. Serve hot with sweetened cream. This does not mean which the children will like.

Under the best conditions, a rapidly growing child will absolutely need more bone matter, material, in proportion to the rest of the body, than will the adult of the family.—Bryman.

The abundant substance of bone is primarily richer in favor of the crumbly stuff.

DAILY FOOD.

With the cool autumn days we need more substantial food to supply heat.

Food may now be eaten in moderation. The following is a most desirable way of serving potato:

Potato Puffs.—Beat three eggs, without separating the whites and yolks, until very light, gradually beat in two cupfuls of mashed potato, one cupful of flour, sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt. Drop by teaspoonfuls into hot fat; let cook to a golden brown, turning often; drain on soft paper and serve with or without meat or fish.

Mock Cherry Turnovers.—Cut rounds about six inches in diameter, of rich pastry. Stop together one cupful of cranberries and half a cupful of raisins, seeded; mix one cupful of sugar with two tablespoonfuls of flour and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt; pour half a cupful of boiling water over the fruit and when again boiling stir in the dry ingredients; add a teaspoonful of butter and let it cook until thick and boiling. Let cool a little, then place a large tablespoonful of the mixture on one side of each round of paste; brush the edges with cold water, cut two or three slits in each round for the steam to escape and press the edges closely. Brush over with cold water, dredge with granulated sugar and let bake 15 minutes.

Creole Soup.—Scald three cupfuls of milk with half an onion and one cupful of koralet (that is, fresh corn pulp, prepared by scolding the kernels and pressing out the centers); stir in one-quarter of a cupful of flour, mixed to a smooth batter with half a cupful of milk, and stir until the mixture thickens; cover and cook 20 minutes and strain. Cook sliced ripe tomatoes until the water is evaporated, then press through a fine sieve. When ready to serve the soup stir one cupful of the hot tomato puree into the milk mixture and add a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of paprika.

Shoestring Carrots.—Cut the carrots on a potato or vegetable slicer into shoestrings. Drop into boiling salted water and cook until tender. Drain, add butter, nutmeg or minced parsley, salt pepper and a dash of lemon juice. Serve hot as a garnish to veal cutlets.

Might Have Known That Request for Raise in Salary Would Not Give Boss Satisfaction.

A labor leader, was defending strikes.

"How could men get better pay without striking for it?" he said to a New York reporter. "By asking for it, do you think?"

"I once knew a young bookkeeper who went to his boss and asked for a dollar raise. The boss flew into a terrible passion.

"But," muttered the bookkeeper, there is nothing unreasonable, sir, in my request. Don't you remember promising me a raise after I'd been with you a year?"

"Yes," hissed the boss, but don't you remember that I made this raise conditional on your giving me every satisfaction?"

"Oh, dear! Haven't I satisfied you, sir?" said the young bookkeeper, pitifully.

"Satisfied me?" yelled the boss, "do you think you are satisfying me when you ask me for a raise?"

Not Persuaded.

"What are the prospects for getting a little loan this morning?" asked the impetuous caller.

"Not a chance," snapped Mr. Wadsworth.

"Oh, all right. It's a fine day, sir." "Maybe it is, but I'm not one of those weak-kneed individuals who believe in the old saw, 'The better the day, the better the deed.'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.
