THIS THING CALLED SIGHT

"If ever we are to understand what seeing is and means to us, we must recognize that what we call "light" doesn't really exist at all up the way we use the idea. In the natural world the world around us, there are cer--tain types of vibrations or frequencies. The radio has helped us to understand that. -

Some of these vibrations are felt, others are heard and the ones we are considering are SEEN - but only under certain circemstances.

Only when the vibrition, we call light strikes the retina of your eye and produces sensation, does seeing take place That will help you understand why your eyes do not see - for they don't They register the sersations of light and the optic nerve cerus that sensation back to the bran - then the mind interprets=(or translates) "it into nearing
