Child-care dilemma: a new generation gap

This is the first in a three-part series focusing on child-care options in the Northville and Novi areas and the ongoing debate over Who's Minding the Children?

By MICHELE M. FECHT

For a generation raised by full-time mothers, bringing up baby has a new twist.

While the advent of disposable diapers and Velcro strapped toddler tennies has eased some of the daily rigors of child-care, today's parents are finding such convenience hardly begins to compare with their most crucial dilemma — who will mind the children?

With more mothers in the workplace and an unprecedented number of single parents raising children, the need for child-care seems to be growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1984, an estimated 52 percent of women in the United States with children under 6 were working outside the home — approximately double what it was in 1970.

In addition, 70 percent of today's working mothers are employed full-time.

Coupled with the growing number of mothers who divide their time between the workplace and homefront is an increasing demand for preprimary education.

For several years, educators have claimed the child who participates in a preschool program does better academically and socially in later life.

Such observations apparently are making an impression on those raising children in the 1980s.

According to the National Center for Educational Statistics, the number of 3- and 4-year-olds in formal preschool programs increased from 21 percent to 36 percent between 1970 and 1982.

The 1980 Census figures show that 27 percent of the nation's 3-year-olds and 46 percent of 4-year-olds were enrolled in some type of educational preprimary program.

Ghettia Rao, directress at Novi-Northville Montessori Center, attributes the growing number of preschool enrollments to both the increase in the number of working parents and the greater importance placed on preprimary education.

Noting that nurturing the formative years — from 1-6 — is crucial for a child's future development, Rao says parents today are more selective about where they'll place their most precious possession.

In addition, several area child-care operators concede that publicity surrounding complaints of alleged physical and sexual abuse has sensitized parents to such problems.

With the need for quality preschools on the rise, early education programs are cropping up in all shapes and sizes. The former church-operated preschool program prevalent 20 years ago, now competes with operations such as Kinder-Care (the largest child-care franchise in the country with more than 900 centers nationwide) and Montessori schools (with some 50 centers in the metropolitan Detroit area alone).

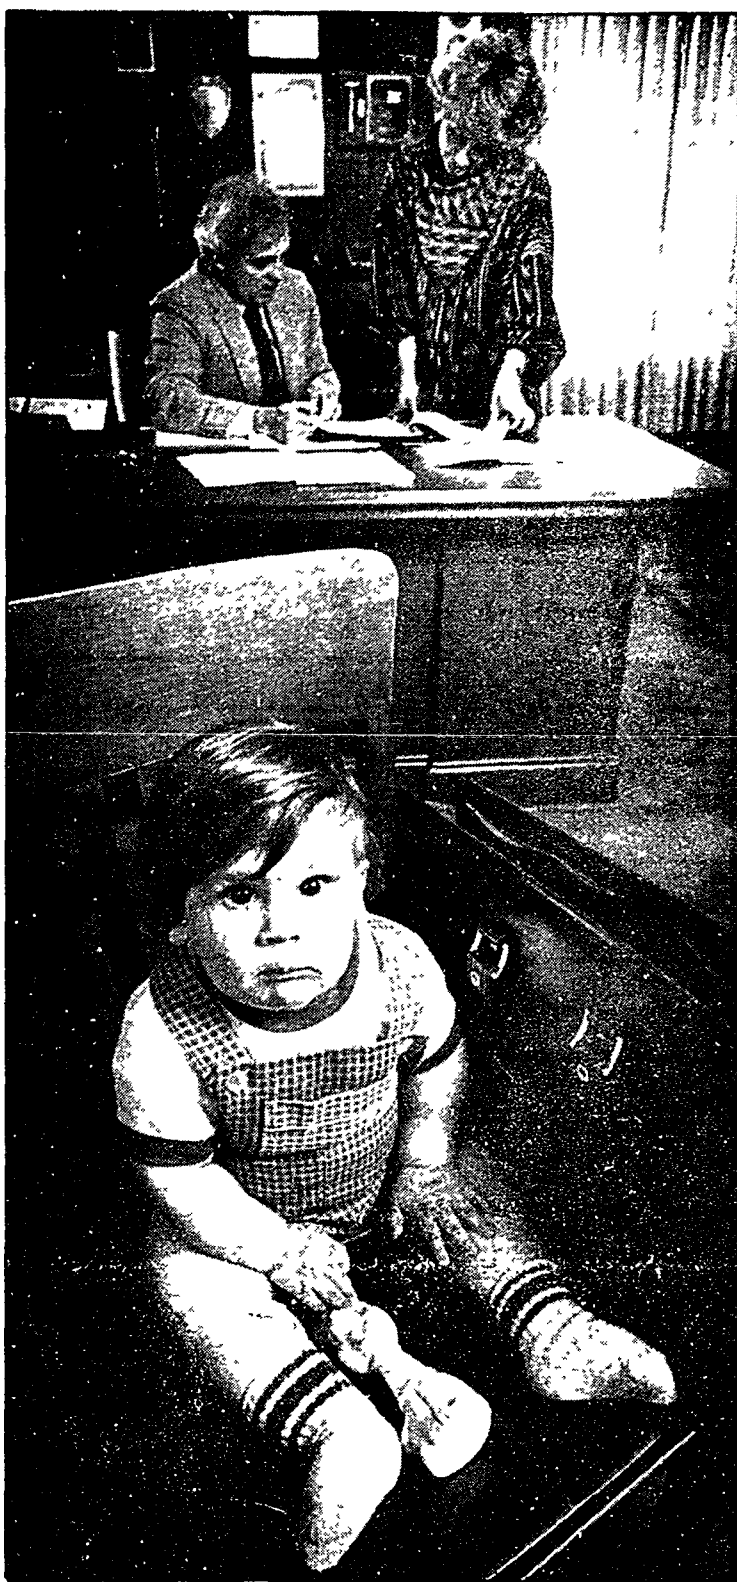

In addition, independent child-care operators are finding themselves faced with a new competitor — the public schools.

More than 100 of Michigan's nearly 600 school districts offer some form of preschool with more considering taking the child-care plunge during the next school year.

Less than five months after shutting down two facilities last November, Northville Public School District announced its plans to occupy one of the vacated buildings with a child-care program.

While Northville's program was implemented in part as an alternative to maintaining an empty building, administrators also claimed the district

Township near end of search for new manager

By KEVIN WILSON

The field of applicants to become Northville Township manager has narrowed to three and the search committee has selected one of them as the preferred candidate, committee chairman Richard Henningsen said Tuesday morning.

Henningsen said he has asked the top-rated candidate to appear for an interview before the township board of trustees at its next regularly-scheduled meeting June 13.

The invitation does not constitute a job offer, since only the township board can make the offer. The search committee has operated behind closed doors and is exempt from provisions of the state's Open Meetings Act since it has only advisory powers and no authority to make a final decision.

The interview will be conducted in open session of the board, said supervisor Susan J. Heintz.

Henningsen declined to reveal the name of the committee's selection, saying he would prefer to wait for the candidate to confirm his appearance for an interview.

"To avoid embarrassment in the event the individual chooses not to express an interest in the position, I'll be keeping the name a secret for now," he said. "I think it looks pretty good to go public with it in the near future."

The search committee, Henningsen noted, completed interviews with six candidates Saturday before narrowing the field to three.

Lucas names Heintz to SEMTA board seat

By KEVIN WILSON

Northville Township Supervisor Susan J. Heintz has been nominated to fill a vacancy on the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) board of governors.

Wayne County Executive William Lucas chose Heintz as a county representative to the board. The nomination was forwarded to the county board of commissioners May 17 for its approval.

The county board has 30 days in which to act, either approving or rejecting the appointment. Rejection of Heintz's appointment would require a two-thirds vote of the board (10 of the 15 commissioners). If it does not act, the appointment takes effect.

The first step in the board of commissioners approval process was scheduled this morning at 9:30 a.m., when Heintz was slated to appear before the administration and rules committee.

Heintz said she was "honored" that Lucas selected her for the appointment. "I accepted because Bill Lucas asked me," Heintz said. "I wouldn't have done it for anyone else."

Heintz is active in the Republican party and her appointment may be the first openly partisan selection by the county executive, who switched from the Democratic to the Republican party May 3. Regarding the approval process through the Democratic county board (local commissioner Mary Dumas is the sole Republican), Heintz said: "It's going to be an interesting appointment."

She said Lucas told her he was seeking a person with experience in administration and in finance. Heintz has a master's degree in public administration and political science and experience at many levels of government.

A preceding appointment to the SEMTA board recently approved was that of

Jef Farland may resign

By B.J. MARTIN

After just over a year and a half as director of the Northville Community Recreation Department, John E. (Jef) Farland appears about to pack his bags.

The Southfield City Council is to decide next Tuesday whether to accept a recommendation from that city's recreation director that Farland be hired as deputy director of recreation for the City of Southfield.

Farland, a Southfield native who began his recreation career in that city, has already negotiated his prospective contract. Obstacles to his hiring are unlikely, as he has many friends and contacts among Southfield officials.

Should the City of Southfield hire him, Farland said, he will submit his letter of resignation to the Northville Recreation Commission Wednesday, May 29.

"I've made several goals for myself as a professional in the recreational field and one of them was to work with a

Parade kicks-off Memorial Day events

Veterans of both World War I and World War II will be riding and marching in the Northville Memorial Day parade along Main Street at 10 a.m. Monday to pay annual tribute to those who gave their lives in service to their country.

This year members of Northville Post 4012, Veterans of Foreign Wars, are marking the 40th anniversary of the founding of the post — on the 40th year since the end of World War II.

1985 is a milestone year for many veterans as World War II ended in Europe on May 8, 1945, with the surrender of Germany, and in the Pacific on August 14, 1945, as Japan agreed to surrender terms.

Grand Marshal of the parade will be the Reverend Lloyd G. Brasure who will be accompanied by his wife Doris. Mr. Brasure served as a military chaplain in European Theater during World War II.

be 35th District Judge John MacDonald, Northville Township supervisor Susan Heintz, trustee Donald Williams, treasurer Richard Henningsen and clerk Georgina Goss.

Mayor Paul Vernon and possibly two council members also will participate.

Other marchers will be representatives of local Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops, the Northville High School marching band, members of the Northville Knights Templar and a U.S. Army Band, Sandra Myers, secretary of the parade committee for Northville American Legion Post 147, announced this week.

During the parade march stops will be made at Oakwood Cemetery on Cady Street and at the bridge at the entrance to Rural Hill Cemetery. A wreath will be laid in memory of local veterans at Oakwood while one will be thrown into the stream at the bridge in memory of those who died at sea.

Another will be placed at the veterans' plot in Rural Hill Cemetery where ceremonies will honor the servicemen who gave their lives in our country's conflicts. Each serviceman's grave will be decorated with a small American flag.

The parade will form outside the back parking lot of Northville Downs, going north to Main Street and continuing west to Wing, turning south to Oakwood Cemetery on Cady and then continuing on First into Rural Hill.

The return route will be along Rogers to the M.A.G.S. parking lot where it will disband.

Marchers and watchers will have free ice cream treats afterward at Casterline Funeral Home as Ray J. Casterline II continues a longstanding tradition.

This year Lloyd H. Green American Legion Post 147 is in charge of parade arrangements and will host a luncheon for participants at the post home at 100 West Dunlap afterward. In an arrangement of many years, the Legion and V.F.W. alternate responsibility for the event.

U.S. Army General James Pelton will be the key speaker in ceremonies at Rural Hill. The parade committee reports it also is making a special effort to have World War I veterans of the area participate in this year's parade.

While the Northville American Legion Post was formed 10 months after the armistice ending World War I had been signed, it wasn't until January 30, 1945, that the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post was formed here just before the end of World War II.

Motels, office uses considered in study of Haggerty Road

Possible uses for Haggerty Road frontage in Northville Township include a budget motel and business office structures, according to a study done for the planning commission.

The study was launched in response to several requests for rezoning along the Haggerty Road corridor, reflecting a rising increase in development near the I-275 freeway.

Commissioners discussed the findings at a study session May 14. The study by planning consultants Vilcan-Leman Associates suggested that the most likely locations for more intensive land uses were at Six Mile and at Eight Mile roads. Less intensive office uses and multiple family housing were suggested as possibilities for the area north and south of Seven Mile Road.

Since there is no exit from I-275 at Five Mile, the study suggested that the area south of Six Mile be used primarily for housing — both single and multiple-family.

Specific recommendations for possible changes in the township master plan and zoning ordinance will be presented at the commission's regular monthly meeting May 28.

The portion of the study presented last week was primarily an evaluation of the market for motel/hotel space and offices in the I-275 corridor.

A major factor in the location of such developments, consultant Claude Coates told commissioners, is visibility from the freeway. The only undeveloped township areas offering any sort of freeway visibility are at Eight Mile (near the new Meijer store under construction) and at the corner of Six Mile and Haggerty.

Those sites were singled out for potential development with a budget motel (examples cited were Red Roof Inns and Quality Inns) or large office structures housing a "signature" tenant — that is, a tenant who uses a majority of the space in the building and has its corporate name prominently attached to it. Also mentioned were "highway dependent uses such as gas stations and fast food restaurants."

The township zoning map and master plan presently show commercial at the Eight Mile corner and at Five Mile, with a small segment at Six Mile where there is a service station. Office zoning extends north from Seven Mile along the west side of Haggerty. All other areas are currently zoned for single family housing.

In addition to expanding the office and, possibly, the commercial zoning along Haggerty, the study findings suggest more multiple-family residential uses as a transition between the commercial and office uses and the adjacent cent single family subdivisions.

The study showed 1,024 hotel/motel rooms in Canton, Plymouth, Novi, Farmington Hills and Livonia will be supplemented by 552 more already under construction. Another 206 may be constructed. If all rooms planned or proposed are built, there would be 1,422-1,522 rooms in the area. The consultants believe the market could support a bit more.

The report suggests that the Eight Mile area could support a "traditional budget property" or "upscale budgets." At Six Mile, proximity to meeting facilities at Livonia's Holiday Inn and Schoolcraft College could support a budget motel, the report states.

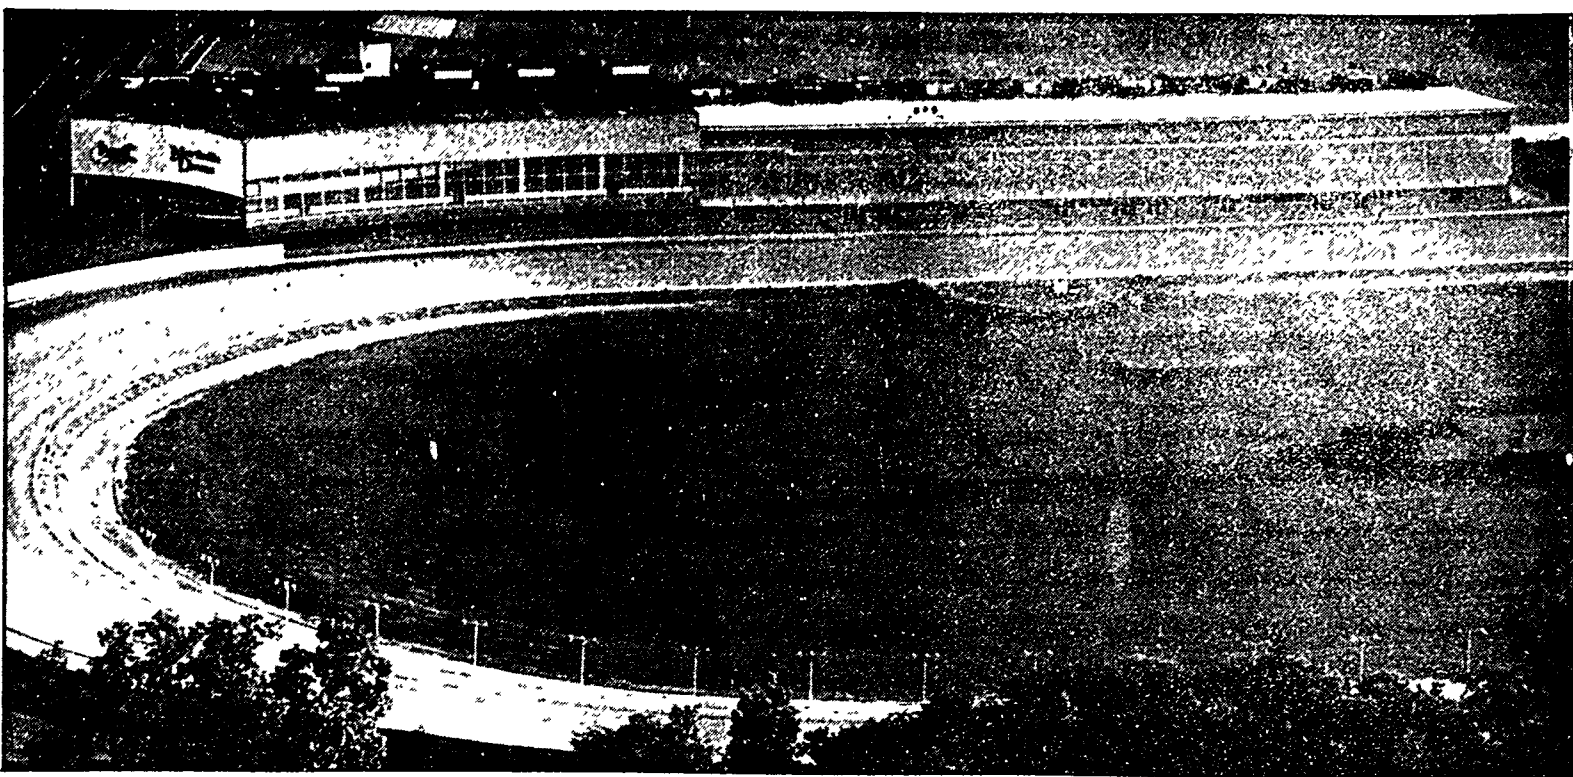

Depending on the type of development in the Laurel Park office complex at Six Mile in Livonia, "there may also be a longer range potential for an additional full service hotel," the report states.

The township's Haggerty Road frontage would likely prove competitive with office areas in Farmington Hills and Southfield, particularly as property becomes more scarce and thus expensive in those communities, the consultants found.

The primary drawback facing Northville Township in attempting to attract office development is a lack of sufficiently upscale housing stock for the executives and professionals expected to work in the offices, the report states. It notes that the area nearby Southfield and Farmington Hills (Bloomfield and West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham) had 15,000 owner-occupied homes valued at $100,000 or more in 1980.

Northville and Plymouth Townships combined had only 2,600 homes, "an amount almost half the number of similarly-valued homes in Farmington Hills alone," according to the report. "While the supply of this higher-value housing is on the increase in western Livonia and in Northville and Plymouth Townships, it is years away from approaching the numbers further north."

Still, locational advantages such as access to the Detroit CBD along I-96 (versus the Lodge freeway), access to Ann Arbor and its university and high technology development and greater proximity to Metropolitan Airport provide "sufficient reason to provide additional office-planned areas in Northville Township; but with the understanding that the Haggerty Road corridor in Northville Township is unlikely to competitively command the same attention as Twelve Mile Road in Farmington Hills or the Northwestern Highway and Telegraph Road areas in Southfield and Birmingham/Bloomfield for many years."

Northville Downs wants lower taxes

By KEVIN WILSON

In a move with the potential for a damaging impact on the city and school tax revenues, Northville Downs is protesting the 1985 state equalized value placed on its property for tax purposes.

If successful in appeal to the Michigan Tax Tribunal, the Downs could reduce its tax bill by nearly $200,000 and result in the city collecting less money for each mill of property tax levied in 1985 than was yielded for each mill in 1984.

In effect, the overall valuation of property in the city could be reduced between $1.5 million and $3 million, with the impact falling most heavily on the school district's revenues.

The lower figure is based on city budget projections and the higher one on what the Downs is actually seeking. City manager Steven Walters said the numbers are "just guesses, since it's really impossible to know exactly what the Downs will ask for and what the tax tribunal might grant them."

Walters said the city believes the property valuations assigned at the Downs are correct, but does not know what evidence might be presented in the protest. Arbitrary figures were inserted into the budget so the city would not be caught short if the appeal is successful, he said.

"The reason this came up is that research on different racetracks found that Northville Downs was valued practically the same as DRC in Livonia," said Margaret Zayti, Downs manager.

The research was done by E. Martin Gulewitz, Inc., a property tax consultant agency based in Livonia. William Wiley, a partner in the firm, said the agency is "always in search of new business" and approached the Downs when it found the apparent inconsistency cy in the property valuations of the two race tracks.

Zayti said property owned by the Driving Club has a state equalized valuation of $4.077 million and property owned by the Downs itself has an SEV just under $1 million. The total for all the property involved falls just short of $5 million, implying a market cash value of $10 million.

Wiley said DRC has an SEV just over $5 million.

"Consider that DRC has 230 acres and is a one-mile track while Northville Downs has less than 100 acres and a one-half mile track," Wiley said. Zayti said she did not understand how the Wayne County assessors who evaluated both properties could derive similar values for them.

Wiley said the appeal to the tax tribunal will likely seek an SEV "say in the neighborhood of $2 million."

City manager Steven Walters told city council during budget hearings that the Downs had filed an appeal through the board of review but was not very specific regarding what level it thought appropriate.

"It was pretty evident they were there just because they had to before they could go to the tax tribunal," Walters said.

He noted that DRC and the Downs are in a larger city with more available vacant land while the Downs is dominant in a fully-developed area. Establishing a market price for DRC should be easier than for the Downs, since the Livonia track was recently sold.

Walters suggested that the difference in valuations may be a case of DRC being underassessed rather than the Downs being overassessed.

Both Zayti and Wiley said their intent is "definitely" to file the appeal with the state tax tribunal. Wiley noted that there is no docket number yet assigned to the appeal, since he has been devoting efforts since the March board of review session to compiling supporting evidence for submission to the tax tribunal prior to the June 30 deadline.

The Prom: 'One More Night'

Northville's senior prom last Friday night was "One More Night" — a very special one — as graduating seniors of the Class of '85 traveled to the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn to dine and dance and have fun. The group Jasmine played the prom theme, based on Phil Collins' hit song, and much more, as girls in long skirts and guys in tuxes and tails danced in the spacious ballroom.

Some 434 students traveled to Dearborn for the event — some in luxury class with limousine service.

Corsages were lifted from their boxes and attached to wrists or pinned on the shoulder of a formal. Others carried nosegays. Boutonnieres were pinned to lapels as the evening began.

There was much primping, adjusting of formal ascots, trying out dancin' steps, being seen in newest styles, including "punk" looks, and just watching everyone else.

This week it all became one of the happy memories of graduation 1985 to be packed away and treasured with the prom book memento.

NASA agreement approved

By MICHELE M. FECHT

Northville Board of Education Monday ratified a tentative three-year contract agreement with the Northville Association of School Administrators securing its key building leadership during the district's reorganization.

The contract covers the period from July 1, 1985, to June 30, 1988.

A percentage increase of 6.5 percent was approved for both the 1985-86 and 1986-87 school years. The board also approved an additional one percent increase on January 1, 1986, and January 1, 1987, for the assistant middle school principal and two assistant senior high school principals.

During the third year of the contract, salary schedules will increase percentage-wise in direct proportion to the increased State Equalized Valuation (SEV) of the school district—identical to the salary schedule ratified by other bargaining units including the Northville Education Association.

With the revenue based salary formula, the district guarantees at least a four percent minimum and seven percent maximum in salary increase regardless of the increase in the district's SEV.

The Headlee factor also is taken into account and any differential that may occur as a result of Headlee will be shared by both parties.

In recommending the board ratify the agreement, Superintendent George

'... by any scale you care to use, the Northville building administrators' salary schedule is exceedingly low.'

— George Bell,
Northville Schools' Superintendent

Bell said the 6.5 percent increase for the first two years of the contract was proposed as a means of "making up inequities in the salary schedules."

He told board members that "by any scale you care to use, the Northville building administrators' salary schedule is exceedingly low."

He said in relation to the 17 school districts with which Northville has traditionally compared itself, building administrator salary schedules are "at or near the bottom in every category from middle school assistant principal through senior high school principal."

To illustrate the salary inequity, Bell noted that when Ronald Van Horn was assigned as acting principal of Amer-man following the retirement of Bill Craft, the district analyzed the salary differential between his position as a classroom teacher and the first step of the principal's salary scale.

"If we had moved him to the per diem rate of the principal's schedule, he would have taken a reduction in pay in order to be principal of Amerman School," Bell said.

The superintendent also said he recommended the additional one percent salary increase for assistant principals to close the gap between the secondary and head posts.

Bell noted the salary "differential between the assistant principals and the principal is too wide to reflect the actual responsibilities of the job."

"We expect assistant principals at both the middle and senior high school to evaluate teachers and act in an administrative capacity in the operation of the building," the superintendent said.

"In both cases, assistant principals are receiving less on a daily basis than the teachers they supervise."

Bell told the board the proposed salary schedule was adjusted in accordance with the demands of the job.

Highlighting the role building administrators played in the district's reorganization this past year, Bell said the next three years will put even greater demands on the district's building leadership.

Merl and Peg Hoag were installing officers at Sunday's ceremonies.

Township hires second inspector

Those seeking indications of the much-trumpeted building boom need look no farther than Northville Township hall, where the board of trustees recently approved the addition of a second building inspector to the ranks of employees.

Building official Troy Milligan told the board May 9 that his department had processed 250 building permits in a single day that week (primarily for the Cedar Lake Apartments complex getting under way on Six Mile between the railroad track and Lakes of Northville subdivision). Permit income for the day exceeded $25,000.

While the township has operated for the past five years with only Milligan on the regular payroll, it has paid other electrical or plumbing inspectors on a contractual basis.

Milligan recommended hiring Bill James as a second inspector, to be paid $345 per week. At James' rates, this works out to about 23 hours per week, Milligan said.

James filled in for Milligan during an extended sick leave for heart bypass surgery two years ago and is familiar with township procedures, Milligan said.

The 23 hours per week "will probably be sufficient for now. However, if I see a need to increase these hours, I may be back to request additional funds in the future," Milligan told trustees.

The pay rate works out to $17,940 a year, he noted, and with the benefits package the cost to the township of hiring the second inspector is just over $24,000 a year. Increased building fee income will more than pay for the added cost, Milligan said.

City garage sale draws crowds ...

Saturday dawned bright for the annual City Garage Sale being held this year in the parking lot behind the M.A.G.S. building with "big" merchandise even including a car and boat. However, mid-day showers sent booth entrepreneurs Scott and Susan McElvoy, left, under cover. Kristen, above, had an overall view of the proceedings from a vantage point on shoulders of her dad, Pete Winter.

Schoolcraft honors four local staffers

Four Northville residents were among eight outstanding employees recognized by Schoolcraft College at the annual staff recognition luncheon May 3.

President Richard McDowell presented Presidential Recognition Awards to John Angell, skilled maintenance; Charles Castillo, speech professor; Larry Ordowski, associate dean for Liberal Arts; Butch Raby, comptroller, all of Northville.

Other honorees were Jean Pike, Livonia, director of Career Planning and Placement; Maud Piggot, Canton, Volunteer Coordinator-RSVP Program; Michael Ragan, Westland, general maintenance; and Donna Sudik, Plymouth, assistant coordinator-learning assistance center.

Two awards recognized special teamwork projects. One team award was given to the Culinary Arts and Food Service personnel for their outstanding contribution in promoting Schoolcraft College. The other teamwork award was presented to the members of the Mutual Gains Bargaining Teams.

This year 65 employees also received pins recognizing years of service at the college.

Dr. McDowell stated, "It is a pleasure to single out these individuals for their significant contributions during the past year. Each year I look forward to recognizing the outstanding Schoolcraft College employees."

At the recognition luncheon Dr. McDowell presented Board of Trustees resolutions to seven faculty members who will retire this year.

The retirees include speech professor Castillo and M.S. Sanborn, business coordinator/professor, both of Northville.

Others are Robert Jones of Plymouth, music professor; Ray Naslund of Plymouth, accounting professor; Ruth McCormack of Dearborn Heights, nursing professor; David Perkins of Ann Arbor, English professor; Kenneth Russell of Lincoln Park, climate systems associate professor.

Jane Lurain of Farmington Hills, secretary-community services, also was honored since she will be retiring from the college September 1, prior to the next recognition ceremony.

Treasurer eyes late fees on school taxes

Northville Township is considering methods of increasing its income from summer school tax collections without adding to the taxpayer's bill.

Treasurer Richard Henningsen told the township board of trustees May 9 that he would like to retain 50 percent of the delinquency penalty attached when taxpayers file their summer tax payments after the mid-September due date.

The township conducts summer school tax collections for both the Northville and Plymouth school districts. Unlike many other communities, the township does not levy a charge against the school district for the service.

It does collect a one percent administration fee from taxpayers. The one percent applies to the total tax bill while the township only retains 3.7 mills, or less than one-tenth of the total tax collected.

When it began collecting summer taxes for the school districts last year, Henningsen noted that the split tax billing reduced the township's opportunity to earn interest on the tax payments before disbursing the money to the schools, cutting into the "miscellaneous revenue" portion of the township budget.

The one percent administration fee is intended to cover the cost of collecting taxes for the county, community college, park authority and school districts.

Collection of summer school taxes added another duty to the township treasurer's office, Henningsen noted. Winter tax payments filed after the due date are collected by the county, but the township must process the late payments on summer bills.

Asked by supervisor Susan Heintz if he meant to imply the one percent administration fee was insufficient to cover the costs of the collection, Henningsen said he did not.

"If you look at these other communities," he said, referring to a information sheet listing charges to schools by other governments, "you'll see almost all of them getting substantially more than we are for providing summer tax collection."

He noted that Redford Township collects both a one percent administration fee from the taxpayer and $1 per parcel from the school district.

Other communities not levying an administration fee but charging their local school districts for collection include the City of Plymouth ($2.85 per parcel), Plymouth Township ($2.85 per parcel plus 15 cents per parcel in the first year collected), Superior Township ($2.50 per parcel), Salem Township ($4 per parcel this year, rising to $5 in 1986 and $6 in 1987), City of Northville ($1.25 per parcel), and Oakland Township near Rochester Hills ($3.07 per parcel).

The City of Westland charges a 0.5 percent collection fee but no per parcel charge to the district. Novi charges no administration fee or per parcel charge. Novi is unusual in that it has been collecting summer school taxes since 1976 while most communities took on the duties only in the past year or two.

Henningsen said he did not want to charge the school districts a fee per parcel since the districts customarily tack the fee on the tax bill.

"I don't want to put a parcel fee on there since I'm already taking the one percent," he told the board.

Henningsen noted that in comparing the charges levied by other communities, there is a difference between cities and townships. Cities customarily issue a summer tax bill for their own property taxes, offering the potential for reduced cost by combining the city and school taxes on one bill or sending separate bills in the same envelope.

Townships do not ordinarily collect any taxes in the summer unless the local school district requests them. Issuing summer tax bills essentially doubles the township's postage and handling costs while requiring preparation of a second tax roll each year.

Heintz rejected Henningsen's suggestion, recommending that he gather more supporting evidence to justify the retention of half the late payment penalty.

Pressure is on again to join sewer improvement plan

By KEVIN WILSON

State and Wayne County officials are pounding the drum once more to gather local government support for a massive sewer expansion project to serve western Wayne and Oakland county communities.

Two previous incarnations of the project (dubbed Supersewer and Son of Supersewer) failed when rejected by the state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The current proposal is substantially similar to the one EPA officials rejected last year, according to Richard Hinshon, a DNR employee temporarily assigned to the Wayne County Office of Public Services in an effort to put together an approvable system.

"The bulk of the work done has been answering the EPA's questions," Hinshon said. The EPA cited a continued overflow allowance into the Rouge and doubts about the ability of Detroit's wastewater treatment plant to handle additional flows as primary concerns.

The rejection meant the program is no longer eligible for 75 percent federal grant funding. If any federal funding is available, it would be at the 55 percent level.

That and other detail changes in the program make for substantial increases in local cost projections, raising questions about whether local government can finance the program.

Hinshon has put together a "road show" about the new plan, which he recently took to Wixom and will present June 13 for Northville Township board members. The plan was discussed briefly by Northville City Council May 13, with members shocked to find that community had been added back into the plan.

Northville was eliminated late in the process that resulted in Son of Supersewer, the county having determined that the city did not need any additional sewer capacity.

"Somebody just blew it last time," Hinshon said. "Northville does need some additional capacity. It's a relatively small amount, but it works out to be fairly costly under the propos-

'Until we have some kind of approved plan, it's worthless to argue over paying for it.'

— Richard Hinshon

ed cost allocation (see related story)."

As proposed, the new plan asks the 16 communities, including the city and township of Northville and the City of Novi, to endorse the plan in principle, leaving cost allocations to be determined later.

Approval of the proposal would not commit the communities to payments to construct it. Hinshon said the effort to put together a plan regardless of the financing methods has been undertaken on his recommendation.

"My contention is that we have to find some method to getting the project state- and federally approved, even if we do not have a financing plan," he said. "There's some disagreement with that, but the DNR and EPA at this point have not approved any plan to address the pollution problems in the Rouge. Until we have some kind of approved plan, it's worthless to argue over paying for it."

All communities sending sewage to the Detroit treatment plant recently received a letter from DNR compliance section supervisor Roy E. Schrameck suggesting that development in the area could be curtailed or cut off by restricting approval of new sewer permits as part of a plan to reduce pollution in the Rouge River.

Northville Township Supervisor Susan Heintz, an officer of the Rouge River Watershed Council (RRWC) called the letter "ridiculous," particularly since it was issued without any prior consultation with the RRWC, which is charged with overseeing water quality in the river.

"I can't find anybody except the guy who sent it out who knew anything about it beforehand. Other people in the DNR don't even know what it's about," she said.

Hinshon said the letter likely was prompted by EPA pressure on the DNR to develop an overall plan to control water quality in the entire Rouge basin, not only in the area to be served by the new sewer project.

"That partially stems from the work we've done developing this project," he said. "The EPA knows this effort is under way. They're very fearful that they'll get a project — a large one like this one we're working on — and not have an overview of how it fits into the overall plan for the entire region. So they've put the pressure on the DNR to generate an overall plan."

The focus on the Rouge, he said, is largely because great strides have been made in water quality efforts elsewhere in the state and the Rouge is the last remaining target where massive improvement is needed.

"With the exception of some toxic element situations that are just coming to light, statewide water quality is getting under control," he said. "Most industry has cleaned up its act. Most municipalities are getting there. With the Rouge, you have a long-standing historical problem that people have kind of gotten used to and not done anything about."

Continued failure to devise a plan, agreed to by all the affected communities, to reduce the amount of raw sewage dumped into the Rouge would likely result in sanctions and penalties being imposed by the EPA or DNR, he said.

"What I'm trying to accomplish is to put that plan in place so that if the sanctions come there is some kind of response," he said. "Having an adopted plan is sort of the communities' ace-in-the-hole. If the sanctions come and there is no plan, there could be massive, devastating effects on the whole of southeastern Michigan."

"If there is a plan, then they can start working on putting together a financing plan," Hinshon explained. He suggested DNR sanctions might prompt the state legislature to appropriate seed money for the sewer project, relieving local governments of at least part of the burden.

Hinshon said he does not foresee any near-term construction of the proposed project. "Construction depends on getting the money together and I don't think that will happen real soon," he said.

City back in sewer plan for heavy cost

By KEVIN WILSON

It is more important that suburban communities using the Rouge Valley sewer interceptor system agree to a plan for sewer improvements than it is that they agree to a way to pay for them.

That's the view of Richard Hinshon, a state DNR employee temporarily attached to the Wayne County Office of Public Services, public works division (see related story).

Few public officials will commit to such a plan without a look at the pricetag attached to it, however. So the county is circulating a proposed cost allocation method as a part of the plan.

A committee made up of representatives from 16 affected communities met four times but failed to reach agreement on how to spread the costs among themselves. The county has proposed one "for further discussion and to provide a basis for each community to make decisions about endorsing the proposed project," according to a letter to the communities from James L. Hamilton, acting director of the public works division.

Complicating matters is the combination of North Huron Valley communities (Commerce, Wixom, both Northvilles, Plymouth Township, Canton Township, Novi and Van Buren Township) with Rouge Valley communities (Livonia, Wayne, Westland, Redford Township, Inkster, Garden City, Dearborn Heights and Romulus) in one project.

Last year's program assumed 75 percent funding for the Huron Valley and 55 percent for the Rouge Valley tallied as separate projects. The 75 percent funding was lost when the EPA rejected the 1984 proposal. The new plan attempts to spread the resulting added costs equally. The proposed allocations show the effects of the reduced federal financing available and some other changes, Hinshon explained.

Overall, local costs jump from $32.57 million under the 1984 program to $49.67 million under the new plan. Other changes, including the elimination of Commerce Township from the plan and revised population projections, also change the percentage of the total allocated to each community. Costs are spread in accordance with the capacity required in the system (measured in cubic feet per second of sewage flow) and the percentage of the total flow that represents.

The projections show Northville Township's share reduced from 6.63 percent to 6.33 percent but the associated dollar figure rising from $2.16 million last year to $3.14 million this year.

In the City of Northville, the change is smaller in dollar terms but more dramatic. The city had been eliminated from the 1984 plan because it was determined it already had sufficient capacity. Hinshon said he has found that was an erroneous determination.

"Somewhere along the way, someone crashing numbers picked up the average (sewage) flow for Northville instead of the peak flow," he said. "In the process of reviewing for consistency all the work that had been done for the different communities, I found that Northville does need some additional capacity. They have to buy sufficient capacity to handle the peak flow, not just the average."

The result: Northville's 1984 share of $0 becomes $860,000 under the latest proposal.

The one-year delay has allowed the county to put together the new plan using 1980 census figures instead of those from 1970, primarily affecting Novi, Wixom, Plymouth Township and Northville Township, Hinshon said.

Northville Township is the only one of the four with a reduced capacity demand due to a smaller census projection. The capacity requirement was reduced from 14.2 cubic feet per second (CFS) last year to 12.9 CFS this year.

In Novi, the new census tally increased the capacity requirement from 15.9 CFS in 1984 to 16.5 CFS in the new plan. Combined with the higher local share, that produces a proposed cost allocation of $5.93 million instead of the $4.46 million projected a year ago.

Wixom's capacity requirement went from 8.7 CFS up to 11.7 CFS, raising its share of the system from 7.5 percent to 8.5 percent and increasing dollar figures from $2.44 million up to $4.21

Chamber of commerce adds several members

Several area firms have been welcomed as new members of the Northville Community Chamber of Commerce during the past two months.

Executive Director Kay Keegan announces that new members from Northville are Tom Harris, Harris Marshall Landscape Company at 15587 Ridge; J.D. Crane, Detroit Coke Company at 660 Griswold; John D. Cassidy, Mountain Top/Green Ridge Tree Company at 7528 Chubb.

Others are Normac Inc. at 720 Baseline; and William Allan Academy at 49875 West Eight Mile.

New member from Plymouth is Sunita Kapoor, Eskay Business Systems Inc. at 42199 Ann Arbor Road. Lonnie R. Atchison of Industries Unlimited Inc. of Mt. Clemens is another new member.

Child-care dilemma poses new challenge for parents would better serve the community's needs.

Novi Community Schools also is considering studying a similar option. A free preschool program for 4-year-olds and all-day kindergarten are among the proposals being looked at for possible further study by Novi school officials.

While both districts contend there is a need for additional child-care programs in the Northville/Novi communities, independent operators are disputing such claims.

Nearly all of the more than 20 child-care programs in the two areas had vacancies last year, and operators are projecting they will continue to experience similar enrollments during the forthcoming school year.

While child-care operators acknowledge that more parents of preschoolers are enrolling students in child-care programs, enrollment figures show there are fewer preschoolers to go around.

Most operators contend the decline in preschool-age students is due in part to the fact that more couples are delaying having children. According to U.S. Census figures, by the year 2000, approximately 30 percent of all women will delay their first child until after 30.

The demise of the "large family" also has contributed to across-the-board enrollment drops.

According to a recent demographic study conducted by Urban Decision Systems Inc., a California-based corporation, preschool age enrollment in the Northville, Novi and Plymouth areas will stay right around 6,000 for the next couple of years with a slight drop projected by 1989.

The Los Angeles corporation was contracted by the 108 Group, a new real estate development firm based in Northville, to conduct a demographic study of an area including almost all of the City of Novi, almost all of Plymouth Township, all of Novi and Northville townships and all of the cities of Northville and Plymouth.

According to the research firm's figures, in 1980 there were 5,775 children ages 0-5 — approximately 6.7 percent of the population. In 1984, that number increased to 6.8 percent of the population with 6,033 children in the 0-5 age bracket.

By 1989, it is projected that the number of children ages 0-5 will decline by about .03 percent to 6.5 percent of the population or 5,963.

As the enrollment numbers decline, child-care operators are finding they need to beef-up programs and expand offerings in order to satisfy the needs of a changing population.

For preschool operators, declining enrollment coupled with the increasing number of two-income families has brought considerable changes in program philosophy. To stay competitive, nearly all area preschools now offer day-care as part of their program.

"Many preschools have gone to day-care just to make ends meet," says Judy Armitage, president of Northville Co-op Preschool. "We're thinking about doing it for parents who work."

While child-care centers in the area do not confine enrollments only to children in Northville and Novi (many programs enroll children from communities such as Farmington, Plymouth, South Lyon and Milford), many operators contend that local enrollments are the "bread and butter" of their programs.

Most educators agree the changing make-up of the traditional family unit appears to support the need for increased child-care at the national level. However, the concern at the local level seems to center around how many programs the Northville and Novi communities can support.

Though preschool, day-care, latch-key and the like have attracted the most attention in the national debate surrounding child-care (and are the major focus of concern at the local level), licensed home-care, in-house sitters and on-site programs for business employees also are attractive alternatives for today's parents.

While few businesses in metropolitan Detroit — save for a handful of area hospitals — offer employees on-site day-care, the underground economy of at-home care is turning many full-time homemakers into business entrepreneurs.

While the child-care industry appears to be offering parents a bevy of options — at a bevy of prices — the most serious concern seems to surround the issue of whether preschool, day-care, latch-key and the like can be considered adequate replacements for maternal care.

That single concern is what seems to have given rise to a national debate regarding who should be minding the kids.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Census, most women work today out of economic necessity. One-fifth of all families are headed by women and 73 percent of married women have husbands who earn less than $20,000.

Despite the economic need, today's women still are struggling with their dual roles of mother and breadwinner.

Exchanging the diaper bag for the briefcase has not been a total reformation for most American women. Though more and more fathers are taking on the childrearing tasks traditionally handled by women, working moms are finding themselves caught in the "Superwoman" dilemma.

Cindy Howson, a teacher at Novi Middle School North and the mother of two, spent four years as a fulltime teacher, wife, mother and homemaker before requesting a "shared time" position.

"I was spread too thin," says Howson, who now teaches in the mornings with Denise Karakashian (also the mother of two) taking over in the afternoons. "I found I wasn't effective anywhere."

Such feelings of inadequacy are not unusual according to many psychologists.

Dr. Stephen Stocker, a psychotherapist with offices in both Northville and West Bloomfield, says the day-care dilemma often can be more trying on mothers than their children.

"When we talk about day-care and separation, we usually talk about the kids," Stocker says. "But there may be a greater impact on the mother."

"Women have a strong need to be the best mother possible."

For today's working moms and dads, being the "best parent" has taken on a new definition.

While most educators and psychologists agree that mom and dad still are the ideal keepers of the flock, extended families, in-house helpers, day-care teachers and others are taking on these roles at a rapid rate.

Though critics assail full-time day-care as being a glorified babysitting service or a dumping ground for working parents, proponents are quick to point out that it's nearly impossible in light of today's competition to offer a program without some educational merit.

As more children enter day-care or some form of child-care program such as preschool, the child without some early education experience is the exception — not the rule.

It's safe to say that for some parents, preschool and day-care selection is as important as choosing the right college or university.

Next week: how preschools differ.

Brighton dignitaries tour Mill Race Village, Main Street

Brighton officials spent much of Monday on Mayor's Exchange Day of Michigan Week in Northville with local officials. After lunch at First Presbyterian Church hosted by Northville Rotary, guests and local officials attended a Northville High School Jazz Band concert at the Marquis. They visited Allen Terrace where the residents' council served tea after a tour of Mill Race Historical Village. Brighton Mayor Francis Criqui, at right, is accompanied by Mayor pro tem

Dewey Gardner and others. Below, Michigan Week chairman Ann Brueck and council member Paul Folino, left, accompanied guests. Paul and Mamie Folino hosted a reception for the visitors before both delegations dined at Genitti's where city manager Steve Walters gave a presentation of Mainstreet '78. In Brighton, Gardner said he was impressed with the type of downtown shops and their merchandise. Record photos by Steve Fecht.

Dentist William Demray won top beautification award for his Main Street office/home

Beautification awards honor those with exceptional facilities in town

Businesses, schools and churches contributing to the beautification of the community were singled out for honors during Michigan Week ceremonies Monday at the annual program hosted by Northville Rotary Club at First Presbyterian Church.

Dignitaries from Northville's exchange city of Brighton also were honor guests at the luncheon program.

Grand Award winner this year was Dr. William Demray, who also captured that title in 1983 for the appearance of his dental offices in a Victorian house at 371 East Main. He also received first place award in the Business-Landscaped category, which he has won annually from 1981.

A Special Award winner this year was the Allen Terrace Resident Council at the senior citizen facility at 401 High Street. It was presented a certificate for its various beautification projects there.

Others winning awards in the Business-Landscaped category are Cutler Realty, a 12 time winner from 1980; Elizabeth's Restaurant, a six time winner; Connie's Stitchery, six time winner; Sweitzer (Rizzo) Realty, six time winner; and Hardee's, a first time winner.

Business winners with sidewalk fronts are IV Seasons, 10 time winner with new facade on its Main Street storefront; Long building, 10 time winner; MacKinnon's Restaurant, four time winner; Orin Jewelers, two time winner; Starting Gate Lounge, a new winner; Traditional Handcraft, seven time winner; and the Marquis building, a winner also in 1974, 1977, and from 1979 consecutively through 1985.

There were three winners in the Special Category division: First United Methodist Church at 777 West Eight Mile, three time winner awarded a plaque; St. Paul Lutheran Church at 201 Elm, nine time winner; and Amerman Elementary School at Sheldon and Eight Mile, a winner in 1975, from 1978 through 1982 consecutively, and in 1985.

No awards were presented this year in the Auto Service and the Industry categories.

Certificates are presented to first time winners; seals are given for each subsequent year, and plaques after three consecutive years with tabs for each year thereafter.

Tap Heintz for SEMTA

Fred Todd, the county chief of finance. The agency, which coordinates transportation services throughout the region but has no independent source of revenue, is presently under attack for alleged mismanagement of the downtown Detroit People Mover project resulting in massive cost overruns. It has also been in the news with reports that it would curtail virtually all services if federal budget cuts eliminate subsidies to public transportation systems.

Heintz has herself been an occasional critic of SEMTA operations. In an interview following her return from the Republican National Convention in Dallas, where she served as an alternate delegate, she praised that city's public transportation system, particularly noting that it was accomplished with local financing approved in a referendum vote. She contrasted it to the People Mover and other SEMTA programs that operate with substantial federal subsidy.

She was also supportive in comments regarding Congressman Carl Pursell's recommendation that the People Mover cost overruns be financed by special assessment against downtown properties served by the transit system.

SEMTA provides few services in Heintz's community. Cost cutting measures in the past several years eliminated the one large bus that ran from downtown Northville. The only SEMTA service currently offered here is the small bus program that responds to telephone calls for transportation. Targeted primarily to elderly persons, it conveys passengers to bus stops along major routes.

Of her appointment to the SEMTA board, Heintz said "it's going to be exciting and interesting for me. Hopefully, I'll be able to contribute something worthwhile."

Five bikes stolen

In the Township . . .

A 1984 Chevy Blazer valued at $13,500 was stolen from the east end of the Innbrook Drive parking lot sometime between midnight May 5 and 12:30 a.m. May 13, township police report.

The owner told police she and her spouse were on vacation at the time the incident occurred.

She further stated she returned by herself May 13 and discovered the vehicle missing.

The complainant told police the vehicle was locked and was equipped with a "kill switch" which was activated.

The vehicle contained a snow plow attachment on the front.

A car fire at a Northville Road residence caused an estimated $1,500 damage to a 1977 Chrysler Cordoba, township police report.

Police called to the scene found the fire department already extinguished the blaze.

The officer spoke with the owner who stated he was working on the vehicle and had the carburetor off.

He told police he walked into the garage and when he turned around the car was in flames.

The owner stated he was using a trouble light in the engine compartment. The officer spoke with fire chief Robert Toms who stated the trouble light was the probable cause of the fire.

A 1984 Honda "Spree" moped, stolen from a Winchester garage sometime between 7 and 10 p.m. May 11, was recovered by a Hickory Ridge resident in the shelter area of the Colony Commons Subdivision, police report.

The complainant told police unknown person(s) stole the moped out of his garage the evening of May 11. He further noted the garage door was open at the time the incident occurred.

He also stated the ignition keys were not with the moped.

At 9:30 a.m. May 12, an officer went to the complainant's residence and was advised that the stolen moped had been found.

The officer inspected the moped and noted it had been stripped of its head and tail lights, mirrors and carburetor. The vinyl seat also had been ripped and the fiberglass cover was cracked.

The moped was valued at $400; damages were estimated at $100.

A Kreidler moped valued at $450 was stolen from a Whitehaven Court residence sometime between 8 and 11 p.m. May 11, township police report.

The complainant said the moped was stolen from the garage which was open at the time the incident occurred.

Theft of a 1980 Corvette from the owner's Novi Road residence was reported to police Monday. The owner stated the car had been parked at 1 p.m. and was found missing at 6:40 p.m. It was valued at $12,000.

Spray painting on both the south wall of Northville High School by the gymnasium and on the new east wall was reported to police Friday by the principal at 7:20 a.m.

Further investigation is to follow.

Larceny of a jogging cart valued at $700 from the barns at Northville Downs was reported to police May 16.

Novi site dropped from prison search list

A 40-acre site near Twelve Oaks Mall is no longer on a list of sites being considered by Oakland County officials as a potential location for a state prison, according to County Commissioner John Calandro (R-Novi).

Calandro said Monday that the proposed Novi site was removed earlier this month from a list of nine locations being considered by the county's Prison Site Selection Sub-committee.

The county commissioner had expressed confidence that the Novi location would be eliminated after it appeared on a list of nine potential prison sites being considered by the sub-committee earlier this month.

Saying it "made no sense" for the site to be on the list in the first place, Calandro said he was working in conjunction with State Representative Willis Bullard (R-Highland) to have it removed from the list.

"We provided the sub-committee with information which showed that the site near Twelve Oaks did not meet the criterion for a prison location, and they removed it from further consideration at their next meeting," he reported Monday.

The 40-acre site in Novi is a landlocked parcel in Section 14 between Twelve Oaks Mall and I-96. It currently is owned by the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) and is accessible only from the Twelve Oaks ring road.

The parcel had been identified as a potential prison site in conjunction with the movement to construct new correctional facilities in the state to resolve the problem of prison overcrowding.

The Michigan Department of Management and Budget and the Department of Corrections, which are responsible for selecting prison sites, plan to construct several prison facilities in the Metropolitan Detroit Area and had asked the Oakland County Board of Commissioners for input on selection of a site within the county.

— John Calandro

Calandro said the process for selecting potential prison sites consisted of identifying all publicly-owned property within the county. The owners of the property then were contacted to determine if those sites currently were being used or are contemplated for use in the near future.

He added that the Novi site was among the nine "finalists" because the sub-committee apparently had not received information which showed the parcel did not meet state criterion for construction of a prison.

Essential criteria for a prison site include: 1) must be within 30 minutes of the population to be served; 2) must have access to utilities, including sewer and water; 3) must contain at least 40 acres of buildable land, properly buffered from retail and residential development; 4) must have a year-round access road, no more than one mile from a paved road; and 5) must be in a location not already served by a state prison.

Calandro said the proposed Novi location failed to meet at least three of the five essential criteria.

"Although the site contains 40 acres, only 26.8 of those acres are buildable," he said. "And being directly next to Twelve Oaks Mall, it definitely is not 'properly buffered' from retail development."

Calandro also emphasized that the Twelve Oaks parcel is landlocked — accessible only from the privately-owned step in recommending a prison location.

The sub-committee submitted a list of four potential locations to the Public Services Committee, which in turn was to make a recommendation to the board of commissioners. The Public Services Commission removed three of those sites from the list, but forwarded no recommendation to the board on the fourth site — the county trustee camp near Pontiac.

"James Lanni (R-Royal Oak) is chairman of the Public Services Committee and he told me there is no recommendation from his group," said Calandro. "We should find out more this week about what our course of action will be."

While reporting that the Novi site no longer is being considered by county officials, Calandro admitted that there's some confusion as to the county's next

DeHoCo sale possible this week, Geake says

By KEVIN WILSON

Action on the state purchase of the Detroit House of Correction is an "iffy" possibility this week, according to state senator R. Robert Geake (R-Northville).

Geake met with administration officials and members of the Detroit legislative delegation Tuesday and said afterward that the two bills necessary for the sale may be approved by the senate by the end of this week.

"If the Detroit people can agree to our language, the Senate Appropriations Committee will consider both bills — the Kilpatrick bill (authorizing the sale) and the moratorium bill written by representative Gerald Law on Wednesday," Geake said.

The redrafted language addresses concern about a clause in the moratorium bill that appeared to allow Detroit to build a prison on nearly 900 acres of DeHoCo land not sold to the state.

Geake said plans to pass the moratorium bill and await the governor's signature before acting on the purchase authorization were scrapped as part of the political give-and-take on the issue.

"This has been a delicate issue all along," he said. "It's been delicate for months. Every day we talk about it and work on it, trying to reach something agreeable to everyone."

Assuming Detroit can agree to the language, Geake said, the two bills would work their way through the Senate simultaneously. Given House concurrence on the new language, the bills could be on the governor's desk in a matter of days.

his daughter Mrs. Robert Ely of Northville and his son Robert of Chelsea.

He also is survived by five grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, his brother Harry German, Jr. of Belding and his sister Mrs. Francis Harvell of Carleton.

Services held for youth, 19

Private funeral services for Scott Allan Smalec, 19, were held last Friday morning at Harry J. Will Funeral Home with Father William Pettit of St. Kenneth Catholic Church officiating. Burial was in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

He was the son of Stanley and Dianne Smalec of Exeter Court.

A co-worker in the maintenance garage of Dun Rovin Golf Club found his body there May 14. Northville Township Police, called to the scene, have determined the death as suicide.

The victim was an employee at Dun Rovin and was last seen by the owner of the club at approximately 4:15 p.m. May 14 near the maintenance garage.

The youth resided in a flat on Yerkes Street and was last seen by his parents around 7 p.m. May 13. His father told police his son was in the Mercywood Center in Ann Arbor for five weeks before being discharged May 11.

Our Opinions

Haggerty planning needs resident input

There are difficult decisions to be made soon regarding development patterns along the Haggerty Road corridor, and residents ought to keep a close watch on what happens. This is the crucial stage for citizen input, when the government will decide what kinds of development are possible. Strong opinions should be aired now, before there are specific proposals on the table that may be unstoppable.

Those who are absolute in their belief that the township should remain a "bedroom community" are likely to oppose any changes in the present master plan that restricts most land along the corridor to single family residential use. Those views must be balanced against the property owners' rights to make use of their land and the wider interests in tax base growth and job creation.

Viewed realistically, it is clear that the combination of nearby freeway exits, traffic patterns and land uses across the road in Livonia combine to make the Haggerty Road frontage unattractive for new single family housing of the sort that typifies Northville Township. Those same factors make the property desirable for several other kinds of development. Allowing more intensive uses would attract investment in the community, expand the tax base, and, not incidentally, fulfill part of the township's legal obligation to allow for all types of land use within its boundaries.

The trick the township government is going to have to turn is to control those more intensive uses so that they do not damage the residential character of the community. The range of possibilities includes office buildings, multiple family housing and a budget motel. It also includes some commercial uses that we think township residents likely would oppose — such as large freeway service stations that include convenience shopping, fast food outlets and the like. The strong opposition to a convenience shopping strip at Six Mile provides ample evidence of the community's desires in this area.

To its credit, the township does not appear interested in attracting most of the less attractive possibilities. But zoning classifications generally allow several different types of development — the same commercial district that would allow a small motel, for instance, leaves the door open for some of the other uses we've mentioned.

Overall, the aim should be to allow controlled, attractive development of the Haggerty Road frontage in a manner consistent with the remainder of the community. This means the township must not cater to the needs of every developer who comes calling, but it also cannot yield to the residents' sentiment that opposes any building that isn't a single family house. That's a fine line to walk, and township officials must be glad they don't have to deal with freeways that pass through the center of the community instead of skirting its edges.

Fallacies obscure 108 Group issues

Opponents of city approval for the 108 Group's proposed building at the corner of Main and Center streets circulated several fallacious ideas around town. As a consequence, we find the public debate of the project's merits is misfocused.

The first odd notion is that the failure of the Northville Square Mall carries lessons directly applicable to the 108 Group proposal. "Just look what happened to the mall," believers say, suggesting that the town will suffer the existence of a huge, white elephant at its center.

There are lessons to be learned from the Northville Square Mall — and Northville has already applied them. The mall failed because it could not attract tenants. That happened because retail spaces downtown were available outside the mall for lower rents and because the area was not a terribly attractive place for retailers. The downtown improvement project has changed both those situations. The Mainstreet 78 project was an outgrowth of the mall's failure and has done exactly what was intended: making the downtown more conducive to profitable business and, as the 108 Group proposal itself demonstrates, an attractive location for new investment. Supporters of the downtown renovation who oppose this project contradict themselves — the 108 Group proposal is precisely the kind of investment Mainstreet 78 was intended to attract.

Another non-issue raised in opposition to the project is the parking question. There is an element that believes downtown Northville has enough parking. That's true if you think of downtown as a shopping area only for those who live here. Some may wish to keep it that way, but the economics simply prohibit such a downtown here.

Attracting shoppers from outside the immediate area is essential if downtown is to thrive. The local population is not sufficient to support the kind of downtown most of us say we want. Stores local people need were going belly-up before the downtown renovation that attracted more outside shoppers. To keep those people coming means making it convenient to do so. And that translates into adequate parking space, easily accessed and close to the stores those shoppers will frequent. The 108 Group project can provide the needed push to greatly expand parking areas and link the retail district to some of the more remote lots we already have. How that is done is a legitimate topic for debate. That it should be done ought to be beyond question.

Even if it never gets off the ground, the 108 Group proposal may do a service in demonstrating the aims of the past five years' effort downtown. Just such an investment in the area is needed to make the tax increment financing program work the way it was intended. If the 108 Group doesn't make it happen, someone else may come along next year or the year after that. The downtown development project started the ball rolling — residents shouldn't be shocked that it's gathering speed.

We all need a bench

By B.J. Martin

I recently noticed an item in the sports pages that got me thinking, as happens from time to time.

Sparky Anderson was asked about the '84 Tigers and he said Tom Brookens' coming in late in the game to play defense or John Grubb's clutch pinch-hitting often meant as much to the Tigers' success as the everyday work of Chet Lemon, Lou Whitaker or Lance Parrish.

In a lightningbolt flash it dawned on me: the key to success is good bench strength. If Chris Pittaro had a couple hits to get the Tigers the lead, but had already booted three grounders at third base, Brookens would come in to prevent any hot shots down the line for extra bases. If the Tigers were behind and some righthander had fanned Marty Castillo three times, in would come Grubb to yank one into the upper deck in right.

For a moment I felt like Isaac Newton must have when he saw the apple fall. I felt like Socrates must have felt when his tub overflowed.

"Eureka!" I cried. "Why, if this theory were applied to everybody's job, our chances to succeed would be magnified!"

That's right, folks. We need a bench. We all need a bench. When one of us has an off day, we should have a sub ready to go in for us. Athletes and teachers already know this simple fact. But it has yet to be applied to the world of business, law, medicine, sales, finance, food or other important fields. Even journalism.

I began looking for ways this concept would work in the real world. I didn't have to look far.

"I just don't have it today," I said to a co-worker the other night as I struggled in vain to make a boring story reader-friendly. Now in a perfect world, George Kell and Al Kaline might have given the situation a play-by-play: "The young reporter just doesn't seem to have his usual control tonight," George might say.

"Yup," Al would reply. "He's written a lot of inches tonight and he seems to be falling behind on a lot of his stories."

"Well, Al, you've just got to believe (Managing Editor) Phil Jerome doesn't like what he's seeing. You can bet he won't let him go too much longer. Yep. Here comes Jerome out of his office right now. He's giving the hurry-up sign to someone in the newsroom."

"Uh, that's right, George. It looks like Hilary Wilnandez, the feature writer from the Milford Times. Hilary is 6-for-6 in save situations so far this year. In her last outing she did a great job, working three hours, filing four stories and making only one error."

"We're going to get a little conference at the typewriter," George would drawl back. "I'm sure Jerome is just trying to buy a little more time for Hilary to get in a few more warmup cups of coffee. It's been a long afternoon for Martin. He wrote his way out of a jam at 2 p.m. and again at 3:15 when he made a couple mistakes that hurt him. He referred to a council member as a township trustee and you just can't do that when you're dealing with a city like Northville or Novi."

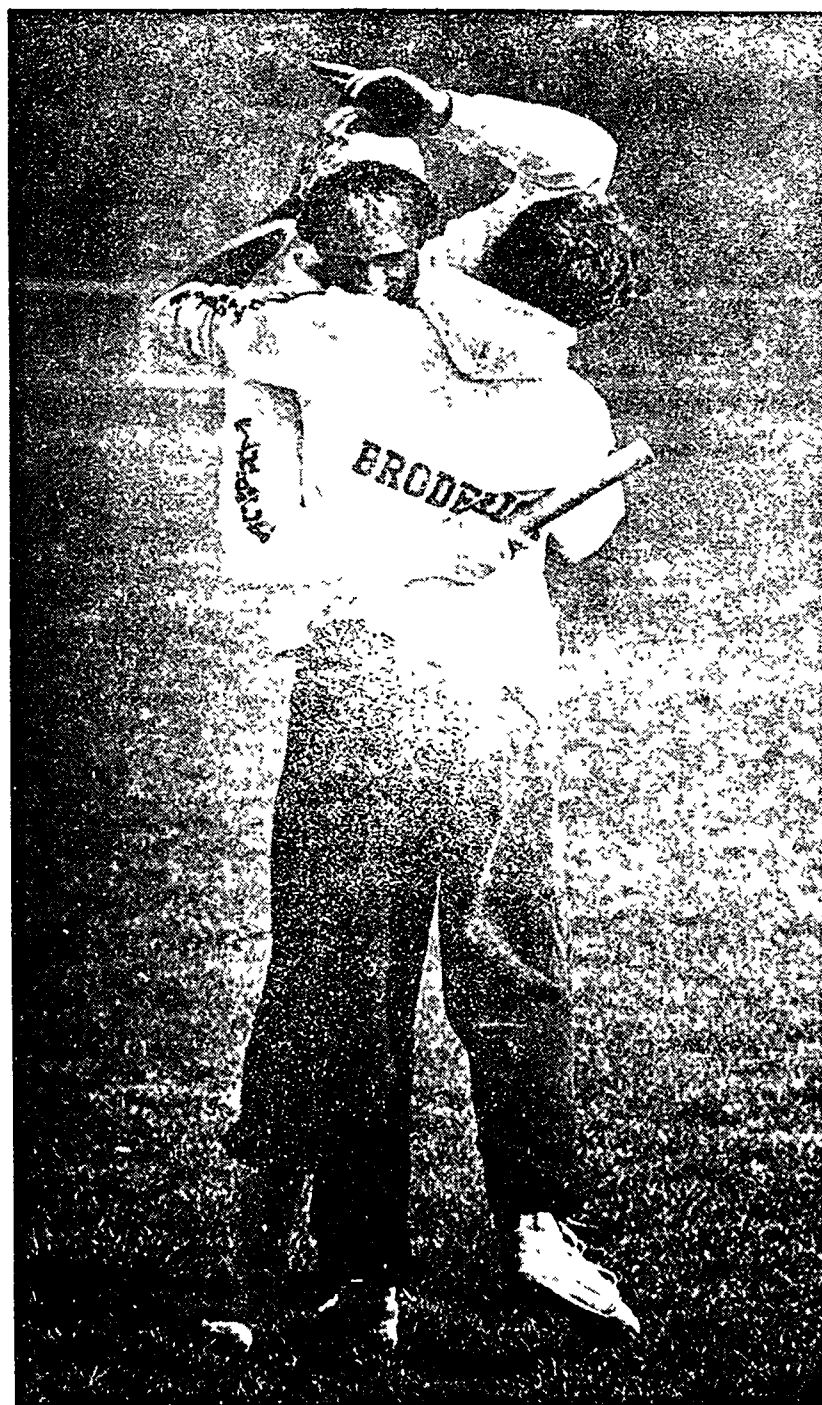

"That's right, George. His feature leads didn't have that snap to them and he dangled a few participles in the wrong place, and with a bunch of budget stories due up, I'm sure Jerome doesn't want to take a chance..."

Now, wouldn't that be nice? Excuse me, now. I have to go home and take a shower. Then I'm going to put some ice packs on my fingers.

After the fact

By PHILIP JEROME

Well, I went. Jetted down to Knoxville on Friday to attend the 20th reunion of my graduating class from Maryville College. A proud member of the Class of '65.

Had a great time, too. Ralph Tucker, a freelance writer in New York City, and Mike Moyers, a former roommate and an attorney in New Hampshire, picked me up at the airport and took me into town to greet the other early arrivals.

Gail Wilkes (Mrs. Moyers) was particularly happy to see me, claiming I was the only class member with more grey hair than she. Not true, incidentally. She had more than I.

The low point came Saturday morning while registering for various alumni affairs. A woman whose name tag said she was a member of the Class of '45 ran up to me with a big smile on her face and said, "You look familiar." Spotting the '65 on my own name tag, she apologized and beat a hasty retreat.

Wilkes thought it was funny. And told everyone we met how I had been confused for a member of the Class of '45.

We returned to the airport at midnight on Friday to see Marigay's plane arrive from Los Angeles. The Tennessee trooper waiting at the airport — a good ol' boy — refused our request to apprehend Marigay and place her in cuffs as she deboarded. So we talked a stranger into greeting her while the rest of us got lost in the crowd. The joke worked until Marigay realized she was being had — and blasted us with a string of profanities heard throughout the airport. Marigay hasn't changed.

I saw all kinds of old friends and classmates. I found out Dave Conklin lives in Plymouth, and his wife, the former Carole Webster, works in the Northville Public Library. Small world, eh?

We drove through the Smoky Mountains. We visited Dr. Carolyn Blair, one of my old English professors who remains as gentle, caring, refined, learned and beautiful a person as she ever was.

Most of us were somewhat heavier. Some of us had grey hair or no hair. Moyers had a hearing aid. And I learned that growing older is not so terrible. In fact, as I watch myself and my friends pass through our lives, rebounding from tragedy to triumph, dealing with all the problems that life throws us, I'm convinced that growing older is a grand experience I wouldn't miss for the world.

Dream home: a condo?

There was a card from maintenance on my kitchen table when I returned home from work one night last week. The date and time of the workers' visit was scribbled on the card, along with the message: "Will return 5/18 to replace."

I had called the apartment maintenance office earlier in the week to report two problems. First, a cross beam in our deck had broken. I suggested they might have it repaired before we go crashing down onto a second floor sun-bather. I also requested the sliding glass doors in our doorway be replaced. Moisture between the double glass on one side has left the window completely opaque.

I sat in our apartment the morning of 5/18 wondering what the "will replace" referred to, the deck or the doorway. I was becoming increasingly frustrated over the situation when I picked up a couple of condominium brochures from the magazine basket. My mind wandered out of our two-room cubicle with the faulty deck and foggy doorway into the floor plans of $50,000 to $75,000 condominiums.

These relatively small, two-bedroom condos are supposed to be "the next step" for young people working their way into the housing market. They entice prospective buyers with wood-burning fireplaces, optional skylights, walk-in closets and descriptive phrases like, "expansive living room, ideal for entertaining."

There are new condominium developments popping up everywhere, and they've all got a model open for Saturday and Sunday afternoon browsers. As it becomes less and less feasible for young people of my generation to own their own homes, these condominiums are weaning us from the "American Dream."

The situation is particularly evident in the new housing market where it seems small single family homes are becoming obsolete. Names with negative connotations are attached to developments with small homes. If it's less than $80,000, it's "track housing," "pre-fab housing," or "downsized housing." Much better to look for a condominium.

The socialization has been quite effective. Destined to a group environment, I look forward to my first condominium, not my.

first single family home. My concept of a neighborhood is a dozen or so people in adjacent buildings. My idea of "a yard" is a four by four fenced-for-privacy patio.

But despite these prevailing feelings, the Dream still flickers when I have the opportunity to visit my sister's home in a tidy little neighborhood in Gas City, Indiana. She and her husband finished building their all-brick ranch several months after they were married. When they moved in, everything from the tacks in the carpet to the matching towels in the guest bathroom was brand new. Susan had spent months selecting carpeting, wallpaper and paint, and the end result was a tribute to her impeccable taste.

They have a large yard with trees that are just starting to fill out. There's a small vegetable garden in the back yard, along with a bricked patio off the family room. . . . Almost enough to make me toss aside all those condominium brochures.

But as my eyes come back into focus, it's not a bricked patio I see through my foggy window, but the same old third-floor deck, still in need of repairs. And neither got replaced on 5/18.

Heintz to chip in at Canton's annual contest

Never let it be said Susan Heintz shies away from a challenge.

When Canton Township Supervisor James Poole recently threw down the gauntlet by inviting the Northville Township supervisor to participate in Canton's Fifth Annual Cow Chip Flinging Contest, Heintz didn't even look to see where she was stepping before answering in the affirmative.

She will join the herd of political types at the event scheduled to take place at 1 p.m. June 16 as a part of the Canton Country Festival. Assuming they haven't tired of the practice by then, they will compete to see which of them is most adept at propelling dried patties of cow manure over great distances.

Poole, his four years of experience in the contest evident in his every word, posed the challenge as something of a dare.

"If the residents of the Township of Northville have elected an official that believes she represents the best, I'm sure you will accept my challenge," Poole wrote, noting that the invitational event went international last year.

Heintz was not cowed by the effrontery, taking the bull by the horns.

"I intend to uphold the honor of Northville Township," she told the board of trustees May 9. Here's hoping it doesn't rain.

Holiday programs stress highway safety

Travelers on Michigan highways over the Memorial Day weekend will find state police out in force for the first "Operation CARE" program of the year.

The "Combined Accident Reduction Effort" employs federal grant funding to pay troopers overtime in order to make more intensive patrols of interstate highways. More than 3,750 overtime hours are scheduled with troopers targeting on speed enforcement and alcohol violations during those shifts.

Operation CARE was instituted several years ago and helped in holding traffic fatalities during the 1984 Memorial Day weekend to 18. The average for the holiday prior to CARE's launch in 1977 was 30 fatalities.

With Michigan's safety belt law to take effect July 1, heavy emphasis is placed on the "All American Buckle Up" program, sponsored for the second year by state police, AAA of Michigan and REACT (Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Teams).

Thirteen of the 18 persons who died on Michigan highways last Memorial Day weekend had safety belts available. Only one was wearing them.

"If all Michigan motorists wore safety belts properly, at least 300 lives could be saved annually in Michigan," said Robert Cullen, AAA Michigan Safety and Traffic Manager.

"Those statistics should be incentive enough for Michiganians to start developing the safety belt habit before the state's new belt law goes into effect," he added. "To provide even more incentive to wear belts, we will offer four vacations to Michigan resorts as prizes."

That program involves both the Secretary of State's office and Bill Knapp's restaurants and runs through Labor Day. Those signing safety belt pledge cards at those locations will be eligible for drawings held the first Friday after each of the summer holidays (Memorial Day, July Fourth and Labor Day) to give away weekends for up to four (plus $75 meal allowance and $200 cash) at the Mackinac Island Grand Hotel, Grand Rapids Amway Grand Plaza and Detroit Westin Hotel. A grand prize drawing the Friday after Labor Day will give away a five-day stay at Grand Traverse Resort Village valued at $1,203.

Other efforts to aid highway safety this weekend include the actions of 47 volunteer groups staffing 59 rest areas across the state, distributing refreshments and traffic safety literature.

The holiday officially runs from 6 p.m. Friday through midnight May 27.

Karzun a Schoolcraft trustee candidate

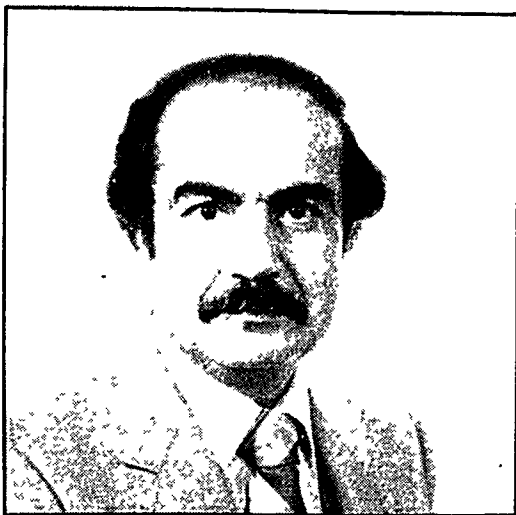

Livonia resident H.S. Karzun, an engineer with Ford Motor Company, is a candidate for Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees.

Two terms of six years are open in the June 10 election. Other candidates filing by deadline for the two posts are incumbents Michael W. Burley of Canton, chairman, and Sharon L. Sarris of Livonia, board treasurer.

A resident of the college district for eight years and resident of Wayne County for 19 years, Karzun has been a fundraising volunteer for Schoolcraft.

He holds a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering and a M.B.A. degree from Wayne State University. He is a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

He says, if elected, he will work for enrichment of technical programs to prepare students for the changing job market, provide broadbased and balanced programs for students of all ages, maintain leadership status of the college and increase community interest and support of college programs.

Clinton-Cali tapped to lead Old Village ISE program

Christine Clinton-Cali, a former teacher/consultant for Northville's ISE Program, will replace Mark Miko as Building Supervisor for Old Village School.

Her appointment was unanimously approved by the board of education Monday night.

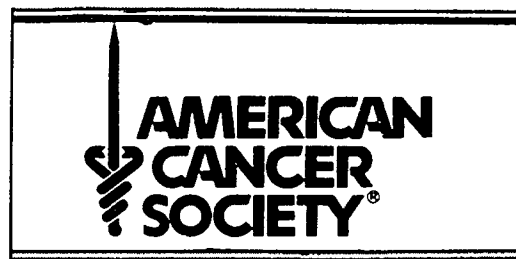

Assistant Superintendent Burton Knighton told board members Clinton-Cali was selected for the post from a field of 29 applicants.

Clinton-Cali, who worked as a teacher/consultant in the ISE Program from 1978-84, was laid off by the district last year. Since that time she has been working as a teacher/consultant for the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

Leonard Rezmierski, executive director for Special Education Services, told the board Clinton-Cali was instrumental in implementing ISEP's behavior modification program during her six-year tenure with the district.

She also assisted in the development of a proposal for the Human Rights Committee and served as liaison with institutions, group homes and parents.

Five percent rise in district's SEV

The financial picture for Northville Public Schools appears a little brighter following this month's Wayne County Tax Allocation hearing.

School Superintendent George Bell told board members May 13 that the school district can expect a 4.95 percent increase in this year's State Equalized Valuation (SEV).

He noted the increase "will give us a better financial picture than we've had since the 1981 school year."

He noted that the increased SEV, coupled with the 2.5 additional operating mills approved by voters last year, will help the district offset increased expenses without digging deeper into a fund balance deficit.

The increased SEV also is good news for teachers and other staff members.

The three-year contract approved by teachers last December, which covers the period from September 1, 1985 to August 31, 1988, stipulates a concept of revenue based salary increases for teaching staff.

Salary schedules for district teachers will increase percentage-wise in direct proportion to the increased SEV of the school district.

With the new formula, the district guarantees at least a four percent minimum and seven percent maximum in salary increases regardless of the increase in the district's SEV.

Teachers and secretarial/clerical/aide personnel and registered nurses (whose benefit schedule was approved May 13) will receive salary increases of 4.95 in accordance with the increase in the district's SEV.

Manager search nears conclusion

"Everyone on the committee has partaken of this very seriously," Henningsen said. "We've eliminated three based on their experience, background or they had no real desire evident. It's surprising how, when you really get down to the final strokes, it becomes really obvious how much desire these people have."

The preferred candidate, Henningsen said, fits the consistent township philosophy that the position is an appropriate entry-level job in municipal management for persons with education in that field.

"You could say this person's background is parallel with (former manager David) Leiko's, in that the person is almost straight out of school but has some experience, the person has interned," Henningsen said.

Heintz said she has tried to stay uninvolved in the process, since several persons have made inquiries directly to her and there are already three board members on the committee. Her involvement would bring the number to four — a quorum of the board that would require all meetings to take place in public.

"I don't know who the person is and won't until Mr. Henningsen tells me," she said. "I understand it to be a male from out of state, but don't know."

If the top candidate either does not want the position or the township board does not find the person acceptable, Henningsen said he believes the second- and third-ranked candidates are "pretty good cushions. We have some good backgrounds in there. If we get down to the second or third person, both have some experience."

Members of the search committee in addition to Henningsen are trustees James Nowka and Richard Allen, labor consultant Richard Ambler, Kathleen McNally and Margaret Tegge.

Jim Long checks Florida project at his Northville office

36-year-old firm continues success methods in south

By JEAN DAY

"My father let me have a free rein when I started with the company, and I'm doing the same with our people," explains Jim Long, president of Long Plumbing Company at 190 East Main in Northville.

As he talks about the firm and its new, wholly-owned subsidiary, J. R. Long Inc. of Tampa, Florida, Long says, "Success of the operation is directly related to the people in it. I let the people go, and they're doing great things."

Begun in 1981, the Tampa subsidiary now has completed a new office and 9,000 square foot warehouse facility which, Long says, will enable the company to better serve clients on various construction projects in Florida.

The fact that in the short time it has been in operation the Florida subsidiary now is doing as much business as the 36-year-old firm in Michigan seems to indicate that Long's management style works. He notes, however, that there is a "more positive economic climate in Florida."

The Florida business is a plumbing and mechanical construction company and currently is working on various hospital, industrial plants and schools from Jacksonville and Orlando to the Tampa/St. Petersburg area.

The company founded in 1949 by Glenn C. Long, now chief executive officer, began as his father worked out of his home on Horton Street, his son recalls, telling how his father and his knowledge of the business has had a continuing guiding effect.

From the Long home the business moved to the building now occupied by Reef Industries on Seven Mile. After selling the building to Jan Reef, the senior Long moved to a Dunlap location, and then in 1974 to the present Main Street location. Before the move, the bath boutique was added. It is operated by Jim Long's wife, Virginia. The Florida subsidiary has been working with such firms as Union Carbide in Jacksonville and Martin Marietta in Orlando and has completed work on the Tampa General Hospital. It currently is working on a hospital in St. Petersburg and also with General Electric and the Department of Energy.

The Northville operation isn't doing badly either — Long reveals the company has just negotiated a project in Livingston County "that is in excess of seven figures — our largest job yet."

Long's has just completed piping for the boiler and pool in the Northville High School renovation.

The Northville operation differs from the one in Florida in that the Northville business includes a retail bath shop and residential repairs service. Long mentions that the firm recently has done a great deal of remodeling of bathrooms in the area. This in addition to the plumbing and heating work.

The firm has 60 employees, and Long emphasizes their importance to its success.

He cites Tim Jarvis and Keith Pixley — "he's a champ" — as crucial. The firm is non-union, he adds, "because we hear from our people that they don't want one — there's nothing they (the union) can offer that they don't have."

While he oversees the Florida operation, flying south on a regular basis,

South Lyon Specialists expand medical service

South Lyon Medical Specialists will become the new residents of the Griswold Building at 314 North Lafayette in South Lyon, following the retirement of Dr. Art Griswold.

Until renovations, parking improvements and redecorating at the Griswold Building are completed, South Lyon Medical Specialists (SLMS) will continue its practice at its current location at 129 North Lafayette.

SLMS's team of physicians has been practicing in South Lyon since January 1978, but recently increased its staff and range of services.

Members of the SLMS staff include Dr. Marilyn Sauder, director, who established SLMS in South Lyon in 1978 and has been a local resident for 12 years. Sauder is a graduate of Wayne State Medical School and holds degrees in Nursing and Psychology. She is a fellow in the American and International College of Surgeons and is a qualified laser surgeon, with added training in endoscopy.

Sauder is currently on-staff at Harper-Grace Hospital (HGH) and is a consultant at the Detroit Rehabilitation Center. She is a member of the steering committee for the new Huron Valley Hospital, due to open in February, 1986, near Milford.

Also on the staff of SLMS is Dr. Elliott Moss, a South Lyon practitioner since 1980. He is a board certified doctor of internal medicine. Moss is also on staff at HGH and is currently the medical director of the Michigan Conference of Teamsters Health and Welfare Fund. Moss is a skilled endoscopist and diagnostician.

For general practice needs, SLMS offers Dr. Elisa Samson, also a board certified physician in family practice, as well as pathology. Samson was a practicing pathologist at HGH before entering residency in family practice. She has been seeing patients in South Lyon since September.

SLMS is bringing a pediatrician to South Lyon for the first time. Dr. Meenalochani Reddy is a board certified pediatrician who is on staff at Mt. Carmel and Children's Hospital in Detroit. She is available for any pediatric emergency as well as overseeing the immunization and growth and development programs for children. With prior training, Dr. Reddy is a competent general practitioner, making her a valuable asset to the practice, Sauder asserts. She also has been seeing patients in South Lyon since September.

SLMS Obstetrics and gynecologic patients are being seen by Dr. Philip Peven, a board certified gynecologist, who is on staff at HGH and also held the position of Chief of OB/GYN in that institution. Dr. Peven has been a practitioner for over 40 years and has been seeing patients in South Lyon since November.

For family counseling, SLMS offer Thomas Kozak, Ph.D., a licensed psychologist. Dr. Kozak received his degree from the University of Michigan and has taken additional training in marital counseling and long-term individual counseling. He has been in private practice in South Lyon and Farmington for nine years.

Two new additions to the SLMS staff are Dr. P. Mikkilineni, a board certified internist and diagnosis. His special interests are cardiac care, diabetes, hypertension and other internal disorders. In order to extend the hours and availability of the SLMS staff, Mr. William Mosher, physician assistant, will be used as a physician extender. In addition to seeing patients in the office during hours not covered by physicians, Mosher will make house calls on a selected basis.

Sauder said the office is proud to be able to initiate this program which it feels will meet the needs of many older or handicapped patients who are unable to travel to the office. "SLMS hopes that the recognition of some of the home care need of its patients will contribute to the total health care of the community," she added.

Business Briefs

TWELVE OAKS SECURITY Sergeant Kurt Graber (center) is congratulated by Mall Manager William Clogg (left) and Security Director Mike Kuzila for his commendation from the Novi Police Department for outstanding coordination of holiday traffic control details.

Graber met with Sergeant Tom Hess and Detective Jack Grubb of the Novi Police Department prior to the 1984 holiday shopping season to plan and coordinate traffic control at Twelve Oaks. As a result of the planning, all the entrances to Twelve Oaks were staffed to keep traffic flowing smoothly at all times during the holiday season.

Graber reported that many shoppers rolled down car windows to thank officers for guiding them in and out of the parking lot and for helping to make their holiday shopping more convenient.

Graber has attended law enforcement classes at Wayne State University and Schoolcraft Community College. He has been employed with Twelve Oaks Security for 4½ years.

CTI AND ASSOCIATES INC. is the new name for the former Construction Testing & Inspection Inc. and its affiliate, American Geotechnical & Hydrogeologic Engineers. The name change is announced by Robert R. Near and P.D. Deo. The company has been in business since 1976. CTI and Associates Inc. is located at 46408 Grand River, Novi.

Long's Plumbing expands

Jim Long says it's going well as he has a good manager there. He has a Florida condo for the trips south.

But Long likes Northville, too, and points out he is a Northville native who was "born in Sessions Hospital and graduated from Northville High School in 1967."

As he was interviewed in his second floor offices where he works at his spacious desk and drafting board in the adjacent room, Long explains how the Florida operation came into being.

Long's did work for a Wichita-based company that then asked the firm to do a job in Tucson, Arizona.

"We did," recalls Jim Long, "and in turn they asked us to do one in Lakeland, Florida. So we investigated the area and liked Tampa."

"Ironically," he adds, "we did not end up getting the job — a huge church of 10,000 people."

However, unlike some of the firm, that went south to work on Disney's Epcot, their move proved to be a good one, Long says, because of the positive outlook there.

On Long's office wall is a picture of one of his father's early plumbing company vans. He and his older brother, now in the insurance business in Scottsdale, Arizona, are pictured in it of it.

"I was about three years old when that was taken," Long says. It's obvious he enjoys the business he joined his father in — and now is expanding.

Jim Long also is following in his father's footsteps with an honor in industry. He currently is senior vice president of the Michigan Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors' Association and will be installed as president next February. Glenn Long is a past president of the association.

ABWA unit organizing

A new chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) is being organized in the Novi-Farmington area.

All currently employed women interested are invited to attend a get together meeting May 30 at 7 p.m. at Oakland Community College Orchard Ridge Campus, building J.

Guest speaker will be Ms. Ann Greene, professional image consultant and president of Profiles in Color. She will demonstrate "Wardrobe/Color Analysis."

The ABWA is a national association of working women comprised of more than 2,100 chapters and 112,000 members. Last year ABWA chapters awarded more than $2,500,000 in scholarships.

Skipper's Log — 'Action, danger at Abaco Island'

By JEAN DAY

Scott Lapham's underwater camera strobe became a flashing weapon when a shark swam toward his brother-in-law John Bueter on a recent sailing adventure to Great Abaco Island in the Bahama chain.

The two local businessmen were diving at Crab Cay during the sailing trip with 10 other area men when, Scott recalls, he saw the shark "come around a rock toward John's legs." The two had taken a dinghy to the east side of a split cay to snorkel and photograph the reef.

"I went back under water and swam toward him — we were both two feet from John's legs and I flashed my strobe at him. The light turned him away, and we didn't wait around," Scott relates emphatically.

A ruined roll of film was the only real casualty.

It was Scott Lapham's first bare boating trip in the Bahama Islands; for John Bueter, it was a repeat trip. An expert sailor, he was skipper of the Marissa Christina, one of the two 44-foot sailing sloops leased for the adventure.

Organizer of the sailing adventures taken every other year for the past several years is John Genitti, who skippered the other sloop, No Name. It was Genitti's seventh trip there and his fourth with local residents. Some are businessmen; others are Genitti's fellow Kiwanians.

"Most of the men would go every year," says Genitti, "but so far it's been working out well every other year."

The group has made arrangements for the last two trips through Ed Jamieson, owner of Northville Travel Plans.

Aside from a brush with Mother Nature's terror of the deep, the highlight of the week's trip was snorkeling and exploring the picturesque harbor town on Elbow Cay (pronounced key) and the small islands around Great Abaco.

"I'd go anytime," says an enthusiastic Lapham as he relates how the dozen explorers began the week-long adventure by leaving Northville at 4:30 a.m. in vans for Toledo. From there they took a direct flight to Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

A chartered twin engine plane, "a puddle jumper," says Lapham, took them to Marsh Harbor at Great Abaco Island in the Northern Bahamas. An island taxi then transported the sailors to the waterfront where they took a water taxi to Hope Town Harbor and Elbow Cay where they were deposited on the charter boats.

Others on the March adventure were Frank Skinner, Roger Schultz, Dr. John Rossiter, Don Bouret, George Miller, Ed McCloud, Jerry Delaney, Jim Harris and John Brugeman.

They sailed around Nunjack Cay, an uninhabited island, explored the larger settlement at Green Turtle and spent two nights at Man of War Cay where island rules say: "No alcohol and no bikinis."

"It's loosely enforced," Bueter says with a smile. He adds that the area was settled by American British Loyalists who left the United States during the American Revolution.

"They still make boats by hand," Lapham and Bueter relate, as they explain that the area is a ship-building capital. They mention seeing a dinghy being built "with no power tools whatsoever."

Bueter adds that since their return he has seen an ad for one of the ships they leased — it has a $78,000 price tag.

Snorkeling was the high point of the trip for both. They also returned with many rolls of color film. They photographed branch coral — "there's every color you can think of," says Lapham. He adds that below a depth of 10 feet, "everything is blue-green" under water.

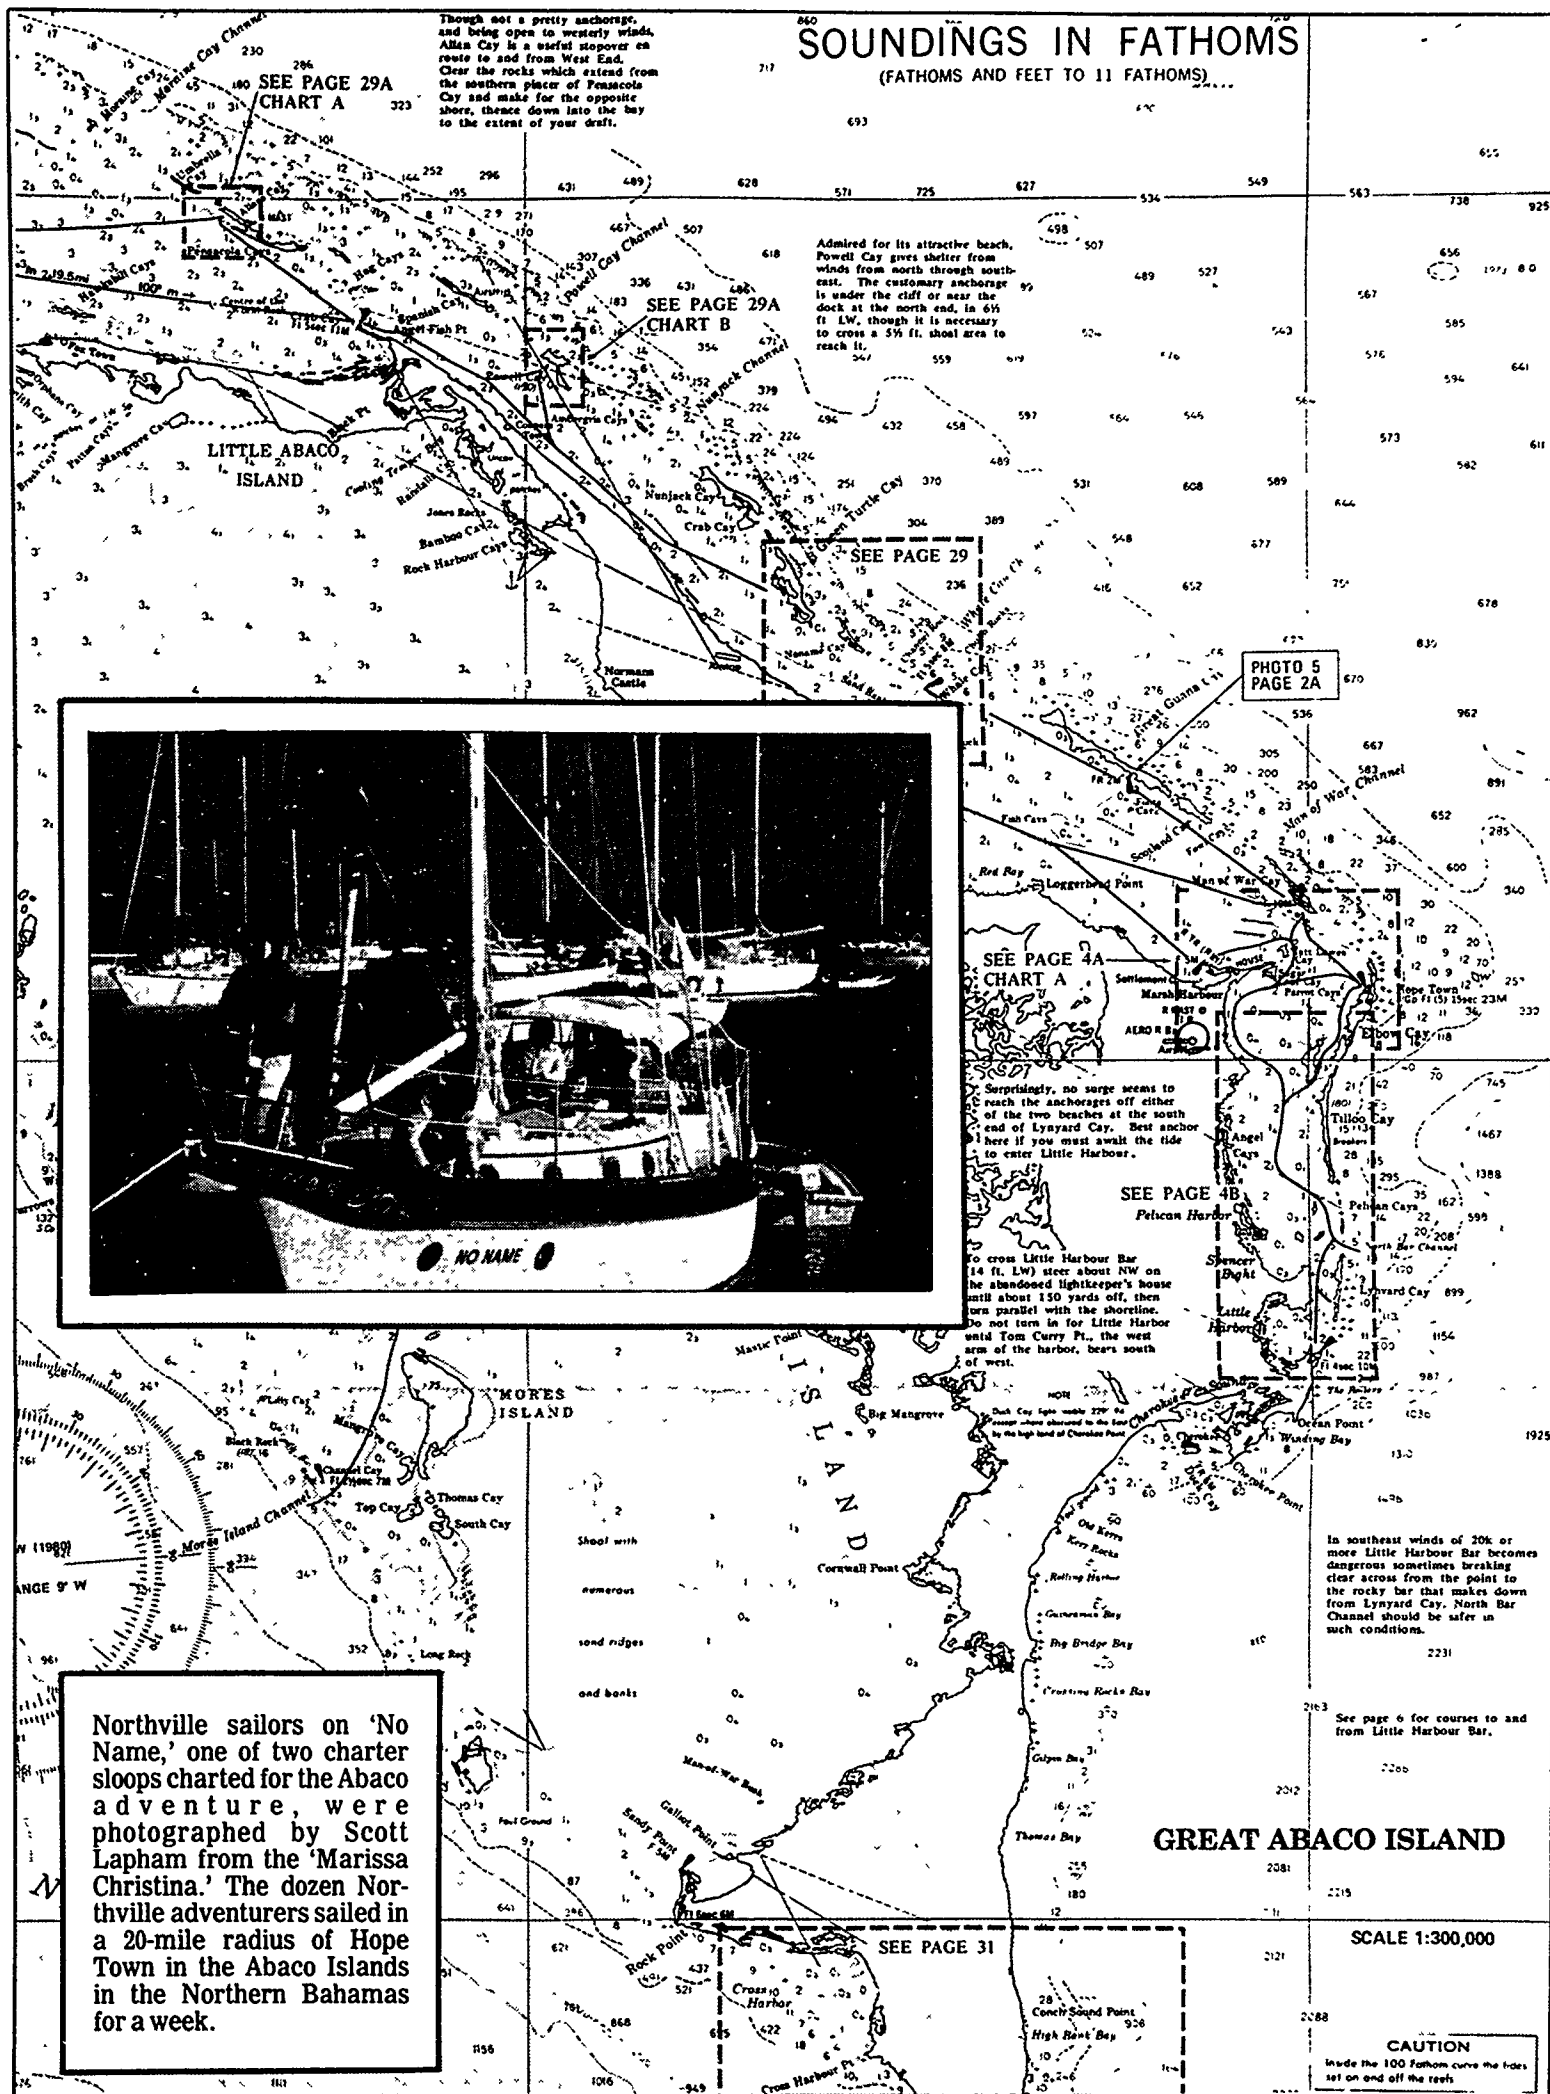

Jungle-like vegetation and two porpoises that "played with the bow of the boat," Lapham says, were among the pleasant sights. In addition to the lone shark, they saw tarpon and flounder as well as a huge grouper in the 20-mile radius in which they were allowed to sail.

Each crew of six generally cooked its own meals, Lapham explains, remembering how they found hamburger to buy in a local store at $3.80 a pound — and were getting ready to settle for dry provisions brought along when they found a fisherman on the dock willing to sell them lobster tails.

"We bought nine pounds of just tails for $3.50 a pound," says Lapham. "We invited the other boat for that feast."

The "feast" apparently was better than usual fare as both men recall they "kept Delaney's macaroni and cheese in the unlikely event we needed to patch the boat."

While Bueter may have had a close call with the shark, both men say fellow sailor George Miller "is lucky to be alive after we all found he was having his wife sent a flower every day he was gone."

Area camps offer varied summer programs for youths

For many Northville youngsters, the end of school means off to summer camp. A wide range of camping experiences will be available in the area, including specialized programs, such as the American Lung Association of Southeastern Michigan Camp for asthmatic youngsters.

Here are some area camps reporting their offerings:

- Camp Fire Detroit Area Council's Camp Wathana situated in a wooded lake setting on a 370-acre site near Holly is celebrating the 75th anniversary of the Camp Fire program this summer. The camp offers full- and two-week residential camping sessions from July 7 through August 10 for both boys (ages 7-14) and girls (ages 7-17).

- Nature study, arts and crafts, games, songs, cook-outs and star gazing are some of the enrichment activities. Physical fitness activities include swimming, sailing, canoeing and hiking.

- A four-day mini session for first-time campers and a chance for grandma (or her substitute) to camp with the child are among the offerings.

- Each session this summer will highlight an international theme with ethnic dinners, crafts, songs, dances and costumes. Campers will also make a totem pole and tiles for a cabin under construction as part of the celebration of Camp Fire's 75th anniversary.

Registration fees range between $150 and $295 for the sessions. The four-day mini sessions range from $80 to $85. Early registrations are discounted until May 31. A $5.60 membership fee is paid by all campers who are not Camp Fire members. Camperships are available to help those financially unable to participate in the program. The Detroit Area Council office may be called for application forms, 833-2670.

A Grand Council Fire will be staged at Camp Wathana on Saturday, June 8, to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the national Camp Fire organization. All present and past members of Camp Fire are invited to join a circle of friendship. Activities begin at 5 p.m. Advance registration should be made by May 24 with the Detroit office.

- Huron Valley Girl Scout Council Camp Linden located on 400 acres near Linden in Livingston County offers computers and audio-visual production along with swimming, horseback riding and camping.

This year Camp Linden, owned and operated by the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council — which includes Northville Girl Scout troops — will offer sessions in Computer-Fun, featuring two hours of instruction a day plus practice time. Also, visual arts focus on photography, working behind the camera and in the darkroom and learning about video production.

Junior riding is for fourth through sixth graders interested in learning the fundamentals of western riding, horse and tack care. Saddle-up is for girls with limited riding experience who are currently in sixth grade or older.

One special session — A Taste of Summer — is being offered girls who have completed first and second grades. Registration in all other sessions is open to all girls who have finished third grade through 12th. For older girls there are adventure opportunities in backpacking and canoeing. Cost of a one-week session is $70; nine-day session, $100; two-week, $140; A Taste of Summer, $25. Some sessions have additional fees. Special camperships are available. Girls interested in the camping program which runs June 23 through August 23 should contact the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council, 483-2370. Registration is open to both Girl Scouts and non-scouts.

- The American Lung Association of Southeastern Michigan and the Michigan Society for Respiratory Therapy co-sponsors Camp Sun Deer, a free camp for asthmatic children held June 30 through July 6 at Battle Creek Outdoor Education Center (Clear Lake Camp) at Dowling, Michigan.

Camperships for 60-70 youngsters are not awarded on the basis of need; they are designed for the child without constant medical supervision available at the camp could not participate in the wide variety of activities offered. Applications should be made this week by calling 961-1697 daytimes.

- Oakland Community College's summer day camp, Renaissance on the Ridge, at the Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills is geared to students ages 6 to 18 and is designed specifically for the arts and sciences.

There are two sessions: July 8-26 and August 5-23. Class size is limited to 15 students who will be involved in performing arts, visual arts, science and computer programs. Each three week session will meet six hours a day; half time sessions will meet three hours.

Full time sessions are $185; half time, $100 with fees decreasing for additional members in a family. For brochure and registration form call the office, 471-7596.

- Great Lakes Resources Camp of 4-H being held July 20-26 on Beaver Island is open to Oakland County boys and girls 13-15 years old interested in natural resources. A limited number of 16-19 year olds will be selected to provide leadership at the camp whose purpose is to increase participants' awareness, appreciation and understanding of natural resource ecology and management with special emphasis on the Great Lakes.

Great Lakes ecology, history, wildlife, insects, amphibians and plants will be studied. Activities will include hiking, fishing, bird watching, historical tours and volleyball.

The group will board a boat at the city dock in downtown Charlevoix for the trip to the island. Cost is $50, including round trip boat fare, meals, lodging and transportation on Beaver Island. Other expenses are covered by the MSU Sea Grant Advisory Service and Michigan Bell.

Applications are due June 10 in the state 4-H office. Call 858-0889 for applications.

- Sailing adventure trips are being offered this summer by the American Youth Hostels weekly during July and August. Designed for young people 18 and older, the cruises will cover the northern reaches of Lake Huron, Les Cheneaux Islands and the North Channel country.

For those who are not already sailors, the trips offer the fun of learning the art of sailing with expert informal instruction. For information about the low-cost, five day cruises in a 30-foot sailboat, call American Youth Hostels at 545-0511.

ALLERGIC RHINITIS

Rhinitis is the chronic, allergic irritation and inflammation of the nasal passages. It usually occurs with watery eyes and itching. Seasonal rhinitis is usually due to a sensitivity to pollens from trees, flowers, grasses and weeds. Rhinitis occurring year round may be due to dog and cat dander, dust, and molds.

Antihistamine-containing medicines help reduce mucus secretions, itching, and swelling inside the nose. These medicines tend to be more useful in preventing than in correcting nasal symptoms. For this reason, antihistamines should be given before an anticipated attack.

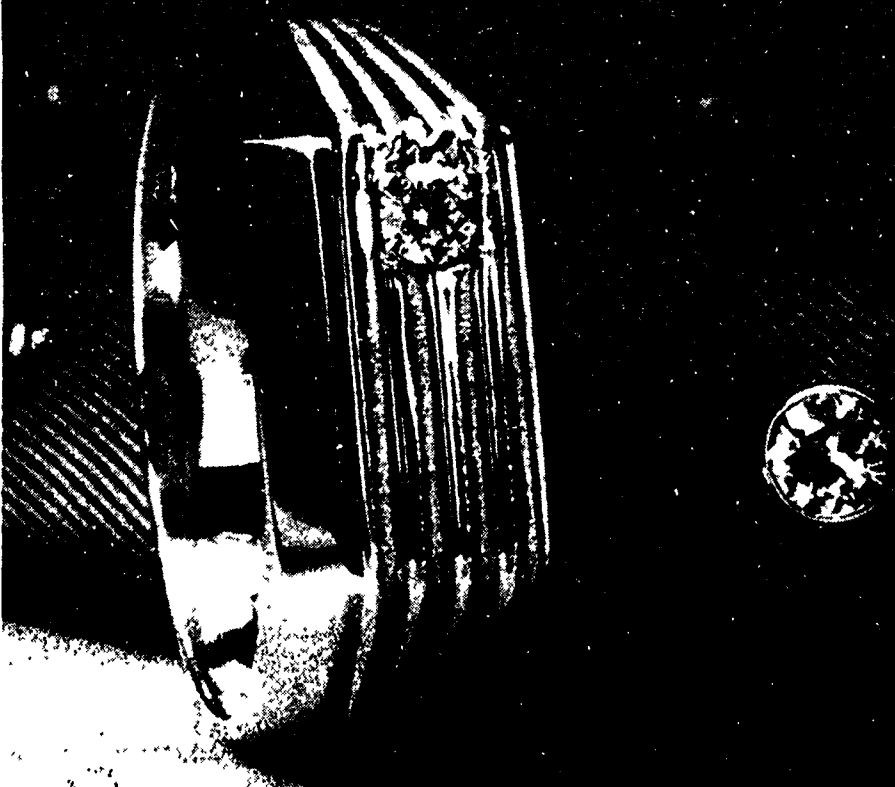

The decongestants cause a shrinkage of the swollen membranes in the nasal passages. On a short-term basis they can bring dramatic relief. Long-term use (especially as drops or sprays) can, however, cause congestion to return.

Topical steroids (on prescription) are often effective in treating chronic rhinitis. The steroid, when inhaled through the nose, soothes inflamed membranes. If almost dramatic results are not achieved, some patients are also given antihistamines and/or decongestants.

Local dancers garner awards in competition

Several area residents participated in a recent Dance Masters of America state-wide dance competition at Plymouth-Salem High School in which the Piazza Dance Company of Northville won three first-place trophies.

All three groups entered by the company danced away with first-place awards in their respective categories. They competed against more than 600 dance students throughout the state with dancers judged on stage presence, appearance, talent, execution and personality, as well as the teacher's choreography.

Featured in the Junior Division were the Teen Angels, who danced to Cole Porter's "Heaven Hop." Local students in the group were Julie Grabowski, 13, and Brandy Birdsong, 11, both of Northville, and Kelli Clozza, 13, of Novi. Representing the Senior Division were The American Kids, who danced a jazz routine to "The Kids American." Lisa Bonkowski, 19, of Novi, was among the participants.

In the Adult Division was the Motor City Moving group, which included Ming Louie of Northville and Jeff Steele of Walled Lake.

The awards culminate four years of steady growth and expansion for the dance company, say the three sister-owners. It was begun in 1981 by Marilyn Esper of Farmington Hills, Denise Steele of Walled Lake and Gina Piazza of Livonia.

They report that the award-winning routines may be seen as part of the annual dance recital at 7:30 p.m. June 20 at Novi High School. The dance company's studio is located in the Highland Lakes Shopping Center in Northville.

Scientist lecture announced

CLEM W. COLLINS

Clem W. Collins of Boston, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will tie his discussion of "Human Survival and the Peace of God" to Christ's Sermon on the Mount as he speaks at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Penn Theater. His lecture is sponsored by the Plymouth Christian Science congregation.

In an era of nuclear exploration, the speaker finds fresh relevance, almost an urgency, he says, in Jesus' searching descriptions of mankind's relations to God as the basis of lasting peace among men.

The public is welcome and free child care will be provided for the hour-long lecture.

AAUW celebrates

Among 640 volunteers who have contributed more than 84,000 hours of service to the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Medical Center are three Northville residents. They were honored at a luncheon last Sunday at the Holiday Inn-Westbank in Ann Arbor.

Volunteers Vernon Biddle and Rose L. Hamilton each contributed 500, 750 and 1,000 hours of service for the past three years. Rose M. Hamilton contributed 1,750 hours. Novi residents Robert Johnson, 100 and 300 hours, and Derek Nelson, 100 hours, also are cited.

Peter Oestreich, chief of volunteer service at the hospital, reports that the VA has the "longest running volunteer program in the United States." He adds that the Ann Arbor hospital is one of the largest volunteer programs in Washtenaw County. "We try to make sure they (volunteers) have meaningful and enjoyable work to do," he explains of the program. "Volunteers come here to test career choices, to escape from daytime soap operas, to meet people and to feel useful," he sums up.

The Northville Record

Netters' win over Vikes seals undefeated record

It was actually sort of a nondescript little win. Northville trounced Walled Lake Central 7-0. Only one match went three sets.

But it was a big win nonetheless. With it, Northville completed its circuit of Western Lakes tennis foes with a perfect 9-0 record.

"I really didn't think we'd beat them quite so easily," said Northville Coach Dick Norton. His team is now the favorite to capture the conference crown at the Western Lakes tournament this week — but no shoo-in, to hear Norton tell it.

"Canton (6-3) has been playing very well lately," Norton fretted. "I'm afraid what might happen is (8-1) Harrison, Canton and our team will beat up on each other while Stevenson waltzes through its division matches. . . . We have to finish no worse than second in the conference to guarantee at least a tie for the conference championship."

Northville competed at the Class A Regional Tournament on Friday, and while the rains continued, the reigns continued — meet hosts and perennial tennis superpowers Ann Arbor Huron and Ann Arbor Pioneer led the field at their regional.

Only Northville's first singles ace Terry Mikaletch and the second doubles team of Don Norton and Mike Tabaczynski managed to reach the regional third round. Mikalitch breezed past Brighton's Steve Russell and Plymouth Salem's John Kath before falling to Huron's awesome Steve Hentschel 1-6, 0-6.

Norton and Tabaczynski got past teams from Novi and Salem to reach the third round, but Huron's Eric Wollen and Michael Lee — seeded second at the tournament — turned back the pair 3-6, 1-6.

The division tennis playoffs were held after press deadline yesterday. Today, the conference championship matches will begin at about 3:30 p.m. at Plymouth Canton.

Dominique outduels Gabriele, 1-0

By B.J. MARTIN

The throng of scouts at last week's Walled Lake Western-Northville ballgame got an eyeful, all right. But it might not have been the eyeful they expected.

Riding a superior pitching effort by Chris Dominique, the Mustangs pulled off a 1-0 victory over the reason the scouts were there: Western's fastballing phenom, Dan Gabriele.

"I don't think you could have seen a better game at Tiger Stadium," said Northville Coach Bob Frellick. "Both teams were just outstanding."

The game's only run came in the fourth when Doug Hartman sliced a single to right field and sprinted home on Ken Kehoe's double down the right field line.

"We'd worked really hard in practice on getting the guys to choke up and move the ball to right field," Frellick said. "I don't think we hit more than one or two balls to left the whole game."

But about the pitching duel: Gabriele mowed through the early innings practically untouched, striking out eight of Northville's first 12 batters. From the fourth on, he looked more human. After scoring in the fourth, the Mustangs had two hits in the fifth and one in the sixth. Gabriele finished the game with 11 strikeouts. He allowed five hits and only one base on balls.

But Dominique — backed by outstanding defense — was dominant in his own right. He whiffed 10 Warriors and walked three — or more accurately, he walked the same hitter, Dean Altherr, three times.

The Warriors got a man to third twice in the ballgame — once in the fourth, and when they loaded the bases in the top of the seventh on three singles. Dominique got the last batter on a grounder to first to hang on to the win.

"Every time they got runners on, our defense just tightened up and did what they needed to do," said Frellick. "It was just a great ballgame."

The Mustangs suffered a letdown the following day, falling to Walled Lake Central 6-3. Viking starter Randy Kohler kept Northville scoreless until the seventh, scattering seven hits. Northville's Kelly Bell took the loss.

Doug Hartman had a single and a double and Keith Dutkiewicz two singles to lead Northville, while Kehoe contributed a two-run single and Mark Deal a one-run single in the seventh.

The Mustangs turned in one of their least impressive games all season in a 10-9 loss to Novi, a good Kensington Valley Conference team. Northville scored twice in the first inning, then fell behind 9-2 as Novi scored three runs in the second, three in the third and three in the fourth.

Six Mustang errors didn't help matters much — but still the game was nearly Northville's for the taking. The Mustangs rallied for six runs in the sixth to tie the score 9-9.

In the sixth, Northville loaded the bases on an error, a single and a walk. Then Novi starter Matt Spicer walked Chris Hauser to force in a run.

The next hitter he faced was his last. Spicer grooved a fastball to Mustang third baseman Scott Peterson and Peterson hammered it over the left field fence for a grand slam. Hartman followed with a single and after a wild pitch, pinch runner Jerry O'Brien hoofed it home on Paul Newitt's rip up the middle for the tying run.

Northville threatened in the top of the seventh on Tom Ross' two-out single, but Hauser's long liner to right was caught to end the inning.

Chris Willerer came in to pitch the last inning, but Novi's Greg Giorgio greeted him with a single, moved to second on a walk and to third when Novi catcher Andy Lenaghan loaded the bases by beating out a bunt.

Willerer fanned Larry McKillop and got two strikes on the next hitter, Steve Cody. Willerer then made the pitch he wanted — fastball, outside corner — but Cody reached out and slashed it off the fence in right-center to score Giorgio and end the game.

The Mustangs outthit their arch-rivals 14-10. Chris Hauser singled three times and scored three times, while Keith Dutkiewicz, Ross, Peterson and Kehoe each collected two hits.

Northville will play the winner of Monday's Walled Lake Western-Plymouth Salem game this Friday at 4 p.m. at the winner's school in the Class A district baseball tournament.

Mustangs rout Falcons, reach semifinals

By B.J. MARTIN

Northville's production line got busy when it needed to Friday, as the Mustangs routed Farmington 6-1 in the regional quarterfinal of the state soccer tournament.

The victory was one of three last week — the first time in almost a month the defending state champion Mustangs have won all three of their games.

Braced by a strong wind in the first half, Northville jumped ahead 2-0 on a pair of early goals by Kerry Lenaghan, the second a breakaway assisted by Kathy Korowin and Kim Flading.

A third Mustang goal resulted when Cheryl Spaman cleared a pass out to Kathy Korowin, who chipped a pass through to Julie Anger. Anger dribbled past the Farmington sweeper, forced the Falcon goalie to commit and pumped into the open net.

Flading cracked a high shot into the Farmington net for a 4-0 halftime lead.

Friday's winds were strong enough to keep the Mustangs from getting complacent — indeed, Falcon striker Laurie Dingle cut the lead to 4-1 early in the second half. But Anger buried a point-blank rocket off the Falcon goalie at 65:30 and set up the game's final goal minutes later.

Breaking down the left wing, Anger lifted a shot toward the near post. Just before it could be scooped up by the Falcon goalkeeper, speedy Robin Strunk cut in and popped it past her.

Northville's defense continued to play impressively — only early in the second half did the Falcons mount any flurry. Northville goalkeeper Tricia Ducker, making her first appearance following a recent leg injury, handled with ease seven Farmington shots on goal.

Northville had advanced to the regional quarterfinal by defeating Birmingham Seaholm 2-1 the previous Monday. After a first-half goal by Seaholm standout Katie Andrea and Cheryl Spaman's rocket of a tally in the second half, (assisted by Jodi Smalec and Korowin), regular time elapsed with a 1-1 score.

Lenaghan lofted a high floater in the second overtime to break the deadlock. Seaholm never recovered.

Coach Smalec attributed the win to his defense's tenacity. "Anger, Korowin and Jodi were relentless at midfield," he said, "and Michelle Cross has done an outstanding job filling in at center back. I always said she was our best fullback, because her speed can neutralize anybody."

"I put her on Katie Andrea and she did an excellent job on her. Katie's an outstanding forward, but Michelle kept her shut down. Jill Gallagher and Julie Nowka also worked well together in that game."

Wednesday, Northville defeated North Farmington 4-2, getting two first-half goals from Anger. The first came at 1:30 following a chip pass from Korowin, and the second came when an Anger's corner kick veered into the Raider net.

"Julie's been excellent on corners this season," Smalec noted. "We've picked up a lot of our goals from them."

In the second half, Spaman rocketed a corner from Anger past the Raider 'keeper for a 3-1 lead and Robin Strunk added the Mustangs' fourth goal by chasing in a lob shot by midfielder Gaynelle Wagner.

Northville will host Farmington Our Lady of Mercy at 4 p.m. today in both teams' regional semifinal. Mercy routed Ladywood 8-0 last week to advance to the semi.

The winner will advance to play the winner of the Livonia Bentley-Livonia Stevenson semifinal in the regional final at Northville Saturday (time to be announced).

Panowicz goes to state, relay team just misses

Cindy Panowicz has made the trip to the state track finals so many times she could probably get a lifetime free pass. And 1985 is no exception. For the third straight year, the Northville senior will represent the Mustangs at the state finals, to be held in Flint June 1.

At Saturday's Class A Regional meet at Westland John Glenn, Panowicz picked up second-place medals in the 100 meter hurdles (14.87), the 300 hurdles (45.0) and finished in a three-way tie for third in the high jump (4'10") to qualify in all three events.

Ann Arbor Pioneer's Sabrina Jordan took top honors in the 300 hurdles and Ann Arbor Huron's Michelle Williams won the 100 hurdles in 14.77 seconds.

Normally Panowicz's 4'10" high jump wouldn't get anyone to a state final. But none of the leapers Saturday seemed to have their usual spring. Panowicz and one of the jumpers she tied, Novi's Sherry Lawton, both have cleared 5'2" in the past.

Besides Panowicz, the closest any Northville runners came to claiming a regional medal was in the 4x400 relay. The foursome of Karen Stinson, Pam Cavanaugh, Lynn Bills and Panowicz clocked a 4:16.9 for seventh place — half a second slower than the sixth-place team and three seconds slower than the quartet ran earlier in the week.

But almost all of Northville's entries ran well. Anne Griffith did not place, but ran a personal best 5:42.5 in the 1,600 despite a painful knee injury. Christy Lenaghan clocked a personal-best 12.95 to make the semifinals of the 100 meters and a personal-best 27.9 to reach the 200 meter semis. Erin Holmberg's 27.93 in the 200 was her best time this season. Earlier in the week, Northville achieved a track rarity by tying archival Novi 64-64. The Mustangs also posted another milestone — with a 4:13.4 clocking, Stinson, Cavanaugh, Bills and Panowicz established a new school record in the 4x400 relay.

Lenaghan, Susie Rahimi, Holmberg and Stinson clocked a 1:52.96 for first in the 4x200. The Mustangs also picked up firsts from Christy Lenaghan in the 100 (13.5) and 200 (28.05), from Stinson in the 400 (62.54) and long jump (15'3 3/4"), and from Panowicz in the 100 hurdles (15.29) and 300 hurdles (45.21).

Taking seconds were Panowicz in high jump (4'10"), Bills in the 100 hurdles (16.48), Holmberg in the 200 (28.36), Sue Blanchard in the 800 (2:38.34), Jennifer Goshorn in the 1,600 (6:06.96) and Nuechterlein in the 3,200 (12:55.61).

Third-place finishes were recorded by Thompson in shot put (27'5"), Jennifer Trausch in high jump (4'6"), Kris Marrone in long jump (14'6") and 100 hurdles (18.19) and Bills in the 300 hurdles (52.23).

A Wednesday meet against Plymouth Salem was called due to thunderstorms with Salem leading 59-48 and all but the last three events in. In the meet, Goshorn won her first mile run with a 6:07.0 clocking, Julie Trausch topped 80 feet in discus for the first time, and Thompson registered a personal best in shot put of 28'3".

Northville will compete at the Western Lakes conference track meet at Walled Lake Western Wednesday, May 29.

Michelle Cross pressures a Farmington striker

Netke sixth at regional track meet

It's been a rebuilding season for men's track at both Northville and Novi high schools this year — the Novi Wildcats were winless in the Kensington Valley Conference and the Mustangs of Northville were equally winless in the Western Lakes Athletic Association.

So what was at stake in the two teams' May 13 dual meet?

Plenty. A sorely-needed victory and bragging rights in the Novi-Northville rivalry, for two things.

This time, Northville gets to brag. The Mustangs came from behind to win going away 81-56.

Thanks to a pair of 1-2-3 sweeps in shot and discus, Novi jumped to an early lead on the Mustangs. "It was neck and neck for a while," Mustang Coach Paul Osborn agreed. "But as the meet kept going we looked better. I thought we had the better relay teams, but I was a little surprised when we swept the 400."

The Mustangs answered with field-event firsts in pole vault (10'6") and long jump (19'1") from Tom Broderick and in high jump (5'5") from Tony Briningstool.

The Mustangs continued to tick off victories in running events. Individual firsts came from John Briningstool in the 110 meter high hurdles (19.2) and 200 meter dash (24.03), from Tim Millen in the 300 meter low hurdles (42.7), from Brett Netke in the 400 (53.3), from Irvan Meadows in the 800 (2:05.7), and from Alan Griffith in the 1,600 and 3,200 (4:42.7 and 10:36.4, respectively).

Northville pocketed firsts in three of the four relay races, losing the 4x400 relay on a disqualification. In the 3,200, Jeff Harp, Greg Newton, Netke and Meadows combined for an easy win in 8:42.64. In the 4x200 relay, Broderick, John Briningstool, Matt Huber and Millen combined for a 1:37.9. And in the 4x100 relay, John Briningstool, Huber, Millen and Dana Letarte combined for a 46.69 clocking.

Taking seconds were Rich Naszradi in pole vault (10 feet, a personal best), Letarte in long jump (18'3 3/4") and 100 meters (12.0) and Harp in the 400 (54.9).

Adding third-place points were John Bugar in the 100 (12.1), Broderick in the 200 (24.79), John Gird in the 400 (55.5) and John Kissinger in the 3,200 (11:05.0).

"The kids were really elated about the win," Osborn noted. "I think they've done a good job of not getting down on themselves. They've been working as hard as ever and hopefully they'll do better in the future."

Powerhouse Plymouth Salem brought the Mustangs back to earth on Wednesday by a 105-32 score.

Northville picked up five firsts in the meet: Broderick's 18'6" leap in long jump, Netke's 53.7 in the 400, Meadows' 2:07.4 in the 800, Griffith's 4:40.1 in the 1,600 and the 4x400 relay team's 3:45.6 (Gird, Meadows, Harp and Netke).

SOCCKER: Fourth week of booters' league results

10 & UNDER GIRLS: Plymouth No. 2 nipped the Stray Cats 2-1 despite a "good team effort" by the Stray Cats. Laura Berger scored the Cats' only goal. Valerie Schuerman scored the Stompers' only goal in a 1-1 tie with Plymouth No. 4. Katie Pinkelman was named the Stompers' outstanding defensive player. The Rowdies popped Farmington 3-1 on goals by Sara Carrington, Regan Wiseley and Shannon Neff. Randle McAvoy's offense and Brenda Newton's defense sparked the winners.

10 & UNDER BOYS: The Knights bowed to the Plymouth Strikers 8-0 despite well-played defense by Chris Method and good offensive effort by Emmanuel Damavoletes. Another Northville team, United, prevailed by the same 8-0 score over Livonia No. 4. Brandon Dalziel scored three times, Aaron Boyl twice, and Eric Koche, Kevin Cutchins and Mike Husak once each to pace the win. Scott Husak was selected United's defensive MVP. The Hot Spurs topped Livonia No. 7 4-2 thanks to Chris Barbara's three-goal effort and Brandon Tew's goal. David Rossing was picked the Hot Spurs' defensive player of the game, and Eddie Roth earned offensive MVP honors. Livonia Lightning trimmed the Eagles 3-0, although Eagle defender Cam Sixt contributed a fine game.

12 & UNDER GIRLS: Livonia No. 2 picked up a 3-0 win over the Stompers despite fine play by Stompers defender Michelle Ballo and striker Karen Saydak. The Blazers and the Farmington Rowdies played to a 2-2 deadlock. Laura Apiligan and Cyndy Tolsted scored the Blazers' goals, while Heather Schulenberg on defense and Jenny Rush on offense were named blazer MVPs for the game. The Pandas rolled over the Farmington Force 7-0, getting a hat trick from Susie Weidenbach and single goals from Jenny Sinkwits, Leslie Allen, Renee Larabell and Nicole Didyk. Jackie Matthews was the Pandas' outstanding offensive player and Katie McLean earned defensive honors.

12 & UNDER BOYS: The Hot Spurs knocked off Plymouth No. 2 by a 4-1 count behind defensive MVP Mike Barnett, offensive MVP Robert Kinney and goals by Pat Dorrington (2), Jon Barbara and Matt Murphy. Steve Heller scored three times and Peter Beyersdorf twice to pace a 5-2 Strikers win over Livonia No. 6. Jon Cooky contributed a strong defensive game and Kurt Skrade a strong offensive effort for the Strikers. Despite Jeff Kinney's goal, fine offense from Michael Halacka and fine defense from Matt Litzelman, Arsenal tumbled to Farmington No. 7 by a 3-1 score. United clipped Farmington No. 8 4-2, getting a pair of goals from Steve Weiger and one each from Mark Hillinger and Mike Ferguson. John Dunkerly was named United's defensive standout. Getting an outstanding "total team effort" Express chugged past Livonia No. 5 by a 7-2 tally. Matt Stevens, Chris Fredericks and Rodg Kolyo each scored twice and Patrick Kennedy once in the win.

14 & UNDER GIRLS: Jennifer Beyersdorf scored for the Pandas in a 4-1 loss to the Lakes. Amy Bowes on offense and Elizabeth DeMattia on defense were named Panda MVPs. The Socketts tied the Warriors 2-2 with Karen Kepner scoring twice. Jenny Crotteau and Kristin Raby were named defensive and Andy Francel, Andy Frey, Brad Maliszewski, Tom Unsel, Paul Butz, Kevin Delaney, David Smith, Jason Vertrees and Mark Kiraly. Defender Chris Weidenbach and goalie Roger Kimery were outstanding on defense, and Brian Tewa on offense for the winners. Goals by United's Robert Dudley and Garnett Potter led an "outstanding team effort" in a 2-1 victory over Livonia No. 1.

17 & UNDER GIRLS: Maureen Morrissey and Karen Biard scored to help Northville No. 2 hang on to a 2-2 tie with Livonia. Julie Trausch was named top defensive player for Northville. 17 & UNDER BOYS: Arsenal tied Plymouth 2-2 with Walt Wittrick scoring for Arsenal and Ian Newton earning defensive MVP honors. Paul Maliszewski and Jack Sylvestre each scored for United in a 2-0 win over the Livonia Chargers. Goalkeeper Todd Stowell earned credit for a shutout while Eric Halverson also contributed excellent defense. A "total team effort" lifted the offense. The Raiders fell to the Plymouth Spartans 4-1 with Antonio Pacheco scoring the Raiders' lone goal. Chris Shaw was the Raiders' defensive MVP. In previous week's action, Arsenal fell to Livonia No. 1 2-1 with Walt Wittrick scoring and a "total team effort" lifting Arsenal. United topped the Lakes Lakers 3-0 on goals by Steve Brook, John Larabell and Paul Maliszewski. Goalie Todd Stowell earned the shutout. Lakes Marauders clipped the Raiders 3-0 despite fine play by Raiders defender Tony Pacheco and striker Tim Goode.

Competing cousins

Novi High School's Patty Lenaghan and Northville High School's Christy Lenaghan met for the first time in a dual track meet last week. The two share more than their last name — they share grandparents and they share identical roles on the varsity track teams they run for. Sophomore Patty is Novi High School's ace varsity sprinter, holder of the school's 100 meter dash record (13.1). Freshman Christy is the top sprinter for Northville's varsity track team. In their first head-to-head competition, Christy won the first round round by nipping Patty in the 100 meters in the two teams' 64-64 tie last week. Patty aggravated a hip injury at the Novi Northville meet and an expected rematch in the 200 meters didn't take place.

NEIGHBORS

When it comes to neighbors, I have the best.

I have known my neighbor for seven years, most of my life. In the spring, we play in the rain and fly kites. In the summer, we play cops and robbers, Star Wars men, and roller skate in the parking lot behind our houses.

We climb trees and play in the mud. We have gone to his mill. We also have lemonade stands on real hot days. In the fall, we rake leaves and jump in them. We ride bikes and sometimes shop downtown.

In winter, we make snowmen and stay at each other's house overnight. We play Leggo's. We visit each other's churches and sometimes we even fight. He goes home and I go home, but we always come together again.

Luke Stockhausen is the best neighbor.

Our special 'Neighbors' supplement has become an annual feature at Sliger-Livingston Publications.

This year, in addition to our own stories and photographs about the people around us, we solicited stories from our readers about their neighbors. We asked our readers to tell us why their neighbors are special. Some even supplied photographs. We highlighted one of those submissions on our cover this year. You'll find the rest inside. Single Adopted Mother & Child

Story by Patricia N. Bowling/Photos by Steve Fecht

At age 30, Mary Kay Dambrun was certain she wanted to be a mother.

So certain, in fact, that she decided it wasn't worth waiting around for marriage.

"I can always get married, but I can't have children all my life," the Novi resident concluded.

After consulting her parents, Dambrun resolved to adopt a child. The thrill of "expecting," the tedious wait for a baby's arrival and the joy of cradling her child for the first time — all these would be hers eventually. But as a single adoptive mother, this sequence of events would be stretched over a period of eight years, rather than only nine months.

With her son Michael down for his afternoon nap, Dambrun quietly begins explaining the eight-year pursuit that led to her adoption of an 18-month-old Salvadorean boy in March.

"When I turned 30, I realized that getting married wasn't that important, but having children was," she begins.

Initial inquiries to adoption agencies made it seem her chances were slim, at best. "Some people just laughed. When you'd tell them you were single, they'd say, 'You've got to be kidding!'"

Largely for financial reasons, she had chosen a "parent initiated adoption" — "that's where you do all the paperwork yourself. It takes longer because you have to do all the little bitty things," she explains.

The Committee for Single Adoptive Parents in Washington D.C. provided her with a list of agencies that would place children with single parents. They all had various stipulations, such as only placing children with parents of a certain religion, and many involved exorbitant fees.

With the scarcity of babies available for adoption in the United States, it didn't take long to rule out an American baby. "When I started out, I really hadn't thought of an international adoption," she recalls.

"I don't remember when I made the transition, really. The idea of adopting a baby from another country never bothered me. Maybe it's because the school where I teach (Mercy High School in Farmington Hills) has so many different kinds of kids. Color just didn't present a problem for me."

For five years Dambrun investigated this agency and that agency, making little progress. Discouragement was inevitable,

Michael helps decide what's on for dinner tonight but along the way she met others on the same treadmill. Seeing some of them succeed brought frustration but at the same compelled her to keep trying.

In June 1982 she learned of an adoption agency being established in El Salvador by the Northwest San Salvador Rotary Club. The organization was founded in an attempt to find homes for children orphaned by the war. But it took two years of paperwork and political finagling before the agency was able to begin placing children.

"They kept promising you this was going to happen. You know the Spanish, they're always saying manana (tomorrow). Everything is put off and put off. Every time I called, they'd just tell me to have patience."

In January last year Dambrun made a decision that significantly accelerated the process of locating a child for her. With visions of ruffles and lace, she had spent nearly seven years committed to adopting a girl, even though boy babies are much more plentiful.

"I worried about what I would do with a boy," she recalls, noting that raising a girl seemed more comfortable.

Those reservations finally disappeared after she cared for her brother's newborn boy last year. Holding the infant in her arms, it occurred to her, "A baby is a baby . . . I called San Salvador in March and told them I would accept a boy."

Two months later a young woman from a small city outside San Salvador walked into the Rotary Club orphanage with an 8½-month-old, 10-pound boy. She called the child Charlie, probably after the cartoon character Charlie Brown which is popular around San Salvador.

According to the adoption documents, the mother informed officials at the orphanage she was unmarried and could not care for the infant. She simply signed an abandonment decree and left.

On May 11 last year the orphanage called Dambrun to tell her they had a baby for her. "I just kept saying are you sure he's mine?" she recalls. "They kept telling me, 'Very skinny!'"

The baby in Dambrun's photo album has drawn cheeks and almost skeletal arms. But those first pictures of Michael look nothing like the bright-eyed toddler now up from his nap and grinning as he plays with magazines on the living room floor.

Michael spent 10 months in the orphanage while officials plodded through his adoption paperwork. The legal work was well underway when last year's election brought in a new government — including new local judges, which required new signatures on all the adoption papers.

"These (South American) countries have phenomenal amounts of paperwork. I think the paperwork weighed more than Michael when he arrived!" Dambrun laughs.

Michael's scheduled arrival in the U.S. was further delayed when he had emergency surgery in February. "All I kept thinking was this poor little baby is in a hospital all by himself," Dambrun recalls. "But it wasn't really like he was my child, because I hadn't seen him yet."

Michael recovered from the surgery quickly and was on a plane for his new home on March 21. He was accompanied by another Michigan woman who recently adopted a girl from the same San Salvador orphanage.

"When she handed him to me in the airport, I didn't know whether to laugh or cry," she recalls.

The following week was unsettling for both Michael and his new mother. An adopted child goes through a period of "grieving," Dambrun explains. The bewilderment is particularly acute for children from foreign countries. Everything they can hear, see, touch and smell is different from what they've known. Michael would cry — or "wail" as Dambrun describes it — sometimes for a full hour. Nothing would comfort him.

But this grieving period lasted less than two weeks. Now Michael is eating, sleeping and playing normally, and is picking up his new language with ease.

"He came babbling Spanish. Now everything is in English," Dambrun says, proudly listing "baby's first words." The

Norm Somers

"Tis the men, not the houses, that make the city." — Thomas Fuller, M.D.

It's a sad reality of our age that many neighbors never greet each other, exchange a wave or smile in passing, nor sincerely question the status of those closest about them.

Not all neighbors share spatial proximity. I have come to consider some of my dearest neighbors the people I deal with daily by phone. A warm voice, a sincere concern for the cares of my day, a touch of humor at a moment when it is badly needed, is the soil on which the neighborhood of my work day is built.

Me and My NEIGHBORS

One such "resident" of that neighborhood is Mr. Norm Somers, the pharmacist at South Lyon Pharmacy. The nature of my work requires his service on a routine basis.

People prefer doing business with a friend. Integrity is difficult to fabricate over the phone. He has a voice that welcomes, a sense of humor that uplifts, and a laugh that should be bottled and sold for medicinal purposes...which would unfortunately put him out of business.

Dr. Fuller's quote being accurate, South Lyon can be proud of one of its neighbors. I'm sure everyone who does business with him feels as I do, that South Lyon is a friendly neighborhood because of Mr. Norm Somers.

It's a good feeling to know that all around you there are people you can depend on, to look out for your interest and your property.

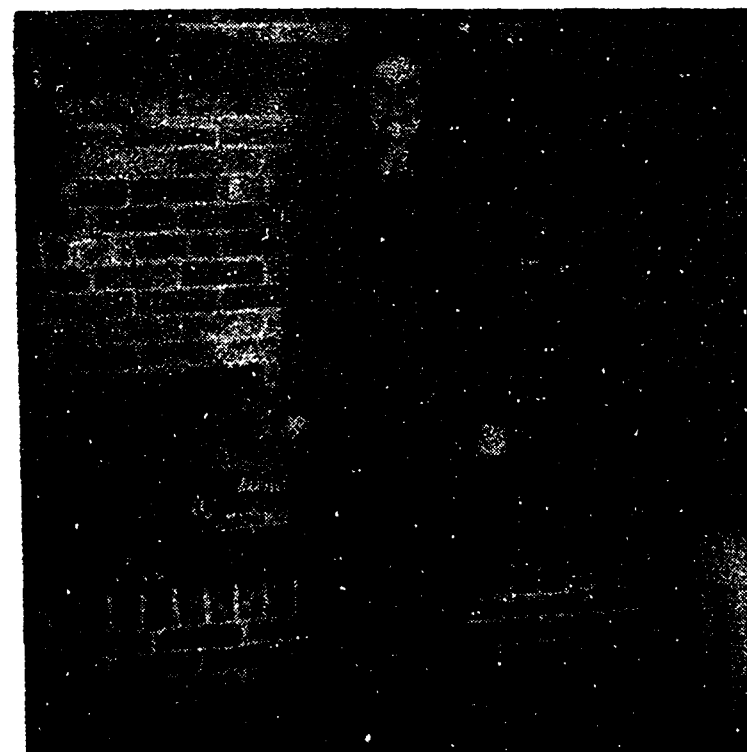

We are blessed with not just one but several terrific neighbors. I remember the time I was locked out of the house and Louise, my across-the-street neighbor, was right there to help.

Then, on occasion, I needed someone to receive a package for me and Florence did it gladly.

And when I went away, Leslie took care of our cat, just to name a few.

We have been here at 115 Wellington for eight years now, and thanks to our great neighbors we have totally enjoyed them. Thank you all so much for that.

Machiorlatti strikes a variety of poses

Cover Girl

When we think of models, we think of youth and good looks. Joan Machiorlatti certainly has the looks. And with those looks, who needs youth? Story by Linda Densmore

Joan Machiorlatti, content in her earlier years to raise a family, wanted more for herself—and went for it.

Always wanting to model, Joan began to pursue her dream three and a half years ago. Today, at age 50, she is a professional model with John Robert Powers Modeling Agency in Southfield.

Recently, she attended the Modeling Association of America International Convention in New York City, where she coached and assisted models along with Judi March, director of John Robert Powers.

Last year, at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, Joan competed in the same contest, which featured 1,000 models. Contestants were judged in four categories: photo posing, runway modeling, makeup, and television commercial. Joan received awards for the first two categories and a third place trophy for makeup. For her self-written television commercial, she proudly possesses a first place trophy.

Dynamic as she is beautiful, Joan relates her experiences with a warm humor.

"At my age, 10 poses in 10 seconds! I start standing and end with the last poses on the floor, so I won't have to creak back up."

Joan, whose first place television commercial performance required her to use some ingenuity in the form of a nun's habit, described how the television commercial was received by the judges.

"You know how hard it is to keep up with 30 boys and girls in the fifth grade? I've tried everything from discipline, to extra homework, to bribery. I've found the answer," Joan said.

She lifted her layers of sacred habit to expose her undergarments of red running shorts and Nike running shoes. It was a hit that the judges still remember this year.

A resident of Milford for 19 years, Joan has raised two daughters, Julie, 24, and Jennifer, 23. Her husband, Joe Machiorlatti, owns Mr. Joe's Bar and Restaurant in Southfield. Joan seized the opportunity to pursue a modeling career because it fit perfectly into her life. She didn't want to work full-time, but she wanted to do something more than volunteer work. She also felt that she was not good at being a "clinger," and that getting out of the house more often would be a positive experience.

"I wanted the cake and to eat it too," Joan said.

"You really never know what you can do until you try it. Pursue the things you really want. Listen to your heart song. I did and I'm having fun in just what I'm doing now."

According to Joan, "life begins at 45... If you haven't noticed, the age in America is going up."

Currently, Joan is busy making preparations for her next competition. When she isn't modeling locally for Beverly's Casuals or staying fit on the golf course, Joan also teaches modeling at John Robert Powers.

"Not everyone wants to be a model nor can all go on the runway in New York. But if fashion and beauty interest you there are many aspects to investigate, ranging from merchandising to teaching to personal self-awareness. As with anything, there is a place for you. Search for it," Joan said.

Joan stressed personal happiness and care and respect for the body.

"There is no such thing as an unattractive woman, only the woman who does not know how to make the most of herself," she said.

Know your weak areas and then start working on them. "We must stop making excuses for ourselves and start looking at our options. People make excuses for all parts of their lives. They say 'my age is against me. I don't have the clothes.' I don't..."

"My age doesn't mean beans! And you don't have to spend a lot of money on clothes," Joan said.

"I'm not a label person. I love my K Mart scarf," she said as she draped it over her shoulder and tied a bold knot.

Joan has a flair for putting it all together. In her closet is an assortment of apparel, ranging from antique clothes purchased from a New York resale shop to a studded bandanna scarf from Sachs Fifth Avenue. According to Joan, used baseball shirts are the "in-thing" in New York, especially Japanese baseball shirts.

Joan said she must give serious consideration to an outfit on display in New York before she buys it.

"I must be careful. I must ask myself if this outfit will make it in the Milford grocery store," Joan said.

Joan does not let her age dictate what she wears. She can dress funky or conservatively and still look appropriate. What she has is the confidence to dress anyway she would like to.

Joan said she will wear blue jeans until she is at least 75-years-old.

"How you dress is governed by what kind of life you lead. Be it a student, teacher, or business person. You can still develop an individual style," Joan said.

"If you work for IBM for instance, and must dress the part, then do something to your fact to bring yourself out," Joan said.

The whole trick is learning how to dress and how to pull yourself together, according to Joan. "It's the total look; the hair, the makeup, the clothes and the spirit."

"Awards are beside the point. The important thing is that you get there."

Joan hopes she will serve as an inspiration to women of all ages in realizing their full potential.

"As your body changes, let that person in you continue to grow. As your life changes, seek out the fulfillment of your dreams."

Joan best summed up her thoughts when she said, "you can only be young once, but you can beautiful over and over and over again."

"My being ordained as a woman minister is something I take very seriously."

Kids are a big part of Taliaferro's ministry

Taliaferro delivers an upbeat sermon

In the quiet sanctuary of her church office, Jo Taliaferro hammers away at her typewriter with a vengeance.

The knock on the door seems a welcome interruption for the assistant pastor who jumps to her feet with hand extended.

"I'm not a good sit-behind-the-desk person," she confides as she directs her visitor to a chair.

As Minister of Education at First Presbyterian Church of Northville, Taliaferro finds herself squeezing in office hours when the time allows.

Most often she is checking in on preschoolers, helping senior high students plan a car wash or teaching an evening adult education class.

"I preach once in a while at Sunday service," Taliaferro says, noting she'll occasionally fill in behind the pulpit for senior minister, Dr. Lawrence Chamberlain.

Though her ordination qualifies her to perform baptisms, weddings, funerals and the like, most of Taliaferro's energies are spent in her role as minister of Christian education.

She notes that her initial plans were to go into teaching after receiving her bachelor's degree in Spanish, English and German from Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa.

In God She Trusts

Story by Michele M. Fecht/Photos by Steve Fecht

In fact, she says she was well into her graduate studies in Spanish Education when she first thought about the ministry as her life's work.

"I was doing a career evaluation and found I was doing things because my parents wanted me to," she notes.

She says that while the ministry was not a lifelong dream, considerable soul searching as well as support from the senior pastor in her home church took her to Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia.

"I found I could teach, preach, read and use my musical skills," she says.

"With the ministry, things are always changing.

"I'm finding I always have to adjust to new challenges," she adds.

Meeting challenges — in her work and personal life — is something Taliaferro does with considerable courage, enthusiasm and an uncanny sense of humor.

At 32, she is the first female minister in the 150-year history of Northville's Presbyterian church.

"My being ordained as a woman minister is something I take very seriously," she says.

While she admits more women are breaking down the traditional all-male clerical barriers, Taliaferro notes that female ministers continue to struggle for acceptance.

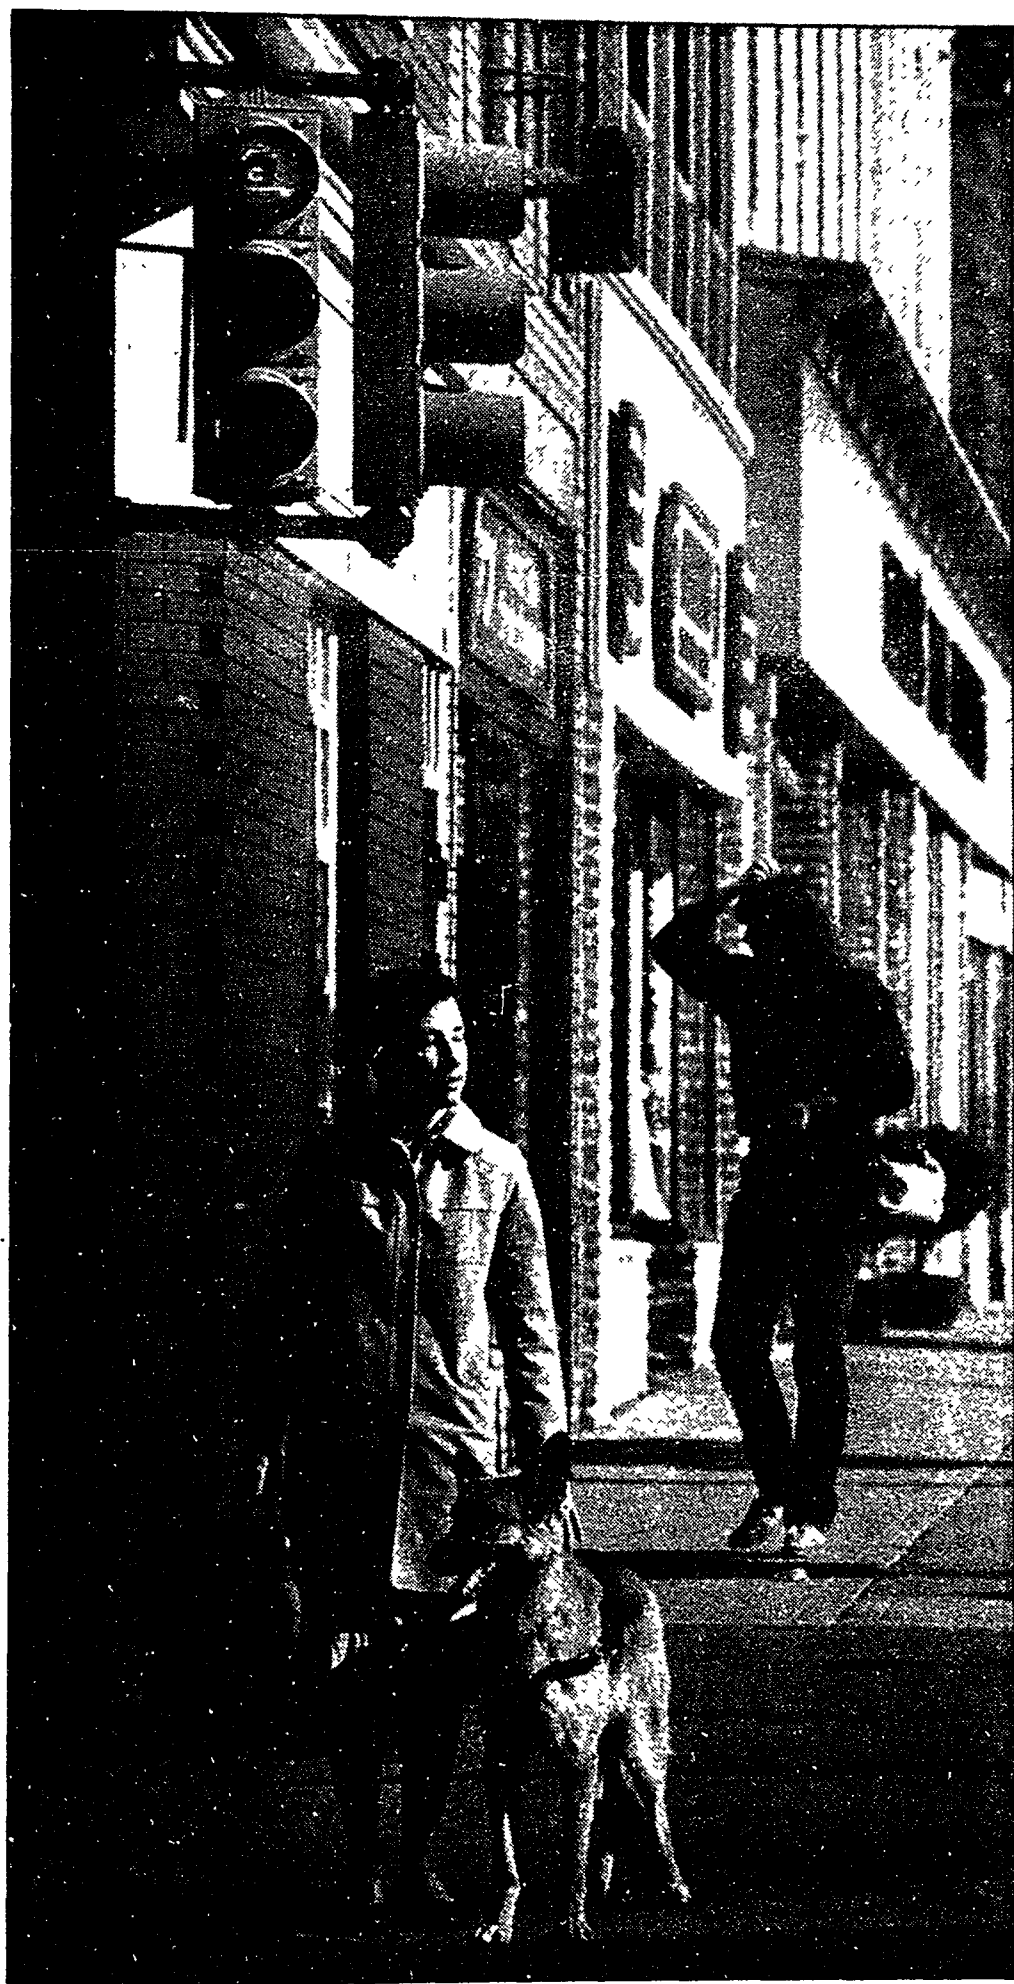

"The senior pastor or man in the field is still the one people look to first," she observes.

"However, I think inroads are being made so that women will be viewed as competent."

Though she may be blazing the trail as the first woman minister at Northville's First Presbyterian Church, Taliaferro notes with confidence that "I won't be the last."

She says networking has helped many women ministers overcome some of their apprehensions and notes there "is a good support system of women pastors in this presbytery."

In a profession still largely male-dominated, Taliaferro observes that "women who have their own churches are at a much greater advantage,

On the streets, two-year-old leader dog Cybil is "the boss"

"I'm not a good sit-behind-the-desk person"

"That's eventually where I want to be," she says, noting that of the 98 churches in the judicatory, some seven or eight women pastor their own church.

Taliaferro, who holds a master's degree in Christian Education and a doctorate in ministry, served as interim minister to senior high youth at the Village Presbyterian Church in Shawnee Mission, Kansas, before being offered her current post in January, 1984.

In the year and a half she has been in Northville, Taliaferro says she has found considerable support not only from church parishioners but the community as well.

"Northville's a nifty little town," says the Kansas native. "I like the convenience of being able to walk where ever I want to go."

Un sighted since birth, Taliaferro and her most constant companion, Cybil, a two-year old German Shepard, are a familiar sight on their rounds downtown.

"Cyb is an excellent worker," Taliaferro says, noting that she received the dog through Seeing Eye Inc. last August.

Taliaferro mentions that her first dog, Hattie, who was with her for more than 10 years, was retired in July.

A vehement supporter of the Seeing Eye program, the assistant pastor explains she went back to one of its schools in New Jersey last summer for a month-long training with Cybil.

Part of the school's appeal, she says, is that dogs are matched with owners who have similar personalities and temperments.

"Cybil and I both claim to have a good sense of humor," Taliaferro says of the match.

After 10 months together, Taliaferro notes she and Cyb have pretty much mastered their routine — from traveling to and from the church to heading up to the pulpit. More important, however, is the love and trust shared between the two companions.

"She is much more than my eyes," the assistant pastor confides.

"On the road, in the street, Cybil is the boss," she explains.

However, she's quick to point out that "Cyb's not a little automated machine that takes me to the drug store."

She notes for instance, that at a street light, "I have to tell her when to cross."

"It's my job to be very aware of traffic patterns," Taliaferro says. "Cybil's job is to keep me from being a hood ornament or decorating fenders."

Taliaferro: 'Courageous'

Taliaferro notes that while "nothing in Cyb's training is of a protective nature, the rule of thumb is that a Seeing Eye dog is not to be touched or bothered while in harness."

Though she concedes that Cybil may at times get off track, she appreciates passersby who offer directions rather than take matters into their own hands.

Independent and straightforward, Taliaferro says she "believes in being up front" about her unsightedness.

"I don't put myself in circles of non-sighted people," Taliaferro relates. "I've adjusted to a sighted world — I've found it's comfortable for me."

However, she concedes that her situation may leave others uncomfortable.

"I love the contact I have with children," she says, "because they are so honest."

"The whole issue of my not being sighted is far more easily dealt with by children than adults," she says, noting "kids are more open to challenges and new experiences."

"As adults we're more set in our ways — we become inflexible."

She notes that as a minister, she makes the most of her best attributes such as voice, use of language and imagery.

"I can't make eye contact when I preach," Taliaferro says, "therefore people have to adjust to something else."

Lawrence Chamberlain, who describes Taliaferro as a "very courageous and creative young lady," says her strength as a preacher comes out of her life situation.

"We are lucky to have her as a part of our team," he notes, adding that her "talents and sensitivity" are among her many strong suits.

Taliaferro is quick to point out that her attitude is a result of a supportive upbringing.

"I was in Girl Scouts, church work, played kick ball and sang in choirs since I could walk," Taliaferro says of her childhood. "That was due to the support and energy of my parents and teachers."

"I've also water skied and snow skied," she notes. "None of these things ever would have happened if it wasn't for the start I had early in life."

Taliaferro still shares an enthusiasm for such activities and counts cooking, reading, riding her tandem bike, being outdoors and walking as among her favorite pastimes.

"I also love the water," she says.

"If we could just schedule worship service on a big pontoon boat in the middle of Lake Michigan," she says, with a grin.

"It sure would make baptism a lot easier."

Marx and a "trinket" sweater

Most of us simply admire the clothes of local celebrities. That's no so for Brigett Marx. They admire her creative clothes. Story by Marilyn Herald/Photos by John Galloway

Great DESIGNS

Milford's Bridgett Marx displays one of her one-of-a-kind knit creations

Have you ever admired Marilyn Turner's unusual sweater or elegant necklace on "Kelly and Company?" You might be surprised to find that those lovely things were designed and created by your neighbor if you reside in Milford.

The creations of Bridgett Marx of Milford can best be described as innovative. No cable-stitch cardigans or simple little string of "basic pearls" are among Marx's collection. Both her sweaters and necklaces are different, trendy, even unique and are often "one-of-a-kind." Her creations make a "statement" for the wearer that needs no underlining.

For Turner, Marx creates special necklaces to go with her wardrobe. "Obviously, you don't wear my sweaters and necklaces together," she explained. "They would clash. The sweaters have so much in their own design that they don't need necklaces."

Turner recently showed Marx what she plans to wear most this fall from her extensive wardrobe and asked Marx to make the necklaces to compliment the colors and styles.

"I'm custom coloring all the beads," Marx reported. "And then I had to lighten the materials and designs as far as weight

"I turned on the TV and there she (Marilyn Turner) was in some of my knit wear."

goes because Marilyn is so tiny and can't wear the heavy jewelry."

Marx said Turner also wears some of her knits, like the outfit she was wearing for a Christmas show. "I turned on the TV and there she was in some of my knit wear."

A former model, Marx wears her own creations with flair. A sweater adorned with hanging ends of yarn and small pastel bows looks attractive on Marx's slim frame. She can toss a long string of large beads around her neck and over her shoulder and it looks just right for her.

Marx's sweaters, under the "Bridgett" label, and her Cassia jewelry line are on sale at Quintessence in the Pine Lake Mall. On the other hand, you could go to Marshall Field's or Macy's in San Francisco to select your favorites.

The unusual necklaces are also available at Beada Beada on Woodward Avenue in Royal Oak where Marx has four "stringers" making up her designs. "I get my ideas from everywhere, sometimes on trips with my husband Greg, sometimes women come in and describe what they want."

"I have a photographic memory so I don't need to sketch things as I see them. In fact, I don't draw but I have a girl who draws the designs for me."

Don't expect to find Bridgett or Cassia items on the bargain table. The sweaters sell for $95-$450, as do the necklaces.

Although she began knitting at age seven and has never really stopped creating, Marx does little actual knitting on her sweaters now. Kathy Schoenbeck of Brighton and Sandra Retterman of Milford make the sweaters.

Schoenbeck, a hairstylist, works with a knitting machine programmed by Marx. "The machine is something like a loom. I punch the cards to do what I want and set up the colors and Kathy executes them. The sweaters are then finished by hand. She makes about four outfits — skirts and pullovers — a month."

Retterman, a school bus driver, knits Marx's sweater designs by hand as she waits for kids to board the bus. She completes approximately two sweaters a week, Marx noted.

Marx got into jewelry-making and design by accident. She was braiding a necklace of two millimeter beads for her husband as a Christmas present, purchasing the gold-filled beads a thousand at a time at Beada Beada because "they were so expensive."

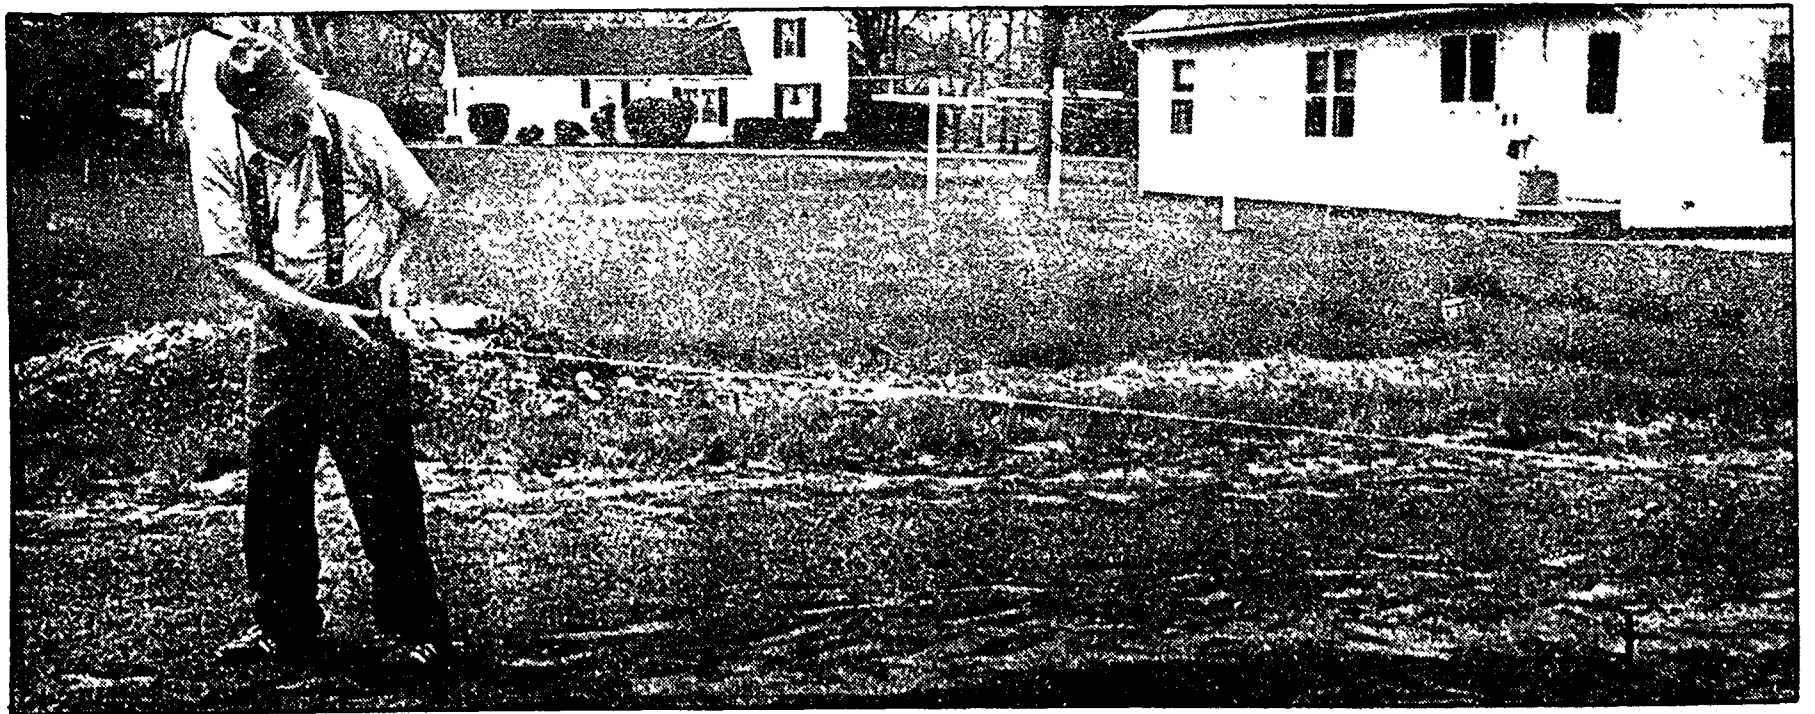

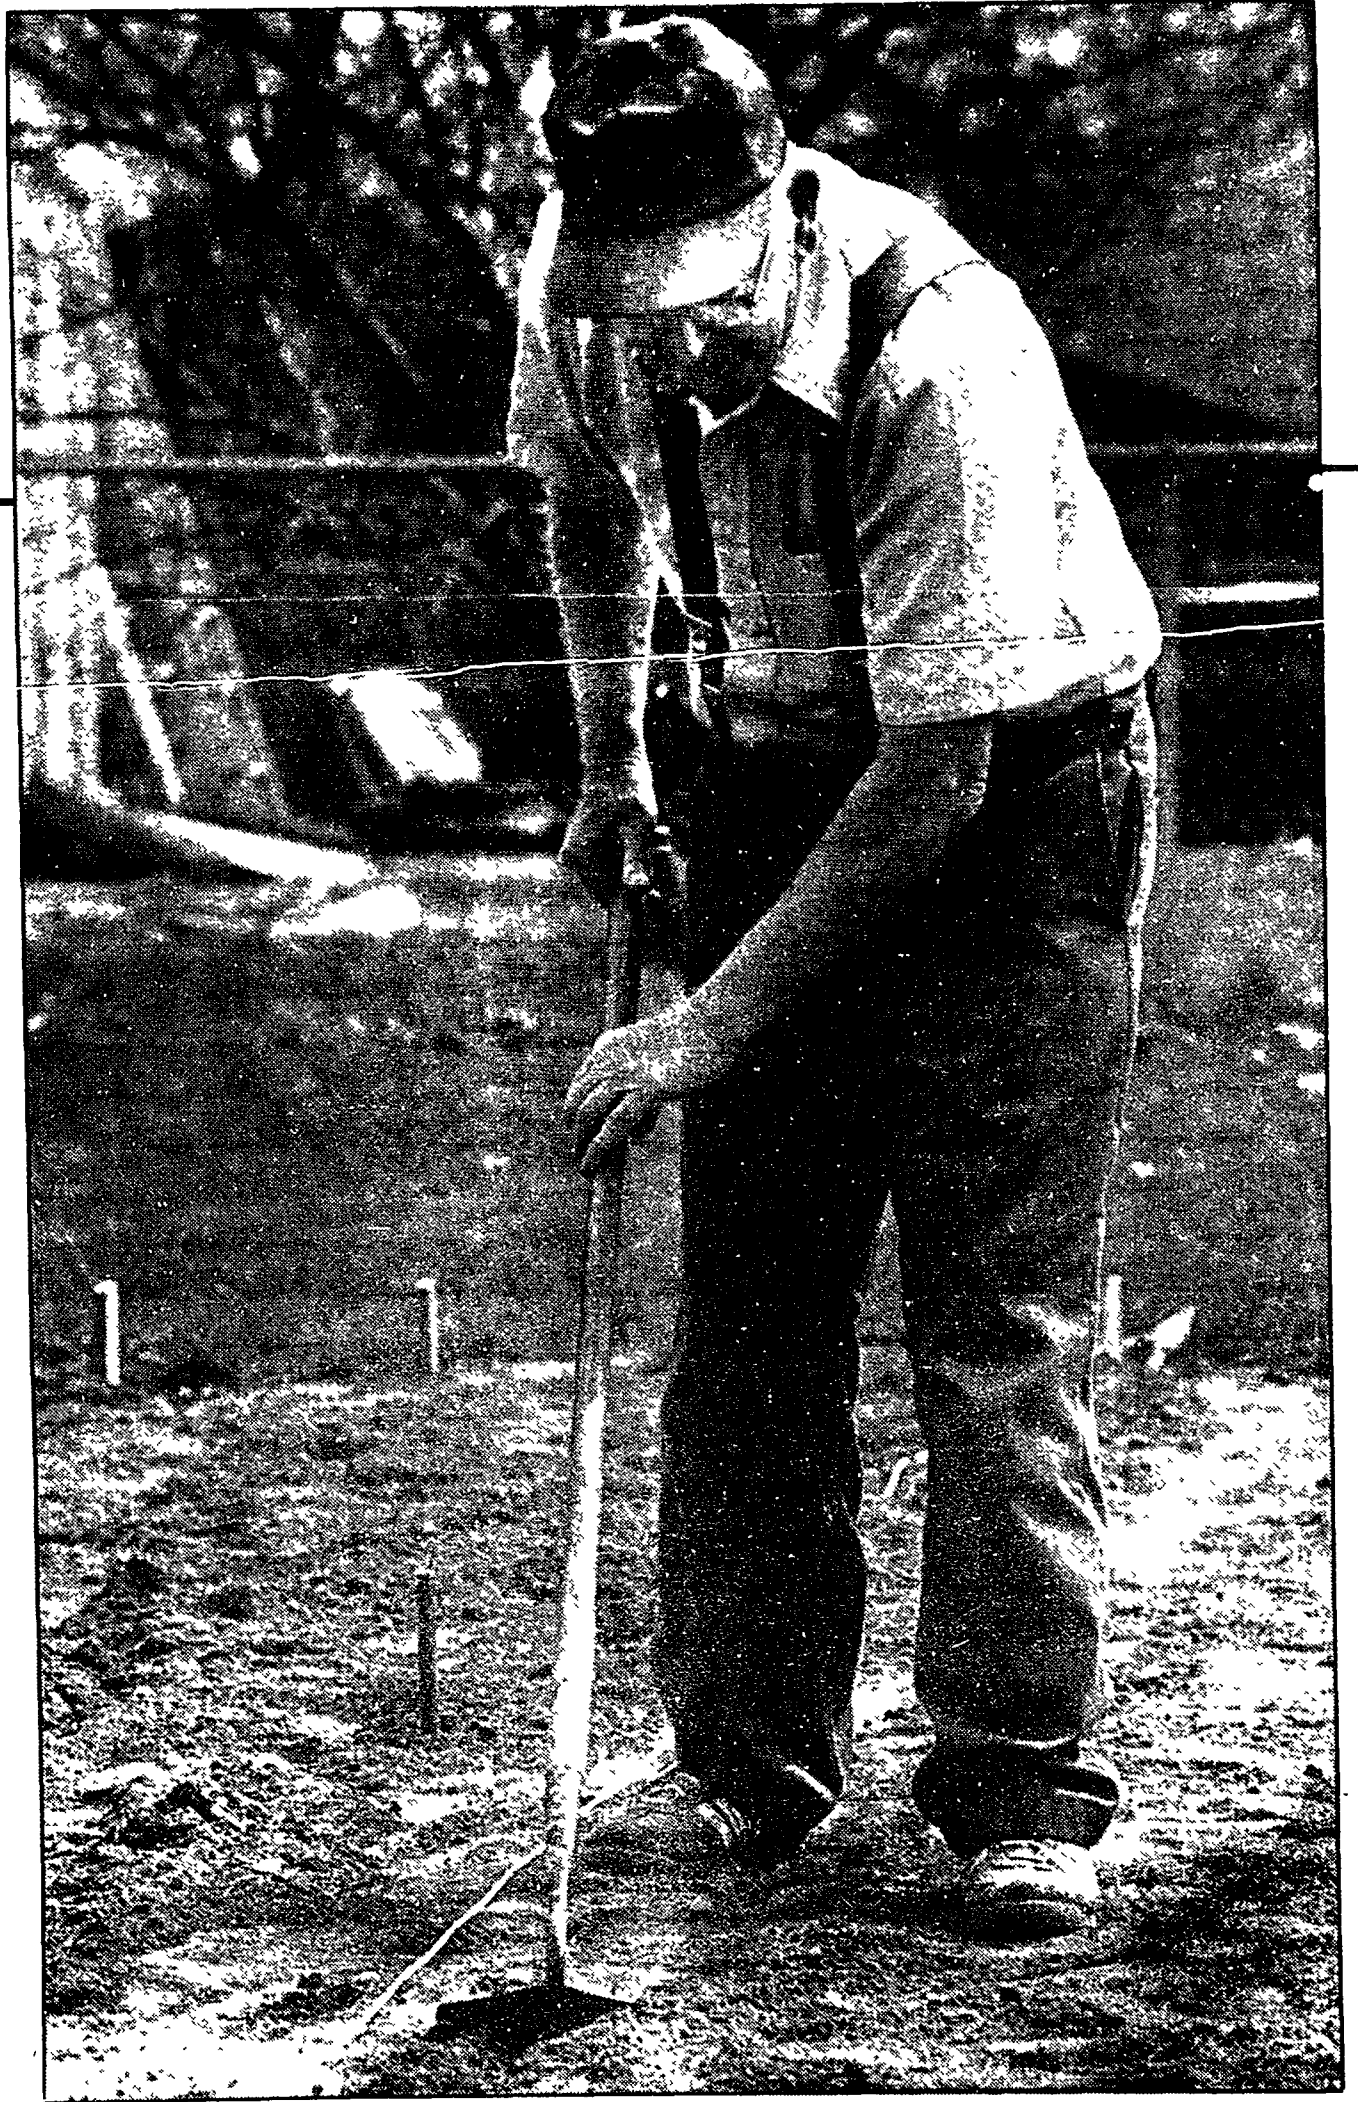

The store's owner was so taken with the idea of someone having the patience to do anything so intricate, that he hired her.

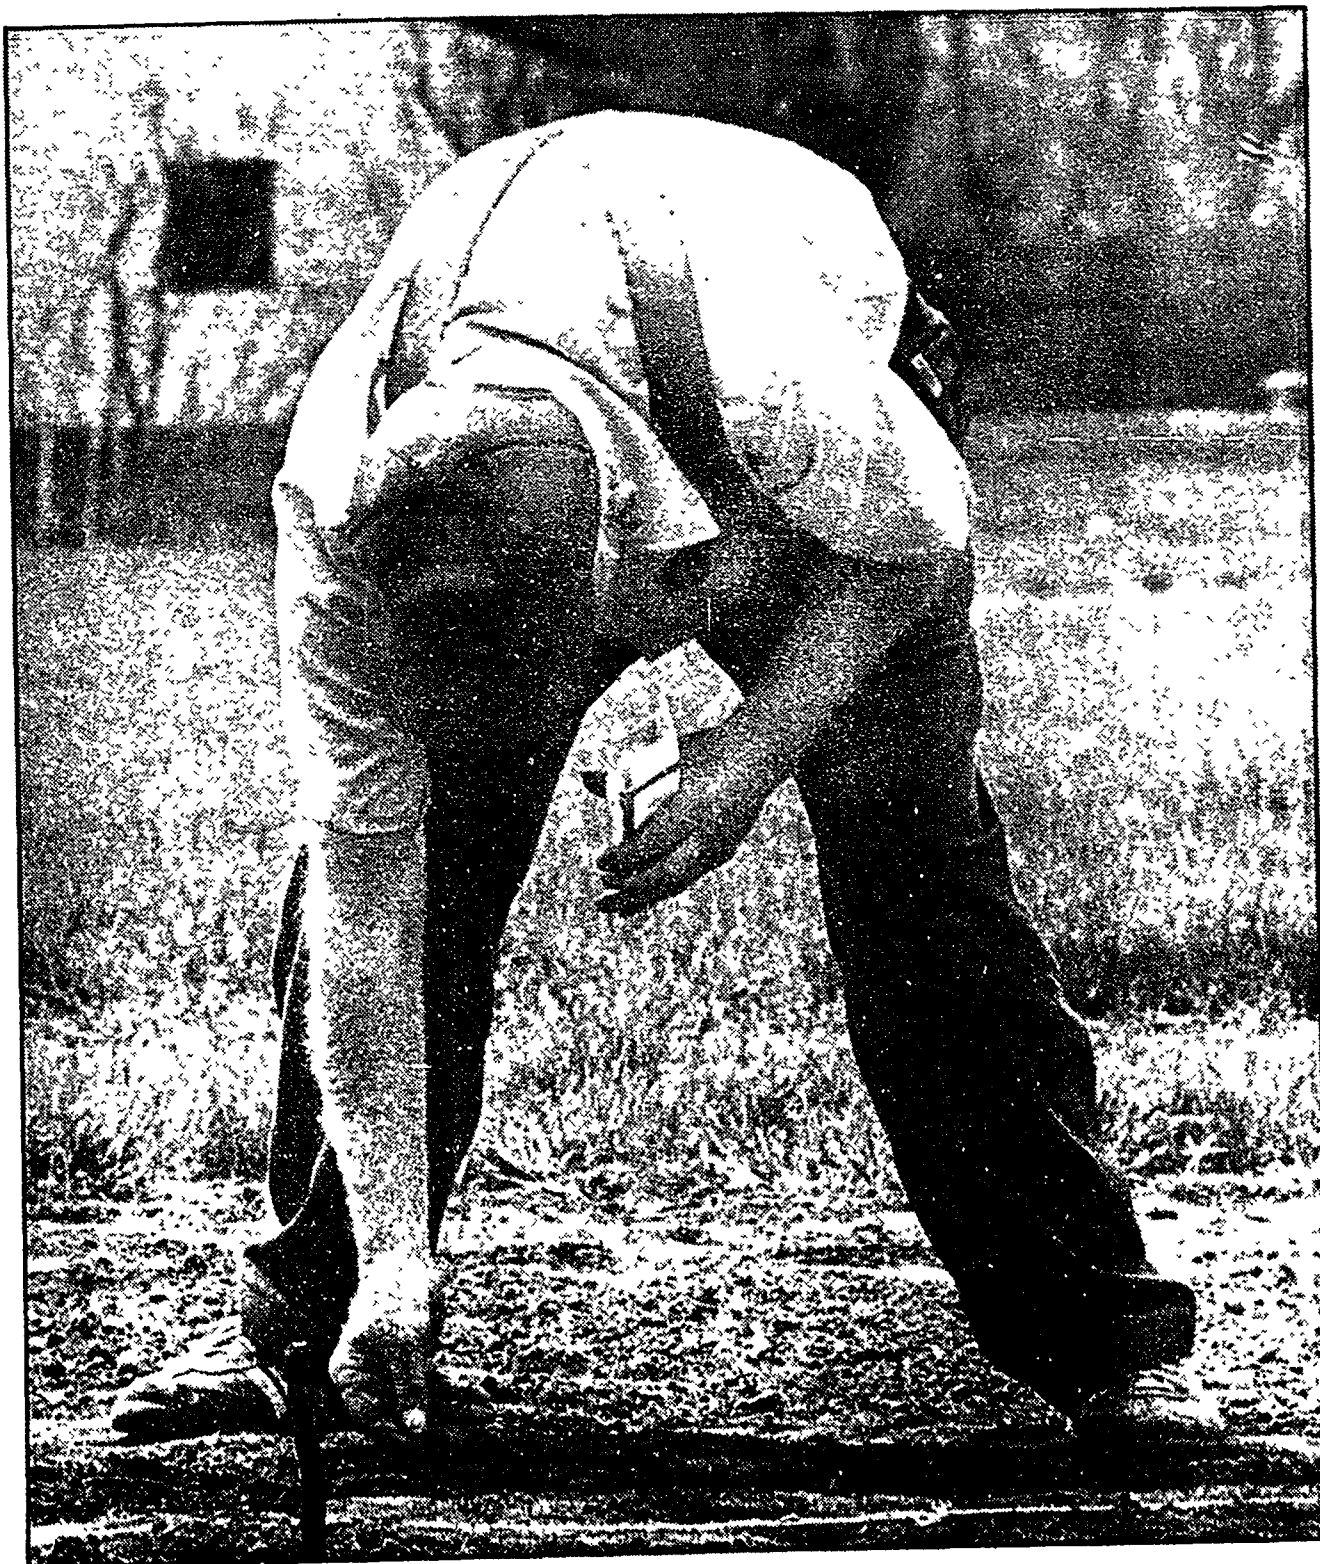

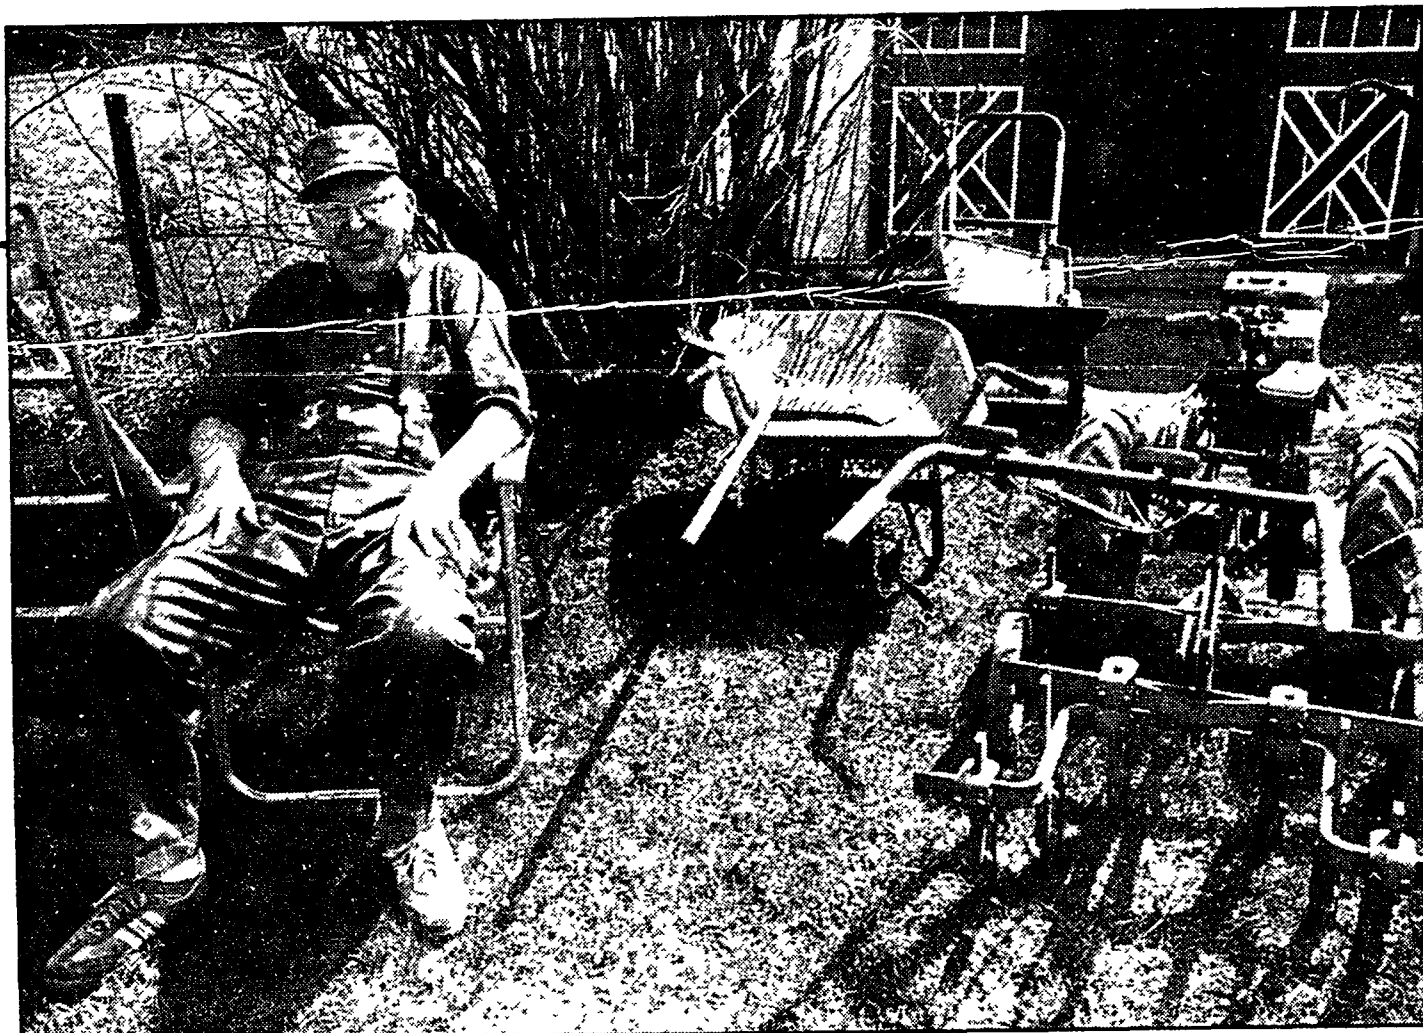

Later, she went to work for Robert Kidd, a weaver at Cranbrook, who owned Textures and Textiles. She stayed there five years and during that time helped weave nine huge panels for Federal Mogul. Each panel was three stories high, Marx said and they had to be stored in three different houses because they took up so much room.

When Textures and Textiles closed, Marx returned to Beada Beada, working for Chris Castleberry.

HOE DOWN

It's a place to forget about the rest of the world, a place where things can grow. And retiree Gordon Calkins has been growing them for 32 years. Photos by John Galloway

Milford retiree Gordon Calkins would rather work in his garden than do a lot of things. "I forget about the rest of the world when I'm out there," he says. "I also like to see things grow."

The advent of warm weather is all that is needed for Calkins to begin spading, planting and watering.

Corn, cucumbers, beans, carrots, cabbage, parsnips, squash, beets, tomatoes and peppers are his usual plantings — "Enough to feed three families," he says. "Nothing goes to waste."

Calkins also maintains an asparagus bed and raspberry plants.

"I rarely use any fertilizer — just rye, leaves and household garbage like peelings."

The 73-year-old Milford resident has been tending his Washington Street garden for 32 years. His avocation got started with a "victory garden" he planted during World War II

A 'weighty' job

When the ships pull in, he goes to work using methods as old as Archimedes. Story by Sue Kauppila/Photos by John Galloway

Most people have seen huge semi-trucks pull into weigh stations along interstate highways to have their cargo weighed. But weighing a ship could be a difficult job unless, of course, one is a marine surveyor.

Mike Fisher of South Lyon is just that. From April until the Saint Lawrence Seaway freezes over, Fisher travels to major Great Lakes ports and "weighs" ships.

Ship owners and operators call his home and tell him when their ship is expected to dock. Fisher meets the ship and performs his duties.

Often Fisher is hired to determine what the cargo weighs so that proper payment for it can be made.

To do this, Fisher takes into account where the water level of the ship is at according to the markings on the bow of the ship. "How I perform my job dates back to Archimedes and the displacement of water," he continued.

Using a calculator and working at his kitchen table, Fisher determines the weight of the ship minus the cargo and comes up with the necessary findings for the creditor or banker.

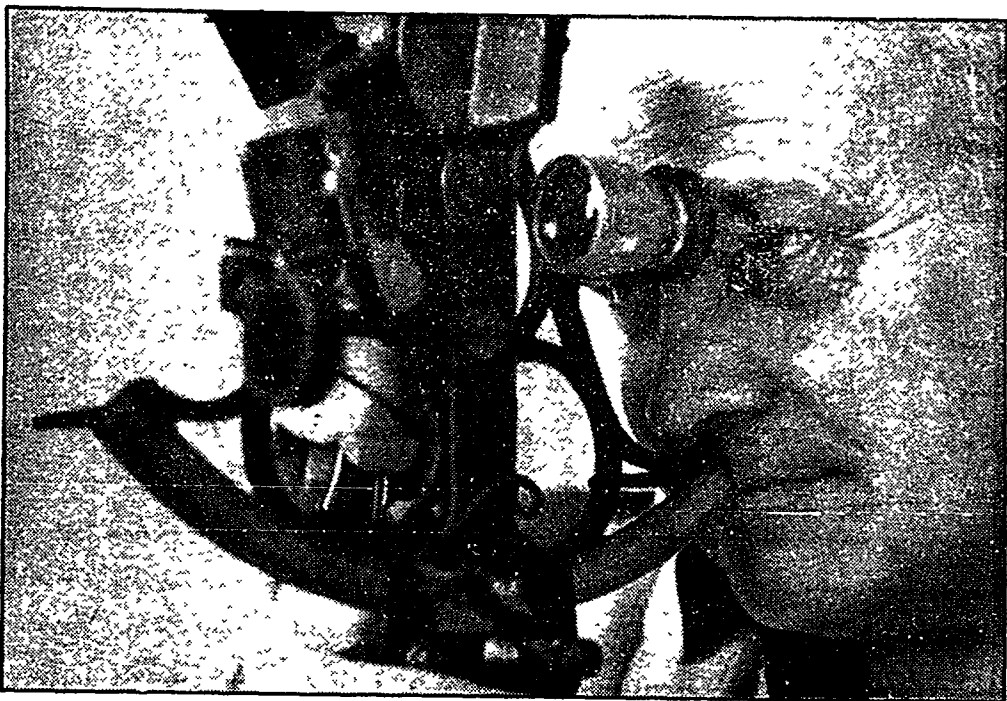

"If I weigh the ship before and after it is loaded, and take into consideration the ballast and fuel used during the voyage, I can then issue a certificate on the weight of the cargo. That draft survey, as it is called, is taken to the bank which can then issue funds or extend a letter of credit," he related.

In some instances, creditors or bankers want to know the condition of the cargo before it is unloaded. Fisher and his assistant inspect such cargos as steel, potash, grain, coke and the like.

And finally, Fisher is asked to determine the physical condition of a ship for its owner.

"I am often called at the end of a charter voyage and the owner wants to know for sure whether the ship is in the condition it left him or whether it has been damaged in any way," he explained.

In all cases, Fisher places his reputation on the line when he signs the papers indicating his conclusions.

Fisher is still handy with the sextant

Typically, Fisher works on three ships in a day and covers 200 to 250 assignments in his eight month working period.

"In the summertime there just aren't enough hours in the day," Fisher said. "I am often gone for 18 hours in one stretch."

Although he primarily works at the ports of Detroit and Toledo, he also travels to Sault St. Marie, Chicago, Holland, Michigan, Milwaukee, Duluth, and Green Bay for example.

Fisher has also worked on jobs that have taken him to South America and Europe.

"I always enjoy myself, but it really takes me out of circulation too long here. Then I don't get called because the operators find someone else," he said, noting that there are three other marine surveyors whose home base is Detroit.

He also does a lot of work for Canadian and Japanese ship companies. Sometimes there are language barriers when an entire crew is Japanese, Fisher added.

The South Lyon resident finds most ship operators "very good people, by and large."

"They are fun and I see some on a fairly regular basis. New people that I meet are often very apprehensive about Detroit because of the negative things they have heard," he noted.

The couple decided to work on the same ship together and joined the Oronsay. "It was better than the Love Boat and we sailed around the world 2½ times."

Fisher admits that he truly enjoys his job because it is associated with ships and the sea which he loves.

A native of England, Fisher grew fond of the sea when his father worked for the Burlington Hotel which overlooked the English beach.

He also recalled the 200- to 300-foot cliffs of Flamborough on the eastern coast of England. "It was the ultimate of fishing villages and coastal living. The people around us were interesting and filled with tales."

Fisher was an officer in the merchant navy and studied at South Hampton University for one year where he studied seamanship and nautical astronomy.

In 1952, he joined the ship Cannanore and was off to India and the Far East. The freighter loaded up machinery and manufactured goods in England and ended up in Singapore, China, Korea, Japan, and Australia.

In 1955, Fisher began working on passenger ships. "Those were the glorious days," he remembered.

It was while he was a junior second officer and went ashore in the Suez that he met Diana, his wife, who was an assistant purser on another ship. "We had a whale of a good time," he said, chuckling.

The couple decided to work on the same ship together and joined the Oronsay. "It was better than the Love Boat and we sailed around the world 2½ times," Fisher recalled.

In 1963 he left the sea, married Diana and settled down in the East.

"On April 3, 1965, we came to Detroit because a close friend of mine told me about the marine surveyor's job. And that's what I have been doing ever since except for a few years when we lived up north and I was involved in business," he said.

Fisher and his wife and two sons moved to South Lyon in 1979. "It has all the rural advantages and none of the disadvantages. And I am not too far from water," he concluded.

'He's what you call a rebel'

What Green Oak Township resident John Newman lacks in stature, he makes up for with a will of iron and the determination of a man who is damn sure of the difference between right and wrong.

"He's what you call a rebel," Newman's wife Jessie offered. Many others would call him a grassroots activist — a man who knows how to work within the "system" and bring about change.

Newman has broken a lot of new ground in his 76 years. He was born in Wales and came to America at the age of 17. "I have a grade school education," he said. "I never went to high school. I'm self educated. I have an extensive library and if I want to find out anything, I know how to look it up."

The man has worn many hats in his day. He was an interior designer in Wales and continued that trade for about 12 years after coming to America. He has since been a planning commissioner, an agriculturalist and an entomologist at Michigan State University. Newman has the most complete private collection of moths and butterflies in Michigan. In 1947, he described to science a new species of moth.

Perhaps Newman's biggest challenge came about two years ago when he took on the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

The DNR wanted to build a 200-vehicle off-road-vehicle (ORV) track near Newman's home in Green Oak Township. The state also had plans for a 90-station rifle range at the same location.

Although the DNR had spent about four years developing its plan for the ORV course near Island Lake Recreation Area, the plans were not made known to Green Oak officials.

Once word about what the DNR had in store for Green Oak residents finally got out, it riled nearby property owners. A group of women united to begin the fight against the DNR, and soon named Newman as chairperson of the group.

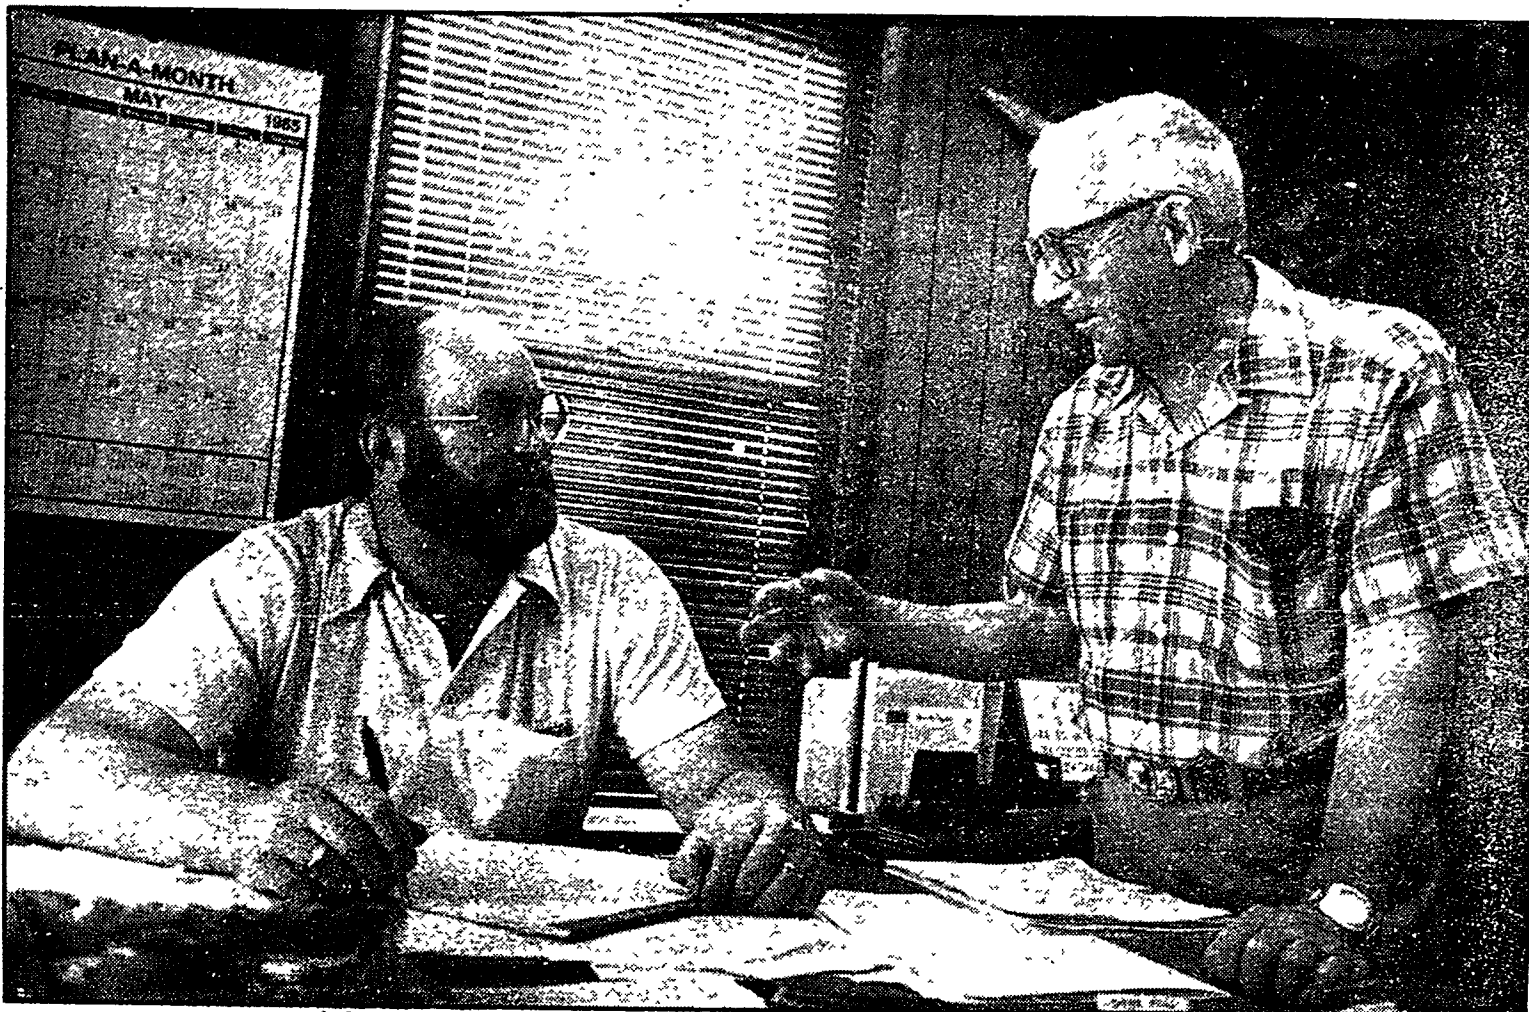

Newman was ripe for the job. He had been retired since 1979 and is a man who never fails to act when the cause is right. The group of citizens took the name Land AACTION (Affirmative Action Concerning the Interruption of Our Nature), and Newman whipped up community support.

Once Newman and hundreds of others in the township got involved, the DNR pretty much backed out of the project. Last October, Livingston County Circuit Court Judge Stanley Latrielle ordered that before work progresses on the ORV course, the case must come to trial. A trial date has not been set and township officials feel confident that the state has been blocked in its attempt to force this project on the citizens of Green Oak.

Organizing the fight and keeping the ball rolling required Newman's particular breed of dedication and determination. By selling annual Land AACTION memberships for $5, he set about raising the necessary money to take on the state.

"We have about 400 advocates in Green Oak Township," Newman said, "and some from out of state. We have received $500 in federal revenue sharing dollars from Green Oak Township last year and this year. We will have close to $2,000 in our treasury."

Area businesses and industries were asked to contribute to "Help Keep Green Oak Green and Peaceful," Newman said, and they responded generously.

"I must have been a good citizen," Newman said, "because people threw their money at me. Pretty soon, we had working capital. I was so intense in my feeling against this project that I could ask for money because I was of the opinion that this fight just had to be. We were going to fight it all the way."

Newman and many others opposed the ORV track and rifle range because it would destroy the land, create noise and air pollution, and attract large numbers of visitors to the township, taxing the local road system and police force.

"The whole pollution angle aggravated me to the point where I thought I should fight," Newman said. "There are 150 people living within the nuisance area of the suggested project. This is the very opposite of our constitutional rights to live in peace and quiet."

Newman has called acreage on Peer Road home for 45 years. He wasn't about to sit idly by and watch the state ruin the "pristine land" which he loves so dearly.

"I told the people when I started this that I'd go all the way to Washington if I had to," Newman said. "I sent plenty of correspondence out. I got (U.S.) senators Carl Levin and Don Reigle to write letters to the DNR opposing this project. I sent letters to Governor Blanchard. He sent his environmental chief to my home to interview about this project.

"I would get up in the morning and the first thing on my mind was something I had to pen. It's a full-time damn job. I didn't know I could write until I started in on this thing. Then I found that the damn stuff just naturally flowed."

Land AACTION members also had an audience with Lieutenant Governor Martha Griffiths which proved very useful. Green Oak Township Attorney Ray Clevenger worked closely with Newman to get ready for a court showdown with the DNR.

"Whenever we were to appear in court in Howell, we had a good contingency of Land AACTION people there," Newman said. "It was a good local grassroots effort. Once we had so many people in the courtroom that they were forced to move the hearing to a larger location."

Newman was a frequent visitor to the offices of the local newspapers. He used

"I don't like what I see. I'm not happy with it. I would like to help make it better . . ."

A love affair with the past

As Ken Masak sat comfortably on a chair in the living room of his Green Oak Township home and talked about historical events, one had to wonder how the 77-year-old man could retain all of his knowledge.

Admittedly an avid history buff, Masak has the ability to talk for lengthy periods of time on anything from the armistice of World War I to the days that Ty Cobb was player/manager for the Detroit Tigers.

"I love history," Masak said. "It's something nobody can take away. Things that have happened in the past have had a great deal of influence on today's happenings. Also, when you've been alive for 77 years, you tend to pick up a few things here and there," he joked.

Masak and his wife Ermina, 74, make their home on Silver Lake Road directly across the street from the Green Oak Township Hall. They've lived in the house for 40 of the 50 years that they've been married.

The couple also has three children — Ann English, Frank Masak and Carl Masak — and eight grandchildren. Ann and Carl currently live in Michigan, while Frank makes his home in Pocatello, Idaho.

One of Ken's claims to fame, which also links in with his interest in history, is the uncovering of over 100 arrowheads with his one-horse cultivator. He discovered the first one in 1928, but it wasn't until the early 1970s when he learned that one of his weapon points was left there by a band of nomadic, pre-historic Indian hunters.

Dr. Henry Wright, a professor of archeology and anthropology at the University of Michigan, believes that the arrowhead was brought into Michigan after the Ice Age somewhere around 8,000 B.C.

"Sounds crazy doesn't it," Ken said. "When I heard that one of these things was 10,000 years old, I couldn't believe it. It's really something to be able to hold something from that long ago."

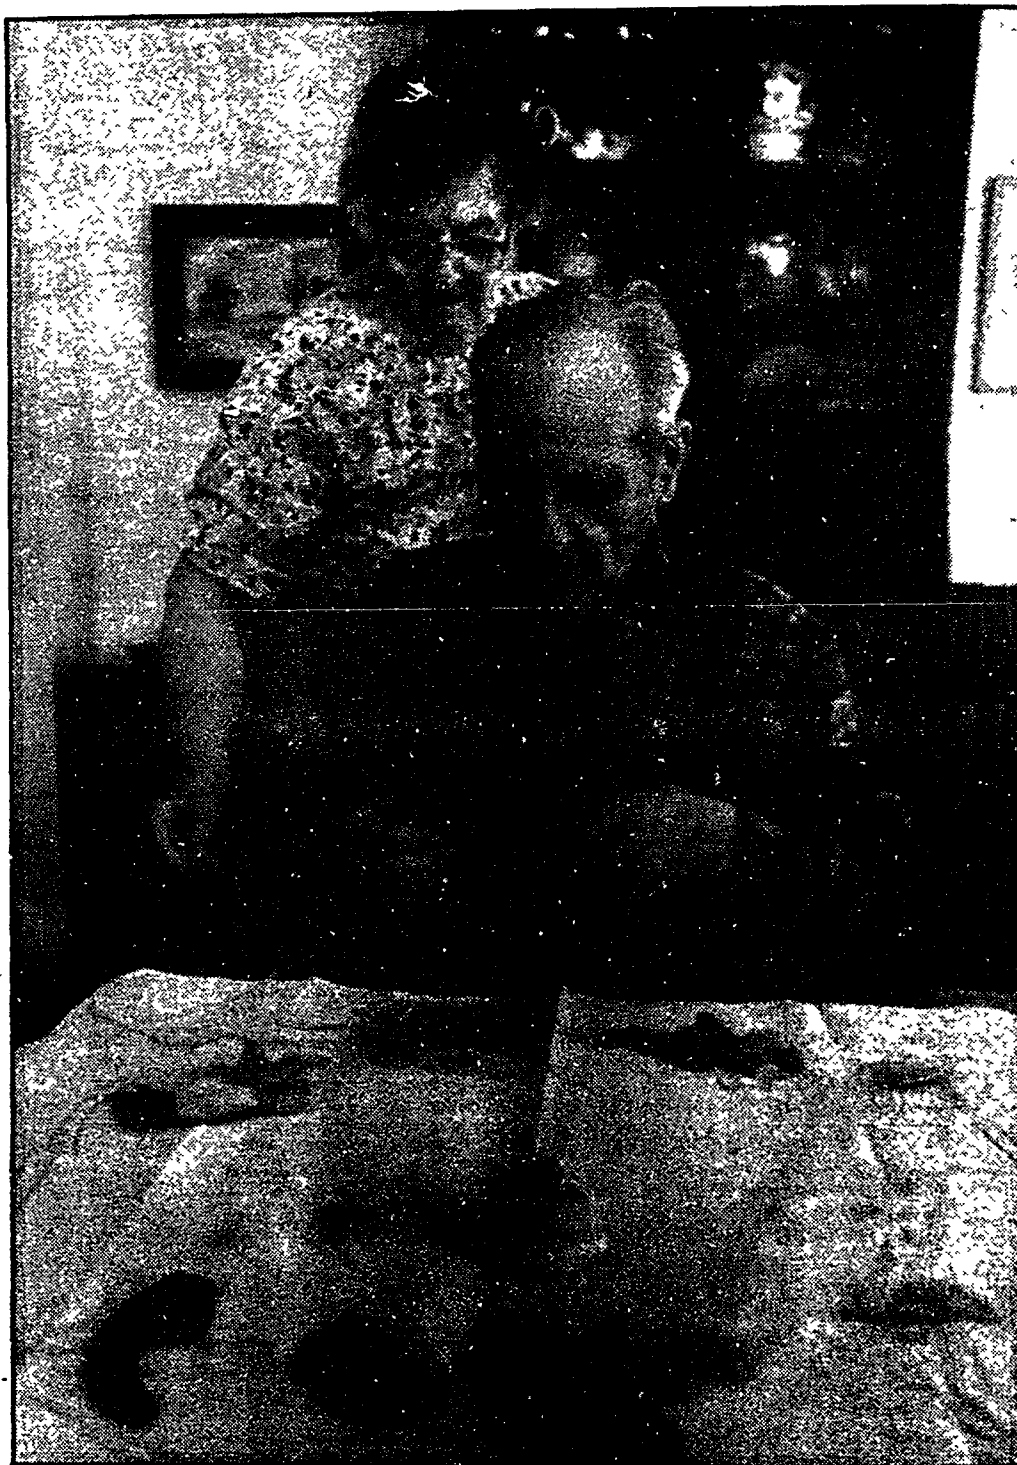

"Yaa, the university would love to have some of my arrowheads, but I decided to hold on to them for a while. I'll probably pass them down to my sons as kind of a keepsake from our farm here. We've had a lot of good times here."

Ken really can't explain the reason why he comes across these arrowheads, but Ermina offered some insight.

"He must have an eagle eye," she said. "I'll walk right over one and never see it. It's just a knack he has."

Ken keeps 15 of his best arrowheads on a special plaque that he received from his father, while the others are stored in various places around the Masak home.

Ken was mainly a farmer until 1948, but then took a job with the United States Department of Agriculture. His main duties were assisting local farmers in soil and water conservation.

He later was named a field representative and traveled to different counties in southern Michigan each day. At the time, he used his house as an office.

"I decided to retire from the federal government job in 1966," Ken said. "I liked the work, but I wanted to concentrate on some other things."

Ken was elected to the Green Oak Township Board in the mid-1960s, serving as treasurer in 1966 and supervisor in 1968. His next venture was a two-year term as Livingston County Commissioner.

"Politics were okay," he said. "I learned that if you can please half the people half of the time, you're doing a good job," he laughed.

Ken is surprised with how the township has grown over the years.

"When I started voting in 1932, there were 500 registered voters in Green Oak Township and 400 of them were Republicans," he continued. "Now we have about 10,000 people living here and probably 4,000 voters. Those folks in office now have it a lot tougher than we did."

Ken currently is a member of the South Livingston Soil Conservation District Board of Directors, which he helped organize in 1940. The group meets once a month and deals mainly with planning conservation programs for the area.

Some of the history Ken talks about most concerns his wife, who has some interesting roots. Ermina is very much involved with genealogy, and over the last few years, has made some incredible discoveries.

First of all, her great great grandmother and grandfather served under General George Washington in the Revolutionary War, and she also has a 42nd cousin by the name of Ernest Hemingway.

"Ken has a lot of patience with me," Ermina said. "He doesn't see much use in genealogy, but he goes along with me anyway. I just wish I would have got involved with this earlier."

Ermina has two family books, one an inch thick and the other almost two inches thick. In those books are information of her roots, with names, dates, places and facts about every person throughout her family line.

"It's exciting to me," she said. "It takes a lot of work and digging, but that makes it all the better."

Ermina's father was a well-known Green Oak man named Orange Peach, while her mother was Patty (Potter) Peach. Her family owned Peach's grocery store in the early 1900s, but it was later turned into the Masak's living room since their house initially was connected.

This summer, the Masak's plan to travel via plane to Idaho to see their oldest grandchild graduate from high school. While they're in Idaho, however, there will be two other things on the agenda.

"We're going to go to Sun Valley, Idaho because that's where Ernest Hemingway was last, and then we're going to Oregon," Ermina said. "That's the one state out west we've never been to."

Surprisingly enough, another state the Masak's haven't been to during their many years of traveling is Florida. "That's for old people," Ken commented.

An average day in the life of Ken and Ermina begins at 6:30 a.m. and ends around 9:30 p.m. Their 45-acre farm, which used to be 80 acres, still requires a lot of work, but the energetic couple has no problem maintaining it. Ken even plows some of his neighbors' gardens during his spare time.

"We haven't slowed down too much," he said. "It's not as easy as it used to be to keep up the farm, but we do a pretty good job. And then, of course, we've always got our grandchildren to keep us on our toes when they're over."

Ermina also keeps busy by making quilts, which she takes to competitions around the area. Her work is quite amazing considering that she does all of it by hand.

As for Ken, one of his favorite pastimes is following the Detroit Tigers.

"I remember my first game," he said. "It was at Navin Field (now Tiger Stadium) in 1922 or so and the Tigers were playing Boston. Ty Cobb was the player-manager back then. Boy, I remember seeing Cobb."

Asked if he recalled the final score, Ken answered, "Nine to four Boston. That's one I'll never forget."

A Better IDEA

On first meeting Tom Cook and Richard Allen, few would believe they have much in common.

Allen is reserved, almost self-effacing in manner. His quiet humor is rarely overcome by anger. When pressed, his face reddens quickly but his voice remains tightly controlled.

Cook, on the other hand, has characterized himself as a "hothead." That may be a severe judgement, but he does come across as the U.S. Navy veteran he is — he states his opinions bluntly, laughs heartily and charges into conversation with gusto.

The comparison is easy to make. Cook and Allen share roles as second-term Northville Township trustees and customarily sit next to each other at board meetings. Neither is really a politician; both are clearly motivated out of concern for their community rather than any ambition to advance themselves.

But they share more than an interest in their local government. Cook and Allen are both Ford Motor Company employees, both engineers and both proud of the parts they played in the development of Ford's newest product.

When the Ford Taurus and Mercury Sable start showing up in dealer showrooms this September, Allen and Cook will see the fruits of three years labor taking to the streets.

Literally thousands of Ford employees can take credit for the "new from the ground up" Taurus and Sable. Both Allen and Cook are quick to assert that they were but members of a large team that developed the new cars.

What's interesting is that their parts in Ford's $3 billion program represent something of a "body and soul" combination. While Cook spent his working hours for the past three years producing Ford's brand-new 3.0 liter V-6 engine, Allen was putting together the body that's wrapped around it.

While engines begun from a clean sheet of paper are far more rare than are new car bodies, it is the bodywork of the Taurus/Sable most people will notice.

"We've found, particularly with the wagon version, that people either love it or hate it," Allen says of the radical styling. "After some time, it grows on people. They say they hate it at first, then they come around."

Taurus and Sable take a giant leap in the aerodynamic styling theme Ford has previously shown with the Thunderbird and the Tempo/Topaz models. Their sleek curves sporting flush-mounted glass (a first in a U.S.-made car), the Taurus and Sable look like the wind-tunnel products they are. The once-astounding Thunderbird seems outright boxy by comparison.

Part of the reason is that flush glass — the most visible of Allen's engineering contributions. He was part of the team that worked out how the stylist's pencil lines could be produced, assembled and survive the various stresses of the world.

That is a sketchy outline of what automotive engineers do every day. A car comes off the designer's drawing boards a collection of pieces. The development engineer's job is to make it work as a unit. That means worrying over a lot of little details the customer never even thinks about it — in a sense, the engineers worry about them so the customer never has to.

For the Taurus/Sable project, and the associated Vulcan engine project Cook was assigned to, that meant dozens of testing sessions with prototype versions of the car. Dubbed "test mules" these prototypes attempt to travel incognito, disguised behind fake body panels and absent anything that would make them easily identifiable.

Engineers assigned to various parts of the overall program drive the cars under every condition they might face in a customer's hands, pinpointing problems and creating solutions.

Cook's more flamboyant personality makes him a better source than is Allen for the kind of inside story that explains the process. Automakers are understandably reluctant to discuss development problems — the idea is that the problems were ironed out and there is no need to talk about them since they don't apply to the cars offered for sale.

But to understand why a part is mounted in a certain way or how a particular choice of materials was made, it is helpful to know what alternatives were considered and rejected.

Cook recalls a hot weather testing session in the southwest when he discovered a problem with engine cooling.

"I was pretty close to a service station when (the test mule) dumped all the coolant," he recalls. "I coasted into this station, added some water and some Prestone II we were using, and went on back to the condo we were staying at. Just as I pulled in the drive, it blew again only this time it really went. I mean, it dumped everything."

As a result of that experience, the radiator of the Taurus/Sable now has twice the cooling capacity it had when initially designed.

"We had to do it, you can't get much airflow through there," Cook explains, walking around the front of a prototype Sable on display at Ford World Headquarters recently. The slick aerodynamic nose of the car features only a small area for cooling intake. The engine draws the air it needs for combustion from the left front wheel well.

The carefully-controlled airflow, however, keeps aerodynamic drag on the car to a minimum and plays a big part in Cook's assertion that Ford expects to meet its fuel mileage rating target of 27 miles per gallon — very good for a mid-size car, Cook says he saw better than 30 mpg in hard driving during a test session in the mountains.

Allen participated in many a test program, too, noting specifically driving time in the mountains of Kentucky as one. No test track anywhere can reproduce all the conditions a driver, particularly an American driver, can run across daily.

Practically speaking, that meant Arizona test runs were complemented by others in Houghton, Michigan, in the depths of winter. Maybe because they are Michiganians, Cook and Allen are visibly more excited when talking about cold weather testing than they are about other sessions.

Cook explains a "snow packing" test in which the idea was to deliberately load the entire engine compartment with snow. Why? To make sure the car would drive through a blizzard.

"Know how they do that?" Allen interjects. "They take a four-wheel drive Bronco, lash a length of chain-link fence under it and drag it along the snow. Then you take the mule and tailgate behind it — instant blizzard."

Standing over a Sable engine compartment, Cook proudly points out that he'd seen it packed solid with snow. Allen notes that the dense snowpack under the hood is partially a result of aerodynamics and the front-wheel drive configuration. With the engine mounted sideways in the car and no great wind force at work under the hood, snow accumulates in the open areas.

"First time we did it," Cook says, "it started stumbling and losing power after about a half-hour. Now it can pass a three-hour test without any change at all."

In other words, if a Taurus driver gets caught in a blizzard so bad that the front end of the car is invisible from the driver's seat, the engine should keep pulling the car along for sufficient time to reach some kind of safe haven. Which the customer expects and won't find the least bit amazing.

For a project with the visibility of Taurus/Sable, however, the engineers' work wasn't done when the cars were ready for production. Those with a hand in the project have been called on to help sell it.

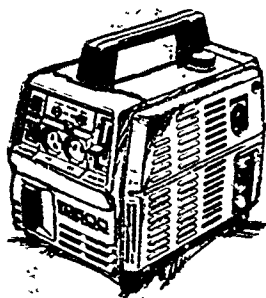

Ford has made an enormous investment here in a car that really is different from anything else. Unlike earlier incarnations of the aero-style theme, the Taurus/Sable is a family car, designed as the replacement for the LTD and Marquis. Marketing plans have changed somewhat, with LTD and Marquis to continue, but the target market remains essentially the same.

Putting your most adventurous product out for sale to people who are likely the least adventurous in the customer mix is the kind of bet that demands hedging. Ford is doing that in part by generating much pre-introduction publicity. After making a big splash in the car buff magazines, Taurus and Sable went on the road, bowing at the Chicago Auto Show in February.

Allen and Cook went with them. Each has done a stint answering reporters' questions about the cars as the travelling road show stops at facilities owned by Ford and its suppliers.

"I was a little nervous going into the thing," Allen admits. "But it was better than I thought — there really weren't any problems. I kind of enjoyed it."

Which sounds more like something Tom Cook would say.

children in the orphanage were taught to call all women "mama," so it didn't mean much the first time Michael used the word. "It just meant, 'You're someone who's taking care of me,'" she explains.

But now there's no question who Michael means when he says "mama." "Now it's me. He definitely knows who I am — and now I believe we definitely go together."

Dambrun says she will encourage Michael to become bilingual in Spanish and English. And she already has begun to familiarize him with his native country. The brightly-colored letters on the nursery wall spelling out "MICHAEL" are La Palma art — a traditional Salvadorean art-form.

And what about a woman raising a little boy with no father? Dambrun has little concern about "male role models" for Michael. She has two brothers, David in South Lyon, ("He's going to teach Michael how to play baseball,") and Mark in Union Lake, ("He's going to teach Michael how to water-ski.") Her father also lives nearby in Farmington Hills.

"I think if I need male role models I'll have them close by. And we do a lot of things as a family."

Michael's next adjustment will be when Dambrun returns to work for the last four weeks of class at Mercy High School. But she anticipates he will adapt to day care easily. In San Salvador he was accustomed to four or five other youngsters in the playpen with him all day and at least one or two in the crib with him at night. He will very likely welcome the presence of other youngsters, she notes.

All the initial fears about becoming a mother, especially mother to a son, have subsided, Dambrun says. "People say, 'If you'd known how much work it was going to be, would you have done it?' Looking at him now, there's no question in my mind," she says with confidence.

"In the very beginning, when he was having a hard time adjusting, I thought it would go on forever. He kept looking up at me with that bewildered look on his face.

"And I was not used to having another person around all the time — a dependent at that. But all that really only lasted about one week.

"I've pretty well gotten over wondering whether I did the right thing. Now it's just natural. That's my son in there that says hello to me!"

He's just a 'rebel'

the local papers to send out word on significant developments and important dates to Land AACTION members. Newman estimates that he wrote 50 letters to various persons and organizations on the ORV issue.

Newman rallied support against the ORV course from residents of the Silver Lake Dunes area in western Michigan. Those people had a state ORV course forced upon them and are suffering the consequences, Newman said.

"I don't think I left any damn stones unturned," he remarked. "What the hell is this civilization coming to? My God, when Homo sapiens gets done with this planet, there's not going to be a thing worth bothering with. The air we breathe, the water we drink, the food we eat, it's all contaminated.

"I don't like what I see. I'm not happy with it. I would like to help make it better. I don't see anything wrong with that. All the recompense I feel I need is to know I've done somebody some good along the way. That's what pushed me into this ORV thing. I've had a ball."

Newman's efforts were very much appreciated by residents of Green Oak. When the township board last November named Newman "Citizen of the Year," Trustee David Colman hailed him as a "hero."

Newman is proud of his efforts to stave off the DNR, but insists that he couldn't have succeeded without the aid of the many concerned citizens who participated in the fight.

See Dick Run . . .

. . . along with Karen, Lisa, Kristen and Laura

Story by B.J. Martin/Photos by Steve Fecht

Dick, Laura, Lisa, Kristen and Karen Brown share a family jaunt in their Northville subdivision

Last October, when the results of the Discover Northville Run were published, there was this name that kept coming up.

Brown.

First there was this Dick Brown, who placed second in the men's 40-44 age division in the 10-kilometer race.

Then there was this Karen Brown, who took fourth in the women's 40-44 age division five-kilometer race.

Then there were Lisa Brown, runner-up in the girls' 13-18 category; Kristin Brown, the first girl runner to finish the kids' one-mile fun run; and Laura Brown, who took fourth in the girls' 6-7 fun run.

Notice the trend?

"That was the first time we really entered a run as a family," says Dick Brown, a personnel supervisor for Ford Motor Company.

It was about the time Laura was a gleam in her papa's eye when he adopted "See Dick Run" as his credo. "I was the first one to get started," he explains. "I began it to improve my tennis game, and since then I've started to concentrate on running so much, I don't play too much tennis anymore.

"After I'd been doing it for a while, I lost a lot of weight and started to feel so much better. I saw some of the good side effects. I found I was not as tense, and just started to feel healthier."

Actually, it's accurate to say Laura

"I'd say because of our shared interest in athletics we have a common link. We don't want the girls to feel like they have to come in first all the time, but to go out and do their best. And hopefully, that'll carry over into the other aspects of their lives."

began soon afterwards. "In one of the one-mile fun runs I entered, I pushed her in a stroller," he chuckles.

Since then, Dick has become a serious competitor in distance run circuits. He has run eight marathons, including the most recent Boston Marathon. He qualified for the prestigious race with his time of three hours, five minutes at the Detroit Free Press Marathon, a race he has run for six consecutive years.

Dick enters about a dozen runs per year, while the female Browns compete in two or three each year. At least now, he puts in about 40-45 miles per week — at least now, a bit more intense of a training regimen than that of his family. He keeps track of his and his family's workouts in what he calls his "running diary."

Karen, a social worker in Wayne County's Head Start program, does her road-work training "about three times a week." She and Lisa began running a few years ago.

"Dick's really the competitive type," Karen says. "But what we try to stress more than competition is physical fitness . . . If the girls win races or turn out to be star athletes, that's wonderful, but it's peripheral to the idea of growing up being fit, being outdoors and not just sitting around the TV."

Thirteen-year-old Lisa participates on the Meads Mill Junior High School's co-ed track team as a two-miler, and already has attracted some notice from high school coaches.

Kristen, 10, and Laura, seven, are both involved in gymnastics and soccer.

"I'd say because of our shared interest in athletics we have a common link," Karen adds. "We don't want the girls to feel like they have to come in first all the time, but to go out and do their best. And hopefully, that'll carry over into the other aspects of their lives."
