Cleaning his clock

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Spring cleaning takes on many forms, and for David Stroyan, above, a Northville DPW equipment operator, that meant cleaning the downtown clock. The downtown area is getting its annual spruce up as tulips are blooming and spring plantings are going in all around.

'Skinheads' march in town

By BOB NEEDHAM

About 20 skinhead youths marched through downtown Northville Sunday afternoon to protest communism and support the "white working class" in America.

The group of teenagers from Northville and around the metro area chanted "We don't care what comics say; May Day is white workers' day" as they marched from Mill Race Historic Village along Main Street and up to St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The group was mostly male and mostly dressed in black and white, including a couple T-shirts reading "white as hell." The marchers carried a banner reading "don't tread on me," an American flag, and a flag showing a Celtic cross, a skinhead emblem.

Northville resident Adam Forman, 16, and an Auburn Hills resident who would not give his name, acted as spokespersons for the group. They said the Sunday march coincided with other skinhead demonstrations across the country to protest communist celebrations of May Day on Monday.

Although Forman hoped for a turnout of around 60, he was happy with the results. "It went better than probably I expected," he said. There were about a half-dozen marchers from the Northville area, he said, along with others from across the metro area and at least one from Canada.

Forman — dressed in the usual skinhead outfit including close-cropped hair, T-shirt and suspenders — said patriotism is an important part of the skinhead philosophy. But there is a lot more to it as well — including the need for a homeland for whites, the importance of women for procreation, and opposition to drug abuse.

"The philosophy is basically the survival of the white working class," Forman said. "I'm not looking to preserve other cultures. I'm just looking to preserve my own."

Skinheads believe that white people need a homeland dedicated to that preservation. "Our race cannot survive without a homeland. At this point there is no white homeland... I want my grandchildren to grow up with other white kids."

Forman hopes such an area will develop within the United States. "I was born here. I'm a nationalist in the truest sense, to my homeland and my country," he said.

The two spokespersons said they do

Hopes dim for Lapham Field

By BOB NEEDHAM

Recreation officials have basically given up hope of buying Lapham Field with state grant money.

Recreation Director John Anderson and Recreation Commission Member Jim Nowka said Monday that a sale of Lapham Field to the public looks almost out of the question. There is a chance, however, the grant could go to another local project.

"The Lapham Field does not look fruitful," Anderson said. "Things do not look good on that front."

The Northville Community Recreation Department currently leases the field, on Six Mile Road west of Beck, from the Lapham family. The recreation department uses four soccer fields on the site.

The recreation department has been interested in buying the field for several years. Late last year, a state grant was approved for 75 percent of the purchase price, up to a cap of $123,000.

But in the meantime, the area around the field started to become attractive as an area for residential development.

"We've been trying to develop it for 20-some years," Charles Lapham said Monday. He said the paving of Beck Road, the development of Blue Heron Pointe, and the recent sale of adjoining Thompson Sand and Gravel land have turned Lapham Field into an attractive area for residential use.

One special advantage is an old water-filled gravel pit on the Thompson land, now that the gravel operation is sold. "Now, all of a sudden, we've got... frontage on a lake," Lapham said.

Lapham said there are three interested buyers for the Lapham Field site, including one who has an option to buy 55 acres contingent on site plan approval from Northville Township.

"The property owned by (the Laphams) has been optioned to a developer. We were negotiating with the developer to see if we could make some kind of a deal," Anderson said. "They were interested in putting in some kind of a development."

Recreation looks for land options

By BOB NEEDHAM

Recent frustrations of park development efforts have the Northville Community Recreation Department a little concerned — and ready to try finding some money to meet its needs.

Millage requests or bond issue proposals for parks could come before Northville voters in the foreseeable future, Recreation Director John Anderson said this week.

"The Recreation Commission is trying to address the problem of lack of land, and it's going to be one of our highest priorities," he said.

The apparent failure of a state grant to buy Lapham Field, coupled with last fall's defeat of a park development millage, has only worsened a shortage of community-owned park facilities, Anderson said. In Northville, the only usable park facilities owned by the local public are Fish Hatchery Park and Henningsen Field, next to Northville Township Hall.

Other local facilities — such as Ford Field and Lapham Field — are privately owned. Still others — such as school fields, Hines Park, and the old Wayne County Training School site — are owned by other governments. "Until after school gets out, we are competing with the schools for their own facilities," Anderson said.

Recreation Commission Member Jim Nowka said, "We have a dilemma. The dilemma is: how are we going to proceed to bring these things together, especially land sites?"

Anderson believes that local recreation programs belong on facilities controlled by the local governments. To adequately do that in Northville will take some money, he said.

"When we take a look at the lands that we have versus the lands we're tentatively using — we're addressing that lack of land," he said. "We have been looking for ways of getting land, but we're going to have to step up our efforts. Things do not look good, land-wise."

Something needs to be done, he continued. That will mean continued applications for state grants, but also probably some proposals for local funding — like a millage or bond issue.

"We have to come up with some acceptable ways to fund some purchases," he said. "There's a lot of competition for (grants). We're kind of to the point where we're going to have to do something else besides expect somebody to give us some land."

Special Olympics continue with outdoor games Friday

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

With last Saturday's Special Olympics indoor competition safely tucked away in the memories of everyone involved, Northville High School is set to host tomorrow's outdoor event.

Over 1,000 athletes from Wayne County will visit Northville's track and football field, as the school hosts the 14th annual county games.

Northville Special Education Director Leonard Rezmierski said approximately 450 people have volunteered for the games, as preparation for the athletes arrival begins tonight.

Northville Athletic Director Dennis Colligan said most of the ancillary needs of the Special Olympics, such as portable restrooms, tables and tents, are being provided to the school.

Colligan said the preparations for which Northville High School will be responsible include moving stands and equipment and sprucing up the look of the facilities.

Northville Special Education teacher John Campbell said the Northville community and teachers have been very supportive in making the necessary preparations.

"Dennis and everyone involved has worked very hard and I believe this could not happen without everyone's support," he said.

As for the games, six Northville students in the K-12 special education program will be participating, along with an undetermined amount of students from Old Village School and Bryant School.

Campbell said all six Northville students who participate in the outdoor games will be moving on to the state Special Olympics competition during the first week in June at Central Michigan University.

"We get six spots for athletes to go to the state games, so all our kids will get to go," he said.

Many Northville special education students will also be taking part in the festivities. David Carpenter of Northville High will light the Olympic torch tomorrow and Chris Brandon of Meads Mill will welcome the athletes to Northville.

To volunteer for outdoor games, contact John Campbell at 344-8420.

Vicki Javello, a high school friend of Richard Lewis, embraces another friend following funeral services for the Navy man at Casterline Funeral Home. More scenes from the services on page 10A.

Richard Lewis honored

Family, friends and fellow Navy officers said goodbye to Northville's Richard John Lewis last week in emotionally moving funeral services. An estimated 350 mourners paid their respects to Mr. Lewis, a Northville resident who died in service aboard the USS Iowa.

Visitation was held last Wednesday, and a service followed Thursday morning at the Casterline Funeral Home. Family members, friends from high school and elsewhere, and Navy comrades all came to pay their respects in a service officiated by Naval Reserve Chaplain Jay D. Halte.

Readings of several Psalms began the formal remembrance. In a eulogy which brought tears to many mourners' eyes, the chaplain spoke of the way Mr. Lewis brightened the lives of those who knew him with energy and humor. His artistic talent and concern for those around him were well remembered.

Mr. Lewis' entry into the Navy — and the success and happiness he found there — were also covered.

City deals to use added parking on old Phil's 76 location

The pending demolition of the old Phil's 76 service station may result in some extra parking downtown — as well as a property trade between the city and the developer of the Phil's site.

The City Council last week authorized City Manager Steve Walters to negotiate with the Long family, who now own the old Phil's site as well as Long Plumbing and Fancy Bath Boutique. Phil's has moved from its old site at Main and Wing to a new facility on Gerald Ave. west of Seven Mile and above Northville Road.

Walters said Monday, April 24 that the city and the Longs may be able to come to an agreement under which the Phil's site is used for parking in between the time the building is demolished and a new building goes up. It may only cost the city to make the site fit for parking, and not for the use of the land itself.

A memo from Walters to the council reads in part, "The lease approach is beneficial to both the city and the owner. The city assumes the liability of operating the property for parking, and does the required maintenance. The owner continues to own the property and pay the taxes, but avoids the problem of having to control his liability by barricading the property. The public benefits from additional prime parking."

Jim Long said Monday the demolition of the old Phil's building is probably several weeks off. They had to get the necessary permits, and did not know if they would have to remove underground fuel storage tanks, he said.

Along with the parking deal could come a property trade in which the city might give some Main Street frontage to the Longs in exchange for a lot on Cady owned by the family, Walters said. The city has bought several lots on Cady in anticipation of future development.

The exchange could be done on the relative value of the land, with the city giving up less area on Main because of that land's higher value, Walters said. The Longs' project may require buying some more Main frontage in addition to that included in any trade, he added.

Walters said the current size of the Phil's site is probably not large enough for the planned type of development without the additional Main Street frontage.

Council member Paul Folino questioned the idea of the property trade, wondering if parking might not be even worse once the new project is built. Taking away current parking area, as well as building a new building which will need parking, might be a problem, he suggested.

Walters said a planned realignment of the lot will result in no net loss of spaces. The new project could probably be sold parking space credits in that lot after a new parking deck goes up on the south side of Cady west of Center.

This deck is expected to have some extra spaces. Some of the spaces in the Main lot — currently allocated to the Michigan Association of Gift Salesmen (MAGS) — could be theoretically shifted to the deck, freeing up space in the Main lot, Walters explained.

One other aspect of the plan is that the Cady lot could be used as part of an area of temporary parking for construction of the "MainCentre" project, Walters said.

The council eventually agreed to authorize Walters to proceed with more detailed discussion of his ideas, but Folino stayed cautious.

"I'm not about to give up my property on Main Street until I know exactly what's happening," he said.

Walters said the agreement might come in the form of a lease with an ultimate commitment to a property exchange.

NEWS BRIEFS

AND THE MONEY KEEPS ROLLING IN — A report on the city's program to collect overdue parking fines shows that the effort has been a big financial success — at least for the city.

The period from April 3 through April 26 brought in $7,936 in overdue parking ticket fines. Added to the balance on hand, the total was $15,889 as of Friday.

The biggest day for overdue fines was Thursday, April 18, with $1,305 coming in to the city on that day alone.

The city recently sent out a large group of delinquent parking ticket notices under a new computerized system.

TRASH PLAN MEETING — The latest proposed draft of the Wayne County Solid Waste Management Plan goes up for a public hearing Monday, May 22.

The latest draft — dated May, 1989 — is significantly changed from a version released last fall. After another round of comment, the plan will go to individual communities and county officials for consideration.

If approved, the plan will govern trash disposal in all municipalities in Wayne County. One key facet would be a required 75 percent reduction in the amount of garbage going into landfills, which is where most Northville trash now ends up.

The hearing is set for 9:30 a.m. Monday, May 22 in the Annex Auditorium at the Wayne County Intermediate School District offices, 5454 Venoy Rd. in Wayne.

BUS PURCHASE — Six buses that the Northville School District ordered in September arrived recently. To pay for the buses, the district has entered into a five-year loan from Manufacturers Bank at 8.625 percent interest. The cost of the buses totals $216,564.

DRIVER'S EDUCATION DATES — Applications for the summer driver education program will be available in Northville High office on Monday, May 8 and must be returned by Friday, May 19. The first session begins on Monday, June 19 and the second session begins Monday, July 17.

MASON HELP — The Michigan Masons and Children's Hospital of Michigan have joined together to help area children who have diabetes. The Masons are sponsoring a "free" regional clinic in Detroit on Wednesday, May 10. A team of specialists in diabetic education will evaluate each child's health status and make recommendations for future care. Specific discussion groups for parents and children have also been planned. This clinic will bring the most up-to-date concepts for diabetes management.

For future information and to make an appointment contact Bill Wright, Master of Northville Lodge No. 186 at Northville Pharmacy, 134 E. Main Street, Northville, or call him at 349-0850.

not want to tear down other cultures or races, but only to promote a unified white race. They said the different white national cultures have more in common than differences, and should come together.

The two compared the skinhead movement to the American Indian movement or the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "We believe in the preservation of our culture and our rights as an interest group," the second spokesperson said.

"We stand for the white working class," he continued. "We believe in fair wages for a good day's work. We believe drugs are polluting peoples' values and destroying peoples' minds and we believe that's wrong."

Forman added, "It goes back to basic values that built this nation." Although most of Sunday's marchers were male, a few females participated as well. When asked about the role of women in the skinhead movement, the second spokesperson said "there's no gender gap."

"Women are going to be more important in the long run. They're the people who can preserve the race, because they're the people who bear the children," Forman said. "Without women, there's no more children."

"We have a high honor for our women. We believe they're essential for the continuation of the white race," the other spokesperson said.

Forman believes the skinhead movement is "most definitely" on the rise among young people. There may be future skinhead demonstrations in this area in the future, he said.

"Areas like Northville — a lot of the people don't care as long as they get their money," he said. "A lot of the youth is waking up."

Both of the skinheads said the movement has an undeserved poor public image, in large part because of press coverage.

"We think it's mostly mudslinging. People trying to discredit us," the second spokesperson said. "We don't have the support or the backing to do anything right now... They try to destroy our credibility."

"Too often people are too quick to judge us without actually sitting down and talking to us. They'd rather listen to the bad stuff about us," he said. "What we stand for at this time is socially unacceptable, but we probably would have been praised if we lived in the '50s."

Forman said the skinheads are often incorrectly portrayed as hate-mongers. "That's not the truth," he said.

The second spokesperson said parents of skinhead youths may not agree with their kids, but support their right to have their own beliefs. "They feel we have every right to believe whatever we believe," he said. "We're not runaways or outcasts."

There is a group of skinheads called the Northern Hammer Skinheads, which covers much of the northern United States, they said. Its local address is a Rochester post office box number.

Boy finds used mortar shell in basement of church

A 12-year-old boy found a used mortar shell in the lower level of St. Paul's Lutheran Church last Thursday, according to a city police report.

An eight-millimeter mortar round and carrier were found in a fire equipment room. When the boy took his find to school, school authorities confiscated it and gave it to the police.

The U.S. Army picked up the shell Friday morning, the report said.

BIKE CAUTION ADVISED — Northville police ask residents to be especially careful with their bicycles during the spring, a time of many bike thefts.

Police advise residents to always be aware of their bike's location, and to keep it locked whenever possible. This is true even when a bike is sitting behind a house or in a garage, since that is how many bikes get stolen, they said.

FLAG STOLEN — An American flag was stolen from a home on Lexington last week, according to a city police report.

The flag was taken from a flagpole on a front lawn either Wednesday night or Thursday.

LAWN CHAIRS STOLEN — Two lawn chairs worth $300 were stolen from a Main Street home last week, according to a city police report. The chairs were cream colored.

made of three-quarter-inch pipe and webbed plastic. They were stolen between April 21 and 25.

RANDOLPH ACCIDENT — A Northville resident was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way after an accident on Randolph Friday, a city police report said.

A resident of an apartment complex on Randolph just below Eight Mile did not see another car coming, and pulled out of the drive and into the other car, the report said. No injuries were reported.

GRISWOLD / MAIN ACCIDENT — A Redford resident was ticketed for failure to yield after running into a car on Main Street early Sunday.

At about 1:30 a.m. the driver was coming south on Griswold, stopped, and continued across Main without seeing another vehicle on Main. The driver who was hit reported minor injuries.

RADAR DETECTOR STOLEN — A Cobra radar detector worth $257 was stolen from a car parked for just 15 minutes in a city parking lot, a police report said.

The car was parked in city lot number three for from about 2 to 2:15 p.m. Sunday, the report said. One door was left unlocked.

FENDER-BENDERS — At least four automobile accidents were reported by township police last week.

• A two-car accident occurred Saturday, April 22 at 3:55 p.m. on Six Mile Road near Winchester. Police said the driver of car two was going eastbound on Six Mile in the left lane and stopped at the light at Winchester. Police said the driver of car one was eastbound on Six Mile directly behind car two. Police said the driver of car one came off the brake, causing car one to hit two. Police issued a ticket to the driver of car one for failing to stop within an assured clear distance ahead.

• A two-car accident occurred Monday, April 24 at 1:20 p.m. at the intersection of Seven Mile Road and Silver Springs Drive. Police said the driver of car one was westbound on Seven Mile Road and began to turn left onto Silver Springs on a green light. The driver of car one said he didn't see car two due to a car in the westbound turn lane. Car one hit car two, which was going west on Seven Mile. Police issued tickets to the driver of car one for failing to yield while making a left turn and for having no insurance under state law.

• A two-car accident occurred Monday, April 24 at 6:05 p.m. on Six Mile Road near Winchester. Police said both cars were going east on Six Mile at about 30 mph due to stop and go traffic. The driver of car one said she looked back at her baby and added the next thing she knew the cars collided. Police issued a ticket to the driver of car one for failing to stop within an assured clear distance ahead.

• A two-car accident occurred Monday, April 24 at 9:19 p.m. on Northville Road near Six Mile Road. The driver of car one said he was southbound on Northville Road and had green light at Six Mile. The driver of car one said a pickup truck was ahead of him and made a left turn onto Six Mile. The driver said he followed the pickup truck and was hit by car two. The driver of car two said she was northbound on Northville Road and car one turned in front of her. Police issued a ticket to the driver of car one for failing to yield the right of way while making a left turn. Police also issued tickets to the driver of car two for expired license plates and no proof of insurance.

PROPERTY DAMAGE — At least two incidents of property damage were reported by township police over the past week.

• About $175 in damage was caused to two cars parked at Meads Mill Middle School on Thursday, April 20 between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Police said both cars, a 1984 Camaro and a 1978 Firebird, were parked at Meads Mill and were scratched during the same time period.

Police said both cars had the word "Hi" scratched into the trunk lids and estimated the total damage to both cars at $175. Police said they have no suspects at this time.

• In the second incident, almost $100 in damage was caused to a car parked in Cass Benton Park on Wednesday, April 26 sometime between 7:15 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The complainant said her car was damaged by a BB gun. She said she parked her car in Cass Benton Park at 7:15 p.m. and went for a walk with her family. Upon returning to her car at 7:30 p.m. she said she found a small dent in the trunk hood of the car.

The complainant said she was never very far from her car and added she does not remember seeing anyone near it for the time it was parked.

STOLEN BICYCLES — A blue BMX bicycle worth $300 was reported stolen from a residence on Banbury, according to a township police report.

The complainant said that about two weeks ago he discovered his bike was missing. He said he usually keeps it next to the garage and a bush.

In addition, a black Rally mens 10-speed bike was stolen from a home on Carpenter last week.

The theft occurred between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 3:30 p.m. Thursday, a city police report said. The bike was taken from outside the garage on the north side.

It was valued at $170.

STOLEN ITEMS — At least two incidents of stolen items were reported by township police over the past week.

• A radar detector worth $245 was stolen from a 1989 Corsica parked on Dundalk Court on April 17 and April 18 sometime between 11:30 p.m. and 4 a.m.

The complainant said the car was locked at night and found unlocked in the morning with the radar detector missing. He added no damage was caused to his car.

Police said they have no suspects at this time.

• An envelope containing $200 was stolen from an automobile parked on a driveway on Bradner on April 21 sometime between 4:50 p.m. and 4:55 p.m.

The complainant said he just came from the bank and parked his car on the driveway. He said he left an envelope on the front console containing $200.

The complainant added the drivers side door window was down and the door of the car was unlocked. He noted he went inside the home and returned in five minutes, but the money was gone.

Police said they have no suspects at this time.

State bill on in-home day care appears delayed until fall

A state bill to control how cities treat in-home day-care operations is probably not going to get any action until fall.

Senate Bill 177 got its first committee hearing of the session last week, but that is about the only thing likely to happen to it before the state legislature adjourns for the summer.

The bill would essentially require cities to treat day care in a private home, for up to 12 children, as a residential land use. It is being closely watched in Northville because the city recently adopted its own day care ordinance which would only allow six children to be served with day care in a residential home.

If the state passes a law, that would take precedence over the city ordinance.

Bill sponsor Sen. Jack Faxon (D-Farmington Hills), who represents part of the city, expected quick action on the bill at the start of this session. Basically the same bill failed in the waning hours of the last session by just one vote, with two known supporters out of the room. Similar bills were passed for townships and rural counties.

The hearing was held Tuesday, April 25 before the Senate Committee on Senior Citizens and Human Resources. Most of those who spoke were opposed to the bill, according to Jim Crawford, aide to state Sen. Fred Dillingham (R-Fowlerville), who chairs the committee.

"Most of the people there were opposed to it," Crawford said. That was probably because day care providers and other known supporters of the bill were not notified of the hearing, he said.

This week is the last to report bills out from committee before the summer recess, Crawford said. The committee is not expected to act on the bill because state Sen. R. Robert Geake, considered a supporter of the bill, will not be present, Crawford said.

The City of Northville and other cities are opposed to the bill, saying it would erode local control of zoning. Supporters argue that it is needed to protect small, quality day-care providers and the people who use their services.

The legislature usually reconvenes in mid-September, but that may be delayed this year because of construction at the state Capitol.

Group does not plan a lawsuit

A mental health advocacy group has explored the possibility of filing suit against the city and a neighborhood association, but there are presently no plans to do so.

Both the city government and the Lexington Commons Association have taken positions against an adult foster care group home proposed for 20415 Lexington. A license to house four adults with developmental disabilities is pending.

Deborah Mattison, division director for the Michigan Protection and Advocacy Service, said recently that the group could conceivably file suit against the city and residents' association over their opposition to the group home plan. Such a suit might allege a violation of the federal Fair Housing Amendments Act, she said.

However, "I have no plans to file anything at this point," she said. "It depends on what happens with it," whether the group ever does file, she added.

Mattison had no further comment on the situation.

City Manager Steve Walters said he had one phone call from Mattison, who just introduced the topic and asked if the city was represented by an attorney.

"I chose not to take that as a threat," Walters said Monday. "There isn't much she can threaten the city for because we're not doing anything illegal. We do not feel intimidated as a city."

He added, "There hasn't been a contact worthy of the city attorney's calling me back."

A letter from Lexington Commons Attorney Douglas Oliver to Mattison mentions two times when a possible lawsuit was mentioned.

The letter suggests if any violation had occurred by the association, the advocacy service should have obtained a temporary restraining order. It also asks that Mattison "refrain from this questionable activity."

Planners set hearing

The movement on an ordinance concerning the placement of air conditioners on residential property took another step forward on Tuesday, April 25. The commission approved the setting of a public hearing.

The commission unanimously approved the changes it made on the air conditioning ordinance, which if passed by the Board of Trustees, will allow the units to be installed in the side yard of a house.

If the air conditioner is not in the rear yard of a house, then the system will have to be screened, according to the ordinance.

The commission has scheduled a public hearing on air conditioners for Tuesday, May 23 at 7:15 p.m. to hear comments from residents.

Park development explored

By BOB NEEDHAM

The idea of a private developer for the Northville Community Park got some preliminary attention at the recreation commission meeting last week, with a couple of interested parties agreeing that more discussion is needed.

Two representatives from the Canton Softball Center, a privately-owned, privately-run softball park, spoke at the meeting at the invitation of Citizens for a Better Northville. CBN is a private group opposed to the use of tax money to develop the park site, on Beck Road between Five Mile and Six Mile roads.

Owner Aaron Jay and General Manager Bernie Goodstein represented the Canton facility in the discussion of possible private development. The idea arose after a millage request for public development — opposed by CBN — failed in the city last year while passing in the township.

CBN member Jeff Hampton was a little more positive about the meeting than Northville Recreation Director John Anderson, but both said the meeting raised questions which need more attention.

"It was what you'd call a preliminary discussion," Anderson said. "The bottom line on the whole thing was the park development committee will discuss some of the points brought up and come back with some recommendations to the recreation commission."

Anderson said the Canton representatives seemed basically interested in an adult softball complex, while the original proposal for the park also included soccer fields and outdoor volleyball courts, and was geared in part to younger users.

"The Canton people, I don't think, knew anything about what our proposal for the park was," Anderson said. "It was like apples and oranges, in my opinion."

But Hampton said it is understood that at least the ball fields and soccer fields are both important aspects of any plan, because of Northville's softball and baseball leagues and the growing local popularity of kids' soccer.

Hampton said he felt a little hostility from the commission, but generally considered the members "very receptive . . . There was definitely an attitude, I thought, of flexibility and trying to find some solutions."

The next step is to "sit down and do some real basic arithmetic" on the costs and benefits involved, Hampton said. He added that CBN definitely wants to see the park developed, operated and maintained, but opposes the use of tax money to do so. "If you want your son or daughter to play basketball, they should pay what the real cost of that facility warrants," he said.

However, Anderson suggested the finances might turn away private developers.

"From the discussion, I don't think the people from Canton would be interested in funding the development of a park. Because I don't think they could make any money from it," Anderson said.

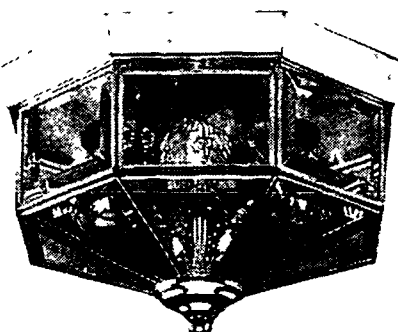

But both said talks will continue. Once the facts are sorted through, the issue will return to either the park development committee or the full recreation commission, Anderson said.

He did not know exactly when that would happen, but added, "it will be for sure within the next month."

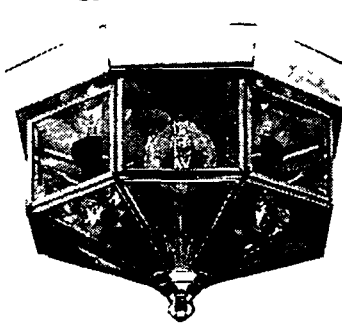

The question of public funding for the park has not been definitively settled either. A proposal to return the original millage question to the city voters only — possibly as part of the regular city election in November — is still pending.

City OKs note to escape problems with cash flow

In order to head off an expected cash flow problem this summer, the City of Northville is planning to take out a special loan against future taxes.

"We're projecting we can get through June. We don't think we can get through July," City Manager Steve Walters told the city council Monday, April 24. "Our cash flow problem is really July and August, depending on how fast taxes come in."

To get through the cash crunch, Walters recommended the city start the process to take out a tax anticipation note, a special sort of loan available to local governments. Walters recommended starting the process immediately because such a note requires a long process in obtaining approval from the state finance commission.

The council voted unanimously to authorize Walters to go ahead with the process for the note.

Walters said last week the city will probably take out a note of about $500,000. "Obviously, we're going to borrow the least we can," he added. The note will probably be sold in June and paid off September 1, at a cost to the city of $2,000 or $3,000.

The problem comes partly from the uncertainty of when some expected state-shared-revenue checks will get to the city, Walters said. In addition, some of the city's assets are tied up in property bought over the last couple of years.

"We should meet our obligations and not delay payments," he said. "It's far better to do this than stall a payment to a contractor or something."

This is not the first time the city has turned to tax anticipation notes. In the early 1980s the city used the notes to cover revenue shortfalls when the state cut some of its shared revenue, such as racetrack tax return money, Walters said.

Funds balanced in budget

While a shortfall in next year's general fund is still unresolved, the rest of the funds in the city budget are showing healthier pictures.

The general fund — the sector of the budget which takes care of police, basic public works, administration, and other city needs — will be short by an estimated $71,000 in the next fiscal year without a tax increase or budget cuts. The city council expects to address the gap at a meeting Tuesday, May 9.

However, in recent budget sessions the city council has heard that the other important parts of the city's books — street funds, the public improvements fund, and so on — are all balanced in the budget.

Budgets for the other city funds include:

Public improvements fund — This fund, controlling projects like the bandshell, Rural Hill Cemetery and downtown improvement projects, is projected to balance at $663,700 next year, down from $941,481 this year. The revenue drop is due largely to smaller projected contributions from other funds; on the expense side, the drop comes mainly in less money needed for downtown improvements.

The PIF is a likely source of money to make up a general fund deficit in the current year. "The fund's able to do that, but for next year I wouldn't recommend doing that to solve next year's problems," City Manager Steve Walters told the council last week.

He said the fund has a healthy balance, but in equity rather than cash; much of the fund's assets are in property in the city.

Inspection services fund — Balanced at $183,000, almost unchanged from this year. The revenue comes mostly from permits and fees, and expenses are basically the operation of the city building department and planning commission. That basically makes the building department self supporting, a memo explains. Surplus will be built up to pay for future needed follow-up inspections.

Major streets fund — Projected to balance at $201,450 for the year. That is a drop from the current year's expected total of $255,000; less revenue and less work is planned involving the street repair bond program.

On the revenue side, contributions from other funds are expected to increase from $4,000 to $21,250.

Local streets fund — Expected to show a big drop from the current year: from $929,010 to $602,950, balanced in each year. As in the major street fund, the drop is due to less activity in the street repair bond program.

Equipment fund — Projected to balance at $312,220, more than a $50,000 increase from the current year. The additional revenue is budgeted in equipment rental, and the bulk of the new spending is for new equipment.

Beautification Commission Fund — Budgeted at $11,800, essentially unchanged, with most of the revenue being a direct city contribution.

Arts Commission Fund — Budgeted at $18,100, a slight drop from this year's budget. The direct city contribution is expected to fall from $7,500 to $5,250.

The city budget is scheduled to be adopted Tuesday, May 30. The city's fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30.

Four-way stops made permanent

The corners at Randolph and High streets and Fairbrook and Wing in the City of Northville are now permanent four-way-stop intersections.

On the recommendation of the police department, the council approved making the two corners four-way stops on a permanent basis. They had been four-way stops on a trial basis for the past few months.

The Randolph / High intersection in particular has received attention lately. Randolph traffic volume and speeds are a common complaint from residents, and a city traffic study recommended possibly closing the street off at Center.

Police Chief Rodney Cannon told the city council Monday that adding the stops on Randolph has had a significant impact on traffic flow, reducing the volume in the area.

Along with these changes, a section of northbound High at Randolph was designated as a no parking zone. The same was done to a section of southbound S. Wing at Fairbrook.

Twelve vie for Schoolcraft

Three incumbents and nine challengers have thrown their hats in the ring, making the Monday, June 12, Schoolcraft College trustee election one of the most crowded in the college's history.

Voters will elect three candidates to six-year terms on the college governing body, choosing from three incumbents and two challengers.

Voters will also elect one of seven non-incumbents to a four-year board seat.

Candidates running for six-year seats include board president Mary Breen of Plymouth Township and fellow incumbents Barry Greenleaf and Jack Kirksey, both of Livonia. Challengers David Tatman of Plymouth Township and Lawrence Whitmarsh of Livonia are also in the race.

Breen is a retired administrator for the Livonia Schools. Greenleaf is a management supervisor with Ford Motor Co., Livonia. Kirksey is community education director for the Livonia Schools. Tatman is a supervisor and Whitmarsh a manager at GM Hydra-Matic, Ypsilanti.

The crowded field for the four-year seat includes Ronaele Bowman, Richard Hayward, Thaddeus McCotter, Patricia Sacha, and M. Andrea Taylor, all of Livonia, Jeffrey Theodore of Canton Township and Thomas Davis of Northville Township.

Bowman is a trainer with Wayne County Youth Assistance, Northville. Hayward is a self-employed consultant specializing in steel. McCotter is a clerk with a Livonia-based law firm and a law student at the University of Detroit. Sacha is a retired media specialist for the Birmingham Schools. Taylor is a cafeteria supervisor for the Plymouth-Canton Schools. Theodore is an assistant Wayne County prosecutor. Davis is a supervisor with Ford Motor Co., Dearborn. Trustees oversee academic and financial issues at Schoolcraft. The 12,500-student community college serves the Livonia, Westland, Garden City, Plymouth-Canton and Northville public school districts, as well as a small portion of the Novi Schools.

Schoolcraft levies a 2.11-mill property tax in those districts. The tax translates to roughly $90 a year for persons living in homes assessed at $85,000.

Major college issues include development of college-owned land by private developers.

The college maintains a main campus at 18600 Haggerty, Livonia. It also operates Schoolcraft College-Radcliff, 1751 Radcliff, Garden City

Q. What is bonding?
A. The procedure referred to as bonding is a process where white or tooth colored fillings are placed in the teeth.
The process is called bonding because one step in the bonding involves making the surface of the cavity porous so the material can "bond" or lock into these pores. This helps make the filling very strong and also seals the filling making it less prone to future decay.
These fillings can be used to make the teeth appear more natural and greatly improve their esthetics.

New church rules move to hearing

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Over four months after initiating discussion on the need for an ordinance addressing the height and size of churches, the Northville Township Planning Commission has tentatively scheduled a public hearing on Tuesday, May 23 at 7 p.m.

The hearing was set by planners during their regular meeting on Tuesday, April 25 at which time the finishing touches were placed on the highly reworked ordinance.

Very little discussion among planners accompanied the approval of the public hearing as they reviewed the changes to the ordinance.

The most notable change to the ordinance, which applies to churches in residential districts, is the 48-foot height limit placed on the main sanctuary of churches.

Planners have previously said they chose the 48 foot height limit because the township fire department is not equipped to fight fires in buildings over four stories high.

Commissioner Karen Woodside probably best summed up the thoughts of the majority of planners at the March 28 meeting.

"We have to satisfy the health, safety and welfare of our community and in this situation I think the limit should be 48 feet . . .," she said.

Another topic which planners have debated over the past few months is the issue of front-yard parking.

Following a consensus of opinion, planners decided to allow no front-yard parking or parking in the minimum side-yard.

"We have to satisfy the health, safety and welfare of our community . . ."

— Karen Woodside
Northville Township Planning Commissioner

The current ordinance also does not allow for front-yard parking. Any appeal of this aspect of the ordinance would have to be argued before the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA).

In addition to the provisions in the church ordinance, planners also voted to table an ordinance amendment that would give the commission the power to waive or modify a required wall or berm for a new development.

Planners said the matter was tabled to incorporate minor changes suggested by township attorney Ernest Essad and planning consultant Claude Coates.

Township Planning Director Carol Henry said the amendment will give the commission the ability to waive or modify the restriction without the need for a developer to prove a hardship.

"This is really a matter of aesthetics," Henry said. "The planning commission would now be able to determine how a wall or berm would affect the aesthetics of a site, before deciding if it is necessary."

Local student places second in science fair

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Taking an analytical look into one of life's simplest activities, Meads Mill student Steven Lautzenheiser recently placed second in the metro-Detroit Science Fair.

A seventh grader at Meads, Lautzenheiser's project involved entailed study of the length of time needed to effectively kill germs by washing hands.

For all the mother's who tell children to wash their hands for a long time, Lautzenheiser's results may hold some surprises.

"I found that if you wash your hands for a short period you will get rid of most of the bacteria," Lautzenheiser said. "But if you wash for too long the top layer of skin will come off and you'll have accomplished almost nothing."

Entitled "Hand Bacteria: What Kills It — Time or Soap," Lautzenheiser said he got the idea for the project while studying the subject in school.

"It kind of hit me all of a sudden, to do a project on hand bacteria for the science fair," he added.

Meads Mill science teacher Norm Hannewald said it was completely Lautzenheiser's idea to enter the competition and added the youngster will achieve many benefits through entering.

"The knowledge he gained through setting up the experiment will be good for Steve," Hannewald said. He noted that doing the experiment will give Lautzenheiser insight into scientific methods.

Hannewald said the experience of doing well in the competition will also be good for Lautzenheiser "because this gives Steve a feeling of satisfaction and a positive outlook to science."

Intending to major in biology in college, Lautzenheiser said doing the project has been an exciting and rewarding way to spend his afternoons.

"I really think that biology is fun and besides, I like it more than social studies," he said, with a grin.

Karen Taylor, a Northville poet who recently self-published a book

Local writer steps out

By BOB NEEDHAM

The growing community of Northville authors has a new member: Karen L. O. Taylor, who has just released a self-published book of poetry.

Taylor, a Northville resident for the last three-and-a-half years, has been writing since she was 7 or 8 years old. "I can't remember a time when I didn't. Ever since I was a child," she said.

As an elementary school principal in Wayne-Westland and a part-time assistant professor of journalism at Madonna College, Taylor is deeply involved in language and writing. In the past, her publications have been confined to brochures, graduation programs, a booklet on children coming to school, and similar projects.

The new book, titled "Heart of Hearts," is something different. And it took quite a bit of work to get the project together.

"I never would have done it if my husband hadn't said, 'Do it. Get it organized,'" she said.

Speaking to others who had self-published gave her some direction, but getting all the details set — artwork, printing, distribution — was an involved process.

"When I took it step by step, it was fairly long, but not as difficult as I thought it was going to be," she said. The book was finished around Christmas, after a good six months of work.

Taylor had 250 copies printed, which meant an expense of around $1,500. "Now I know why people don't do this very frequently," she laughed. She does not expect to recover her expenses through sales, even if she sells the whole stock: "Poetry is not a money-making proposition, for the most part."

Several stores — including Bookstall on the Main in Northville, Borders Book Shop in Novi and the Birmingham Bookstore in Birmingham — are selling the book.

Taylor is gratified to hear readers say they particularly enjoyed a certain poem, that it expressed something they have felt. "I did enjoy hearing people finding them to be helpful or satisfying," she said.

"For me, I think that (writing) is a good balance with the academic sorts of things that I do," she said. "Those kinds of pursuits are satisfying, but you feel you're not tapping into your creative energy."

Her writing schedule is not rigid, but she tries to have something tangible done by the end of each month. "I do feel that my full-time job is my first priority," she said.

Taylor plans to continue different writing projects. She recently finished a children's story she hopes to have published.

More poetry is also certainly in the future. "It's writing that I do for pleasure, so I am always working on poems," she said.

"I think everybody who writes would like to write some lasting piece, and I would like to write a novel," Taylor added. "The big thing is having the time and energy at the same time."

'Are You Concerned' to wrap up

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

The final segment of the "Are You Concerned" drug abuse series is set to run this Tuesday, May 9, and officials from the Northville Action Council (NAC) say it is the most important segment of the five-part series.

NAC member Al Qualman said the fifth part of the series, entitled "The Community's Response — Prevention at an Early Age," will delve into how the community can help in the fight against drug abuse.

Qualman said a panel of community leaders will act as the "communities help line" by offer assistance and information about the prevention or treatment of drug abuse.

Panel members will include: Northville High Assistant Principal Bill

Hamilton, Township Police Capt. Phil Presnell, and City Detective Sergeant David Fendeleit, among others.

Qualman said the program will be broken into two segments. Part one will be "What Parents Can Do" and part two will focus on "Our Northville Community Response."

"The NAC believes that every person living in the Northville community is affected by the use and misuse of alcohol and drugs by youths and adults," Qualman said.

"The NAC believes that education and involvement is the key to ending the substance abuse problem," he added.

The program, which is free of charge, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Northville High auditorium. For more information on the program call Al Qualman at 349-8437.

The Navy bugler plays an emotional version of "Taps"

"He was at the top of his game in life," the chaplain said.

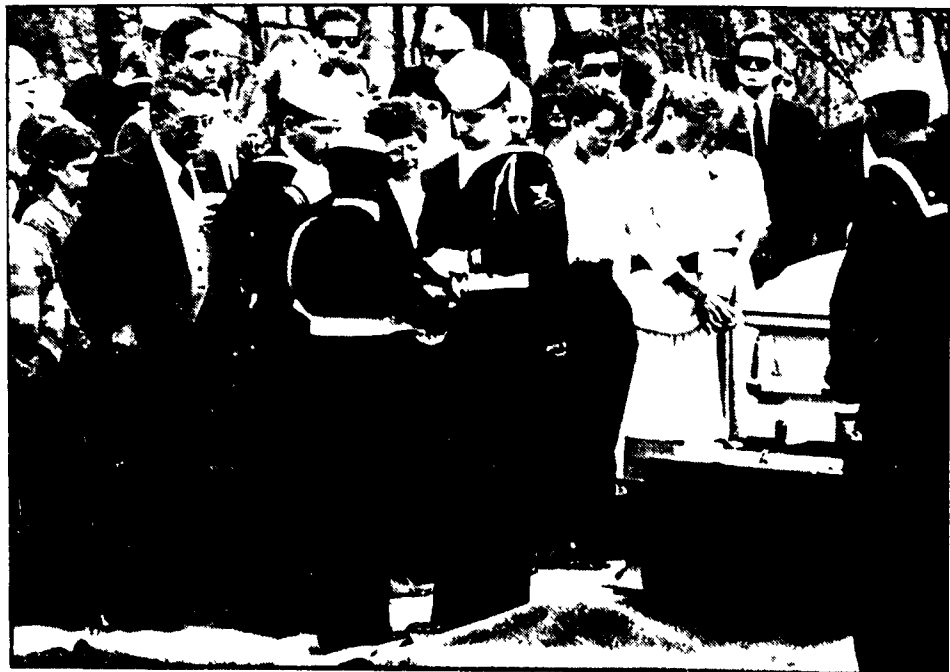

Chaplain Haite recalled the flip and cartwheels Mr. Lewis turned at his high school graduation ceremony, speculating that Mr. Lewis might have moved through the pearly gates in the same joyful way. If so, it surely "brought a smile to the face of the Lord," the chaplain said.

After the service at the funeral home, Mr. Lewis' casket began the journey to Rural Hill Cemetery while the strains of "Taps" drifted across the town. Pallbearers were Seaman Anthony Sanchez, Seaman's Apprentice Tim Hartley, Petty Officer Gary Deitch, Petty Officer Sean Bech, Petty Officer Augustine Vives and Navy Chief D Cline.

Interment was at the veterans section of Rural Hill, where the ceremony for full military honors was concluded with a backdrop of budding trees, singing birds and a half-staff flag. Sixteen members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars participated in the honors.

After a benediction and prayer, officers from the Selfridge base honored Mr. Lewis with 21 rifle shots. As a bugler played "Taps" again, Navy Captain Arthur Tank presented flags to Nancy Lewis, the mother, and John Mack, a grandfather. The captain was assisted by Lt. Julia Chapman, who formally notified the Lewis family of the news about Richard.

The day seemed elegantly summed up by one mourner at the funeral home, who gazed at all the people who were paying their respects to Mr. Lewis and quietly commented: "It looks like he touched a lot of lives."

Beautiful music

Local couple plays for orchestra

By BRENDA DOOLEY

Bob Williams and Treva Womble share two common passions. As husband and wife they share a passion for each other.

And as musicians for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, the Northville couple share a mutual love of music.

He is principal bassoonist for the DSO, where he has worked for 15 years. She plays the oboe and English horn for the orchestra, a job she has enjoyed for 14 years.

Music and the DSO brought them together and although their lives sometimes follow a furiously hectic pace, they both admit without hesitation that it's a life they love.

"We work six days a week and have Mondays off," Treva explains. "On weekends when most people aren't working, we give concerts. But it's a great way to make a living."

"It's something we love to do," Bob adds. "There's nothing better than getting paid for something you love to do."

Treva began her musical career in the fourth grade when the school band director was looking for someone to play the oboe. Then a Virginia native, she knew how to play the piano and decided to give the double-reed woodwind a try.

Treva's first oboe was delivered by mail order and she has been playing the instrument ever since — although the oboe she uses now is specially made of rosewood.

She attended the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, and began playing for the Dallas Symphony upon graduation, a job she describes as a lucky break.

"You have to wait for someone to die or retire," she says about getting a job with an orchestra.

Treva started performing with the DSO in 1975, where she met Bob.

Bob grew up in Tucson, Ariz., attended the University of Arizona but wasn't as lucky as Treva in landing a job upon graduation. He then enrolled in the University of Southern California and eventually was hired as a musician in a Winnipeg orchestra.

— Bob Williams
Local musician

Two years later, in 1974, he auditioned with the DSO and was hired just as the DSO's previous bassoonist retired.

The couple married in 1980 and settled in Canton. They also purchased land in Northville, where they dreamed of building a house.

Just two years ago the dream came true. They currently reside in a specially designed five-level home on Main Street with their two sons, Trevor and Seton, and a dog, Katie.

"We love Northville," Treva says. "I grew up in a small town — that's why I like it here."

Bob and Treva worked closely with an architect for three years to construct a home to meet their needs — a house that offers them separate working studios, a spacious living, dining and kitchen area and lower levels where the children sleep.

"The only time we have to practice is at night... it's usually from 10 p.m. to midnight," Bob explains.

Sound buffers built into the floors, walls and heating system of the home prevent the kids from hearing the music late at night. The house is also constructed to work with a hill on their property. The main level is built at a high point and on a clear day with the aid of binoculars Bob and Treva can see an outline of the Renaissance Center in downtown Detroit when standing at a living room window.

"We feel like we have our own cabin in the woods," Treva remarks.

Like most Americans, the musically-gifted couple often find themselves juggling their schedules to find enough time to spend with their children, each other and with their music. They make it a point to practice every day or to craft reeds for their instruments.

Bob is also a private pilot and enjoys fly fishing. In spare moments of free time Treva likes to sew and cook.

Those interested in seeing the couple in a DSO performance have a perfect opportunity to do so this weekend (May 4-6), when Bob will be featured as a guest soloist on bassoon. He will perform in the Bassoon Concerto by Carl Maria von Weber.

DSO performances featuring his solos are today, May 4 at 8 p.m. at Ford Auditorium; Friday, May 5 at 8 p.m. at Orchestra Hall; and Saturday, May 6 at 8:30 p.m. at Ford Auditorium. For more information and tickets call 567-1400.

"I'm looking forward to it," Bob says about performing as soloist.

Getting their free seeds in the township last Saturday were several residents. Volunteer Laraine Sellas, right, is helping out.

Residents turnout for free seedlings

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Cold temperatures, cloudy skies and long lines did not discourage hundreds of township residents from getting into the spring spirit, as over 300 families participated in Northville's first seedling give-away.

Township Beautification Commissioner Catherine Sellas said nearly all of the 2,000 seedlings offered to residents were distributed.

"We gave six seedlings to each family and except for a few scotch pine and douglas fir seedlings, everything was given out to residents," Sellas said. The remaining seedlings will be planted on township property.

Sellas said the seedling give-away, which lasted from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. last Saturday, was extremely successful for both residents and the township.

"We were received very well by residents, who thanked us very much for offering the seedlings," she said, adding that all seven varieties of seedlings were very popular.

Since the board approved the seedling distribution for only one year, Sellas said she is unsure whether it will become an annual event.

"I could see this being a yearly service because I think the turnout of residents was just great," she said, noting Canton Township has successfully been conducting a similar program for the past 10 years.

Schools will test for lead in fountains

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Although officials say there is no problem at this time, the Northville Public School district will begin testing its drinking fountains for lead — as strictly a precautionary measure, according to Administrative Assistant Tom Bailey.

"We're looking into testing (the drinking fountains) to assure and ease everyone's mind," Bailey said, adding he does not foresee a lead problem in Northville school fountains since most of the water mains are relatively new.

"Just like with the radon scare a few months ago, we will check the fountains, but from what I understand the problems are mainly in refrigerated drinking fountains and we only have one in the district and that's in the school board office," he added.

Although no directive has been handed down by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) with regard to drinking fountain testing, Bailey said he has contacted two plumbing contractors about testing the water.

"I haven't gotten word back yet from the plumbers, but I'll be meeting with the EPA this week to discuss the situation and what we should look for," Bailey said.

Lead in drinking fountains shows up primarily in city water systems which have lead piping, Bailey said noting those types of water systems are more antiquated.

He added the district regularly checks the water quality of its day-care centers, which includes Moraine

Elementary, and said he has found no problems with the water.

In addition Bailey said the district does weekly tests on the water in the Northville High swimming pool and noted the pool has not had lead contamination problems.

"I really don't see us having any problems at this time, but we will check the fountains in each school just to make sure." He said he can't remember the district ever doing a test on the fountains in any of its K-12 schools, except for Moraine.

City officials wonder about Lyme disease concern

The possibility of Lyme disease carried by the birds at the Ford plant is getting some attention from city officials.

A recent letter to the council from Dr. Russell Atchison, a longtime Northville physician, warned of the potential dangers of the disease in animal waste.

Lyme disease has many symptoms including fatigue, rash and other flu-like symptoms. Later stages of the disease may result in neurologic complications and intermittent arthritis.

In his letter, Atchison explains that medical experts believe the disease is spread by the deer tick, but that the latest information suggests there may be other sources, including animal waste. He wondered "If the feeding of migratory waterfowl, which has been done for a number of years, at the soon to be closed Ford plant, may have become a liability rather than a community asset."

Atchison continues to say that the possibility of Lyme disease being spread in the feces of migratory birds is under study at the University of Wisconsin.

After the council received the letter, council member Paul Folino said the city should look into the issue further. He suggested the city ask the county health department to check the situation for possible hazards. Mayor Chris Johnson agreed, and asked City Manager Steve Walters to contact the county.

Atchison's letter concluded, "The symptoms from Lyme disease may not occur until years after the initial exposure, and at times could be life threatening. I certainly would hope that such exposure would not have occurred, because as a child, my parents took me to see the wild birds at Northville."

City analysis shows relative millage cost of shared services

Part of the City of Northville's budget analysis is a page of figures suggesting that services shared between the city and township cost the city more.

The city administration figured the millage necessary for the city and township contribution to the shared service budgets. In 1988, the city needed 1.53 mills for shared services while the township used about 1 mill, the administration concluded.

The township's dollar contribution was $283,906 for the year while the city's was $179,238, according to the report.

The figures are part of the city's annual budget review. City Manager Steve Walters said he thought the figures were important for general information, but not for any specific purpose. "That isn't put in there (the budget report) because the city has any intention of getting into any political squabble over the issue," he said.

The city and township share the cost of the Northville Community Recreation Department, Northville Public Library, Northville Youth Assistance and senior citizen activities. The cost to each government is determined by a formula: 45 percent of the total shared service cost is split evenly between the city and township. The other 55 percent is in direct proportion to the total state equalized valuation (SEV) of each municipality.

Estimates for the city's 1989-90 fiscal year — starting July 1 — show the city paying 39.2 percent of the shared service cost, with the township bearing 60.8 percent.

The city's share is expected to grow slightly because its tax base, or SEV, grew a little faster than the township's. The city's 1988 SEV was about 29.4 percent of the city / township total, while this year it is expected to be about 30.3 percent, the report says.

Walters said the city's population is also roughly 30 percent of the total.

However, it would be misleading to figure a per-resident cost for shared services.

Charity to benefit from wacky lunch

Northville resident Wes Henrikson earns some money for leukemia research

Wes Henrikson swallowed maybe a dozen goldfish.

Rob Holloway Jr. danced with a belly dancer.

Laurie Marrs gobbled down several chocolate-covered worms.

But don't worry. Be happy. It was all for a good cause.

Henrikson, Holloway and Marrs were three of the 20 "celebrity" waiters who did all kinds of goofy things at a benefit fund-raiser for the Michigan chapter of the Leukemia Society of America at the Novi Hilton last Friday.

The good news is that they did it for cash ... for donations to the Leukemia Society.

Want to see Henrikson swallow a gold fish? Send in your donation. (The going price was $50).

Want to see Marrs chow down on chocolate-covered worms. Send in your donation. (Another $50).

Pat Reighard, owner of Reighard International Trucking in Farmington Hills, bid $150 to have Von Boll get a mohawk haircut. Boll resisted the challenge by paying $200 not to get his hair cut in a mohawk.

Several mustaches were shaved off — all for donations to the Leukemia Society, of course. And one soul even lost his beard.

Billed as the "wackiest luncheon ever to occur at the Novi Hilton," the event was sponsored by the Boll family, Northville residents and the owners of the Novi-based Cummins Company as well as Diesel Fuel Systems in Blissfield and Standby Power in Grand Rapids and Redford.

The event generated approximately $20,000 which will be used by the Leukemia Society for research, patient-aid and education.

The event had special significance for the Boll family because Jean Boll, Von Boll's wife and the mother of Greg and Karen Boll, was diagnosed as having leukemia in September 1986. After undergoing treatment at the Mayo Clinic, the leukemia went into remission until it surfaced again in November 1988.

She was in the hospital over the holidays, although the leukemia again appears to have gone into remission.

Karen Boll, a 1979 Northville High School graduate, said it was concern with her mother's plight which led her to call the Leukemia Society to offer her assistance.

"At first they told me I could volunteer by working on their phone lines or working in a hospital, but I told them they didn't understand," said Karen Boll.

"I told them I wanted to raise some major funds for leukemia research while there's still time to help my mother."

Carol Eschbach, program coordinator of the Michigan chapter, proposed sponsoring a "wacky luncheon" — a fund-raising activity sponsored by the Leukemia Society in various locations across the country.

Karen Boll picked up the ball, and the rest is history.

Approximately 200 people attended the luncheon at the Hilton last Friday, making it the largest first-time luncheon ever. The $20,000 raised at the luncheon also was a first-time record.

Honors bestowed on science team

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Striving to incorporate fun and education, 16 students from Meads Mill Middle School recently took part in the Michigan Science Olympiad Tournament.

The students, ranging in grade from sixth to eighth, qualified for the tournament after placing among the top four in the Wayne County Science Olympiad held in March.

Out of 40 teams in Michigan competing in the state tourney, Meads Mill placed 27th, but team coaches and Meads Mill science teachers Chuck Hayes and Norm Hannewald said the students made invaluable gains by participating in the contest.

"The emphasis on these types of events is designed to let students have fun with science," Hannewald said. "Learning and having fun at it is important today. School can't be all work, it must be a combination of fun too."

Hayes said the goal of Science Olympiad is to "foster more overall science progress in the schools."

Competing in events from reading topographic maps to metric estimation to bridge building, Meads Mill students took four first places and three second place honors at the county competition.

Out of 22 teams competing at the county level, Hayes said Meads Mill placed second overall in the 23 events.

Team member Liz St. Jacques, an eighth grader at Meads Mill, said initially she became part of the Science Olympiad because her mother wanted her too.

St. Jacques said she quickly began to enjoy being a part of the science team and added "it feels good to do well and besides, science is my favorite subject."

In the state competition, Mark Fagnani and Eric Nelson placed second in the measurement category, Ellen Song took sixth place honors in rocks and fossils, Julie Zwiesler earned ninth place in reading topographic maps and John Kovalak took ninth place for construction of a mousetrap vehicle.

Students who competed in the competition include: Geoff Williams, Danny Zumbunnen and Brandon Slenski.

Teacher wins Ford chemistry fellowship

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Sometimes the actions of one person can have an effect on many people.

Taking advantage of a fellowship program just initiated by Ford Motor Co., Northville High science teacher Robert Trombley will spend six weeks this summer improving his knowledge of chemistry.

"I am really excited to be accepted to this program," Trombley said. "Rarely are programs available where you get paid any substantial amount. In fact, for most programs you pay them."

A teacher at Northville High for 23 years, Trombley will take part in the atmospheric chemistry program at Ford and receive a stipend of $2,850.

He said he applied for the position by completing a formal application, acquiring recommendations and writing a proposal of study.

"This program will give me an opportunity to work with exotic equipment and take my experiences back to the classroom," Trombley said.

Richard Chase, director of high school science and technology at Ford, said the company was impressed with Trombley's application package and interview, "and we feel that you will be a strong asset to the program."

Northville High Principal David Bolitho echoed Trombley's comments and added that "this experience will not only benefit Mr. Trombley as a professional, it will also benefit the students of Northville High School."

Trombley said that even though this is the first year of a fellowship program at Ford Motor for teachers, a student program has been in place for about five years.

He noted students from a number of school districts including Northville High have learned at Ford on weekends and summers.

"Ford started the program with high school students meetings on nine Saturdays during the school year," Trombley said. "The students selected a topic and attended lectures on it."

He said that about three years ago Ford allowed the students to work with some of the equipment at their science centers.

Trombley said two students from Northville High are currently in the running for a summer internship program at Ford.

"This program is a great experience for a high school student," Trombley said. "And it also looks great on a college application."

MAGS may get new local lease

After several months in a sort of limbo over its lease expiring this year, the Michigan Association of Gift Salesmen (MAGS) may be one step closer to an agreement.

MAGS has been interested in renewing its lease for months, but MAGS President Karl Gansler has said the group has been unable to get a written offer from its landlord, Northville Square Associates. The group, afraid of a large rent increase, was thinking of moving out of its headquarters in downtown Northville.

But Gansler said recently that the landlord made a formal, written proposal for a new lease two weeks ago.

"The most exciting thing is our landlord finally made us an offer," Gansler said. "It was what he thinks he should get. We will be making a counter-offer of what we think we can afford to pay."

The group has not actively pursued any move out of the Northville Square Building, at Main and Wing, Gansler said.

"We are just holding and hoping. We want to stay here," he said. "We're hoping we can stay here and remain part of this little town... Hopefully, we'll be here for another 10 years."

Gansler would not release the actual lease price offered by the landlord, nor the size of the gap between the two parties.

MAGS is the third-largest taxpayer in the City of Northville, with a 1988 assessed valuation of $1,345,540.

The Northville Square building began life as a retail mall, but its close was announced in 1979, to reopen a few months later as MAGS headquarters. The building was sold in 1982.

The current MAGS lease runs through the end of this year. MAGS is an organization of gift wholesalers which conducts product shows for retailers.

Stores move in town

A new bakery outlet run by Crawford's restaurant is one of several new businesses opening in downtown Northville.

Crawford's is taking over the space on Mary Alexander Court recently vacated by Joseph's Pastry Shoppe, and plans to open a bakery shop with Crawford's goods.

Sue Poster, one of the partners in Crawford's, said they hope to open the new venture very soon. They are basically moving the Crawford's bakery department to the new space, with a few added offerings.

The new store — called Crawford's Bakery Connection — will offer pies, cakes, cheesecakes, muffins, brownies and cookies. It will not be a full-service bakery, though; there will be no bread, for example, Poster said.

"The response from people so far has been really good. I'm really pleased," she said. "We're all real excited about it and hope to get it underway as soon as we can."

The new outlet will make the baked goods for the restaurant as well, Poster said. In fact, that was the original idea, but as people heard about the switch the Crawford's partners decided to open it up as its own store.

Other recent changes in the downtown business community include:

- The Party Post opened on Mary Alexander Court Feb. 1. The new store sells paper plates, napkins, cards, helium balloons and "anything you would need for a party," owner Terri Foley said.

- Cottage Charm is the latest addition to the Uptown Shops on Main Street. Owned by Sharon Camis and Helen Martel, this venture concentrates on decorative painting and decorative accents in the spot formerly occupied by Timeless Elegance, which is now in a different Uptown Shops location.

- Clean-A-Rama Cleaners has opened in the new building next to Detroit Federal Savings. Colony Yogurt is planning an opening in the same building.

- Ware's Square on Hutton has moved to N. Center as the Mulberry Tree, in a refurbished building next to the Shipping Station, formerly Suburban Wrap and Ship.

Carol Strauch, left, and Karen Riebling of the Bealtown Residents Association

Bealtown group protects its area

By BOB NEEDHAM

Carol Strauch started the Bealtown Residents Association because of worries about maintaining the neighborhood as a residential area.

Two years later, that's still the main idea, but the threats to the neighborhood seem maybe a little less pressing.

As far as Strauch knows, there never was a neighborhood association in Bealtown before 1987. It was then that she decided maybe the neighborhood — between Northville Downs and S. Main Street — needed an organization behind it.

The catalyst was a fire which leveled a Yerkes Street home owned by the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post. Strauch was surprised to discover that the lot, as well as the one next door, were zoned for commercial use.

The whole Bealtown area had been considered a good site for possible bulldozing, Strauch said. "City fathers thought it would be best to have this area for track expansion or industrial expansion," she said.

But in the late 1970s former city planner Ron Nino recommended the city start thinking of the area as a residential neighborhood. That was how some of the residents saw it all along.

The pressure of commercial development "is a reality, and it's something that our neighborhood has to live with," Strauch says now.

Unlike some of the other residents' associations around town, Bealtown is not too formally organized. The working membership consists mainly of Strauch and Karen Riebling, although they pull in more people when something in particular comes up.

"It's a loosely-knit organization.

We're formed enough so that when issues happen, we can pull together. And that's what counts," Strauch said. "For good or bad, that's reality ... If you don't have that interest, you can't force it on anybody, either."

There are no dues. The real activities of the group are basically getting out information, going to city meetings, talking to officials and neighbors, and pulling petitions together. "We meet when we need to," Riebling explained.

In just two years, the formula seems to get the job done.

Among the causes adopted by the association have been a four-way stop at Yerkes and Johnson, now in place; several site plan suggestions for work on S. Main, which were adopted; and the proposed rezoning of six lots on Beal from industrial to residential, in which five of the six were changed.

Strauch and Riebling think it is important to protect the residential character of Bealtown in part because of the historic value of the homes. Although Bealtown is not in the city's Historic District, many of its houses date back to the 1800s.

"A lot of the homes over here are

City readies for its sidewalk program

The time for city sidewalk repair is almost at hand.

The program, which will require property owners to pay for repairs to sidewalks along their property, is scheduled to get underway this spring.

The sections of sidewalk which need repair have been marked with paint by the city's engineers.

Letters explaining the process are expected to go out soon to homeowners.

Property owners will have the option of hiring their own contractor to do the work, or to wait and let the city contractor repair the walks. The cost for city repair will be in the letter.

In addition to the repair, the city is also going to require sidewalks to be installed along some roads where they do not now exist.

City Manager Steve Walters said last week the city was waiting on some bid prices for the program work. The topic should come before the council in May, he said.

About 50,000 square feet of sidewalk have been marked for repair.

Sewer agreement may be forthcoming

By PHIL GINOTTI

NOVI — An agreement on interim sewer capacity that could effect several local municipalities, including Northville Township, may be forthcoming — but Novi officials may have reacted quite optimistically to a meeting they attended in Lansing recently, according to a Department of Natural Resources (DNR) official.

Novi City Manager Edward Kriewall two weeks ago reported "a breakthrough" in the sewer tap moratorium that has slowed new development in the township for over a year. Kriewall said he left an April 13 "sewer summit" meeting in Lansing with the understanding that new capacity would be made available to serve the communities until space became available elsewhere.

Northville officials reacted with surprise to the announcement, while several state and county officials who attended the meeting were either out of town or not available for comment this week.

DNR official Paul Zuger said this week that studies will continue and that capacity hasn't necessarily been freed up.

"It's a little bit premature to say we have a breakthrough," Zuger said. "We hope to have some more information ... either later this week or early next week."

The sewer summit was a meeting of local officials, and representatives from the DNR and Wayne County, according to Zuger.

"Right now, I would say we are cautiously optimistic that we will be able to work out an interim approach," Zuger said.

Wayne County Department of Public Works (DPW) Director James Murray has not responded to numerous phone inquiries from the Northville Record over the last two weeks.

Several development projects in Northville Township have been held up over a lack of sewer capacity.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on May 10, 1989, at 8:00 o'clock DST at the Board Room the Board of Trustees of Schoolcraft College will hold a public hearing on the levying in 1989 of an estimated additional proposed millage rate of 0.366 mills for operating purposes pursuant to Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan, 1982.

The Board of Trustees has the complete authority to establish that 2.27 mills be levied in 1989 from within its present authorized millage rate.

The maximum additional proposed millage rate would increase revenues for operating purposes from ad valorem property tax levies in 1989 otherwise permitted by Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan, 1982, by an estimated twenty-two percent (22%).

The figure for increase in revenue for operating purposes is based on the latest estimate of state equalized valuation of property located within the College District. In the event that state equalized valuation as finalized is for any reason higher than the estimate used for this hearing, the Board of Trustees must hold another public hearing before levying millage on any higher valuation.

The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony and discuss the levy of an additional millage rate. Not less than seven (7) days following the public hearing, the Board of Trustees may approve all or any portion the proposed additional millage rate.

This notice is given by the Board of Trustees.

Three years later, district fills instructional position

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Three years after instituting the position in the district, the Northville School Board unanimously appointed Bill Hamilton as administrative assistant for instructional services.

Hamilton will assume the position effective July 1, 1989, where upon he will leave his duties as assistant principal at Northville High School.

"I have complete confidence that Mr. Hamilton will be a resounding success in this role," said Superintendent George Bell, who recommended Hamilton for the position.

Among his new responsibilities, Bell said Hamilton will be in charge of staff development for the district, a job he feels Hamilton will excel in immediately.

"William Hamilton is well respected by staff, students and the community and would be a major asset to our staff development program, as well as the enlarged scope of responsibility currently being managed by Dolly McMaster," Bell said.

He added that filling Hamilton's new position was delayed for three years because the district did not have the money to fund it.

Board member Joseph Dunkerley said the "time has come to fill this position. Dolly (McMaster) has deferred the funding for this position so that we can buy computers and more programs."

Bell said approximately sixty people applied for the position.

"I am very excited to get this position," Hamilton said. "My ultimate goal is to become a superintendent and this promotion points me to that direction."

Hamilton, who has spent seven years at the junior-high level and 10 years at the high-school level, said this job will put him in touch with students of all ages and "give me a better understanding of the superintendent position."

He agreed with Bell that the major thrust of his position will be in staff development.

Hamilton, who is the district's liaison to the Northville Action Council, said he has been in the Northville district for the past five years.

Sale of field for park site appears to be out of reach

By the time the grant money was approved, the option was already out, Anderson said.

Lapham said there never seemed to be any money forthcoming from the local officials.

"The Recreation Department never had the money. They never had the money," he said. "For five or six years they've been saying they're going to buy it."

No real offer ever materialized, he added: "Nobody seems to know where the checkbook is... Anybody getting serious about doing an appraisal or writing a check, I never saw that."

Local officials talked to the new developers, but did not get any interest in a sale of the site for recreation. "We did talk with the person who has the option on it, right from the very beginning," Anderson said. "We never did talk money to Mr. Lapham."

Lapham praised Nowka for a lot of hard work in trying to put the sale together.

Nowka sees the problem as not being able to make an offer quick enough when one has to be made.

"I think it's really too bad," Nowka said. "Early estimations of the value over there were much lower than (the value) turned out to be."

Recreation depended on the state to come forward, but that process took a long time. When the grant came through it was nowhere near enough money to interest the new buyers, Nowka said.

Northville Township Planning Director Carol Henry said Tuesday that no plans have been submitted for the site yet. "We're assuming it's some kind of residential," she said, since that's what the land is zoned.

"It just takes the starch out of your collar, so to speak," Nowka said. "We don't really have a system where we can go out and tie up properties... It took too long and the programs weren't in place to act."

Lapham concluded, "Bureaucracies and monies and things were just more than the situation could handle, I guess."

Anderson said the community may now apply to the state for a transfer of the grant money to some other project. The money would not be specifically reserved, but the application can be made.

"The state might rule on it favorably," he said.

One particular advantage of the Lapham Field grant application was its location on the gravel pit lake and a creek running through it. The chance for water-access recreation helped give the project a high score, Anderson said. So, if a similar application could be made, the state might consider it favorably, he said.

Anderson said he had "nothing specific at this point" for a location to consider applying for a grant transfer.

One other advantage to the Lapham Field site was the fact it already held soccer fields, which are a big need for the local recreation program. "The beauty of the Lapham site was the four soccer fields that were on the plan are presently developed," he said.

Recreation seeks park land

With a lot of building activity in the community, land costs are going up and land may eventually become scarce, Anderson said. The longer land buying is delayed, the more difficult it could be, he suggested.

"(Another millage request) would definitely be a possibility," Anderson said. He added that the recreation department is "exploring" bond issue possibilities as well.

One millage request was defeated in the city last year while passing in the township. "Our taxes are not low, and there are a lot of people who don't quickly support these things," Nowka said.

Land needs are becoming more pressing as the community's population increases, Anderson said. The local soccer and baseball associations continue to grow in both numbers of players and teams.

"They're feeling the crunch now. You multiply that by a few more subdivisions, and we've got real problems."

He said local recreation is an important role for government, a view being disputed lately by a group called Citizens for a Better Northville. Group member Jeff Hampton said Monday that "there's no reason" for taxpayers to subsidize recreation programs.

Nowka said things like public recreation, libraries, safety and education are all vital to maintain a quality community and keep property investments sound. "We need to build these things that are going to strengthen the long-term and visionary view of our community. It's important," he said.

"It's not really a frill," Anderson said. "(Parents) want their kids to be able to play. And they want the adults to be able to play too."

Our Opinions

Township made right move to study position

When someone leaves a job, the first reaction is often an attempt to fill the position as soon as possible. In the case of the resignation of the township manager, cooler heads prevailed and a committee was formed to evaluate, interview and discuss the job requirements before the search began to find the right person for the position.

Government

The manager position in the township is an extremely important one. Following the resignation of Steve Brock, after only two years on the job, it became very apparent that the township needed to reevaluate the position. Northville Township has become a fast-growing community and with that growth has come an accompanying increase in work for township administrators. The supervisor's position is a part-time one, and the manager in the township must deal with many of the day-to-day management problems.

The committee charged with evaluating the position has been extremely thorough in its investigation. They have interviewed all pertinent employees in the township. They have talked to managers and supervisors in nearby communities. They are in the process of putting the research into a recommendation for the township board.

This recommendation must be taken seriously by the board. To properly maintain and function both today and in the future, the township must have an efficient and well-run administration. A strong and competent manager is an essential element in keeping township business moving smoothly.

We support the work being done by the committee and hope the comprehensive recommendation is presented to the township board as soon as possible. Likewise, the board should act promptly on the recommendation presented — weighing the recommendations with the resources necessary to achieve them. A search for the candidate best suited to fill the revised position must begin if the township is to prepare itself for the months and years that lie ahead.

Resident's associations fill role in community

The Record is in the midst of a series about residents' associations in the community. It's worth taking a little space to make a few comments about the value of these groups.

The people who founded this country could never have imagined the rise of these associations. If they had, they probably would have loved the idea.

The more organized associations are really the most local form of government there is. Elected representatives oversee neighborhood concerns and issues are settled in gatherings reminiscent of a New England town meeting. The less organized groups are textbook examples of how to participate in the democratic process: associations bring people out to the city council or township board meeting to argue for their side of things.

Without its neighborhood associations, the Northville community would doubtless be a less attractive place to be. The battles fought by these groups are not large ones; the average visitor to town won't understand the importance of an extra stop sign or a freshly-repaired road. But the residents know.

Northville's residents' associations comprise a vital sector of the community which often does not get the credit it deserves. Best of luck to them all.

Take the time to enjoy spring in Northville

As the front page picture this week shows, spring has indeed sprung around town and the work has begun to fix up, spruce up, clean up — and in general spring up — Northville.

Like most seasons in our town, spring brings with it certain traditions. The tulips that took so much work to plant last fall are out in full bloom right now. The work crews are out all over the place, trimming trees, planting seeds, raking, and in general making the town and its environs one of the most pleasant places to be in May.

Likewise, a quiet walk through the neighborhoods brings the unmistakable smell of freshly cut grass to the nose. Residents are reacquiring themselves with neighbors as the spring chores provide an excuse to talk over the back fence.

This is also the time when the annual Beautification Awards are given out. This year combined township and city awards will be handed out at the June 6 luncheon. Spring provides a natural time for residents of both communities to come together with a common goal of sprucing up and feeling proud of the community. Anyone wishing to nominate a business, landscaping area, professional building, factory, church or school should contact Dewey Gardner at IV Seasons Flowers.

In the meantime take some time to get outdoors and enjoy spring in Northville.

Skinhead fallout

By Bob Needham

As I was finishing up a conversation with two of the skinheads who marched through downtown Northville Sunday, they asked me to please be fair in the coverage of their march and their beliefs. The movement has had a lot of problems with the press, they said, and they asked me to keep my personal opinions out of the story.

I tried very hard to do that, and I hope it worked. It's vitally important for a newspaper to accurately portray a controversial position like the skinheads. People really need to understand what they're all about.

So I tried to keep my opinions out of the coverage of the march, just like I try to keep my opinions out of every other story I write. But this page is specifically for opinions, and I feel there are some things which must be said about what happened in town Sunday.

The group of youths who walked down Main Street was quite a sight. The very casual observer might even have been inspired by the flags and Revolution-era banner. The few bystanders who saw the march seemed more puzzled or amused than anything else, probably not understanding what was going on.

There was some irony in the chant supporting "white workers" when some of the participants looked several years away from holding their first job. I had to wonder if some of the participants' parents knew what they were doing — a suspicion which grew the next day when one marcher called the office, worried about which pictures would be used and what newspaper they would appear in.

This all makes the march sound like a not-very-serious thing. A conversation with the marchers paints a radically different picture.

Questions from the press were referred to two official spokespersons for the group, which implied to me that the whole bunch was endorsing what the spokespersons said. And what they said, as we sat in Hardee's after the march, was an earful:

Basically, they believe in the preservation of the "white race," the "white working class," whatever that is. I don't think the white race needs any special preservation; I don't even think there is such a thing as one, single white race. The attitude that whites should look out for their own and no one else is racist and wrong. It makes their comparison with the NAACP terribly insulting.

There's more: Skinheads want a white "homeland," an idea which strikes me as ludicrous and, again, patently racist — not to mention boring. A whites-only country does not exactly sound like paradise to me. Far, far from it.

And more: It's always seemed to me that the skinhead movement is very male dominated. Well, now I know why. Women are vital to the cause — because they provide all those beautiful new white babies. Good Lord. What I can't figure is why there were any females at all in that march.

I feel foolish even arguing these points. Aren't these beliefs so obviously misguided that they're not worth any attention? Well, apparently not, or there wouldn't have been anything going on downtown Sunday afternoon.

Deep down, I almost can't believe the skinheads really understand the implications of the things they say. If that's true, the skinhead philosophy will eventually be packed up, shoved in the attic and forgotten, part of the constant process of growing up.

If, on the other hand, they really do understand what they're saying — I'm scared. There must be a strong and overwhelming response against this way of thinking, a societal panacea to treat cancers like these.

We the people can't let things like this slide. At the start of this column I called the skinheads' stand "controversial." We can only hope it's controversial enough.

After the fact

By Phil Jerome

Jetchick from the advertising department noticed it first.

"It's May already, and we haven't seen your annual 'Geez, I like to mow my lawn' column yet," he observed. "Something wrong?"

"That's right," added Kelber, another member of our crack advertising department. "Lawn not doing so well this year, Phil?"

They were right, and I knew it. Usually when the weather turns warm and the tulips start poking their heads through the soil, I am motivated to write about my lawn, my trees, my flowers. How wonderful that spring is here. Man communing with nature. All that good stuff.

But spring is here. And I haven't been moved to write that column yet. Heck, I haven't even been moved to mow my grass yet. And that's what bothers me. Am I really so old that I no longer get spring fever — even if spring fever in my case means getting outside and working in the yard?

"It's funny you should notice," I sighed to the grinning tandem of Jetchick and Kelber. "My wife was commenting on that just the other day. Only she approached the subject from a different perspective.

"She was a lot more subtle. Like, 'When you going to get your lazy butt off the couch and mow the lawn?' Or, 'You planning that maybe the neighbors are going to mow the lawn for you this year out of embarrassment about having you in the neighborhood?' You know, gentle little hints like that."

The one person who genuinely seems to be enjoying my late start on lawnwork is my crummy neighbor, Andy — the blazing megalomaniac who actually believes his thriving crop of crab grass is superior to my Kentucky blue.

I'm really tempted to begin my lawnwork this year by mowing my signature across his front yard.

Bealtown Residents Association works to protect the area

actually older than a lot of homes in the Historic District," Riebling said. The Riebling house dates back to at least 1883. It was one of the strip which were zoned for light industrial use until a year and a half ago.

"This is such a small neighborhood that to me, the loss of one home is a loss because of the size of our neighborhood," Strauch said. "We achieved five houses out of the six to be returned to residential, which to me was an important thing to our neighborhood: to stay as residential as we can."

There are about 55 houses in the Bealtown neighborhood, most of which are owner occupied. A few are rentals. "We're getting a lot more people coming in and turning ones that were rentals into (permanent) residences," Strauch said.

Bealtown mixes a lot of young families with some more senior residents. The younger ones are often the more active in the association concerns, but the support is pretty constant.

"We can get their signatures," Riebling laughs. "We're the ones who get steamed."

The Bealtown people are also involved in the Concerned Residents of Northville, a city-wide interest group. "We know they would be here for us when we need it."

"We learn more about the city itself, along with our own area," Riebling said of the concerned residents group. "Hopefully, we'll all help keep Northville a small town."

Projects for the future include exploring a sign designating the area. "This is an old section of the city that I think should be acknowledged," Strauch said.

Another possible future item is including Bealtown in the Historic District. That's a tricky issue, though, and the residents want a lot of discussion and information before anything happens. "I would not ever want to answer for these other people," Strauch said of the idea. "I think our neighborhood's a possibility."

Both Strauch and Riebling said they feel very fortunate to live in Bealtown because of the community and the friendly people. "It's like how it was when I was growing up in an old neighborhood in Detroit,"

Riebling said.

Strauch concluded, "I feel really fortunate to live here. I really do... We just want to stay a part of the community."

McDonald Ford branches out

By ANNE WILLIS

There's a new business in town — with an old familiar name.

McDonald Ford, the auto dealership and rent-a-car/rent-a-truck business anchoring the corner of Northville and Seven Mile, has expanded into a completely new building and business down the road.

The McDonald Ford Body Shop and Truck Center recently opened at 17000 Northville Road in Northville Township, just south of Six Mile.

The new center is big — 20,000 square feet — and wide open, ready for the large trucks that Joe McDonald, owner, hopes will be pulling in and out of the garage for service.

The idea began simply enough, McDonald said. He operates a McDonald rent-a-car/truck business in eight locations from Grosse Pointe on the east to Ann Arbor on the west, and he needed a place to repair the rental trucks.

In addition, the dealership on Seven Mile was running out of room, and there was no body shop on the premises.

The answer — a new, large building where trucks and cars could get full service repairs, and a new state-of-the-art body shop including a special paint booth.

Besides their own immediate needs, McDonald said the area around Northville is growing so much that "I thought there was a real need for it" in the surrounding communities as well.

Dave Rekuc, general sales manager for McDonald Ford, noted that the new body shop has already had a good effect on the dealership down the road. Business has increased in the dealership because there is more room for display. Much of the repair work that had been located in the dealership has been moved to the new garage. "We've almost doubled our capacity at the dealership," McDonald said.

McDonald Ford has expanded into a new a truck and car repair area

Rekuc said the rewards are great in terms of better customer service, as well. He noted that the new facility is big enough that customers will be in and out faster. "Convenience for the customer will be a big plus. People will be served on a first-come/first-served basis, and in most instances we will get them in and out within 24 hours," he said.

Plans are under way to increase the service in the new facility to include a quick oil change business, too, Rekuc said.

"We're trying to accommodate the customer," McDonald said. "If we can give better service than the next guy, with all things being equal — we'll keep the customer longer. If the service is there, they'll stay."

"We're here for the long haul,"

Rekuc added.

McDonald said the location of the new facility is ideal to service a broader area. The building is just south of Six Mile, a stone's throw from I-275 and M-14, opening up business in Livonia, Canton, Plymouth, Ann Arbor, South Lyon and Milford, he said.

Service and quality are the two standards under which the company works, McDonald stressed. "Most of our employees live in the area," Rekuc said. "They can see customers in the street and take pride in the work they do."

McDonald said the new garage will also begin fixing the larger diesel trucks soon. He said mechanics who specialize in that work were hired recently.

The new facility has a state-of-the-art spray booth that was custom made for McDonald. It is 60 feet long and can handle even the biggest truck, or can be converted into two car booths, allowing faster service. Custom paint-mixing is done at the new garage, and Rekuc said the new technology makes for a much better paint job.

McDonald bought the dealership on Seven Mile in 1987, and bought the new building near Six Mile over a year ago. It took almost a year to remodel the old building into the new spacious garage and offices. He said he is spending time and money on landscaping the new building so that it will blend in and become a part of the township.

McDonald Ford Body Shop and Truck Center is located at 17000 Northville Road in Northville Township. Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Call 313-347-5800 for more information.

Use tax refunds wisely, CPAs advise

You may be surprised at just how many taxpayers mail their tax returns with a smile. The reason — the bottom line on their returns adds up to a tax refund.

In fact, tax refunds are more common than you may think.

In 1987, 75 percent of all taxpayers were whistling "I'm in the money" as they mailed their tax returns. According to the Internal Revenue Service, the amount of the average refund that same year was $904.

For some, a tax refund is an open invitation to spend recklessly. But, used properly, a tax refund can go a long way toward improving your financial fitness. Here, then, are some tips from the Michigan Association of CPAs on how to make your refund dollars count.

Pay off a credit card bill: Take a look at your credit card balances. If you have outstanding debt, one of the smartest moves you can make is to use your refund to pay off all or part of your credit card bills. The average American owes $1,600 in credit card debt. At 19 percent interest, that level of debt can cost up to $304 a year. To make matters worse, only 20 percent of the interest is tax deductible in 1989.

CPAs point out that you save more money by paying off outstanding debt than by placing the same amount in an average money market account.

If you have any doubts, consider the following example. Mark plans to deposit $1,000 in a bank account earning eight percent interest. By the end of the year, he will have earned $80 in interest. However, since Mark is in the 28 percent tax bracket, that $80 will be worth just $58 after taxes.

Money Management

On the other hand, if Mark pays off $1,000 on a credit card bill charging 18 percent interest, he will save $180 in annual interest payments. Thus, Mark can actually save $122 more by paying off his debt rather than banking the $1,000.

Build on it: If you have already cut your credit card bills, it's time to start saving. But don't settle for an account paying six to seven percent interest. At those rates, you will barely keep up with inflation.

Instead, comparison shop for an investment that offers the best yield — and the best match for your risk tolerance. With $1,000, you can begin investing in many all-weather, no-load mutual funds. For a more secure return, consider investing in a certificate of deposit with an effective annual yield of at least eight to nine percent.

Start a college fund: For parents planning for a child's education, a tax refund can be the first step toward building a college fund. For example, you can purchase U.S. Series EE Savings Bonds for as little as $25. At 7.35 percent, the going rate until April 30, 1989, a $50 bond will double in 10 years.

As an added bonus, any interest earned on EE Savings Bonds purchased after 1989 will generally be tax free if you redeem the bonds to finance your child's educational expenses, including tuition and other required fees. However, bear in mind that the break is phased out for joint filers with an adjusted gross income (AGI) of $60,000 to $90,000 and for single filers with an AGI of $40,000 to $55,000.

Make a contribution to an IRA: Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) are alive and well — and maybe just the place to stash your tax refund. By contributing to an IRA, you can fortify your retirement nest egg. In addition, you may still be able to deduct the contribution on your 1989 tax return if you (and your spouse) do not actively participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan.

If you are covered by a retirement plan at your job, all is not lost. Single taxpayers with an adjusted gross income (AGI) of $25,000 or less may continue to deduct up to $2,000 for an IRA. Likewise, married taxpayers with an AGI of $40,000 or less can still deduct up to $4,000 if both spouses work and each earns at least $2,000. A partial deduction is allowed for single taxpayers with an AGI between $25,000 and $35,000 and married couples with an AGI between $40,000 and $50,000.

Add a fireplace, a bathroom, or... There's no place like home, and few investments as enjoyable as home improvements. Your tax refund can be the key to installing a fireplace, adding a second bathroom or extra bedroom, or making some other long-postponed improvements to your house.

Remember, the benefit of home improvements is multiple.

First, you may increase the potential selling price of your home. Second, any money spent on home improvement is added to your "basis" — the amount you paid to obtain your property. When you do sell your home, the basis will help determine the amount of profit or loss you may have to report on your tax return.

Educate yourself: If the lack of funds has prevented you from enrolling in a course that could help further your career, your tax refund can help you scale that obstacle. In fact, enrolling in an educational course related to your current work may yield more than knowledge.

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, you may be able to deduct your expenses if you meet the guidelines specified by today's tax laws.

To qualify for the deduction, you must meet one of two requirements. One, you must be required by your employer or by law to take the course in order to maintain your salary, status or job. If this is the case, make sure the educational course actually serves a business purpose. Technically, the IRS can disallow a deduction if the education qualifies you for a new trade of benefits you personally, rather than the business itself.

Two, if your studies will maintain or improve skills related to your present work, the expenses are generally deductible.

Export seminars can benefit local businesses

Madonna College is offering a series of three export seminars for area business executives who are interested in doing business on an international level.

The seminars, consisting of two sessions each, will be held on Thursdays, May 11 through July 13, at 7:30 a.m. In addition, those attending the workshops may choose to embark on a trade mission to London and Germany in September.

"We found through a sample survey of small and medium size businesses in the tri-county area that many company owners are considering exporting, but are not sure how to go about doing so," said Dr. Charlotte Neuhauser, dean of Madonna College's Division of Business and Computer Systems. "Based on these needs, we will offer business executives a series of workshops which will help to increase their knowledge on exporting."

The workshops will be broken down into three areas. First, will be for those with no background in exporting. Included will be the financial and strategic advantages and risks of exporting, as well as an opportunity to assess the company's readiness for such an endeavor.

The actual planning for exporting will be covered in the second section. Detailed will be the considerations that must be addressed when merging the international market plan with the company's business plan. Also, discussed will be the finding of export partners and resources to get the process underway.

A third section will entail the actual launching strategies, such as trade shows and trade missions which will enable the company to make contacts to effectively export its products.

"We will be attending three major trade shows — Hanover and Frankfurt, Germany, and in Birmingham, England," said Neuhauser. "The trade mission is open to all community business executives. Although it is not necessary to attend all the export seminars, the third section is required for those going on the trade mission."

Working closely with Madonna College is the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, the Detroit Economic Growth Organization, the Michigan Export Development Authority, the Livonia Chamber of Commerce, the U.S. Department of Commerce and the Wayne County Executive's Office.

"With the assistance of these prominent organizations, as well as through the workshops and the trade mission, Madonna College will be able to meet the exporting needs of area business leaders in a minimum amount of time and at a minimum cost," said Neuhauser.

For more information about the seminars or trade mission contact Dr. Charlotte Neuhauser at (313) 591-5116.

Existing home sales show 9.3 percent increase

Local existing home sales posted an impressive 9.3 percent gain from a year ago in the first quarter of 1989, according to a report from Metro MLS, the state's largest multiple listing service.

"March sale of 1,710 single family homes and 133 condominiums gave our members their highest sales since last May," said Eric J. Hunt, Metro MLS president. "This was some eight percent above the same month a year ago and a 21.5 percent jump over February."

"It is still too early to gauge the result of recent increases in home mortgage interest rates, but there are some signs that these may have peaked and they may have only a minor effect in the spring selling season."

Hunt said early sales this year have been aided by a near 10 percent growth in the number of homes coming on the market to provide a wider choice for potential buyers.

The median home price through the Metro MLS 1,600 square mile territory, primarily in suburban areas of Wayne and Oakland counties, also showed no March gain and held at the $75,000 figure reported in February.

"While a $7,000 increase in the median price from a year ago shows local home values are continuing to rise, the median now is about $950 less than at the end of last year," Hunt stated.

"Our average price, now near $90,000, is somewhat skewed by increased sales in the higher-priced suburban areas. There are still plenty of these around with about 25 percent of our sales at under $50,000."

Hunt said he looked for very strong competition to continue among mortgage lenders and advised buyers to shop around for the best possible financing terms.

"A qualified buyer today has many more options than those of just a few years ago," he said. "Buyers should use their Realtor to help explore these options to determine what up-front costs will be as well as those over the longer term covered by the mortgage."

WHICH OPINION IS RIGHT?
QUESTION: I think my home is worth $70,000, my neighbor says it's worth $85,000, but a prospect claimed it was not worth a cent more than $60,000. Who's opinion should I trust?
ANSWER: The value of your home is not what YOU think it should be, or your neighbor or even a casual prospect. It is determined chiefly by the location, the neighborhood and the current market. Nobody, but nobody, is more acutely aware of the current housing market than your local REALTOR. Put your faith in his hands and he'll recommend the best possible selling price.

Their pictures grace the pages of Sliger-Livingston Publications newspapers every week. Collectively, they've earned a batch of national and state awards for their photo work. Today, photographers John Galloway of The South Lyon Herald/Milford Times, Chris Boyd of The Northville Record/Novi News and Scott Piper of The Livingston County Press/Brighton Argus share their secrets on what amateur shutterbugs can do to take better pictures.

THE HOW-TO'S OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Children and People

By John Galloway

Pictures of children is the most sensitive, challenging, and rewarding form of photography. Through the camera, one can capture innocence, mischievousness, and gaiety unlike any other subject.

When I put a camera between my eye and a child, it's like I'm reliving my own youth, remembering all the feelings and thoughts that were once my own. At times, I wish I was on the other side of the camera; to be able to act and react to situations with spontaneity, with no predictable response.

Oehlenschlaeger once said, "The plays of natural lively children are the infancy of art. Children live a world of imagination and feeling. They invest the most insignificant object with any form they please, and see in it whatever they wish to see."

I've always felt it a privilege that I have the power to capture images of this attitude on film, forever preserving the moment of time. For a child grows up, develops sociality habits, conforming to the "norm," which stifles feelings and acts.

Working for a newspaper is the ultimate opportunity to photograph children. Often I'm in their school or home, on the ballfield, or at their park, watching and photographing as they live, play, and work their infant years.

Several years ago an incident took place which reminded me of my responsibility. Walking down a sidewalk in Howell, I noticed a little boy, about six years old, come running toward me. Much to my surprise, he ran into me, grabbed my leg, looked up and said, "You put my picture in the paper." Then, as quickly as he came, he left, running after the hand of his mother.

That is something I do every week — take kid pictures for the paper. But to a child, it might be the only time in their childhood years that they will be published in the community newspaper. I try to remember that on every assignment, and treat situations as such.

But this is meant to help you, the reader, to best photograph a child. The forementioned is my outlook and philosophy, but I think it necessary to you to really understand that anyone aiming a camera at a child has an opportunity, no, responsibility, to capture much more than light and dark shades of gray or color on film.

THE HOW-TO'S OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Sports and Action

By Chris Boyd

Have you dragged your camera to every one of Junior's basketball games, trying for the great action-shot to send grandparents and future proscouts, only to end up with a blurred image that better resembles fog at night than a fade-away jump shot?

Here are some basic tips for capturing peak sports action on film.

- Shutter speed. The most obvious tip is — you must have a fast enough shutter speed to stop the action. This means a minimum shutter speed of 250th of a second for slow action, such as golf or wrestling, and up to 2000th of a second for rapid movement. The faster the shutter speed, the sharper the image.

- Focus. Because the subjects are usually in constant motion, your focus is constantly changing. Practice is the only way to become adept at "follow focus". A Sports Illustrated photographer practiced follow focus by going out to an expressway and focusing on cars as they sped by.

- Know the sport. Anticipating where the action will occur, when it will occur, and picking your spot will increase your chances of getting that good picture.

THE HOW-TO'S OF PHOTOGRAPHY

Outdoor Scenics

By Scott Piper

Picture this: F. Stop Fitzgerald and his faithful hound Nikon are making their way down a winding trail in their favorite woodland retreat. Looking like a creature from "Revenge of the Photo Nerds," F. Stop is loaded down with enough paraphernalia to be the envy of any well-stocked photo store.

As they round the next bend, a veritable paradise unfolds before them. The stand of pines opens to reveal a meadow teeming with photographic opportunities. Cattails guarding the stream shiver in the same breeze that whispers through the pines above. A blanket of multicolored wildflowers perfumes the air, warmed by the midday sun.

"Nirvana!" F. Stop exclaims as he rummages through his arsenal, searching for his "idiot-proof, auto-everything" camera. Then in a single motion, he steps back, raises his weapon, and CLICK!

Children and People

Shooting children involves a multitude of challenges. At first, they will ham it up and say, "Take my picture." This happens to me often, especially in the schools. Go ahead and aim the camera. Even make some clicking and whirring noises with your mouth if you want. Yes, kids can be fooled momentarily.

Seriously, avoid eye contact with a child if you are really after some spontaneous action. Before long, they'll ignore you. Children usually have a short attention span and get bored quickly. You and your camera will be no exception.

Your goal is to become invisible, to be part of the wallpaper.

Another way to relax a kid, especially a young one, is to put your camera aside. Take a part in their activity. Talk to them. If they ask what you're doing, be honest. Let them know you are going to take pictures. Ask them to ignore you. Most children respect that.

Sure, you may want a few "ham" shots, especially if it is your own child. But the sensitive, spontaneous pictures are what you'll treasure most.

When photographing your kid, keep a careful record of when the photos were made. This is worth repeating! Record when the exposure was made. Kids change in appearance almost weekly, though you'll not notice it without pictures.

Prime time for taking pictures of children is between the ages of 1 to 6. It's at this time that the changes in appearance and perspective take place the most. Don't miss this opportunity!

Whether you have an Instamatic or Nikon, the challenge is the same, but the technique is different.

A camera which allows you to set the shutter speed and aperture will enable you to control your pictures. Children are fast moving. They don't like to sit still for long periods of time. A camera which allows you to set the shutter speed and aperture will be a big plus in your picture-making.

If your camera is aperture-preferred (you set the F-stop, the camera adjusts for the shutter), you should shoot most of your pictures at a wide aperture, F4 or 5.6. That way, by focusing on the child, the background will be thrown out of focus, especially with a telephoto lens.

What will also happen, depending on the film and light, is that a faster shutter speed will be used, freezing the action as they run across the yard.

I suggest you decide on one kind of film, black and white, color slide or color print film, and stick with it. Use slide film if that's what you want the final product to be — slides. Use color negative film if you wish color enlargements made, and black and white if you are processing and printing your own. Commercial labs are mostly set up for color, not black and white.

Next, choose a film brand and speed and stick with it for a while. It takes time to understand characteristics of one kind of film. Switching back and forth between films will do nothing but confuse you.

For starters, I suggest a color slide film with an ASA of 200. There are a number of reasons for this.

ASA 200 film is a medium speed film. It will allow you to take outdoor and indoor pictures without a flash. Most important, though, it will teach you well.

When you send your slide film in, the positive film is simply processed and mounted. Period. Composition will be learned quickly since the slide cannot be cropped when mounted. Also, since the entire roll is developed at the same time, no adjustments will be made for over or under exposure. Your errors or achievements can be quickly evaluated.

You see, when color negative film is processed, the lab will correct many mistakes when making the enlargement. Pictures can be "recomposed" and corrected for bad exposure, in most cases.

Of course, with negative film, the lab can make a mistake. If the prints are bad, you will assume it was your fault, unless you know how to "read" negatives.

So — I suggest if you wish to teach yourself, use slide film during this trial period.

As for taking pictures of children, I recommend a few tips:

1. Get down to their level. Think about it. Would you feel comfortable having someone hover over you? If you wish to make a child more comfortable, especially to the point of forgetting you are there, keep the camera at their eye level.

2. Capture them in situations which are normal to them. One of the best things to do is to invite one of their friends over. Take them both to the park and turn them loose. Not only is the distraction helpful to you, but you can take a couple of pictures of their buddy. They'll love you for that.

3. Restrict your outdoor shooting to hazy, overcast days. Lighting is best when diffused. The sun will cause them to squint. Harsh shadows are uncomplimentary.

4. Never take just one picture, especially with slide film, which is less expensive. Shoot three or four of the same sequence. You'll be sure to get one with just that right expression — and with their eyes open.

5. If your camera is equipped with a motor drive, set it on single advance. The trick is not to machine gun the camera, but to keep the camera to your eye while shooting.

6. If using a flash, bounce it off a ceiling or wall. Make sure the reflective surface is white, otherwise you may have a picture that will look like you used a colored filter over the flash.

Good Luck and Enjoy!

Sports and Action

- Lighting Fundamental rules of lighting still apply. Keep the sunlight at your back if you are outside. However, field orientation and direction of play may not always allow this and the first thing a sports photographer learns is that there is no control over lighting. Inside lighting conditions and nighttime sports under the lights are generally not the best for shooting, but by using fast lenses and fast film, pictures can be made.

- Equipment. Motor drives are nice to have, but not necessary. Long lenses (135-300mm) certainly should be a consideration in helping to fill the frame with action. A common mistake is that images look larger through the eyepiece than they will on the film because of the shooters proximity to the action. Remember tight is right.

- Fast lenses (f2.8) gather more light, producing a brighter image in the eyepiece making focusing easier. They also allow faster shutter speeds stopping the action under poor lighting conditions. The faster the lens, the more money it will cost.

- Film. The lower the ASA rating of a film, the better the resolution of the final print. Higher ASA ratings produce grainy prints, but allow faster shutter speeds. During outside events in daylight, films with ASA ratings of 100-400 work best. At night, or inside, films rated at ASA 1600 work well. Some manufacturers do make 3200 ASA black and white film, but the problem is finding a camera store that stocks it, and then finding someone that processes it.

- Luck.

Peak action in sports happens in an instant. Be prepared to capture that, however don't put the camera down after the run scores. Watch for the reaction. Remember the Kirk Gibson photo? That was a reaction picture that told the story of the Tiger's World Series win.

Sports photos often lend themselves to bizarre juxtapositions of arms, legs and equipment. Situations often occur that can be humorous and out of the ordinary. Look for them.

Outdoor Scenics

His heart sinks. The meadow looks so far away that the cattails and wildflowers are almost invisible. The colors are drab and lifeless and the whole scene seems dreary. The upper half of the picture is nothing but blank sky. In the lower right-hand corner is a suspicious brown shape that upon closer examination reveals itself as the hindquarters of his pal Nikon.

The magic he felt that day had definitely not been captured on film as he had hoped. Then, adding insult to injury, the counter person leans over, points at the 3 1/2-by-5-inch disaster, and squeals, "Ooooh! What happened to that one?"

Another Kodak moment bites the dust.

Unfortunately, our hero's disappointing experience is all too familiar to those of us who enjoy exploring the world through a camera. Sure, mistakes are inevitable, but with a small investment of time and energy you can dramatically increase the quality of your photography. Without this investment, luck will continue to be the deciding factor in how your pictures turn out.

"Places" are the subject of scenic photography. Anything from sweeping landscapes to close-up views are fair game. People are sometimes included in the shot, but are never the actual subject.

The goal is to go beyond merely recording what the scene looks like. A good scenic photo will convey information about what the place "feels" like as well.

Below are a number of pointers to help you get started towards achieving this goal. As you read through them, look back to the escapades of F Stop Fitzgerald. Think about where he went wrong so you don't make the same mistakes.

- You don't need a lot of high-tech equipment to produce great scenics. A 35mm point-and-shoot camera is fine, although it's best to use a camera that accepts interchangeable lenses and allows you to adjust the exposure manually.

- A variety of lenses are useful in scenic photography, but remember that the more you have the more you'll need to carry. Pick up a wide-angle (24-35mm) and a telephoto (105-200mm) to go along with your "normal" lens that came with your camera. You can probably find a single zoom lens that will cover all the focal lengths you'll ever really need.

- Instead of print film, try slides. Dollar for dollar, slides produce higher quality images, are more convenient to store, and tend to resist fading over time. Kodachrome 25, Kodachrome 64, and Fujicrome 100 are the most used films for scenic photography.

- Use a tripod. The relatively slow film and small apertures used to maximize sharpness often result in long exposure times. In addition to steadying the camera, using a tripod forces you to play a more active role in composing the image in the viewfinder.

- Remember that the camera doesn't experience the scene the same way you do. It can't hear the breeze, smell the flowers, or feel the sunshine. Before you decide to trip the shutter, mute all your senses except sight and see if the picture is still worth taking. Try to use elements in the scene to suggest the sense of sound, scent or touch.

- Generally speaking, bright sun at midday is the least flattering light for scenic photography. Early morning and late afternoon through sunset offer much more interesting possibilities for most subjects. Overcast skies are good for close-up work but not for landscapes. Rain, snow and other kinds of "nasty" weather often make great photos. A few well-placed plastic bags are sufficient protection for your equipment.

- Try to visualize what the photograph will look like before you trip the shutter. Use this "mind's eye" image as a guide in making decisions about composition, exposure, etc.

- When composing the image, it's helpful to think in terms of what should be excluded from view. Don't just step back and try to "get it all in." If something in the scene is distracting or fails to contribute to the theme of the shot, leave it out (your dog's rear end for example!) A cardboard slide mount with the film removed makes a handy frame for exploring how the scene might look on film.

- As a general rule, don't place important subjects in the center of the image. Most subjects are more attractive when placed off-center, especially the horizon line.

- Look for familiar shapes formed by the elements in the scene and use them to help compose the image. The "S" formed by bends in a river is a good example.

- Use objects close to the camera to frame more distant features. Tree limbs positioned at the top of the image help draw attention back into the scene and add some life to a featureless sky.

- When determining exposure settings, be sure to take the meter reading from a middle-toned object such as green foliage, gray stone, or weathered wood. The exposure will be off if the meter is pointed at a light or dark object.

- If no middle-toned object is available, take the reading from the palm of your hand, then open the lens up one f-number from the indicated settings.

- In tricky lighting situations, it's a good practice to bracket your exposures. Make one exposure at the indicated settings, then overexpose a series of frames in half-stop increments (plus 1/2, plus 1, plus 1 1/2, plus 2 stops). Underexpose the next four frames in the same way (minus 1/2, minus 1, minus 1 1/2, minus 2 stops).

Now that you have some pointers on improving your scenic photos, it's time to go out and practice. When all is said and done, nothing is more helpful than actually making photographs. Film is cheap so don't hesitate to try new things. Try shooting that same scene in different ways. Shoot some close-ups as well as overviews. Try different angles, different lighting conditions, even different seasons.

Be creative, but most of all, have fun. Just keep in mind that pictures are taken, photographs are created.

Spring fashion show planned at church

By BRENDA DOOLEY

Temperatures are rising, leading to the annual wardrobe switch. Gone is the season for wearing heavy wool sweaters and layers of dark clothing.

Ahead is the season for swimsuits, colorful cotton rompers and lightweight linen skirts.

To help local ladies make sure they're on the top of the fashion scene, the Women's Association at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville is planning a spring/summer fashion show.

The show, sponsored by the Women's Association, will be held Wednesday, May 10 at the church.

Gourmet desserts will be served beginning at 12:30 p.m., followed by the fashion show. Fashions will be provided by Twelve Oaks Mall and modeled by ladies from the mall's TTFF (Take Time For Fashion).

Other scheduled activities include a demonstration on how to use accessories. Door prizes will be available and centerpieces consisting of pink geraniums in wooden crates will be sold.

Tickets are $4.50 and can be purchased at the church office. All community members are invited to attend. Deadline for purchasing tickets is Sunday, May 7.

All proceeds from the event will benefit mission work.

For more information contact Pearl Stephens at 349-0090.

Northville Newcomers announce new board

When members of the Northville Newcomers recently gathered for their annual Spring Fling Luncheon they munched salads, enjoyed each other's company and welcomed a new board of officers.

Board members for the group's new year are Carol Mazza, president; Gini Britton, vice president; Sue Sutherland, secretary; and Susan Montagnino, treasurer.

Other officers include Kathie Nelson and Dink Brugman, special interest committee; Linda Cooley and Kim Woodruff, couples committee; Bev Prici and Holly Hambell, Ladies Day committee; Judy Chapmas, membership; Sue Cipicchio, Caryn Doehler and Marcia Booth, alumni representatives; Judy Yanachik and Terry Hoog, newsletter; and Patty Tarrulo, art.

Northville Town Hall Board to distribute funds

There's still time to submit letters of request to the Northville Town Hall Board of Awards.

The board is in the process of receiving and considering letters from area organizations and charities for distribution of funds. Annually, the Town Hall Board of Awards donates proceeds from its celebrity lecture series to groups in need of funds.

Half of the proceeds are donated to Our Lady's League of Our Lady of Victory Church, sponsors of the series. The remaining funds go to a selected charity.

Submitted letters should state the intent of an organization and what the funds will be used for. Letters should be mailed to: Northville Town Hall Board of Awards, P.O. Box 93, Northville, Mich., 48167. Deadline for submitting requests is May 31.

FASHIONABLE FLOWERS

Left to right, Nancy Shafer, Pearl Stephens, Dorothea Shafer and Dolly Dolie work on flower arrangements that will be sold during a fashion show on May 10 at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville. Community members are invited to attend the spring/summer show. For more information, see the story at left.

Youth group to host car wash fund-raiser

In need of a car wash?

If it's spring, there's probably mud splatters on the windshield or hood. But don't despair. At least one local group is willing to help residents clean up their autos.

Members of a youth group at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville are planning to host a car wash on Saturday, May 20, at the church from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Car washes will be free. At the same time, youth group members will accept membership pledges to fund a trip they're planning to take to Clemson, S.C.

The trip to South Carolina won't serve merely a pleasure vacation, according to Martin Ankrum, associate pastor at the church. While in South Carolina, youth group members plan to repair houses of low-income residents who can't afford to do it themselves.

Proceeds from the car wash will benefit the project.

Four local couples welcome new babies

Maternal grandparents are Shirley and Fred Millard of Northville. Paternal grandparents are Shirley Edison Worcester of Big Rapids and John Tanner of Ann Arbor.

Great-grandparents are Hazel and Stanley Coon of Northville.

Shelley Tanner is a 1978 graduate of Northville High School.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wolfston of Traverse City announce the birth of a son, JOHN ROBERT, born April 10 at Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

Antique show

Antique dealers display wares at Greenfield Village

By ANN E. WILLIS

If it's spring it must be time for antique shows. And as area collectors know, the granddaddy of antique shows in this area is the annual Village Antique Show at Greenfield Village's Lovett Hall on May 12-14.

This will be the fifth year for the Village Antique Show. All funds raised from the show are used to support the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village educational programs for young people.

The Village Antique Show received rave reviews in press around the country, and has been ranked by some experts as one of the top five antique shows in the country. According to Show Manager J. Jordan Humberstone, this year's show will again feature dealers from across the country and will concentrate on stock that is commensurate with the time period represented in the Village and the museum.

Humberstone said there was less than a 10 percent turnover rate among the dealers from last year's show. Most dealers will be stocked with American antiques and artifacts, Humberstone said, while some of these will include exports from the Chinese and European markets for the American market.

Free lectures on the practical aspects of antiquing will be offered on Friday and Saturday during the show, beginning at 3 p.m. "Building an American Furniture Collection in the 1990s: A Strategy for Contemporary Collectors" by Robert O. Stuart of Limington, Maine, will be featured on Friday. "Connoisseurship — The Endless Quest" by Michael M. Stone of New York, Woodbury, Conn. and Vineyard Haven, Mass. will be featured on Saturday.

Headquartered in Lovett Hall, the Village Antiques Show will feature 47 dealers from across the country. Admission-price to the show is $5 at the door; $4 if purchased in advance. Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village require separate admissions. Group discounts are available. Show hours begin at 11 a.m. on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and end at 9 p.m., 7 p.m. and 5 p.m. respectively. Close to 4,000 people will view the show during the three days it is open in the Village. Humberstone noted that while the show attracts many dedicated and knowledgeable antique hunters because of the national reputation of the dealers, many first-time and apprentice buyers also enjoy the show.

"The eclectic look is back," Humberstone said, noting that mixing and matching antiques and other decorating themes is becoming the norm. Young collectors can find specially tagged items at various booths at the show.

Each year the Village Antiques Show is opened with a special and elegant Preview Night which features a gourmet dinner, open bar, and opportunity to view and buy antiques. Tickets to this year's Preview Night are still on sale for Thursday, May 11. Benefactor tickets are $125 per person (6-10 p.m.) Patron Tickets are $100 per person (7-10 p.m.)

The proceeds from the 1989 Village Antiques Show will help to support the museum's educational programs which reach over 350,000 children through family visits and organized school and youth groups. Programs range from hands-on participation and organized tours to special overnight dormitory programs and actual class experiences in one of the museum's several one-room historic school buildings.

For more information contact the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village Development Office at 271-1620, ext. 214.

AMERMAN/MORAINE

The Arts in Action Week at Amerman will conclude last week with a school-wide assembly featuring the Edinborough Sax Quartet. The week included activities such as creative dramatics, dance, vocal and instrumental music presentations, visual arts, poetry and literature displays. Several artists visited the classes with programs and demonstrations.

Flyers have been sent home with the students regarding the Amerman/Moraine Parent Teacher Association Flower Sale. Orders were due back by May 2 and flowers are to be picked up by May 18 between 4 and 6:30 p.m. Extra order forms are available in the school office. If you have further questions you may contact Lynn Zwiesler, Chris Maloney or Alice Patterson.

The Transition Committee continues to make progress in areas of concern to Amerman parents whose children will be changing schools. The decision was made to split the PTA treasury at the end of the year between the two schools. In June buses will transport these students to Moraine to see their new school. An orientation evening is being planned for students and families on Aug. 29 and an Open House for upper elementary on Sept. 19 and lower elementary on Sept. 20.

New PTA officers for Amerman will be: President, Barbara Flis; Vice-president, Susie Rompel; Secretary, Mary Mattis; Treasurer, Mary Ellen Wolpers. ### SILVER SPRINGS

Congratulations to the following fourth grade students for scoring 100 percent on the Michigan Education Assessment Program test: Robbie Beier, Jared Cromas, Gabrielle Deland, Beth Julien, Chad Schaffer and Mikail Zethelius.

To help celebrate the year of the Young Reader, Silver Springs students are making "reading birds", to follow the theme "Give Us Books Give Us Wings". The students will cut out a bird and write the name of the book they have read on one wing, the author on the other wing and their name on the body of the bird. These birds will be displayed throughout the school.

We are receiving an AM/FM Stereo Radio/Record Player with Twin Cassette System and an overhead projector with the Campbell labels that were collected this year. Judy Higbee's fourth grade collected the most labels for March. Continue to send in labels as the contest will be conducted through June.

Last month our third graders celebrated National Reading Month with a Read-a-Thon which was a big success. Teams of two students read in 20 minute shifts, 6½ hours a day for four days. Congratulations!

Fifth graders from Silver Springs and Winchester will be meeting in a pair of debates next month. On May 4 Silver Springs students will be traveling to Winchester and on May 12 Winchester will be coming to Silver Springs.

On May 11 the Meads Mill Band will be coming to Silver Springs to play for our fourth and fifth graders.

Our Spring Musical is going to be held on May 11 at 7 p.m. Grades 2, 4, and 5 as well as the Glee Club and Silver Springs Singers will take part. The theme this year is "numbers".

On May 18 the Niner Puppeteers will be at Silver Springs performing Rumpelstiltskin. After the show they will demonstrate how their puppets work.

Our first ever Art Fair and Ice Cream Social will be held on May 19 from 6:30 — 8:30 p.m. Ice cream sundaes will be on the menu and art work will fill the halls.

Michigan Week will be kicked off at Silver Springs on May 22 with a flag ceremony at 9:15 a.m. Students will be making posters advertising Michigan and class winners will be displayed in the school. Wednesday will feature a Grounds Clean Up done by the kindergarten, first and second grades. Thursday is Career Day and students are urged to dress in a profession of their choice. There will also be speakers describing their unusual jobs.

School will be dismissed at noon on May 25 for a teacher in-service day. The PTA will be treating our staff to a luncheon that day to express appreciation for all they do for our children.

WINCHESTER

The Winchester PTA met on Wednesday, April 5, at Winchester

Elementary School. The meeting was attended by many parents and Kathy Morhouse, principal. Plans for a very exciting month were shared with all those present.

Parent-Teacher Conferences were held during the week of April 10-14. Mrs. Danes hosted an Art Show during the conference week. Each student at Winchester had a piece of their work on display. All those parents who attended conferences had an opportunity to enjoy this beautiful collection of student's work.

It was announced that 14 students from Winchester participated in the Odyssey of the Mind Regional Competition in March. From this group, Howard Fan, Ben Romine, and Chris Bond competed in the State Competition on April 15.

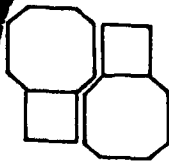

Winchester students participated in a Germ Awareness Week during the week of April 3-7. There were many activities enjoyed by the students with the purpose of promoting a greater awareness of the spreading of germs. Hand washing was stressed as the best way of preventing the spread of germs. Many students participated in a "Draw That Germ Contest." It is hoped that this program will become an annual event at Winchester.

The Art Appreciation program is continuing at Winchester. All students are becoming acquainted with great works of art. Many volunteers are making this program possible. The program will continue through the first week of May.

The Junior Enrichment Series continues to provide the students at Winchester with the opportunity to enjoy many different special programs. On April 3, students enjoyed a presentation of "Ben and Me." On April 13, stories written by Winchester students were performed by "Storybuilders." These special programs bring great enjoyment to all our students.

Winchester's Fun Fair was held on April 21. The Fun Fair was attended by many students and their families. The Cake Walk, Broken Bones, Moon Walk, Candyland, Hand Painting, and other attractions were very much enjoyed by all those in attendance. This year's Fun Fair was a great success.

THE Durand Train Festival

By ALICIA GARRISON

Explore rare trackage on a scenic railroad excursion from Ann Arbor to Durand at the Durand Railroad Days Festival Saturday.

The Bluewater Michigan Chapter's "Yes! Michigan Train" will whisk passengers through the outskirts of Whitmore Lake and several other inland lakes in Washtenaw and Livingston counties, then leisurely meander along the fertile farmlands of Shiawassee County to the 14th Annual Durand Railroad Days Festival.

This is only the second public passenger train to operate over these tracks in more than 35 years. Pulling right up to the historic Durand Union Depot, excursionists will have plenty of opportunities to feast and stroll through this extraordinary town.

Attractions at the festival will include a parade and carnival, an appearance by Steamtrain Maury Graham, national King of the Hobos, serving his "Hobo Stew," a flea market and craft show, and displays of railroad memorabilia.

Retired Grand Trunk Pacific steam locomotive 5632 will be on display, and the Durand Memorial Railroaders Museum will be open, as well as the historic Durand Union Depot built in 1905.

Passengers can board Amtrak train 351 at the Ferry Yard in Ann Arbor, next to the University of Michigan Football Stadium, and at the Livingston County Historical Society's 1885 Ann Arbor Railroad Depot at the foot of Walnut Street, north of the business district in Howell.

The train will depart at 9 a.m. in Ann Arbor, and at 11:10 a.m. in Howell, arriving in Durand at 12:15 p.m.

Departure from Durand will be at 3:30 p.m., arriving back in Howell at 5 p.m. and Ann Arbor at 7:10 p.m.

The Bluewater Michigan Chapter's fleet includes air-conditioned and open-window coaches, a baggage car for viewing and sound recording, a snack and souvenir car and lounge cars.

First-class tickets—including private lounge-car seating, hor d'oeuvres, snacks, coffee, tea, and soft drinks—are $69 (full dome car add $20). Ann Arbor adult coach tickets are $39; Ann Arbor children, ages 5-16, coach tickets are $32; Howell adult coach tickets are $19; and Howell children, ages 5-16, coach tickets are $14.

Tickets can be ordered in person at Ruthie's Family Restaurant in Howell, 107 W. Grand River Ave., and at the Washtenaw Dairy, 602 S. Ashley, Ann Arbor, during regular business hours.

Robert's Poco Cafe: A fine little restaurant

There seems to be something of an affinity between the pleasant little building at 328 South Main Street in Ann Arbor and pleasant little restaurants.

First, it housed Chez Crepe. Then it was home to the appropriately named 328 South Main. And now it's home to yet another fine little restaurant called "Robert's Poco Cafe."

Owner Robert Salvador has created a restaurant which more or less successfully meets the often contradictory demands of the contemporary diner.

Robert's Poco Cafe offers a setting which is both formal and informal. The decor is rather elegant with deep, rich appointments. And the food meets demands for creativity and presentation.

But there's also a low-key aura to the restaurant which makes it comfortable for people going out for an evening of dining or people completing a casual afternoon of browsing through Ann Arbor's art galleries.

Despite it's somewhat confusing name, Robert's Poco Cafe is not a Mexican restaurant. Instead, it offers contemporary American cuisine with some strong Mediterranean influences.

The generally attentive wait staff is dressed in crisp white shirts with little bow ties, and there's a more than adequate wine list with the wine rack in clear view on the back wall of the restaurant.

The menu itself is rather modest, offering an adequate but not extensive selection of entrees. Apparently the emphasis is on preparing a few selections well rather than offering everything anyone could possibly think of.

Fittingly, the menu includes a choice of three appetizers and four salads. Appetizers include a cheese and fruit plate, shrimp finger crepes and rilletes pate', a fine spice pate' served with prosciutto and tomato slices.

In addition to the obligatory tossed dinner salad, the selection of salads includes a turkey waldorf, a savory herb veal salad and a protein plate of fresh chicken salad, cottage cheese and egg with julenned veggies.

Recent visits to Robert's Poco Cafe brought high grades to the tossed dinner salad which contains bib and romaine lettuce topped with provolone cheese. The rilletes pate', although interesting, was served atop tomato slices which were not quite in season — a culinary gaffe for a restaurant with the aspirations of Robert's Poco Cafe.

Entree selections include four crepes and eight entrees as well as the "catch of the day." Although somewhat disappointed in the pate', the preparation of the entrees received good reviews.

Particularly tasty were the Veal Prugna — medallions of veal with a sauteed plum sauce, port wine, mango chutney and lemon, served with green beans and a brown rice pilaf — and Indian Duck — boneless duck breasts with apple brandy sauce and pomegranate served with green beans and red skin potatoes.

Also receiving high grades were Ginger Sea — shrimp and sea scallops, fresh ginger, red and yellow peppers, mushrooms and pea pods in demi-glace, served on brown rice pilaf — and Zin Chicken — boned breasts of chicken in a white zinfandel dijon cream sauce with red and yellow peppers, broccoli and tomato fettuccine.

As you can see, the cuisine demonstrates imagination and creativity.

The same emphasis on preparing a few dishes very well is evident among a small but excellent selection of desserts. Outstanding are an Ozark Apple Pie (sliced apple and walnuts baked in an egg and vanilla batter, served with french vanilla ice cream) and Crepes a la Bananas Foster (fresh bananas with brown sugar, cinnamon and run served with French vanilla ice cream).

The restaurant also offers fresh-ground Columbian blend coffee, an interesting selection of herb teas and several brands of imported beers.

Briningstool undergoes 2nd surgery

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

If anybody can find positives in what appears to be a very disappointing situation, former Northville football star Tony Briningstool can.

The 6-foot-5, 232-pound linebacker at Michigan State was forced to miss most of spring practice after suffering his second dislocated shoulder injury of the past few months on April 10 in East Lansing. Briningstool had a similar shoulder problem that kept him out of the 1989 Gator Bowl and required surgery. The second injury — and subsequent surgery — could severely hamper his chances of moving into the Spartan starting line-up next fall as a redshirted sophomore.

But Briningstool refuses to let the chronic shoulder problem get him down, or quell his optimism.

"Actually, the whole thing worked out pretty good," a recovering Briningstool said from his parent's home in Northville. "When I first injured the shoulder, two-thirds of the cartilage was torn but the doctors didn't discover that until the second surgery. Now I feel like I can come back 100 percent and not have to worry about the shoulder anymore."

Going down near the start of spring practice certainly won't help Briningstool's chances for playing time next fall. He was in the midst of a two-way battle with Carlos Jenkins for the starting strong-side linebacker position. The missed action may be too much to overcome, but Briningstool is looking at the bright side of the situation.

"The good thing is I shouldn't miss any of the season, so it's not that bad," he said. "I was a little disappointed and I am well aware that I have my work cut out for me the next four months, trying to get back and healthy. I believe in myself and I know I'll be back. I know it will all fall into place eventually."

After the April 12 surgery, Briningstool received a lift when several MSU coaches visited him and told him not to get discouraged.

"They told me not to get down and that they knew I'd be back," he recalled. "That made me feel a lot better."

Canton, Salem end netters win steak

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

After handing out quite a few lopsided defeats this season, the Northville netters found out what it's like to be on the wrong side of a blow out.

Plymouth Canton — the pre-season favorite in the WLA — crushed the Mustangs 6-1 in a lopsided match on April 28, handing coach Dick Norton and his team their first Western Division defeat of the year. The Chiefs won the match with ease, especially in the singles flights where Northville went down in straight sets in all four contests.

"In the case of the Canton meet, the score was a good indication as to how lopsided it was," Norton admitted. "It wasn't that we played poorly, it's just that the competition was tough. I can't use the excuse that we didn't play well... we just lost to a better team."

Northville's lone victory came from the No. 1 doubles team of Ken Spigarelli and Jeff Wesley. They dumped Tony Spagnoli and Rod Jesena 6-3, 6-2. At No. 2 doubles, Todd Booth and Mike Mathes were beaten by Jeff Binder and Scott Jones (4-6, 5-7) and the third team of Kevin Telepo and Britt Davis lost a 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 4-6 marathon against Brad Flowers and Jeff Hines.

Rob Richcreek fell to Jim Gallagher (2-6, 1-6) at No. 1 singles; Kurt Reickel was bounced by Dan Oriandi (2-6, 3-6) at No. 2; Chad Bosscher fell to Brian Schmidt (2-6, 4-6) at No. 3 and Brad Telepo was trounced by Chris Harper (2-6, 0-6) at No. 4.

"We were quite competitive in the doubles, but (Canton) swamped us in the singles," Norton said.

PLYMOUTH SALEM 6, NORTHVILLE 1: The Mustang's first loss of any kind came on April 24 against the Rocks. But unlike the Canton meet, it was very competitive and very close. The problem for Norton was that Salem ended up winning all but one of the close matches.

"We battled hard but couldn't win the close ones," Norton said. "Four of the six matches were three-sets, but again we ended up losing all four singles. I was pleased with the way we played but Salem is probably one of the top three teams in our conference."

The Booth and Mathes doubles duo edged Jeff Rearick and Mike Sell 7-6 (7-4), 6-4 at No. 2, but it was Northville's only victory. Spigarelli and Wesley lost their first match of the season to Scott Hobbs and Matt Lore (4-6, 4-6) while Kevin Telepo and Davis dropped a heartbreaking 1-6, 7-6 (7-3), 3-6 decision to Jeff Elliott and K.C. Kirkpatrick.

In singles, Richcreek took Rich Cundiff to three sets before falling 0-6, 7-5, 4-6; Reickel fell to Ryan Bannan (2-6, 3-6); Bosscher was outlasted by Wade Garard (4-6, 6-2, 4-6) and Brad Telepo went three sets before succumbing to Chris Marschak (6-4, 1-6, 3-6).

NORTHVILLE 7, WALLED LAKE CENTRAL 0: The only bright spot in the week was a convincing dual meet win over the Vikings on April 26. Even with a new line-up, the Mustangs grabbed straight set wins in all six flights.

"I made some changes in order to get some others a chance to play," Norton said. "Central is not strong and we handled them easily."

Both Richcreek and Reickel were 6-2, 6-2 winners in the top two singles matches. Bosscher crushed John Lynblad (6-1, 6-3) at No. 3 and Jason Baker dropped Chris Johnson (6-2, 7-5) at No. 4.

Booth and Mathes moved up to No. 1 doubles and disposed of Craig Boyd and Jim Hamje 6-1, 6-4. Kyle Legala and Erik Black teamed up for a 6-0, 6-1 win over Corbin Bell and Phil Geelhood at No. 2 and the third team of Andy Haas and Brent Garner cruised past Adam Fenstermaker and Dan Roggenbush (6-2, 6-1).

Northville is now 5-2 overall, 3-2 in the WLA.

Mustangs top Western 12-6

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

It took nine tries but persistence paid off as the Northville baseballers finally recorded a victory to put in the win column for this season.

Thanks to a Herculean performance at the plate by shortstop Jim Willerer, the Mustangs scored early and often and ran away with a 12-6 triumph over Walled Lake Western on April 26. After several near-misses, Coach Bob Frellick and his squad found out what it's like to win again.

"It always makes you feel better to win," Frellick said. "I was happy for the kids because they've played hard and they deserved to get a win."

It looked like the same old story in the top of the first as the Warriors scored three times off starter Scott Probert, but Northville came back in impressive fashion, and Willerer was the key figure. Singles by Dave McKee, Steve Vigh and Brian Frellick loaded the bases and Willerer then crunched his first career grand slam to put the Mustangs ahead for good.

Mike Jambor and Joe Kaley drove in a pair of runs in the third to make it 6-4 and then Willerer clouted his second homer of the day, this time a three-run shot, that put the home team in control 9-4.

Amazingly, Willerer completed the hat-trick with a monstrous homer in the sixth — driving in two more runs — giving him nine for the game. Probert settled down after the rocky first and allowed only three runs and four hits the rest of the way to register his first victory.

"Jim Willerer has a season in one day," Frellick said. "He drilled three balls over the fence. But we had some other guys contributing too. For him to get nine RBIs, somebody else was getting on base."

"I thought Probert pitched seven strong innings. He's had a few very good outings in a row now and his earned run average is down under four."

LIVONIA FRANKLIN 10, NOR-

THVILLE 2: The losing skid reached eight with this April 24 road defeat, and Frellick wasn't very happy with his team's effort.

"We didn't come out to play... it wasn't one of our better games," he explained. "We weren't into it — we were lacking intensity — and that led to some easy runs for (Franklin)."

Starter Tim Hubbert surrendered a leadoff triple and it got progressively worse from there. The Patriots scored four runs on only two hits in the first three innings thanks to two walks, a hit batter and several errors. The Mustangs did put together a two-run rally in the fourth on hits by Vigh and Darren Kehoe, but Franklin came back with three in the fifth and three more in the sixth. The hits ended up being Northville's only two of the game.

"Franklin played a good ball game and, unfortunately, we didn't play like we are capable," Frellick said. "Hubbert had an off-day, but so did everybody. It was just one of those games."

FARMINGTON HARRISON 7, NORTHVILLE 2: The undefeated Hawks grabbed a 3-0 lead in the early going on April 28 and then cruised the rest of the way behind pitching ace Todd Lichtman — who fanned eight batters and allowed only five hits.

"Lichtman pitched a nice game," Frellick said. "Harrison is a fine team and they played well. But I thought we played well too. They scored some chippy runs on us, but good teams get runs that way."

Steve Bastian ended the shut out with a solo home run to lead off the fifth and Northville added another in the top of the seventh, but it wasn't enough. John Schriber went the distance, surrendered only five hits, but suffered the loss.

"Schriber pitched well but we got behind early against a good pitcher and that was it," Frellick said. "With the exception of the Franklin game, we're playing very competitive baseball."

Freimund no-hits Harrison

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

It was bound to happen sooner or later.

Mustang pitching sensation Amy Freimund finally got her first no-hitter of the season after four — count 'em, four — one hitters in 10 outings so far in '89. The victim was Farmington Harrison, who fell to Freimund and Northville 12-0 on April 28.

"Amy had just one baserunner," coach Bob Gerlach said. "A runner got to first on an error in the fifth and that was the only thing that kept her from a perfect game. She faced the minimum number of batters, 15, and struck out eight and didn't walk any. It was a masterful performance."

The Mustangs broke loose for six runs in the third, and the big hit was a two-run double by Melanie Apligian. Sue LaPrad and Rozann Staknis also delivered key hits in the rally. Northville rounded out the scoring with six more in the fourth on hits by LaPrad and Staknis again, and four walks.

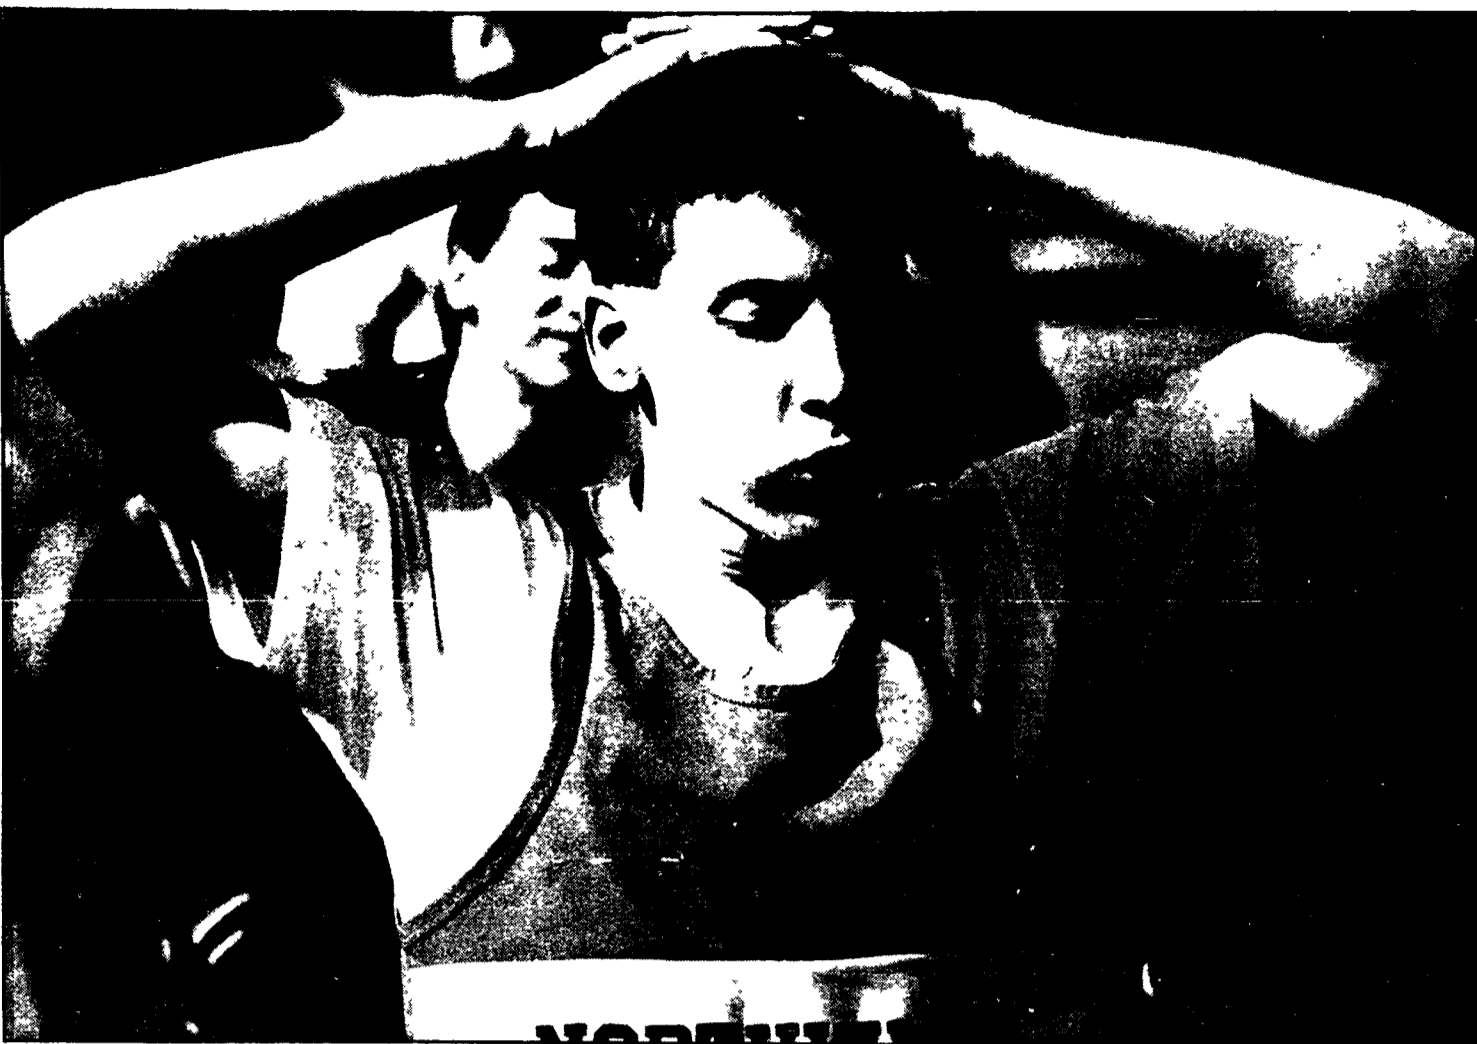

"We didn't want to take (Harrison) lightly but we knew we should beat them," Gerlach said. "So far our defense hasn't let us down and Amy has been pitching solid and consistent. I believe she's one of the best pitchers in the state."

NORTHVILLE 4, LIVONIA FRANKLIN 1: Freimund had another outstanding game on April 24, shutting down the Patriots for six innings before giving up three hits and an earned run in the seventh. It was Freimund's first earned run of the season.

"Franklin is always tough in our division," Gerlach said. "We are now alone in first place in the division and we are starting to hit the ball better."

True to form, the Mustangs took a 1-0 lead in the first without the aid of a hit, but then added three more in the fourth on hits by Laura Apligian and Jenny Juhasz, a wild pitch, a

Shorthanded tracksters lose upset bid

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

When a track meet is decided by less than 10 points, it's considered a very close contest.

The Northville and Plymouth Canton boys hooked up on the track last week (April 27) and all signs pointed to a fight down to the wire. But without two key performers, the Mustangs were unable to hold on and fell 72-64 to the Chiefs. Northville is now 2-3 overall (1-2 in the WLAA).

"We didn't have our top long jumper (Ryan Davis) or one of our top middle distance runners (Karl Siegert) and it really hurt," Northville Coach Dennis Faletti said. "I thought we'd be able to pull it out. We had some nice performances and I was happy about that, but I wasn't happy with the loss."

The Mustangs managed eight wins, but didn't have the kind of depth in the running events to overtake Canton. Senior sprinter Mark Kiraly paced the winners with first-place honors in the 100-meter (11.4) and 200-meter (23.1) dashes. Both efforts were season best performances and Kiraly remains unbeaten in the 200 this season.

The rest of the Northville wins came from Todd Daniels in the shot put (37'-7 1/4"), Chris Kuffner in the discus (137'-5 1/4"), Sean Starkweather in the pole vault (11'-0"), Greg Price in the 110 high hurdles (16.9), Cory Robinson in the 300 intermediate hurdles (43.8) and the 400 relay team of Kiraly, Daniels, Neil White and Jamie Miller (47.4).

The runner-up places included Kuffner in the shot put (37'-1 1/4"), Bob Dudley in the discus (126'-4 1/2"), Allen Kuljurgis in the high jump (5'-6"), Aaron Wiseley in the pole vault (9'-6"), Robinson in the 110 hurdles (17.2) and Price in the 300 hurdles (45.1). The thirds came from John Okasinski in the pole vault (9'-0"), Rob Walsh in the long jump (19'-1 1/4"), Jay Griffith in the 800 (2:10.8) and Steve Coon in the two mile (10:37.5).

"We did well in the field events but we lost a lot of ground in the running events," Faletti said. "We were swept in the 400 and the mile and we took one of four relays."

NOVI RELAYS: The Mustangs placed fifth in this eight-team event on April 29, but the three teams below Northville were the only other WLAA squads in the field. The Mustangs scored 36 points — 52 behind first-place Milan.

"Last year, we only placed in two events," Faletti said. "This year, we're placing in all 10 events that we entered. I thought we did well."

Northville's only win came in the discus relay. The team of Kuffner (142'-0"), Dudley (103'-0") and Erik Billimoria (132'-8") combined for 378'-9", which set a new meet record.

The Mustangs added a pair of thirds in the high jump and two-mile relays. The high jump team included Walsh (19'-3"), Davis (19'-7") and Miller (18'-11") while the two-mile squad featured Siegert, Coon, Jon Meek and Griffith (8:45.41).

Northville girls fall to 'Goliath' Canton squad

Northville girls' track coach Mike Webb says taking his team up against a large school like Plymouth Canton is like 'David versus Goliath.'

"Only we aren't allowed to throw stones," he laughed.

The winless Mustangs put together their best dual meet performance of the season on April 27 with personal best efforts all over the place. Unfortunately, it wasn't enough to stave off a 90-38 defeat to the visiting Chiefs. The defeat drops Northville's season mark to 0-5 (0-3 in the WLAA).

"We did much better against Canton than we did against Salem a week earlier," Webb said. "We had some outstanding efforts."

The star of the meet for the Mustangs was Ris Fleming, who had a hand in two victories and three personal best performances. She won the 300-meter intermediate hurdles (52.3), was a member of the winning 800 relay with Tricia Lukowski, Kendra Huard and Wendy Davis (1:56.6), was second in the high jump (4'-9") and third in the 110 high hurdles (18.9).

"It was a great individual performance, and she did it all with a sprained ankle," Webb said.

The only other Northville first came from the mile relay team of Dawn Leland, Angie Tune, Huard and Davis (4:39). Mustang seconds came from Davis in the long jump (14'-8"), Lukowski in the 100 (14.0) and 200 (30.0), Mari Kissinger in the 800 (2:39) and Lisa Brown in the mile (5:59.6). The thirds included Kissinger in the shot put (23'-6"), Leland in the long jump (14'-6 1/2"), Tune in the 300 hurdles (56.3) and Brown in the two mile (12:55.2).

"We even got a compliment from the Canton coach," Webb said. "You can tell by our times that we are improving."

The Mustangs will host Livonia Franklin today (May 4) and Webb believes the losing streak is about to end.

"I'm pretty sure we have a good chance to beat Franklin," he said. "We've been close to them for years and this may be the year we do it."

11 Northville runners place in Novi/Providence Run

The ninth annual Novi/Providence Run on April 23 drew 426 participants and was a tremendous success according to Jack Lewis, Novi Parks and Recreation Department supervisor.

Nearly 400 runners were involved in the 5K and 10K races, including participants from all over the state — from Algonac to Montrose. The event started at the Novi City Center and the first 325 entrants received a t-shirt.

"It was a great success," Lewis said. "It's the largest group of runners we've ever had. A couple years ago, we had about 350."

Novi and Northville were well represented in the event. Novi runners grabbed four age-division championships and Northville two. A total of 11 Northville runners placed in the top three of their age groups and Novi had eight. The overall winners in the 10K were Joseph Schmidt, Ann Arbor (30:43); 2. ## Kurtis sets record at marathon Northville running guru Doug Kurtis, 37, was the overall winner at the April 16 West Bloomfield Half Marathon with a winning time of 1:07:32.

The 661 finishers came from more than 130 communities in Michigan, Ohio and nearby Canada, including 21 from the Northville/Novi area. Kurtis was also the winner in the 'Sub Masters' division (age 30-39) and his time was a new course record.

The race was sponsored and organized for the 13th time by West Bloomfield Parks and Recreation. Its co-sponsor since 1982 has been the Henry Ford Medical Center in West Bloomfield.

An added safety feature at the race this year was the Henry Ford Hospital Center for Athletic Medicine mobile sports van. Physicians and athletic trainers associated with the Cam-Van were on hand at the finish to assist any runner who might be injured.

The rest of the Northville finishers included Dennis Anderson (216th, 1:39:10.9), Donald Walter (423rd, 1:50:23), Frank Drew (626th, 2:11:58), Janet Gaffka (280th, 1:42:17), Kathleen Step (302nd, 1:43:39), Michael Kowalski (173rd, 1:35:57), Midge Drew (644th, 2:22:09), Robert Sedgewick (130th, 1:32:47), Sandra Sheldon (337th, 1:45:37), Tom Haupt (86th, 1:28:10), Alan Jensen (151th, 1:34:36), Bea Flanagan (458th, 1:52:19), Bill Maguire (514th, 1:57:04) and Debbie Stack (500th, 1:56:01).

Shamrock coach admits falsifying documents

Redford Catholic Central wrestling coach Mike Rodriguez has admitted he falsified documents regarding senior Mike Gentile's eligibility to wrestle at 119 pounds in the individual district tournament last winter.

As a result, Rodriguez faces a possible suspension, and Gentile, whom Rodriguez removed from the tournament after he won the district championship, could be stripped of his title.

Following the district, Rodriguez said it was a matter of conscience that caused him to withdraw Gentile from the individual tournament.

"When I got to the final, I couldn't let it go any further," he said. "I knew it wasn't right. I lived with a lie, and I let it go on."

"Had he gone on and won (the state title), it probably would have been a bigger can of worms."

Rodriguez, who has coached high school wrestling for 32 years and spent the last 22 at Catholic Central, reflected on the impact his actions will have on his credibility and CC's reputation.

"I've been questioned before, but not to the point I've gone ahead and done this," he said. "I've always been straight up with everybody but this one time."

"When you get on top, everyone is going to point. This really makes it bad — I go ahead and justify everything they've been saying."

Independent investigations by the Observer Newspaper and CC officials revealed Gentile, who had wrestled at 125 pounds the entire season, had not met the requirement to wrestle once at 119 during the season.

In a meeting recently between the Rev. Dennis Andrews, the principal at CC, Bob Santello, the school's athletic director and Rodriguez, the latter acknowledged he submitted false information regarding Gentile's eligibility to Garden City High School, the pre-district tournament host.

Mustangs of the Week

MARK KIRALY

JIM WILLERER

Senior sprinter Mark Kiraly has been the top point getter for the Northville trackers this season, so his individual effort against Plymouth Canton on April 27 shouldn't come as a surprise. But the fact that Kiraly was involved in three victories for Northville is a great accomplishment, and we think 'Mustang of the Week' honors should go out to him. Kiraly won the 100 (11.4) and 200 (23.1) meter dashes and was a member of the winning 400 relay team (47.4). His times in the 100 and 200 were season-best performances and rank among the best in the area. In addition, he is still undefeated after five dual meets in the 200.

With his unbelievable performance against Walled Lake Western last week, Jim Willerer is an easy choice for 'Mustang of the Week' honors. The senior shortstop had a career-day at the plate with three home runs and a walk in four plate appearances. He personally accounted for nine of Northville's runs in the 12-6 victory. Willerer smacked a two-run homer, a three-run homer and a grand slam against the Warriors, drove in nine runs and scored all four times he reached base. He leads the team in RBIs (13), doubles (3) and homers (3) and has an on base percentage of .513.

Injury forces Briningstool to miss spring practice

welcome news in Northville Mustang football Coach Darrel Schumacher expressed his disappointment, but had some words of encouragement.

"Knowing that Tony was in a battle for a starting spot, (the injury) has to be wearing on him mentally," he said, "but if anybody can come back from something like this, it's Tony. He's put so much into it — it's a shame it had to happen. It will make things much tougher for him next fall."

According to Briningstool, the adjustment to college life and football has been very smooth. He's recently involved himself with several Lansing charities and has found great personal satisfaction in helping area kids.

Last winter, he joined two state senators, a county prosecutor and a former world boxing champion in helping to promote drug-free life. Involvement in such a worthy cause shouldn't surprise anybody in these parts because Tony has always been a leader — in community affairs as well as on the football field.

Briningstool was on hand at St Gerard Catholic School in February to help fifth and sixth graders celebrate the end of a 17-week program teaching them to "say no" to drugs. Briningstool, Sen. John Swartz of Battle Creek, Rep. Frank Fitzgerald of Grand Ledge, Eaton County Prosecutor Michael Hocking and Tony Zale, a boxing champion in the 1940s, all addressed the children and signed their program diplomas. "I really wish that I could have had a program like this when I was in grade school," Briningstool told the audience. "All of you want to be winners. Drugs are a no-win situation."

MUSTANG SIGNINGS: Schumacher reported that as many as eight seniors from last fall's football squad will continue to play the game at the college level. Defensive lineman Bob Dudley signed with Bowling Green State University back in early February but was the only Northville player going to a Division I school on a full-ride athletic scholarship.

Kalamazoo College of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (Division III) has signed three former Mustangs — Mike Kartis, Sam Khashan and Randy Jones. They will be joining 1988 Northville graduate Eddie Walsh on the Yellow-jacket roster. Kartis is expected to be a running back at Kalamazoo, while Khashan and Jones will probably serve as defensive backs. Jones is planning on giving baseball a shot as well.

All-Area and All-Conference selection Mike Hale has signed with Saginaw Valley State College (Division II), a team that competes in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. Hale is the most recent in a long line of outstanding linebackers to come out of Northville and is expected to remain as a linebacker at SVSC.

"Mike will have a great opportunity to play there," Schumacher said.

"They will soon find out that he was a steal. If he was two inches taller, Mike would have been a Division I recruit. I'm sure he will be a scholarship athlete before he's done."

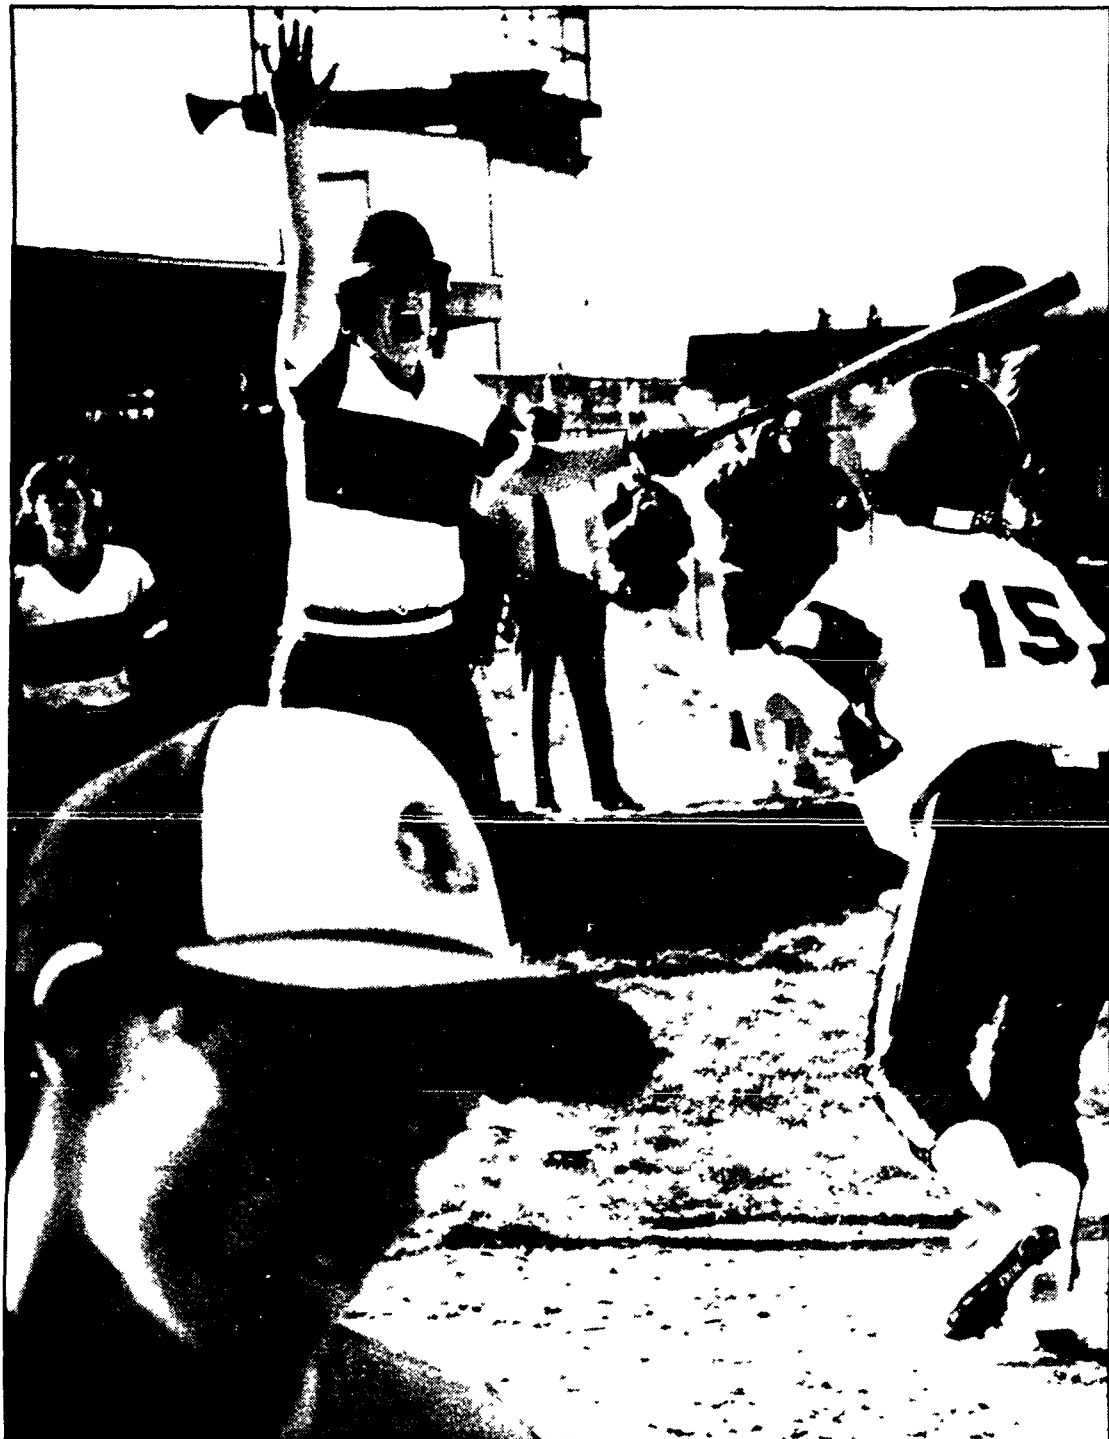

Tight end Sean Starkweather decided he will attend Carnegie-Mellon College in Pittsburgh as a student-athlete after visiting several highly respected academic schools in the east. In addition, quarterback Greg Price and flanker Dave Cryderman are planning on walking-on at Bowling Green and Ferris State respectively.

"Maybe having this many kids go on to college shows what a terrible coach I am," Schumacher laughed. "It's great to see this many kids move on. These kids love the game and they have given an awful lot to Northville football."

two-run error and a run-scoring single by Kris Fortenberry.

Freimund fanned nine of the first 12 batters she faced.

NORTHVILLE 13, WALLED LAKE WESTERN 1: The Mustangs broke open a competitive game with a nine-run explosion in the late going and that was enough for a mercy-rule, six inning victory on April 26.

"It was actually a little closer than the score indicated," Gerlach said. "We really didn't get going until later in the game, but I'm never disappointed with a win — no matter how it comes. We were patient and took advantage of the walks."

Laura Apligian drove in a pair of runs with a double in the first and that was the winning margin right there. After scraping together two more runs in the third and fourth Northville received seven walks which translated into nine runs. The hitting star in the inning was Karen Baird who batted twice and wrapped out two run-scoring singles.

The win was Freimund's fourth one-hitter of the season, but she wasn't particularly sharp. She had eight strike outs and a season-high three walks. Baird (3-for-4) and Laura Apligian (3-for-3) paced the hitters.

"Franklin is always tough in our division. We are now alone in first place in the division and we are starting to hit the ball better."

Mustang Softball Coach

LAKELAND TOURNAMENT: The highlight of this eight-team tournament last weekend was an interesting pitching match-up between Freimund and Lakeland fireballer Kelly Forbis.

The two teams met in the first round, and even though the duel ended in a draw — according to most observers — the Eagles scored three unearned runs to beat Freimund 4-3. Forbis struck out 14 but did allowed five hits, a walk and two earned runs. Freimund was tagged for three hits, one earned run and no walks, while fanning nine.

"We really didn't help Amy much in the field," Gerlach said. "For the first time all season, we kicked the ball around quite a bit and ended with seven errors. In a sense, we handed them the game while at the same time, we earned everything we got."

After Lakeland struck first, Northville knotted the score at 1-1 in the third thanks to a hit and steal by LaPrad and an RBI single by Freimund.

The Mustangs took a 3-2 lead in the fifth on hits by LaPrad and Staknis and a sacrifice by Baird, but the Eagles tied it in the bottom of the inning. Lakeland then pulled out the win in the bottom of the seventh on a single, a stolen base and a fielding error against Freimund.

Northville regrouped to edge Troy Athens 6-4 and Allen Park 2-0 in the remaining two games of the tournament, and ended up placing fifth overall.

The Troy Athens game went 12 innings before Laura Apligian scored when a throw to third on her attempted steal got past the fielder. Staknis started the game but as Northville fell behind 4-2, she was relieved in the third by Freimund. She eventually worked her way out of trouble and got the win.

The Mustangs squeezed a few runs across the plate against Allen Park and it stood up, thanks to some fine defense and pitching by Freimund. For the day, Freimund went 22½ innings, gave up one earned run, 10 hits, 28 strike outs and two walks.

Northville is now 9-1 overall, 7-0 in the WLAA.

Program offered for the overstressed

By KARIN SWAN

Holistic health care worker Barb Chagas is bringing a variety of services to the overstressed in the community.

From her home in northern Novi, Chagas uses Reiki, massage therapy and a self-hypnosis program called Hemi-Sync to help people heal themselves.

"People want solutions when they are under physical or emotional stress," said Chagas. "In holistic health we work with all aspects of a person — physical, emotional, mental and spiritual. Wellness is wholeness, a state of balance."

Chagas is a certified Reiki practitioner and massage therapist. She accepts individual clients in her fully-equipped home office on an appointment basis.

One method that she uses is Reiki, an ancient Eastern method of energy balancing that works directly within the physical body.

Chagas combines Reiki with another hands-on approach — acupressure massage. This Japanese system of healing uses pressure through touch on specific points of the body to release tension. These points are based on energy circuits or meridians within the body, as in acupuncture.

The main focus of her work is on the Hemi-Sync technique, a series of self-hypnosis tapes. The program is set up as a stress reduction workshop geared to small groups. Chagas likes her clients to combine it with bodywork to facilitate the healing process.

In workshops, Chagas joins forces with Monroe Institute trainer and Reiki master Randall Hayward, who developed the concept of stimulating the mind through sound patterns to achieve a whole brain effect into a series of audio tapes.

"It puts change directly into the hands of the person," explained Chagas. "It's a key that I can give them. That's always what my work is. I teach people that they can heal themselves."

Hemi-Sync, or Hemispheric Synchronization, asserts that it synchronizes left and right brain functions to merge the creative sensitivity of the right brain with the concrete focus of the left. It brings long forgotten sub-conscious beliefs to the surface of the conscious mind.

"People can change their belief systems. Hemi-Sync can erase the tapes that people have carried around from childhood and change negative thinking patterns," said Chagas.

"It helps people overcome low self-esteem and increase self-awareness. People need to believe in themselves and build their own self-worth."

"It clears the left and right brains, so the sub-conscious and conscious mind can work together."

"People can take charge of themselves and of their lives. Hemi-Sync gives people the key to building their own self-esteem. It works."

The tapes are made in beginning and advanced series, level one and level two. They are sold in sets or individually, and can be purchased directly from Chagas.

The six-week workshops are offered periodically in several locations including Novi, Saginaw and Flint. Call Chagas at 624-1122 for more information.

"It's when you feel that passionate love... the passion for life that you know you're in balance. The power of love is very strong, much stronger than fear or negativity. Life doesn't have to be win or lose," said Chagas. "Everyone can win."

Fitness Tips

Proper posture can alleviate back problems

By SYLVIA DVORAK, M.S.

Your back is an amazing system of muscles, bones and nerves. It allows you to do a wide range of movements and activities.

Your back also has many internal duties — supporting your arms, legs and head; carrying most of the weight of your body; and protecting the nerves that connect the rest of your body to your brain. Your back is always working for you — that is why it is so important to have good posture.

Proper posture includes having your weight centered over hips; head and chest held high; chin, abdomen, buttocks pulled in and feet placed firmly on the ground. All of the preceding place the least strain on your body, as well as assist your circulation, respiration and digestion.

To ensure you maintain a proper posture, look at the way you stand in a mirror and examine to see if you:

- neck sags, chin is poked forward and whole body slumps;
- pelvis is tilted forward and your lower back looks hollow.
- Or maybe you stand military style with your shoulders and chest forward. This is as bad as the two styles listed above.

To correct your posture:

- Stand against a wall with your back, buttocks and feet touching the wall's surface.
- Slip your hand behind the small of your back to check how much of an arch is present — it should be a comfortable fit, without too much room to spare.
- Straighten your neck and tuck your chin in, so that your body is in alignment.
- Lift up through your rib cage and pull, or roll, your shoulders back.

- Contract your abdominals to flatten the back — tuck your buttocks under and tilt your pelvis back.
- Don't "lock" your knees.
- Distribute your weight evenly on each foot.

Now look in the mirror and see how much better you look. Of course, to maintain good posture you need strong abdominal and lower back muscles — exercise helps.

Here are some other tips:

- Stand with one foot up (perhaps on a stool) and change positions often.
- Bend with one foot up (perhaps on a stool) and change positions often.
- Walk with good posture, keeping your head high, chin tucked in, pelvis forward and toes straight ahead.
- Wear comfortable (low-heeled) shoes.

- Sit in chairs low enough to place both feet on the floor, with your knees higher than your hips.
- Sit firmly against the back of a chair.

Having good posture takes a 24-hour commitment. Learn and practice good body posture. Maintaining good posture will help prevent backaches and ensure your back performs its internal duties efficiently. It would also help you to look and feel better, and allow you to perform your job to the best of your ability.

1-stop shopping

Expo's a local marketplace

By Nechama Bakst
special writer

The third Greater Livonia Expo will bring the convenience of one-stop shopping to members of the community from Tuesday, May 9, through Thursday, May 11, in the gymnasium of Schoolcraft College, Haggerty north of 6 Mile in Livonia.

No money will change hands at the Expo. But an expected 6,000 business people from as far away as Toledo will have the opportunity to become better acquainted with the services and supplies in the metropolitan area, according to Michael Cooney who is responsible for the Expo for the Livonia Chamber of Commerce.

"It's a great opportunity for businesses to maximize their sales calls," said John White, executive director of the Livonia Chamber. "We bring people to them. If they analyze it properly, they are getting the best bang for their buck."

THE SHOW itself is free of charge to spectators, except for the Preview Party from 6-9 p.m. Tuesday open to the public at $15 a plate.

The Preview Party features "A Taste of Livonia" in which more than 20 restaurant establishments offer samples of their specialties. Those buying 20 or more tickets get a reduced price of $10 a ticket.

Many participating exhibitors offer their clients complimentary tickets to the party and suggest they come and visit, said Cooney, who is director of economic development and retention for the Livonia Chamber.

"You really can't take your client out for dinner at that price."

Last year 20 restaurants contributed to "A Taste of Livonia."

On Wednesday, May 10, a Chamber luncheon will be held beginning at noon in the Waterman Center of Schoolcraft. Guest speaker will be Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara. Tickets are $10 each.

A wine tasting party will be held by the Wine Castle from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Show hours are 1-8 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday.

To buy tickets for the preview party or Chamber luncheon call the Livonia Chamber at 427-2122.

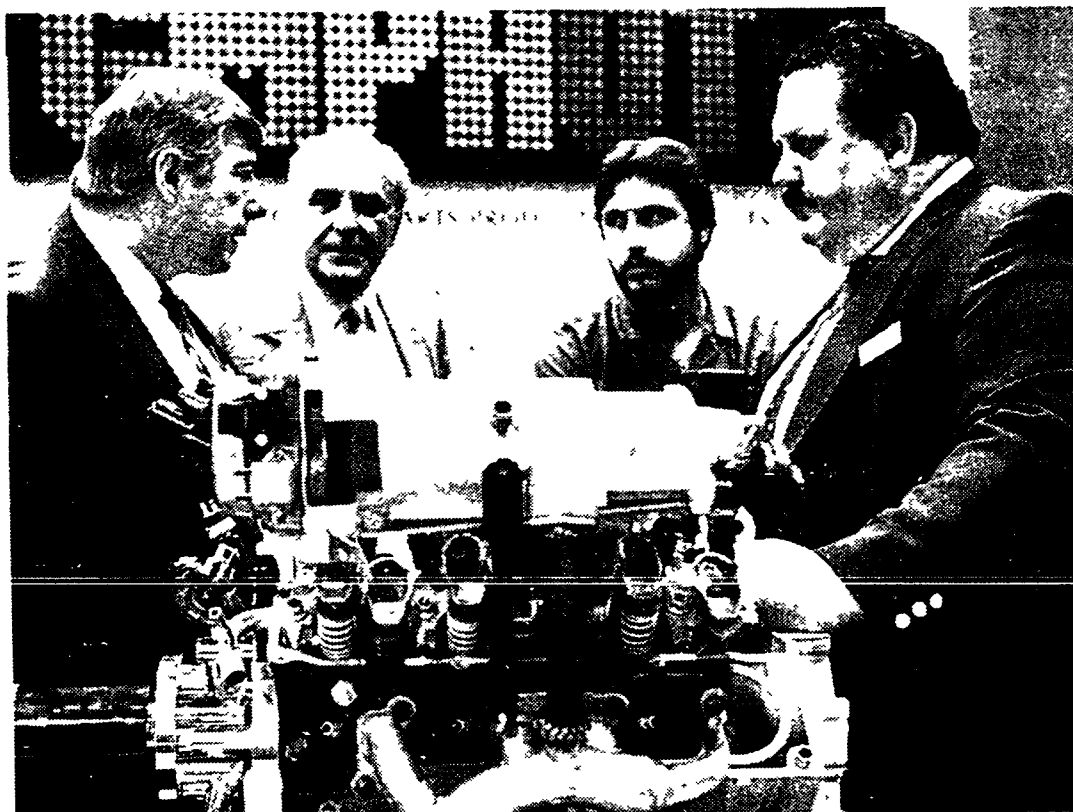

IN A relatively small show like this one, where "you're basically dealing with local businesses within the area, you are not lost in a maze," said James Skinner whose company, Shows and Expos Inc., is hired by the Chamber to manage the show.

"You are dealing with people who are recognizable. It becomes a community affair."

In fact, Skinner believes, "local shows is where it's all coming to. When you have the show in your town, you're basically dealing with people who want to do business here. It is structured to draw decision-makers."

But Skinner said unlike the huge shows at Cobo Hall, the Greater Livonia Expo is not just a business. Like the expo Downriver that his company organizes, "it gets so much community involvement."

"It's the thing to do those few days," agreed Tom Rost, president of

RG & GR Harris Funeral Home, who will have a booth at the Expo for the first time this year. "They come to visit and to kibbitz and to have a good time."

COONEY SAID the Expo, that started with 115 exhibitors in 1987, is expected to sell out its 135 booths before the show.

"People who have been in the last two shows were anxious to sign up again. Forty exhibitors signed up last year for the '89 show."

Reported attendance will rise from last year's 4,500 "if God smiles on us and we have three bright, sunny days," said Cooney.

Another factor is the improved economy. "People have more money to spend, so they have more interest in going out shopping.

"With a three-year record, it's word of mouth. People look forward to it."

Three years ago White was looking for a way to "provide better service to our members" when this idea came up. "Since then it's been one nice success story."

"Cooperation from the college makes the show possible," Cooney said, adding that although there is a nominal charge, the facility is the largest, most affordable in the area.

The show is scheduled to coincide with the break between semesters, so ample free parking will be available.

SHARON LEMIEUX/staff photographer

Mike Berich (left), Lee Hughes and Nancy Campbell of Kelly Temporary Services look at the floor plan as they make plans for the 1989 Greater Livonia Expo.

By Nechama Bakst
special writer

"We get excited at being at the Expo, being a part of the community," said Lee Hughes, resident branch manager of Kelly Temporary Services in Livonia, a company that is participating in the Greater Livonia Expo for the third year.

"It's a chance to let our customers know what we have to offer."

The Expo also creates an awareness in prospective employees. People looking for temporary jobs in non-clerical fields may not realize that the company, with 750 branches around the world, offers other services in addition to the office-related areas it is well known for.

"Being in shows gives us an opportunity to let the public know what we have that they might be interested in," said Hughes, adding that the company has changed its name from Kelly Girls in an effort to move away from its former image of girls working as clerics.

THE COMPANY is trying to make people aware that it now offers a much wider range of services that include technical engineering and drafting in addition to the other office-related services that in the past have been its trademark, said Hughes.

Its light industrial division offers jobs for unskilled or light-skilled people. Accounting, biology, expediting and graphic design are among services Kelly intends to tout at the Expo.

And the jobs are not just for girls, Hughes emphasizes.

Because Kelly Services is able to set up a display of its office automation at the Expo, the company can be more convincing in demonstrating the expertise it provides.

According to James Skinner of Shows and Expos, the managers of the Greater Livonia Expo, tables and

Antique funeral hearse's among exhibits

What can a funeral home do to attract customers without offending people?

Thomas Rost of RG & GR Harris Funeral Home in Livonia thinks he has the answer.

A horse-drawn hearse built in 1858, with two coachmen in top hats and tails holding court, will be displayed at the Greater Livonia Expo May 10, 11.

"It's just something different that has to do with my profession to make people aware of Harris Funeral Home," Rost said.

THE BERTS & Riddle antique hearse is currently used for funerals when someone requests it. Rost said it's been used in gypsy services and for "a fellow who had a horse farm in Northville."

The Bert & Riddle hearse is similar to the coach used for funeral services of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield, Hayes and McKinley. The cabinet work is constructed of mahogany, black walnut, and other select hardwoods.

The hearse also been on display in the company's four funeral homes, in parades, and at state fairs.

"Ninety-nine percent of the people think this is enjoyable. People want to look at it and touch it.

"We are interested in this Riddle coach from two viewpoints. First, we can better plan for tomorrow by studying history in the light of present conditions. In the process of restoring the coach we have been reminded of true values as they were interpreted a 100 years ago.

"Second, we are happy to have the opportunity to provide interesting facets of our profession for the people of western Wayne County."

THE FUNERAL home plans to use "Help when you need it" as its theme at the Greater Livonia Expo.

To cultivate the theme, lifesaver-shaped lollipops will be given away as well as other small tokens such as emergency an emergency first-aid kit to fit into a glove compartment.

"We're out there peddling our funeral home. We are not going to have brochures. We're just trying to be a nice person in the community."

Advantages of Expo

equipment for display all are incorporated in the price of the booth.

Skinner said this is a benefit not found in other, larger shows that charge extra for each additional table or piece of equipment.

There are no questions asked as to what's brought in, Skinner said. "It's something we do to keep exhibitors happy."

SO KELLY'S personal computer and simulator, simulating different types of software, will be on display at the Expo to "show what we do and how we do it," said Hughes.

Hughes said the computer will demonstrate that the company can provide temporaries for an office environment that may require special certification and education.

Another fact that Kelly Services plans to publicize at the Expo is that senior citizens can be involved. Senior citizens who visit the Expo will be wooed by the company because it is trying to recruit people of all ages.

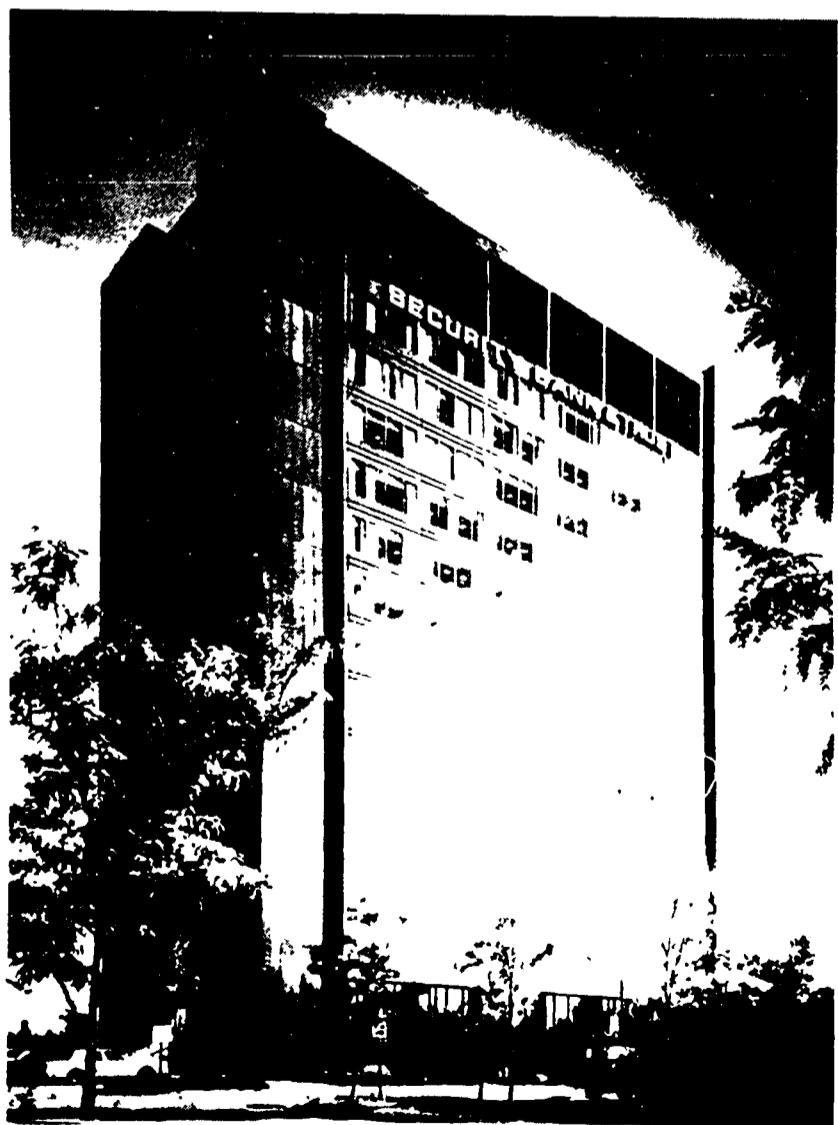

"We'd like them to know we could sure utilize their skills," said Hughes.

Although Kelly does not do actual business at the Expo, people are referred back to the office for future handling.

"I absolutely recommend the Expo to other businesses," said Hughes. "Word of mouth — that's the best advertising."

This antique funeral hearse will be part of the RG & GR Harris Funeral Home exhibit at the 1989 Expo.

The plant began operations in the spring of 1981 as the primary source of engines for Cadillac automobiles.

The plant is a recognized leader, not only for its production of world-class engines (or, as the people of the plant define it, "the Heart and Soul of Great Automobiles") but, likewise, as a leader of innovative management philosophies. Since its inception, the plant has operated on a "Team" oriented concept of:

• Continuous improvement, which has led to our products being second to none for quality and reliability throughout General Motors. Our products also are ranked with the "best in the world."

Our primary job security goal is producing a product that not only provides great value, but absolute and total customer satisfaction.

Livonia, Michigan 48151

Major Products Chrome-plated steel bumpers, leaf spring assemblies, coil springs, and strut assemblies.

Located on the western edge of the City of Livonia, Delco Products' Livonia Operations stands as General Motors Corporation's largest nickel-chrome plating facility for bumpers and a major source of a wide range of leaf spring assemblies, coil springs, and strut assemblies for passenger and commercial vehicles.

Built as a Chevrolet Motor Division plant in 1954, the facility has expanded steadily with the community. The plant now encompasses over 2.1 million square feet of floor space on 141 acres on the east side of Eckles Road, between Schoolcraft and Plymouth Roads. In January 1986, the plant became a part of Delco Products Division as a result of the GM reorganization. At that time, a Buick coil spring facility in Flint was also acquired.

Today, a dynamic workforce of over 2,500 people in the Livonia and Flint plants produces world-class components for GM cars and trucks, as well as other automobile manufacturers.

Total Health Care asks, "How big does a HMO have to be to provide good health care?" While some HMOs would have you believe bigger is better, we don't think this is necessarily so.

We feel the critical starting point for good health care is through the development of a one-to-one relationship with a doctor who is willing to learn your medical history in order to address your present and future health needs. In Livonia, Northwest Medical Arts is staffed with doctors that will do just that. Northwest Medical Arts is one of over 25 health centers participating with Total Health Care.

Stop by Booth 400 for more information about a health plan just big enough to make personalized health care a specialty and a reality. We will be conducting free blood pressure screening.
