CADET STOCKINGS

It is interesting to recall that their fathers and mothers went to the same school sat at the same desk and in the same seats and wore Cadet Stockings, which their parents had purchased from us. If this is the case in your home and you it will remind us of it any time before September 10th, we will give you a pair free.

There is a reason why our customers stick with Cadets.

They are a two-thread, hard twisted yarn, a thread of linen over the knee, and in the heels and toes makes them a triple tread stocking, in the wearing parts.

The colors are fast, the styles are always correct and every pair carries a guarantee tag. Priced no higher than other good Hosiery.

A BIG TIME AT FARMINGTON

MONDAY.

Arrangements have been completed for the fifth annual "Gala Day" celebration for Grotos-Walker Post Amherst Legion at Farmington. The affair will be held on Labor Day. Speaker and details of the plans indicate that every effort is being made to afford the biggest celebration of its kind ever held there.

Many features of special interest to Oakland County residents have been provided.

The new Farmington band will play, making its first public appearance. A program of sports events in the afternoon is so designed that it will interest both old and young alike.

During the noon, a baseball game between the "Rough" and "Readies" and the Clyde team will be a feature, while the winner will tackle the last Shoemaker club in the afternoon game.

Three racing teams have been engaged and recognition there will be all the attraction of a midway. A Charleston contest is the crowning feature of the evening, accompanying a pavilion dance.

Prizes aggregating over $1,000 will be offered for the various contests.

EXCHANGE CLUB HELD PANTHASTIC MEETING

One of the best meetings of the season was held by the Exchange Club on Wednesday, and there was a large attendance. W. L. Hunt and H. D. Parmalee of Detroit, who were guests of F. W. Lyke, entertained the members with a number of vocal and instrumental selections and each number was given hearty applause. Mr. Hunt is the traveling representative of the Scaroder Paint & Glass Company of Detroit.

Gen. M. Hudson was a guest of the club and he gave a brief address in which he told of the expansion and growth of this, the Sixth congressional district. He expressed the wish that Northville might secure larger and more adequate postoffice quarters and assured his hearers that we would strive to induce the department at Washington to provide them.

C. C. Leach, superintendent of fisheries, of Washington, D. C., was also present and during his remarks he assured his hearers that the department was going to improve conditions at the Northville Hatchery and make certain needed improvements here. Among the suggestions was the establishment of a suitable display of fish life improvement of the grounds and buildings and to provide adequate accommodations for the people of this section who delighted in visiting the institution. An appropriation has been recommended by the commission and he felt sure it would be given favorable consideration when congress convened.

VILLAGE SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY

The village schools will open next Tuesday, and it is desired that all pupils be on hand promptly for the opening session. A good start helps a whole lot in school work as well as in everything else, and parents are urged to co-operate, rather than there may be no delays in starting the boys and girls to school. There are many new teachers on the teaching staff this year, all of whom have been selected with great care in their training, and have reached a position as high as can be assigned by no means however, as they may be equipped to do the best work possible for the parents in the our school.

Superintendent W. H. Ferguson has been on the ground for the past two weeks and now prefers to leave to have everything ready to open up right off without any trouble. Parents of children in the district must send their children to the Northville school with the gates tightly closed, with a guarantee that the initials of their children will be safely guarded.

SUPPER AND EBBWELL PARTY IN HONOR OF ALVIN SCHAUER

Approximately twenty-five people gathered Wednesday evening in the parish hall of the Lutheran church to bid farewell to Alvin Schauer who leaves the early part of next week for Ft. Wayne, Ind., where he will continue his studies at Concordia College, an institution of the Missouri Synod.

Parents of children in the district must send their children to the Northville school with the gates tightly closed, with a guarantee that the initials of their children will be safely guarded.

Rev. Russ gave a short address wishing Mr. Schauer success in his studies.

The members of the local Lutheran church are especially interested in the career of this young man since he is the first one of this congregation to prepare for the holy ministry.

After completing his studies at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., which was recently erected at a cost of nearly $3,000,000, and which is the leading theological institution of its kind in point of students in this country, Mr. Schauer's friends also presented him with a purse and when the hour grew late bade him farewell by singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

GIVE THE CHILDREN AN AUTORIDE.

The members of the Northville Rotary Club of this place gave the children of the fresh air camp of the Spring Hill Sanatorium an auto ride on Monday afternoon twenty-four cars being provided to take the children and a number of the nurses at the camp. After they had enjoyed a ride about the country the merry company reassembled to the camp where ice cream and cake were served by the club.

At the luncheon on Monday noon the club had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting address by Superintendent W. H. Gordon of the local schools, who discussed the theme of "Goodwillfulness," the subject of the day.

Visitors were present from Plymouth and Wayne Van Dyne sang a solo rendering a number of his own compositions.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Meeker left

Wednesday for Syracuse, N. Y., where

Mr. Meeker has a position in schools of that city.

CHILDREN SHOULD BE CAREFUL

Parents should caution their children when crossing the village streets except at the street intersections and upon the crosswalks.

Last Friday afternoon Lillian Fruin stepped from behind a truck directly into the path of a passing automobile, on North Center street in front of The Record office.

The child was thrown to the pavement with great force and received severe bruises to her head and limbs, but fortunately she was not seriously injured.

She was picked up and carried into Schrader Brothers' store and later taken to her home.

Fortunately, the auto was moving down the street very slowly.

COMPETITION IN WORDS

One who goes into the market to buy a motor car today is naturally confused.

He has read the words best and greatest so often that they have ceased to be convincing. Where all is best, he reflects, there can be no best.

Thousand-dollar cars have been described to him in ten-thousand dollar language. And vice versa.

He finds himself the target in a war of adjectives; the helpless victim in a gigantic competition of words.

And so he is forced to rely on chance—the advice of friends—or his own limited experience.

Dodge Brothers, Inc., have never participated in this verbal competition.

They are content with the position they have long maintained in the far more vital competition of honest value.

They have continued steadily to improve their product, not only in comfort and beauty, but basically—beneath the body and hood where fundamental values lie.

Yet they have not unduly stressed each betterment that has marked the steady progress of their motor car toward a higher perfection.

And when economic conditions or greater sales have permitted them to reduce prices without reducing quality, they have announced the fact without excessive emphasis.

Unexaggerated truth is not spectacular. But in the long run, implicit public confidence has been Dodge Brothers reward, and this they propose to preserve forever by continuing to build just a little better than they tell.

While Love Kept Watch

By DUFORD JENNE

"I AM sorry, Mary," Mrs. Mays said, "but I ought as well tell you. Ted was accused of embezzling funds belonging to the estate, on which he had sole charge. He says lie wished the receipts he needed to show what he did with the money. Evidences he has made in the city made much of it, and the result is that he is really under arrest. Then he had this attack of pneumonia. His last conscious words were for you, so we sent for you."

Mary went upstairs to the room where her lover lay, carrying in her mind the white, anguished face of Ted's mother. Once in the room, Mary went to the bedside and looked down at the flushed face.

"Oh, Ted, I know you didn't do it even if you were so terribly anxious to make a home for you and me—and you had such fine dreams of what that home should be," she whispered.

Thankful for the training that had made her a skilled nurse, she began that evening to take her part in the battle for the one she loved. Only for one terrible moment of doubt did she wish that if he were guilty, the kind hands of death might take him where justice as man sees it and the hands of his enemies would never reach him.

Such a thought was only for a wild moment; it was broken by the rush of her longing to keep him, guilty or not guilty, for hers forever.

She sat down near the window to keep watch, recalling the precious memory of her first appearance in the room. He was just relaxing into unconsciousness that had not broken since he had recognized her and had been barely able to turn his head and lay his hot lips on her hand before the dread sleep claimed him—a sleep that might have no breaking. Before his eyes had darkened, he gave one look of love, a look that seemed to tell she would never forget.

Mary roused herself and looked around the room. The bookshelves were filled with old and rare books for which he had paid well.

"Oh, Ted," she breathed in gloom, then caught herself. "Mary, own this will never do; there is no reason enough here without adding yours."

The next day even added misery. She waited. Mary went into the living room after dinner and in time to see that Ted's father and mother had just been informed of some mortifying news. She saw Mr. Mays' face that drooped over in despair.

"Please, tell me you know how much it all means to me," Mary begged.

Mr. Mays put his hand on her shoulder. "Little girl, we know; but this is for us to hear."

"No, anything that has to do with Ted is for me!" she said bravely.

He hesitated and looked away, then said quietly though his voice was hoarse. "Well, as a prosecuting lawyer, a few years ago Ted fought a group of corrupt men, and they are now after revenge. They have secured control of this situation, and I have been notified that I will be expected to make good the losses Ted incurred. You see, I signed certain papers with him. It means—well, it means that I must give up this home."

"No! No! It can't mean that," Mary cried in dismay.

Mr. Mays grew pale as he sought to control himself. "It does, I fear. But, Mary, if we can save the boy—that is all I pray for."

Mary went to her vigil in the upstairs room with sinking heart. She went about her duties as nurse; then as she always did, she paused, bent over and laid her cheek against the bottom of the pillow.

"Before long, the crisis, dear, and then we keep or lose you," she whispered to his silent ear. "If all this could only be a dream to you when you wake."

She wandered restlessly about the room, finding it impossible to sit still. She went idly to the bookcases, drew out volume after volume, but none seemed interesting to her—old, musty books. She drew out one from which a few sheets of paper fluttered down. She picked them up, thinking they were like other notes she had found in the books, notes on dates of the books, printers, etc. These were different, and she looked closely.

She stood stunned as she read. She almost screamed. The notes were business papers, and receipts. She crushed them in her hands and rushed to the door and downstairs calling to Mr. Mays. He came running, his face white. She thrust the papers into his hand and promptly fainted.

She heard next faint words. Mr. Mays was speaking. "He was probably reading—in those days when he seemed so desperately tired—slipped these in the book. The world put them away with other books. He had so many books, the very hand of God must have led Mary to the right book."

Mary closed her eyes, and a great and wonderful peace seemed to come over the world. Peace it was, and a week later happiness came when Ted, weak but very much alive, said gently,

"Mary, dear, can't we be married right away?"

She kissed him. "We can and will. I need some one to see that you put things in the right place—and I am that one!"

Galli-Curci Swayed by the Seer of Sweden

Prima Donna Gives Wonderful Interpretation of the Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg—

HENRY FORD'S "Dearborn Independent" publishes a remarkable article on Galli-Curci and Emanuel Swedenborg, by Clarence W. Barron, of the "Wall Street Journal," the world famous financial authority.

Mr. Barron declares that Galli-Curci has the most wonderful brain he has ever met, or heard of in a woman, although she is much more a true woman with a life and soul of affection for all that is enabling and uplifting in the family, and in color, form, and music."

Mr. Barron is chairman of the Rotch Trustees, who are acting under the will of Lydia S. Rotch of New Bedford, Mass., begun in 1872, a modern translation of the "Theological Works" which Emanuel Swedenborg wrote and published in the Latin tongue, and deposited in the libraries of the world 150 years ago.

This work was completed and published by the Houghton Mifflin Co. in 32 volumes in 1907.

About three years ago there appeared in a Cleveland paper a paragraph that among her other accomplishments Galli-Curci had read all the Theological Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg. The claim seemed so absurd to Mr. Barron that he thought it might be easily discredited by a simple inquiry as to the edition.

"Please, tell me you know how much it all means to me," Mary begged.

Mr. Mays put his hand on her shoulder. "Little girl, we know; but this is for us to hear."

The New Housekeeping

There can be no doubt that the use of electric housekeeping appliances, by reducing the time, labor and fatigue of domestic tasks, tends greatly to preserve health and lengthen life.

There can be as little question that the comparative freedom they give the housewife from time-consuming, strength-exhausting tasks, tends to maintain an ideal home atmosphere. With washing, sweeping, dish washing, etc., done quickly and at a cost of a few cents; with convenient table appliances for cooking a variety of dishes at no greater cost; with an electric fan keeping the air cool, clean and refreshing; housekeeping is more a pleasure than a labor.

FOREST'S VALUE IT SET FORTH

That We May Realize Need for Conservation of Trees for the Future.

Foresets enter into every business and social activity. They are essential to civilization. They are in demand more each year for recreation and the restoration of health. Woods, fresh air and exercise in the open bind up the ragged sleeve of care better than medicine. It is nature's prescription, says the New York State College of Forestry, Syracuse University.

The forests furnish employment for one million three hundred and fifty thousand persons. They supply wages annually amounting to approximately one billion four hundred million dollars. These industries represent an investment of twelve billion dollars. In value of output this industry ranks third in the United States. If the forests stand second to none as an essential resource of prosperity and civilization.

The universal importance of the forest imposes upon each person the duty to conserve and protect the forests. The chief factor in interest for conservation is fire prevention. Fire is the great destroyer. Forest fires are almost entirely to human carelessness and therefore may be almost entirely prevented by the exercise of due care which means the observance of good forest manners. When we are in the forest we should not try to prove that intelligence and decent citizenship is a cloak that can be thrown off.

We do not burn our homes, our offices, our personal property. We go to the assistance of him whose home is burning. We do all we can to prevent such fires. This is because we appreciate the necessity for co-operation, assistance and protection in preserving the home and office. There is, so far as fire is concerned, no difference between saving a home and office in finished lumber and the same number before it is built or as it grows in the trees. It is not true that "our debts because the man who can pay for a home or office or pay rent, the costs are going to be just that much higher because of the reduced supply of timber." Still your homeowner other than the original owner is right. If he can't pay his taxes, buy him the fence, but don't let him get away with it. If he can't pay his taxes, buy him the fence, but don't let him get away with it. If he can't pay his taxes, buy him the fence, but don't let him get away with it.

At the same time the President realizes it is difficult that neither the federal nor the state governments could go so far as to prevent misrepres-

STOCK CENSOR PLAN PUT UP TO STATES

President Favors Financial Statement Publicity as Best Protection.

Paul Smith's Enactment of state laws for the protection of the 20,000,000 Americans—an average of six to a family—who now own securities—is urged by President Coolidge. The President, it was officially stated by his spokesman, is keenly interested in protecting the public not only against our-and-out swindling operations but against misrepresentation as to the financial status and earning capacity of corporations in the sale of stocks and bonds.

Mr. Coolidge feels that the power of the federal government, under the Constitution is limited to the interstate commerce clause and this would not provide sufficient power to obtain the desired results, in view of the fact that corporations receive their grants of power from the states.

Discussion of the proposed regulation of stock and bond issues by the Federal Trade Commission was pro- voked at the summer White House by inquiries with respect to a recent article in a magazine by Prof. William Z. Ripley. Mr. Coolidge had not read the article and the view was expressed that he would prefer to study it before commenting in detail.

It was pointed out, however, that the individual states by passing laws regulating the sale of securities within their limits could compel statements as to financial conditions and earnings of corporations which would accomplish the same result as though federal government were empowered to make the same demands, and without the constitutional difficulties under which the federal government labors.

The best protection to investors is to declare what comes from the public for such financial statements, which could be required by state laws and in some states are now required.

At the same time the President realizes it is difficult that neither the fed-

There are indications that the decision also was influenced by the strong belief in certain Catholic circles that the episcopate's statement regarding the recent conference was issued too hastily; and that the church should not commit itself to resumption of service without more definite promises from the government.

The episcopate's formal statement after its meeting says:

"The situation continues the same as before the conference with President Coolidge. Services will not be resumed because it is necessary not only to discover a method to give instructions to priests without violating the rights of the church, but especially to know to what degree the destruction of liberty of conscience by these laws hinders their conduct or reveals through dangerous methods of taking this question in the future.

MEXICAN CHURCHES NOT TO BE REOPENED

Episcopate Bans Any Services for Present; Calles Will Not Relent

Mexico City.—Hopes for a speedy settlement of the religious controversy were crushed when the Roman Catholic episcopate unanimously decided not to resume church services for the present.

The situation remains the same as before the recent conference between President Calles and representatives of the episcopate. The boycott will continue and, in the meantime, the Catholic church leaders will discuss plans for a congressional campaign with the object of attending the constitution.

No date has been fixed for further conferences with the President and there is some uncertainty as to whether there will be any more.

Bishop Diaz, secretary of the episcopate, declared it was considerably influenced by the statement attributed to President Calles by the newspaper El Universal in which the President was quoted as saying:

"If the bishops return to the peoples, they must do so subject to the laws."

In the view of the episcopate this does not harmonize with the attitude taken by the President a few days ago, and the episcopate decided that it leaves the situation precisely as it was before and that the church's constant and unqualified position is that it cannot accept these laws.

There are indications that the decision also was influenced by the strong belief in certain Catholic circles that the episcopate's statement regarding the recent conference was issued too hastily; and that the church should not commit itself to resumption of service without more definite promises from the government.

The episcopate's formal statement after its meeting says:

Cadillac—in the sale of 500 bushels of seed potatoes last year, the Michigan Potato Growers' Exchange obtained an average price of $2.73 a bushel, according to the annual report of the exchange.

Owing to the prevailing high prices for table stock during the winter months, the exchange reported the seed deal was the most difficult ever experienced.

Green Mountain seed brought the best price, averaging $3.16 a bushel. Irish Cobbler stood second with an average of $3.15.

Grand Rapids—Potatoes offered for sale by truckers in crates or baskets must either be tagged to show the grade and packer, or a large placard must be placed in some conspicuous place upon the truckload giving the grade and the name and address of the trucker, according to a ruling by John I. Brock, director of the State Bureau of Foods and Standards.

Under the law, farmers are exempt from grading and tagging. Growers may sell potatoes in either baskets, crates or sacks without labeling or tagging them.

WALTERS FOR COUNTY CLERK. HIS USEFUL PUBLIC SERVICE WINS MANY ENDORSEMENTS.

AGAINST 8TH TERM

Mr. Geo. A. Walters, Detroit.

Dear Sir: Your advertisement in my campaign for a judge (8th term) after being County Clerk for a large section of the state over 100 years, is extensively advertising an editorial that was printed in his behavior for special political reasons as long ago as eight years August 26, 1918.

He now withdraws the date in an attempt to stop the people from thinking it was a recent editorial.

On investigation I do not find that the daily press has given any endorsement in recent years. On the other hand your useful public activities have frequently received the commendation of the press of Detroit, I am against a 9th term. The above for your information.
