TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

226 homes seen for city's remaining big tract of land

If preliminary plat plan for 92 acres on the north side of Eight Mile comes into being, the last remaining large undeveloped piece of property in the city will be an area of 226 homes on winding roads and cul de sacs.

At their July 11 meeting city planners viewed for the first time a "preliminary plat" for the property known as the McDonald farm.

Ernest Fournier representing Four Real Estate Investments, Incorporated, a land developer, presented the plan for initial discussion.

Roy Russell, land planning consultant and engineer, told the planners if the initial plan met with approval they would seek preliminary plat plan approval at the July 25 meeting.

Earlier there had been rumors that the developers were considering a planned development that might include commercial and multiples, but the plan shown for the property was only for single family dwellings on lots that ranged upward in size from a minimum of 80 feet by a depth of 120 feet.

Incorporated into the plat were 22 acres of open, green space located primarily in the northwest section of the property and following the Randolph drain flood plain.

The property abuts Lexington Commons North on the east, but does not extend to Northville Estates on the west. The developers told the planners they had been unable to obtain the piece of land to the west of the proposed development.

Two pieces of land fronting on Eight Mile on the easterly and the westerly edges of the property were exempted from the plat. Russell told the planning commission that the westerly piece contained an existing home and that the piece on the east was separated from the plat by a ravine.

The intention, he stated, was to leave it vacant and possibly in the future seek rezoning for such commercial use as a bank or perhaps funeral home.

Commission Chairman C. Thomas Wheaton warned the developers that "this is the last large remaining land in the city that has not been developed, and we intend to look at plans carefully."

"I would like personally to suggest that you include the lot in the right (easterly) portion in your plan."

He questioned whether it might be incorporated into lots on the curve of the entry road, but Russell said the ravine made this impossible. It was stated, however, that entry to the three-quarter acre piece might be from Eight Mile. The lot is 138 feet deep, Russell pointed out, which would make house construction rather close to Eight Mile.

Commissioner Charles Freydl told the developers that he would like to see the piece included in residential as area residents "had made it clear that they want no commercial."

Freydl also told developers he would look for sidewalks on the plans when they are submitted officially as the property is located in an area where there

'Cover-up's misleading' say officials

A newspaper article that officials said did not "accurately reflect" the cooperation between Northville police and school officials investigating drug abuse "could well have been a disservice" to the high school, according to a joint news release issued Monday.

The release, prepared by city, police and school officials, said that substance abuse at the high school has been "dealt with appropriately over the past year."

"In fact," continued the release, "there has been an improved level of cooperation over the last year between school officials and police when they have called upon each other for

Street extended

Construction of the long-awaited Wing Street to Seven Mile Road is now underway in the city. Officials are hopeful the project will be completed yet this year. Meanwhile, construction crews also are busy on the project to surface the new municipal parking lot at Hutton and Main streets and to widen and improve the intersection of Hutton with Main.

Bill eases possibility

One county city here?

Northville's historic ties to Wayne County date back more than 150 years.

Its polygynous relationship with Oakland County is of newer vintage. But this unique governmental marriage could one day end in divorce.

A bill introduced in the legislature recently has revived talk here of possibly adjusting the city's boundaries so that all of the city is located in one county — either in Wayne or in Oakland.

Presently, the city is divided in half. That section lying north of Base Line is located in Oakland County, while the section of the city south of Base Line is located in Wayne County.

The two halves are almost identical in size of population and territory and they are fast becoming alike in tax base. Presently, however, the Wayne County half has more equalized valuation.

Location in two counties makes Northville unique in the state. Only six other Michigan cities share this position — Holland, Brown City, Lansing, Memphis, Midland and Milan.

Two-county status hasn't always been the case here, however. Northville for most of its 150-year history was entirely located within Wayne County. But with the annexation of major chunks of Novi within the last two decades, Northville's northern boundary was pushed into Oakland County.

Northville Estates, Lexington Commons North, Northville Heights, and Village Green subdivision lands, for example, were all Novi's property.

Even the sites of Northville High School and Amerman Elementary School were part of Novi.

Some residents of the city are unaware of this division of the city. Many others have so few direct contacts with county government that the split is unimportant. For them, it is most noticeable at election time.

That's when the two sections of the city vote for an entirely different slate of county officials, state representatives and congressmen. The Oakland County section of the city, for example, is represented in the state senate by Daniel Cooper, while the Wayne County section's senator is R. Robert Geake.

Split allegiance has advantages, such as double representation in Lansing, and disadvantages, such as election confusion.

City officials are most aware of the differences. But none of them seem particularly anxious to change the dual county status.

(Interestingly, only one member of the council, Stanley Johnston is a resident of Wayne County. Mayor Paul Vernon, council members Dewey Gardner, J. Burton DeRusha, and Wallace Nichols, and City Manager Steven Walters are Oakland County residents).

The old idea of single county status for the city has drawn fresh life with the introduction of a bill in the state legislature that would make single county government more easily achieved.

Sponsored by State Representative Roy Smith (R-Saline), House Bill 6182 provides that upon petitioning by 10-percent of the city's registered electors a question altering county lines and

NEWS BRIEF

"ABOUT 85-percent of the available spaces have been reserved," said Charles Lapham as the annual Sidewalk Sales day draws closer. Business people and others still wishing to reserve space may do so by calling Lapham at 349-3677. Slated for Saturday, July 29, the event is expected to eclipse last year's project that drew thousands of shoppers and spectators to downtown Northville. Downtown Main and Center streets will be closed for the 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. event. And because the largest crowd ever is expected, Lapham is urging that motorists park in the parking lot adjacent to Northville Downs.

1978 CD GRANTS have been approved by HUD for the city's library project, downtown development and Ford Field projects. This approval accepts the projects as eligible under regulations, and appropriates $80,000 for the first three years funding for the three projects. Library construction contracts are expected to be let in August.

A CONTRIBUTION of $1,000 has been made for Allen Terrace furnishings by Mr. and Mrs. Jan Reef of Northville.

SHOULDER paving of Hines Drive, from Ford Road to Seven Mile Road, is expected to be made yet this summer, according to the county. The paving, noted city council members, will make the parkway drive just short of a four-lane roadway.

Air mail

When Postmaster John Steimel's wife called to report spotting a 15-foot high mailbox at Northville State Hospital, the postmaster responded, "It's too early in the morning for games," and hung up on her. But Mrs. Steimel, an employee at the hospital, wasn't joking. The 15-footer is for real...a decorative conversation piece purportedly for "air mail." Steimel reports that not even carrier Cap Pethers, who ducks for clouds, can check its contents.

Livonia official contests Geake

EDITOR'S NOTE: Incumbent State Senator R. Robert Geake of Northville is being challenged by Livonia City Clerk Addison Bacon for the Republican nomination for the senate in the 14th District. Paul Kadish of Livonia is unopposed for the Democratic nomination. Following are interviews of Geake and Bacon.

Bacon...

Addison Bacon doesn't think Robert Geake listened enough to him and other clerks since Geake became a Michigan senator.

So, Bacon, longtime Livonia city clerk, hopes that Geake hears him clearly when the ballots are counted following the August 8 primary election.

Bacon, who is making his first step into the waters of a partisan election, is challenging Northville's Geake for the Republican nomination for the state's 14th senate district.

Bacon, an easygoing man who is closing in on 15 years as city clerk, stepped into the race when fellow Livonia Republican, state Representative Robert Law, decided not to oppose Geake this year.

Sitting in his Livonia office in the Patience and persistence rather than flamboyance is the image that Northville State Senator Robert Geake wants to portray.

That style has proven effective, he says, during his 4-1/2 years as a state lawmaker, the last 16 months of which have been spent in the Michigan senate.

Geake, whose bid for re-election is being challenged in the Republican primary by Livonia City Clerk Addison Bacon, points to a prison that isn't in Northville as an endorsement of his methods.

Geake says his efforts in Lansing were instrumental in thwarting a state proposal to convert county property in

BRIGHTON—There will be no re-assessment of Brighton Township by the state and Lawrence Morgan, assistant attorney general, said his office is closing the file in its investigation into township assessing. Morgan said that "whatever problems occurred (in the township) were due to correctable errors in assessing rather than intentional under-assessing..."

WHITMORE LAKE—Tensions which had been building all week between area residents and carnival workers sparked a near riot at the Whitmore Lake Fourth of July carnival. An estimated 40-80 persons participated in a brawl in which one man was seriously hurt and several others received minor injuries. One of the triggering problems was a carnival employee's refusal to allow a woman to ride because she appeared intoxicated.

"We're investigating as to who the perpetrator is right now," said Oakland County Arson Investigator Dave Millam who said the investigation "will probably be continuing for awhile."

NOVI—The paving of 13 Mile Road will apparently begin this year, city officials report. All right-of-way acquisitions except one have been obtained and the city is prepared to seek bids for the paving of 13 Mile from Novi Road to Meadowbrook.

WIXOM—A plan for development of approximately 400 acres in southwest Wixom has been unveiled. Holt Development and Construction said plans include an eighteen hole golf course, tennis and racquetball facilities, condominiums and a commercial area.

COMMERCE—A public forum on M-275 and the two alternatives to the now-cancelled freeway project, sponsored by six area chambers of commerce, will be held July 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the Clifford Smart Junior High School, 8500 Commerce Road.

Smiling Bob Hay

Now they talk to deaf custodian

By RICH PERLBERG

The sounds of silence have seldom been sweeter for Bob Hay.

The friendly Northville schools custodian picked up an unusual fringe benefit when he was transferred from the high school to the Main Street Annex in October.

He found people he could talk to.

Hay, 49, is deaf. The Annex is a school for retarded youngsters, most of whom are blind or deaf or both.

The result is a natural. Hay, who "signs" in hand language with the quickness and dexterity of a concert pianist winging across a keyboard, helps Annex staffers improve their signing skills.

The teachers, in turn, not only take time to talk to Hay — who reads lips — but encourage him to talk with his mouth as well as his hands.

Because of this, Hay's verbal skills have been rapidly improved, say his co-workers. Indeed, by the time a 30-minute interview was completed, Hay and a reporter had taken to bypassing an "interpreter" who was trying to polish up his signing skills.

So pleased is Hay with his new-found talking buddies that he seldom misses a chance to strike up a conversation.

"We can't shut him up," laughs Jane Provencal, the community services representative who works at the Annex.

Told of this remark, Hay puts on his mock indignation face, points to Mrs. Provencal's half-empty wastebasket and suggests it would be full if only she didn't talk so much.

"He's got a very dry sense of humor," says David Bartlett, a teacher at the Annex.

"Ninety percent of the time he's got a big smile on his face. He's a joy to have around and he's a hard worker. He always has time for a word and we make time to include him in as much as possible."

The feeling is mutual. Hay, who had to work somewhat in isolation as well as silence at the high school, says the people at the Annex are "nice and kind."

He gets along famously with the retarded youngsters, including one blind boy who helps him carry boxes and with other custodial chores.

Asked if his presence is beneficial to the retarded youngsters, the usually loquacious Hay suddenly turns modest, shrugs his shoulders and says, "I don't know."

"It does help," interjects Bartlett, "especially the signing. It gives them more practice."

Hay, a lifetime Northville resident, gets a lot of practice with his family. His wife, Dorothea, who works in Farmington, and two of his sons, Fred, 21, and Alex, 8, are deaf.

The couple, who live on Rogers Street, have four other boys, William, Nathan, Jonny and Timothy, ranging in ages from 23 to 10.

Just like his father who rode buses into Detroit's Day School for the deaf in his younger days, Alex must ride daily to Redford to go to school.

Frequently, Hay, who walks to work each day, enjoys an animated early morning conversation with his son as he waits for the bus at the Annex.

"He signs real fast with his kids,"

Since coming to the Annex, Bob Hay (left) has been talking up a storm.

Market opener

One of the first stands to be set up at the opening farmer's market of the season in Main Street parking lot last Thursday was the herb one of Jack and Joann Winner who are explaining the varieties to Arlo Hauger, at right. A rainy morning combined with a late growing season resulted in only a few farmers coming to the market. Essie Nirider, secretary of the Northville Chamber of Commerce which is sponsoring the weekly markets this year, expects a better turnout tomorrow as crops of tomatoes, corn and vegetables are ready. The market opens each Thursday at 8 a.m. and runs until 5 p.m. or until farmers are sold out.

Takes 47 jobs

Federal-Mogul to leave

Northville Township will lose 47 jobs when Federal-Mogul Corporation suspends operation at their facility at 1700 Northville Road to move their business to Romulus.

At a meeting Thursday night, the Northville Township Board accepted a resolution granting permission for Federal-Mogul to file under Act 198 in the City of Romulus, where they will receive a 50 percent abatement in taxes.

Act 198 requires that a company moving to a new area and receiving tax abatement must have permission from the governmental unit it is leaving.

Jim Zamoyski, Federal-Mogul corporate tax manager, told township trustees that the company was leaving Northville because it can't grow and expand in the present location.

The people working at the 47 jobs in the Northville powder-metal engineering center will be transferred to the Romulus facility, where the company will manufacture powder metal and rock material forgings. Such heavy industrial manufacturing is prohibited by the Northville Township zoning ordinance.

Zamoyski said that even if the zoning were to be changed, the Northville location is too small to accommodate the expansion needed.

Zamoyski said Federal-Mogul pays the township $28,000 in taxes. Of that amount the township will continue to receive $15,000 in taxes for the company's property, but the township will lose the $13,000 tax on personal property when the machinery and equipment is moved to the new location.

"We will try to continue operations of some kind at the building," he said. "Otherwise we will sell the building."

the timing of the move is pending action by the company's board of directors at a July 25 meeting.

"We hope to be in the new facility sometime early in 1979," he said. "We will probably be moving some equipment in the fourth quarter of 1978."

Zamoyski said Federal-Mogul would keep the township board informed on a quarterly basis on the company's progress in getting some kind of light industry into the building.

New township hall

Sewer can't pass code

The sewer which will serve the new Northville Township Hall does not meet the township's building code and cannot pass inspection, Building Inspector Troy Milligan reported at the Northville Township Board meeting Thursday night.

The building code calls for either one cleanout every 100 feet of sewer or one manhole every 400 feet, Milligan explained, but one stretch of the township hall's sewer runs 520 feet without either.

Secondly, the 520 feet run along Six Mile Road is two feet shallower than code allows.

Long Plumbing Company, which was awarded a $178,400 plumbing contract for the project, installed the sewer as required by the plans, except for the shallow sewer line. At the time of installation, the ground around an existing manhole started to cave in, and the excavator thought it best to install it shallower, according to Milligan's report to the board.

To solve part of the problem Township Supervisor Wilson Grier said the sewer line is being bermed with a two foot high shoulder which will be incorporated into the landscape design.

"A two foot berm will provide adequate depth," Grier said, pointing out that the building project had had relatively few change orders.

Grier said a decision had not been made about whether to install a manhole or the required number of cleanouts. "We are proceeding to work on getting them in," he said.

Township Trustee James L. Nowka expressed concern that the architectural plans had not been checked by William Mosher, township engineer.

"Typically, any site plan for development is reviewed by the engineer and planning consultant," Nowka said in a later telephone interview. "It wasn't done on the township hall, and I'm surprised it wasn't. It's strange that this did not follow normal procedure. There are errors there that shouldn't have occurred, and I don't think they would have occurred if our engineer had looked at the plans."

Mosher explained that he represents the township in reviewing plans made by outside agencies. "A developer is assumed to be attempting to get everything in his favor he can," Mosher said. "It's up to the township to see he follows the rules because he's working for the developer's interest, not the township's interest."

Mosher said the case of the township hall is different. "The township hired professionals to do this work, and there's no reason they should pay me to check them. They should be able to rely on the people they hired."

The township hall plans were drawn by Ralls-Hamill Architects, Incorporated, a Livonia firm, for a $46,100 architectural fee.

"It's the same as any other building under construction," Grier said. "There are always things that come up during construction. No plans are ever perfect."

Grier said costs were 2-1/2 to 3 percent over the original estimate of the cost of the project, with a 7 percent increase had been built into the budget. "We're well within budget at this particular point," he said.

Contracts totalling $782,683 were awarded in May 1977 for construction of the township hall north of Six Mile Road across from Winchester. Of that amount, $761,000 came from an Economic Development Administration grant.

A person enrolls in the program, then whenever the carrier notices that mail is not being picked up from the mailbox the postmaster is notified and the home will be visited to determine if an emergency exists.

"Suppose a senior citizen isn't picking up her mail," said Steimel. "It may very well mean that the person is very ill and may need assistance. Of course, if the mail is not picked up for only a day or two, it may only mean the person has forgotten to do it. But build up of mail can very well be a signal that something's wrong."

Veto possibility worries board

By TIM RICHARD

Back at the drawing boards, Schoolcraft College officials are worrying not only about cutting $275,000 from the budget but whether the governor will veto their state aid bill.

The good side of the coin is that Schoolcraft's state aid is up 10.5 percent from the last fiscal year. President C. Nelson Grote told the July 12 board meeting.

The bad side is that the two-year college was expecting 13 to 14 percent boost in legislative bills for the fiscal year that began July 1.

"In drawing up the budget, we took an average of the house and senate bills," said Grote.

The house bill allocated $4.98 million for Schoolcraft; the senate, $5.01 million.

"Well, when the appropriations bill was adopted, they cut both the senate and house bills," Grote went on.

At the moment, the legislative bill as passed awards Schoolcraft $4.7 million. But even that amount is in danger.

Governor William G. Milliken is reportedly considering a veto because a number of items in the package are more than he had requested. "If it is vetoed," said Grote, "I'm not certain the (political) climate in September will be as favorable as now."

The board of trustees unanimously passed a resolution asking Milliken to sign the bill as it stands.

Grote said he will reconvene the administrative budget committee, headed by Kenneth Lindner, vice-president for administrative affairs.

Its chief work will be to recommend cuts of $275,000, to make up for the state appropriation loss, and report back to the board of trustees July 26.

A significant gain for community colleges is that they are now budgeted by a line item appropriation, the same as four-year colleges and universities.

In previous years, the legislature had funded community colleges by an enrollment formula, the same as K-12 school districts.

The advantage is that with a line item appropriation, the college knows, as soon as the bill becomes law, exactly what dollars it will receive from the state for the fiscal year. K-12 districts don't know, until their fall enrollment figures become final, what they will get from the state.

Schoolcraft's total operating budget, passed by the board last month, is $11.2 million in the general fund plus another $1 million for capital equipment and special maintenance.

The property tax levy, for both operations and debt retirement, will be 2.09 mills, down 0.01 from the prior year.

Trustees asked for improvements in the preparation of so-called "ancillary" budgets — for cultural and public affairs, student activities, institutes and the Women's Resource Center.

Trustees Nancie Blatt and Rosina Raymond were unhappy that the Women's Resource Center budget appeared to be only $226. Grote explained that that was only a restricted grants and gifts account, and that the operations of the Women's Resource Center were in the general fund budget at upwards of $30,000.

Treasurer Harry Greenleaf raised the possibility of showing program budgets separately, and allocating administrative costs to programs rather than showing administrative costs in one lump.

Reward's out for posy thief

You can take away his beer, but don't mess with a gardener's gusto.

James Cutler of Cutler Realty, corner of Center and Rayson streets, made that point clear.

"I'm so angry I could spit nails," he fumed after finding that someone had stolen a hanging flower basket last week from the porch of his business establishment.

So angry, in fact, that Cutler posted a $100 reward for the arrest and conviction of the culprit.

"Maybe it seems unimportant but it's very important to me. Sure, I can replace it, but not with the same kinds of flowers and plants that were growing in it before. They're out of season and not available now."

Cutler served notice that he's prepared to prosecute "no matter how much it costs me."

Cadet charges discrimination

A cadet-patrolwoman, who has twice been passed over for promotions even though she posted the highest eligibility score, has charged the Northville City Police with sex discrimination.

"I feel I was denied a promotion because of my sex," said Barbara Richards in a discrimination complaint filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Ms. Richards, who has a law enforcement degree from Michigan State University, said she was more qualified than two male cadets who were promoted in May.

City officials said the two men, David Fendeleit and James Marks, were promoted because they had "more extensive work-related experience and a better demonstrated willingness to work and ability to deal with the public."

The city, which has no female patrolmen, said it was not guilty of sex discrimination.

"While her written test score and college credentials may be higher," said officials, "they are neither a direct standard for promotion nor sufficient to outweigh demonstrated performance and attitude."

Ms. Richards, who has been with the department since February of 1976, scored 86.6 on the rating system which is based 50 percent on a written exam, 25 percent on an oral exam and 25 percent on employee evaluations.

Fendeleit scored 86 and Marks 80.

In May, Northville Police Captain Louis Westfall announced that the two men were promoted to fill two positions created recently by the city council.

The decision, he wrote, was "made as a result of the ratings, based on written exam, oral exam, evaluation and work record."

In her complaint, Ms. Richards said Westfall wrote her "saying that I was not promoted because of a lack of performing assigned duties of desk personnel, a lack of initiative, a negative attitude, a lack of willingness to perform extra duties and a failure to correct the problem of discourteousness toward the public."

A year ago, however, Westfall gave Ms. Richards high marks in her employee evaluation.

She received the best possible rating in the Categories of job knowledge, personal habits, quality of work and cooperation.

She got the second highest rating in the areas of dependability and initiative.

In her evaluation, which grades from one to four with four being the highest, she received no rating lower than three.

Her attorney, Vaughn McClain of South Lyon, said he hoped the matter could be solved "amicably" and "out of court if that is possible."

In response to the sex discrimination charge, the city said it has an Affirmative Action Plan. It also said Ms. Richards failed to use established grievance procedures.

Both Ms. Richards and her attorney said there were reasons for bypassing the grievance mechanism, but they would not elaborate.

'The dog has died, but tail still wags'

Grand View Acres residents had their second chance to fight against the development of an office complex adjacent to their subdivision at a Northville Township Planning Commission public hearing last week.

The attorney for Northville Investors and Dr. Waldemar E. Gizynski, who own most of the property, called the resident efforts to rezone the property to single family residential or another zoning determined by the planning commission "a reverse twist."

"This is a reverse of the normal situation in rezoning," Attorney James E. Littell said. "Invariably, a request for rezoning is made by the property owner. What we have here is a petition of lot owners asking that someone else's property be rezoned. In my opinion, it is uncalled for."

Grand View Acres residents disagreed as they enumerated reasons for their rezoning requests and disputed Littell's contention that the area north of Seven Mile Road, parallel to and west of Marilyn, is "undesirable for single family development."

Littell said it would be economically feasible to develop the property with single family dwellings. Referring to the Northville State Hospital, the Michigan State Police Post and Northville Charley's, he said, "It doesn't seem right for property owners to argue they want this single family when the whole character of the entire neighborhood is going for some other use."

Attorney Charles N. Simkins, representing Grand View Acres residents, pointed out that the property was originally zoned for offices to provide medical facilities to a retirement village proposed for an adjacent 29-acre parcel. The plans for the retirement village died, and the property owner received a court-ordered consent judgment allowing construction of apartment units on the property.

"The dog has died, but the tail still wags," Simkins said. "We ask that the tail be done away with."

Simkins said economics should not be considered in problems of rezoning. "The purpose of zoning is to concern itself with the health, safety and welfare of citizens," he said.

Edward J. Wilkiemeyer, who owns residentially zoned property west of the disputed 10 acres, said he planned to ask for rezoning of his land.

Agreeing with Littell that single family development was economically unfeasible, Wilkiemeyer said, "I don't think any of you people here would try to develop the area as single family and risk your money." He said to make a profit he would have to sell houses for $100,000, and "the market isn't there."

Wilkiemeyer told the commissioners he would petition to rezone his property to whatever the commissioners decided for the Gizynski property, saying if it stayed zoned for office use, he'd ask for the same.

He said he favored zoning for multiple dwellings because of a concern for "where the business is going to come from to support office development or commercial development."

Many Grand View Acres residents expressed concern that allowing this property to remain zoned for offices would set a precedent leading to commercialization of the area. Another request to rezone the Claypool property in the same area will come before the planning commission soon. The property consists of four lots on Seven Mile Road between Maxwell and Fry, as well as one lot on the west side of Fry, north of Seven Mile Road. A public hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. August 15 to consider this property.

John C. Bicknell, insisting that the character of north Seven Mile Road is residential, referred to office service zoning as a "leak which will turn into a flood. Let's stop it now."

Don Bisdorf said, "Where do we go from here? Are we going to turn Seven Mile Road into downtown Northville Township?"

Disputing the contention that Seven Mile Road is undesirable for single family homes, Bisdorf said, "People are coming from all over, looking for open land. I don't know of any available land on Seven Mile Road. That's why no homes have gone up."

Joseph Petro said the property should never have been zoned for offices in the first place. "It was planned as part of the subdivision," he said, pointing out that some of the property abuts three Marilyn backyards, which would depreciate in value if backed up to offices.

"Who pays for their (the Marilyn property owners') depreciation?" Petro asked. "Don't they have a say-so?"

J. J. Fiorilli said the ultimate question is: "Are we going to ask taxpayers to underwrite the speculative risks of property owners?"

He claimed that the owners never wanted to develop the land as single family. If they had offered it for sale, he said, "anybody in their cotton-pickin' right mind would buy the property and build on it."

Taxpayers have rights, he said, and

"there is a social responsibility in the ownership of land. It does not belong solely to the owners. They have a social responsibility to the community."

Richard F. Amos, who owns a rental house on one of the lots in the 10 acres zoned for offices, requested that the planning commission return his property to single family residential.

In 1968 when the property was rezoned from single family to office services, he objected. "Why include me?" he said. "I built a home on the property in 1959, and I'm proud and happy with it. As for your fears about Seven Mile — forget it."

Karl R. Bennett spoke for the C. A. Muer Corporation, which owns one of the lots in the 10-acre parcel. He said the lot was less than three-fourths of an acre and could not be zoned multiple. "It's the least desirable single family lot," he said, "and at least that portion should remain in the office service category."

Commissioners asked George Vilican, township planning consultant, to make a recommendation at their next meeting, July 25, when they will consider the petition for rezoning.

The public hearing was the second held to consider the property. At the first on April 11 the commission lacked a quorum, and township attorney Donald Morgan ruled that it did not constitute a proper public hearing.

At last Tuesday's hearing, Littell questioned the validity of the second public hearing. He said the statute requiring posting of the property and written notices sent to adjoining property owners had not been followed.

Margaret Tegge, deputy township clerk, said these requirements had been met.

Horsing around

Considering the recent warm weather, it's likely that this customer of a Northville drive-in would have preferred to order a pony keg full of Colt 45. But since the A&W menu doesn't include such libations, "Moonstar," a horse owned by Cheryl Cook, probably had to settle for a Black Cow.

Bill would ease boundary change

Joining one county can be placed on the ballot. Only residents of the city would vote on the question.

Presently, the only way a change can be made is if voters of both counties agree to it in a county-wide referendum. Prior to 1974, the change could be made only by special act of the state legislature.

Upon discussion of HB 6182 last week, council found three things it would like changed before the bill finally reaches a vote in Lansing. These include:

- Adding a section to permit, in addition to petitioning by citizens, a city council to place the question on the ballot.
- Changing the language so that when voting on the question, voters at the same time and in the same question are picking the county they wish to join.
- Changing the language so that passage requires more than simple majority.

As presently written, the bill would place two questions on the ballots. The first would ask if the city should be entirely in one county, and the other would ask the voter to indicate the county of his or her preference.

Northville officials believe the two question approach is confusing. For example, it is possible that voters could defeat the one-county proposal, while overwhelmingly select one county over the other.

Furthermore, they argue that citizens petitioning for a boundary change probably are doing it with the idea of becoming part of a specific county. Why not let them petition to join that county, rather than giving them a multiple choice question? asked council members.

Officials recognized, however, that the single question concept could result in two propositions being placed on the same ballot — one asking that Northville be located in Wayne County, the other in Oakland County.

And in the event both carried, presumably the one garnering the most votes would prevail.

City Attorney Philip Ogilvie suggests that more than a simple majority should be required "because of the importance" of the issue. He suggested 60-percent of the vote.

Council is recommending these three bill changes to the legislature.

Meanwhile, however, City Manager Walters says he personally believes the advantages of the dual status in Northville outweigh single county jurisdiction.

Northville carries more clout in Lansing because it has more representation; it has two county services to choose from; it enjoys some interest in its well-being from county politicians in both Wayne and Oakland; and it receives more federal funding than it would receive under single county status, he points out.

While a particular service of one county may be better than in the other, another kind of service offered by the other county may be better, he notes.

"About the only real disadvantage in our present situation is a clerical problem (two tax rolls, two election ballots, etc.). So overall, I'd say the benefits of being in two counties outweigh the few problems it creates," says Walters.

Changing the boundaries may create other kinds of problems, the manager adds. "For example, in those counties having residency requirements for their employees, what happens if the employee finds himself no longer living in the county where he is employed?"

Despite his negative feeling about single county status, neither Walters nor council opposes legislation making it easier for citizens to decide their own county boundaries. They appear to be supportive of HB 6182.

In a tongue in cheek observation, Councilman Nichols says, "Who knows, maybe the people won't want either Oakland or Wayne. Maybe they'll pick Livingston County."

Counties, on the other hand, are not likely to see any humor in the legislation proposed by Representative Smith.

That's because the loss or acquisition of a city can have a major effect on the county. It can change the tax base and it can deprive elected officials of their offices.

Such a change, therefore, should only be made with the consent of the affected counties, they argue.

Police Blotter

Ely checks stolen, Northville man nabbed

A Northville man was arrested Thursday morning when police say he tried to cash two checks that were stolen from a city business the night before.

Theodore Francis Mills, 29, 219 Debra, was arraigned in Inkster circuit court Friday on a charge of breaking and entering. He is free on $2500 personal bond while waiting a July 24 preliminary examination.

Northville City Police say that Mills has confessed to breaking into Ely Garden Center, 316 North Center, at about 3 a.m. Thursday morning and stealing two checks from an office ledger.

Police say Mills claimed the checks, totaling $475, were made out to an individual and to "cash." Ely officials told police that the checks were blank.

Entry was apparently made through the roof. When Ely personnel discovered the theft, they contacted area banks.

While police were at Ely's investigating the crime shortly after 10 a.m., a local bank called to say someone was trying to cash the stolen checks.

Police went to the bank and arrested Mills.

Another Northville business, John Mach Ford, 550 Seven Mile, was also a victim of a theft last week.

A company spokesman told police that somebody stole a pickup worth $6700 from the dealership's lot between Monday and Wednesday.

Township police recovered an eight horsepower gasoline engine that a 16-year-old boy stole from a Parkland garage.

Also in the township, Michigan State Police report that the warm weather has resulted in a rash of walkaways from area institutions.

Most escapees have come from the state hospital on Seven Mile Road just east of the state police post. There was also an escape from the Plymouth Center for Human Development at Five Mile and Sheldon.

A prisoner escaped from the Detroit House of Corrections but was later picked up by Northville City Police.

Three earn straight A's

Three recent Northville High School graduates were among 571 Michigan State University students who achieved a 4.0 or "straight A" average during the winter term.

Two were freshmen, Laurie Day, 20359 Woodhill, who is taking a pre-professional curriculum, and Elizabeth Harrison, 18280 Shadbrook Drive, majoring in telecommunication.

The third was a sophomore, Mary O'Meara, 401 Welch Road, a nursing major.

Attends workshop

Cheryl Tatouf, treasurer of Northville High School's student congress, was one of more than 100 student government representatives attending a recent leadership workshop conducted by the University of Michigan at a Van Buren County Youth camp near Paw Paw.

The week-long experience, from July 2-7, is designed to teach principles of effective leadership and to provide for practical opportunities in applying these principles.

The program was sponsored by the University of Michigan Extension Service.

Livonia city clerk challenges Senator Geake

Bacon. . .

shadow of a new multi-story civic building under construction, Bacon complained of a lack of communication between Geake and municipalities.

"He not only represents voters but cities and townships," said Bacon. "It's really important that he understands that, but he hasn't had that type of communication."

Bills which affect cities and townships become laws without officials ever hearing from Geake, said Bacon.

He said there were changes in election laws which clerks in Geake's district didn't hear about until they became facts.

He said Geake, who sits on the municipalities and elections committee, should have contacted clerks for their advice before he voted.

"Who is better qualified than clerks" to comment on the law? asked Bacon.

"He (Geake) should ask us: Look at the bill. How does it affect you? What do you think my judgment should be on this bill?" said Bacon.

As a state senator, Bacon said he could carry more weight than Geake with his legislative colleagues.

"I've heard quite a bit of criticism of his effectiveness," said Bacon. "I think that I can improve it."

Another thing that needs improving, said Bacon, is the "fuzzy legislation" forced upon local communities who "don't have the means to carry it out."

The Tax Revolt, he said, is a plea by the public for government to "please get off my back and out of my pocket."

One of every five people are employed or supported by government, he said.

"We've created a lot of government and found out it's pretty difficult to support. We must be more realistic and devote energies to essential programs."

Among the programs he would classify as non-essential are a myriad of social programs which he said have not succeeded and are fraught with fraud.

He noted that the federal government has threatened to withhold funds unless the state cleans up its welfare system.

He said the suburbs have a "mutual interest" with Detroit but added that the state's largest city represents "one heck of a lot of problems."

"It places a burden among the suburbanites who feel themselves supporting someone else as well as themselves."

He calls unjustified the charges that cities such as Livonia are not living up to bloc grant requirements by providing public housing for people who work in Livonia but live elsewhere.

"If I want to live in Detroit, are they providing housing for me?" he asks rhetorically. "I don't see how you can provide housing for someone who intends to live somewhere."

"There are no roadblocks here. If you can afford to buy a house, fine, there are plenty to be bought."

Since city elections are non-partisan, Bacon has never run for office under a political tag before.

"I've always attempted to run (his office) but he sees the primary election as the key to winning in the traditionally Republican district and he is running to win."

He noted that he usually is the leading vote-getter in Livonia, the largest municipality in the 14th district. Several times he has run unopposed, he readily conceded, but even when he has been challenged, he has led the pack.

"I see this as a great challenge. There are many things to be done in Lansing — especially legislative affairs. All I listen to (as clerk) is a legislative body."

He said the public is ready for someone to "restore integrity" in Lansing.

"We've had some rascals up there," he said. The best way to cure that, he added, is "Don't let the rascals in, right?"

"I think legislators have a responsibility to keep the house clean."

The senate, too, no doubt.

Geake. . .

Northville Township into a prison.

"I honestly feel that had I not been involved, we would have that prison today on the Child Development Center property," he says.

Geake, who has been criticized for not carrying much weight with his legislative colleagues, says his effectiveness has "improved greatly" since he opened shop in the Capitol.

"When I first started out, I frankly took a narrow partisan outlook to my work," he says. "But since then I feel I really have to work constructively with both parties."

Elected in a special March 1977 election to fill a vacancy, Geake feels that his accomplishments during an abbreviated freshman term speak well of his effectiveness.

He is particularly proud of his work on the revised public health code recently signed by Governor William Milliken.

"No other single legislator has worked harder or been more influential (on the public health code)," says Geake.

The revised code, says Geake, provides for the first time a minimum level of health care to all state residents. It also revises and codifies the licensing of all health care professions and repeals over 30 other bills and laws.

"I've always felt that we've got too many laws on the books now," says Geake.

The new code will cost more to implement, but whether that means a bigger burden on the taxpayers "depends on the legislators," says Geake. "Some only want to spend more."

That's why he supports the so-called Headlee amendment which would set a "real limit on future taxes" by fixing all state and local taxes at the current level of 9.7 percent of the state's personal income.

He opposes the more drastic Tisch amendment, partly because people on fixed incomes and senior citizens would suffer.

When Geake talks about keeping costs down, he puts his money where his mouth is. In 1977, Geake did not rack up a penny on his expense account even though some senators charged the state as much as $8,000 for travel, meals and lodging.

He has also found himself voting against party regulars. First, he opposed Governor Milliken on the Northville prison site. Then, he was one of only three Republican senators to vote in favor of discharging the stalled land-use bill from the Senate Conservation Committee.

As a member of the Health, Social Services and Retirement Committee, he was involved in what he terms a "very much needed" bill to tighten nursing home restrictions that recently passed in the senate.

But the knight on the white horse is not the image that Geake tries to nourish. He proudly notes that his vote broke an eight-year logjam on the selection of Schoolcraft College trustees, an issue that raises little public attention.

"If you are a good legislator, you do more than what's popular," he explains. "You also try to make government run more smoothly."

Although he readily admits that the state legislature could stand more streamlining, he defends it as an effective body.

In the past term, he says, Lansing has taken necessary steps to raise the drinking age, revise the public health code, improve mental health funding and strengthen crime control methods.

"It (the job of a lawmaker) is the most challenging and most interesting thing I've ever done," he says.

"It takes a certain amount of experience before you become effective. You can't just walk in there overnight and reform the system."

"It takes patience and a lot of persistence to be an effective lawmaker."

Of his chances in August, Geake is confident if not cocky. The fact that his opponent is Bacon, rather than Livonia State Representative Bob Law, is indicative of his strength, says Geake.

"He (Law) is astute and he came to the conclusion that I cannot be beaten in the Republican primary," says Geake.

Although he is from the smallest unit of government in the 14th district, Geake has consistently done well in Livonia, the largest municipality in the district.

When he won the special election in March, Geake not only took Livonia by a 5-2 margin, but he also defeated his opponent, Patrick McDonald, in his hometown of Redford.

Cooper, Ross seek Democratic nod

Cooper: the incumbent

One of the most hotly contested primary battles in southwestern Oakland County is in the 15th State Senate District where incumbent Democrat Daniel S. Cooper is being challenged by Doug Ross, former co-director of the Michigan Citizens' Lobby and former director of Michigan Common Cause.

The winner of the August 8 Democratic primary will advance to the November 7 general election against Republican Markus S. Simon, a Southfield attorney, who is unopposed in the primary.

Cooper, the Senate majority floor leader, said a major thrust of his campaign has been that old or traditional solutions to problems have become counterproductive, resulting in costly agencies and a bureaucratic establishment that has generated a new set of problems.

The growth of state governmental bureaucracy, according to Cooper, has resulted from a "basic feeling on the part of some legislators that the best way to solve a problem is to create an agency or a new bureaucracy, staffed by well-meaning people, who monitor or regulate a program to theoretically solve the abuses, and they see the people as beneficiaries (of the new agency)."

However, the senator said, the bureaucracy has become "very counterproductive" by taking on an anti-civil libertarian attitude that doesn't follow traditional safeguards and becomes overburdened with a "super abundance of rules and regulations."

"As a result," Cooper added, "we've lost an important feature of a free society. In the past, there was a code of conduct that set certain punishment."

"Now, with the creation and multiplication of bureaucracy, the procedure has become encumbered with a priori pre-requisites."

Rules and regulations and permit requirements have almost taken on the force of law, he said. Aside from the "frightening" power of the agencies, Cooper said the amount of money allocated to the bureaucracies also has become an issue.

"People are sick and tired of government," the senator said, "and I think that is evident in the tax (limitation) proposals."

Cooper last year sponsored a bill that "turned around" the procedure for approval of administrative rules. Under the old procedure, a majority vote in both chambers of the legislature was needed to overturn administrative rules drafted by an agency.

The new law gives the legislature's administrative rules committee the power to return the rules to the agency for revision and requires legislative approval of the rules instead of veto power, Cooper said.

Governor Milliken vetoed the measure, which was overridden by the lawmakers, marking the first time in 26 years that a gubernatorial veto has been reversed.

Cooper also successfully sponsored a resolution that established a moratorium on the creation of new commissions. Although the lawmakers approved Cooper's resolution, he said they have since violated the intent of the measure.

As an example, the senator noted that a Toxic Substance Commission has been created by the legislature as a reaction to the PBB scandal, although three existing state agencies — the Department of Public Health, Agriculture Department and Department of Natural Resources — "all could have dealt with the problem and could hire experts (to study PBB) with their almost unlimited resources."

"Why create another commission?" Cooper asked. "How is it going to stop PBB and the damage that has been done?"

Approval of the commission, he said, was an example of the "legislature trying to be all things to all people."

"One of the themes of my campaign has been that I'd rather be responsible than popular," Cooper said. "All politicians say (what I've said about bureaucracy and big government), but I've actually done it and I took my lumps for it."

Other issues Cooper discussed in a recent interview with this newspaper included crime and services to senior citizens.

The senator said he has sponsored legislation to appropriate funds for lighting and more police officers in high crime areas. The bills, which have been approved by the Senate and are now in a House committee, allocate $15-million for the purchase, installation and maintenance of lighting facilities in high crime areas and $35-million to recruit, train and pay for police patrols.

Cooper also has sponsored a package of three bills that would provide continuing or supplemental health benefits to senior citizens and would require insurance companies to provide that coverage regardless of whether those persons previously have been enrolled in a health care program.

The incumbent senator, a Birmingham attorney who lives in Oak Park, served in the state House of Representatives from 1965 to 1971, when he moved to the Senate.

He is the majority floor leader, chairs the Commerce Committee and serves on the Senate Business and Committee on Committees.

citizens to play a role in how we should use (the senate) vote to solve problem areas."

For their part, constituents should "take the time to stay up on the issues and participate in the decision making process where they have the experience and expertise," Ross said.

In terms of classical political theory, Ross said he would describe himself as a Jeffersonian, while his opponent is closer to the Burkean philosophy. In other words, Ross said, the incumbent feels that legislators should rely on their own judgment because of citizen apathy and the number of issues confronting state lawmakers.

That view of holding public office results in a "narrow perspective," the challenger said, and puts the legislator in a position of being influenced by lobbyists, adding further to the problem of citizens' sense of powerlessness.

Ross said that, while a legislator should be aware of the concerns of his or her constituents, the lawmaker also has a leadership role to play to try to lead public opinion.

"On important issues," he said, "it is important for a senator to point out his or her role; to engage in debate, again to lead public opinion; and to propose alternatives, legal alternatives, as to who has the power to make a decision and to speak out, even if it is at the risk of his political future.

"The senator's role is for impact," he added, "not to perpetuate himself in office."

The political process must be open to be effective, he said, citing his opponent's role in voting for "every weakening amendment to the Open Meetings Act." One amendment, which later was deleted by the House, would have allowed public officials to close all governmental meetings that they labelled as "informal," prompting Common Cause to publicly attack Cooper and two other senators for forming a "backroom caucus" to defeat the bill.

Ross also attacked the incumbent for his "attitude on lobby reform (which Cooper eventually voted for). We got a good bill, but the Senate was pulled kicking and dragging on that one."

Cooper also opposed a legislative accountability bill that placed limits on legislators' expenses, free mailings, especially before an election, and junkets, according to Ross.

The challenger said he feels all votes should be on a roll call because some

It was purely by chance that Julie Woodard of Northville found herself among 1,300 women from all parts of the state participating in growth and leadership programs during College Week June 19-22 at Michigan State University.

Mrs. Woodard, a Brookland Farms resident of 44240 Wyngate, is one of several women in the subdivision who belong to the Melody Manor Cooperative Extension Service group. At its homemakers' banquet in May her name was pulled to attend what she was told was the 52nd College Week of the extension service on a scholarship.

"I'm going next year," Mrs. Woodard now declares as she details the variety of offerings available for women ranging from elderly to young mothers. Those attending lived in Akers and Hubbard dormitories.

Ross: the challenger

The campaign for the 15th District State Senate seat exemplifies "two classically different approaches to holding office and representing constituents," according to Doug Ross, former co-director of the Michigan Citizens' Lobby and former director of Michigan Common Cause, who is challenging incumbent Daniel S. Cooper in the August 8 Democratic primary.

Republican Markus S. Simon, a Southfield attorney, is unopposed in the primary and will face the winner of the Cooper-Ross contest in the November 7 general election.

According to the 36-year-old Ross, the central issue in the campaign is the philosophical differences between himself and the incumbent.

"Through Common Cause and the Citizens' Lobby," Ross said, "we tried to involve a lot of people to put pressure on the legislature. I want to see if we can bring the same degree of citizen participation and energy into government through this Senate seat."

The challenger said that, if he is elected, he will attempt to share his Senate seat with constituents of the 15th District by establishing citizen legislative committees and opening a centrally located district office.

"You can't go to Lansing and solve problems alone," he said, adding that there should be a "contract" between a legislator and his or her constituents.

The lawmaker, according to Ross, should "work full-time, let citizens know about issues before final decisions are made, and create practical ways back here in Oakland County for ballots, especially on second reading of a bill, are designed to "emasculate, kill and send a bill back to committee," and then the senators "don't have to face up to their votes."

Because of his work with the Citizens' Lobby and Common Cause, Ross feels he is in a unique position to challenge an incumbent. The contest is almost the same as having two incumbents going against each other in a reapportioned district, he said.

An incumbent's record demonstrates his or her effectiveness in terms of knowing the legislature and "getting laws through it," Ross said. "It is a record to be held accountable."

By the same token, Ross said, his involvement with the citizens' groups on issues instead of partisan politics was designed to contribute to the political process, ranging from the selection of candidates to working in the legislative process and, ultimately, to throw out of office those legislators who are not responsive.

Paves way for sale

R-3 rezoning by Terrace ok'd

Recommendation to rezone approximately 3.01 acres to a lower density (R-3) multiple zoning by Northville City planners last week paved the way for the planned sale by the city of the property immediately north of the Allen Terrace Apartment complex.

The more restrictive zoning had been sought by the city which expects to have bids from developers of the property at the council's August 7 meeting. City Manager Steven Walters told the planners at a public hearing July 11 that he anticipated even with the lower density zoning the property will bring between $75,000 and $100,000.

The rezoning from R-4 (multiple density) to the R-3 (multiple two-story) was sought by the city before the property is sold. Walters explained that its sale is being advertised as "expected R-3."

Commissioner William Tucker questioned Walters regarding the difference in density the more restrictive zoning would make. Walters replied that the change to R-3 might result in about 30 multiples with the R-4 in contrast making possible about 54.

Walters added that the city probably will receive less for the property with the R-3 zoning but "is willing to sell at lesser cost" not to have a high-rise adjacent to Allen Terrace and to lessen traffic in the area.

Proceeds from the sale of the 250 feet of property north of Allen Terrace have been earmarked from the beginning to be used as a trust fund to help subsidize rents for low income residents of the senior citizen terrace.

Mary Ann Barry, who lives at 611 East at the top of the hill near the project, said at the public hearing that she is concerned about the amount of traffic the multiples will generate along with that from Allen Terrace.

She emphasized that there now is a great deal of traffic and told the planning commission she is in favor of the lesser density zoning.

Walters told the commission that the request for bids is worded so that the city may choose the offer with specifications for best type of building and best long term sales price.

The commission then recommended the rezoning unanimously. The piece of property to be sold abuts Allen Terrace on the south and the high school on the north and faces High Street.

City leader to move to Ohio

In his last hurrah, John Canterbury aids Ogilvie

By BILL SLIGER

If the most informed observers of Northville city government during its first two decades following incorporation in 1955 were to choose one man most responsible for its course of development, it would almost certainly be John S. Canterbury.

The Canterbury style contrasted sharply with that of the popular mayor with whom he served for many years. But the easy-going Mike Allen and the articulate, forthright Canterbury combined to provide a team that sold just about any program it believed the city should adopt.

Canterbury retired from the council five years ago after serving for 18 years. Last October he retired from Ford Motor Company. His 27-year career with the automotive firm had taken him to the position of Executive Director, Supply Staff with world wide responsibilities for policies and programs for purchasing, traffic and material control.

This summer will mark his "last hurrah" in local politics. This fall he and his wife, Kathryn, will move to her hometown of Ada, Ohio where they have purchased a house. They'll spend their winters in Florida.

But the energetic, detail-minded Canterbury will run one more campaign. This time as a favor to longtime friend, City Attorney Philip Ogilvie.

While Canterbury may not have been the city's most popular councilman, he never failed to lead the ticket when he ran for office. And he hopes to use this organizational ability to help gain the nomination August 8 of Ogilvie for 35th District Judge.

Canterbury moved to Northville in 1951 when he was 35 and his wife and their two adopted children, Emily and John.

He was, in the eyes of many Northvillers, the brash, young newcomer who asked too many penetrating questions at PTA and village commission meetings.

"I could detect the feeling of animosity towards a newcomer," Canterbury recalls. But he had moved to a small town with the intention of becoming involved in local affairs. And at this point in Northville history it happened that attempts were underway to incorporate at least the village portion of the township into a city.

This was something the young man with a master's degree in government management including a degree from the University of North Carolina and 18 months of study at the University of Denver under a Sloan Foundation Fellowship could get his teeth into.

But all that education and know how were not necessarily plus-factors with many of the village fathers.

After two tries at the polls incorporation of the city was approved in 1955. Canterbury ran for election to the first city council.

"I was told that I couldn't be elected without the support of Dr. (L. W.) Snow, who was then the political leader of the community," Canterbury recalls. But he ran without it and won anyway.

"It was surprising to me. But Con Langfield, the village president in those days, encouraged me to run for council. He didn't really know me. But he heard me speaking up at commission meetings."

Others Canterbury remembers as particularly supportive of him were Louis Cansfield, then publisher of The Northville Record, and later Glenn Cummings, who owned the newspaper from about 1952 until 1956. And there were Police Chief Joe Denton, Clerk Mary Alexander, Don Lawrence, Don Hannabarger, Bea Carlson, Ed Welch, See Speaking for The Record on Page 14-A.

Jack Stubenvoll, the Bill Milnes, George Zerbels and Bill Slatterys.

So finally the young man with book learning could try his hand at practical application at the grass roots' level.

And his very first serious challenge may have been the most important ingredient of local government. Certainly, it imparted drastically from the way things had always been handled in Northville.

The new charter did not provide for a city manager form of government. Canterbury "pushed hard as hell" for such an ordinance. Under the old village commission system each commissioner was assigned an area of responsibility. One member's specialty would be fire and police, another the department of public works, and so forth. Consequently, little "kingdoms" of influence were established where councilmen with the curiosity of a John Canterbury were soon told not to tread. Characteristically, Canterbury did his homework very well. He researched all the material available from the Michigan Municipal League and whenever or wherever anyone would listen he'd talk about the advantages of city manager form of government.

The council adopted the ordinance and the city's first city manager, John Robertson, took over in November, 1956.

During the next 16 years or so the city would employ four city managers. And in each instance Canterbury directed the search and conducted the interviews that led to final approval.

"I can tell you that the city manager form of government had to be nursed along. Keeping it here was as difficult as getting it in the first place. It faced many trials," Canterbury reflects.

Canterbury was also an outspoken advocate of special assessments for street paving. Previously, Northville had accomplished whatever paving it had undertook from general fund monies. But Canterbury recognized this would strap local government. Either there would be none, or little paving, or other services would suffer, or taxes would have to be increased.

So he advanced the theory of the homeowner paying for a portion (25 percent at first) of the street paving. The council was split on the issue. But Canterbury had Mayor Allen in his corner. Now paving assessments are 75 percent of the total cost.

"It created some excitement," Canterbury remembers. The council chambers were filled to capacity on many occasions when assessments were proposed to be levied. And where at times others feared to tread, Canterbury always boldly expressed his firm belief in the theory of property owner participation in major street improvements.

But, ironically, there are other public services that Canterbury firmly believes the city should provide taxpayers that it is not.

"I would provide sidewalk snow removal. It's a benefit to all even more than rubbish pick-up," he argues with characteristic Canterbury logic.

"Some people have disposals in their homes and use rubbish pick-up very little. Snow removal provides public safety. And even when a homeowner cleans his own walk, it does very little good if his neighbor does not. And sometimes the city itself is slow to clear off its own publically-owned walks. We ought to have someone doing it regularly and completely throughout the city," he concludes.

The city tried the program several years ago at Canterbury's urging. It was eventually dropped.

Other local projects that may not have been accomplished without the Canterbury push include: the Scout-Recreation Building funded by donations through a campaign headed by Canterbury; the location of the post office (Canterbury opposed a downtown site); the Claude N. Ely Fund, suggested by Canterbury with money he helped raise; Northville Area Economic Development Committee and Corporation, the brainchild of Canterbury and an organization he has served on continuously; the Joe Denton Park.

The Ford Motor Company executive also used his influence and persuasion to encourage the auto firm to donate Ford Field and the land now used for Mill Race Village to the city. He was the first chairman of the Beautify Northville campaign and his efforts helped the city win first place in the national "cleanest city" contest.

At one point in his career on the council Canterbury almost became mayor. It was a showdown between Allen and Canterbury when the city's first mayor, Claude N. "Pete" Ely died in 1957.

The council was split, 2-2. It was Ed Welch and Canterbury against Earl Reed and Allen.

Finally, Canterbury agreed if Allen would name him (Canterbury) mayor pro tem, he would support Allen for mayor. There was no love lost between Reed and Canterbury on the council. They were from different schools. Reed was not particularly excited about city manager form of government. And he firmly opposed any assessments for sidewalks or streets.

LAST CAMPAIGN—It will be goodbye to Northville and local politics for John Canterbury (right) after he completes a final campaign effort in behalf of Philip Ogilvie, candidate for district judge. The longtime city councilman never lost one of his own and hopes he can help his friend to victory in the August primary election.

DEVELOPMENTS SLATED—Both the north and south sides of Eight Mile west of the Lexington Commons subdivisions are slated for development in the next year. On the south side, adjacent to the Commons, Northville Township planners have approved a North Beacon Woods plat that is bringing objections from adjoining Taft and Whipple subdivision residents for its straight streets and failure to keep rolling terrain. City residents on the north side of Eight Mile are just viewing a plan for 226 lots that utilizes five cul-de-sacs on winding roads. City planners will be asked to give preliminary plat approval for the 92-acre development immediately west of the Lexington Condominiums July 25. The property, known as the McDonald farm, formerly had a fruit stand in the building in the picture.

Canterburys moving

Allen went along with Canterbury. But at times their relationship was strained. The soft-spoken Allen and the outspoken Canterbury never openly clashed, but the mixture often tested the patience of both.

Canterbury admits that he considered running against Allen for mayor. (Reed later did and was narrowly defeated in a hot campaign).

"But one of us would have lost... probably me... and I thought we were both important to the council," Canterbury explains.

"Mike had lots of reason to be mad at me... talking too much, grabbing the limelight, aggravating people. Mike treated me so nice, much better than I treated him."

"But I really enjoyed being on the council. So did Mike. That's why we were there. You get out of it what you put in... people really like being in office."

"Northville owes me nothing. I owe it considerable."

The Canterbury family will leave Northville for their Ada, Ohio home in October. They will sell their handsome home at 204 Randolph. Another house on their property facing High street which the Canterburys own will be a deferred gift to Ohio Northern University.

The college is located in Ada and Canterbury has been a member of its board of trustees for eight years.

He is, naturally, a member of the university's development committee, whose main function is to raise money.

"It's lots of work," Canterbury says with a straight face. The kind he enjoys. Their winter home in Florida places them nearer their daughter Emily, who is a final closing agent for a title company in Clearwater, and son John, a disc jockey and program director at a radio station in Panama City.

are three schools children would be walking to attend.

As the developers unveiled the plan with meandering, curvilinear roads, they told the commission they had made special effort to retain existing topography of the land and "do not anticipate excessive grading" as they are using existing valleys and hills.

Fournier stressed that the firm is a land developer and not a builder so that he cannot say what homes will be built, but he told the commissioners "land and development costs will be very high as we are retaining the rolling topography and I expect homes will be expensive."

He pointed out that there is no four-way intersection in the development and only a boulevard entrance on Eight Mile. There are five cul de sacs off the winding roads.

Russell stated that the green areas, about 24 percent of the total development, deliberately were located apart from the green area of the adjacent Lexington Commons on the mutual border.

Since the green areas are owned by people in the development, he said, it was considered better planning to have each separate.

Time schedule for development, if plans are approved as presented, call for underground utilities to be installed next winter, roads in the spring and building on the lots in the summer of 1979.

City planner Ronald Nino questioned the separation of the green open spaces in the adjoining developments, saying it might be possible to have a bicycle path into town if they were together.

Wheaton replied this would be a consideration only if it could be shown extended all the way into town.

He referred the plat plan to Nino for a report. Commissioners were requested to study the plat individually and to come to the July 25 meeting prepared to discuss it for preliminary approval.

GOOD TIME FOR WINE

by Jim Roth

Wine drinkers favor light wines these days. Even burgundies and clarets, once famed for their heavy, full bodied flavor, are more popular in their lighter forms today. As a result, wines from the Rhone region are little known. They have a strong, rough taste. Most Rhones have to be aged in the bottle at least four years before they are 'tames'. So if you are looking for a wine with a lot of color, a lot of taste, and a strong bouquet try a French Rhone.

Wine drinkers can easily find their favorite types by coming to us at GOOD TIME PARTY STORE, 567 Seven Mile Road, 349-1477. We always have a wide selection of both domestic and imported wines. If we don't have what you like in stock, we will be glad to order and stock it for you. Hours: Mon. thru Sat. 9 am-10 pm, Sunday Noon to 6 pm.

HELPFUL HINT: Less expensive Rhones can be found after only two or three years in the bottle.

EITHER YOU HAVE IT OR YOU DON'T

Car makers don't build the rustproof car and no car dealer can deliver the real rustproofing you get with the exclusive Ziebart process.

Don't be misled by some sweeping references to "anti-corrosion methods" used in building some 1977 cars. Real rustproofing must be done after the car is built. And it must cover every critical area inside and under the car. That's the proven Ziebart method. There are no shortcuts. That's why your Ziebart Dealer uses nine different patented spray tools to reach rust-prone areas. That's why he uses a rustproofing sealant that actually penetrates welded seams where rust can start. Your Ziebart Dealer can deliver a rustproofed 1978 car because that's his business—and he knows it. Call him.

SPEAKING for The Record By BILL SLIGER

In my reporting days with this newspaper I have probably covered more than 300 city council meetings. And while some of the faces would change from year to year, always there were two who remained: Mike Allen and John Canterbury.

Mike retired as mayor a year ago. His service has been duly recognized, and deservedly so. In fact, Allen continues to contribute. In addition to his participation on the area economic development committee, he has responded to the call for help on the city committee for downtown improvement.

But Canterbury slipped off the council about five years ago. And as he prepared for retirement from his demanding job at Ford Motor Company, his local activities have been low profile.

Canterbury is an amazing man. On more than one occasion he has tested the capacity for calm endurance of this reporter.

A typical compliment from Canterbury would be: "I've been told by some that the article you wrote concerning my candidacy for office may have been helpful to my cause."

From my (objective) viewpoint I concluded that the trouble with Canterbury was that he did so many things very well himself that he quickly recognized the shortcomings in the efforts of others. And he wasn't what I would call tolerant of sloppiness.

The fact of the matter is John Canterbury would never undertake any project that wasn't thoroughly researched and completed in a perfectly organized manner. And he never failed.

Time has mellowed John. He can even laugh at some of his own embarrassments. Like the time he was trying to convince a jam-packed audience at the council chambers that his ideas (in this instance on sidewalk assessments) were not bad. He noted that sometime ago the pastor of the First Baptist Church (across the street from Canterbury's residence) had been most critical of Canterbury because he had insisted that a proposed addition to the church should not be built on the street side of the church as planned, but towards the rear.

"And now I'm told," boasted Canterbury to the audience, "that the pastor is glad I insisted on the change and that he is most happy with the addition as completed."

At that very moment the pastor in question squeezed himself from the crowd to the front of the council chambers.

And he told Councilman Canterbury and the citizenry in somewhat less than pastorly terms what he thought of Canterbury and his ideas.

And Canterbury recalls that he was once told by one of his supporters, who obviously wished his candidate would assume a more moderate stance, "if you count all the people you have made mad, you can't possibly be elected."

But the Canterbury style was effective. He cut straight to the core of an issue. And there was never any misunderstanding about where he stood or why.

Many times when Canterbury would sense that the council majority was leaning towards a decision with which he did not agree, he would pull the old Canterbury special out of bag.

"Let me see if I understand the question," he would begin. And slowly he would direct his attention towards the press to see if the reporter was taking notes.

"What you are saying is that you want to rezone property X so that kindly Widow Brown will be living next door to a noisy commercial development. And eventually Widow Brown will probably have to sell the old homestead to find peace and quiet somewhere else. Is that what the council is saying?"

"If that is what you are voting on tonight, I want it known right now that I stand opposed to such action."

Another quick glance at the press, a puff from his cigarette, and he would relax back into his chair and await council response.

The example, of course, is a fabrication. But it was the style.

In case there should be any misunderstanding, I like and admire John Canterbury very much. I think Northville is extremely fortunate to have had a man of his talent and dedication come along when he did in the history of our community.

He and Mike Allen made a fine team.

There may never be another Canterbury on any elected body in this community. He topped anyone I have observed in analyzing problems and articulating solutions.

In fact... I have been told by some observers that in his many years of service Canterbury may have performed in a manner that was beneficial to the future welfare of our community.

I learned from a master.

Speaking for Myself

Alimony for men?

RICH PERLBERG

YES . . .

In this day and age of equal rights, women should assume this includes the "right" to pay alimony. We cannot pick and choose (and discard) the painful rights that have thus far been the inherent property of men.

Now, I'm not advocating a complete about face in regard to alimony. Simply because ex-husbands have had to shoulder this monetary burden for years (I'm sure the precedent was set by some benevolent judge who was trying to do women a favor) does not mean that women should have a turn for a few hundred years.

Alimony should be granted to the party in reasonable need. This need should not be biased in favor of either sex. If the woman is in the financially superior position and the man has the need for financial assistance, then she should be subject to paying alimony. If both parties are financially secure, the need for alimony is nullified.

Divorces, like marriages, are all different. There should be no hard and fast, female versus male, rules or traditions to cover this area.

Trusting in the enlightenment of the judiciary in regard to equality and fairness in the area of alimony, I believe women had best be willing to pay up.

Lynne B. Hahn
Northville

NO . . .

Alimony for men? It's got a nice ring to it and, at first glance, it seems to be a logical conclusion of women's quest for long overdue equal rights.

Unquestionably, if women are to have equal rights, they must bear the concomitant responsibility. Few advocates of women's rights, I believe, will argue that point.

But is alimony necessarily part of that responsibility? I think not.

For the woman who sacrificed her own career in deference to her husband's, there is little doubt that she is entitled to alimony in the event of a divorce. The marriage was a partnership where the husband was able to pursue his career because his wife was willing to shoulder not some, but all, of the domestic chores.

Besides, tradition and male chauvinism made it difficult for a woman of equal ability to be as financially successful as her husband.

But, males, by and large, have not faced the same roadblocks. Just because a woman earns a higher salary is not justification for alimony payments to her husband if they divorce.

If the two both have careers, all things being equal, there is no reason why each cannot continue to live on his or her individual wages after the separation.

As for alimony for men, the prospect for an attractive divorce settlement should not be the basis for a marriage.

Press is convenient scapegoat

By JACK W. HOFFMAN

Having learned long ago that newspapers are easy scapegoats for public officials' foot-in-mouth disease, I shouldn't have been surprised when this newspaper was blamed for reporting statements made at a public meeting of the city council.

But I am surprised...and disappointed.

I refer to the joint "news release" put out under the signatures of Mayor Paul R. Vernon, Police Captain Louis Westfall and Acting School Superintendent Burton S. Knighton, in which officials expressed surprise and concern over last week's page one article on alleged cover-up of drug abuse at the high school.

My disappointment is not with school officials, who understandably should be upset with the article, but with the city council and police who now pretend innocence. They would have readers believe, I guess, that their drug discussion did not take place or, if it did, it should not have been reported.

I am the reporter who attended the council meeting, who wrote the story and headline, and who gave it page one prominence. Let me assure readers the meeting did take place, the report of the police captain was made, it and the reactions by city council members and the city attorney were reported accurately, and the seriousness of their discussion warranted its page one use. (It will be interesting to read the official council minutes of the meeting).

When the ranking police officer with the local department publicly charges that drug abuse has occurred at the high school and that school officials have thwarted police investigations, and when council members angrily respond to those charges and suggest that school officials themselves may be guilty of crime for failure to report drug abuse, this newspaper would do its readers a disservice by not reporting it.

The excuse used now is that the alleged cover-up occurred before the present high school principal took his job and that school officials since that time have cooperated with the local police department in their drug investigation. None of these qualifications were made by officials, however, at last week's meeting. Quite the contrary. It was clearly indicated that it is an on-going problem.

It should be interesting to readers that since publication of the article, officials have agreed to regular monthly meetings between the high school administration and the police department, that the proposal for a police youth officer to work directly with the schools is to be given fresh consideration, and that the heretofore policy of the present administration to report all cases of drug sales is now to be expanded to also include the reporting of drug use to police.

I guess if the council wants to blame the newspaper for reporting council's "negative" comments, it ought not object if the newspaper takes some credit for the "positive" results.

Fire department, editorial, taxes draw comments

Firemen praised

To the Editor:
Please allow me the liberty of publicly expressing my sincere thanks to the Northville Township Fire Department.

On the evening of Monday, July 10, eight men and women had the privilege of instruction and practice in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and the Heimlich Maneuver, to aid choking victims.

There are many causes of sudden death: poisoning, drowning, suffocation, choking, electrocution and smoke inhalation. But the most common is heart attack.

I am now confident because of the excellent instruction, should a life threatening situation arise, I would be able to act in a correct and positive manner.

Thank you, Sergeant Sass, Sergeant Lanning and Fireman Schrot for the most informative three hours of my life.

'Township costs less'

To the Editor:

It never ceases to amaze me. We have voted twice in the past few years on annexation, and it has been voted down by the voters of the township, yet we continue hearing about it at every election time.

The real reason that annexation fails is that township residents do not want to pay higher taxes. Both city and township residents have to pay the same county and school district taxes but it appears to me that the township resident is better off than city residents where local taxes are concerned.

The township provides all necessary requirements and we pay 2.5 mills for operational purpose, while it is my understanding, that the city requires 15 mills to provide like services.

Also, if and when the township board decides to request an increase in township taxes, it will be placed on a ballot for the township residents to vote upon. This way, we as taxpayers can decide to approve or disapprove.

My personal feeling is, take whatever action is necessary to keep taxes down. That means to go in the direction which supplies the most in services for the least amount of dollar cost to township residents.

I do believe in harmony between the township and city, but not at the expense of the township resident.

Joseph S. Abbate
Five Year Township Resident

Lauds editorial

To the Editor:

After coming home from a month's beautiful vacation, my first item on the agenda was to go to the Record office and pick up the back issues and catch up on current news. I am 59 years old and this is my first letter to any newspaper.

1. My hat is off to Mr. Sliger for his editorial on "Kill a Rumor." This sure cleared the air for some very fine people. Although everyone knows Bill Sliger is known for his fine journalism — just the same, thanks, Bill, for your good editorials. Keep them coming.

2. My thanks to Rose Williams for her letter published June 21, page 13. She beautifully expressed my wife's and my feelings. Rose, we know you enjoy a beautiful life. As we are here on earth such a short time, let us all enjoy it.

3. After experiencing a wonderful vacation and appreciating such nice things going on and things to do, it is hard to believe how some people, local and outsiders, have nothing better to do than spend their time writing nasty letters. If they stopped and really took a good look around, they may discover some nice things, also.

A dear deceased friend told me something thirty years ago that I will never forget. He was a business man and two of his competitors started malicious rumors about his business affairs. I asked him how he could take this without fighting back. He laughed and said (where this originated, I do not know), "Sympathize with the fellow who belittles you as he is trying to cut you down to his size."

So for you adults who are being picked apart with innuendo, may the above quotation be of some satisfaction. To you other people, stop and think about it.

Respectfully,
W. C. Gaul

'Tax outrageous'

To the Editor:

In 1976, the City of Northville tax on our homestead property was $213.84. In 1977 it rose to $267.03. Now, for 1978, the city wants $345.60. This represents an increase of 61.6 percent in only two years! Yet, there have been no significant alterations to this property, such as addition of a room or garage, in any of the nine years of our residence.

How can we, as homestead property owners, deal with such outrageous tax increases by the City of Northville?

The actions of the City of Northville in taxing our homestead furnish an excellent example of the reason for the rapid development of the taxpayer's rebellion movement and encouragement to join.

Sincerely,
Bruce W. Butske
Carl L. Butske

It's Mark, not Mary

To the Editor:

Why don't you hire a competent proofreader? An article about our wedding in the July 5th issue captioned our picture as Mr. and Mrs. Mary Hosbach.

These articles may be insignificant in the overall scope of your newspaper, but to the families involved they are quite important. We look forward to seeing our names and faces in print and proud parents save the clippings for scrapbooks and memories. Much of this pride and pleasure are lost when a careless misprint occurs.

You owe it to people such as us to make sure mistakes don't happen. The least you can do to make up for our embarrassment and indignity is to print a correction. We hope it will be forthcoming.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hosbach

EDITOR'S NOTE: We regret the error and apologize for it. At the same time we voice pride in our newspaper, one of the few in the state that continues to publish engagement and wedding pictures and stories about local people without cost and without caste discrimination. Perhaps because this newspaper places heavy emphasis on these matters subjects us to the greater risk of error.

Friendliness cited

To the Editor:

Please allow me to use your excellent media to express my humble thanks and thoughts to the good citizens of the Baseline-Horton neighborhood.

I was involved in an accident there yesterday, July 9th. Retrospectively, almost upon impact, the residents came from every direction to inquire as to the victims' welfare, to assist, to console. The police and ambulance were there immediately. They too were, though ultra-efficient, very kind and even gentle.

Many of us are paranoid, what with horrendous reports of man's inhumanity to man. I always hoped that I would never but never have to be the victim of any circumstance whereby I needed assistance and people would opt not to become involved. Now, all I can say, after this accident, is that I'm so very grateful for a new awareness that the citizens of Northville truly care for people.

The greatest revealer of people, to me, was the fact that, insofar as possible, the friends and relatives of the injured party, seemed just as concerned about me. Incredible!

Thank you, Northville, I'm so glad to be in your world.

Philippians 4:8: Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

I have thought and, therefore, I have written.

Where to write

To the Editor:

In the June 28, 1978 issue of "The Northville Record," an article appeared concerning a proposed change of address for areas of Novi which now have a Northville mailing address. A postal authority, Mr. William Fleming, was quoted as saying that he would like citizen input. However, no address was given.

Persons in the effected areas who would like to make their opinions known may do so by writing to:

Mr. Wm. Fleming, District Customer Service Director
Regional Postal Center —
Suite 1213
17117 Nine Mile Road
Southfield, Mi. 48075
He may also be reached at 559-6616, the regional center's number.

Restoration begins

Green panels that years ago had been installed to modernize the front of Black's Hardware at 117 East Main last week were removed to reveal a brick front with interesting architectural detail. Owner Bob Black says next step will be to sandblast the bricks, some of which are painted. They are in such poor condition, he adds, that he expects they will have to be repainted. He also plans to rebuild the cornice. Next year, he says, the original, long windows will be returned. Black expects to take his plans to the Northville Historical Commission in August.

Westridge Downs subdivisions, Connemara Hills will also be submitting petitions opposing the proposed address change. All citizens in the Novi portion of the Northville School District are encouraged to make their opinions known to Mr. Fleming.

Thanks community

To the Editor:

Although the cooler weather on this past fourth of July didn't create a great number of hot and thirsty spectators, we still wish to extend our sincere thanks to all the wonderful people in our community who donated lemonade and to those who sold lemonade at the stands at the parade or at Mill Race. Your willingness to help us out meant a great deal to us and we wish we could mention all of your names here.

Profit from this type of sale is only possible due to the generous support by many of our local merchants. Styrofoam cups were donated to the Northville Historical Society by the following stores: Arbor Drugs, Chatham's, D. & C., American Discount, Northville Drugs, A. & P., T. G. & Y., Perry's Drugs, and Spagy's. We shower the managers and owners of these stores with our appreciation.

We all look forward to and enjoy the fourth of July in Northville but we all must remember that it takes many, many people to put together a successful celebration such as we are accustomed to. This one day needs the support and help of our total community whether or not you belong to any specific club or organization.

Heartfelt thanks,
JoAnn and Andy Dalziel

Disease and disharmony of the body are caused from displaced vertebrae in interfering with the normal nerve transmission from brain cell to tissue cell. Think of the years and months of suffering many have endured because they did not know about this law of life because they did not know that health was ever present within and could be released once the cause of the trouble was found and corrected.

"Cervical Neck Pain" (Whiplash)
While stopped at an intersection my car was hit from behind by a car traveling about 40 M.P.H. The pain was agonizing. Our local firemen assisted me at the scene by applying a neck collar.

I could picture in my mind a long dismal period of recovery. However, a dear friend told me about Dr. Reiersen. Two days after the accident I was x-rayed and adjusted by Dr. Reiersen. I felt immediate relief when he adjusted my cervical vertebrae (these are the skull bones) also the cervical neck vertebrae. My vertebrae located in the chest also needed adjusting. I could now leave the collar off and return to work three days later. I'm grateful to my friend for leading me to Dr. Reiersen.

Allergies
Many times I had trouble breathing. I remember going to the hospital to receive oxygen to help me through an attack of asthma. I couldn't run or play baseball with my friends. After a few adjustments from Dr. Reiersen, I was able to swim and play all my favorite sports.

Lower Back Pain
For the past six years I have been to a number of doctors seeking relief for my low back pain. My problem was not getting better. After Dr. Reiersen analyzed my x-rays and showed me how to rehabilitate my muscles, my lower back pain began to feel stronger. Last week for the first time in three years I played thirty six holes of golf.

I suffered from headaches which were getting progressively worse for the past 25 years that I had to give up crocheting and doing other things which I could have enjoyed had I not suffered from headaches. I read of Dr. A's Chiropractic ad in the newspaper and decided to make an appointment and drive the 25 mile round trip on the chance that he could relieve my pain. He examined me and found I had Cranial Subluxations. He adjusted my cranium and I went home and haven't had a headache since except for one day, but I blame that on having the flu. Since I also had other flu symptoms to go along with it, I now feel I've found the right doctor to help me with my 25 years of problems with headaches.

Two whole years of excruciating pain and a tremendous fear of surgery prompted a desperate search for relief other than a medical doctor's pill for pain. My body could move without severe pain. What joy! Now through an exercise program to rehabilitate my weak muscles I can now live a normal life. I am so grateful to Dr. Reiersen.

assistance in dealing with drug related problems.”

The joint statement was a response to last week's lead front page article in The Northville Record which ran under a headline that said the city council was “angry” over a report of a “drug cover-up” in the schools.

The story was a report of a city council meeting where Police Captain Louis Westfall said his department was not always notified of drug crimes at the high school.

Westfall had told the council that school administrators did not always cooperate with police, failed sometimes to report drug sales and, on occasion, had barred an officer from entering the high school.

Friday morning, school administrators, police and city representatives met in high school principal George Aune's office to discuss the story.

“It was pointed out early in the meeting by city and police officials that they were surprised by the headline article which they said did not accurately reflect the situation during the 1977-78 school year under Dr. Aune's administration,” said Monday's release.

“Captain Westfall regretted that at the time he made his report to the city council that he hadn't made this clear. All parties were concerned with the potential harm that had been done to the High School and to the school community by such a headline article.

“City and school officials agreed that there was indeed no cover-up of substance abuse infractions at Northville High School during the past school year.

“Further, at no time during the past school year have police officers been denied entrance into the high school.”

The past year was Aune's first in the Northville school system. The incidents cited by Westfall happened, prior to Aune's arrival.

Further on, the news release read: “We of the public schools, the city government and the police department feel that the Northville Record article of ‘Drug Cover-up at School’ could well have been a disservice to Northville High School.

“The police and the high school administration do not deny that situations occur from time to time regarding substance abuse.

“Unfortunately, in today's society such abuses will occur. However, police officials feel that they are fewer in Northville than in most suburban communities.

“Through a spirit of continuing cooperation, we feel that we can make further inroads against such abuse.”

The release was signed by Mayor Paul Vernon, Westfall and Acting Superintendent Burton Knighton.

As a result of the story and last Friday's meeting, the police and high school administration agreed to monthly liaison meetings to discuss youth and drug problems.

The next meeting, scheduled for August 28, will revive the longstanding proposal of establishing a police youth officer to work directly with the schools.

Prior to Monday's news release, school officials said official policy called for administrators to contact “appropriate” authorities whenever drug sales were discovered. They said that meant calling the police.

Knighton said he was worried about the story's affect on school enrollment. This summer, he said, a number of high school students have transferred from private schools into the Northville system.

Littering's getting expensive

A litterer in Northville Township can now be given a $100 fine and/or 90 days in jail, but in the future he might receive up to a $2,500 fine and/or 25 weekends of cleaning littered areas.

The Northville Township Board at Thursday night's meeting accepted an anti-littering resolution adopted by the Wayne County Board of Commissioners and will adopt an ordinance for stiffer littering fines.

The new ordinance will have three categories of littering, with different penalties for each.

Under the new ordinance, persons littering with non-dangerous material, such as paper carelessly discarded on public or private property, can be fined $500 and/or be required to spend five weekends cleaning littered areas.

Persons littering with dangerous materials — such as glass, metal, bricks or chemicals — can be fined $1,000 and/or required to spend 10 weekends cleaning littered areas.

The penalty for defacing buildings, parks, lawns and public facilities will be a $2,500 fine and/or 25 weekends of cleaning litter.

The new township ordinance will become law 30 days after it is drawn up and published.

In other action the board:

• Gave tentative approval to a revised preliminary plat for Haverhill subdivision. The 65-lot subdivision is proposed for acreage south of Eight Mile Road between Highland Lakes and Meadowbrook Country Club. The plans call for lots with an average size of 17,559 square feet and a park area of 9.2 acres.

• Rezoned property near Five Mile Road and Beck Road from RD (Research and Development) to R-2 (Single Family Residential), returning the property to its original zoning. The board had previously rezoned the property for research and development to accommodate the U.S. government when possible sites for a solar energy plant were being sought. The government later located the plant near Denver, Colorado.

• Amended the township ordinance to allow any planning commission member, appointed by the Northville Township Planning Commission, to sit on the Northville Township Zoning Board of Appeals. Previously only the planning commission chairman could serve on the board.

• Adopted a resolution requesting that elected state officials work to prevent the state from mandating new or expanded programs for local governments without providing funds to finance the programs.

‘Use existing law first’

“Let's enforce the existing ordinance before considering a stiffer one.”

That seemed to be the position of the Northville City Council last week as it discussed a county proposal for greater penalties.

Council members agreed with an observation by Essie Nirider, executive secretary of the Northville Area Chamber of Commerce, that the better approach would be to enforce the existing city ordinance.

If the existing ordinances were rigidly enforced, perhaps the littering problem could be curtailed, they concluded.

Nevertheless, council directed City Attorney Philip Ogilvie to research the county proposal, evaluate the existing city anti-litter ordinance, and return with a recommendation for council members.

School renews search

The once-jilted Northville school board will meet Thursday night to consider the latest batch of contestants for the superintendent's job that will be worth close to $40,000 next year.

As many as five men, including two who were interviewed by the board during its ill-fated first search, will be discussed at an informal board session which begins at 7:30 in the board of education offices, 303 West Main Street.

On June 20, the board offered a three-year contract with a first-year pay of $39,000 to Albion Superintendent Garth Errington. After verbally accepting, Errington rejected the offer four days later citing housing costs and congestion in the suburban area.

Errington has since accepted the superintendent's post in Grandville, near Grand Rapids. The board's second choice, Elvin Peets of East Jackson, accepted another position during Errington's period of indecision.

Of the remaining six finalists, the Northville board is still interested in two — Raymond Bandlow, the 31-year-old Lawton superintendent who still wants the Northville job, and Willow Run Superintendent William Pearson, who school officials have not been able to contact.

Dodgers rally, beat Yanks to capture G League title

It's all over.

Two months of spirited junior baseball play came to an end last Saturday when the Dodgers, who've maintained a slim hold on first place all season long, finally wrapped up the G League title with a tense 5-3 victory over the Yankees.

The win gave the Dodgers, whose only defeat this year was a 6-2 loss to the second-place Pirates last month, a final record of 17-1. That left them one game ahead of the Pirates and three games ahead of the Yankees.

But Saturday's victory was far from being a breeze.

The Yankees, who still had a shot at second place going into Saturday's finale, rushed out to a 3-0 lead early in the contest and seemed primed for an upset.

They scored once in the first to take a 1-0 edge. Then, with two out and nobody on in the top of the third, Larry Wojtowicz popped a double down the left-field line and came home on a solid double to right by Scott Wendel to make it 2-0.

One inning later the Yanks upped their lead to three when Scott Swienkowski led off with a double, went to third on a sacrifice fly by Paul Newitt and scored on a throwing error.

But the Dodgers refused to fold. Coming up with a trio of key hits in the bottom of the third they rallied for three runs to knot the score.

Wendel, who'd allowed just two hitters to get on base in his first three innings of work on the mound for the Yankees, walked Fred King to open the frame. One out later Todd Mai singled to left, went to second on a throwing error and advanced to third on a base hit by Dave Denhof.

That set the stage for the key play of the game. Paul Havalala, hitting next, lined a double down the rightfield line that easily scored Mai.

A throw to home plate in an attempt to cut down Denhof was late, but Yankee catcher Newitt seemingly had Havalala pegged on his throw to third baseman Keith Sanders.

Havalala, however, crashed into Sanders, knocking the ball loose, and came home with the tying run.

One inning later a single by Mike Colauco plus three Yankee errors and an RBI grounder by Dave Kaminski gave the Dodgers the cushion they needed.

Todd Hahn, who took over for starting pitcher Greg Ryba in the fifth, retired the last six batters he faced, striking out four of them, and got credit for the victory.

The Yankees wound up 14-1 on the season, good for third place. The Pirates, who closed their season with a 15-1 victory over the Phillies Saturday, finished 16-2 while the Giants, 7-6 winners over the Indians, wound up fourth with a 10-8 mark.

The Cubs, meanwhile, earned a tie for fifth with a seven-inning, 8-7 victory over the Padres in the league's most exciting finale.

Tim Clark slapped a one-out single in the bottom of the seventh to score John Norton, who'd doubled, with the winning run. That capped a remarkable comeback that saw the Cubs rally from

E League showdown is a thriller; Dodgers prevail in overtime, 4-1

Northville's E League junior baseball game couldn't have come to a more fitting climax.

The Dodgers, who'd already beaten the Reds twice earlier this season, knocked off their arch-rivals for the third straight time to wrap up an undisputed league championship last Wednesday.

Sparked by Rob Ade's three-hit pitching performance plus a bit of timely hitting, the Dodgers rallied for three runs in the top of the eighth to win a 4-1 extra-inning affair.

Ade's leadoff home run in the top of the fifth gave the Dodgers, who entered the game with a 15-2 record, a 1-0 lead.

But the Reds, who went in with a 14-2 mark (both losses were to the Dodgers), bounced back to knot the score in the bottom of the fifth. Scott Robbins was hit by a pitch to lead off, stole second base, then scored on a single by Gavin Wolfe plus an outfield error.

That's the way it stayed until the top of the eighth. Paul Luiki led off the inning with a double and scored what proved to be the winning run on a single by Jimmy Belanger. Conrad Newman followed with another double, and he and Belanger later scored a pair of insurance runs. Ade then set the Reds down in order in the bottom of the eighth.

Ade went all the way for the victory and gave up just three hits, two of them by Wolfe (the other by Jeff Williams), while walking six and striking out six.

Bobby Thomson took the loss for the Reds, despite allowing just six hits and four walks in going the distance. He struck out 13, including six of the first seven batters he faced.

The Dodgers wound up 16-2 for the season, two games ahead of the second-place Reds, who lost a 7-5 decision to the Giants in their season finale.

Little Caesar's runs winning streak to 6

Little Caesar's softball players are displaying something more than a mere knowledge of the pizza business this summer.

The local American League club is beginning to look like a genuine contender for the division's wide-open second-place slot behind the unbeaten Village Blues.

With league-leading home run hitter Dennis Rons showing the way, Little Caesar's swept to its fifth and sixth straight victories last week and remained tied with second-place Winner's Circle in the loss column. Winner's Circle picked up a victory of its own last week, hiking its record to 8-3, while Caesar's is now 7-3.

Rons cracked his 10th and 11th home runs of the season last Monday and added a single and a walk to lead his team to a 16-15 victory over Cap 'n' Cork. The win avenged a one-run loss to Cap 'n' Cork in the season opener.

Lending a hand in the victory were Jim Foran and Al Schultz, who chipped in three hits apiece, and Rick Hunter, who belted a two-run homer in the third inning that triggered a seven-run outburst.

Ron Nisun topped Cap 'n' Cork with two home runs, a double, a single and five RBI's.

Two days later Rons collected home run number 12 in the top of the first, a three-run shot that sent Caesar's on its way to an 8-1 triumph over Spicer Tool Company.

Rons, Schultz and Mike Rons each had two hits to lead the victory. Spicer, on the other hand, managed only two hits and four base runners in the entire game. Their only run came on a four-base error in the third inning.

Winner's Circle, meanwhile, held on to its slim second-place grip with a 15-5 romp over Cap 'n' Cork.

Sparked by Jeff Moon, who walloped three hits, including a three-run homer, the Circle raced out to a 9-0 lead in the first two innings and never looked back. (Norm) Kubitsky added three hits and three RBI's and Steve Terpevich two hits and two RBI's for the winners.

The Blues also won again last week, knocking off State Farm 13-3 to extend their unbeaten string this season to 13 games.

Jim O'Brien had three hits, including a two-run homer, and three RBI's for the winners while Ed Kritch contributed three hits and three RBI's and Todd Eis a solo home run.

Thomson tournament slated this weekend

Sixteen softball teams, including two from Northville, will be vying for honors when the annual Thomson Tournament gets under way this Friday at Thomson Field.

Allen Park's Long Tom Lounge and Giffel's Association of Detroit will kick off the three-day double elimination tournament when they do battle in a 6 p.m. game Friday. The affair winds up Sunday night, with the finals slated to begin at 9:45 p.m.

Northville's two representatives in the field are the Village Blues and Winner's Circle, currently holding down the number one and two spots in the local American League.

The Blues will open their bid in the tourney with a 9:45 p.m. game Friday against Garden City Sports. Winner's Circle opens against Perry Mead of Romulus at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Among the other clubs competing this weekend are Michael's Cabaret, Oldtimers' Bar and Ashley Funeral Home (Detroit); Hi-Fi Buys and Kelly Buick (Lansing); Wagner Electric and Four Seasons (Plymouth); Krajenke's (Wayne); E & M Suburban (Farmington) and Kroger's (Livonia).

Dodgers, Rangers win

deficits of 5-0 and 7-3 earlier in the game.

Tom Ross went 4-for-4 with two RBI's while Doug Hansen added a pair of singles and four RBI's to pace the winners. Mark Olsen led the Padres with two hits while Don Graham and Tim Millen had two RBI's apiece.

The Rangers, who've been accustomed to scoring 20 or more runs per game throughout most of the season, clinched the H League championship with a 1-0 victory over the Braves in one of the top pitching duels — if not the most exciting game — of the junior baseball season Saturday.

The Rangers scored the game's only run with two outs in the bottom of the sixth and final inning when Scott Griggs poked a base hit to leftfield, scoring Steve Guldberg from second base. Guldberg had led off with a walk and gone to second on a two-out single by Brian Baldrica.

Griggs and Baldrica were untouchable on the mound, combining to pitch a one-hitter for the winners. They struck out a combined total of 17 batters while walking just three.

Steve Lee and Steve Wilson were equally impressive for the Braves. Lee pitched the first three innings, allowing only three hits and one walk while striking out eight, and Wilson finished up, allowing just three hits and two walks while striking out five.

But pitching wasn't the game's only strong point. Both teams displayed almost flawless defense as well. Among the outstanding defensive efforts were those turned in by Rangers' catcher Paul Trapani as well as Braves' second baseman Mike Pacheco, first baseman Eric Smolenski and catcher Stewart Kissinger.

Baldrica, Griggs and Derek Darkowski had two hits apiece to account for all the Rangers' hitting while Wilson tallied the Braves' lone hit, a two-out double in the first inning.

In other H league action last week the Padres, despite two home runs by John Lobbia and another by Dan Kozlowski plus strong pitching efforts by Lobbia and Kurt Lehmkuhl, lost a 5-3 decision to the Braves.

The Cubs, meanwhile, got strong hitting from Mark Reitega and good pitching from Scott Gettig on their way to an 8-3 win over the Reds. Gettig allowed only one run in three innings of work and got credit for the victory.

John Anderson and Jay Moore of the Phillies turned in strong pitching performances and Moore had a triple, but it wasn't enough to prevent the Dodgers from winning a tight 7-4 contest.

Back-to-back home runs by Darren Candella and Bruce Wright highlighted the Pirates' 11-8 triumph over the Cardinals.

Later in the week the Cards, behind the pitching of Steve Hayes and Greg Stoeckel, stayed close all the way but dropped another heartbreaker, this one a 5-4 decision, to the Expos.

In last week's other H league action the Rangers dumped the Padres, 15-5, and the Mets crushed the Phillies, 16-4.

Registration dates given

July 29 is the cut-off date for registering for this fall's Northville recreation youth soccer program.

Area youngsters interested in competing in the program, which is affiliated with the Western Suburban Soccer League, should register at the recreation office, located at 215 W. Main Street.

New players as well as returning players who want to join new teams should fill out a registration form at the office. Returning players who want to compete on the same team can register by sending a check to the rec department and noting the team they played on before.

Registration fee for all players is $10. The draft for this fall's teams will take place July 31 at 8 p.m. in the recreation office. Anyone in the community interested in attending is welcome to do so.

For further details on registration procedures call the rec department at 349-0203.

The Farmington Amateur Hockey Association is still accepting applications for its 1978-79 hockey season.

The program is open to any boys or girls aged six through 12.

For applications and information regarding house teams or travel call Norm Potts at 474-5342 or Phil Woodcock at 437-3439.

Dennis Zinkon, a 1978 Northville High graduate and an All-League golfer with the Mustangs last fall, continued his impressive showing on the links this summer by winning the Walled Lake Community Education Open Medal Play tournament a week and a half ago.

Zinkon won a four-man playoff for the youth division title after tying for first place with a nine-hole score of 38.

Plymouth man gets hole-in-one

Howard Mackie of Plymouth became the third golfer in a span of 12 days to record a hole-in-one at Brooklane Golf Course last Tuesday.

Mackie used a seven-iron to ace the par-three 160-yard third hole, his first hole-in-one in eight years of golfing. He shot a 37 for the round.

Talent thrives in new soccer loop

By MIKE LASH

What shortage of American soccer talent?

If the way they play the game in Michigan's new Bonanza Express Soccer League is any indication, America's reputation as a soccer-deficient nation won't hold up long.

The Bonanza League is a brand new area conference created by John Maxwell, owner and president of Bonanza Restaurants.

Designed as sort of a "feeder" system for the Express, Detroit's newly-formed professional soccer club, the league is comprised of 12 teams split into two age divisions, one for players under 17 years of age and one for those under 22.

While the league is not directly affiliated with the Express (Maxwell is a stockholder with the team, but all funds are currently provided through Bonanza restaurants), professional scouts often attend the games. Tryouts were held early last spring, giving each team about 18 of the top players in its area.

And the brand of soccer they play is anything but deficient.

"There's a lot of very good players around here," acknowledges Tony Farrugia, a man who should know. Farrugia, born and raised with the game in a little European country called Malta, is vice-president of the Detroit Soccer League as well as a coach with the West Side Sounders, the under-22 representative of the western metropolitan area. "I didn't know there was this much talent in the area," he says of the players in the Bonanza League, which requires that no more than four players on an 18-man roster be non-American. "To me it's surprising."

He also has complimentary words for the Detroit Express organization, which supports the league promotionally if not financially.

"The Express are doing it the right way," Farrugia says. "They're encouraging youth, and that's the only way to go."

"You can't take a 15-16 year-old American kid and expect him to compete on a level with Europeans right away. He has to learn the game young, he has to compete against other good players, and I think that's something being encouraged now."

"The two most important factors in the development of a good soccer player are experience and discipline."

Two of Farrugia's better players (actually Farrugia is an assistant coach currently sitting in for Sounders' head coach Paul Scerri) are Matt Davis and Steve Paul, a pair of Northville High graduates.

Davis, who graduated last month and plans on going out for Michigan State's soccer squad in the fall, had five goals through last weekend's games and was the team's third-leading scorer. Paul, a 1975 grad who lives in Farmington, has one goal.

Three other Northville players compete with the under-17 West Side Diplomats.

Kevin Swayne, Mike Muzzin and Russ Gans, all of whom have played with Northville clubs in the Western Suburban Soccer League in the past two years, have helped their team to a 6-3 record in the first two months of the season.

Muzzin is currently tied for second on the team in goals scored with four while Swayne, whose father was one of the organizers of Northville's first soccer program four years ago, has one.

Unlike Davis and Paul, though, the three have never played foreign competition.

Davis and Paul both learned the game in England, and according to Farrugia that's part of the reason they're somewhat ahead of many of their teammates. Davis took up soccer during a three-and-a-half year stay in Britain during the early '70's while Paul was born and raised there.

"Both have had that European experience, and that makes a lot of difference," Farrugia notes. "They've played against some very good competition."

Still, there's little doubt that the Bonanza League has attracted its share of American talent. Davis claims "it's the highest competition I've ever been amongst."

And the feeling seems to be that things will continue to improve.

"Earlier this year we met with a lot of skepticism," recalls Becky Kapsalis, the league's administrative coordinator who works out of its central office in Southfield. "But I think once we've become established people will start paying more attention. We're already getting a lot more cooperation, and there's been a lot of favorable responses to continuing the league."

The ultimate purpose of the league, she explains, is to "provide highly-skilled players in this area the opportunity of developing their skills to the point of perhaps playing professionally."

Eventually, she figures, the Express will form a professional farm club that will draw its talent from the Bonanza League.

"Scouts will regularly attend the games," she says, "and if they think a

Local Bonanza clubs are near top

As of Monday the Bonanza Express Soccer League's two western metropolitan area representatives were still in the thick of their divisional races.

Despite losing a 4-3 heartbreaker to the unbeaten Flint Fury last Thursday the West Side Sounders, coached by Paul Scerri (head coach) and Tony Farrugia (assistant), remained in second place in the under-22 bracket with a 7-2-1 record and 68 points.

The West Side Diplomats, coached by Henry Klimes, were a close second behind the Macomb Kicks with a 6-3-0 record and 55 points.

The two teams usually play at Oakland University on Thursday evenings or Saturday afternoons. The league schedule calls for each team to play 15 games.

The under-17 division will complete its regular season late July 25 while the under-22 loop winds up August 5.

All teams will then compete in a

Padres complete perfect season

The Padres wound up their F League junior baseball season right where they started it last week — unbeaten. Led by a balanced hitting attack and strong pitching, the Padres finished a perfect 18-0 season with victories over the Pirates, Angels and Braves. Bob Schoettley went 4-for-4 to pace the F champs to a 16-5 victory over the Pirates, who were led by Bob Townsend and Richard Burgett (two hits each). They picked up victory number 17 over the Angels. With Jim Thompson and Dave Malinowski turning in strong pitching performances, the Padres came up with a 9-5 triumph. The Angels were led by Dan Nyquist and Jim Rose (two hits apiece) and pitcher Steve Fraellick. Tim Parkinson closed out the season with a 4-for-4 showing at the plate, leading the Padres to a 22-4 win over the Braves. The Dodgers, meanwhile, won three of their last four games to assure themselves of a second-place finish. Sparked by Bob Pegrum and Dave Demattos they beat the Expos 12-4 and the Phillies 12-9, but dropped a 13-4 decision to the Pirates. They also beat the Cubs on a forfeit. Pegrum and Demattos had three hits each in leading the victory over the Expos, who scored all four of their runs in a one-inning outburst capped by Steve O'Hara's triple, then added two more hits apiece to pace the win over the Phillies. The Pirates, however, handed them a 13-4 defeat on the strength of Bob Townsend's 3-for-4 performance. Steve Demattos went 2-for-3 for the Dodgers. That left the Dodgers with a final 13-5 record for the season, five games behind the Padres. The Pirates also beat the Angels 14-7 last week, knocking the Angels out of second place. Greg Anisbigian cracked two long doubles and Dan Nielsen had a pair of singles to pace the winners. In other F League action last week the Expos finished their season with victories over the Astros and Mets while the Astros beat the Mets but lost to the Phillies in a pair of cliffhangers. Sparked by Jay Bartling, Tom Zielke, Tom Spade and Dave Wilson, who picked up two hits each, the Expos exploded for 15 runs in the fourth inning and went on to bury the Astros, 20-9. Willie Newman had two hits for the Astros.

The Expos then closed their season with an 8-3 victory over the Mets, lifting their final record to 9-9. Doug Doyle went the distance and earned the win for the Expos while Dave Longridge, Tom Spade and Dave Wilson supported him with two hits each. Mark Knott went 2-for-3 for the Mets. The Astros, meanwhile, scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh to clip the Mets, 14-13. Bob Orlowski went 2-for-2 for the winners while Mike Hagerty and Jim Ziegler had two hits each for the Mets. Earlier in the week, though, the Astros had lost a 10-9 heartbreaker to the Phillies in nine innings. The Phillies scored the winning run in the bottom of the ninth on singles by Eddie Goshinski and Richard Schohl.

Spartan Tire wins Blues tourney

Spartan Tire left little doubt about its intentions at the completion of Northville's rain-delayed Blues Invitational last Tuesday. The powerful Brighton club roared out of the losers' bracket and swept past three opponents to cop the championship trophy, leaving two Northville teams in its wake. When the double elimination tourney resumed last Tuesday four of the original 16 teams were still alive, including Chrysler-Vernon Tool and Die of Warren in the winners' bracket. Also among them were State Farm and Carl's, both of Northville, as well as Spartan Tire. Brighton's league leaders easily dispatched of the rest of the field, though, to complete a remarkable seven-game comeback that started after they had lost a 12-9 second-round contest to State Farm. Spartan began with a 14-8 victory over Carl's, scoring nine times in the fifth and sixth innings to break open a tight 5-5 game. Doug Bridson went 3-for-3 and had five RBI's to pace the winners while Harold Wilhelm had a triple, a home run and four RBI's for Carl's. That advanced Brighton's league leaders to the losers' bracket finals, where they avenged their only defeat of the tournament with a 25-17 triumph over State Farm. Terry Trumbull, Garry Eddings and George Reck each scored five runs to lead the onslaught, with Trumbull going 2-for-2 plus three walks, Eddings 5-for-5, and Reck 4-for-5 and reaching base on an error. State Farm, which never led again after taking a 3-0 lead in the top of the first, was paced by Ted Gores and Gary Metz, who each went 4-for-4. Metz cracked a three-run homer plus three run-scoring singles for six RBI's while Gores had four base hits. Mike Nave added a double and two singles for the local squad, whose only previous loss had been to Chrysler-Vernon. The win over State Farm enabled Spartan to reach the finals against Chrysler-Vernon, which had won its first four games of the tournament. This time Ted Buckless took over. The powerful little catcher stepped to the plate nine times during the next two games and belted three home runs, two doubles, two singles, one triple and drew one walk to lead Spartan to easy 20-11 and 23-14 victories. Trumbull, Reck and Terry Breneman helped out with three hits apiece in the opener, during which the Brighton club erupted for 14 runs in the fifth and sixth innings. Bill Gregoire's two home runs and Jim Ballinger's two triples paced Chrysler. In the championship game Spartan had seven-run outbursts in the second and fifth innings to spark a 23-14 triumph. Buckless and Eddings both belted four hits in that one while Trumbull, Breneman, Bridson and Walt Miller added three each. Jim Montgomery had a triple and three singles and Gregoire a home run and three walks for the losers. Seven Spartan regulars wound up batting over .475 through Tuesday's last four games.

Canadian stables were big Downs attraction

This is the second of a two-part article on the history of Northville Downs. It was written in honor of the Downs' upcoming 35th anniversary by 71-year-old racing buff Ed Keller, who's spent more than a half century in harness racing as a starter, track official and publicity director. Keller, who now works out of an office in Massachusetts, was in attendance when harness racing first appeared here in 1944, and in this segment he recalls the years after the Downs opened and the people who made it what it is today.

By ED KELLER

Once the difficulties surrounding the opening of Northville Downs in 1944 were worked out, the problem of making up a second race card arose.

It was solved by taking entries up to the last minute and by cutting the number of scheduled dashes from eight to seven. The first race was for a single dash at $200. Each of the next two were for a total of $300 for three dashes.

Veteran Will Milloy won the night's feature, the $300 free-for-all trot and pace, for E. M. Stout of Pontiac. For years afterward Stout campaigned Northville's stables, and he was one of the first to come through with support for the new venture.

The third program had a banner lineup of four classes for eight dashes, two each and two going three dashes, for a total of $900 in purses. Morley MacDonald of Strathroy, Ontario, chalked up the first win for the Canadians that night, reining his own Midnight Volo in a one-and-one-sixteenth mile dash.

One thing was certain — those who wanted to race had the opportunity to as often as they wanted at Northville, and as the word began to sift out new stables came. At the close of the inaugural session horses were on hand from Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and one, the Gibbs brothers, from Saskatchewan.

The popularity of the Canadian stables in the track's early days is a story in itself.

As word on the Downs spread, stables from Ontario began to flock to the half-mile oval. The first storybook horse was the sensational Dr. Stanton, who made his first appearance in 1946. His career began with a man named W. L. (Lindly) Fraser from Forest, Ontario.

While racing at Roosevelt Raceway on Long Island that summer Fraser was watching John L. Dodge of Orangeburg, New York, work a green trotter one day. Dodge was so thoroughly disgusted with the horse he said, "the first man that gives me $500 owns this horse."

Fraser thought he saw something in the former trotter. He was quick to dig into his pocket and hand Dodge the $500. That sale was to make harness racing history for years to come.

Shortly afterwards Fraser came to Northville Downs. He had fitted the gelding with a pair of hobbles, and soon saw that he had a real pacer in the making. In his first start Dr. Stanton finished third. But throughout the rest of the Northville meet he was the undisputed master, running up eight consecutive victories.

In 1949 Fraser won the Michigan Pacing Derby with his star in 2:04.3, fastest mile in the stake up to that time. They were star attractions from coast to coast, and when he retired from racing the $500 cast-off had banked approximately $175,000 for his owner-driver.

Another noted Canadian horseman, Harold Wellwood of Strathroy, came over two years in a row to win the Michigan Trot Derby in back of his great Grattan Volo.

Clint Hodgins brought in the champion mare, Proximity 1.59.3, to also win the Trot Derby with a sensational 2:02.1 mile. Then he repeated with another great mare, Elaine Rodney, in the HTA Stake feature of 1961. He won that with a sizzling 2:02 mile.

There was a lot of rivalry between the home state horsemen and the stables across the border that made for horse racing at its very best, and which helped make Northville one of the most popular tracks throughout harness racing circles.

Since that time the track has grown from an obscure, rundown fairgrounds to a modern plant, with every convenience for the fans, horsemen and the upgrading of racing with each passing year.

Of the track's original six investors the lone survivor is John J. Carlo. Mr. Northville Downs, who has already celebrated his 80th birthday, saw the track he helped create come through with an all-time record-breaking meeting this April 8, with a final total handle of over $33 million.

To think today of Northville Downs is to think, besides the original six hearty individuals, of people like Dick Frederick, who came into the organization early and still occupies the post of publicity director; of Northville's own Dr. Linwood Snow, who did so much for all Michigan racing over the years; of Michigan Racing Commissioner

William J. Dowling, who helped in the rough opening years; of Edmund P. Yerkes, the Northville attorney who never missed a night as one of the track's timers, and whose scrapbook on Northville racing is a true history of the track; of Dearborn's Mrs. Minnie Newkirk, the long-time marshal at the track; and of Margaret Zayti, who has put in 31 years as the track recording secretary.

Others include timers Fred Van Atta, the long-time postmaster of Northville, and J. Rusling Cutter; Dutch German, one of the early judges, and Milt Van Giesen and J. B. Munsel, who occupied the judges' stand for years.

Another early member of the race staff who did so much for Michigan racing was Orlo G. Owen. Other prominent judges at the opening meets were Wayne Groves, Tom Gahagan and Dr. Flynn Earl.

One of the real professionals of racing, now the dean of racing secretaries, was Bill Connors. He directed racing activities at the track for years, as he still does at Wolverine Raceway and Hazel Park.

In reality the Downs was the first pari-mutuel track to take the gamble, and then to make it big after the first four took that step in New York. It is indeed a glorious 35th anniversary that the men at the helm, John Carlo and his associates, celebrate.

What he and the other original investors did lent encouragement to others around the country, and as long as racing continues the part played by a small, out-of-the-way fairgrounds — where the pounding of hooves and the calls of the sideline fans during the excitement of a hotly-contested horse race were things of the past — will never be forgotten.

Giese boasts Dem credentials

Card-carrying Democrats may question the credentials of two of the three candidates for the Democratic nomination for State Representative from the 24th District.

But no one would question the credentials of the third candidate — Liz Giese of Milford.

Giese has a long list of service to the Democratic Party behind her candidacy. A graduate of the University of Michigan with a degree in Education, she is a member of the Democratic State Central Committee and served two years as spokesperson of the Michigan Democratic Caucus.

Additionally, she is a past vice-chairman of the 19th District Congressional Committee and served on the economics sub-committee of the 1976 Democratic Platform Committee.

In fact, if you're looking for credentials her list of service goes on and on.

A former teacher (1964-1976), she has served on the State Board of Education's Advisory Council on Teacher Training and Professional Development and the Huron Valley Association for the Gifted and Talented. As a member of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), her activities include a study and report on the status of Title IX in Huron Valley Schools and an investigation of spouse abuse in the Lakes Area.

A self-described women's rights leader and political activist and reformer, she is a member of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and has served two years as a board member of the Michigan ERAmerica Coalition.

She confesses that she would like to see her gender become an issue in the race for the Democratic nomination for State Representative from the 24th District.

But in spite of her party involvement, Giese maintains that she is an independent person. "My interest has always been in the quality of life," she says. "I want to make certain that people have the resources to lead a comfortable life."

It was this interest in quality of life which led her to become involved in the political process. She explains that she perceives the political forum as the most effective way to affect changes.

"I am a reform person and an independent person who is accepted by party regulars," she says. "I know how to get things done because I've done them before. As a member of platform committees, I've been able to pinpoint priorities and bring pressure to make sure they're accomplished. I've been one of those people behind-the-scenes who is pushing to get things done."

The primary theme in the campaign of the Milford resident deals with "effectiveness" of government.

"The laws that are needed for improvements are already on the books," she says. "We already have legislation dealing with such things as equal employment opportunity, affirmative action, the pollution of the environment."

"But the changes that were brought about in the 60's and 70's haven't made a more perfect world because the bureaucracy simply hasn't been effective."

"The legislature must become more effective in making the laws work as they were intended to work," she continues. "The crisis with PBB and mental health have been brought about by poor administration. When the legislature develops programs, it has an obligation to make sure they work."

On the question of tax limitation, Giese says that property taxes are an unfair burden, but that any cutback in taxes must be reviewed in terms of its effect on school financing.

She opposes both the Tisch and Headlee Amendments. She says she has not seen an analysis of the Tisch Proposal and has not been shown that it would work. She doesn't believe the

McCoy sees self as 'advocate'

Dennis McCoy says he wants to be an "advocate" on behalf of the people.

The 28-year old Walled Lake resident reported that he is stressing the three A's — advocate, accessible, and accountable — in his bid for the Democratic nomination for State Representative from the 24th District.

His opponents in the Democratic primary are Elizabeth Giese of Milford and Stephen Rosman of Commerce Township. Incumbent Republican Richard Fessler of Union Lake is unopposed in the primary.

McCoy comes to the 24th District race as something of an outsider to "traditional" party politics. "I have trouble with the membership aspect of party affiliation," he says. "Membership in a party may influence a legislator's decisions and I want to maintain my independence."

"Independence" is another key word in McCoy's candidacy. He says he is best described as an "independent, progressive, Democrat." The words should be kept in that order, he cautions.

McCoy has had no previous experience as an elected official. His only prior bid for an elected office came in 1974 when he waged an unsuccessful campaign for a position on the Board of Trustees of Oakland Community College.

It would be wrong to assume, however, that McCoy is a newcomer to the political arena. In fact, politics and policy is a consuming interest for the Walled Lake resident who is a graduate of the University of Michigan's School of Management.

Intelligent and articulate, he is playing on his "home field" when the discussion turns to issues. He has attended the Institute for Public Policies Study in Washington, D.C. — an organization which he describes as the "old left" — and the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee. He frequently attends SEMCOG meetings as an interested citizen and has offered testimony before the Public Services Commission, the House Taxation Committee in Lansing, and the Michigan Senate on lobbyist reform measures.

McCoy states that he will work toward progressive changes if he is successful in his bid for the House of Representatives.

At the top of his list of priorities is a change in the tax structure. What is needed, he says, is a total reform of the state's taxation package.

Perhaps ironically, he opposes both the Tisch and the Headlee Amendments which appear headed for the November ballot. The Tisch Amendment, according to McCoy, is "far too radical a plan" and "a drastic proposal."

"It only takes half a step," he says. "You can't simply be against something, you must be for something. It would be wrong to simply destroy the tax package."

McCoy believes the Headlee Amendment is also nothing but a "shell game."

"Tax relief is not tax reform and we need tax reform," he argues. "What we need to do is look at the total tax package — single business tax, property tax, income tax, and all the other taxes — and come up with some viable solutions. It's wrong to talk about one tax without looking at the whole picture."

McCoy said he is also interested in environmental issues. He would support strong wetlands legislation.

Related to his interest in environmental concerns is an interest in "growth management," which he says is a priority item on a statewide basis.

"We don't design roads on a city-by-city basis and I don't understand why we plan on a city-by-city basis," he states. He suggests that it is possible to plan on a regional basis and augment that planning on a local basis with local controls. His approach would consist of "growth management, not growth limitation."

The third priority cited by the Walled Lake resident concerns jobs and economic development. He says that Michigan must examine the phenomenon of loss of business and loss of jobs closely.

"The state must be more aggressive in its efforts to recruit business," he states. "We have to keep the jobs in Michigan which are already here and we have to find more business to provide jobs. The state must create a climate which is conducive to business expansion."

McCoy also believes that jobs must be generated by the private sector. "The federal and state governments cannot perpetuate the economy by creating artificial jobs," he says.

On other issues, McCoy made the following comments:

SUPER SEWER — "No way. The concept suffers from a problem in that the input doesn't reflect what actually exists. There would be negative environmental problems. I would oppose Super Sewer in the Lakes Area, although I would give a conditional approval for Super Sewer in Novi if a limit were placed on population growth."

M-275 — "There's no doubt that a north-south road is needed, but the choices narrow down to worse and worse. I oppose the freeway concept without a doubt, but a third alternative is needed. I prefer the limited access highway concept, but regardless of what you do, you're going to have to give up something."

Rosman's M-275 battle is help

When it comes to name recognition, Stephen M. Rosman probably has an edge over the other two candidates for the Democratic nomination for State Representative from the 24th District.

That may or may not be an advantage for the Commerce Township resident, however.

On the one hand, there are those who regard him as an environmental activist, an individual who will and has devoted his time and energy toward halting the onslaught of developers' bulldozers. On the other hand, there are those who regard him as brash and headstrong, an individual who takes idealistic positions with little regard for the realities of contemporary times.

Rosman leaped into prominence as the founder and chairman of "Citizens in Opposition to M-275," the group that successfully worked to defeat the construction of the M-275 freeway through Commerce Township and is presently working on an "acceptable" north-south alternative to alleviate traffic congestion in western Oakland County.

More recently, Rosman has developed a proposed growth limitation ordinance that would, in his own words, "slow growth in the district to a manageable rate, phase residential development over 20 years, and protect our wetlands and natural areas."

A graduate of Eastern Michigan University with a degree in Political Science, Rosman said his candidacy was sparked by a realization that the problems of western Oakland County were problems that must be solved in Lansing.

3 men are interested in vacant Schoolcraft seat

At least three men are interested in the vacancy Ron Cowden will leave on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees Aug. 1.

They are G. J. (Jack) Bologna, Plymouth, president of a management consultant firm; James B. McKeon, real estate man and former Plymouth mayor; and Richard J. Hayward, Livonia, executive vice-president of a structural steel firm.

For the first time in filling a vacancy, the board will use a detailed information gathering process before making an appointment.

The appointee will serve until June of 1979. The appointee would then have to run for re-election for the two years remaining in Cowden's term.

Actually, the appointee could choose instead to run for one of the full six-year terms which will expire at that time. In a new development, the college's legal counsel ruled that only four votes are needed to make the appointment instead of five.

The board's full complement is eight persons, and five votes are required for majority action. But once Cowden leaves, the board will be at seven, and a majority will be four votes.

"Consequently, a vacancy on the board having eight authorized positions may be filled by a majority of four of the seven remaining members," said Wolfgang Hoppe of the firm of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone.

That helps Bologna, whose candidacy is openly favored by four board members. Bologna ran fourth in the 1977 election and has declared his interest in the vacancy.

Bologna is also helped by the fact that the board currently contains six Livonia residents, one from Garden City and one from Plymouth (a transplanted Livonian).

Plymouth-Canton Community School District has one-fifth or more of the Schoolcraft College District population.

Several trustees have publicly said Plymouth — along with Northville and even Clarenceville — need more representation.

Hayward ran sixth in 1977 and was in the 1975 race. He has approached the board informally about his interest.

McKeon, who declared his interest in a letter, has a history of involvement in Plymouth politics but is little known in Schoolcraft circles.

Novi reaches postal zone compromise

The hopes for a single postal zone in Novi have gone, but all new subdivisions constructed in the city will be given a Novi address.

That's the compromise reached after a meeting recently between City of Novi and postal officials.

Residents of the Connemara Hills, North Hills and Westridge subdivisions will be allowed to keep their Northville addresses.

In addition, city officials will be allowed to change the address of the new city offices along Ten Mile and Taft Roads from Northville to Novi. Any other subdivision or development wishing to change to a Novi mailing address need only submit to the post office a petition to merit consideration for the change.

The single postal zone dilemma arose in December when the Novi City Council passed a resolution to consolidate the several postal zones into one.

The city is currently serviced by the Novi, Northville, Walled Lake, Wixom, Farmington and South Lyon post offices.

City officials contended the numerous mailing addresses cause confusion among residents. Councilmember Martha Hoyer argued that many residents called the wrong police or fire department in times of emergency because they don't realize what city they live in.

The city council passed the resolution on a unanimous vote. But the residents who showed up to discuss the proposal were unanimous in their opposition.

Residents of the North Hills and Westridge subdivision stated the change of address would be a needless waste of time and expense for them. Addresses would have to be changed on licenses, stationery and other personal items, they stated.

Bill Fleming, who serves as District Customer Services Director for the post office, offered to attend a public hearing on the matter, but stated the post office tends to stay with the status quo and would likely reject any changes, especially if it caused customers any problems.

Fleming noted the post office doesn't establish zones along political boundaries.

The meeting was established ostensibly to set up a public hearing whereby residents would be allowed to state their opinions on the proposed change.

But the meeting proved to be a bit of give and take for both sides, with the final decision to give all new subdivisions Novi addresses being reached.

"We reached an agreement I think everyone can be pleased with," Fleming said.

Attending the meeting for the city were Mayor Romaine Roethel, City Manager Ed Kriewall and City Clerk Gerri Stipp.

Rosman rides M-275 fight

Although he speaks respectfully of his two Democratic opponents in the primary, he makes it clear that he is displeased with the performance of incumbent State Representative Richard Fessler, a Republican from Union Lake.

"Fessler," he maintains, "is inaccessible to the people of the 24th District." Rosman says he will represent the 24th District as it has never been represented before and that he will be an accessible legislator.

The number one issue this year, according to Rosman, is taxes. He says that people are fed up with spiraling state and local taxes, particularly property taxes.

Rosman cites a need for total tax reform and endorses passage of the Headlee Amendment as the first step toward that goal. "It's sound fiscal policy to tie property taxes to the consumer price index," he says. "It means that there would be a rollback to the level of inflation if property values rise faster than the inflation rate. Our area would be one area in which there would be rollbacks."

The Commerce Township resident opposes the Tisch Amendment, however. "The proposal would cut $1.7 billion from the state budget and lead to layoffs in areas that local residents are not prepared for — teachers, libraries, and such areas as police and fire where we need increases instead of cut-backs," he says.

He added that he would feel more positive about the Tisch Amendment if he felt more positive about the bureaucrats in Lansing. "They're more likely to leave the meat and cut the fat," he says. "The sacred cows would stay and education and mental health would be cut."

Another priority item on Rosman's list is "land use planning legislation with teeth." He maintains that state or regional land use planning are a necessity for a growing area like western Oakland County.

Rosman cites Novi's Twelve Oaks Mall as an example of how a decision made by one community can have ramifications for all surrounding communities. Much of the substantiation for the cancelled M-275 freeway through Commerce Township dealt with getting people from White Lake Township to Twelve Oaks, he claims.

"Novi has a right to place business where it wants, but there should be input from surrounding communities so that plans for such things as roads can be incorporated," he says.

Effective land use planning, according to Rosman, would provide communities with an inventory as to which areas are best for which uses. "It's wrong to build houses on fertile farm land and it's wrong to plan recreation areas on land that's good for industrial or commercial development," he maintains. "The state needs a sensible approach to the use of the land."

need to clean up their acts," he says. "It's a shame when you learn more about legislators from police blotters than the legislative record."

In the fiscal area, Rosman says the Lansing bureaucracy must learn to work within the framework of its income, cutting out bloat and waste. He would support "zero base budgeting" in which every state agency would have to substantiate every dollar. He also favors "sunset laws" that would require every agency to face a comprehensive review at set intervals or face elimination.

Adoption of "zero base budgeting" and "sunset laws" would permit the "deadwood to be dropped from the backs of the state's taxpayers," he says.

On other issues, Rosman made the following comments:

SUPER SEWER — "I oppose Super Sewer. It would be an environmental disaster from here to Lake Erie. It would pollute ground waters, cut down on the flow of the rivers, and cost anywhere from $7,000 to $12,000 per house for tap-in fees. I favor a decentralized system that would be developed to meet the character of each community and would be more cost effective."

M-275 — "Obviously I favor the alternative proposed by the Citizens in Opposition to M-275 group which has been working aggressively to solve the traffic congestion problem. Our alternative would use the existing road pattern and have little or no damage on the environment."

Giese has credentials

Headlee Amendment would do "what the people want to do" because it is tied with the consumer price index on the federal level.

On the issue of land use planning, Giese says she endorses the current land use proposals and favors the categorizing of natural resources. This would facilitate planning and planning is an essential element, she says.

She also favors the Anderson Wetlands proposal.

As far as growth limitation proposals are concerned, Giese says she is unwilling to accept the assumption that local units of government haven't been doing anything. Growth limitation ordinances are something which should be studied, she maintains.

Giese also favors strong ethics legislation and would endorse lobbyist and disclosure reforms.

On other issues, Giese made the following comments:

SUPER SEWER — "It must be provided in Novi. There are so many alternatives. I would evaluate them in terms of expense and environmental impact and choose the alternative which best serves that criteria."

M-275 — "My first impulse was that the freeway would hurt the environment. When I started to examine the options it is clear that there are no easy solutions. It's clear that we need a north-south route for transportation movement. I need to study the routes more than I have before I could take a position. If you reject the M-275, you're rejecting all the 15 years of plans and local input of money. Jumping in and grabbing a solution is not the way I go."

DeHoCo closing goes to hearing

Closing of the Detroit House of Corrections (DeHoCo) by the City of Detroit will be the main topic of discussion at a County-sponsored public hearing on Monday, July 24, at 7 p.m. in the City-County Building Auditorium in downtown Detroit.

Arthur M. Carter, chairman of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners newly-appointed corrections committee, called the hearing to give officials and county citizens the opportunity to discuss prisoner housing problems — and where the county should house DeHoCo prisoners once the City of Detroit moves out. DeHoCo is located on Five Mile Road, adjacent to Northville Township.

"It's definite that the City of Detroit will be pulling out of DeHoCo on November 30 — which means that the prisoners will become a County responsibility on December 1," Carter explained.

"This new prisoner housing problem will have considerable impact on the county budget," he said. "We especially want some input from out-county mayors, police chiefs and citizens as to whether we should renovate DeHoCo which would cost a small fortune — or house these prisoners elsewhere."

"One alternative is to renovate idle buildings on the grounds of Wayne County General Hospital, where "M" Building is presently housing inmates," he said.

Commissioner Mary E. Dumas of Livonia, Vice Chairman of the Committee added: "The out-County law enforcement agencies also use DeHoCo to lock up some of their prisoners, so we definitely need out-County input."

Potpourri of fun

You name it, they've got it

'Hey, mom, can we buy this for our house'

By STEVE BELL

"I'll sell you this clock for $25," the old man offers.

"$25? Hell, no," comes the retort. "That clock isn't worth $25. I'll give you $21."

"This clock works fine. Can't you hear it ticking?"

"Sure, I can hear it ticking. I'm not deaf."

The argument goes on as it does in a hundred different places in the flea market, where seemingly worthless knickknacks command premium prices, where determined shoppers look for that one item they couldn't find anywhere else.

The flea market is along Walled Lake in what used to be a roller skating rink at the corner of Novi Road and East Lake Drive and is open on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Whether it be a pair of glass doorknobs, a peach-colored antique vase or a mounted 12-point deer's head, it's all available for the asking at the market.

The manager of the market, Marge Moore, says the Walled Lake location is different from other markets in that it is open every weekend. She started it eight years ago to give the many dealers who hawk their wares a place where they can go on a regular basis.

"I thought it would be interesting to get something established where they don't have to run around so much," Mrs. Moore says.

She apparently has met with some success, jumping from 25 dealers when the market first opened to a contingent of 78 dealers today.

The dream of every flea market browser is to find that rare antique, buy it for a few dollars and then resell it for thousands. Mrs. Moore can recall one time when a man purchased a rare sword for just a few dollars at her market to later discover it was worth hundreds of dollars, but she notes this is the exception rather than the rule.

For the most part, the items for sale are a potpourri of bric-a-brac and baubles that would look good on a dresser or nightstand in the old homestead. And some that might not be so attractive.

"We have kids who will pay $40 for an empty beer can," says Mrs. Moore.

The atmosphere is relaxed, even though voices do tend to rise when buyers and sellers bicker over the price of an item. But money is not the main motivation behind most of the dealers at the market.

"Sometimes we spend more for gas than we make here," says Joe Pilecki of Highland Park, who, with his wife, Irene, manages to make it out to the market every weekend. The most expensive item the Pileckis have to offer is a dresser that sells for $25.

"We get our stuff from friends and neighbors," Pilecki says. "It can be most anything. You name it. Buttons, baseball cards, sports stuff. It's just junk."

"Antiques they call 'em," Mrs. Pilecki says.

Plant Doctor

Bugged by tenters?

By GREGORY PATCHAN Extension
Horticultural Agent

Dear Plant Doctor:

I have heard there is a non-poisonous spray that can be used to eliminate tent caterpillars and inch worms. Can you tell me more about this product?

L.H.—Rochester

Dear L.H.:

In scientific terms, I believe you are referring to Bacillus thuringiensis, which is a bacterial disease and not a chemical insecticide. When a caterpillar eats some of the foliage that has been sprayed with the bacteria, the caterpillars cease feeding and die in a short time. The bacteria is indeed deadly on the caterpillars, but do not expect a quick kill as is common with chemical insecticides. Bacillus is a very safe product because it is only toxic to caterpillars and will not affect other animals in the food chain such as birds, or non-target creatures such as bees. To purchase this product, check gardening supply dealers for Dipel or Thuricide. If you are looking for an ecologically safe insecticide, try Bacillus; however, respect its limitation. Do not expect Bacillus to control other insects such as aphids and beetles.

Dear Plant Doctor:

We have been told that hydroseeding is a superior method to establish a lawn. Can you explain what hydroseeding is?

F.B.—Commerce

Dear F.B.:

The word hydro means water, and hydroseeding is a seeding procedure that sprays a soupy mixture of water, grass seed and wood pulp mulch onto the prepared site. Usually hydroseeding is intermediate in cost between doing your own seeding and sodding. Obviously you don't obtain an instant lawn as with sodding, but you can have a wide range of choices in grass varieties. Since the cellulose mulch holds water like a sponge, hydroseeding is usually more successful for many people than a do-it-yourself seeding.

Dear Plant Doctor:

Last year our birch tree had something attacking the leaves. Sections of the leaves turned brown and papery and we noticed a small worm inside the leaves.

M.T.

Dear M.T.:

The insect that caused your problem was the birch leaf miner. You can eliminate this insect by spraying with Lindane about mid-May. However, the most destructive insect to attack birches is the bronze birch borer. The larvae of this insect tunnels in the wood and eventually kills the tree. You can control this insect by again spraying with Lindane on June 7 and again 10 days later. Be sure to spray the trunk and major limbs.

Dear Plant Doctor:

We have a Santa Rosa plum tree that flowers but does not set fruit. What is wrong with the tree? How can we make it set fruit?

G.E.

Dear G.E.:

There is nothing really wrong with your tree. Santa Rosa is a Japanese plum, and it requires another Japanese plum of a different variety for cross pollination. Shiro and Superior could be used as a pollinator. A trick that might be helpful is to remove a flowering branch of another Japanese plum variety and then suspend this branch in your tree so that the bees can spread the pollen.

Dear Plant Doctor:

I sprayed our fruit trees four times last year with Malathion and most of the fruit was rotten or wormy. What can we do?

M.Z.

Dear M.Z.:

Unfortunately, four sprays of any spray material are not enough. Also, Malathion will not control all insects nor will it control any of the diseases common to fruit trees. To obtain good fruit you need to spray with a combination of insecticides and fungicides. If you have only a few trees, a prepared home orchard spray available in most garden shops would be the most convenient method. Follow the package directions for application information. If you have more than a few trees, you probably would want to mix your own spray according to the following schedule. Spray weekly from bud swell until bloom with Captan.

House sales

Lawn boosts value

An attractive lawn not only adds beauty to a home, but dollar value to the investment at resale time.

Real estate specialists report that homes with attractive well-kept lawns, shrubbery and gardens tend to sell more quickly and at higher prices.

To the prospective buyer, a well-tended lawn establishes a favorable impression of the home even before the house interior is seen.

Healthy shrubs and lawns also mean that the new owner will have to spend less time and money for improving the landscape, an indication of important future savings.

Achieving an attractive home landscape is more than a weekend project, but it need not take a great deal of time. Regular applications of fertilizers, recommended for the local area, timely watering, insect and weed control can be done in a limited amount of time with today's lawn care products.

The benefits come with more enjoyable surroundings — and a substantial addition to the value of the home.

Heat saps pesticides

Warm weather garden crops thrive when the mercury rises. The bugs thrive too, however. And high temperatures may make control more difficult.

Entomologists at Michigan State University point out that many chemical pesticides break down rapidly as the temperature increases. This means they are effective for shorter periods and must be applied more often to keep mites and insect pests under control.

Spraying more often is not an easy solution, however. Hot weather increases the chance that pesticides will burn tender plant foliage.

To avoid chemical burn of plant tissues and achieve safe, effective pest control, the MSU experts give these tips on pesticide use:

— Spray when weather reports call for no rain for at least 12 hours.

— Spray in the early morning when there is no wind and temperatures are cool. Avoid spraying when temperatures are above 85 degrees or are likely to exceed that in the next few hours.

— Use only those pesticides labeled for both the crop and the pest you want to spray. Follow label directions on rates and frequency of application and the number of days between the last spray and harvest.

Looks like fish tails

ribbed segments that do look much like fish tails.

According to Michigan State University horticulturists, the most critical aspect of caring for this plant is watering. It must never be allowed to dry out.

Gigantic beauty

Called Giganteum from the Allium family, this perennial highlights any backyard garden. Its large, spherical umbels, six to nine inches in diameter, are composed of hundreds of small star-shaped radiant violet flowers. Its rigid woody stems vary from five to eight feet in height. (Because of its height gardeners should protect it from winds in this area by staking.) It has unsurpassed lasting qualities, making it superb as a cut flower. Bulbs need only to be planted five inches deep and treated like daffodils. It multiplies rapidly, providing an ever-enlarging garden showpiece.

Hilly sites are best

Successful backyard grape growing requires more than a green thumb. Climate, site, variety, growing season, soil depth and pruning all help determine whether grape vines will reach first crop stage (fourth year).

Whether you can grow grapes at all depends on the number of frost-free days in your area, says Stan Howell, viticulturist at Michigan State University. Most grape varieties require a growing season of 160-165 days.

Another essential is a hilly site. "A good site is one that is higher than adjacent areas with sufficient slope to allow drainage of heavy cold air away from vines."

Some varieties — such as Concord and the Minnesota hybrids Alpha and Beta — resist cold better than others. "But cold resistance is not the only characteristic to keep in mind when selecting grape varieties," Howell says. "How you will use your grapes is important, too."

For wine, he recommends one of the French-American hybrids. Concord is good for jam and jelly, juice and fresh eating — if your growing season is long enough.

The soil for grapes should be at least 30 inches deep, well drained and fumigated if it has a history of nematodes from stone fruits. Shallower soils, which are often made up of heavy clay or hardpan, may drain poorly and make root penetration extremely difficult.

If you suspect nematodes are present in the soil, have a soil analysis done, Howell advises. Nematodes carry many viruses that can severely weaken or kill grape vines.

Pruning is the most important cultural factor for good grape growing, because it directly influences yield, fruit quality, vine vigor, and vine and bud hardiness. A labor-intensive process, pruning must be done each year during the dormant period.

Wait until all chance of frost has passed, then prune all but a few select buds, Howell advises. The first year after planting, train the canes along the bottom tier; the second year, bring them up from the bottom to the second wire. All fruit should be removed so that the growth goes into filling the trellis. The fourth year should be the first crop harvest year.

If you plant dormant plants, mid-April is the time to do it; the soil is warm, workable and not too wet.

Grapes require a complex insect and disease control program. Consult your county Extension office for a spray program.

Your Extension agent has additional information on backyard grape growing. Ask for: "Grape Site Selection in Michigan," Viticulture Extension Mimeograph No. 1, 1977.

Begonia Rex

no easy plant to grow—MSU

The colorful foliage of the rex begonia (Begonia rex) is particularly striking when it's displayed against a backdrop of green plants. The casual plant hobbyist may find it a difficult plant to grow, however.

Michigan State University horticulturists suggest that the rex begonia be treated as a holiday pot plant. Enjoy it for the one to three months you can expect it to survive, then discard it when it begins to decline, they advise.

The appeal of the rex begonia is its brightly colored, lopsided heart-shaped leaves marked with bands and splotches of maroon, lavender, red, pink, green, silver and gray.

Pot in a rich, humusy soil made of equal parts peat and houseplant potting soil. Because the rex begonia has a shallow root system, a shallow container is recommended.

Water whenever the soil surface begins to dry; keep the soil around the roots moist but not dripping wet at all times. Avoid overwatering, which leads to crown rot. Fertilize every month with any standard houseplant fertilizer at half-strength.

The rex begonia requires high humidity to thrive. This is usually the limiting factor in the home. Misting is not the answer — the leaves will not tolerate water standing on them.

Place the plant where it will get bright, indirect light from a sunny window. Do not expose it to direct sun. The rex begonia is also good under partial or total artificial light.

Warm temperatures — 80-85 degrees F during the day and a night minimum of 62-65 degrees — are best.

Possible pests of the rex begonia include mealybugs and white flies.

LAWRENCE C. FISHER has been appointed Automotive Sales Manager in Detroit for the Chemical Coatings Division of Mobil Chemical Company, a division of Mobil Oil Corporation. Fisher will be responsible for marketing Mobil coatings to the automotive and related industries in the U.S. The appointment was effective July 1, 1978.

Fisher has been associated with Mobil for 18 years, mostly in the Cleveland, Ohio area, and has been directly involved in the marketing of industrial coatings.

Fisher attended Kent State University in Ohio. He is a member of the Meadowbrook Country Club. A native of Michigan, he now resides in Northville.

Garden Episode

I limped to the garden to assist my wife
Who was picking the peas that were now growing rife.
"This is the life!" she said.
"Yeah" I enthused as I stumbled about
And fell in a heap as she gasped with a shout
"Don't step on the parsnip bed!"
"Where?" I moaned as I sat where I lit.
"You're on it and the spinach," she wailed in a fit.
"They look like a horse had rolled on the spread."
"Get me up!" I howled with words now unsaid.
With a hoe in one hand and a cane in the other She pled: "Go and sit down before you land on another!"
We had radishes, peas and lettuce to eat
But there'll be no spinach, with thanks
To my feet — and my seat.

When everybody used fans, nobody cared about EER.

Years ago, when summers got hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk, you could switch on the fan and hope for a change in the weather. The last thing you cared about was energy efficiency rating, or EER.

Today, air conditioners keep people comfortable during the summer heat. And it's important to know that some units use less electricity than others to do the same job.

So, if you're buying a new portable air conditioner to cool one room, or central air conditioning to cool the whole house—look for a model with a high energy efficiency rating—or EER number. You'll save energy and money if you buy a model with an EER of 8 or more.

Air conditioners, like refrigerators and other major appliances, are big energy users. And the more efficient they are, the less they cost to operate.

So it's important to use all your major appliances properly and keep them in good operating condition.

New National Smoker Study:

Tar/Taste Gap Bridged.

Smokers rate taste of low tar MERIT equal to—or better than—leading high tar brands.

Low tar MERIT, with 'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco, has shattered the myth of "low tar, low taste."

In a new national smoker study conducted with high tar smokers, MERIT was proven to deliver the flavor of leading high tar brands.

Results Endorse MERIT Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

Detailed interviews were also conducted with current MERIT smokers.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be:
The first major alternative to high tar smoking.

Levin explains taxing stand

Carl Levin, who is seeking the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate, has emphasized that he favors the concept of tax limitation as embodied in the Headlee Amendment but not necessarily the amendment itself.

"I favor a Headlee-like amendment to limit taxes as a way of restraining the growth of government and restoring people's faith in the democratic process," he said.

Levin said he is "concerned about the specific form of the Headlee amendment because it does not reduce reliance on the property tax; because it would not have prevented most of the property tax increases we have experienced in past years; and because—if it did produce property tax relief—that relief would not be distributed in an equitable way.

"Because of these concerns, I prefer an alternative form of tax limitation which includes reform. Such a proposal is now being considered by the legislature. I have urged the legislature to place that proposal on the ballot."

If the legislative alternative ballot is not placed on the ballot, however, Levin said he would support and vote for the Headlee amendment "provided certain legal questions concerning the impact of the amendment on the 'Rainy Day Fund' and the 'Plant Rehabilitation Act'—used to attract industry and jobs to Michigan—were resolved."

Power pushes tax cutbacks

The nation has no effective way to stop inflation, and could face a serious recession unless federal and state spending limits are put into place now, Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Phil Power warned.

And, said Power, the tax relief people are demanding and need won't be possible without restraining what government spends.

"People are justifiably fed up with a government that gets bigger and bigger and costs more and more while doing less and less that brings taxpayers real value for their money," Power said.

Power is proposing:

- Sizeable cutbacks in the federal deficit, with the aim of balancing the budget within two-three years.

- If Congress doesn't get its act together and stop deficit spending, Power said he would then introduce legislation to limit federal spending to a fixed percentage of the Gross National Product.

- Prohibiting the federal government from running a deficit except when unemployment tops four percent.

- Targeting federal spending so that it meets real needs, particularly in local communities. Cutbacks should be made through tough priority setting.

- Limiting state spending to a fixed percentage of personal income in the state, as is proposed by Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation.

Power said that he supports the effort to limit taxes on the state level. But, he added, "I'm running for the U.S. Senate. My job as a candidate is to be responsive to problems at the federal level."

Power said the concept of limiting what government can spend is a good one, because most politicians have shown they don't have the discipline to say no to special interests.

"The Federal government today fits the old saw: it's a large body of money surrounded by people who want some of it," Power said. "It's been politics as usual for the last 25 years—and the result of this lack of discipline has been that inflation has been built into our economy."

The Ann Arbor Democrat predicted that the soaring inflation rate—caused heavily by Congress' inability to limit continued deficit spending—may well lead to the Federal Reserve Board slapping the brakes on the economy.

"We're in a terrible cycle of inflation and bust," Power said. "The Congress can't discipline itself to stop deficit spending even when times are good. Government deficits contribute to rising inflation."

"The Federal Reserve Board then has no choice other than to take actions which in the short run contribute to the inflation they're trying to stop. It bumps up the interest rate—making people's mortgage or car payments more—and adds to inflation."

Savings & Loan bank proposal

The Michigan Savings & Loan League is supporting passage of an amendment on the November 7 ballot which will change the State Constitution to permit state money to be deposited in Savings and Loan Associations and Credit Unions as well as in banks.

Current law designates state or federally chartered banks as the primary depository for state funds. A resolution (House Joint Resolution G.G.) enabling S&Ls and Credit Unions to be included with banks passed both the Michigan House and Senate last spring by better than a two-thirds favorable vote. The resolution was then sent to the Secretary of State via the "legislative route" and will be on the November 7 ballot.

Donald F. Wall of the Michigan Savings & Loan League in Lansing reports the amendment would benefit the people of Michigan because "savings and loan institutions pay a higher rate of interest on deposits than banks and any new deposits of state funds in savings and loan associations would increase the supply of mortgage funds available for home loans in Michigan."

George Bowles backs Ogilvie

George E. Bowles, a Wayne County Circuit Court judge for 19 years and former chairman of the State Labor Mediation Board, has announced his endorsement of Philip R. Ogilvie, candidate for 35th District Court judge.

"In my opinion Ogilvie possesses the qualities that are most important to properly handle the authority given a judge. He is, first of all, experienced. He knows peoples' problems and he knows the people themselves. Perhaps most important, he is fair."

"A judge must be impartial, patient and possess high integrity. In addition he must be able to handle the authority he is given," said Bowles.

"Ogilvie's experience as both a practicing attorney in civil matters, as a city attorney and as a municipal judge makes him, I believe, the most qualified candidate for this important community position," commented Bowles.

He noted that the Northville attorney has a sense of the needs and problems of young people and that his role in establishing a probation department for the 35th district court area was evidence of this concern.

Bowles has returned to the practice of general law with offices in Plymouth. He specializes in fact finding, arbitration and mediation in the municipal, school and private sectors as well as serving as an impartial mediator in family dispute matters.

Ogilvie is one of seven candidates for a four-year term for the newly-established second judgeship in the district court serving the communities of Northville, Plymouth and Canton. He has served as Northville's city attorney for nearly 20 years and was the city's municipal judge prior to the formation of a district court.

Moon pledges no favoritism

As a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state senator (18th District), Harold Moon says he is offering his talents, knowledge and energy to the voters and taxpayers of this district as an "alternative candidate" to "the political hacks and self-serving politicians who have held power in this State for too long a time."

Harold Moon says he definitely "marches to a different drum." He says he stands alone against the "cronyism," "sweetheart deals," and favoritism which have, over the years, become part and parcel of the careers of most of our State legislators and local office holders.

"The majority of politicians go into an office owing specific favors to various groups and individuals," Moon said. "These favors are political debts incurred because of large financial contributions or other campaign support given the candidate when he is running for nomination or election."

Moon maintains that if he is nominated and elected state senator, he will not be tied to such political debts. He will not be attached, he says, because as an opening campaign statement he will not accept any political financial contributions from any individual or group.

If there are individuals or groups who wish to support him financially, he urges they give their funds to Bob Neal's "Youth Opportunities Unlimited", a private program to give trade training to young men and women throughout the Ypsilanti area.

Ross criticizes Daniel Cooper

Criticizing his Democratic opponent, the challenging Democratic hopeful in the 15 District for State Senate, Douglas Ross has ticked off 10 areas where he thinks the incumbent has failed his voters.

According to Ross, a Democrat who seeks the seat that includes western Oakland County, Ross listed these points against Incumbent Democrat Senator Daniel Cooper:

- He was one of only two Democrats to vote to weaken the PBB Protection Act.

- He voted against establishment of a Toxic Substance Commission.

- He voted for every weakening amendment to the Open Meetings Act.

- He voted against change in Senate rules to prohibit lame duck senators from junketing.

- He co-sponsored the resolution to permit Senator Basil Brown to travel to China at taxpayers' expense.

- He voted against establishment of a mandatory two-year minimum sentence for persons committing a felony with a handgun.

- He voted against final passage of the Rape Reform Bill.

- He voted against final passage of a bill to make the Generic Prescription Drug Act a practical way to cut consumer prescription drug cost.

- He voted against discharging the Land Use Bill from the Senate Conservation Committee.

- He is the primary sponsor of an amendment to the Open Meetings Act to make it more difficult for the public to learn what legislative conference committees are doing.

Marcus Simon, the lone Republican seeking the senatorial seat, is unopposed in the August 8 primary.

Republicans pick Kirksey

State Representative Jack Kirksey (R-Livonia) has been named to a special committee of House Republican members to pursue a possible compromise on legislation providing funding for county sheriffs' departments.

The committee was formed by House Republican Leader Dennis Cawthorne following a Republican caucus recently. The Republican caucus decided to seek a compromise after Governor Milliken vetoed the legislation that would have provided $10 million to assist sheriff patrols.

"I agreed to withhold my vote on any attempt to override the Governor's veto because I believe we should make an effort to reach a compromise on this problem," said Kirksey, candidate for reelection. "To do that, we need time, and I am satisfied that this committee can come up with a compromise that will be acceptable to the legislature, the Governor and the sheriffs."

The Governor called the bill unacceptable because it dilutes local control over sheriffs' departments and could possibly dilute support for the state police in the future.

The legislation would have given county sheriffs the primary responsibility of patrolling secondary roads, a responsibility they now share with the state police. It would have also

RECREATION BACKERS—Echoing the theme of the Jaycees' recent parade, "Support Community Recreation," a trio of candidates for the Northville Township Board joined athletes in painting the bleachers at Ford Field in Northville. They are William Greer, who is running for trustee; Lee established a funding formula to distribute the $10 million in state assistance to the sheriffs.

Representative Kirksey has been in the forefront of efforts to amend the sheriffs funding bill which would have provided changes close to what Governor Milliken has indicated he will accept.

"I believe that we can come up with a compromise that will include a clear definition of how the funds will be distributed and how the money is to be used. With that compromise, I am hopeful that we can resolve this issue when the legislature returns in September," he said.

Scores Dems on tax issue

State Representative Richard D. Fessler, (R-West Bloomfield), charged House Democrats Thursday with maneuvering to deny the citizens of Michigan the opportunity to approve more than one taxation amendment on the November ballot.

The charges surfaced when House Joint Resolution "C" (HJR C), a property tax reform proposal that would shift the property tax burden for public school financing to income tax, was selected for consideration by a special ad hoc committee on property tax reform.

"The problem with HJR C being selected by the committee in its present wording is that it stands in direct conflict with the so-called Taxation Limitation Amendment," Fessler said. "The Democratic leadership knows that two or more conflicting amendments cannot both pass."

In the case of conflicting amendments on the same ballot, the amendment receiving the highest affirmative vote prevails.

The Tax Limitation Amendment proposed a limit on the percentage of tax money that would go to state government. Future tax revenues would be elastic, in accordance with the total personal income of the state.

"The Democratic leadership wants to confront the public with a choice of obtaining either property tax reform or tax limitation, Fessler said. "Their ulterior motives could be to defeat tax limitation by having it come in second in the voting and thus be nullified."

Fessler said House Republicans have prepared amendments to HJR C to assure that the resolution does not conflict with tax limitation.

"We will fight the efforts of the Democratic majority to deny the voters of this state the opportunity to enact both property tax reform and tax limitation," Fessler said. "We think the great majority of citizens in this state will join us in supporting both property tax reform and tax limitation."

MEA backs Edward Pierce

The Michigan Education Association (MEA), which represents 85,000 teachers in Michigan schools and colleges, has endorsed the candidacy of Edward C. Pierce for Michigan State Senate in the 18th State Senatorial District.

In its endorsement announcement, the MEA describes Pierce as "a highly qualified, dedicated person who has time and again demonstrated his commitment and concern for the quality of life in Michigan."

Pierce, 48, has lived and worked in the 18th Senate District since 1938. He graduated from Ann Arbor High School in 1947, and served in the U.S. Air Force from 1947 to 1951. He then worked his way through The University of Michigan, both as an undergraduate and a medical student, receiving his medical degree in 1959.

Since 1959, Pierce has practiced family medicine in Ann Arbor. He was chairman of the Family Practice Department at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital. In 1968, he founded the Summit Medical Center to provide high-quality, low-cost health care for the needy in this area.

'No enthusiasm for tax shift'

Results of a survey conducted by State Senator Bob Geake indicate a majority of his Northwestern Wayne County constituents are less than enthusiastic about shifting from the property tax to the state income tax to finance public schools.

"This indicates to me that those I represent want more than a mere shift in their tax burden. It clearly demonstrates their desire to see a cap on taxes altogether, and I wholeheartedly concur," Senator Geake stated.

"I was encouraged by the California vote earlier this week to limit overtaxation and overregulation by government, and hope we will be able to obtain passage of a milder, but related, constitutional amendment here in Michigan this year," he continued.

Senator Geake has been a leading proponent of tax limitation since 1974 when he helped found Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation, the organization which is currently circulating petitions to place a tax limitation amendment on this year's November ballot in Michigan. He presently serves on the organization's legislative advisory committee.

Northwestern Wayne County residents demonstrated their lack of support for a shift from the property tax to the income tax in response to a question asking whether the Legislature should reduce the property tax as a source of public school finance and make up the loss with an increased personal income tax. A total of 51.1 percent of those responding said they opposed such a shift, while 48.0 percent favored this action.

"The fact that the overall response to this question was so narrowly divided illustrates just how difficult it can be for a legislator to accurately represent the views of those he represents," Senator Geake pointed out. "I want those I represent to know, however, that I am listening to both sides of what they're saying on this and every state issue of concern to them."

'Tish proposal nothing new'

Michigan already has the Tish Amendment, claims Robert Vida, Republican candidate for the State House of Representatives in the 51st District, which includes all of Livingston County.

"That's right," Vida says. "Has." The voters in this state, he maintained, have always had the power to cut property taxes, not just the 50 percent reduction of the so-called Tish Amendment, but 60 to 70 percent.

Vida also claimed that the Headlee or Tax Limitation Amendment would freeze state spending at its present "level of incompetence."

"I urge you to support this amendment," Vida said. "It is not strong enough. But it is better than nothing."

ACCEPTS ENDORSEMENT—Philip Ogilvie (right), candidate for the four-year term in the 35th District Court, accepts the endorsement of George Bowles of Plymouth, former Wayne County Circuit Court Judge.

GRASSROOTS SUPPORT—Elated because it appears his tax limitation amendment "will definitely be on the November 7 ballot," Richard Headlee (above) says polls show "wide grassroots support" for the amendment.

Main Street home 'glows and grows'

First hint to neighbors and passers-by that an exciting renovation was beginning for the mansard-roof brick house at 547 West Main at the corner of Rogers was the sandblasting of the cream-painted bricks almost two years ago.

Then a two-story addition that adds 30 percent to the home's area slowly began. It was remarkable in that it duplicates the turret and Victorian lines of the original house.

Both the sandblasting and the addition were planned by Royce and Joyce Ziegler before they bought the home. Practicalities, like a new, efficient kitchen and downstairs bath were taken care of before the Zieglers with daughter, Kathy, moved in.

"We started to lay out ideas for the addition and hired an architect, Doug Parnin," Ziegler recalls, mentioning that the first version of the addition "looked like a big shed without an upstairs."

The second floor, now storage area but piped and wired so that it could become an upstairs apartment, was added for appearance only.

As the Zieglers planned the addition, now complete with a large garage, one requirement was preserving the trees and wooded privacy the property affords.

"We watched the drip lines off the trees and plotted around them so that roots would not be injured," Ziegler explains. The dropped vestibule in the new addition specifically was built "not to lose the effect of the trees."

The Zieglers had an assist from Northville Historical Society in retaining the "Old" look in the addition as the vestibule entry door was given to them by the society. Under eight coats of paint it was found to have mortice joints pegged with wood. Like the house, it is about 1880 Italianate style.

The east side of the bricked vestibule boasts a handsome set of double, bevel-glass doors opening to the garden. Sidelights and a transom also are the leaded glass. Although they appear to have been created to go together, that is not the case. The Zieglers combined the doors (they date to about 1920) with the much older and very choice sidelight and fanlight.

The vestibule, beamed family room, hallway, bedroom and bath as well as the kitchen all have been built with side passageways to accommodate Ziegler's wheelchair. A builder with his own firm, Royce Building Company, until a skiing accident caused a severe back injury, Ziegler now is a manufacturers' representative.

He served as his own contractor, however, for the renovation.

After receiving a lot-line variance from the Northville Board of Appeals in August, 1976, the building permit was issued with work beginning in September, 1976.

Initial work included tearing down a former summer kitchen, unheated and four steps down from the original house, as is the present addition. The room had been used by previous owners as a television room.

The Zieglers salvaged the bricks and then began the hunt to find other reclaimed bricks of the same type for the addition. Also "salvaged" in the restoration was the cistern still located as a point of interest behind a brick wall area in the addition.

While the Zieglers call the fireplace room in the addition their family room, Mrs. Ziegler has found that friends and neighbors are referring to it as her "plant room" because the west bank of windows is filled with her plants.

Noteworthy in the room are the beams suspended below the mansard ceiling. They're functional as well as

The Zieglers finally moved into the addition Memorial Day weekend and now are in process of renovating the original portion of the house while they enjoy the new living area, kitchen, master bedroom and bath and first floor laundry.

Joyce Ziegler points out that the original Victorian portion of the home "looks larger than it is" as it has only

William Secords were off to the races at Ascot

By JEAN DAY

Bill Secord rented the required gray top hat and tails and his wife, Terry, shortened a green chiffon formal and bought a big-brim Panama straw hat to watch the Royal Ascot races from the royal enclosure with Paul and Kathy Hughes, former Northville residents now living in England, last month.

The Secords have just returned from a trip to the British Isles that also included a do-it-yourself boat trip through the locks of the Avon River.

Highlight of the vacation, however, was the day at the races. The couples drove to Ascot from the Hughes' apartment in Chigwell. Their host, a British acquaintance, had "starter" refreshments of cold salads, a half lobster with champagne or wine catered ready as they arrived shortly after noon. Before the first race at 2 p.m., Mrs. Secord relates, the horse guards appeared escorting the Queen and Charles in the first open carriage, which was followed by two others carrying the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and Princess Anne. When a race was being run, those attending leave the boxes to stand by the rail. Mrs. Secord explains. She mentions that it is relatively expensive ($10) just to enter the track, but that nominal bets (of 50 pence or about $1) are wagered either to win or place. There is no "show" ticket.

It is at the rail and in the betting area that there is opportunity to see those from other boxes in their fancy dress. Mrs. Secord observes of their "beautiful experience" that concluded with a full English tea at 4 p.m.

Almost as unusual was their boat trip with his cousins through the countryside. Boat owners manually operate the river locks and guide their boats along. The Secords also stayed in an historic inn in Wells by the cathedral and stopped at Longleat manor, now the site of an African safari with wild animals.

Incidentally, the Secords did win at the races on a horse named "Scott Joplyn."

'Owl and Pussycat' served with dinner

Plymouth Theatre Guild is celebrating 30 years of production with the play, "The Owl and the Pussycat," announces Pat Bray, guild president and a Northville resident. It is being given in a summer dinner presentation at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth with five performances slated.

Dinner with entertainment is becoming increasingly popular, especially when the theatrical fare is light-hearted. "The Owl and the Pussycat" is a three-act comedy by Bill Manoff, directed by Thomas Hinks. It stars Dale Feldpausch and Marlene DeFoor. Combined price for dinner and the play is $12.95 a person. Cocktails will be served at 5:30 p.m. with dinner following at 6:30 and the curtain going up at 8:15. Dates for the performances, Ms. Bray reports, are five successive Sunday nights, July 23 and 30, August 6, 13 and 20. Reservations may be made by calling 453-1620.

It's a golden memory trip south

The trip Betty and James Cowie of 845 Horton made to Alabama last month was an especially sentimental one. It was taken to help Mrs. Cowie's sisters celebrate golden wedding anniversaries. Accompanying the Cowies south were another sister and her husband, Irene and Howard Porter, who moved from Detroit to King's Mill last fall. (Since his family had been early Northville residents, this was an easy move.) Another sister, Mae Siegel of Los Angeles, also joined the southbound party.

The party in Birmingham, Alabama, honored Robert and Margaret Hunter and David and Tillie Wood. Mrs. Cowie recalled that at the Wood wedding the best man was the late Peter Marshall. The well-known minister had been a friend of all in Scotland and had lived with the Wood family. When he first came to this country, he lived in Birmingham where he worked on the newspaper there with Hunter and Wood before entering the ministry.

Mary Begle's volunteering

Mary Begle, of 43647 West Nine Mile, became the area's first resident to participate in the Master Gardener program of the Wayne County-Michigan State University Extension Service last winter. She has completed the required 30 hours of class time toward the coveted Master Gardener designation and now is working on the 20 hours of volunteer time that she must give to the community to earn the rating and arm patch.

After studying house plants, vegetable gardening, lawn, tree and shrub care, she passed the examination in April. Toward fulfilling the volunteer time requirement she has given talks to groups in Wixom and Novi. Because she works at Christensen's landscape nursery full time right now, Mrs. Begle points out, she has not been able to do her volunteering in the daytime.

Honor nurse

Mary Beth Robertson, a June graduate of Michigan State University School of Nursing, was inducted into Sigma Theta Tau, National Honor Society of Nursing, May 18 in ceremonies in Erickson Hall at MSU.

Sigma Theta Tau is the only national honor society of nursing in the United States and is comparable to Phi Beta Kappa in liberal arts.

Miss Robertson is the daughter of Mrs. Marie Robertson of 822 Revere Court and the late Dr. F. Edward Robertson.

Jeannine Burkhardt sets date

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Burkhardt of 16371 Homer Road announce the engagement of their daughter, Jeannine, to Kenneth C. VanGundy of Livonia.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. VanGundy of Livonia.

They have set a November 22 wedding date.

The bride-elect is a 1977 graduate of Northville High School and is attending Schoolcraft College, as is her fiancé. He is a 1977 graduate of Churchill High School in Livonia.

Luncheon fetes son's fiancée

A luncheon shower in honor of her son's bride-to-be, Debra Mayo, was given Sunday by Mrs. James C. Cutler at her home at 965 Grace. Eighteen friends, relatives and members of the bridal party attended.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. Robert Mayo of Farmington. She is marrying Mrs. Cutler's son, Steven Kirk, in an August 5 ceremony in Farmington.

The couple will live in Findlay, Ohio, where Kirk is employed with Massey-Ferguson.

Our ancestors once regarded windows as a means of letting light and air into their dwellings. If the view was good, so much the better. Beauty came far after use in their thinking. Today, with artificial light, and furnaces and air conditioning to give us whatever temperature we choose, the windows of our homes have become more important for their decorative potential than at any time in history. . . In many older homes, we may find that the best way to capitalize upon windows often is to dress them in styles and fabrics that make them a focal "point" of our total decorating scheme. It is an opportunity to use color and pattern with a lavish hand. The type of window you have affects its treatment.

At GREEN'S CREATIVE HOME CENTER, 107 N. Center St., 349-7110, we feature all kinds of window treatment. We can custom make your draperies and we can custom make window shades. Let us help you avoid the costly and disappointing mistakes so common in decorating your home. For all your painting needs, we feature a complete line of FULLER O'BRIEN PAINTS and we will be happy to help you color-coordinate your room or entire house. We will custom-tint paint to just the color you want—more than 1,000 possible colors. We are open from 9 'til 5 daily; Thurs. & Fri. 'til 9.

Cottage workshop

Learning how to make sculptural crocheted "curls" in a two-day workshop of the Mill Race Weavers' Guild are Ruth Whitmyer, recording secretary of the weavers, left, and Carol Noffz, publicity chairman, right. Instructor Trudy Hartman of Southfield who teaches at the Birmingham Community Arts Center demonstrated Ikat dyeing in the creation of the crocheted plaques at the workshop held last Thursday and yesterday in the tan-and-brick red cottage the weavers have helped renovate in Mill Race Historical Village. The workshop marked the official "moving in" of the guild. The cottage will serve as its meeting place and headquarters. Those contemporary-looking curls on the plaque are created simply with two rows of single crochet. "They curl themselves," reveals Mrs. Whitmyer.

Exploring careers

Linda Blaney of Northville, left, participated in a week-long National Business Career Institute for Young Women at Madonna College in June. Dr. Charlotte Neuhauser, chairperson of the Business Administration Department and co-director of the institute, first of its kind held nationally, confers with Linda, above. She is the daughter of the Richard Blaneys of 21300 Summerside and will be a senior in the fall at Bloomfield Hills Academy which she has attended the past two years. Linda reports the institute was "most helpful" as she is not certain about her choice yet.

Music on the hill

As Northville High School Band under the direction of Robert Williams tuned up for its first summer concert of the season last Wednesday families and friends made themselves comfortable on the grass beside the high school. David Kleckner, an alumnus of the band, was a guest conductor, right. Second free outdoor concert will be at 7:30 p.m. today on the hill. The last, on July 26, will feature music of Jamaica by the jazz bands. Tonight's program is planned around light, generally well-known pieces, Williams announces, and includes "Change of Pace," "Scottish Folk Legend" and "The Waltzing Cat." In event of rain, the concerts are canceled.

WHAT ABOUT TRIM?

The proper trim on our beef is important at A&P's Butcher Shop because we don't want you to pay or even think you're paying one penny extra for an unnecessary bone and fat. It's a precise business. We have to trim the beef so the extra bone and fat is taken off before the retail cut is weighed, packaged and priced by weight. Yet we have to leave on just enough fat cover for full flavor. At A&P we trim off all fat in excess of 1/2 inch.

PRECISE TRIM - LOOK FOR IT NEXT TIME YOU VISIT THE BUTCHER SHOP.

Prices effective Wed., July 19 thru Sat., July 22, 1978. We reserve the right to limit quantities. Items offered for sale not available to other retail dealers or wholesalers.

Herman Wedemeyer, Jr., seated sixth from right, is assistant director of the Continentals

Herman Wedemeyer, Jr. tours with Continentals

Herman (Gus) Wedemeyer, Jr., of Northville is playing lead trumpet and serving as assistant director in charge of instrumentalists of one of the groups of the Continentals Singers and Orchestra on a 10-week musical tour of the United States and Bermuda.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wedemeyer of 45189 Nine Mile and a 1969 graduate of Northville High School.

He visited the Northville area recently as several performances were given in Michigan. They included Ward Presbyterian Church picnic at Pine Hills Christian Camp at Brighton, Calvary Baptist Church in Canton and Bethesda Missionary Temple in Detroit.

Nearly 400 young people compose the nine different groups constituting the Continentals. This summer they are carrying "the message of God's love in their music throughout most of the earth."

There will be more than 525 concert presentations in this country and 160 others in foreign countries from Fiji to Finland, Greece to Germany, Israel to Ireland and all over the rest of Europe and throughout the South Pacific to New Zealand.

The Continentals explain that they "will sing and play music all over the world with the earnest prayers that the Holy Spirit will use it to magnify the name of Jesus and to stir the hearts of men, women and children to make their decision to accept Him as Lord of their lives."

Founded in 1967 by composer arranger Cam-Florida, now president of the Continentals Singers, the nine groups have given more than 10,000 performances involving more than 3000 young Christian musicians.

Young people who come from churches and Christian colleges all over the United States to participate raise part of the missionary support to be applied to the ministry.

Director Jim Chaffee from Berklee College of Music in Boston and Wedemeyer, who also is studying at Berklee, lead and guide the group as they travel by chartered bus during the summer.

We don't know everything

What we already know from our training and our years of experience is important.

But we don't know everything. That's why it's also important that we listen to and respect the wishes of each family we serve.

FUNERALS FOR THE MILITARY AND FRATERNAL

When a veteran's military funeral and burial is required, there are specific ceremonies, equipment and procedures that must be adhered to — and exactly! We have the proper ceremonial equipment and are well-versed in military protocol so that we can provide services "by the book" in honoring the veteran in his final hour.

Fraternal orders, such as the Masons, also have specific funeral requirements. We have conducted many, many funerals for members of fraternal and religious orders, so we are used to handling those rituals so important to the brotherhoods.

If you would like to have advance information regarding military requirements and veteran's funeral and burial expense allowances, or about the many fraternal order funerals we have conducted, just call or drop by. We invite you to counsel with our funeral specialists, be he Masonic, military, K of C, Elks or any of the other fine groups in the area.

Mike's visit to the barber was a cut above the rest

bedrooms upstairs. They have been removing coats of paint from woodwork in the room at the front of the house which is to be Ziegler's library. Mrs. Ziegler is planning her "Victorian parlor" off the dining room.

She's been helping with the restoration while going to school—first at Schoolcraft and then at University of Michigan Dearborn campus for accounting. Classes ended the last week in June, and she resumed refinishing the woodwork. But, says Mrs. Ziegler, the painted library will be the only one with the woodwork stripped; the rest will be painted.

The Zieglers are getting eager to live in the entire house. Since September, 1976, they have been living on a construction timetable. The first fall the old kitchen was knocked down and cement was poured for the addition and underground plumbing installed.

"But," recalls Royce Ziegler, "we were socked in with an extremely cold winter and stopped 'til April 1, 1977."

Details like real, pegged floors and touches like arched brick doorways and window brick drapes to match originals aren't built quickly. Ziegler still is completing exterior details, mentioning that brackets will be installed on the addition to match those on the original house.

While building, the family has been finding there is a great deal of interest in the "compatible" addition with many people stopping by to admire. Ziegler says he knows the architect has acquired other work because of it.

The Zieglers already were familiar with Northville before moving here from Plymouth. His father long had used the Northville Post Office as mailing address for his "Land of Christmas" letters to youngsters.

The move to the old Northville home has kindled the couple's interest in antiques. Waiting for the library is a Scottish tall case clock dating to 1750 that shortly will be chiming the hour in a room about to have dark-stain floors installed ready for Oriental carpets.

Forms were laid in 1976 to add on while saving trees
