There's no better way to spend your Christmas vacation than grabbing your sled, throwing on your boots and mittens and heading for the hills. Fortunately, Mother Nature obliged by piling white stuff around the area. For Dave Baird, 14, there was just enough snow on the hills at Amerman Elementary

Hedge decision due in early January

By KENTK WELSON

A state decision on whether a "living fence" will be planted around Northville Regional Psychiatric Elemental is likely sometime in January, according to state Representative Jack Knikey (B-Ein Distruct)

Kuksey said December 24 he had talked with Department of Mental Health Director Patrick Babcock shortly before leaving Lansing for the holiday and was told Babcock would meet with hospital director John Reynolds early in January.

"He had talked with the governor about the proposal," Kirksey related. "He (Babcock) told me he still had not yet made up his own mind on the same but would be meeting with Juhn Beynolds shortly after the first of the vear."

Kirksey said he did a little labbying on behalf of the proposal to plant a multifloral rose bedge around the perimeter of the hospital.

"I sold him I thought the residents (of the township, had been very, very accommodating and I thought they would be hard-pressed to come up with an argement against the idea outside of that they just don't want to do it."

walkeways at the homital and DIEH officials wormed that a fence would be counterproductive to mental health treatments.

At first it was thought the heage could be planted by merely transferring funds within the mospital budget, but state purchasing regulations meant EMH and management and budget approval was needed to go out for bids.

At that stage, anti-fence policy took the fore and residents were asked to assure the state pressure for a fence would be relaxed if the hedge is planted. During a meeting December 12, just such assurances were assued.

Beynolds has pledged his support to the compromise proposal, although he counts himself among those opposed to any plan to fence the hospital, and Babcock is likely to hear the director's rainnale when he meets with him.

At the first suggestion of the bedge, it was hoped approval could be granted in time for planting before the ground freezes. The Lansing-level delay is likely to stall planting until the thaw, so the hedge will not be quite as large as hoped for when the annual spring/summer walkaway increase occurs.

For now, however, deep snow and cold weather has forced a decrease in Reynolds first aired the proposal the number of patients slipping away publically, suggesting it as a com- from hospital grounds. No hospital promise position between residents escapee cases were listed in the past

The renovation of the downtown, he continues, has been termed by one businessman "the most exciting event he has experienced during the more than 25 years he has been in business in the city.

Vernon adds that "other businessmen tell me they already have seen some positive changes in their businesses as a result of Mainstreet '73" and mentions that councilmember G. Devey Gardner, owner of IV Seasons, reported that the holiday business had been very good, as did Charles Freydil, Scott apham and Sandie's Hallmark Shop. Another positive aspect for the city is the South Main Street beautification, Vernon says. Vernon looks back to his comments after he was elected mayor in November 1979 when he was asked to give his outlook for 1980.

"It was not difficult to be very positive then because a number of pro-

November actually marked the end of the current government's first year, while early January is the anniversary date for the new organization under a business manager and the end of March is when budgets are set.

Township treasurer Richard Henningsen and business manager David Leiko noted that much of the past year an awful lot of our time," Leiko said. Henningsen said state and federal cuts in aid to local government have required nearly monthly revisions to township operations. Staff reductions have meant a heavier workload for all. For those reasons, they both said a major goal for '82 is the installation of a new computer system to relieve some of the burden and allow officials to turn their attention to some of the policy matters demanding attention. Lelko, the kind of system they are examining will take roughly a year to become fully operational, but would allow further cost-saving without layoffs. Hem-ingsen has said he believes the administrative office is understaffed, if anything.

Which is not to say important issues are being ignored.

Supervisor John MacDonald listed several accomplishments made in the past year, including beginning operation under the business manager form now work part-time, with Lelko keeping an eye on daily operations.

With reduced staffing came reduced administrative costs. MacDonald said. A "flex time" schedule for employees extended township office hours without added cost.

1981: highlights of people and events in the news

By KEVIN WILSON

News reporting is often described as "instant history." The immediate quality is what makes news what it is, but few would deny it leaves out the perspective granted historians.

While a reporter following a story may have a feel for the evolution of events, the reader is sometimes left trying to puzzle out what happened from an isolated story.

The end of the year is a good time to cast an eye over the stories that made the news over the past 12 months.

While events rarely transpire in accordance with a neat chronological timetable, the slightly longer perspective can produce a better understanding of what has happened in Northville recently, and some idea of where we stand going into the new year.

With that in mind, we have gone over the 51 editions of The Record published in 1981 (this is the 52nd) and produced the month-by-month review that follows.

We've consolidated related stories within each month and noted when later developments changed the outcome expected when we published.

JANUARY

City council made its first intimations that it might relax its long-standing ban on self-serve gas stations. Law regulating, but no longer prohibiting those stations was passed later in the year, but not before the Shell station at South Main and Seven Mile was closed. Shell operatives were the first to pressure for an end to the ban.

. A 26-year-old Livonia man was killed when sledding on the tobaggon run in Hines Park. County Road Commission workers spread sand on the hill the following week, as the commission prohibited further use of the site. The county said it could no longer afford to line the hill with hay bales and supervise play there, so had no alternative but to close it down.

A six-day draft registration drew 18-year-olds to the post office in one of the last local effects of the federal administration of President Jimmy Carter.

Longtime postmaster and community figure John Steimel died at 54, victim of a heart attack. A fund established in his name later aided the Boys' State program.

The township board of trustees hired Edward McNeely of McNeely, Lincoln Associates of Northville as the township engineering consultant. The firm was chosen on a 5-2 vote from proposals submitted by several firms, but longtime engineer William Mosher was not among those from whom bids were solicited. The township would later take legal action to obtain papers in Mosher's possession.

An Ypsilanti man was arrested and accused of setting a fire that had devoured units of the Swan Harbour apartment complex the previous Christmas Day. Force Five, an arson investigation team with members from five area police and fire departments, was being organized. Although unofficial at that point, members of the organization were the ones who investigated the fire. David Lelko took office as the township's first business manager in January, completing a total revamping of the organization and personnel at administrative levels.

The city fire department took delivery of a new ladder truck, and it was revealed that Stuart Oil Company had closed its doors the previous November. The building on Railroad Street in the industrial park was demolished in a three-alarm blaze later in the year. Force Five again was instrumental.

FEBRUARY

Newly effective state legislation requiring "equalization by class" served as the spark that inflamed citizens already upset about Michigan's property tax system. Under the law, home assessments increased more swiftly than industrial and business ones. Attempts to delay implementation of the act failed, but the furor did bring forth a tax shift proposal on a May 19 ballot and other stories through the spring.

U.S. House Representative Carl Pursell toured his district. While in Northville, he announced federal approval to expand the local post office. A pet goal of Steimel's, the project was underway and nearly completed before the year was out.

A court order delayed, but did not forestall, the transfer of young retarded and emotionally distrubed children into a wing of Northville State Hospital. The Midwest Regional Office of the state Department of Mental Health (DMH), formerly housed in Southfield, moved into the EPIC facility on the hospital grounds later in the year.

At around the same time, the hospital population was rising while continued cuts in DMH reduced staff. Subsequent security concerns made much news in the fall.

The school board announced it was seeking renewal of 9.5 mills of property tax in an April 4 election. The mood of voters was to provide the system with a near year-long headache on this front.

Scott Friedman, 15, was found dead of exposure outside Silver Spring elementary school. Fears of foul play were dismissed, but police continued to investigate, seeking a man who allegedly purchased alcohol for Friedman and friends of similar age who had been drinking the night he died.

State lottery winner Steve Smiegelski recounted his adventures and plans in a front-page story. The township began its own consideration of ordinances regulating self-serve gasoline stations. Fire chief Robert Toms pressed the issue, noting the township had never banned the facilities but seeing a potential fire hazard.

The city revealed it was studying the costs of repaving South Main, since it was apparent the Wayne County Road Commission would not be doing so anytime soon. The street was ultimately paved.

In surprise announcements, school board member Richard Barron resigned and Charles Peltz announced he

At that time Vernon also pointed out there would be uncertainties connected with a faltering economy, deciming revenues to the city and rising costs for services that "would plague those of us in government who must provide those services to residents of the city - thus our challenge would be to maintain acceptable services at minimal cest to fannavers."

The mayor now sees the faltering economy lasting much longer than expected, with revenues continuing to decline and operating costs continuing to rise.

"They keep what they need to run their governments and return what is left to municipalities with shares usually based on population.

Officials were reluctant to peer too deeply into the crystal ball - partendariy since the opcoming year inchuics elections at the state and county level and subsequent politicking that could have their effects here.

"You tell me what my state and federal revenues are going to look like next year and I'll tell you what I want to do." Elemingsen said, expressing the frustration of local officials as they try to silan for the future.

Lelko said he would like to continue getting more township senior citizens involved in programs offered in the area, but Henningsen said if worse comes to worse those programs may be on the channing block.

Henningson said he does not want to seek any tax increases in 1982, since the for millage processe of 0.7 mills will first appear on 1982 December bill Notably, more mentioned approval of the police millinge as a major accomplishment of the past year. Most board members considered the tax increase a necessary evil to maintain the level of police services residents want.

At the same time, officials must be ? concerned about the growing evidence the state may mandate changes in the tax laws. One recent bill has Henn-ingses angry because it would practically demanded a total reassess of the township -- a $60,000 or $70,000 item he believes the community cannot 2 afford.

An insurance committee has been reviewing township insurance ptograms and will likely produce a recommendation in the next year that could reduce costs.

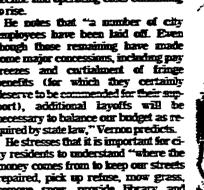

And the police efficer's union is still warking without a contract. Negotiations have been continuing, but no one is predicting an end in the near future.

I think we've had a good year, considering," Heintz said.

All officials gave much credit to the township office staff, who have been given added responsibilities but only an incremental three percent pay increase this year.

He was promoted to detective rank with the fire marshal division in the second district in 1970 and had served on that assignment since then. "Finally, in our third year, we're coming out of deficit spending. Our expenditures will not exceed our revenues," Kritezs offers.

The rec department had moved into the Old Main Street building in late 1979 and many repairs and maintenance work were done to improve some deteriorating conditions. It was those costs which ran up the deficit.

Despite coming out of deficit spending, the rec department again had to k for a loan in November to help solve 25 a cash-flow problem. The city inaned the rec department $10,000 to be paid millage renewal ever turned down by Northville voters in recent history brought to light an obvious communication problem between the schools and the community.

Faced with a bare bones budget and unsound educational program, the board of education proposed the formation of a Citizens' Advisory Committee to try to bring more community input into the school district's operations.

The formation of this committee and the citizen participation in the group is regarded by many administrators as being one of the most successful endeavors of the past school year.

The committee, comprised of parents, senior citizens, students and other residents, not only provided the school board and administration with feedback on how the community viewed the schools, but was largely responsible for the successful passage of the school's reduced 7-mill request in July.

Though the April millage defeat hardly can be regarded as having a positive impact on the schools, Nichols noted the increased community feedback which followed the defeat was a definite plus niled a list of characteristics to be contained in the program and has formulated standards to be applied to the OFTAIN.

Both committees are expected to turn over their findings by the end of the school year in order for the administration to review the recommendations and determine the course of action for the upcoming year.

In light of the district's declining enroliment and the reduction in state aid for education, the reports from these two committees will be a key factor in deciding the future of Northville schools.

Since 1975, Northville Public Schools' student enrollment has dropped drastically - and predictions are that next year will be no exception.

"We're in a mangagement of decline," Nichols explained. "In the coming year we'll be concentrating on consolidating and taking a hard look at where we are and whether our programs are doing what they should be doing."

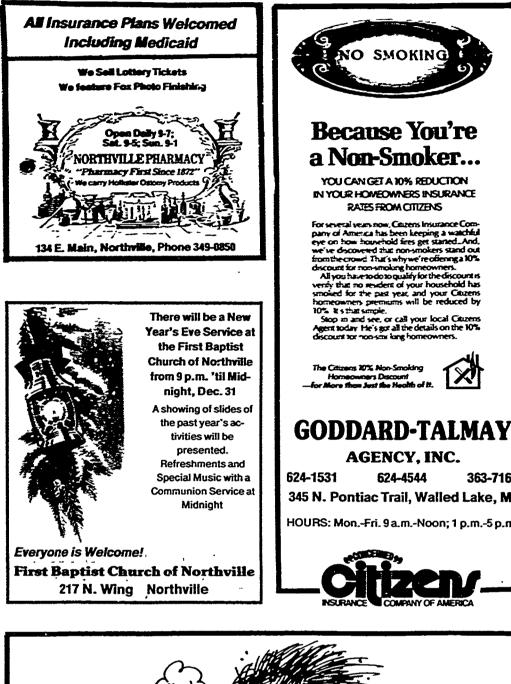

Harsh economic conditions, falling birth rate and rising housing costs have caused a decline of almost 1,000 students since 1975 - with the largest drop in enrollment at the elementary level.

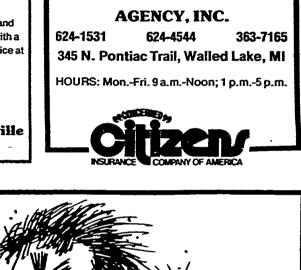

The elementary enrollment decline has caused some concerns in terms of building usage. One of the tasks of the facilities committee will be to decide whether the closing of a school will be advantageous to the district in the coming year.

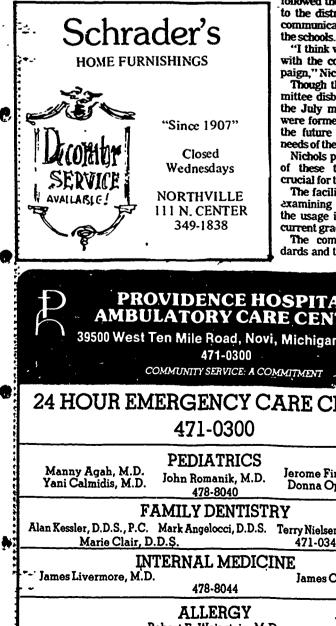

The decline in Northville's student population inevitably has resulted in a reduction in state aid to the district leaving local tax payers to pick-up more than 95 percent of the school's revenues. More than $9.6 million of this year's $10.4 million budget comes from local tax dollars.

In light of the last millage election, administrators admit that keeping the community involved in school operations is imperative - especially if the administration should decide to seek a millage increase within the next few vears.

According to Nichols, Northville schools should be able to maintain programs on the current millage level without seeking additional monies from to the district in opening the lines of communication between residents and "I think we opened up some avenues with the community during the campaign," Nichols said.

Though the Citizens' Advisory Committee disbanded after the passage of the July millage, two citizens groups were formed in September to examine the future facility and programming needs of the district.

Nichols pointed out that the findings of these two committees "will be crucial for the direction of the district." The facilities committee currently is examining all of the school buildings, the usage in all the facilities and the current grade structure.

The committee on program standards and their effectiveness has com-local sources.

The next school millage will come up for renewal in 1984 when the 7-mills passed in July expire. Whether the district can maintain its programs on that level will depend on several factors; however, Nichols noted "the liklihood is we won't be going back until the millage is up."

Though Northville schools will be entering the new year on fairly solid financial ground, Nichols said the administration still is waiting for a response on a state audit hearing. For the first time in recent history,

Northville Public Schools were given a qualified audit on the district's year end financial statement this year due to a pending settlement regarding a state

In the interest of home fire safety, the State Police fire marshal division and local fire departments have joined in cautioning Michigan residents about the use of portable kerosene and propane heaters as household heating supplements to reduce heating costs.

would not be seeking re-election when his term expired. In the end, the two men were replaced by women and Karen Wilkinson was no longer the only female on the board.

Resident Tina Stoecklin, 15, was named Junior Achievement's Businesswomen of the Year for Southeast Michigan.

And a group home for retarded adults was licensed on Eight Mile in the township. It was the first on the township after a 1980 proposal to place one near Seven Mile was withdrawn.

MARCH

Council passed the self-serve gasoline ordinance at its first meeting of the month. It would be late in the year before such a station opened, but the ordinance did presage township provisions calling for fire extinguishers and regulating pump location.

At the same meeting, council set a May 19 election date for approval of bonding to pay for the repaying of South Main. The date selected was the one state Proposal A was placed upon. More than 200 people jammed township hall to protest property laxes and some 1,300 gathered at an anti-tax. rally in Milford.

Within the week, the township decided to place a proposal for one additional mill of property tax for the police department on a May ballot, accompanying a request for a 1.5 mill renewal for the same purpose already scheduled May 5. Both were later moved to May

School superintendent Lawrence Nichols was given high marks in the board's annual review of his performance. The accolades were to do littie to queil taxpayer anger later in the month when his salary was increased to $51,000 per year.

As the township closed in on the end of its fiscal year carting a deficit left by the previous administration, it cut the upcoming budgets of the recreation and library joint services. The city countered by breaking formula and granting the recreation department's full request for funding. Township residents paid $2 more when participating in the programs as a result. After some heated words between governments, joint meetings were held and agreement was reached to discuss the budgets earlier in the planning cycles. The recreation budget is now under review for next year. The library cut stood with the proviso that later developments might bring an increase to intended levels.

Optimism ran high among backers of a senser citizens' housing project to be located in Wayne County Child Development Center property, with some projecting demolition of some older buildings on the site starting by fall. Later setbacks (see later months) leave the proposal in limbo at year's end.

Among the first actions of the Ronald Reagan administration was elimination of the CETA jobs training program. By September, the cut had cost the township alone five employees although it managed to pick up the salary of one. It was among the first of several pinches to be felt by local government in 1981.

APRIL

Voters bounced the school's 9.5 mill renewal decisively. A later Record survey found most opposition based on administrative salary increases, the superintendent's latest raise (timed less than two weeks before the election) and disgruntlement over property taxes in general.

The shcool board at its next meeting began to consider extensive cuts needed if the full 9.5 mills were to be lost and appointed a citizens' committee to try to figure out what went wrong and open communication with voters.

Schoolcraft College President C. Nelson Grote announced that he had accepted a similar position at a larger community college in Spokane Washington and asked to be released from his contract by the end of July.

Association of Retarded Citizens (ARC) was reported among the potential buyers for Costa's Mainstreet Restaurant. Plans to name the new restaurant Noah's ARC were squelched later in the year when other buyers got the facility and its liquor license, naming the restaurant MacKinnon's.

Township planners were predicting a new zoning ordinance could be on the books within 90 days. Things haven't worked out that way, and the target is now next spring or summer.

Longtime barber Charles Dunn announced his plans to retire from the Main Street business where he was known so well. By this deer season. Travel Plans occupied the building and there were no deer heads sitting in barber chairs in town.

Federal cuts to urban aid programs were announced that threaten the ultimate development of the longawaited super sewer that would clear the way for more development in the area. At this juncture, the outcome of the project remains uncertain.

Similar cuts threaten the senior housing project as well, it was revealed the following week.

Omnicom Cablevision, cable television franchise holder in both city and township, began laying and stringing its network in April - capable of carrying 52 channels of programming. There came a rash of complaints about installation operations, which are not yet completed. Most were answered satisfactorily and cable television is now serving many area residents. As the end of the month approached, federal approval was granted for the local post office to purchase the Kerr House property. Moving the house became an issue shortly afterward. State Senator Robert Geake led an effort that garnered a $100.000 appropriation to the senior village program, but Governor William Milliken later vetoed the expenditure. Jim Spagnulo, who at 94 had long laid claim to the title of oldest Northville businessman (Spagy's Party Store) died.

MAY

Township trustee and planning commissioner Richard Allen played a tape of his dishwasher for the commission as the culminating effort in his threemonth push to have noise restrictions included in the zoning law revision. Played at an annoying level which Allen indicated would be permitted under the ordinance, the tape il-lustrated his point but the commission was unmoved. Allen took his argument, but not his tape, to the board.

Former township engineer William Mosher, 81. said he was planning to retire. since the township account had been the backbone of his operation.

A fire at Stuart Oil was set in a stairway by an office at the plant. It took three fire departments several hours May 6 to put the fire out.

The same issue of the paper reported township police were seeking a woman on murder charges in connection with the death of a Detroit man found in the Swan Harbour parking lot. Taken to Northville State Hospital, the man died of a bullet wound before anyone knew he'd been shot. Yussuf Karriem had been taken to the hospital under the mistaken impression he was an escapee. Then Chief Ronald Nisun's explanation that suspicions were raised because Karriem was black met with charges of racism he later denied. Jeanette M. Peterson turned herself in later that week and was tried in late-August.

Voters approved South Main bonding and the township's police renewal, but rejected Proposal A and the added police millage request.

The school board reserved a July date for a millage election, leaving the amount to be requested undecided and asked the citizens' committee to recommend something.

Schoolcraft tapped vice president McNally to act as interim president while a presidential search was launched. McNally had been ready to retire.

JUNE

Glenna Davis beat Leland Haines for the only contested seat on the school board. Unopposed was Jean Hansen.

Layoff notices were sent to 109 teachers as the school board prepared to operate without any of the lost millage. The July election was set for a seven mill, three year request on the advice of the citizens' committe.

Stanley Johnston resigned from city council. Council later ; appointed; Jerome Mittman to the empty seat and G. Dewey Gardner as Mayor Protem. It also approved a $2.3 million budget. The annual Walk for Mankind raised $11,000.

The township began discussion of regulating arcades on the advise of building inspector Troy Milligan. The city would later pick up the ball and both had approved ordinances within months, joining a wave that swept the region.

Plans to move Kerr House drew opposition from neighbors of the city's proposed site.

A man who formerly resided in Northville, then became a vagrant in Hines Park, was charged with the Stuart Oil arson. Shortly thereafter, Force Five torched two old houses on Cady as part

The operation was ing Nisun had asked to be closed. later cleared by the state licensing The annual folk and blue authorities and fee complaints forwarded to the prosecuting attorney have not resulted in legal action. Owner John T. Early said the controversy was stirred up by persons wishing to form a competing firm. In the meantime, the township bought a fire rescue vehicle and refused to rule out the possibility it might someday be used as an ambulance. A request for office zoning on Seven Mile was granted on the basis the property could not be sold for residential use because of repeated contact with state hospital escapees. A later request by a neighbor is still pending while the township studies the entire Seven Mile corridor.

A partially federally-funded project to bring sewers to the Park Gardens area drew renewed attention. Members of a new homeowners association there were assured of township board cooperation.

Ford Motor Company revealed it had postponed the July closing of its Northville Valve Plant that had been announced in November, 1980, and speculation ran that the closing might never happen.

The city bought a lot on First Street for location of Kerr House, thereby solving the last problem facing post office expansion.

Voters approved the school millage question 2,764 to 1,450, and relieved some, but not all, of the pressure on the school system to tighten its belt.

Our Opinions Looking ahead at 1982

Only this time of year matches springtime for generating a spirit of renewal, of promising possibility. With the coming of a new year the problems of the past one do not leave our minds, but there is some hope we might address them better in the new cyde of seasons.

In keeping with that spirit, we would like to offer the community our agenda of priority issues to be dealt with in 1982, acknowledging that the world, our nation, state and even local entities are in a constant state of flux and it is impossible to predict exactly what new issues might demand attention.

Among the leading concerns in the past year has been the floundering joint community recreation program. Seemingly in economic difficulty with every turn of the head, the program has generated more than its share of harsh words between city and township, damaging the com-munity spirit that is its intent. No one party can be assessed the blame for the difficulties, but it would be difficult to argue there are no problems.

A running deficit largely engendered by the energy-wasteful community building has made the program the focus of those who would like to see money spent elsewhere and damaged its credibility even among participants in its pro-grams. There exists a foundation for an exceptionally fine recreation system here, and hopes the township might be able to acquire more land for a park could make a fine addition. Some believe that in time the recreation program will work its way out of its fiscal trap, but political pressures are increasing in this tight era of our history, and the danger exists that the program could drown before it gets its head out of the redink.

thville Ford Valve Plant will dominate city concerns at least in the early part of the year. While Ford will remain free to accept the offer it finds most acceptable, the community's response to the new tenant can be instrumental. Included in discussions are the continued care of the duck flock so near to people's hearts, and Ford Field, which currently is leased to the city.

It distresses us that the gains made toward completion of the Park Gardens sewer project are in jeopardy as both sides in a sometimes heated debate refuse to budge off the center of their positions. The danger of losing the program entirely increases with each delay and the progress seen this fall could all go for naught if some agreement is not reached soon. We recommend a frank discussion among representatives of the township and the distressed area as soon as possible.

We are pleased that the Northville Public Schools administrators and board of education members urged citizen participation in the workings of the district. The residents currently participating in the facilities and program standards committees should be commended for volunteering their time to better serve the future needs of Northville Public Schools.

The defeat of the 9.5 mill renewal last April should serve as a lesson to both residents and school administrators. It is our hope that the lesson has been learned. Community members must continue to give their input into the district's operations and school officials must keep abreast of the community's views.

Resolved: no more resolutions

Well, he's at it again. While Father Time is slowly ticking away at what's left of this year, I'm left with last year's list of New Year's resolutions - counting all the dubious achievements and heroic deeds I've managed to rack up during 1981.

It comes as no surprise (but with some humilia-tion) that I have yet to cross off any of last year's resolutions. In fact, I'd be hard pressed to put a check mark by any resolution I've made in the past five years.

Like many people, the pending new year used to inspire me to set goals and objectives which I would strive to accomplish in a given 365-day period. The inspiration usually would last about two days.

My problem with New Year's resolutions is that mine usually are too ambitious. My list of "Things to do in the coming year" would be as thick as "War and Peace" and instead of allowing myself an entire year to accomplish these goals, I'd demand immediate results - usually a few weeks. In other words, I'd wear myself out before I even got started.

I have a fairly good notion that this "unrealistic resolution" syndrome is something I caught from my mother. For the past year and a half (since my graduation from college) I have lived at home with my mother, sister. two dogs, a cat, a rabbit and several disappearing hamsters and gerbils. I'm part of what is commonly referred to today as "the extended family." Translated it means the kid's too broke to get her own apartment.

The point I'm trying to make here, is that since my return home after four years of freedom, er, college, I have on several occasions had the opportunity to witness — and often be a part of — my mother's "get-ting organized" routine. The most frequently heard words around our house come from my mother who at least once a week will remark "I've got to get my life in order." This remark usually is made when she's contemplating taking out the screens in January or after she's tripped over the three-year accumulation of newspapers growing taller in the garage.

My mother is probably the most unorganized organizer to grace the earth. Her favorite thing to do is "make lists." If she can find a piece of paper, she'll make out lists of things that have to be done and tack them to the refrigerator. Of course, my sister and I are supposed to play along — which means we're expected to check off each item after we've completed the task Once everything has been done, we can take the list down. Needless to say, no one in our house can remember what color the refrigerator is.

However, it's not the list making alone which is my mother's downfall. Her basic problem is choosing what she wants to organize. Rather than deciding to clean out a closet or a drawer, my mother will choose to polish my brother's silver baby cup. My brother's 21

With New Year's quickly approaching, my mother is busy scurrying around making lists and organizing her life. Just last Sunday she spent an entire afternoon cleaning one corner of the garage which hasn't been seen by human life in more than 10 years. I was quite proud of the accomplishment she had made and was about to offer my congratulations when I noticed her washing these strange little wooden things in the sink. "What are you doing?" I asked. "Washing clothespins," she said, "we do have a clothesline, don't we?'

Neither government can af-ford to allow these problems to continue, and the citizenry and children of the area should not be deprived of the program. There is hope in the more frequent discussions among city, township and recreation officials, and we believe some solution can and will be found.

Also important to the community are discussions centered on shared dispatch services for police and fire departments. The savings possible for each community are too large to ignore. We sincerely hope city officials can devise a proposal that will answer concerns about leaving the downtown station unstaffed during evening hours.

The future fate of the Nor-with than in previous years, school officials must use funds sparingly. The increases given the top central office administrators were in our opinion out of line. It is our hope that the board of education will remember the message the community delivered last April as it approaches the coming year.

If the economy improves in the way some analysts are predicting, the community can turn its attention to other issues as well. Given a chance, how well is the new downtown going to work? Will home construction take an upswing in the township? Can a developer be found for the long-awaited senior citizens housing project on county land? If the economic picture brightens, all will demand close scrutiny. If not, it will be a struggle to keep the ideas alive through the downturn.

Happy New Year, drive carefully

My idea of a pleasant New Year's Eve is to sit home in front of the fireplace, munching on shrimp and sipping a little champagne.

In fact, I usually don't make it through to the magic hour. I vaguely recall through the stupor of sleep having to decide whether to watch Guy Lombardo's party from the Waldorf Astoria or Dick Clark and his Rockin' New Year's Eve party.

I'm too young for Guy Lombardo and too -old for Rockin' New Year's Eve, so I usually wander over toward the telly around 11:30and flip it off. By the time midnight arrives, I'm sound asleep.

Frankly, the whole New Year's Eve specfacle always used to astonish me. Why in the" world do those throngs of people descend on Times Square? Certainly the prospect of flipping one more page on the calendar does not seem an appropriate reason for such jubilation.

At least that part is no longer a mystery. to me. I think I now understand why people find it necessary to celebrate on December 31. January 1 is like the first day of school...a chance to start over.

The first day of school was always a big event. New clothes and a new outlook. This will be the year, I always told myself, when I finally "apply myself" and "live up to my-potential." (Words borrowed from my parents).

No more B's or C's. From now on nothing but A's.

I think that's what New Year's Eve is all. about. It's a chance to start over..."apply, yourself"..."live up to your potential."

But even though I now understand the importance of New Year's Eve to many people, I don't understand the necessity to jam into. Times Square or imbibe great quantities of alcoholic beverages. In fact, it seems to me that if you're really going to make next year a better year, you're a lot better off staying. home and getting a full night's sleep. 00

The senator pointed out that although this year's credit payment remains the same as last, the size of the credit will increase each year based on the Detroit Consumer Price Index for fuels and other utilities, but not to exceed 10 percent.

"With the constant increase in home beating costs it is imperative that persons on fixed incomes be given assistance in meeting their heating bill obligations," said Geake, who strongly supported continuation of the home heating assitance program.

Also included in the state program is special heating allocations for families on General Assistance or Aid to Families with Dependent Childern, emergency assistance and home weatherization assistance.

In addition to supporting the home heating assistance program, Geake also voted in favor of the Older Michiganians Act (Senate Bill 229) which directly addresses the needs and concerns of Michigan's senior citizens.

"Final passage of the 'Older Michiganians Act' will be a major step forward in setting a new tone of vitality for the Office and Commission on Services to the Aging, resulting in improved conditions for Michigan's 1.3 million senior citizens." Geake said.

The measure has passed both the Senate and House chambers and is now back in the Senate awaiting action on legislative changes made in the bill by the House.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO REFERENDUM ON BECOMING A CHARTER TOWNSHIP

Official certification has been received from the Michigan' Secretary of State indicating that the Township of Northville has a population of 5,000 or more and the Township Board has the right to exercise one of three options concerning status as a chart er township under the provision of Act 359, Public Acts of 1947, as amended:

1. Adopt by majority vote a resolution opposed to incorporation as a charter township.

2. Adopt by majority vote a resolution of intent to approve incorporation as a charter township.

3. Adopt by majority vote a resolution to place before the electorate at the next regular or special township election the question of incorporation as a charter township. In the event option 2 is adopted by the Township Board, the citizens of the Township have the right to file a "Right to Referen-dum Petition". This petition must be filed within the 60 days which must lapse between passage of a resolution of intent to incorporate and final passage of the resolution to incorporate as a charter township.

The petition will follow, in general form, the nominating peti-tion form as prescribed in the Michigan Election Law, and in the heading will indicate 'disagreement of intent to incorporate as a charter township''. The petition must be signed by not less than 10% of the registered voters of the township based on the vote cast for all candidates for supervisor at the last election at which a supervisor was elected.

If the petition is successful, the question of incorporation will be placed on the ballot at the next general township or special township election.

Drive only if necessary

Here's tips for coping with road snow

Motorists can help with roadway snow and ice control this winter by observing a few simple precautions, according to John L. Grubba, managing director of the Oakland County Road Commission

By taking the time to observe these precautions, motorists can improve the safety and convenience of all and help to hold down the tax cost, Grubba said. Specifically, he advises:

· Do not drive in a winter storm unless absolutely necessary, especially during storms of wet snow or freezing rain. Stalled and stranded vehicles present hazards to other motorists and significantly impede snow and ice removal. The longer it takes road commission crews to do their job, the more it costs taxpaying motorists.

• Properly equip all vehicles for winter driving, from snow tires to wiper blades. Winter driving is difficult enough with proper equipment. Faulty equipment is dangerous to you and others, and is an invitation to be stranded.

· When a storm is forecast, remove all vehicles from the sides of roads and streets. This allows plows to clear the area the first time through without expensive return trips. (Many communities have winter roadside parking prohibitions, and the fines and towing charges can be costly to the citizen).

driveways or into or across roads or streets is illegal because it can present a serious traffic hazard. Violations noted are reported, and the Northville city police can enforce the law. Pile snow on your own side of the road.

• If you cannot pile driveway snow behind the curb or shoulder, be sure to place it to the right as you face the street so that road plows will push it away rather than back into the driveway entrances (Road plows unavoidably roll some snow from the road itself into the driveway entrance because plow baldes cannot be lifted for the thousands of driveways).

· Mailboxes installed on the right-ofway are placed there at the owner's risk. Get them as far off the roadway as practical. A flag or other identifying marker will help plow operators see and avoid them. If the mailbox post is rotting, it should be replaced so the weight of plowed snow will not break it.

· Snowplow trucks operating with blades up do not mean drivers are not doing their jobs. They might be heading for fuel or repairs, or en route to their area of plowing responsibility.

· Remember, during a heavy or prolonged storm, the limited crews must remain on heavily-travelled critical and priority main routes until they are safe. Only then can they turn attention

• Showeling or plowing snow from to subdivision streets, and sometimes at the same level as in previous years this will be a day or two after bad conditions begin. It is too costly to staff and equip to clear all roads and streets on the same priority.
Avoid calling the road commission's snow removal operations centers unless absolutely necessary. They are extremely busy coping with storm situations and telephone lines should be kept open for emergency calls. Emergency claims must be verified, such as by a doctor.

"Highway safety remains the road commission's top priority," Grubba smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles. asserted. "Therefore, our winter snow But they still deserve safe road contions and ice control capability is being kept and cost efficiency," Grubba said.

although our revenues have declined. "But every dollar of winter operating costs that can be saved will be a dollar for spring, summer and fall road work such as pothole patching - that otherwise would not be available."

Grubba added that snow and ice control is paid for by motorists, through the 11-cents-per-gallon state-collected tax on gasoline at the pump and registration fees.

"People are contributing less for road services because they're driving "

Ice still may be thin, State Police warn

With winter just taking hold around ting out these unsafe spots generally would be on rivers or streams or over the state, Michigan State Police Director Colonel Gerald L. Hough reminded outdoor enthusiasts about the dangers of thin ice on outdoor water areas.

Hough said Michigan water accidents statistics in the past have shown nonboating accidents each year include some deaths caused by falls through the water.

Because the ice may look stronger than it really is, Hough suggested ice thickness should be checked for safety spring areas of ponds and at the inlet and outlet locations on lakes.

To bear the weight of individuals or small groups of persons safely, outdoor ice on lakes, ponds, rivers and streams should be from two to four inches thick. For heavier weights, such as snowmobiles, thickness should range from five inches and up for protection purposes.

Realtor predicts improvement in residential market

Gradually improving home buying and selling conditions paralleling a rise in the automotive market has been predicted by the state's largest Realtor board.

Lloyd Mason, 1982 president of the 3,700-member Western Wayne Oakland County Board of Realtors (WWOCBR), sald that next year:

• Interest rates for conventional home mortgages will continue to edge down through the winter to a level of 14 to 15 percent.

• Spurred by new incentives for savers and added investment capital, an ample supply of mortgage funds will be available.

• Use of creative financing techniques, such as land contracts and mortgage assumptions, will remain a dominant force in the market.

• Existing home prices, which have remained relatively stable recently, will increase at a pace equal to or slightly above inflation as home sales improve.

• Metropolitan area home sales will recover to 1980 levels next year in climbing toward a coming housing boom.

"While the housing market has not been a complete disaster this year, it came as close as we ever hope to see," Mason said. "Both buyers and sellers have been stymied by extremely high interest rates, high unemployment, high property taxes and uncertainty about the economic future."

He said sales in WWOCBR's 1,600 square mile territory, covering parts of Detroit and Wayne, Oakland and Livingston counties, suffered a 20 percent drop in 1981. The decline, adding up to 40 percent over the past two years, came in the face of a 12 percent growth in new listings of homes on the market.

The average year-to-date home price — $$8,188 — is up less than three percent from 1980 and has grown less than 10 percent over the past two years.

Mason said WWOCBR member sales of about 10,000 homes this year was only possible through use of creative financing measures. Land contracts have aided 45 percent of sales and mortgage assumptions another 28 percent. Conventional mortgages will end the year at about 16 percent.

Land contracts and mortgage assumptions began coming into increased use in 1979 when they combined for 25 percent of sales, most in the latter months. The use grew to 50 percent in 1980 as conventional rates soared to record highs. "...buyers this year will have to be 'opportunistic' and make their purchase when interest rates are going down but before home prices start to rise."

> - Lloyd Mason, 1982 president, Western Wayne Oakland County Board of Realtors

"It is really a question of beloing a buyer qualify," Mason said. "While prices reflect current value, the lower rates, made possible by such creative financing is well below that for conventional mortages.

"It may mean a typical monthly payment can be lowered by up to $200." While predicting gradual reduction in mortgage interest rates, he warned that some economists feel they will go back up due to competition for available funds as new buyers emerge and others with higher rates seek refinancing. He noted that each percentage change translates to about $40 in monthly paments on a $50,000 home

Mason said that buyers this year will have to be "opportunistic" and make their purchase when interest rates are going down but before home prices

start to rise

"Buyers who misjudge conditions or wait too long for further drops in interest rates may remain in an affordability time warp," he said.

Mason said there was still a very strong potential local market for home sides and cited a rush of sales in March and April when mortgage rates took a short-term dip to lower levels.

Pointing to national existing home sales, which experienced a 14 percent drop to about 2.4 million units this year, he said Realtors hold expectations for a recovery to 2.7 million units in 1982. He also warned that depressed markets were bringing an annual shortfall in new construction from the 2 million units needed each year.

"This points to an eventual shortage which could cause home prices to exceed other growth factors in the years ahead," he said.

Mason said local home prices continue to remain well below prices in most other parts of the nation. The Midwest states, including Michigan, report some 13 percent of home sales below $49,000 compared to half that in the South and only two percent in the wast

He expressed concern that a high budget deficit may bring the Federal government into increased money market competition next year. This, he said, would drive interest rates back up to record highs.

He also said Realtors would fight every step of the way against any Federal moves to reduce homeowner benefits from tax deduction for mortgage interest and property tax payments.

"We see a real danger that Federal budget cutters may seek to chip away at these benefits rather than attempting drastic repeal," he said. "Such action would indicate complete abandonment of a national housing policy that has served well for many years."

"Partners in Michigan Foundation will involved hundreds of citizens from around Michigan who are not necessarily 'prominent,' but who can make substantial civic investment of time and intellect in working to turn around Michigan's worsening economic climate," Caputo said.

Partners in Michigan Foundation currently is assembling a staff and a 50-person board of directors. The group's 1982 budget of $225,000 will be raised and administered through Partners in Michigan Foundation which is registered under the National Heritage Foundation as a public charitable trust.

"In the research phase," Caputo said, "we expect to utilize some existing research available to us as well as commission new work in order to factually identify Michigan's situation on a number of serious issues. We can't begin to develop solutions if we can't agree on what has been causing our problems.

"Using the research as a basis for discussion," he continued, "we will then conduct a series of seminars throughout Michigan with local business people and recognized authorities wrestling with selected issues.

"Analysis of the research with input from the seminars will evolve into a concensus on what changes are needed to make Michigan a desirable place in which to work and live again.

"Partners in Michigan will be the catalyst for enabling Michigan citizens to help themselves," Caputo continued.

"We've been kicking each other around for so long that Michigan is self-destructing. If we can utilize our collective brain power, experience and leadership, we will get Michigan back on the road to a better future for everybody, and for our children."

Why one year at MoTech is worth two

In just one year at MoTech Automotive Education Center, you get 50 weeks of top-notch auto mechanics training. Work experience required for NIASE (National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence) certification.

MoTech's training program is taught by service experts. At the only school directed by an auto company, The New Chrysler Corporation.

As a MoTech student, you get:

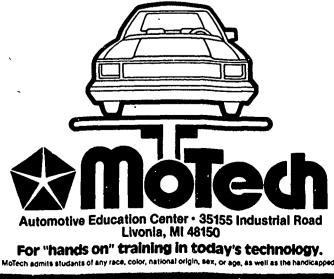

Less lecture time, more "hands-on" training in the latest automotive technology. • Job placement assistance and free update training after graduation.

Credits that apply toward industrial education or indus-trial technology degrees at some college • Financial assistance for those qualified, and part-time work placement during training. MoTech also offers a 26-week course in auto body repair. Enroll now! Classes in both programs start soon.

Polish takeover stirs bitter memories

By JEAN DAY

"I crued for four days when I heard themews," admits Krystyna Dziewił 26 site mealls her reaction to the invocatum of martial law in Poland.

"Then," she says, "I thought of the people around me and I told myself "this has to stop; it does no good"."

way to Canada with her daughters. We worked for room and board for a farmer in Kingsville who paid our way over," Krys recalls. "I worked in the fields, but it was fun."

Later her mother took a factory job and Krys followed. The older girls worked but were able to send their youngest sister to school.

Krys came to Canada with no knowledge of English. She "picked it up," she says in the accent her customers find appealing.

That's what they're doing right now in Poland — they're taking people to Russia. That's what Russia did to Polish officers in 1944. They never returned.

Krys eventually came to Windsor, met and married her husband Alex, who is American-born but of Polish descent. His mother lived in the United States for a year but returned to Poland.

"She was too old," Krys explains, "and all her friends were there. It's difficult for older people to leave."

The last communication the Dziewits had from Poland was postmarked December 7, just before martial law (a "state of war") was declared. No comment was made about the political situation, Krys relates, saying she did not expect any news as the letter obviously had been censored and resealeđ.

Last week Krys was preparing food to take to her sister Jolanta's home in Utica, Michigan. The Dziewit family planned to arrive Christmas Eve and to stay for Christmas day.

Her sister Maria has moved to Utica. New York, while the third sister Danita lives in Dearborn.

"We're a close family - Polish people are," usually outgoing Krys observes, saying she does not wish to "think of the past" any more; it still is too disturbing, especially when history seems to be repeating.

Contibutions accepted for Polish relief fund

Acting on reports following an inspec-tion visit to Warsaw by its chief of Brennan said the Red Cross will not be able to accept supplies such as food and clothing except for specific bulk items from manufacturers willing to undertake the cost of shipment.

More than $1,700 has been received in the Detroit-area chapter's local fund campaign for transmission to the League and Poland.

Olaf Stroh, chief of the League's Warsaw operations reported the Polish Red Cross has "developed good cooperation with church organizations at all levels" in the country. A League delegation is being established along with an International Committee of the Red Cross delegation in Warsaw.

The League, an arm of the International Red Cross based in Geneva, Switzerland, reports that 15 national Red Cross societies around the world already have responded to its worldwide appeal made December 16.

The national headquarters of the American Red Corss has made an initial contribution of $150,000 to the Polish Emergency Relief Fund.

Contributions are accepted locally through the Southeastern Michigan Chapter, Executive Office, P.O. Box 351, Detroit, Michigan 48232. Checks should be made payable to "The American Red Cross" and earmarked for "Polish Emergency Relief."

Christmas mail brings wishes from former residents

By JEAN DAY

One of the joys of the Christmas season is keeping in touch. At least once a year, most of us catch up on who has moved, married or had an addition to the family through sentences written on the printed Christmas greeting card

We at The Record always are pleased that Yule mail brings news of former staffers. Northville resident Marge Ercoli, who was the Monday and Friday voice on our swilchboard until this fall, writes from the family's new location in Cape Elizabeth, Maine, that they are building a home on a lot overlooking the ocean. Her husband Bob is customer marketing manager for Fairchild Semiconductor in South Portland.

Marge notes "it's a small world" as she relays the in-

Q. I Feel I'm a dental cripple because I've inherited bad teeth!

A. First of all "bad teeth" aren't really inherited. Your genes may determine the size and shape of your jaw bone or the position of the teeth in the arch, but you must take the responsibility for your own dental health. No one needs to have such insurmountable problems that they feel dental-ly "crippled." You can take control of your dental health and maintain it by keeping a proper diet, good oral hygiene, and regular dental check-ups. 24101 Novi Road, Novi 348-3100

The Ercoli family will be back in Michigan for a Christmas visit with hor parameter in King's Mill They also a Christmas visit with her parents in King's Mill. They also want to check on the ducks as a story in the Portland Press Herald reported they would "get their waddling papers" at the plant's closing.

Sally Burke, a Northville resident and Record school and police reporter who retired when she became the mother of Jeremy, sends greetings from Lansing. Her husband Frank transferred there to become a stockbroker.

Jeremy, she says, is in kindergarten while little brother Andy is in nursery school. She is busy with bridge, needlework and the presidency of the Jaycee Auxiliary.

From Sarasota, Florida, former Record sports editor Ken Kovacs writes that "it sure doesn't seem like Christmas down here. It was 68 degrees today." Kovacs who "went dai-ly" last spring with the Sarasota Herald-Tribune in Sarasota adds that things are going well there.

A staffer from an earlier period, Eleanor Breitmeyer, society writer for The Detroit News since leaving The Record in 1952, says Merry Christmas. She wrote for The Record while she attended high school here, returning summers and weekends during her years at University of Michigan. She and her husband Armand Gebert, also a News reporter, vacationed in Hawaii and California last month.

We're hearing too from former residents who were active in our community. Enclosed in the greeting from Dr. and Mrs. John Brown, now of New Mexico, is a sprig of mistletoe they had cut from the banks of the Rio Grande. "Hope you'll put it over your door so we'll be included in your holiday celebration," asks Pat Brown. She adds that all's well for them in Las Cruces.

Date's set for Florida reunion

Ed Barnes, former Northville resident who managed the Kroger store when it was located in the building now occupied by Arbor Drugs, writes from Florida that the annual reunion for retired and vacationing Northville residents held each winter in Florida will be February 19.

He notes it is being held in the same place as last year. the Crown House Restaurant, U.S. 301 at DeSoto Road between Bradenton and Sarasota (a mile and a half south of the airport). Time's noon and reservations should be made with Barnes at 324 Sally Lee Drive, Ellenton, Florida, 33532.

The reunion is a popular event and gathers many former residents each year, as well as those with winter homes in Florida.

To start things off, Mustang gymmastic coach Jack Townsley christesly knew something about his team no one else did at such an early stage in the season.

The gymnasts had passed on 8-2 record in 1980 for the first winning season in many years and began the 1981 season with two comparing victories over Southfield Lathrup, 94-59, and Farmington, 98-78

By March, the team posted another og snack of 7-4 and won the firstever Western Six Conference Little. ****

Coaches always moan allout how hard it is to win on the road. Northwille boys' cage coach Tim Lates has made some interesting remarks in this area. The 1989-81 learn had wan two cakers on the road against Novi (SR-SI) and Walled Lake Western (32-44) to raise its record to 7-1 overail and 3-0 m the W-Six circuit

"I don't care if we win by 29 points or by one, it's just great to win on the road." Lotes said.

For everyone who enjoys winter activities, the Automobile Club of Michigan has a few tips to help avoid injuries.

Those who get a head start on condi-tioning their bodies will be able to enjoy a full season of winter fun, said Walter Zeiler, Auto Club's MemberLife manager.

"Cross country and downshill skiing and other winter sports activities require sports enthusiasts to get in shape before beginning these strennous activities," he explained.

"Conditioning the muscles used in a particular sport is the best way to avoid injuries and work toward peak performance," Zeiler continued.

"Amateurs should not expect overnight results since world-class skiers often put in 15 years of work before qualifying for Ohympic teams."

Cross country skiing primarily is an endurance sport which requires strength and stamina. It involves beavy use of the arms and shoulders and the muscles which control the waist, abdomen, buttacks, calves and ankles. Jogging is a good conditioner for this sport_

Downshill skiing requires power, balance and agility. It places the greatest stress on the waist, abdomen and thighs.
