I'll never again be without automatic hot water. It's quite inexpensive—only a few cents a day. (We hadn't known before that Edison has a special low rate for water heaters.) We've been pleasantly surprised, too, to discover that electric water-heating is completely clean and dependable and trouble-free. In our home hot water flows all day—for washing dishes, laundry, washing and scrubbing, baths, constant washing of faces and hands. It certainly pays to have hot water always on tap... no trip to the basement... no waiting. From my husband's morning shave to late baths, our electric water heater helps us around the clock. We consider it one of the finest services electricity brings us."

IMAGINE 4,300,000 Toll and Long Distance calls!

That's just an average day's work for the Bell System. Service generally is good but sometimes there's an extra big crowd on some lines and people are waiting. Then the operator will ask your help by saying—"Please limit your call to 5 minutes."

Highway Commissioner Charles W. Ziegler's latest trial with the state civil service commission gives him a current victory in a long-fought contest with Governor Coleman, former state attorney general at St. Ignace. Because Coleman is said to have left his boat without permission when Ziegler fired him, Coleman appealed to the state supreme court.

The court also ordered Ziegler to put the captain back to work but Ziegler asked the court to review his decision. The court's final decision reversed itself, holding that the civil service commission's hearing was faulty as to the record, and hence the court had nothing on which to base its judgment.

There would be 1945 when the term of Vandenberg would terminate. One year ago the former Grand Rapids newspaper editor was confronted with the necessity of making an important decision. Should he straddle the fence on the issue of American participation in postwar security? Should he oppose such action? Should he advocate our membership in a world league whereby peacekeeping troops might be stationed abroad at the call of the President to discount aggression as it begins?

Many politicians would have chosen the first of the three courses and by so doing steered a middle course between the "isolationists" and the "internationalists" to apply old labels of our pre-war thinking.

It is a matter of record that Vandenberg chose the most difficult course of the three. He switched his thinking completely, and instead of advocating neutrality or isolationism, he proclaimed the need for American responsibility to world peace as the best way to safeguard the home front from another world war.

Vandenberg's courage earned him the following logic, as he presented it to colleagues in the United States Senate only a few days ago following his return from Francisco:

"While I want a powerful Army and an invincible Navy to assure our national defense as impermeable as possible, pending the time when mutual armament can be made dependably efficient, I believe that no nation can successfully immunize itself from either exclusive reliance on an aggressive action.

I am again, as I said on Jan. 10, but since Pearl Harbor, War II has put the cruel truth in more明白 than ever perspective. I say that the oceans have ceased to be neutral which automatically makes war.

With our enemies now easily and rapidly with warred tools of destruction. No nation can ignore this reality. As a result of action taken by the state legislature last spring, one staff of field workers is now serving the needs of social security. Stand still in the State under the able leadership of social welfare Director F. Eastman, who directed the consolidation which will save money for Michigan taxpayers."

The figures show that in 1940 Michigan field workers in the state, including those in the agricultural industry, numbered 7,000. In 1941 the number was 12,000. In 1942 it increased to 22,000. In April of 1943 it reached 27,000. From Annual Report of Michigan Field Workers' Compensation Fund.

Michigan field workers in 1943 totalled 30,000, up from 25,000 in 1942. The increase is due mainly to the enrollment of women into the program.

If you're a woman, you can help your husband's industry. If you don't have the time or money, the social security office will be glad to help you.

"It's never too late to start," says the woman who helped her husband's industry. "Whether you do it or not, you try.
