HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT DIES IN ANN ARBOR

Death of Willard Stalter Saddens Classmates And Community

The community was saddened this week with the untimely death of Willard Stalter, child son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Stalter, at the University Hospital in Ann Arbor where he was taken Sunday evening. He died early Monday morning, Dec. 2, following a brief illness which began with the closing of school for Thanksgiving vacation last Wednesday.

In September Willard began his freshman year in the Northville high school with the classmate who had been his friends since he began his elementary education here several years ago. He readily made a place for himself in the high school, finding his classes a source of interest and entering into activities with eagerness. Throughout his young life, he had been rich in friendships—including playmates, instructors and those who found a place within the Stalter family circle of friends.

Willard was born March 25, 1922, in La Junta, Colo. He moved to Northville with his parents when a small boy three years of age. His early religious training began in the home and later Sunday school teachers and ministers of the Methodist Church found him an earnest student. The Rev. Frank N. Miller, formerly a pastor of the local church, received Willard into full membership with an impressive ceremony in 1933.

Funeral services were held from the home at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. Harry J. Lord was assisted by Rev. Miner of Detroit and the Rev. William McAllister of Beloit, also a former pastor of the Methodist church here. Miss Martin J. Royle sang. Burial was made in the Northville cemetery.

Willard is survived by his parents, two brothers, Samuel of Pontiac and Waldo of Gorham, Ind., and one sister, Catherine of Cleveland, O.

MISS BLUM RESIGNS FROM PAPER STAFF

The resignation of Miss Eleanor Blum, Record news editor, became effective when the early Thanksgiving issue was placed in circulation Tuesday evening. She returned Wednesday to her home in Detroit.

Miss Blum came to Northville last summer to assume the society editor's duties for the Record following her graduation from the University of Michigan, where she did three years of credit work on the Michigan Daily. For the past three months Miss Blum has capably handled the front page stories for the paper in addition to the society and Record Shopper columns. Her ability to write the news accurately and in a meritorious newspaper style has made her a valuable asset to the office personnel. Her work here is a recommendation in itself should she want to enter the journalism field in the future.

WINTER 'GRUB STAKE' TO BE AWARDED BY AMERICAN LEGION

The American Legion is to provide winter groceries to someone. A $50 supply of groceries which will include all the staple, fancy brands and articles used by any family, will be awarded to some fortunate person by the Lloyd E. Green post of the American Legion on Christmas eve. The "grub stake" will be on display in one of the prominent windows on Main street so that all may see just what it includes. It is probable that other smaller awards will be made at the same time.

RECEIVE SOLICITORS COURTEOUSLY

According to a statement made by Mrs. Eber Ward Lester, general Red Cross chairman for this district, the solicitors who have been calling at the homes and places of business since the drive began Nov. 21, have been courteously received by village citizens.

"The community has responded liberally with a pleasant wholesome spirit. This we appreciate as much as we do the generous donations given us. Many have been in sympathy with our cause, but could not afford to sit us materially," Mrs. Lester commented.

She further explained that no estimate as to the sum received would be released until after a careful tabulation next week.

CONTRACTORS' BIDS OPENED BY HAMILL

Four Engineering Companies Submit Water Reservoir Estimates

In compliance with the legal requirements, the contract bids for the PWA reservoir project were opened and read before the village councilmen by County Engineer Herald F. Hamill Monday evening, Dec. 2.

There was a difference of $2,529.57 between the lowest bid entered and the highest bid received. Three Detroit companies and one from Ann Arbor placed before the council sealed estimates for the reservoir construction.

Following is a tabulation of the contractors and their respective cost estimates for the proposed Public Works project:

With Without Alternates Alternates

Ann Arbor $23,663.65 $25,534.18

Co. $23,933.22 $2,340.51

H. B. Cutterson Co. $29,938.00 $29,937.00

Patterson Eng. Inc. $1,247.90 $1,245.29

At the request of the council, the bids were placed in the hands of Mr. Hamill for further tabulation and recompilation.

According to the county engineer, it is not expected that the contract will be let until the latter part of the week.

EXCHANGITES OFFER PRIZES FOR CONTEST

Business Men To Compete With Christmas Time Decorations

Repeating the plan of last year, the Exchange club has again announced that prizes for the best window/holiday decorative displays will be given to the merchants whose decorations receive the recommendation of the experienced out-of-town window trimmers, who will judge the contest Dec. 23. This competitive decorative scheme was inaugurated a year ago by the club to establish a festive spirit within the community and to enhance the natural beauty and charm of the village during the Christmas season. The newly organized civic association is also co-operating in the project.

Three awards will be given this year. The merchant having the winning display will receive the engraved silver cup now held by Orlow O. Winter, winner of the event last year.

The second prize, a 15-pound turkey, is the gift of Dr. H. L. Sparling. Paul B. Thompson is the donor of the third award, a 10-pound turkey.

D. J. Brief Exchange vice president, and F. E. Van Atta have been appointed to interview the business men and instruct them in competing for the holiday display event.

Following are the rules when competing, and others:

1. Only business places may compete. No private homes are to be included.

2. Judging will be performed in five categories: windows and doorways, 25 per cent for the effectiveness of the decorations by day, 25 per cent to their effectiveness by night.

3. All displays will be judged by the committee on Monday preceding Christmas, day. The trophies are to be presented by the Exchange club at their first meeting after the day of judging.

4. The first prize, the silver cup, will be suitably engraved with the name of the winner on the cup. This will remain in his possession until the following year when it will again be awarded. The trophy will become the property of any contestant who wins the cup three consecutive times.

5. WIDMYER GETS APPOINTMENT

E. B. Widmyer has received notice from Washington of his appointment to the superintendent of the Northville Fisheries station. Mr. Widmyer will have charge of the bureau's fish cultural operations in the state of Michigan.

Charles A. Dolph Designs Ornate Furniture Set For Chapel Built By Detroit Methodist Minister

An ornate set of chapel furniture in genuine American walnut, for Dr. Frederick B. Fisher, pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church of Detroit, was designed, finished and installed by Charles A. Dolph.

The actual building operations were by A. E. Whitehead, Brian J. Cobo and M. J. Boekens.

The set comprised a lectern, two clergy chairs, two kneeling rails or Prie Dieux and thirty-six cathedral chairs with book racks and folding kneelers. The chairs were upholstered in blue Spanish grain heavy art leather.

Dr. Fisher called Mr. Dolph late one October night and asked for a conference for considering designs and prices for the types of furniture that he wanted. When the style of goods, the purpose and other factors were settled the order was given and a unique experience in Mr. Dolph's business career began.

The following interesting write-up appears in the Detroit News of November 23. The facts were obtained from Dr. Fisher by H. G. Hoch, church editor of the Detroit News, who had been informed of the proposed innovation:

"Charles A. Dolph, of Northville, who has been making church furniture nearly 50 years, is just completing the most unusual commission he ever had.

"Private chapels on big estates are not uncommon, he writes, but until now he has not been called on to furnish a chapel for a private residence. He is just completing the first one in his experience in the home of the Rev. Frederick B. Fisher, D. D., minister of the Central Methodist church at 873 Berkshire road, Grosse Pointe.

This chapel will be used for weddings, official board communions and other services of like nature.

In connection with this special furniture it brings to mind that the making of church furniture began here in 1873, when the late

Francis R. Bell organized the Michigan School Furniture Co. for the production of school desks and other furniture.

When its charter expired the growth of the business warranted

the adoption of the Globe Furniture Co., and that name in several forms continued until 1931.

In April, 1899, the main factory burned, and that disaster caused the formation of three companies to take over the three sections of the property. The American, Bell &

Foundry Co., The American Shade

Cloth Co. and the Globe Furniture Co. Limited.

Mr. Dolph began work in the old shop in 1886 and for two summers learned the finishing cod of the business and in 1888 started continuously and labored in factory and office. His training was under those two worthy craftsmen, Francis E. Bell and Spencer Clark. He has been a resident of the town since 1880, except while at lending business college and as the southern manager of the old Company in Chattanooga, Tenn.

He is now 75 years of age.

He is a member of the First Metho-dhist Church.

He is a member of the Knights of Columbus.

He is a member of the Masonic Order.

He is a member of the Elks.

He is a member of the Moose.

TWO IDEAS CLASH

Much has been written about the New Deal, what it means to the nation, to certain groups, what its aims are. Phrases like the "more abundant life," "plowing under every third row," "social security" and the alphabet bureaus have been added to the language.

But we have yet to see made a deliberate contrast of the basic theories of the New and the Old Deals. Perhaps our understanding of the whole thing is wrong. But we believe the matter boils down to this:

The New Deal believes in supplying according to need.

The Old Deal believed in supplying according to merit.

Under the new dispensation, the first question asked is "How much does he need?"

Under the old, the question was, "What has he earned?"

The Old Deal demanded that every able individual produce something, whether it was ideas, bricks, a corner on the stock market, or a better breed of guinea pigs. The man who could produce something which the public wanted (or could be made to want) was rewarded.

The New Deal demands that the individual be willing to accept government aid if he cannot find a place in economic society where he can earn his bread and butter.

The Old Deal was a hard task master. Sometimes it seemed to take delight in favoring the unscrupulous. It is the Northville Wolverine who claimed the most vicious player in that down. It had the savage callousness of nature in weed-busting for the good of all.

The New Deal reverses all this. It favors and cares for very groups which the old order tended to eliminate. It protects the weaker at the expense of the strong.

The Old Deal has been called a pagan, a purely economic order.

The New is being praised as a Christian, a social order caring of the other.

But one question comes to mind. At bottom, the problem is one of economics. One is forced to wonder if in this imperfect world an economic system can be made over into a successful social virtue.

For the economic idea back of the Old Deal was that you have to put at least as much into the national pocket-book as you take out.

The New Deal is based on the idea that no matter how much you take out to meet needs, and no matter how little is produced to put back in, there always will be enough in the pocketbook.

In the above, the Old Deal is spoken of in the past tense. It is because of a story.

Once upon a time there were some pioneers. They hadn't liked conditions at home so they went voyaging across the sea. They came to a new land and settled. They were an independent and a vigorous breed of folks and when the original inhabitants didn't give them enough room, they proceeded to take it. In time the original inhabitants all but disappeared.

As they expanded their boundaries, they increased their power. They didn't get along with their king, so they ousted him and set up a republic with a government of checks and balances. And they continued to grow greater and stronger. But they had a money system which had slumps. During one of these hard times a group of social thinkers proposed that the state feed all the needy persons who were citizens.

There was a great to-do but in the end the idea was adopted. It was a big success. But as the decades passed, the number of citizens on the free food list kept getting bigger. Pretty soon the government was in a lot of trouble. Taxes were boosted until all the small farmers and businessmen, who had been the backbone of the early pioneering days, were driven into the ranks of the unemployed, or into the employ of the big interests who helped manipulate the government.

In the end, revenues got to dropping and an attempt to restore the old order was attempted. It ended in a civil war which in turn ended in a dictatorship. There was another brief period of glory and then a gradual decline, but the free food list never was abolished because too many of the voters were on it.

The above is not prophecy. Borrow your son's or daughter's ancient history and start in on Rome. Aeneas and his boatload were the pioneers, the Latins were the original inhabitants, Italy was the country, Tarquin the First the consul, tribunes and senate the checks and balances. The Gracchi brothers were the ones who started their free corn laws. The Marius and Sulla were the attempt to go half way back to the old order, Caesar was the dictator.

We're not attempting to point any moral or draw any inferences. But they do say human nature never changes. And there are the facts.

AN IDEA BEFORE ITS TOO LATE

Last week Jonesville, which is over in Hillsdale county, lost a man who truly was regarded as a leader in the community. Seventy-six years old, this man was one of those kind who had more real spiritual youth than many of those a half century younger.

Probably you all have known or know individuals like him. The "salt of the earth," as the Bible so aptly calls them.

Today over in that village there are a number of men who have several regrets. They all are younger men.

Mr. Varnum, he who just died, for 55 years was a druggist in the village. Yet nothing ever was done by his dozens of admirers and friends to show him in what high regard he was held. That is one regret. They had become so used to seeing him at his desk at the back of the store, working on his books or else selling an order of wallpaper, that they regarded him as a matter of course.

The village has a couple of civic clubs. Leaders in both are figuratively kicking themselves now that once in a while they hadn't had in Mr. Varnum as a guest of honor at their meetings. That is another regret.

A third one has to do with the individual outlook. Mr. Varnum was a representative of the generation which took life a little more calmly and sanely than we do today. He always had time for a chat, was always ready to drop business to swap a story or ask about some friend.

He didn't gulp life down like a hungry puppy but savored it like a gourmet. There are many men in Jonesville today who wished they still had him as an example.

We are not acquainted with Northville. But it is just possible that the loss in this village might help some other to avoid in some part similar regrets in Northville.

The New Deal believes in supplying according to need.

The Old Deal believed in supplying according to merit.

Under the new dispensation, the first question asked is "How much does he need?"

If a local business man were asked to give his vote for the meanest man of the village, it would undoubtedly go to a man whom he met at the spring last week. It seems that the business man was somewhat delayed in getting his jug of drinking water while another calmly filled his 16 one-gallon jars from the spring. After watching while some ten or twelve of the containers were filled, the unkind resident decided that he'd fill his jug elsewhere.

Our appreciation goes out to the various committees in charge of the Christmas party of last Tuesday night to the congregation for its co-operation, and to the community in general for its generous support. Especially do we include the school authorities.

The official establishment of the ladies' society and the reception of the members will take place in solemn fashion next Sunday evening at 7:30 Father Heleman, S. J. of the University of Detroit high school, will receive the members and give a short address. Every lady over school age is being favored with an invitation to join.

God and sin are opposite extremes. Never can they co-exist. They are mutually unbearable. Hence, in creating the mother of Christ, God must take His fleshly substance from her. God had to preserve that flesh forever from the taint of sin. Mary was thus created pure and free from it. Hence her title of Immaculate Conception. When is coming again on Dec. 8 of each year.

In another a garter and brace set is combined with a pressed wood hair tray. This same wood is used in a cocktail tray and it too, is attractively packaged with garters.

Another store in the village has a display of neckties which have just been unpacked for the choice of Christmas buyers. The stock includes groups which are of good quality, handsome design and low in price. These come in a wide range of patterns—stripes, polka dots, all-over and plain designs. A tie with one of the yellow gold chain tracery pins which are also featured by this merchant will make an acceptable gift.

For the long Michigan evenings spent before the fireplace with book and pipe, the picture is complete if dad can slip his feet into comfortable lounging slippers. These can be selected at a local shoe department in a number of styles—opera, Everett Romeo and hi-lo.

Lawrence E. Tewe, familiarly known to his fellow editors as "Larry," is the author of the following editorials. Mr. Tewe succeeded Mr. Baldwin as editor of the Jonesville Independent, which he continues to run successfully.

TWO IDEAS CLASH

Much has been written about the New Deal, what it means to the nation, to certain groups, what its aims are. Phrases like the "more abundant life," "plowing under every third row," "social security" and the alphabet bureaus have been added to the language.

But we have yet to see made a deliberate contrast of the basic theories of the New and the Old Deals.

Perhaps our understanding of the whole thing is wrong. But we believe the matter boils down to this:

The New Deal believes in supplying according to need.

The Old Deal believed in supplying according to merit.

Under the new dispensation the first question asked is "How much does he need?"

Under the old, the question was, "What has he earned?"

The Old Deal demanded that every able individual produce something, whether it was meat, bricks, a corner on the stock market, or a better breed of guinea pigs. The man who could produce something which the public wanted (or could be made to want) was rewarded.

The New Deal demands that the individual be willing to accept government aid if he cannot find a place in economic society where he can earn his bread and butter.

The Old Deal was a hard task master. Sometimes it seemed to take delight in flogging the unscrupulous. It put every man on his own feet and told him to fight or go down. It had the savage callousness of nature in weed out the unfit and the weak.

The New Deal reverses all this. It favors and aids the very groups which the old order tended to eliminate. It protects the weaker at the expense of the strong.

The old deal has been called a pagan, a purely economic order.

The New deal proclaims a Christian, a social religion of the other.

But the question comes to mind:

At bottom, the problem is one of economics. One is forced to wonder if in this imperfect world an economic system can be made over into a successful social virtue.

For the economic idea back of the Old Deal was, that you have to put at least as much into the national pocketbook as you take out.

The New Deal is based on the idea that no matter how much you take out to meet needs, and no matter how little is produced to put back in, there always will be enough in the pocketbook.

In the above, the Old Deal is spoken of in the past tense. It is because of history.

Once upon a time there were some pioneers. They didn't like conditions at home so they went voyaging across the sea. They came to a new land and settled. They were an independent and a vigorous breed of folks and when the original inhabitants didn't give them enough room, they proceeded to take it. In time the original inhabitants all but disappeared.

As they expanded their boundaries, they increased their power. They didn't get along with their king, so he ousted him and set up a republic with a government of checks and balances. And they continued to grow greater and stronger. But they had a money system which had stumps. During one of these hard times a group of social thinkers proposed that the state feed all the needy persons who were citizens.

There was a great to-do but in the end the idea was adopted. It was a big success. But as the decades passed the number of citizens on the free food list kept getting bigger. Pretty soon the government was in a lot of trouble. Taxes were boosted until all the small farmers and businessmen, who had been the backbone of the early pioneering days, were driven into the ranks of the unemployed, or into the employ of the big interests who helped manipulate the government.

In the end, revenues got to dropping and an attempt to restore the old order was attempted. It ended in a civil war which in turn ended in a dictatorship. There was another brief period of glory and then a gradual decline but the free food list never was abolished because too many of the voters were on it.

The above is not prophecy. Borrow your son's or daughter's ancient history and start in on Rome. Aeneas and his boatload were the pioneers, the Latins were the original inhabitants. Italy was the country, Tarquin the king, the consuls, tribunes and senate the checks and balances. The Gracchi brothers were the ones who started the conflict with their free corn law. The Marius and Sulla war was the attempt to go half way back to the old order, Caesar was the dictator.

We're not attempting to point any moral or draw any inferences. But they do say human nature is the same.

And there are the facts.

LIBRARIES PAY TRIBUTE TO ANDREW CARNEGIE

Andrew Carnegie was born at Dunfermline, in Scotland, on November 25, 1835. The centenary of his birth is being celebrated in the United States and all over the circumscribed world. In the United States, 1935 libraries have been built with Carnegie funds. His philosophy of wealth was that all surplus money should be used for public service, and he created trust funds to be managed for peace work, scientific advancement and many other worthy causes.

Many libraries are having a library progress week with exhibits showing the growth of the library.

And the Greatest of These

Perhaps the moonlight softly sifted down through the apple blossoms on that morn evening in May has something to do with her answer "Yes" to that all-important question of his.

Love?—Oh, of course, she knew all about it. Wasn't she 21 years old and engaged now?

Life had no fears for her. It was all a rosy dream. She had love.

Time passed and she awoke to find that wearing a wedding ring meant more than moonlight and apple blossoms. Waving good-bye proudly to her young husband who trudged off to his teaching in a small town she sat down to sort over a trunk full of winter clothing of his that had not been sent home to mother during four years of college life.

Such hopeless holes and rips! "Some job to have a husband!" she sighed as she slipped her hand into a holeless sock. But, after all, it was his sock she was mending and she thrilled to the thought that now she knew what love meant. It meant making him comfortable and happy.

Money? Not much. And with a college debt to be paid off there was still less—but who cared? Daily, wedding china made frugal meal look festive.

When eggs were high and funds low she "didn't care for an egg" and felt her heart swelling with scoffish virtue as she watched him devour his carefully poached egg on a crisp piece of toast.

"A wife must give her best to her husband if she loves him," she told herself. I know.

But there came a day when a high chair was pulled up to the table where only two had sat and with their arms around the baby form between them, they exclaimed joyfully, "Now we are a family! Isn't it great?"—and the bond between them tightened because they were sure they had fathomed the depths of love.

But they hadn't. With love came the usual problems of family and business.

Thus learned the meaning of that vow once spoken so lightly—"For better, for worse; for richer, for poorer."

Often late at night they walked home after working shoulder to shoulder. To the click of their heels through the quiet street, they re-

MAYBURY NEWS

The staff and patrons of Maybury extend their deep commiseration to Miss Lillian Stachowski on the death of her sister, Cassie. The funeral was held Monday, Dec. 2.

Thanksgiving, the holiday looked forward to with happy anticipation and backward with an unhappy feeling of being overstuffed, was celebrated roundly out here. A dinner of turkey and all its accessories was served. Many of the staff, nonetheless, preferred home cooking.

Miss Cecilia Marshall, Miss Sarah Halsey, and Dr. Charles Westover were in Grand Rapids—not, however, together. Miss Ann Farmington, librarian, was in Washington, D.C., for the dongs. Dr. Gertrude Mitchell spent the day in Cincinnati with friends, and Dr. J. H. Todd and family motored to Toledo for the event.

Dr. Georgine Moerke entertained her mother, Mrs. Mary Moerke, of Blue Island, Ill., over the Thanksgiving holiday.

The sanatorium's intrepid, daring, courageous hunters—Ray Westfall, Roy Tibbets, and Floyd Schultz—returned from the north minus deer.

Miss Marjorie Griffin, who was graduated from Marygrove College, took a post-graduate course at Northwestern, and, finally, worked in the laboratories at the University of Michigan, has accepted the position of bacteriologist at the san. Everyone extends her a hearty welcome.

SILK INDUSTRY CONSIDERED

J. A. Richter, of Novi announces a called meeting to consider the Michigan silk industry at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the Novi hall. Mr. Richter urges all farmers in Oakland county to be present. Motion picture feature and exhibitions on how to make money in a new industry will be the project of the evening. There is no charge for attendance.

cited as they passed the darkened house.

And then, while their companions slept.

Were tolling upward in the night.

Yes, love meant partnership, a sharing of burdens. Building for the future.

For the future? There was always some future object to be attained before she was willing to do the nice things he suggested. "We can't afford it now. Let's wait," she always said.

Then one day she watched a hospital stretcher roll noiselessly down the long hall and she realized with a wrench of her heart that a very part of her being was going forth to meet its fate at the hands of a great surgeon.

Then everything changed. Nothing else mattered now that had seemed so important—success, accumulation of gain, friends, family, education of children, a home of their own. What was anything worth without her wife partner?

In that anxious hour she knew that she would gladly lay down her life to save him. Her plan of life was completely altered. She knew now what love meant.

NOVI NEWS

The Ladies' Aid of the M. E. church will serve a New England dinner in the dining room of the church at noon on Wednesday, Dec. 11. The public is invited. A sale of cazaar articles suitable for Xmas gifts will be held.

The following Novi young people—Frederick Johnston, Edwin Hill, Clyde Button, James and Brent Munro, Mary Dutton, Helen Smith, Edith Moerke, and Marie Brayman with the Rev. A. K. McRae attended the convention of the Northern Baptist Association at Grand Rapids from Friday, Nov. 29, until Sunday, Dec. 1.

The Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Austin Sr. of Novi are conducting a series of Evangelistic meetings at the Novi Baptist church. Mr. Austin entertains by playing the cornet, cornet, auto harp and other instrumental instruments. The public is welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Johnson and Mrs. Ida McCowan attended the funeral of the latter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Libbie F. Roy at Hanover Saturday.

Novi relatives received word this week of the death of Mrs. Ida Taylor, wife of George Taylor, at Wauchula, Fla.

The Novi fire department was called out last Friday morning to a fire in the home of Al Smith on the G. J. Jr. farm, Nite Mile and Haggerty roads. The fire had started in a bedroom, and some of the furniture was destroyed, but the flames were controlled without much damage to the house.

The Rebekah club met at the I.O.O.F. hall Tuesday afternoon for their business meeting and served supper to their families and the public. Cards were played during the evening. Mrs. Wm. Mairs and Frank Clark won first prizes, while Mrs. Frank Clark and Judi Hammond won low score awards.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hicks observed their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary Thursday, Dec. 5.

The Oddfellows and Rebekah lodges will sponsor an auction sale of miscellaneous articles at their building on corner of Novi road and Grand River Tuesday evening, Dec. 10. Harry Robinson will be the auctioneer. An evening of fun and profit is promised to those who attend.

NOVI SCHOOL NOTES

The service squad girls have been presenting safety lessons in all rooms of the school. These lessons were based on poster material. Captain Mary Ethel Bingham and Betty Flynn have organized their force to keep the halls safe and orderly.

Mrs. Mary Ann Atkinson, teacher of the primary grades, is ill and unable to teach this week. Mrs. Alvina Lundberg of South Lyon is substituting for her.
