Milford Eleven Returns Home on Little End of 18 to O Score in League Contest

Northville won its first football game this year by defeating Milford 18 to 0.

Northville kicked off to start the game. After Milford kicked back, Northville started a march down the field with Otis Cox on a line plunge from the 3 yard line.

Milford took to the air in the 2nd quarter when they completed 3 out of six passes and made 3 of their first downs.

Northville made only one fumble during the game and it was recovered by Milford. Milford made two fumbles and were in turn recovered by Northville.

Redford Union is Northville's most opponent at Redford Union and inspired by their recent win may win over the undefeated Redford Union team.

Plans for building the new community hospital, long talked of in this locality, are finally crystallizing. Various sites are under consideration which are convenient to the Plymouth-Northville area and potentially capable of serving Livonia Township, Farmington and Rosedale Gardens.

The project, which is to be entirely on a contribution basis and not a stock subscription as rapidly gaining momentum through the efforts of a civic minded group of real estate men in Northville and Farmington together with others from these adjoining communities who are also interested.

Purpose of the new development will be to supplement present facilities due to current needs and evident future growth.

The first effort to raise funds for the hospital was made possible through the cooperation of Messrs. Wadrick, Dennison Jacobs and other members of the Northville Downs Association who donated gate receipts from the regular Benefit Program held the Friday evening, Oct. 12.

Both the Executive Committee and those working with them wish to express their appreciation for the efforts contributed by these gentlemen.

While complete returns of the total sales are not all reported, donations of individuals, the gate receipts, concession contributions and advance sales (Continued on Back Page)

At the western edge of Michigan's copper country, that once fabulous land of overnight mining booms, fantastic profits and expanding settlements—is a dot on the map known as Silver City.

It was at Silver City, just a few miles west of Ontonagon on Lake Superior, that a group of newspaper writers began a two day "exploration" of Michigan's Porcupine mountain area.

Unique from any other tract in Michigan, here is a true wilderness. Following an old blazed trail through a virgin forest is adventure with capital A. But it is also hard work.

In your easy chair, try imagining a vast forest of maple, birch, basswood, hemlock, and white pine—just to mention a few—through which you tramp for hours without once seeing or crossing a public road.

Imagine that you are hiking to Mirror Lake in the heart of this forest. You follow an old wagon trail for five miles from Quigley's lumber camp to the abandoned White Pine extension mine. It has rained recently. The trail is soggy.

You pause to inspect a ghost mining camp of rotting log cabins and shambles. Then you pick up a new trail going northerly. When the tug marks of a tractor bulldozer appear on the ground, the guide recalls how an army bomber crashed near Mirror Lake last March. All passengers had parachuted to safety.

Was this a temporary path to the bomber? If so, where was the Mirror Lake trail? Nobody knows. No one has a map. You are relying entirely on the knowledge of the guide, who informs you that he had never been in that territory before and was relying solely upon second-hand information.

Discovery of a trail, just a rod away, prompts you to conclude that the bulldozer was slashing a new path into the woods. But strangely enough, your newly discovered path is an old trail. Impression of wagon wheels can be traced here and there. Logs have fallen. They were decaying with age.

Yes, it is a trail all right. But you notice something odd—your compass indicates clearly you are traveling southwest. You had the arrow on your paratrooper's wrist-watch compass at 330 degrees, a few points west of north.

Finally, about 2:30 p.m., after more than four hours on the trail, your party stops for consultation. Rays of golden sun beat filter through the dense foliage. Hours of daylight are limited and not carrying a pack with food and a sleeping bag or blankets, you realize that you cannot reach Mirror Lake and also return before sundown to the station wagon left at Quigley's lumber camp.

Yes, you have been beaten by the wilderness! The above incident really DID happen. While we waited for the guide to rejoin us, four newspapermen built a fire in a hollow near the trail. Frankfurter, wrapped in bacon, soon became steaming, appetizing "pigs in blankets." That cheese sandwich prepared by the restaurant girl at Ewen suddenly became a delectable titbit. And cold water, dipped

From a nearby stream, was like sweet nectar itself. We lounged on the ground, joking about how we had been "lost" in the "Porcupine" at least to the extent of having missed Mirror Lake. At that moment it was a keen disappointment, for cameras were loaded with natural color film and we were anticipating scenic delights to record at Mirror Lake, our destination.

On the previous day we had climbed the Porcupine Mountain near the Lake of Clouds. Actually the mountain consists of a long escarpment with black rocky peaks. The views were inspiring. To the south lay Lake of the Clouds, catching a blue reflection of the sky. The foliage of millions of trees was turning to reds and yellows. The air was exhilarating. You liked it.

You gazed west and east towards a series of peaks. Here was the setting for a five-mile scenic highway which, like the roller-coaster Brockway drive on Keeweenaw, would afford a sensational vista to touring motorists. And here on the mountain top, fairly level for a block, was the site for a log chalet and a cluster of family cabins. Let the State of Michigan build them. Let a competent hotel operator lease them. Yes, you conclude, here was the opportunity for someone who possessed courage and skill to create one of the great wonder attractions in the Middle West.

Let the forest before you remain what it is today—a wilderness of mountain ranges, fire scars and streams. Provide access into it by foot trails and bridle paths. But don't destroy the greatest virtue it now possesses—the virgin forest wilderness which can beat man, as it did us, when he tries to penetrate its many secrets.

We blazed that old trail to the southwest? Was it made by a mining prospector whose claim and lonely cabin are now hidden by forest decay? Yes, we're going back some day to try again. Such is the lure of the Porcupines.

Youth Is Victim, Not Cause, of Trouble

Talking on "Why Youth Is In Difficulty," Dean J. B. Edmondson of the University of Michigan's School of Education blames the home, the community and the school.

The home has "shirked its duty by passing over much of the responsibility and load of training the children to other agencies."

The community has allowed its give conscience to weaken; has allowed wrong conditions and influences to grow.

The school, in many places, still thinks of youth's needs as they were in 1919, not 1944.

Dean Edmondson made six specific suggestions:

- Longer period of schooling with more vocational guidance
- Root out bad influences in the community
- More varied recreation programs
- Better opportunities to get jobs
- Better opportunities to work on civic projects
- More training in applied democracy

Dentistry Coming Field, Says Dean

"Dentistry offers unusual opportunities to the young man and woman who has the necessary ability," Dean R. W. Bunting of the Dental School of the University of Michigan said in a broadcast addressed particularly to the high school boys and girls who are beginning to think about their life work.

But consider dentistry only if you are attracted toward it, he warned. The profession was not overworked before the war. After peace comes, he foresees more demand for dentists than ever before chiefly because of two factors. Several million men who never before received dental care have had it in the Army and Navy; they have acquired the habit. Secondly, new and special fields are developing in addition to the general practice and these will absorb numbers of future graduates.

Contrary to widespread opinion, dentistry today consists of much more than filling or pulling teeth, Dean Bunting points out. "Among the new fields are public health work, children's dentistry, mouth surgery and preventive care."

Guidance Leaders Learn About Jobs by Doing Them

First hand knowledge coupled with theory was the idea underlying the summer school conducted in Detroit for 171 educators and guidance leaders.

Coming from 12 states and the District of Columbia, these superintendents, principals, college deans, and vocational counselors spent eight weeks working in factories, offices and retail stores. They learned what problems their graduates will have to face, what they need to know, what will be expected of them in various fields. As a result of these eight weeks, they returned to their schools prepared to tell John and Mary that such and such courses will be best for you in your field—I know because I have been through the mill.

Parting on the summer school were the University of Michigan, Northwestern, Wayne, Michigan State, Northern and Central State Teachers Colleges and the State Vocational Education Board. Cooperation with these were the Chrysler and Ford companies, and 17 Detroit retail stores.

Directing the entire program was F. W. Dalton of the University of Michigan.

The 171 enrollees worked a regular week for which they received regular beginning's pay. In addition they had four hours of lectures a week by top men from the business where they worked, plus four more hours by educators and guidance specialists.

It all added up, said those who took the course, to a lot sounder help to the home boys and girls when they come to pick a career or decide on courses in school.

Use, Don't Waste Senior Year Students Advised

Better use of the senior year in high school and not the abolition of it is urged by Dr. Albert C. Fvirstenberg, Dean of the Medical School of the University of Michigan.

The Dean, unlike other recent writers, does not fear the present war training will result in an over-supply of doctors. The few fields of least work opened up in the last decade, he said, and the public demand for better medical care remove any possibility of an over-supply, he believes.

Regarding the suggestion that the fourth year of high school could well be abolished, Dean Fvirstenberg is inclined to agree that, as things now stand in some schools, it could just as well be dropped, as far as any good to the graduating senior is concerned. But he urges that teaching changes be made so that the student will be genuinely benefited by that needed fourth year. "It should stress the factors which involve resourcefulness, self-reliance, independent thinking, and good study habits," he writes. "It is an appalling fact that many of our medical students fail scholastically because they cannot read."

School Library Club Meets

The Library Club of Northville High met Tuesday, Oct. 10, in the new library. The following officers were elected: President Beverly Hay, Vice President Betty Heintz, Secy. Shirley Hodger, Treasurer, Mary Ellen Babbitt.

Following the election, the new president took charge of the meeting and appointed Marcella Brady as reporter and Hazel Covell as social chairman. A discussion of new drapes for the library followed, and Mr. H. McKeague advised the group on the type to be procured.

Miss B. Ione Palmer is again sponsor of this club.

Excavating Begins for Legion Home

Tuesday the big steam shovel arrived on the Legion Memorial Hall lot and Wednesday morning at 8:30 the engine was started for the initial work of excavating for the building.

The building will be pivoted to face Dunlap street.

Another of the popular Friday night dances for the High school will be held in the High school gymnasium, tonight, Friday. The music will again be furnished by the Recreation Orchestra.

Navy Day Is for October 27

Gov. Kelly Designates Observance of Day to Honor Heroes of America's First Line Defense

Proclaiming Friday, Oct. 27, as Navy Day, Gov. Kelly urged statewide observance of that anniversary of the founding of the American navy, and the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, first advocate of a large navy.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion posts are handling preparations in most cities.

Pointing out that since 1922, Oct. 27 has been observed as Navy Day, Gov. Kelly stressed that this year it is particularly fitting that Americans should thus honor the mighty battle fleet which now bears our standard in carrying the battle to the enemy everywhere.

Americans have reason to be grateful to their navy; they know how important it has been in freedom's battle; the governor's proclamation continued. "They have reason to have confidence in the navy; they know its ships will be a major factor in final victory."

The tenderfoot was finally seated on the skittish horse after much coaxing and persuasion. About that time the impatient horse, pawing at the air and getting his hind foot caught in one of the stirrups,
"Look here, howled the timid horseman, "if you're going to get on I'm going to get off."
They were just married and she had cooked her first chicken. When he was about to carve it he said, "What did you stuff it with dear?"
"It didn't need stuffing, darling," she replied. "It wasn't hollow."

Three Steps in the Treatment of Tuberculosis

By E. W. HAYES, M.D.
THE FIRST step in treating the patient with tuberculosis is to tell him frankly and sincerely about his disease. The details and the circumstances of the cure should be explained. He should be told that while the physician can tell him about his disease, explain the cure, give him moral support and guide him, the patient must take the cure and to do so must master his emotions rather than let his imagination run wild. He should realize that after the cure has been explained, the doctor has assumed the role of close supervisor and guide, about eighty-five per cent of the job of getting well is his, while only about fifteen per cent falls to the doctor. If he does not get along as well as he thinks he should, there are about six chances out of seven that he is not doing his part. The patient must keep in mind that the path of least resistance is not the road to recovery from tuberculosis.

It should be emphasized at the outset that what the patient has in his head is, as a rule, much more important in determining the course of his disease than what he has in his lungs. By what he has in his head, he means his ability to recognize himself to what he has, to what he must do, and to where he must do it, as well as his self-control, his will power, and his determination to enter into the task of getting well with a spirit of optimistic cooperation with the physician and all others concerned with his recovery. The truth may be a great shock to the patient at the outset, but if it is only by knowing the truth that he can adjust himself to the situation. It is the uncertainties of life that cause worry, whether they relate to physical well-being, business, or family affairs. The truth sincerely told to the patient goes far toward establishing the bond of confidence that must exist between patient and doctor. One of the functions of the physician is to keep the patient thinking rightly. The physician can be optimistic, since patients can be and often do recover from even the more advanced stages of pulmonary tuberculosis.

The second step in the treatment of the patient is to see that he is placed in the environment best suited to his requirements. We are all, whether by our environment and the patient with tuberculosis whose equilibrium is already disturbed by his disease will be greatly affected by his surroundings. It is difficult for the average patient to take the cure at home. There will be countless things that come up every day to upset any regime. In most homes it is impossible to control visitors as they can be in a sanatorium. Usually the patient who understands the intricacies of the cure enters the sanatorium with a will and a determination to recover. There he has the sympathy and moral support of other patients and the intelligent guidance of attendants. He has, as well, an opportunity to profit by the example and mistakes of other patients. The education and information he acquires under such conditions form the keystone to the discipline which is so essential while he is on the cure, and to his conduct after he leaves the institution. In the sanatorium, life is systematic and highly regular. There is an opportunity to regulate and to curtail visiting to a degree consistent with the patient's condition and to have his friends and relatives understand that he, the patient, has just one business, which is to get well.

forum is that the patient will get lonesome. If patients are properly approached and if they are in the sanatorium, the physician should be it is extremely rare that the complaint of lonesomeness is made. As one patient stated: "A patient who is inclined to be lonesome can stay as long as he allows himself to be." Once in the sanatorium the patient usually adjusts himself to the situation and enters into an enthusiastic cooperation in carrying out the details necessary to regain his health.

All that has been said, in favor of the sanatorium as being the most suitable place to take the cure does not mean that the cure does not mean that the patient should not complain. There is no perfect place. An institution is an institution, not a home. There are certain features in a home which make for comfort, but the patient who feels that he must indulge in these personal comforts at the sacrifice of a routine of life that is conducive to his getting well, is liable not to get well. The number of things found to complain about, and the gravity of the complaints made, under any circumstances, are in direct proportion to the patient's make-up.

The third step in treating the patient is to have him understand that he must so order his mode of thinking and his mode of living, while he is on the cure that it will be possible for him to get the full measure of benefit. The patient must first make up his mind that he is to keep his thoughts detached from himself and his tuberculosis. For the individual who is naturally introspective, this is a difficult task. However, the majority of that type of patients in the proper environment and with proper guidance do overcome this characteristic to a tremendous degree. The extravert is inclined to endanger his chances of recovery by indulging in injudicious optimism. He needs, rare advice and guidance.

While patients should know about and understand their disease so that they will know what they should do and how they should do it, they should not attempt to understand all the minute details, particularly those that pertain to the medical aspects. Only the future answers many questions that arise in the minds of both patient and doctor. Patients should not attempt to do more than to keep the function of the physician in mind. It is the patient's duty to determine the cause of their disease by the way they feel, or those who attempt to judge their condition by their fellow patients. They are the most difficult patients to help to get well. Fringing and looks an extremely despondent and they cannot be used as a guide. Tuberculosis does not affect any two patients in the same way. It has been well said that "He who has his feet in a furnace always has a foot for a patient." A physician expressed the same thought, "No fool ever gets rid of tuberculosis of the lungs. He may be no fool in relation to his nature, science, or art, but if he is so in relation to his own well being, he is doomed for certain."

NOT SO FAST
The doctor rushed out of his study. "Get my bag at once!" he shouted.
"Why, dad?" asked his daughter, "what's the matter?"
"Some fellow just phoned he can't live without me!" gasped the doctor, reaching for his hat. His daughter breathed a sigh of relief.
"Just a moment," she said quickly. "I think that call was for me."
Teacher (pointing to a deer at the zoo): "Johnny what is that?"
Johnny: "I don't know."
Teacher: "What does your mother call your father?"
Johnny: "Don't tell me that's a house."

Let's Face the Facts
Good government requires practical men with executive ability and a strong sense of public responsibility. Michigan has found the right combination in the group of men who, under the leadership of Governor Kelly, will administer our State government during the next two years.
Your Republican administration has increased Government efficiency, brought the State through precarious war years in good shape, and has carefully planned for post-war employment, veteran re-employment, care of the dependent aged and children and a multitude of other immediate problems.
Good government has always been hard to get. Now that we, in Michigan, have it, let's keep it!
