Perry Hayden to Speak October 25

Perry Hayden, the "Quaker Miller" of Tecumseh, Michigan, who planted a cubic inch of wheat in 1940 that fed thousands of starving people in Europe in 1946, and with Henry Ford thus staged the most dramatic titling experiment in history, will speak and show his famous color sound movie "God Is My Landlord" at the Presbyterian Church House Monday, October 25 at 8 p. m.

"God Is My Landlord" is a color sound film, requiring seven years to produce. Henry Ford, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, R. G. LeTourneau, Dr. Walter A. Maier, James L. Kraft, and others, appear and speak in the picture, which is both educational and inspiring.

State School Aid Goes to Voters

At the Board of Education meeting held last week, a number of very important issues were discussed chief of which was the proposed amendment to change which comes up in the November 2 election.

The Board of Education voted to support the Michigan Education-Association stand on voting no on Amendment No. 2 and yes on Amendment 5. Amendment No. 2 which citizens will be asked to vote upon calls for the repeal of the state sales tax levy to be divided among school districts.

R. H. Amerman, school superintendent stated that if this amendment is repealed Northville schools will lose $84,762.32 in state aid yearly. If voters repeal it, it will become effective December 2 and some other way will have to be found, either through local taxation or some other form of state aid to carry on the school's program. Mr. Amerman stressed the need for voters to vote 'no' on this amendment.

Amendment No. 5 which the Board voted to support would modify the fifteen mill limitation to permit increase of the limitation for a period not to exceed 20 years, and will require a majority vote to pass this amendment.

The school board also passed a resolution authorizing Mr. Amerman to make a financial study of the possibility for a reorganization of the school district as suggested by the State Department of Public Instruction.

Don Cossack Chorus Comes Here Oct. 29

The General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus will be presented in Northville on October 29 at 8:15 p. m. at the Wayne County Training School Auditorium under the auspices of the Northville Business and Professional Women's Club. Nicholas Kostroff, conductor, has led his stirring band of singers in almost every country in the world. Now, in the past year, they have all become American citizens and one by one these tireless adventurers are getting married and forsaking the nomadic existence that has been theirs for 20 years.

Kostroff was studying to be a mining engineer when the first world war broke out in Europe. In the second year of war, at the age of 17, he was old enough to serve in a Cossack regiment and there rose to the rank of captain, remaining with his regiment until the Revolution. When he attempted to rejoin his parents he found that they had been driven into exile and he too became a refugee. It was in 1922 while he was studying at Prague University that his future vocation began to make itself evident. He found many exiled countrymen in the Czech capital and began to join them in their parties and devotions. They sang the old songs of their homeland and it was not long before Kostroff found himself conducting. It was then they began public appearances and they came to the United States to sing at the San Francisco World's Fair and have been here ever since.

The following dates have been announced for the other coming concerts: On January 19 singer Camilla Williams will appear and violinist Yrha Neaman will be here February 21.

State School Aid Goes to Voters

At the Board of Education meeting held last week, a number of very important issues were discussed chief of which was the proposed amendment changes which come up in the November 2 election.

The Board of Education voted to support the Michigan Education Association stand on voting no on Amendment No. 2 and yes on Amendment 5. Amendment No. 2 which citizens will be asked to vote upon calls for the repeal of the state sales tax levy to be divided among school districts.

R. H. Amerman, school superintendent stated that if this amendment is repealed Northville schools will lose $84,762.32 in state aid yearly. If voters repeal it, it will become effective December 2 and some other way will have to be found, either through local taxation or some other form of state aid to carry on the school's program. Mr. Amerman stressed the need for voters to vote "no" on this amendment.

Amendment No. 5 which the Board voted to support would modify the fifteen mill limitation to permit increase of the limitation for a period not to exceed 20 years and will require a majority vote to pass this amendment.

The school board also passed a resolution authorizing Mr. Amerman to make a financial study of the possibility for a reorganization of the school district as suggested by the State Department of Public Instruction. (Continued on back page)

Don Cossack Chorus Comes Here Oct. 29

The General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus will be presented in Northville on October 29 at 8:15 p. m. at the Wayne County Training School Auditorium under the auspices of the Northville Business and Professional Women's Club. Nicholas Kostroff, conductor, has led his stirring band of singers in almost every country in the world. Now, in the past year, they have all become American citizens and one by one these useful adventurers are getting married and forsaking the nomadic existence that has been theirs for 20 years.

Kostroff was studying to be a mining engineer when the first world war broke out in Europe. In the second year of war, at the age of 17, he was old enough to serve in a Cossack regiment and there rose to the rank of captain, remaining with his regiment until the Revolution. When he attempted to rejoin his parents he found that they had been driven into exile and he too became a refugee. It was in 1922 while he was studying at Prague University to make itself evident. He found many exiled countrymen in the Czech capitol and began to join them in their parties and devotions. They sang the old songs of their homeland and it was not long before Kostroff found himself conducting. It was then they began public appearances and they came to the United States to sing at the San Francisco World's Fair and have been here ever since.

The following dates have been announced for the other coming concerts: On January 19 singer Camilla Williams will appear and violinist Yfrah Neuman will be here February 21.

Long a student of agriculture in the South, "Sally" views with interest the "new look" in Georgia farming. Latest figures show a steady decrease in the number of miles used for farm power in this state. Replacing them are Jeeps, representing another step forward in farm mechanization. Equipped with hydraulic lifts and numerous other special implements and attachments, Jeeps have speeded up farm operations and eased the work burden for both farmer and male.

How to Cut Costs, Insure Oil Supply Disclosed by Expert

Experts have discovered how home owners can save money on their heating oil bills and insure an adequate supply for next winter even if there is a national oil shortage as some authorities predict.

Periodic surveys have demonstrated that domestic oil burner installations are operating at 60 to 80 percent overall efficiency. Walter Timmis, noted heating engineer writes in the August issue of "Homes Beautiful" magazine. "They are capable of operating from 70 to 80 percent overall efficiency. Therefore there are potential savings of from 15 to 30 percent. The other day I found and corrected an installation that was burning three times what it should have."

Insulation and weather-stripping are, of course the best ways to reduce heat loss and thus cut down your fuel bills; the writer points out, but there are two other important factors that enter the picture.

A great cause of excessive oil consumption is heat loss up the chimney brought about by leakage of basement air into the combustion chamber, the article declares. "This can be detected by the use of an instrument called an 'orast.' The leaks should then be stopped with furnace and refractory cement," the article states. "In the average size house this will cost from ten to fifteen dollars. Some oil burner men attempt to adjust the burner by the 'color of the flame.' This is a delusion and a snare. It affords no means whatsoever for detecting air leakage. The only way to do it is to make sure there are no leaks and then adjust the burner for the highest possible CO2 with no visible smoke from the flame."

Third major cause of heat loss is an unbalanced heating system, according to the article, which lists some of the things that can be done to correct this condition. "For one pipe system install balancing air valves on the radiators," the article advises. "Correct trapped piping—piping that slants the wrong way or does not slant enough the right way. Install vent valves with large ports on ends of steam mains so that the steam can flow readily to the remote parts of the system."

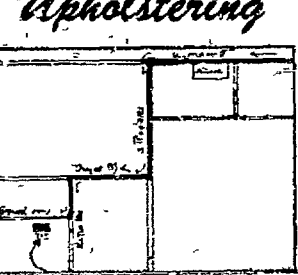

"For two pipe systems install an orifice plate in the union in each radiator inlet valve with the orifice sized for the capacity of the radiator on which it is installed. Correct trapped piping."

"For hot water systems install a balancing elbow on the return connection of each radiator. If you have a gravity system a booster pump will improve circulation."

"For warm air systems, try adjusting dampers, cutting down on air flow to rooms easy to heat and opening up the flow to rooms hard to heat. If you do not have dampers they can be installed."

"Oil fuel consumption can be reduced by as much as fifty percent according to the writer who states: "We may as well make up our minds that the automatic fuels, oil and gas, are going to be in short supply. Our natural resources have seemingly been so vast and limitless that we have tended to be profligate. The time has come for us to practise frugality. It is a shame not to do it when we have the means and the know-how to reduce our fuel consumption by as much as fifty percent."

But Always Be a Good Sport

This year hunters should exercise more courtesy in the field than ever before and experienced hunters should go out of their way to teach the fundamentals of hunting etiquette and hunting safety to the expected record number of novices who will go shooting for the first time.

That's the advice of Herb Parsons, reputed to be one of the nation's fastest gun handlers and exhibition shooters, who suggests 10 specific ways hunters can win the friendship of farmers. Every sensible man will want to do everything he can to educate the newcomers to America's No. 1 fall sport, says Parsons.

Most hunters know that most of the game taken in America is shot on the private property of farmers.

The pleasant relationship between farmer and hunter is one of the unique traditions which has helped make the United States the only country on earth today where hunting is still a sport of the masses. Elsewhere, where there is game, hunting is the sport of the wealthy.

who can afford to maintain private hunting estates.

With more than 12 million hunting licenses issued last year and even more expected this year, Parsons says:

sons says that sportsmen should paste the following 10 tips in their hats and remember them when they get "Betsey" out of storage and take to the hunting field:

1. Ask permission of the farmer before hunting.
2. Share your bag with him.
3. Follow the rules of hunting safety and be sure stray shots won't strike the farmer's livestock, dwelling or outbuildings.
4. Use the farmer's gates, close them after you and don't climb over wire fences as they may be damaged. Pay for damages.
5. Don't shoot at barns or signs.
6. Don't walk over seeded fields or tramp down crops.
7. Don't help yourself to the farmer's fruit or vegetables. Buy them.

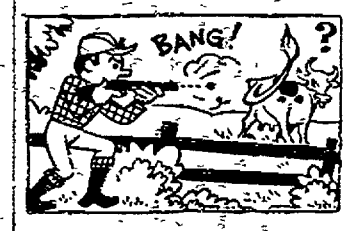

8. Stomp out matches, cigars and cigarettes and don't start fires to smoke out game. Don't litter the farmer's premises.

9. Don't shoot along lanes from automobiles.

10. Do a little pest hunting too. It's real sport.

One rule, says Parsons, covers all rules: DO UNTO OTHERS AS YOU WOULD HAVE THEM DO UNTO YOU.

Most farmers don't object to hunting on their land and welcome the same hunters year after year. Hunters and farmers become friends whose visits are not limited to the hunting season. In thousands of cases, both are staunch conservationists who give their full support to all kinds of programs to save the soil, make it more productive and to increase its game crops. Most farmers and hunters are now good friends but whether our tradition of farmer-hunter friendship is to continue depends on the new hunter.
