Schools plan major bond election Oct. 16

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

A bond-issue election has been set for Oct. 16 by the Northville Board of Education, but the bond amount to be on the ballot is still up in the air.

Board members will decide July 31 whether to place a $16-million or $30-million question on the October ballot.

And don't be surprised if one of your neighbors asks you which amount would you'd like to see on the ballot over the next five days.

Because the school board is split over the amount of the bond issue, a citizens' committee met with Superintendent George Bell on Tuesday to be briefed on the issue.

This committee, made up of about 20 residents, has been instructed to take the information provided by Bell and ask at least 10 of their friends and neighbors which amount would be most acceptable at election time.

"Go talk to your neighbors and get a feel for their views and come back next Tuesday and tell us which alternative will fly," Bell told committee members. The committee is a cross-section of the community including at least three people without children in the Northville school system.

The bond-issue amount to be voted on Oct. 16 hinges on whether the district should either build a new middle school or reopen Cooke Junior High to meet rising attendance figures at Meads Mill Middle School.

School board members voted Monday to hold a bond issue election on Oct. 16 on either the $16-million or $30-million question.

If the $16-million question is placed on the ballot, the district would be committed to reopening Cooke — and to making repairs at all of the schools at a cost of $4 million, updating instructional equipment for $3.22 million, and building a new elementary school by 1993-94 at a cost of $8.5 million.

Placing a $30-million question on the ballot would include all of the above items except reopening Cooke as a middle school. In place of that option, the district would build a new middle school within the next 2½ years at a price of $12 million to $15 million.

If voters pass either bond question, the cost would be added to the district's debt-retirement millage, which currently stands at four mills.

Bell said a $16-million bond issue would add between .9 and 1.2 mills to the debt millage. A $30-million bond issue would add about 2.5 mills to the debt millage.

One mill is equal to $1 of tax for every $1,000 of assessed property value. For a resident with an SEV (state equalized valuation) of $100,000, .9 mills would mean an extra $90 of tax, while 2.5 mills would mean $250.

Throughout the committee meeting, Bell presented a number of demographic charts which depicted an increase in the district's population over the next few years.

The middle-school decision was posed to the district by a strategic planning team which studied the issue over the past four months.

The district recently completed a five-year strategic plan, and one of the goals approved by the board was to either reopen Cooke as a middle school or build another school.

"When I make a recommendation to the board I want to know I'm on fairly strong ground," Bell told committee members. "You will not be voting on which issue to choose, but you'll be giving the board an impression of what the community thinks."

If a $30-million bond issue is placed on the ballot and approved by voters, Bell said the site of the new middle school would be in the northwest part of the school district.

If Cooke is reopened as a middle school, Bell said all of the community and educational programs currently housed in Cooke would be displaced.

Pizzeria sues city over rule

By DARRELL CLEM

Primo's Pizzeria has filed a lawsuit challenging a city ordinance that prohibits home deliveries of food in the Central Business District.

The suit, filed in Wayne County Circuit Court, states that a decision by the city Zoning Board of Appeals not to permit Primo's to deliver pizza is "unreasonable and creates an exceptionally undue hardship" on the pizzeria.

Officials said that Primo's has begun remodeling a building at 117 Dunlap St., although they did not know when the pizzeria plans to open.

Tim Doyle, an attorney for Primo's, declined to comment on the case.

Primo's claims that, by being denied a variance on the ordinance, it "will not be able to successfully operate its business and compete with other pizzerias."

City Manager Steven Walters said that two other pizzerias — Domino's and the Pizza Cutter — are allowed to deliver pizza in the Central Business District because they did so before adoption of the ordinance.

Walters said city officials were given legal advice stating that they

Elmsmere cost is up

By DARRELL CLEM

The cost of installing a storm sewer system along Elmsmere Drive is expected to cost $127,297 — an amount that sparked some heated criticism Monday night at the Northville City Council meeting.

City council members agreed unanimously to proceed with the project, which is designed to install pipes and fill in deep drainage ditches considered hazardous by residents and city officials.

The ditch work will be done in the Northville Estates subdivision in the city's northwest end. It will focus on a stretch of Elmsmere between Beck Road and Glenhill, including limited improvements to such side streets as Stanstead and Summerside.

But some city officials, including Council Member Paul Folino, voiced

Ex-student charges school negligence in crash

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

A 1987 graduate of Northville High School has filed suit against the Northville School District and a teacher, charging that school negligence caused injuries the student suffered in a 1986 automobile accident.

The district denies all liability, saying that the injuries were caused by the student himself or by others. It also says in court papers that all relevant actions were proper for a school district and its employees.

Former student David Groves is suing the school district, the school board, and auto-shop teacher James Conzelman on two separate counts of negligence, with each count seeking more than $10,000 in damages. The suit was filed in Wayne County Circuit Court on May 8.

A motion for summary disposition will be heard by Wayne Circuit Court Judge William Giovan tomorrow, Friday, July 14. A court spokesperson the hearing is a chance for the defendants to ask for dismissal of the case.

In the court filing, Groves' attorney, Sandra Ganos, says that Conzelman taught Groves how to repair the brakes on his 1965 Falcon on May 8, 1986. The suit charges that Conzelman "supervised and inspected" the work and then told Groves to take the car out for a test drive.

At that time, the suit states, the brakes failed and Groves ran into a telephone pole. "The car malfunctioned when a cylinder piston came loose from its seating and other mechanical malfunctions occurred causing the brakes to fail," the suit reads in part.

The suit alleges that Groves suffered soft-tissue injuries, damage to his teeth, pain and discomfort, severe embarrassment, and loss of earning capacity, all because of the accident.

The suit accuses the schools and Conzelman of negligence for not insuring that the car was in good working order, for not providing adequate supervision and safety instruction, and for not providing proper repair equipment.

Reached on Monday, Ganos said she has no comment on the lawsuit at this time.

Terence Flynn, attorney for the school district, school board, and Conzelman, said Monday that the district has directed him to make no comment on the case.

In a formal reply to the lawsuit, Flynn states that Groves' injuries were partly his own fault, charging that the student did not heed existing conditions and did not exercise proper caution for his own safety. The formal answer to the charges also says people other than the defendants caused all the damages.

In addition, the reply states that the district, school board, and Conzelman all acted entirely within their proper roles as "mandated or authorized" by law.

The reply also says Groves' claims are voided by a statute of limitations.

The reply states that Conzelman is immune from liability because he was acting within the scope of his authority, in good faith, and performing discretionary-decisional acts.

Missing drugs prompt firing of hospital employee

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

An employee of Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital (NRPH) was fired recently in connection with the discovery in March that over $75,000 worth of prescription drugs was missing.

NRPH Director Walter Brown confirmed Tuesday that an employee has been dismissed from the pharmacy department of the hospital.

Brown said the dismissal is related to the illegal sale of drugs from the hospital, but added, "That's all I can say about this, because it is a hospital personnel issue."

Michigan State Police Detective Sgt. Ron Mattioli confirmed the name of the fired employee as George Borchardt, who had been director of the the NRPH pharmacy since 1980.

Mattioli said the police are currently investigating the illegal sale of drugs from the hospital, but noted he could not divulge whether Borchardt is being investigated.

State Department of Mental Health spokesperson Tom DeLoach said he could not confirm whether the police are investigating Borchardt, or even that an NRPH employee had been recently fired.

"I have no comment on the matter at this time," DeLoach said in response to all questions.

When contacted at home Monday, Borchardt refused to comment on anything related to the missing drugs. He would not say whether he had been fired from NRPH.

In a June 28 Detroit News article, Borchardt was quoted as denying that he stole drugs from the hospital.

The News report and past phone books refer to Borchardt as living in Northville Township, but his current address is in Plymouth Township.

In an interview in March, Mattioli said the stolen prescription drugs included medication for blood pressure, inflammation, and ulcers. Brown added at the time that the hospital also conducted an investigation into the stolen drugs.

be certain that they can secure some type of private development for half of the Ford plant before proceeding with the project.

Two other sites have been discussed as possible locations for a new library: behind the recreation building on Cady Street, and on the east side of Fish Hatchery Park on Seven Mile Road.

However, Walters said the only work on those two projects has been site analysis by the Farmington Hills-based architectural firm Merritt & McCallum. Although those sites could prove to be possible locations for a new library, Walters said it would take some time to draw up designs and get precise costs.

And there are other matters that must be resolved before a bond election. Among those is whether the school district and / or a private developer would be involved in financing. That would depend on whether the Ford plant is used, which could involve partial financing from a private developer, or whether a new library is built, which could mean financing from only the city, township, and school district, Walters said.

When asked about the earliest possible date for a bond election, Walters responded that he didn't see any way to speculate. However, he added that if details can be worked out for a new library, it is possible that a spring election or a special election could be held next year, instead of waiting until November 1990.

Meanwhile, news of the apparently inevitable delay of the bond election came as disappointing — though not surprising — news to Library Director Pat Orr.

Orr said the project "is just moving as slow as a turtle, and that's frustrating."

In addition to the possible projects outlined by Walters, Orr said there also has been speculation that the township might buy land on the northwest corner of Sheldon and Six Mile roads for some type of civic center cultural complex, which could include space for a library.

"We knew (the bond election) would hinge on the site action," Orr said. Due to the delay in site selection, she said, "it became apparent there wouldn't be enough time for a bond issue this year."

Orr continued to point out the need for a new library. The existing library has less than 7,000 square feet of space and not enough room for ongoing projects such as the summer reading program for children. A new library would have about 25,000 square feet of space.

Orr said the summer reading program that started last week drew 208 children on the first day, forcing officials to move the program to the Northville City Council chambers. Orr said the turnout was double the average daily attendance last summer, although it remains to be seen whether the attendance increase will persist or whether some children will quit the program.

Moreover, the space crunch has forced a library support group, the Friends of the Northville Public Library, to seek temporary locations to store used books sold to benefit the library.

Orr, acknowledging that the Ford redevelopment proposal caused an inevitable delay in a library site selection, said she does not believe that city or township officials have stalled the library project unnecessarily.

Still, she said, "the frustrating part is that we just can't seem to get anything finalized."

"What color is air?"
"Why do golf balls have dimples?"
"Does a curve ball really curve?"

VOLUNTEER NURSE NEEDED — The Northville Area Senior Citizens Center is looking for a nurse to volunteer to perform blood-pressure screening tests.

Karl Peters of the senior center said an LPN or RN is needed, preferably someone who still has a nursing license.

The monthly screenings are usually done from noon to 2 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month, but this could be changed.

Anyone interested in providing this service may call Peters at 349-4140.

CITY JOINS FAIR HOUSING CENTER — The Northville City Council decided Monday night to join the Fair Housing Center of Metropolitan Detroit (FHC), which sent a letter to City Manager Steven Walters seeking the city's membership.

The FHC investigates discrimination based on race, national origin, religion, age, sex, marital status and handicaps. It also counsels complainants and makes available evidence that can be used in negotiation or litigation, according to the letter to Walters.

The FHC also helps families find affordable housing.

The city council paid $35 to join the FHC. The letter to Walters explained that the city's membership "will provide the extra impetus which guarantees that all complaints from (this) municipality will be dealt with promptly and efficiently."

BOARD MEETINGS — In order to prepare its Oct. 16 bond-issue ballot question, the school board has scheduled its second bond-issue committee meeting for Tuesday, July 18 at the high school. A July 31 board meeting is planned at the board conference room.

ORDINANCE REVISIONS — The township planning commission recently recommended approval to the township board of two ordinance changes.

The first revision deals with day care and closely follows the state day-care ordinance which was adopted last December. The second revision aims to clear up language in the township's land-division ordinance.

Davis to lead schools

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

A new president was named and other yearly business matters were addressed at the Northville Board of Education's organizational meeting Monday.

Glenna Davis, a nine-year board member, was named president for the second time. She replaces trustee Jean Hansen, who won re-election to the board in an uncontested election last June.

"Basically, I believe the goals of the district are set by the board," Davis said. "I think the president works with the school administration on a day-to-day basis and also coordinates the activities of the board."

Davis said being board president this year will be challenging since the district will attempt to implement many goals reached in its recently completed strategic plan.

"The first time I was president it was more of a learning experience," she said. "This time it will be more fun and challenging because the district has been given a vision with the plan."

"And it will be the board's job to bring together the people of the community and the district to make that dream a reality."

As a tribute to outgoing president Jean Hansen, Trustee James Petrie said Hansen did an "outstanding job since becoming president last year. She acted as a caring and thoughtful person."

"Jean rode bus routes at Quail Ridge subdivision, when they were having problems, to see what was necessary," Petrie said. "She brought us through some 'sticky wickets' and did just an outstanding job."

The board also elected Robert McMahon as vice president, Carol Rahimi as secretary, and Joseph Dunkerley as treasurer.

Police Blotters

Rings worth over $3,900 stolen from township home

Township police report two rings worth a total of $3,988 were stolen from a residence on Jamestowne Circle on June 28 or 29.

The victim said both rings were located on the bedroom dresser, and the home was locked the entire time. Police found no signs of forced entry. Nothing else in the home was found to be disturbed.

TOOL THEFT — Tools valued at $4,881 were reported stolen from a utility-type truck parked on Horton in Northville between 6:30 p.m. Thursday, July 6, and 6 a.m. Friday, July 7. No arrests have been made.

CAR LOT INCIDENTS — Two cars were recently damaged at McDonald Ford on Seven Mile Road, city police reported.

In one incident, a 1989 Jeep Comanche suffered a broken left vent window, a broken steering column, a bent steering wheel, and a damaged gear shift lever when someone apparently tried to steal the vehicle, according to police.

Damages totaling $700 were reported following the incident that occurred between 9 p.m. Monday, July 3, and 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 5.

In the second incident, a lock cylinder was removed from the driver's side of a 1955 Ford Mustang, and someone entered the car and damaged the ignition during an attempted theft.

Damages totaling $400 were reported following the incident, which occurred between 4:30 p.m. on Friday, June 30 and 3:30 p.m. Thursday, July 6.

The lock cylinder was found about 5 feet from the car. Police were unable to obtain fingerprints from the vehicle, and there are no suspects.

The car had been brought to the lot to be serviced.

CAR VANDALIZED — Almost $300 in damage was done to a 1986 Ford Escort parked on Appleby Lane July 1 or 2, according to a township police report.

The victim said she heard a loud bang at 1:30 a.m. July 1, but did not notice the damage, which included a large dent to the left front quarter panel, until the next day.

Police said the damage may have been caused by a hammer or similar object. They have no suspect at this time.

MEIJER THEFT — A Livonia resident was charged with larceny after allegedly attempting to steal over $160 in merchandise from Meijer on Saturday, July 1.

Township police said the store detective saw the subject stash several cosmetics in a purse. The suspect then took a roll of gift paper to the cash register and paid for it, without paying for the cosmetics, police said. The suspect was charged with larceny in a building and faces an Aug. 3 hearing in the 35th District Court.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED — A car that had been stolen from Novi was recovered in Northville on Saturday, July 8, police said.

The car, a 1983 Pontiac, had been parked on Dorisa Court since July 4, prompting a resident to telephone police because she thought the car had been abandoned.

WALKAWAY RETURNED — A patient of the Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital who walked away on July 3 was returned a short time later, according to a township police report.

Police said they were dispatched to the Northville Plaza Mall on Seven Mile Road, where they recovered the patient. Police said the patient was returned to the hospital without incident.

WINDSHIELD SMASHED — The windshield of a 1965 Ford van suffered $200 in damages when it was smashed with a rock while parked behind M.T. Hunter on E. Main.

Police reported that the incident occurred between 5:30 p.m. Friday, June 30, and 10:14 a.m. Sunday, July 2. Police have no suspects.

DOWNTOWN TREES DAMAGED — Linden trees between 162 E. Main St. and Church Street in Northville were damaged July 3 when someone broke off some limbs and left them on the sidewalk, city police reported.

Some planters behind a nearby building also were overturned, police said. An assessment of damages was not available.

AUTO ACCIDENTS — At least four automobile accidents were reported by township police recently. They included:

• A two-car accident occurred at 5:20 p.m. Sunday, June 29 on Eight Mile Road at Haggerty. Police said the driver of one car was attempting to turn left onto westbound Eight Mile from the Meijer parking lot, but saw another car coming and stopped in the roadway. The driver of the second car said he was eastbound on Eight Mile and saw the other car pull in front of him, but was unable to stop. The driver of the first car was issued a ticket for failing to yield.

• A two-car accident occurred at 5:35 p.m. Thursday, June 29 on Seven Mile Road and Clement. Police said a car one made a left turn from Seven Mile onto northbound Clement in front of another car. The driver of car one was issued a ticket for failing to yield.

• A two-car accident occurred at 5:50 p.m. Thursday, June 29 on Five Mile and Haggerty roads. The driver of one car said she was waiting to a left turn out of the Oasis parking lot onto eastbound Five Mile and saw car two approaching with its turn signal on. She said she then turned in front of car two. The driver of car two said he was westbound Five Mile travelling in the right lane when car one pulled in front of him. The driver of car one was issued a ticket for failing to yield.

• A two-car accident occurred at 3 p.m. Saturday, July 1 at Eight Mile and Haggerty roads. Police said car one was westbound on Eight Mile and turned left onto southbound Haggerty in front of a second car eastbound on Eight Mile. The driver of car one was issued a ticket for failing to yield.

City police reported one accident: • There was a two-vehicle accident Friday, July 7, in which a Dearborn Heights man was cited for failure to stop within an assured clear distance.

The driver was heading eastbound on Seven Mile Road near South Main Street shortly before 5 p.m. when he failed to stop, striking the rear of a vehicle being driven by a Novi woman.

No injuries were reported.

DRUNK DRIVING ROUNDUP — At least five drivers were ticketed for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor (OUIL) by city and township police over the past week. Incidents included:

• A Northville resident was stopped by township police at 8:14 p.m. Saturday, July 1 on Seven Mile Road near Ridge Road after clocking the driver at 68 mph in a 50 mph zone. The driver registered a blood-alcohol level of .16 percent. In Michigan, .10 percent is OUIL. The driver was charged with OUIL, held in jail, and released on $100 bond. He faces an Aug. 3 court date.

• Township police ticketed a Sterling Heights resident at 4:45 a.m. Saturday, July 1 on Haggerty near Eight Mile. Police said they saw the suspect's car pull into the Meijer parking lot and accelerate through the lot. Police said the driver then parked and exited the car, but was walking very unsteadily. After failing all field sobriety tests, the driver registered a blood-alcohol level of .11 percent. The driver was charged with OUIL, held in jail, and released on $100 bond. He faces an Aug. 3 court date.

• Township police stopped a Novi resident for OUIL at 3:32 a.m. Saturday, July 1 on Seven Mile Road. Police said they saw the suspect repeatedly drive over the center line. After failing one of three field sobriety tests, the driver registered a blood-alcohol level of .20 percent. The driver was charged with OUIL, held in jail, and released on personal bond. He faces an Aug. 3 court date.

• A Northville resident was ticketed for OUIL after township police found him stopped in his car on Sheldon Road near Six Mile. Police said he could not stand and registered a blood-alcohol level of .24 percent. He was charged with OUIL, jailed until he sobered up, and released on $100 bond. He faces an Aug. 3 court date.

• In the city, a Wyandotte man was arrested for OUIL after he entered a Northville High School parking lot that had been closed to traffic for the Fourth of July fireworks.

Police said the man stumbled, failed to correctly count backwards from 100, and registered a blood-alcohol level of .14 and .13 in separate tests.

Local couple hurt in crash

A 59-year-old Northville man remained in grave condition this week after the car he and his wife were in was broadsided by a car that ran a red light at Grand River and Middlebelt recently, Farmington Hills police said.

Eschol Earl Smith, who suffered head injuries in the crash, remained in intensive care Tuesday at Botsford General Hospital in Farmington Hills. His condition was listed as grave. His wife, Mary, 56, was in guarded condition after treatment for her injuries, a hospital spokesperson said.

A 29-year-old Novi man eastbound on Grand River in a pickup at 8:40 a.m. Saturday, July 1 went through a red light at Middlebelt, police said. He hit Eschol Smith's northbound car on the driver's side, they said.

Farmington Hills firefighters used rescue tools to free the Smiths.

The Novi man was not hurt. His name won't be released until investigators complete their work, said Sgt. Ray Cranston of the Farmington Hills Police Department Traffic Section.

It is not known if seat belts were being worn at the time of the crash, Cranston said.

"We're at the point where we're waiting to see how Mr. Smith comes along in the hospital," Cranston said last week.

Another Trappers Alley?

Schrader renovation to resemble small-scale Detroit venue

By DARRELL CLEM

What was once a combination furniture store / funeral home on North Center is being converted into what a construction manager calls a small-scale version of Detroit's Trappers Alley.

The renovation of the former Schrader's Home Furnishings store at 111 N. Center St. has been rapidly progressing since it got under way May 22, said Calvin Garfield of Garfield Construction Co.

Garfield said he hopes the project will be virtually complete sometime in August, although "there's still a lot of work to do."

Garfield said the two-story building is receiving about $350,000 in improvements. He said it was purchased last year by investors Gary C. George and Tom Giannico, who formed G.G.L. Investment Co.

George said two retail tenants have been found for the building — Traditions, a business formerly on Main Street that sells European and traditional home furnishings, and Lidia Sweatt Enterprises, which sells antique toys.

Other types of businesses that investors are talking to include an art gallery, a women's clothing store, and an antique furniture store. A bicycle shop already occupies part of the old Schrader's site.

Construction crews are restoring much of the main building's late-1880s design, keeping such features as tin roofing and oak flooring throughout much of the building.

"I think this is going to be a major improvement to Center Street," Garfield said.

Although city officials have been pressing the construction company to complete work on the building's front facade so that a sidewalk barricade can be removed, they are impressed with what they see.

"They are doing excellent work," city Building Official Joseph Attard said Friday. "They are really keeping the historic quality of the building."

Schrader's Home Furnishings closed here last March — 81 years after it was founded by Nelson C. Schrader, who also included a funeral home in the early scheme. Schrader's was a three-generation family business.

During a tour through the building Friday, Garfield explained that the redevelopment project will include five retail stores on the ground level and five office areas on the second floor.

The renovation has included building a stairway in the former elevator shaft, installing five new archways throughout the building, repairing or replacing much of the original brick, and exposing large ceiling beams.

Plans also call for extensively detailed work on the front and rear facades, including ramps, greenery, and a "three-dimensional, lifelike painting" near the double-door back entrance.

Garfield said the back entrance will be designed "more like a second front entrance than a rear entrance."

The front facade will include a five-color paint scheme, large windows and wooden birdhouses built into the exterior trim near the second story level.

Inside, near the middle of the building, an atrium area will include a skylight which, coupled with innovative window design and the revamped elevator shaft, will "be like Trappers Alley on a small scale," Garfield said.

"We're trying to make the areas more visually interesting," he said. The architectural work was done by Gregory H. Presley of Northville.

Three of the retail shops will face Center Street, while two will be located near the rear parking lot entrance. Likewise, three upstairs offices will face Center; two will face the parking lot.

Garfield said the building also has received new plumbing, a new electrical system, and a new heating-and-cooling system.

Garfield said developers have not yet reached a final decision on what to name the building.

Group home hopes to open doors in city by September

By DARRELL CLEM

Despite opposition from some Northville residents and city officials, an adult foster care home is expected to begin operating here in September.

A state license will not be issued until the home at 20415 Lexington Blvd. has been renovated to meet fire codes and to make it suitable for the developmentally disabled residents proposed to live there.

But Denise Herring, public affairs coordinator for Wayne Community Living Services, said she expects no stumbling blocks to the project.

"I really believe we are in a go mode," Herring said.

She said the residence, which will house four mentally retarded adults who also have physical limitations, should be open by the first week of September and that all four residents should be moved in by the end of that month.

Herring said the residents have not yet been selected.

Tom Stuve, area supervisor for adult foster care licensing, said the earliest the license is expected to be issued is in about three weeks, which would fit the timetable mentioned by Herring.

Although Wayne Community Living Services will supervise the program, the home actually will be staffed by the Livonia-based New Outlook Inc. through a contract with the state mental health department, Herring said.

New Outlook executive director Diann Hunt said the amount of the contract has not yet been established.

Herring said New Outlook will care for the developmentally disabled residents and provide such services as transportation to work or school. The home will be supervised around the clock.

But officials and residents opposed to the home maintained their opposition.

Northville City Manager Steven Walters said the community "feels like it has had its share" of state-operated facilities. He noted that the area already is home to Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, the Phoenix Correctional Facility, and the Scott Regional Correctional Facility.

In addition, the Western Wayne Correctional Facility in Plymouth Township is located near the Northville Township border.

Walters said research by local officials has shown that, when the populations of the city and township are combined, one in nine residents live in some type of state facility. Although Walters said the adult foster care home "is not bad per se, how much does one community have to take?"

The project also has drawn opposition from Lexington Commons Association President Ron Abramovich, who appeared before the state administrative board in Lansing earlier this year to oppose the approval of the lease.

Walters said last week that the state will pay more than $2,000 a month to lease the property from a private investor — an amount that he said is several hundred dollars higher than fair market value.

Walters questioned whether the state would be spending taxpayers' money more wisely by buying the property instead of leasing it over a 15-year period.

Herring, however, said the way the program is set up, it would be a conflict of interest for the state to own the property and then oversee maintenance of the home and the patients.

Moreover, Herring said the local community would lose the tax base if the home were state-owned.

Another concern that Walters said local residents have is the possibility of more state-supervised residents walking away from state facilities.

"That aspect is a real negative factor," he said.

Meanwhile, Walters said an application for a local building permit has been filed. He said the city will have no authority to deny the permit once the state has issued an operating license.

Local group heads to Lansing

By DARRELL CLEM

Northville residents planned to leave town this (Thursday) morning to join a rally against drugs in Lansing.

Local coordinator Scott Wilson said he hoped that a caravan of about 10 vehicles would leave the parking lot of the Michigan Association of Gift Salesmen (MAGS) building about 9:30 a.m.

Wilson won a show of support Monday night from the Northville City Council, which adopted a resolution endorsing local participation in the rally.

Wilson said the rally at the state capital will be near a decorated 40-foot tractor-trailer that anti-drug supporters from Georgia began driving across the nation in March. The trailer was hand-painted by students.

The promotional tour for the so-called "Stop Drugs at the Source Treaty" will complete its tour in September in Philadelphia, after making a stop in the nation's capital.

Wilson said the tour is designed to unite and coordinate members of government, education, service organizations, religion, media, law enforcement, and business in an effort to keep drugs away from children.

During the rally, a document called "The Plan" will be made available to show participants how they can exercise their constitutional rights to stop the availability of illicit drugs, according to Wilson.

Wilson, on behalf of the Northville Action Council, sought the city council's support to encourage participation in the event. Mayor Christopher Johnson planned to see the group off this morning.

The group will return home today after the rally.

Make-up workshop

The Northville City Council chambers attracted a different audience than usual Thursday for a teenage make-up workshop sponsored by the Northville Public Library. Above, Shannon Soenen, director of the Wayne County health officials.

County says soccer field is safe

Health risks from polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) have apparently been reduced at the former Childhood Development Center on Sheldon Road, according to Wayne County health officials.

"Parents of children who played soccer on the field on the east side of Sheldon Road (between Five and Six Mile roads) need not be concerned about exposure to PCBs," Glenn Brown, director of the Wayne County Environmental Health Department, said in a press release.

In higher concentrations, PCBs are believed to cause cancer.

Brown said 10 soil samples recently analyzed by both the county air pollution control division and a private laboratory showed were all below detectable limits.

In addition, Brown said the county's contractor — Transformer Inspector Retrofill — "has removed vandalized PCB transformers from buildings several hundred feet east of the soccer field, cleaned various wall and floor surfaces, and removed tainted debris."

Brown said some of the warning signs and caution tape placed to notify trespassers of possible health risks have been destroyed or stolen.

He added that while the county has tried to replace the signs and tape, the area is being watched by the Wayne County Sheriff's Department and the Northville Township Police.

While the removal of additional transformers is underway, Brown said investigations of possible other PCB contaminated surfaces on the property will be made as necessary.

Brown added the county is having discussions with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources about site conditions and the possible need for any additional remedial measures.

City council launches plans for new sidewalk program

By DARRELL CLEM

The Northville City Council began preliminary discussions Monday night aimed at installing sidewalks in areas of the city that don't have any.

The talks came just days after construction crews launched a citywide project to repair existing sidewalks.

City officials said it probably will be next spring before concrete sidewalks will be poured in areas that lack them. But the first batch of notices to property owners who will have to help pay for the project could be sent out as early as September.

City Manager Steven Walters said the project will be similar to the sidewalk-repair program, in that homeowners will be forced to pay for sidewalk construction adjacent to their properties.

However, Walters said property owners probably will be allowed to have the cost for first-time sidewalks attached to their tax bills over a 10-year period. Property owners paying for sidewalk repairs are being given five years to pay the tab.

Like the repair program, the new sidewalk project will result in the city paying the cost of construction on city property.

The city also will pay for such expensive items as paving steep slopes, which could cost as much as $10,000 in certain areas, Mayor Chris Johnson said. The most that property owners with homes on steep slopes could expect to pay for slope work would be about $200, he said.

On Monday, Walters presented to the city council a detailed map indicating areas of the city that lack sidewalks. The map outlined areas in which sidewalk construction would be feasible with minor regrading, areas in which it would be possible only with extensive work, and areas in which the city's sidewalk requirement should be waived due to open ditches or swale roadway drainage systems.

City council members plan to alter the map, removing some areas from the project and perhaps adding others. Some council members proposed changes in the project Monday night, and some said they planned to soon submit additional changes for consideration.

Cost estimates will not be available until such talks have been completed.

Walters said that once all proposed changes have been submitted, the map will be revised before the city begins implementing the project.

Council Member Paul Folino said the "critical areas" are those where there are no sidewalks on either side of streets. He suggested that those areas be addressed first.

Some council members said that property owners may be surprised to learn they will have to pay for sidewalks.

Council Member John Buckland said some homeowners were not told by builders that the city has an ordinance requiring sidewalks. He said some of those homeowners have spent a lot of money on landscaping that possibly could be disturbed.

But Walters pointed out that builders have no legal obligation to inform homeowners of the city ordinance.

Walters said notices to homeowners will be sent out periodically from September through next spring. Public hearings on the proposed work also will be held during the period.

Homeowners may choose to have the work done themselves or to have the city contractor do it. Either way, though, the work must be done.

In some areas, the city also will have to negotiate with the school district — and perhaps Wayne County — for sidewalk installations.

City officials plan to continue discussion of the sidewalk program at future meetings.

Environmentalists favor amendment to solid waste proposal

By DARRELL CLEM

A proposed amendment to Wayne County's trash management plan is drawing support from environmental groups pushing for recycling efforts.

The amendment proposed by Milton Mack, chairperson of the county's solid-waste committee, says communities that implement recycling and composting programs and achieve a 40 percent reduction in residential waste by 1992 will not be required to achieve further reductions through incineration.

"There's a river of garbage out there," Mack said recently. "And we're running out of space."

Mack said the proposed amendment is under review by a subcommittee that may make a recommendation to the full solid-waste committee as early as July 17.

The amendment states that due to "unresolved issues" facing incineration — such as environmental concerns and the uncertain costs of constructing and operating incinerators — local communities should seek to implement successful recycling programs.

It encourages communities "that are not currently members of resource recovery and incinerator authorities" to adopt recycling plans.

The proposed amendment calls for a hierarchy of waste management practices "that are environmentally sound and cost effective." Mack said top priority would be given to recycling, followed by incineration and landfilling.

However, the amendment also says the goal of the county's trash management plan is that "by the year 2010, nothing will go to landfills that cannot be reduced, reused, recycled or otherwise recovered or diverted."

Mack said the amendment is "designed to encourage recycling as the preferred waste reduction alternative." He said discussions "about requiring recycling on a countywide basis" are underway among members of the solid-waste committee.

Environmentalists welcomed the added emphasis on recycling, which they said would not only be more environmentally sound, but also cheaper.

Dennis Piper, an executive committee member of the Southeast Michigan Group of the Sierra Club, estimated that recycling centers could operate at about 40 percent of the cost of incinerators. Moreover, he predicted that landfill costs will double in the next five years.

Piper called Mack's amendment "encouraging."

"This is a big battle," he said, "and it will continue to be a big battle."

Brenda Liveoak, president of the Southwest Detroit- and Downriver-based Oakwood Environmental Concerns, welcomed the added emphasis on recycling in the 274-page draft of the county's solid waste management plan.

"I think it's about time," she said. "It's certainly a step in the right direction. Detroit went from automaker to incinerator, and that's not what we want to be known as. I think people are finally getting wise."

Mack said the county's solid-waste management plan should result in a 50-percent residential waste reduction by 1992. His amendment also states that the management committee "will continue to work to develop strategies to reduce the volume of commercial and industrial waste."

By 1994, the committee should be prepared to review the plan's ability to achieve an overall waste reduction of 50 percent — including commercial, industrial, and residential solid wastes — by the year 2000, according to objectives listed in Mack's amendment.

Once the management committee issues its final recommendations, the plan will be submitted for approval to County Executive Ed McNamara and the Wayne County Commission. After 29 of the county's 43 communities — or a two-thirds majority — adopt the plan, it will be submitted to the state Department of Natural Resources.

Under state approval, Mack said, all Wayne County communities would be required to comply with the plan.

Trash program geared to clean roads

By DAWN RIFFENBURG

Picture this: you're driving down the road and the driver in front of you tosses a McDonald's bag out his window.

You're angry, but is there anything you can do besides pull up alongside and give the litterer a dirty look? Dial 1-800-44-TRASH.

The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) has initiated a "citizens' watch"-type project geared at cleaning up some of the state's roadsides.

Project Pride — the motto is "Pick it up, Michigan" — has been in service for the past 10 months. Motorists can see one of the 30 to 40 signs depicting the toll-free number along freeways throughout Wayne, Oakland, and Macomb counties.

This year the program is moving statewide: four signs were recently installed along I-94.

Calls will be answered by a member of the "Michigan Litter Commission" — an answering service that will take the information and relay it to the correct law enforcement agency.

Ernie Savas, a Metro District maintenance engineer, said the program has resulted in about 350 legitimate complaints on both state trunklines and county/city roads over the past 10 months.

"It's an easy number to remember," Savas said. "We get calls from up north when people go on vacation. It's not isolated or concentrated just for Southeastern Michigan."

However, he acknowledged the difficulty in prosecuting a litterer.

"The observer has to be an eyewitness and go to court to testify," Savas explained. "It's a misdemeanor, which means a maximum $100 fine. And, of course, there's a backlog of court cases. It can take a long time to come to court."

Savas said that in most cases, once the police department receives the information it subsequently calls or sends a letter to the violator identified by a license plate number. The violator is informed he or she was observed littering and is advised of the consequences if caught firsthand.

"The only kinds of calls that are difficult to respond to are the ones where one neighbor observes a neighbor's yard, you know, house to house," Savas said. "That's a violation of city code, not a state statute we can get involved in."

Savas said the goal of the program is aimed at stopping littering along the state's roads.

"We basically want to make people aware," Savas said. "We'd like them to think twice about littering. We're not trying to be a Big Brother, but it just doesn't look good to have litter along the roadways."

"Cleaning up the roads will cut costs to drivers, including the litterer. It isn't too difficult to take that gum wrapper or McDonald's bag and just keep it in your car until you can throw it away in the proper place."

MDOT requests that callers provide a brief description of the car and driver and, most importantly, the license plate number.

What about calls that are not legitimate? Savas said that the MDOT operators have no method to verify calls made to the litter hotline.

However, since the caller must provide his or her own name and phone number, this functions as one safeguard against prank calls.

"A lot of callers are reluctant to get involved," Savas said. "We'll pass along the information anyway."

State trunklines fall under the jurisdiction of county sheriff's departments. Oakland County Sheriff's Department Lieutenant Dennis Mouser said that deputies treat all calls as legitimate calls.

"A lot would depend on the clues we can find to locate the dumpsite," he explained. "For instance, if we found a trash bag and it had letters or bills inside indicating who the owner was, that might prove who dumped the trash. But that generally happens more on secondary roads than freeways."

Mouser said there is no formal arrangement between the sheriff's department and MDOT for handling such calls.

"If we receive the information, we are obligated to look into it," he said.

"It's kind of like the drunk drivers hotline that we have. It takes an awful lot of luck, by the time the call comes in, and we assign someone to it, and get to investigating it."

The state is further encouraging cleanup efforts by an "Adopt-A-Freeway" program within the tri-county area.

"We're asking businesses that about the freeway in rural areas — not urban — to take over, at their own initiative and expense, the mowing and litter-clearing to enhance the right-of-way," Savas explained.

"This will improve their business site and save a few dollars for the state."

Although 500 businesses along I-96 were targeted by MDOT, Savas said that the department hopes for commitments from about 30 participants.

"It's a start," he said. "Hopefully it will snowball into a major cleanup effort."

Police switch unions

By DARRELL CLEM

Northville police, in a show of solidarity on the eve of contract negotiations with city officials, decided unanimously last week to change unions.

The 13-member Northville Police Officers Association, which includes patrol officers and dispatchers, voted to switch its union representation from the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) to the Police Officers Association of Michigan.

The vote last Thursday was 11-0; two members were unable to vote.

Bill Edgar, president of the local union, said the change in affiliation did not reflect any dissatisfaction with FOP agent Rich Ziegler. Edgar said that patrol officers "just felt a general lack of representation" by the FOP and that they wanted to improve communications with city officials.

Edgar said he expects to know later this month who the newly-chosen union will appoint to represent the local association in upcoming contract talks with city officials. He said local officers first must wait several days for union election results to be certified.

Edgar said the local association's contract with the city expired July 1. He said the association expects negotiations for a new contract to be a "lengthy" process.

That would be nothing new for the department and city. The seven-member Northville Command Officers Association has been working for about a year without a contract. The association and the city have finally agreed to have a state arbitrator decide issues of wages, a retirement plan, and disability income.

Speedy plan for library would be good news

It now appears that an election on a new site for the Northville Public Library will not happen until next spring at the earliest. This is too bad, and we hope officials work to ensure that the project is not delayed any longer.

At the start of this year, we suggested in this space that officials work toward a library election in November. That suggestion was seen by some as a request for an unnecessary delay, but it now appears we were being somewhat optimistic.

On a gut level, it seems very hard to rationalize the delay in putting the library question before voters. With closer inspection, though, finger-pointing becomes difficult. The initial jockeying between the site committee and public officials — with potential sites being dropped and added in an absolutely mystifying manner — was foolish, but that is in the distant past.

The real culprit in the delay has been the Ford Motor Company and the uncertainty over whether its Northville Plant should be considered a potential library site. Some officials initially rejected this concept, but agreed to revisit it when a formal architectural study — echoing the common-sense reaction of many Northville residents — suggested that a library might be an ideal use for the vacant plant.

Once the Ford plant became a possibility, the library site selection process essentially fell into the hands of the company. The actual shutdown, the completion of the study, and the final study recommendation all depend directly on Ford. The automaker is not about to tailor its schedule to the needs of Northville, and the community cannot realistically expect that anyway.

Library space is a pressing need in town, as we have pointed out before. Northville prides itself, rightly, on being a first-class community. For simple reasons of capacity, Northville does not now have a first-class library. It deserves one.

Now that things are coming together, officials need to move quickly to disseminate information on the proposed sites to the public. If the Six Mile / Beck site is to be added to the list of possibilities for a main library — rather than an annex — it must be studied immediately. Public hearings need to be scheduled, and election resolutions need to be agreed upon and passed.

The public deserves a chance to say whether it wants a truly fine library. It has deserved this chance for years. Let's see it happen.

City must act quickly to make ordinance fair

We never would have expected that the City of Northville would get sued over pizza — that's right, pizza — but that is what has happened.

Primo's, an area pizza chain, has filed suit to challenge a city restriction against home delivery of food in the Central Business District. The company filed after the city's zoning board of appeals — the body with authority to grant exceptions to the zoning ordinance — said it had to abide by the rules as they are written.

The problem, which has already been noted, is that not everyone has to abide by those rules. Domino's Pizza — which actually spurred the home-delivery ban — and the Pizza Cutter both continue to deliver from the CBD because they were doing so before the ban took effect.

There has appeared to be consensus on the city council that the ordinance is not doing what it intended, and in fact gives an unfair advantage to some businesses. Officials discussed lifting the home-delivery ban, and seemed willing to do so.

In the weeks since the issue arose, the city made very little movement toward making the change, and Primo's filed its lawsuit. This situation probably could have been avoided with quicker action on the city's part.

Make no mistake; the lawsuit is not a crisis. It could be a simple maneuver on Primo's part in case the ordinance is never changed.

But still, this is a legal action hanging over the city which need not be there. The home-delivery issue is a fairly simple one in comparison with the home-day-care-zoning issue, for example, which took many months to resolve.

This city can easily head this lawsuit off at the pass, and should quickly move to do so.

School district has wise approach to bond issue

Northville School District officials are taking a smart approach to their construction-bond-issue proposal planned for October.

Facing a decision on whether to ask for $16 million or $30 million — the difference being whether they want to build a new middle school or reopen the old Cooke Junior High — the officials are taking the question to the public.

In their own version of a Gallup poll, school officials have recruited a bunch of citizens to find out which proposal would be more likely to fly with friends and neighbors. If a consensus choice emerges, that's what will probably show up on the ballot this fall.

This is smart in at least two ways: the school proposal will be the one most likely to pass, which officials want; and the early input will make the community feel like a part of the process, and therefore more likely to approve the bond sale. This move will almost certainly pay off.

Idle thoughts, on a boring Tuesday evening . . .

• My favorite alternate uses for council chambers: 1. Hanging beef; 2. Embalming dead people; 3. A summer home for the Plymouth Ice Festival; 4. Eskimo nose-rubbing contests; 5. Training area for the Novi Yacht Club, using tricky northeast air currents to train in basic tacking maneuvers.

• Why are driveways called driveways, when you park there? Why are parkways called parkways, when you drive there? These guys definitely had Oakland County in mind when they made these up.

• While we're on the subject of traffic . . . you know, when (if) the Haggerty Road connector to Pontiac Trail is built they're not going to be able to call it the "Haggerty Road connector." Imagine the confusion giving directions to someone from out of town.

"Take Haggerty south to Nine Mile, then . . ." and your guest ends up getting on the connector, jogging onto I-275, and driving to Flat Rock, or worse, Ecorse.

My hunch is that they'll name it something else, and probably have a groovy contest about it. Get your entries in now. My personal favorites: "The Fessler Parkway." Or "Blanchard Blvd.," since the boy guy has been in such a blinding rush to see this project completed. Yeah. Sounds good.

• Ever wonder why the word "dynamic" seems to be coming up so much lately? "This is a 'dynamic,' evolving process in modern planning, etc., etc."

Hmmm. Please, without looking it up, define this word — this "dynamic."

• One of the things I've always been puzzled about is people trying to keep it a secret when they're running or not running for some public office. I guess the old "Leave 'em wantin' more" approach is the standard operational procedure here.

But you'd think something as open and forthright as representative democracy would be a little different. Maybe not. Proof again that representative democracy and politics don't mix.

• If I hear the phrase "just say no" aped back by another clean-cut high-school kid, I'll scream. Please. "Just say no" is like telling a suicidally depressed person to "Just cheer up."

After the fact

By Phil Jerome

She had already glanced through this week's edition of Time magazine when I arrived home for supper Tuesday night.

I browsed through the paper. Then picked up Time to see what type of stories it featured this week.

I had not yet opened up the magazine when I heard her say, "It's a pretty depressing issue this week."

It wasn't until later that I learned she was talking about all the pages that Time devoted to pictures and stories about people who were killed by guns during a recent week.

What I did was open the magazine to the "Modern Living" or "Fashion" section or whatever else they're calling it these days. And what I saw was this story about women's swimwear.

Bathing suits are becoming more discreet, it said. The bikini is out. No more skimpy bathing suits for women.

"Ohmigod," I said aloud. "You were right. This is depressing."

And the more I read, the worse it got.

One manufacturer is making a line of suits for the "Midwestern" figure — a phrase sure to win friends and boost sales in the Big Ten states.

Another part of the story told how manufacturers are designing suits to conceal figure flaws. Busts which are too big. Busts which are too small. Tubby tummies. Flabby legs. Bare is out. Don't expect to be titillated when you go to the beach this summer.

"I don't think I can go on," I moaned. "This is absolutely terrible news."

"And you're only beginning," she sighed hopefully. "Wait till you see the article about the guns."

But can he post up?

To the Editor:

One of the prices we pay for modern communication is the endless stream of strangers who march through our telephones, wanting to sell us something, give them money, or make us rich. I was recently pushed just slightly over the edge when I received an invoice from the Novi Police Officers Association for a commitment which I had not made. I do not even recall being contacted. If I had been, the caller would have heard my standard "I do not support any organization that solicits by telephone." (I have a variation of this for the door-to-door crowd also).

Before you get the wrong idea, I do believe in supporting worthwhile causes (and even worthwhile replacement window salesmen). My objection is to the method. With apologies to our post person (she says we get too much mail anyway), my mail basket is quiet and never interrupts dinner, and doesn't try to make me feel guilty if I don't respond.

Motivated by the Novi police invoice, I contacted two offices of Michigan Bell (who gave me conflicting information), The Better Business Bureau, the Novi Police, and the Novi Police Officers Association. What I learned was that telephone people use a document called Bresser's Cross-Index Directory. Bresser's is a commercial organization which takes the telephone listings and reorganizes them geographically by community or street or something like that. The Bresser's index is sold to charities and window salesmen who want to home in on you and your neighbor.

Calling Bresser's, I was told that I should write a note to them asking that my listing not be included in their publication. While this is not a total solution, it should help. When I asked how a private organization can use my name for commercial purposes, the answer was that the telephone book is "public domain."

It occurred to me that Bresser's address, which is listed in the telephone book, is also "public domain." The address is: Bresser's Cross-Index Directory Co., 684 W. Baltimore, Detroit, MI 48202.

To conclude, please continue to support those organizations which you feel are deserving. If you are comfortable with the telephone people who interrupt dinners, shorten your showers, and pull you away from the crucial play in the big game, fine, it is your right. Everyone else, write Bresser's.

Donors beware

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Northville Jaycees for the very fine 4th of July parade.

Only one thing that I saw distressed me. It was the man in a made-up outfit posing as a veteran, with small flags, soliciting donations on behalf of the veterans.

He was not a veteran or a member of any veterans' organization.

When approached by myself and other members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, he hustled (pardon the pun) away from us. We have seen him at the parade for three consecutive years.

The VFW, American Legion and their auxiliaries have worked hard and long to be an asset to this community, and people gave to this man believing it was furthering our cause. It was not.

We publicly ask for donations once a year on Poppy Days in May. We had a flag fund drive one time to help pay for and maintain the flags that line Main Street for the parades and special occasions. We give away flags at the Memorial Day Parade.

I thank the well-meaning people for their donations to what they thought they were doing.

Northville community, beware! Ask to see some credentials when being asked for donations, or watch the Northville Record for the dates of most organizations' fund drives. There are many good causes and faithful workers who ask for donations and should be helped.

There may be ways to deal with 'bizarre' behaviors by teenagers

This is the latest in a continuing series of columns by Northville Youth Assistance Director Mary Ellen King.

Often, when raising teenagers, out-of-the-ordinary things happen — such as bizarre appearance changes, mood fluctuations, or rebellious behavior. Many families handle these changes as if they are a crisis. In order to avoid a crisis in your family, listed below are some practical steps to help you get through typical teenage behavior.

1. Identify the problem as concretely and concisely as possible.
2. Brainstorm. Look at all the alternatives to solving the problem. List each alternative without evaluating any of them.
3. When the list is complete, narrow down to the best possible solution. As you narrow down alternatives, it is helpful to ask, "What would happen if we tried that?" or "How would you feel if we tried that?"

4. Agree on and implement the most practical solution. Decide specifically and practically how the solution will work.
5. Follow through. Do not deviate from the agreed-upon solution no matter how difficult it may seem at the time.
6. Don't give up. Try again if the solution does not work.

During a tense situation it is important to avoid:

- Swearing
- Name-calling
- Yelling
- Hitting
- Threatening
- Blaming

It is also important to be an active participant and show a degree of flexibility to help resolve a problem situation. Being depressed and hoping things will work themselves out will not work. Both parties must be agreeable to some suggested solutions. If you do not seem to be getting anywhere and an argument starts, suggest a cooling-off period to get back in control.

A couple days after a problematic situation, it is helpful to do an "ABCD Analysis."

A. Antecedents — What things led up to the crisis? What were the stresses inside and outside of the home?

B. Behaviors — How did the family try to cope with the stresses? How did everyone act? What were you thinking?

C. Consequences — What were the consequences of these actions and thoughts?

D. Do Differently — What could you do differently now? What alternatives do you now see?

Before problems in your family escalate into crises, call NYA at 344-1618 for help.

Lucky day

By Amy Rosa

"Find a penny, pick it up, all day long you'll have good luck." You know the old saying.

Well, I did find a penny the other day, and it happened to be under an airplane seat. Great, I thought, as I embarked on a holiday vacation with my husband to eastern Pennsylvania. Not that I'm a bit superstitious, but I laughingly wondered what kind of good luck the day would bring. But what followed was anything but good luck.

I thought I sensed some bad karma when I noticed we weren't flying very high, and we were supposedly only midway from Detroit to Pittsburgh. I also noticed that an engine seemed to be making uncharacteristically gunning and waning noises. My husband Ralph thought I was crazy when I told him I thought there was something wrong.

And then my suspicions were realized. Immediately, flight attendants, not even trying to conceal looks of concern, promptly picked up everyone's beverages just minutes after they were served. At the same time, another flight attendant's voice came over the speaker and said we were having some difficulties and the captain would explain the situation. Ah-ha, I thought.

I couldn't believe there was some kind of "situation" that needed explaining. Then, sure enough, we heard the captain's voice telling us somewhat calmly that he lost oil pressure in an engine and "had to cut it off." Everything was fine, he said; don't worry. At that time he said we were about 30 miles outside of the Pittsburgh airport.

"Fine," my husband and I told each other with palms beginning to sweat. We know planes can fly on one engine (there was one engine left). Then, just as we were getting over that hurdle, the "situation" suddenly became more serious.

We were immediately told by flight attendants that it was the captain's request that "everyone become familiar with the brace position" in the event of an emergency landing. Okay, we thought, things were really getting serious, and the fact that the stewardess's voice was cracking reaffirmed it. Then, moments later, flight attendants told us it looked like we were going in for an emergency landing.

All I could think of, as I watched us glide over tree tops with no airport in sight, was family, thank goodness I had no regrets, and was it going to hurt? Ralph all the while kept telling me things would be OK, and that we were there together. Secretly, selfishly, I was glad we were there together.

Flight attendants said the captain would notify us with a signal of four bells when landing was attempted. So of course all 75 passengers thought we had some time, but then the bells started to ring. Still no airport, only trees. In these split seconds I wondered why the crash position was called the "brace position," and also thought the terminology was silly, because putting your arms and head over your lap was not going to protect you from such a fall.

We heard one bell, two bells, three bells . . . and then nothing. Already having expected to be impacting something, we neurotic passengers looked around for an explanation. And we got one. A flight attendant said, "The signal you just heard means that we will be having a normal landing."

A normal landing! Very much relieved, a few of us sitting nearby attempted a chuckle at Ralph's wry, "A nice exercise in mental anguish." For the most part we were all stunned, and still as silent as when the bells started to ring.

We all remained that way until we touched down at Pittsburgh International Airport in what couldn't have been more than five minutes later, although it seemed like a lifetime. Still dazed, we filed out of the DC-9, passing the flight attendants with nervous smiles on their faces. Some folks even said a shaky "thank you" aimed toward the cockpit, from which the mysterious captain didn't appear.

We deplaned via a mobile stair unit, rather than at our assigned gate, and were greeted with several ambulances, fire trucks, and airport emergency vehicles. Again I thought how ironic was this cavalry. What could they possibly have done for us in a crash landing off airport grounds, as we all were led to believe was happening, if even for a few moments.

Gratefulness mixed with anger were practically the only emotions I felt all Fourth of July weekend. Why did we have to go through all that? Were we really in serious trouble up there? Or was all of that just a precaution?

Recanting the story for relatives the next day, I was reminded of the penny I found. "Yeah, some good luck," I remarked sarcastically. Then someone said, "Just think if you hadn't found the penny."

Sewer permits will clear way for township projects

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Northville Township projects currently unable to begin construction due to a lack of sewer capacity may soon see an end to their troubles.

Through township-board approval of final abatement orders recently, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) may be able to issue Act 98 sewer permits very soon.

Township Planning Director Carol

Maise said many projects, especially along the Haggerty Road Corridor, are eagerly awaiting sewer capacity.

Maise said only one of the projects — the Kirco Corporate Office Campus — has final site plan approval. She added, however, that many other project will benefit by having sewer capacity.

Other Haggerty Road projects currently in the planning stage include:

Standard Federal Bank, Country Hearth Inn, part of Country Club Village and South Point Properties.

Kirco Vice President Douglas Winkworth said the company was delighted to hear that the permits will soon be issued and added they are anxious to get the project started.

Winkworth said Kirco does not have a construction timetable for the project and noted the company will have to wait and see when the permits are issued before filing a schedule.

Township Engineering Consultant Don Weaver said the agreement between the DNR and the Western Townships Utilities Authority (WTUA) will be very important for the Haggerty Road sewer.

"Past projects waiting for sewers along Haggerty Road will now be able to come to fruition," Weaver said.

He added he does not expect a development boom in outlying areas in the township, since there are few, if any, projects not on Haggerty that are being held up for lack of sewer capacity.

Township Engineer Abe Munfah said the new agreement will provide Northville Township with all the sewer capacity it needs until the year 2020. Munfah said the township will have a total sewer capacity of 12.04 cubic feet per second (CFS) through the new sewer agreement.

"Based on the utility master plan approved by the township's water and sewer commission, planning commission, and board, 12.04 is their projected need until the year 2020," Munfah said.

Primo's sues to challenge home-delivery ordinance should not make the ordinance retroactive.

In the suit filed June 6, Primo's states that the zoning ordinance "constitutes denial of due process of law and a denial of equal protection under the law."

It further states that the ordinance "is unreasonable and constitutes discriminatory enforcement in violation of the equal protection clause" of both the state and U.S. constitutions.

Primo's claims the situation "has the result of creating unfair competition in favor of" pizzerias that continue to have home delivery. The suit also contends that "a substantial amount of business is generated by home delivery."

The suit claims that a variance on the ordinance "would not, in any way, create a substantial detriment to the public good, nor would it have substantially impaired the intent and purpose of the ordinance."

Walters said the ordinance stemmed from a situation in which Domino's had delivery cars which he said were often driven too fast. He said the vehicles also caused traffic congestion and were sometimes parked illegally.

Walters said Domino's has no specially designated parking spaces for its delivery vehicles and has relied on public parking spaces.

In its suit, Primo's noted that it would have "substantial on-site parking" and that it planned to use only one home-delivery vehicle. Primo's also said its delivery "would cause no traffic or congestion problems."

The lawsuit seeks an injunction against the enforcement of the zoning ordinance that prohibits home deliveries.

Walters said city officials are considering an amendment to the ordinance which would allow home deliveries in the Central Business District if businesses meet certain requirements.

Walters said the amendment is expected to be considered by the city council sometime in August. If approved, it would be sent to the Northville Planning Commission for a public hearing.

Walters said the amendment would likely require home-delivery businesses to have self-sufficient parking spaces. Other areas that could be addressed might include whether the business site is adequate for home delivery and whether there should be a limit on the number of delivery vehicles operating simultaneously, he said.

Meanwhile, Walters said city officials and Primo's are continuing negotiations. He indicated the suit, which caught city officials by surprise, may have been filed to give the pizzeria "an alternative" to fighting the ordinance if the city does not amend it.

Walters said he thinks the city council is open to amending the ordinance if it can be amended without creating more problems.

Cost of ditch work criticized

strong concerns about the project, which should begin within the next two weeks.

Folino questioned why city engineers failed to earlier notify city council members of Elmsmere's problems. If the storm sewer system had been designed differently when it was built, Folino said, the problems probably would have been alleviated.

"I'm very disappointed," Folino said. "It upsets me to think that this happened."

Some of the approximately 25 Elmsmere-area residents who attended Monday's council meeting also wondered aloud why the drainage system wasn't built better. Despite the deep ditches, some said they still have had problems with flooded yards and basements.

Elmsmere resident Gerald Sledz said the ditches are so deep that he can no longer mow the grass in some areas. "And the ditches always have standing water," he said.

Resident Brenda Lane agreed: "It actually flows like a river."

City officials, concerned that the ditches are unsafe for motorists and impractical for maintenance, decided to install new pipes and cover the ditches with dirt.

But Mayor Pro Tem Carolann Ayers was among those who questioned whether the area will continue to experience drainage problems.

"I continue to be concerned that this is maybe not a total fix for the problem and that it's kind of an after-the-fact repair," Ayers said.

However, Mayor Christopher Johnson stressed that "due to the hazard we have out there, I don't see how we can postpone this."

City Engineer Bob Warner noted that the ditch along the south side of Elmsmere has experienced problems because it receives drainage from nearly 60 acres of Northville Estates. He said there is a gradual 60-foot slope from the Estates to Elmsmere.

But Warner said the proposed storm sewer system should accommodate more underground water.

The work will be done by Thompson-McCully Co., which will use dirt from other city street work to fill the Elmsmere ditches. The project will become part of the city's ongoing street-repair program and will be paid through a bond issue.

City Manager Steven Walters wrote in a memo to city council members that "this is a major additional cost to the street program, but I do not see any alternative because of the unacceptable ditch depths."

Walters noted that while the improvement "is related to only a few lots in terms of frontage, the Elmsmere storm system carries water from approximately two-thirds of Northville Estates, north of a line running from Holmbury at Beck to the southeast corner of the subdivision."

Several residents have asked the city to slightly expand the project to correct problems near their homes. The city council authorized Walters to consider and approve such requests on a case-by-case basis.

Johnson indicated that if drainage problems persist along Elmsmere, it may eventually be necessary to assess property owners and form a "drainage district" to pay for an improved storm sewer system.

Entech Services helps firms fill temporary needs

By DAVE WASKIN

When opportunity knocks, it taps a different tune to each of us. If your tune happens to be temporary employment, there may be someone at your door.

In March of this year Entech Services Ltd. opened a branch office in the Prospect Hill Shopping Center in Milford. Entech Services assigns employees to temporary positions in the various companies that serve as clients.

Those temporary positions fall under four broad categories: clerical work, which ranges from filing and secretarial duties to advanced administrative positions; technical employment, which involves highly skilled engineering, drafting and design work; light and heavy industrial work which requires no specific skill training; and word processing positions, for which Entech Services provides a complete computer training program in each of its offices.

The training also covers certain clerical skills such as shorthand and data entry. Completed before an employee is given an assignment with a company that requires word processing or clerical skills, the training is free and individualized to each trainee's needs.

Potential employees are interviewed on their first visit to Entech Services and pre-tested to determine their clerical and word processing skills, if they are interested in either type of job.

"The trainer can look at the results of the tests, see where the person's

'Image' and 'attitude' key elements for female executives

In the film "Working Girl," actress Melanie Griffith moves up the corporate ladder from secretary to high-powered executive.

By changing her image and attitude, she cons male CEOs into thinking she's just as smart as the good old boys.

"In the beginning of the movie, she was thinking — and dressing — like a college student," explained Carole M. Lewis, owner of Communication Specialists, a consulting firm in Birmingham. "She had long hair and wore a miniskirt and jewelry. The young guys (in the company) treated her like a sex object."

While her boss is recovering from a ski accident, Griffith steps into her shoes — literally — cuts her hair and dons a business suit. Now she projects an image of power.

"The character had the brains; she just needed the polish," Lewis said.

She spent nearly 20 years as a secretary, then statistician in the Sales and Financial departments of Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors Corp., before opening her own business in 1984. She holds a bachelor's degree in communications and has nearly completed her master's degree.

She offers seminars in sales techniques, customer relations, stress and 'You have to look the part and wear that $500 suit even if you don't have five cents in your pocket. I read that when Onassis lost his money during the war, he worked two or three jobs, bought an expensive suit and walked into all the right places.'

wellness, public speaking, assertiveness training, listening skills, time management, interpersonal communication skills and image and need assessments.

Part of her presentation focuses on dressing for success. "Years ago, secretaries at General Motors were well-groomed and had perfect hair. They were the best dressed women around. But they didn't look like board presidents."

"Today, women have to project an image that says 'I mean business.'"

Lewis isn't an advocate of John T. Molloy's dress for success formula. She prefers the "androgynous look" — business suits with a feminine flair. "Collarless jackets with silk blouses and a few, well-placed pieces of jewelry. You shouldn't have things jangling or rings on every finger."

Hemlines should cover the knee. The most powerful color is black, then charcoal grey and taupe, Lewis said.

"You have to look the part and wear that $500 suit even if you don't have five cents in your pocket," she added. "I read that when Onassis lost his money during the war, he worked two or three jobs, bought an expensive suit and walked into all the right places."

It's better to purchase two or three expensive suits than eight or 10 inexpensive ones, she stressed.

Non-verbal communication is 55 percent of the "total message you give out," Lewis contends. "People assess you in the first 10-15 seconds.

In one research study, an actor dressed as a Wall Street executive approached people on Wall Street and gave them a song and dance about leaving his wallet and credentials at home. Almost all the people he approached gave him money and some even offered to drive him home.

On a second occasion, the same actor donned a tweed blazer and looked like a professor. When he returned to Wall Street and told his sob story, he received nasty comments — "that was a foolish thing to do" and "why don't you have your wife pick you up."

Lewis offers other pointers:

□ Carry either a brief case or a purse, not both.

□ Be on time. If you're late to an appointment, you lose power. "If you walk in late, try to appear as if you're calm and in control. Don't project a harried, frenzied image."

□ Choose the location of your office strategically. "If you're a struggling young lawyer or businesswoman and you have an office in Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham, Troy or Grosse Pointe, it carries more weight."

□ Project an image of leadership. "In our society, we like to see tall people in leadership roles. Women can wear high heels if they're short or buy a big chair or have their desk and chair elevated."

□ Clean off your desk. "If your desk is cluttered, people may think you're not an organized person."

□ Be assertive, not aggressive. "An assertive woman stands up for her rights and expresses her needs, values and concerns in direct and appropriate ways. Aggressive people express their feelings, needs and ideas at the expense of others."

In his book, "When I Say No, I Feel Guilty," Manuel J. Smith offers these techniques: Repeat calmly and firmly what you need or want. If your performance is being criticized, find some truth in what the person says and continue your assertion. A sample response: 'I can see how you might view it that way' or 'That's possible.'

Ask questions about specifics — who, what, when, where, how and why. Admit your mistakes and ask what you can do to correct the situation. Focus on behaviors, not on the person.

□ Develop good listening skills. "Men only listen to the first 15 seconds of what you say and then they start figuring out how they're going to respond. Studies have shown that if two women — or two men — are talking to each other, they will interrupt one another the same number of times. If a man and woman are talking, he interrupts 93 percent of the time. That's because men have been raised to be problem-solvers and women have been raised to be care-takers."

"Women and men listen equally as well to a person in high status, research shows."

"Women should realize that they have only 15 seconds to get their point across. And, they should make simple, declarative statements. If a man interrupts, say 'excuse me, I'd like to finish my statement' or raise your hand or give a time-out signal."

Developing good listening skills cuts down on errors.

Lewis once consulted with a manager who had trouble communicating with an employee. The manager would ask the employee to move a package of widgets from one spot to another. The worker never got it right. "The manager should ask, 'how are you going to do that?' or tell the employee to paraphrase what he just said."

□ Learn to be a situational, not an authoritative leader. When an employer first trains a new employee, he comes across as an authoritative leader. But, once the employee learns the job, the employer should change his style and praise his or her progress.

Consumers should learn refund policies

While laws protect consumers from misrepresented or defective goods, there are no laws that require merchants to offer refunds, exchanges or credits on merchandise they sell, warns the Better Business Bureau (BBB).

These voluntary practices have become wide-spread among retailers wishing to make shopping in their stores as attractive as possible to customers. But consumers should never assume that merchandise can be returned unless this policy is specifically stated by the store. Return and exchange practices vary from store to store, so customers should understand the store's policy when making a purchase.

Virtually all stores with exchange or refund policies require that the product be returned within a specified time period, in new condition, with all packaging in place, and with the original sales slip.

Because of health laws, these return policies seldom apply to underwear, bathing suits or hats.

Tips for selecting the 'right' mortgage

For some people, selecting a mortgage is as mysterious and as infuriating a process as trying to keep track of the pea in a shell game. How do you know which one is right for you?

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, the key to choosing a mortgage is taking the time to understand how mortgages differ. In most cases, you will have to decide between a fixed- or adjustable-rate mortgage.

FIXED-RATE MORTGAGES: Fixed-rate mortgages feature monthly payments that remain the same over the life of the mortgage — usually ranging from 15 to 30 years. At the start of the loan, the payment goes almost entirely toward interest which is still tax-deductible. In time, a greater percentage of the monthly payments will go toward the principal, thus increasing your equity in the property.

The primary advantage of a fixed-rate mortgage is its predictability. If your monthly payment is $1,000 today, it will remain $1,000 twenty years from now — and in 20 years, $1,000 will seem a lot less than it does today. The cost of this financial security is usually an interest rate that is two or more percentage points higher than those available on variable or adjustable loans.

When you apply for a fixed-rate mortgage, you generally have to decide between a 15- or 30-year term. Spreading the mortgage over 30 years means smaller monthly payments, which may enable you to qualify for a somewhat higher mortgage. As a general rule, the payments on a 30-year loan with an interest rate of 10 percent will be about 20 percent less than those on an equivalent 15-year loan.

On the other hand, if you can afford the higher payments on a 15-year mortgage, you can save a dramatic amount in interest costs and you will own your home, free and clear, in just 15 years.

Whether a shorter- or longer-term mortgage is preferable depends entirely on an individual's particular goals and finances. For example, a young professional who plans to sell her home within a relatively short time should probably opt for a loan that demands smaller monthly payments. On the other hand, a couple in their 40s or 50s who want a mortgage-free home for their retirement years should seriously investigate the advantages of a short-term mortgage.

One last point: some CPAs argue that disciplined investors may be able to equal or exceed the amount of interest saved on a 15-year loan by intelligently investing the amount saved each month under a 30-year loan. In addition, since a larger proportion of the payments on a 30-year fixed mortgage go toward interest, the tax benefit of such loans is much greater.

ADJUSTABLE-RATE MORTGAGES: In the first months of 1989, adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMs) accounted for approximately 60 percent of all new mortgages. The reason for the popularity of these mortgages is easy to understand. ARMs have an initial interest rate that is two to three percentage points lower than those on fixed-rate mortgages. Over the life of the loan, the interest rate periodically increases or decreases based upon a particular index selected by the lender.

In most cases, ARMs are indexed to either one-year Treasury Bills or to prime rate.

Before you choose an ARM, be sure to do a fair amount of comparison shopping. Pay particular attention to the "caps" or limits on how high the interest rate can climb. Most lenders limit the annual adjustment to one or two percentage points, with the total interest rate guaranteed not to increase more than five or six points over the life of the loan.

ARMs are particularly attractive to individuals who are confident that their own salaries will increase substantially over time. These people choose ARMs because the monthly payments are initially lower than those they could obtain through other means.

For example, the monthly payment on a $100,000 30-year fixed-rate mortgage at 10.5 percent is $915. On an ARM with an interest rate of 7.5 percent, the monthly payment is about $700. Theoretically, as the ARM's interest rates and monthly payments increase over time, so should the mortgage holder's income.

A problem may arise, however, if inflation and market conditions cause the adjustable interest rate to increase at a much faster pace than the mortgage holder's salary. Let's look at an example. A few years ago, Bob and Patty had to choose between two types of mortgages: a one-year adjustable mortgage at 7.5 percent with a two-percentage interest cap per year and a lifetime cap of six points, or a 30-year fixed rate mortgage at 10.5 percent.

Since Bob expected a big promotion, the couple opted for the one-year ARM. After two years, the ARM's interest rate rose to 11.5 percent. At the same time, Bob's promotion fell through. Consequently, the couple ended up with higher monthly payments than they would have had under the fixed-rate mortgage — and without the substantial increase in income they had expected.

Still, ARMs can make sense for certain people. For example, if you expect to own your home for only a few years, an ARM can save you a bundle in interest charges. In such cases, you should consider three-, five- or six-year ARMs. The adjustable rates will kick in only after the stated period and until that time your interest will remain fixed at a rate usually a point or so lower than that on a conventional fixed mortgage.

Another option is the convertible ARM. With these mortgages, you can convert an adjustable-rate loan to a fixed-rate loan, usually during the second through fifth year of the loan. Just keep in mind that converting an ARM may sometimes cost as much as simply refinancing the loan.

Before you make a final decision on a mortgage, gather as much information as you can. The Michigan Association of CPAs reminds consumers that the Federal Reserve Board now requires lenders to supply you with a 25-page booklet titled the Consumer Handbook on Adjustable Rate Mortgages. In addition, they must provide you with an analysis of how your payments would have varied under past interest rates as well as a worst-case scenario of how they may fare in the future.

Entech provides help with temporary jobs skills fall and what areas need to be worked on to bring those skills up to par," said Entech Services Marketing Representative Gwen Kohler-See.

A typing tutor is even available to increase the employee's speed to the necessary range of 40 to 50 words per minute. According to Kohler-See, the training process is such that "it's not like you've taken a class and are going out there for the first time trying to do the job."

"You will already have had the experience of being trained on whatever kind of software a company is using."

Entech Services is not an employment agency, so employees work for and are paid by Entech Services; there is no fee. Pay for a specific assignment depends on the type of task and the individual company.

Length and scheduling of assignments also depends on Entech's clientele and on the individual employee.

"We put a lot of care into placing the right person with the right job," Kohler-See said. She believes that through interviews and personal attention, Entech Services makes its employees feel more at home in a job where it may seem as if there are many first days.

"Obviously, if an employee isn't told they have to bring a lunch, they're going to go hungry that day," she said. "We try to take care not to let things like that happen."

Employees on new assignments are also told where to park, how to dress, and given all other pertinent information about the company they are assigned to.

"How devoted we are to our employees, our training and our extensive testing program... those three things really set us apart," said Kohler-See.

Temporary job placement of any sort is generally available, depending on the interests of the employee. Entech Services insists that it can find work for anyone who is willing and ready. "The only real requirements at all are that the person be 18 or older, reliable, dependable and honest," said Kohler-See.

"In the clerical field we have people whose ages run the gamut from 18 to 80."

In addition to people who are looking for a career change, have been laid off, or are retired, Kohler-See points out that Entech Services can be an excellent opportunity for students. "It's a way for them to gain different types of valuable experience in different companies," she said.

Entech Services, Ltd. was incorporated in 1983 from Engineering Technology, an engineering design company. Since Entech Services established its first office in Troy, it has opened seven new offices, one in Nashville, Tenn., and six in Metro-Detroit.

The Milford office is the newest of the offices, and offers a location central to many of the businesses Entech serves in Brighton, Howell, Wixom and Walled Lake.

"Milford is really a growing area. Within the next five to 10 years businesses are going to be going up all around here, especially along M-59," said account representative Jane Murray.

Donna Koster of Highland Township began working with Entech last October. Her first assignment consisted of light industrial work. She currently is doing lab technician and secretarial work at Kelsey Hayes Co. in Brighton.

"I had just moved out here in October and didn't know anyone... didn't know my way around," she said. "You can spend a lot of months looking for a job in the paper. But here they will do it for you, and if you decide not to stay with them, you're not obligated to."

After Koster completed her light industrial job, she obtained her first office job without any previous clerical or secretarial experience.

"My representative at Entech called me and asked me about the secretarial work, and I said I had never worked in an office before. But she recommended me and the job went along just fine."

Eventually Koster landed a job with Kelsey Hayes as a lab technician. "My supervisor had been told that I had very little experience on the computer. It worked out originally where I did mainly lab work. Now Kelsey Hayes is changing hands and they are eliminating some of the lab work. So now it's going to be basically the computer, and my supervisor would like me to stay."

Entech Services, Ltd. is located at 510 Highland Avenue in Milford's Prospect Hill Shopping Center.

Schoolcraft Business Center helps businesses

When the Business Development Center Procurement Assistance Program at Schoolcraft College worked on getting the United States Army to change its requirements for buying pizza, the results allowed Little Caesar's Corporation to compete more effectively on overseas pizza contracts.

Since the Business Development Center opened its doors in 1985, it has assisted 910 firms in securing 941 government contracts valued at $86,795,629.

Although there are 20 similar programs around the state, Schoolcraft College is the first and only community college which assists companies in securing government contracts. The college's Business Development Center has been recognized as the state's most productive program by the Michigan Department of Commerce. In the most recent report, the Center provided 25 percent of all contracts awarded by the state. These results have been recognized by the Federal Government and the State of Michigan. As a result, the College's Business Development Center has been rewarded with more dollars in grants than any program in the state.

A number of companies have taken advantage of the customized training offered by the Center, and numerous classes have been designed for firms which want to upgrade employee skills. A customized management training program complete with a training kitchen has been developed for Little Caesar's Corporation.

Qualified unemployed persons will be given training scholarships and be hired by the corporation following successful completion of the program. All internal management staff and franchisees will receive training as well.

Among the many services the Center offers, the procurement staff will also mail or fax information to anyone interested in the services or products the state is planning to purchase. Through this service, the Center can assist hundreds of firms in bidding on State of Michigan contracts that they otherwise would not have been aware of.

The Center recently created a program to assist firms in implementing the new Drug-free Workplace Act. Because this act affects all government contractors, the Center is responsible for training all other state procurement center personnel as well.

Despite its success, the Center is always looking at other ways to expand its services. An export assistance program is in the planning stage. This program should surpass all of its ventures to date.

A defense against cancer can be cooked up in your kitchen.

There is evidence that diet and cancer are related. Some foods may promote cancer, while others may protect you from it.

Foods related to lowering the risk of cancer of the larynx and esophagus all have high amounts of carotene, a form of Vitamin A which is in cantaloupes, peaches, broccoli, spinach, all dark green leafy vegetables, sweet potatoes, carrots, pumpkin, winter squash and tomatoes, citrus fruits and brussels sprouts.

Fruits, vegetables, and whole-grain cereals such as oatmeal, bran and wheat may help lower the risk of colorectal cancer.

Foods high in fats, salt- or nitrite-cured foods like ham, and fish and types of sausages smoked by traditional methods should be eaten in moderation.

Be moderate in consumption of alcohol also.

A good rule of thumb is cut down on fat and don't be fat. Weight reduction may lower cancer risk. Our 12-year study of nearly a million Americans uncovered high cancer risks particularly among people 40% or more overweight.

Now, more than ever, we know you can cook up your own defense against cancer. So eat healthy and be healthy.

No one faces cancer alone.

Foods that may help reduce the risk of gastrointestinal and respiratory tract cancer are cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, cauliflower.

Gas grills offer backyard cooking convenience.

Beyond charcoal:

Gas grills growing in popularity for backyard barbecues

By Dawn Riffenburg

One of the sure summertime pleasures has got to be barbecuing. Just about every home has some type of grill in the backyard.

Grills are literally available in all shapes and sizes: from the $5 hibachi you can purchase at Meijer to a $700 deluxe Weber gas grill you can buy at specialty stores.

Emerging in popularity — although not really an innovative item — are gas grills. Today's fast-paced world seems to demand relief from the long arduous wait for the charcoal to turn white.

Enter the gas grill: five minutes following a flick of the switch the grill is hot and ready to go.

"The popularity of gas versus charcoal has really boomed in the last few years," said Ron Bechler, assistant manager of Northwest Propane in Brighton.

"Gas grills have actually been around for years but more and more people are getting away from charcoal. Just about everybody has a gas grill or is thinking about buying one."

In recent years, nutritionists have warned consumers about possible dangers of barbecuing. However, Bechler said that grill sales are really up this summer — perhaps ending these fears.

"The barbecue scare started in the 1970s when people started hearing about grilled foods being bad for you," he said. "That may have been a deterrent for a while. But I think that trend's over."

For those who wonder about the "authentic" flavor that may be missing with a gas grill, Bechler pointed out that the coals themselves actually have very little to do with the flavor.

"There's no such thing as a charcoal flavor," he explained. "The flavor comes from the hot charcoal bed in a way. As grease drips out of the food and hits the hot coals underneath, it smokes and that's where the flavor comes from."

"Just about everybody has a gas grill or is thinking about buying one."

- Ron Bechler

"A gas grill has the gas burner under a bed of rocks or a 'flavor bar'," he continued. "As the gas heats up either the lava rocks or the flavor bar, grease drips down from the food and smokes. The charcoal itself doesn't have any flavor. The grilled flavor comes from the smoke."

The attraction of gas grills is found in the convenience. You can light up a gas grill in five minutes. Charcoal can take anywhere from 20 minutes to one-half hour before the coals are ready to cook food.

"Just about the time you're finishing dinner, the coals are now perfect to cook on," Bechler said. "You should really wait until they're white all the way through, but people get impatient and rush it."

Another plus is the portability of gas grills.

"You can put a 20-pound tank on a cart and move it to any location in your yard," Bechler said.

There are a number of different models in different sizes. The price varies from $129 for a small gas grill to as much as $700 for a deluxe model.

Bechler estimated that the store fills about 200 tanks with propane each week — most of them on the weekends.

"We have an answering machine, and when we're closed we'll get 15 to 25 calls from people needing a refill," he said.

For those who like using different kinds of wood chips for different flavors, you can use the hickory or mesquite chips on gas grills as well.

Some models even come with a wood chip soaking container.

Another benefit for the backyard barbecuer is the ability to control the heat of the fire. A thermometer on the lid keeps the cook aware of the cooking temperature at all times.

"We even sell a grill that has a meat thermometer right in the grill," Bechler said. "You can roast a roast or slow cook a turkey. You just close the lid and control the cooking temperature just like you would in your oven."

The Michigan State University Cooperative Extension of Oakland County warns gas grill owners not to store a spare propane cylinder near or within the gas grill.

This creates a serious fire hazard. The problem is not limited to any particular make of grill or cylinder and does not involve a product defect.

When the grill is in use, the heat from the gas burners could significantly raise the temperature of the area underneath the burners. Normally, a safe temperature and pressure are maintained in the operating cylinder because of the flow of propane through the valve and components.

However, heat may cause the pressure inside the cylinder to increase and propane gas could escape from the safety valve into the area. The flame of the burners could ignite the propane, resulting in a fire.

The MSU Cooperative Extension offers the following safety practices for consumers:

- Immediately discontinue the storage of spare cylinders on or near a gas grill;
- Store propane cylinders outdoors and away from direct sunlight;
- Store in areas that are not used for recreation, especially away from areas where children play;
- Be sure the supplier does not overfill a propane gas cylinder;
- Whenever a cylinder is disconnected from the grill, always insert a safety plug into the outlet. These plugs are supplied with most gas grills or can be purchased from propane gas dealers.

Defoliators follow bloom and bust cycle

The infamous gypsy moth is a member of an ant insect group called hardwood defoliators because they eat the leaves of deciduous trees and shrubs.

Fortunately for the woody plants they feed on, weather, parasites and predators usually keep populations at tolerable levels most years.

When these natural controls fail, we see a population boom that lasts about three years, followed by a population crash that reduces insect numbers to non-destructive levels again.

Gary Smith, entomologist at Michigan State University, says the gypsy moth in Michigan hasn't settled into a regular boom and bust cycle because it was only recently introduced in Michigan—in 1972—and it is still increasing and spreading.

"It has now been trapped fairly consistently in all the counties of lower Michigan and some in the Upper Peninsula," Simmons reports. "Significant defoliation, mostly in forestlands, has occurred in about 10 to 15 counties. The gypsy moth is also causing problems in a few cities—including Midland and Harrison—and some recreational areas, where it's having a decided economic impact on outdoor recreation and tourism."

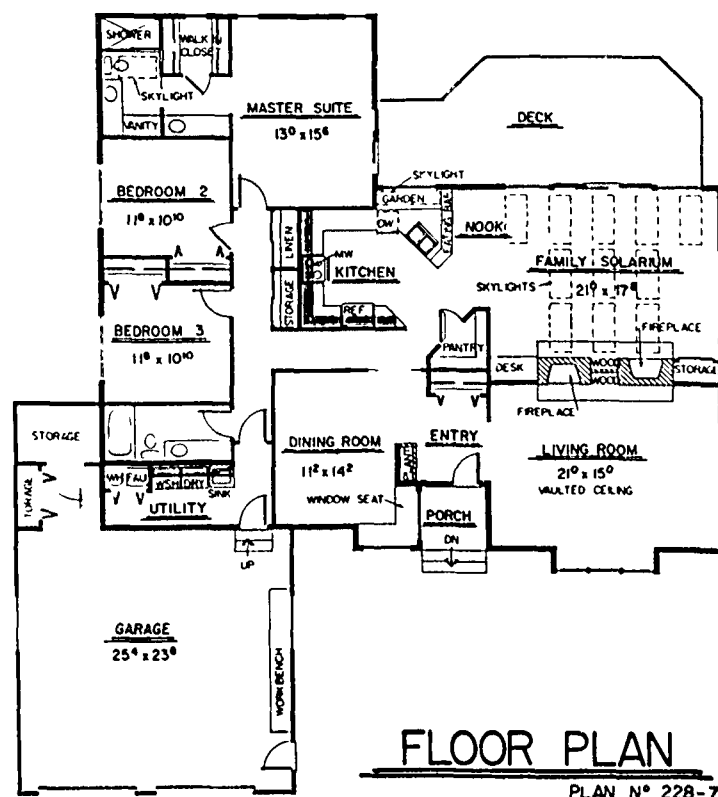

Though the gypsy moth is getting most of the media attention these days, it isn't the only forest and landscape defoliator in Michigan. The tents of the eastern tent caterpillar are a frequent sight in roadside trees in spring, and oak skeletonizers, red-humped oakworms, aspen leafrollers and other insects periodically strip the foliage from sizable tracts of forestlands.

"Fortunately, healthy trees can usually suffer major defoliation for one, two or even three years without suffering any lasting injury," Simmons says. "Trees in the landscape are often under stress from low soil fertility, compacted soil, drought, or attack by other insects or disease organisms, however, and homeowners may need to give trees some extra attention to keep them healthy or help them recover from defoliation."

Annual fertilization, regular watering during drought, proper pruning and thinning, and protection against mechanical injuries will help keep trees healthy and able to withstand occasional insect attack, he says.

Ranch offers three living areas in one

By James McAlexander

The Roosevelt 2 contains three distinct living environments.

The first realm a visitor enters is a formal public space. The front hall of the Roosevelt 2 divides a dining room and vaulted living room that are more or less separate from the rest of the house.

Inside that formal exterior is a relaxed area of space and light. A roof full of skylights rises above a large family room. Sliding glass doors open onto a back deck. The U-shaped kitchen serves across an eating bar directly into a nook off the large solarium.

The sleeping area is a third, very private space, with bedrooms placed along a hall at right angles to the family room. The master suite occupies the far corner of the house, and contains its own bath, vanity and walk-in closet. This room also features private access to the rear deck. Two smaller bedrooms, the mani bath and a utility room fill the rest of the hall, which exists into the garage.

The Roosevelt 2 contains ample storage and some classic amenities. Double width pocket doors close off the dining room from the kitchen hall, yet slide out of the way to permit easy passage. A corner window seat admits light from two directions, and extends the dining room's usable space for casual entertaining.

The living room and solarium share a double-width chimney with fireplace side by side. The fireplace wall includes wood boxes in both rooms, plus a built-in desk and bookshelves in the solarium. The kitchen has a large pantry closet and its own indoor herb garden under a skylight in the back wall.

For a study plan of the Roosevelt 2, (228-72), send $5 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307 CN, Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Sweet and sour flavor sparks skimpy summertime appetites

By Desiree Vivea

One of the flavored flavors of the Orient is the combination of sweet and sour. We don't know who first discovered this happy marriage of opposites, but whoever it was was either a culinary genius—or incredibly lucky.

The sweet comes from ingredients like honey, brown sugar, fruits, jams and preserves—while vinegar usually supplies the necessary sour counterpoint. Depending on the recipe, additional ingredients might include soy sauce, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, pineapple chunks, peeled tomato bits, onion, garlic, bell pepper, ginger and other seasonings. Add a bit of heat, if you like, with crushed red chili peppers, cayenne pepper or a dash of Tabasco.

Today's microwave adaptations offer a variety of pungent flavors. Serve Sweet and Sour Dipping Sauce with egg rolls, crisp-fried wonton skins, appetizer meatballs, barbecued chicken wings or other "dippables."

Sweet and Sour Bites is a great party favorite—bite-size frankfurter chunks, cooked in tangy sauce and speared with toothpicks. One of the easiest party dishes ever, and everyone likes them

Because sweet-and-sour fare is strongly flavored, it's best to plan on serving no more than one such dish per meal. The remainder of the meal should be milder in flavor, to provide a full balance of flavors to tempt the palate.

A bowl of steaming rice or noodles and a lightly seasoned vegetable dish would be appropriate to serve with Sweet and Sour Pork.

The savory flavor of sweet and sour isn't appreciated only in the Orient. Sweet and Sour Cabbage with Bacon and Apples is a Central European dish, pretty to look at and a wonderful accompaniment to a pork or sausage entree. Add microwave-baked potatoes with sour cream and the meal is complete.

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625-to700-watt microwave ovens.)

Microwave tip of the week

Honey crystallized and hardened? No problem. Remove metal lid from jar, or transfer honey from jar to microwave-safe measuring cup. Microwave, uncovered, on HIGH setting about one minute, or until honey looks clear. Let cool before returning to jar.

Sweet and Sour Dipping Sauce

1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup orange juice or pineapple juice
½ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon orange marmalade
1 tablespoon ketchup
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Dash Tabasco (optional)

Yields about 2/3 cup
Preparation time: 5 minutes
Cooking time: 2 to 4 minutes.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Place cornstarch in 2-cup glass microwave-safe measure. Add orange juice, a little at a time, to make smooth, runny paste, stirring constantly. Slowly blend in remaining orange juice, then blend in all remaining ingredients.

Cover loosely with waxed paper and microwave 2 to 4 minutes, stirring every minute, until mixture comes to a boil and thickens.

Serve warm as dipping sauce for egg rolls or other appetizers.

Sweet and Sour Pork

1½ pounds lean pork, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 tablespoons cornstarch

1 (13-ounce) can pineapple chunks with liquid
1 small bunch green onions, trimmed and sliced
1 small green pepper, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup light brown sugar, packed
¼ cup cider vinegar
3 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
Sesame seeds (optional)

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Preparation time: 10 to 15 minutes.
Cooking time: 35 to 40 minutes (plus 5 minutes standing time).
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power); LOW (30 percent power).
Place pork cubes in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Sprinkle with cornstarch and toss to coat. Add all remaining ingredients except sesame seeds.

Cover and microwave on HIGH setting 10 minutes; stir. Reduce power to LOW and microwave 25 to 30 minutes longer, stirring every 10 minutes, until pork is tender. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

Garnish with sesame seed, if desired, and serve over hot fluffy rice.

Sweet and Sour Bites

1 (10-ounce) jar red currant jelly
3 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon vinegar
Dash each ground ginger and ground black pepper

1 pound (about 10) frankfurters.

Yields about 60 appetizers.
Preparation time: 5 minutes.
Cooking time: 4 to 7 minutes.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Combine jelly, mustard, vinegar, ginger and pepper in 1½-quart microwave-safe casserole; stir. Microwave 1 to 2 minutes, or until jelly melts and can be stirred smooth.

Cut each frank diagonally into 6 pieces; fold into sauce mixture to coat each piece. Cover and microwave 3 to 5 minutes, or until franks are heated through, stirring twice.

Serve hot with toothpicks.

Removing old varnish is worth the effort

By Gene Gary

Q: We live in a very old home with oak woodwork. It is covered with a dark varnish that hides the beautiful wood grain.

Is there a reliable product, quick and easy to use, that will get the woodwork back to the natural grain?—M.O.S.

A: There are numerous strippers on the market today, but nothing will make this job really quick and easy. However, even if the process is messy and tedious, the removal of the dark varnish to expose the natural wood can be well worth the effort.

Using a heat gun can be effective, and perhaps not as messy as a commercial stripper. These hot air guns reach temperatures up to 1,000 F to soften the paint so that it is easier to scrape. However, the residue in the scrapings will still be messy.

There is a new product on the market, "Safest Stripper," recently introduced by the 3M Co. It is non-flammable, cleans up with water, won't burn or irritate the skin and emits no harmful fumes. It is mild enough that you need not wear protective gloves, although eye goggles are a good idea, and gloves protect nails and skin from scrapes.

A great advantage of this product for use on walls is that it is a semi-paste and will adhere to vertical surfaces without running. It also can be left on the surface for extended periods of time without drying out.

Removing paint or varnish is still a messy job and you should protect the area beneath the walls with several layers of newspaper.

"Safest Stripper" is available at hardware stores and home centers

Q: We have purchased a home where the previous owners painted over about two layers of wallpaper. This "painted" paper covers a very high ceiling and side walls. How can we remove it?—S.N.

A: The removal of certain types of wallpaper can be messy enough, but you have an additional problem with the paint covering.

If the painted paper cannot be stripped off in layers you may have to use a paint remover as a first step and then traditional wallpaper removal techniques as a second step. You might try the wallpaper removal technique first, as you may be able to remove both the paper and paint in one step.

To remove ordinary wallpaper that is not the strippable type, thoroughly wet the paper so that water goes through the outer surface and penetrates underneath to soften the paste used to hold the paper to the wall.

To aid in softening the paste, mix the water with a commercial wallpaper remover. Once the paste has been well softened, insert a putty knife under a wallpaper seam and carefully push it to separate the paper from the wall.

As you work, sometimes you are able to grab a piece of loose paper and pull off a big chunk.

You can rent a steamer to loosen the paper, but some experts feel that the water and wallpaper remover method is better. If you find the moisture won't penetrate both the paint and the paper to attack the glue beneath, you will have to use a paint stripper first.

Q: I plan to make some outdoor furniture and the plans state to use Danish oil as a wood finish. I will be using pressure-treated lumber.

Is Danish oil all that's necessary? Should I also use a wood sealant? I do not want to use any paint.—A.O.

A: Even pressure-treated lumber needs some additional protection to stand up well in the outdoor environment.

Exterior wood stains are an excellent way to protect wood from moisture, rot, mildew and other weather-related problems. Either solid or semi-transparent stain can be applied to pressure-treated wood that has seasoned for a few months.

Weathering diminishes the greenish cast of the lumber and opens the compressed surface so stain can penetrate.

It's best to apply a "breathing," clear-oil dressing or a water repellent to pressure-treated lumber right after it's installed. This will prevent cracking and discoloration during the seasoning period. After staining, apply a non-preserved sealer to all surfaces that people may touch.

July 6, 1989

It's been fun getting to know you. This year makes us a wee bit wiser about some of the things our readers like, don't like, and don't care much about.

Two years ago the staff at the Northville Record and Novi News launched an unscientific poll called Random Sample. Each week our reporters roam the streets in our communities, pick 10 unsuspecting residents, and ask them unique questions.

How else would we know that most area men prefer briefs (7 votes) over boxer shorts (2 votes), with one man saying he wears both — not at the same time, we presume.

We also found out that most residents like their hot chocolate with marshmallows, versus the naked-on-top version (7 preferred hot chocolate with marshmallows, 3 without). And an overwhelming majority of residents — 9-1 — are fond of Barbara Bush, according to Random Sample results.

Favorite ice cream flavors among readers include chocolate (5 votes), heavenly hash, French vanilla, lemon custard, butter pecan and mint chocolate. Popular summer foods are salad (2 votes), watermelon (2 votes), raspberries, pasta salad, tomatoes and corn on the cob.

Blue and gold runs deep in the veins of more residents than those with a tendency toward green and white, evident when we posed the query "Which team are you rooting for?" (No explanation was needed at the time). Six residents said University of Michigan while four pledged allegiance to Michigan State University. That U of M spirit resurfaced when we asked "Who do you think will win the Rose Bowl?" (5 said U of M, 3 said USC, 1 said "not Michigan," and 1 said "who's playing?")

While we're on the Wolverine kick, let's carry it a bit further. Most of those responding to the question "Did Bill Frieder make the right move at the right time?" said "No."

On Thanksgiving Day, more of you are likely to bite into a juicy tidbit of dark meat (5 votes) rather than white meat (4 votes), but a large percentage won't even touch that Christmas fruitcake.

We also know that a lot of our readers aren't fond of snow, didn't attend the Thanksgiving Day Parade in Detroit, don't do their Christmas shopping early, aren't afraid to fly in an airplane, didn't cheat on their income taxes, haven't read any good books lately, haven't attended a city council or school board meeting, and don't read supermarket tabloids.

Q: Have you ever bet on professional sports?

Seven said: "No"
Three said: "Yes"

"I'm Baptist and it goes against my religion — so I don't."
"The lottery, yes — that's my retirement program, but not pro sports."
"No more than a harmless office pool."
"I always lose."

Random Sample is an unscientific poll conducted by the staff of The Northville Record and The Novi News.

Volunteers

Gilbert welcomes visitors

By DOROTHY NASH

If you are a community resident and proud of it, as Beverly Gilbert is — and you like to meet people, as Beverly Gilbert does — why not join the Novi Ambassadors, the volunteer greeting group of which she is secretary?

When conventions or any organized groups come to one of the three hotels in the area, Novi Ambassadors are there during registration time to greet people and help familiarize them with the area.

"We wear black-and-white outfits," Gilbert said, "and we have our own greeting table," on which is an assortment of things to make delegates feel at home.

"We give them a map of the area," she said, plus lists of restaurants, available transportation, and interesting things to do.

And there's a fruit basket from which they may help themselves — candy, too, and a flower for each.

"We're there," Gilbert said, "to make people feel welcome."

They participate in "easily two events a month," she commented.

But it doesn't all just happen.

The program director contacts the hotels about groups coming to town, and when she has a date, she calls down the list of 27 members to find out who can be at the greeting table — morning, afternoon, or evening, whatever the time of registration.

The vice chairperson raises money to pay for the greeting table supplies by chairing an annual art auction. "An art auctioneer brings the art in," she said.

This year they participated in the Memorial Day parade: "We walked in our black-and-white outfits."

And at Christmas they had themselves a party.

Being a Novi Ambassador, as Gilbert puts it, "is a lot of fun, and from the response we get from the people, we know our service is appreciated."

If you think you might like to join, watch the paper for the next monthly meeting at the Novi Civic Center.

Local residents recognized for volunteering at the hospital included Carol Berner, Ann Gardner, Helen Gawlas, Joy Gloer, Audrey Hinchey, Dee Janick, Mildred Muma, Kenneth Noble, Betty Rigg, and Anne Wasilyco.

Presentations were made by Brian Connolly of Farmington Hills, hospital president.

Trip to Shaw Festival planned

Those looking for the perfect excuse to plan a summer get-away will have the chance to enjoy a special weekend in Canada Aug. 19-20.

Single Place, a support group for adult singles, will host a trip to the Shaw Festival on Saturday, Aug. 19 and Sunday, Aug. 20 to see two plays, "Trelawny of the Wells" and the musical "Good News."

The Shaw Festival consists of special productions of plays written during the life of George Bernard Shaw. The festival encompasses other plays written during his lifetime or within a span of about 100 years. The festival is held on Niagara-on-the-Lake in Ontario, Canada.

"Trelawny of the Wells" was written by Arthur Pinero and follows the life of Rose Trelawny, a dazzling young actress at the Wells Theater. Trelawny falls in love with a judge and leaves the theater, only to find that she wishes to return to the stage. She soon leaves the judge and returns to acting but finds that she is no longer wanted. Eventually the judge and actress reconnect and decide to get married. Her husband realizes his wife's love for the theater and offers her money to write and produce a play.

Diane Rockall and Barbara Louie wrote a walking tour book

"Good News" was written by L. Schwab and consists of a light musical about a football hero who is failing his exams and will not be able to play football. His fans and coaches decide to tutor him to improve his academic standing. The football player falls in love with his tutor and the play follows their love story.

Participants traveling with Single Place will also have a chance to dine at the Prince of Wales Hotel on Sunday, Aug. 20, for brunch. Travelers will be staying at the Brock University in St. Catherine's on Saturday night, Aug. 19.

Cost for the weekend is $105 and includes two theater tickets, lodging at Brock University, transportation by vans, breakfast at Brock University, and brunch at the Prince of Wales.

A $50 non-refundable deposit must be made to Single Place by Aug. 1. Registration forms are available at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville. The deposit checks must be made out to First Presbyterian Church Single Place and mailed with the registration form to: First Presbyterian Church, 200 E. Main, Northville, MI 48167.

For more information call the church office at 349-0911.

Local ladies pen walking tour book

Victorian homes, shady streets and friendly downtown shops are just a small part of Northville's unique atmosphere.

A newly-written book of walking tours provides residents and visitors a unique look at the community, taking walkers past the familiar sites of Northville into the more historic portions of the city.

Step by Step Through Northville, written by Barbara Louie and Diane Rockall, combines four areas of the city for do-it-yourself walking tours. Both ladies are local historians, of sorts. Louie works at the Novi Library and is writing a historical column for The Novi News. Rockall is coordinating an oral histories project in cooperation with the Northville Public Library. She and a handful of volunteers have interviewed several area residents and have recorded their observations on tape.

Photographs in the informative guide were shot by Samuel D. Popkin. The book contains maps, directions and photos of the buildings on the tours, including the following areas:

- Historic District. This tour winds through downtown Northville, past historic structures in the city, including the oldest remaining home.
- Bealtown. This tour guides walkers past the Ford Plant to the eastern boundary of the Northville Downs race track.
- Orchard Heights. This tour heads toward the outskirts of the city, taking walkers to Fish Hatchery Park, the site of the first federal hatchery in the country.

• Cabbagetown. Apparently named after the cabbages grown by farmers in the area, this tour carries walkers through "Cabbage Town," including the sites of Mill Race Historical Village and Parmenters Cider Mill.

Published by the Northville Historical Society, the book is available for $6 a copy at the following locations:

- Mill Race Historical Village Gift Shop, off Griswold Street.
- Atchison House Bed and Breakfast, on Dunlap and Linden streets.
- Painter's Place on Center Street.
- Northville Chamber of Commerce on Northville Road.

For more information call the Northville Historical Society at 348-1845.

Eagle Scouts

Two Northville students earn highest scout honor

By BRENDA DOOLEY

They spent their boyhoods exploring the world of scouting. "Roughing it" on camping trips, completing special projects and developing friendships were important parts of their scouting education.

And recently, Northville students Tom Ursel and Jason Stringer achieved the ultimate scouting honor by receiving Eagle Scout awards, the highest rank in the Boy-Scout program.

The scouts received their awards in a special Court of Honor ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church of Northville, conducted by Jim Lapham, their Scoutmaster.

Both scouts earned 21 merit badges and completed special Eagle Scout projects to receive their awards.

Ursel's project consisted of copying 720 computer discs — including 80 programs — for the Northville elementary schools. He prepared folders and labels for all discs, a project that encompassed 216 hours.

To earn his Eagle Scout, Stringer removed asphalt from a playground at Moraine School and resurfaced it with sand. He began planning the project with Northville Schools Assistant Superintendent Burton Knighton in April 1988 and received approval for the idea in July 1988. After spending 282 hours on the project, Stringer completed it in September 1988.

Ursel is the son of Darlene Ursel of Morgan Circle in Northville. He was a Cub Scout for three years and a Boy Scout for seven years before achieving Eagle Scout status.

"It's always been a goal of mine," Ursel said about receiving the honor. His favorite aspects of scouting, he said, were acquiring camping skills. He said scouting has helped him become a better person.

Ursel's hobbies including playing soccer and tennis. He also is involved in the youth club at the First United Methodist Church of Northville.

Stringer is the son of Lynn and Pat Stringer of Lexington Boulevard in Northville. He also began the scouting program as a Cub Scout, when his mom served as a den chief. He's been a Boy Scout for six years.

The most important lessons he learned from scouting were developing leadership skills, Stringer said.

His hobbies include swimming and playing football. He is also a member of the Northville High School Student Congress and is involved with Students Against Drunk Driving. Stringer recently participated in the Boys State Program at Michigan State University.

Both students will begin their senior year of high school in the fall.

"Scouting is fun," Stringer said.

Delving deeper into our file of notable facts, we also discovered that most residents did observe last year's alternate-day sprinkling bans, like the way they look in a bathing suit, believe the U.S. should ban the import of assault weapons, think it should be illegal to burn the flag, enjoy the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue (for the in-depth articles, right?), and favor laws prohibiting pit bull dogs.

We also learned that most residents packed their winter clothes away in early May and had played golf before the summer golfing season officially began.

No majority was recorded on the questions "Should Ollie North go to jail?" "Can the Lions win more games than they lose?" and "Do you think the Detroit Grand Prix should be moved to Belle Isle?" Each of these questions resulted in a 5-5 vote.

These are important questions because they've allowed us to learn a little more about the things that make you tick.

There's a lot more to learn... more questions to ask, more pavement to pound. Get ready, you may be the next unsuspecting resident.

Use common sense when buying antiques

By AMY ROSA

Have you ever wondered what is involved in picking up the antiques trade? Have you ever thought about beginning a "collectible" hobby or becoming well versed in the dating and placing of various antiques?

Well, look no further than your nearest antique store and library. For while there are no hard-and-fast rules to learning the antiques trade, whether for profit or as a pastime, beginners can get pointers from antique dealers, literature, and just plain old browsing through shops.

"You either love 'em or you hate 'em," said Northville's Helen Meisel, who owns Helen Meisel Antiques on Center Street. She said anyone interested in picking up the trade just has to do it, beginning with attending auctions and antique shows.

An antique by definition is a relic from a former period. But does that make a 1970s coffee pot an antique?

According to the United States Customs, an antique is defined as anything over 100 years old. Hence any items purchased abroad falling into this category are not subject to any duties when imported to the U.S.

That may be where some people get the misnomer that something isn't antique until it's a century old. But that definition isn't always applicable, said Meisel. "A piece of glass that's 80 years old is nothing to sneeze at," she said.

Meisel, who said she grew up with antiques and has operated her own store here since 1967, said countless items that are not 100 years old are very valuable and seen as collectibles by individuals.

Deco-style articles from the 1920s and 1930s, including cookware, kitchen furnishings, and clothes are popular, as are any kind of objects people might want to collect from all different eras. In her store she often sees people looking for a very specific item, such as white iron stone china dated 1840-60, which Meisel herself collects.

Trends in antiques can often be noted through periodicals, such as "Antiques and Arts Weekly," "Antique Trader," and "Travel-Holiday," among others. A book titled "Kovels' Collectors' Source Book," by Ralph and Terry Kovel, is a useful directory to antiques, collectibles, auction houses and mail-order businesses.

Record/CHRIS BOYD

And of course antique dealers always know the latest trends. Meisel said the bottom has all but fallen out of the china and patterned-glass markets, but there are still some faithful collectors seeking to complete patterns. Also, she said, 1950s items are becoming very collectible, although they are a far cry from being considered antique.

What do people collect? "You name it, they collect it," said Meisel, citing baby clothes, spoons, milk bottle caps, buttons, cookie jars, and lunch boxes. Toys are also in demand, she said, noting that a miniature turn-of-the-century Penny Toy from Germany recently sold in her shop for over $100.

How do you know if you're getting a good buy or not? Most advice suggests that you research and know for what you're looking. Don't be fooled by the seller who claims a table to be antique when it is actually made of particle board and stamped "made in Taiwan." Education and common sense are key.

For more knowledge on the subject, check into courses and seminars given by local community colleges and the like.

Dearborn's Henry Ford Museum offers several one-time classes in the summer and fall. An upcoming class titled "Care and Restoration of Antique Furnishings" covers what antiques should be restored and when, plus various stain recipes. That class is held from 7-10 p.m. Aug. 3 and costs $7. To register and for more information on other Henry Ford Museum classes call 271-1620.

Jansen grabs gold at Senior Olympics

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

Every few days, Northville's Emily Jansen has to pinch herself, to see if she's dreaming.

Did it really happen?

Yes, Jansen did go to the U.S. National Senior Olympics last month in St. Louis with the Canton Senior Sluggers, and yes, she returned to Michigan with a gold medal. For Jansen, 69, it was the thrill of a lifetime.

"It's unbelievable," she said. "Sometimes I can't believe it happened."

The Sluggers slow-pitch softball squad featured 14 players — mostly from the metropolitan-Detroit area — and ranged in age from 55 to 73. It was the only women's softball team from Michigan to compete in the Senior Olympics, and Jansen was the only team member from Northville. The squad was organized specifically for competition in the June 19-24 event, and right from the start, Jansen knew the potential was there.

"I always thought we had a good team," she said. "Just in practice, I could see we had some very good players."

The Sluggers were part of the 179-member Michigan contingent. The double-elimination softball competition was held at Forest Park on the campus of Washington University.

"We had a big group from Michigan and it was a beautiful sight to see so many seniors, at all different ages, competing and staying active," Jansen said. "I know I'm like everybody else — I have a drive to keep active because I don't want to grow old."

Winning the gold medal didn't take very long, but it wasn't easy. The Canton Senior Sluggers cruised to three straight victories by outscoring their opponents 57-31, but two of the three were come-from-behind wins. In game one, the Sluggers fell behind early but rebounded to register a 23-13 triumph. Game two was a relatively easy 14-8 win but the third contest was another struggle — at least in the early going. Down 10-5 midway through the game, the Sluggers turned on the afterburners and ran away with a 20-10 victory, to secure the gold.

"Winning the gold was such a thrill," Jansen said. "We went out there to win it, but it was still a shock when we did it. It was a marvelous five-days — one of the highlights of my life."

"The fact that we didn't lose any games made it even more special. It was like the Pistons... we made it a sweep."

Jansen was a key contributor in the championship run from her starting position in right field. She was a threat at the plate, but also an important figure on defense.

"I like running, and when I'm in the outfield, I feel good about running for fly balls," she explained. "I feel like I can get to them."

When the team returned to Michigan, a welcoming party was waiting at the airport to honor the gold medalists. The group included Jansen's daughter, Micki Lankes (also of Northville), and several grandkids.

"We met the team at the airport, and we brought balloons and signs," Lankes recalled. "She was thrilled to death."

Jansen admitted the whole episode brought tears to her eyes.

"I felt like a celebrity," she said.

The medals were presented to the team during a ceremony following the third-game clincher. Jansen already had plans to frame the medal and put it on the wall with the rest of her Senior Olympic awards.

"I have a special frame to put it in," she said.

Actually, Jansen has other Senior Olympic gold medals, but they are from Michigan competitions. The softball medal was her first national award.

"My mother is very active — she puts me to shame," Lankes laughed. "I hope I've inherited some of her genes. She plays softball with me in the Northville Women's Softball League, she plays on three senior volleyball teams, and she works out three times a week at a health club."

Jansen, who's lived in Northville for four years, tries to keep active all year round.

"I'm always into sports," she said. "The way I figure it, I'm on vacation for the rest of my life."

"I enjoy playing and just being alive. Win or lose, it's still a lot of fun."

Northville skid reaches 12

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

When Northville pitchers gave up first-pitch home runs in both ends of a twinbill against South Farmington on July 8, it was a precursor of bad things to come.

The local Connie Mack squad ended up dropping both games, 13-0 and 8-4 — its 11th and 12th losses in a row. With just seven regular-season games remaining, Northville is still looking for that elusive first win.

In the opener against South Farmington, Northville coach Bob Kehoe had only nine players available. It would have been eight if it wasn't for Aaron Hodgkin, who moved up from the Northville Mickey Mantle squad when that team folded.

"Because we had only nine players, we had several guys playing out of position," Kehoe said. "Surprisingly, we didn't have a bad defensive game. Steve Bastian made two very fine over-the-shoulder catches in center field, and he's normally an infielder."

Dave Best was the starter, and he lasted four innings. Bastian relieved him, but by then the damage was done. Hodgkin — in his first game — was the only Northville player with two hits. He took over defensive duties at first base in place of Darren

Kehoe, who has a badly sprained ankle and is probably out for the season.

The nightcap was much more competitive, but the outcome was the same. Starter Tim Hubbert fell behind early after giving up a leadoff homer, but he settled down and pitched pretty well the rest of the way.

With South Farmington in front 8-2 after six innings, Northville rallied for two runs and threatened more with two outs, but Best was nailed at the plate, trying to score from second on a hit by Bastian.

"I take the blame for snuffing out the rally," Kehoe said. "I was coaching third, and I sent Best in to score, and he was called out at the plate on a close play. It was a bad move on my part."

Northville's hitting attack picked up in game two, and again Hodgkin led the way with two hits.

WESTLAND 11, NORTHVILLE 0: The worst game last week came in a shutout against Westland 2 on July 5.

"I didn't have either of our top pitchers — Best or Hubbert — so I had to go with a makeshift pitching staff," Kehoe said. "It's rather difficult to win without your regular pitchers, and at the same time our offense wasn't powerful and our defense was horrible."

The starting pitcher was Mike Padden, Northville's regular catcher. He gave up five early runs and lasted two innings before making way for Phil Seidler, an outfielder. Starting shortstop Joe Kaley pitched the final three innings.

It was the kind of game Kehoe would like to forget as soon as possible because nothing went right. For example, two runners were picked off first base and a third was tagged out when he overran second.

HURON VALLEY 13, NORTHVILLE 3: It may sound like a contradiction, but this mercy-rule-shortened game on July 6 may have been the highlight of the week for the locals.

"The boys played a strong game," Kehoe said. "With the double-header coming up on Saturday, I pitched Best the first three innings and Hubbert the next three."

"Unlike the game against Westland, we played a good defensive game, and our bats came alive a little bit."

Brian Frellick led off the game with a double, moved to third on a hit by Kaley and later scored to give Northville an early lead. Huron Valley rallied for five runs in the next three innings but the locals kept it close with two more in the third on hits by Kehoe and Padden and a walk to Best.

Darren Kehoe (4) slides into second base earlier this season

But in the final three innings, Huron Valley continued to hit the ball well and finally shut down the Northville hitting attack. When the lead reached 10 runs in the sixth, it was stopped.

"I told the boys afterwards that they should be proud they hung in there as long as they did," Kehoe said. "I told them not to forget that many of the players on the Huron Valley team were on Milford's high school team, and they made it all the way to the Class A State Finals."

Brooklane professional John Koch demonstrates his video teaching system

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Golf pro uses video as a teaching tool

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

Every week this summer, the Northville Record and Novi News will be offering a new feature dealing with the local golf scene, courses, and participants.

Golf professionals usually agree that the biggest problem when it comes to teaching the golf swing is singling out errors with the naked eye and making the proper corrections.

How can a person be expected to spot a bad habit when the motion of the swing happens so fast? Most of the glaring mistakes are easy to see, but what about the minor ones?

Well, John Koch, the head pro at Brooklane Golf Club in Northville, has tackled this problem head on with $11,000 worth of video equipment — and he believes it was money well spent.

Koch is one of the first professionals in the state to employ such a sophisticated video system for teaching and believes he's the only pro in the area using the "Quixote Computer Program." The system is designed specifically for golf but requires a variety of equipment such as a television, two digital VCRs, and a video camera, in addition to the computer and program.

"I've got a lot of money wrapped up in this," he said. "I spent $70 on wires alone."

Koch has his primitive "studio" in an isolated room off the clubhouse, and it's complete with a driving-range mat and nets along the walls. The backdrop is nothing more than plotted squares 18 inches apart, but it serves a very important function: to help line students up properly and to analyze their swings.

"Everything is plotted square," he said. "The hardest thing about teaching the swing is that you need to be in a controlled environment, and that's what this provides. The camera and the backdrop never move, so we can really analyze a lot of things: if the head is moving, if the weight is behind the ball, or if the arms are in the correct position."

While the students practice hitting the balls, Koch is busy videotaping

Mental training program comes to area

Summer camps for athletes abound. You can master a left-handed hook shot at any number of basketball clinics, or perfect a centering pass from the left wing at several soccer camps. The same type of program is available for almost any sport.

But one important aspect of sports has remained untouched: the mental game.

That will change this summer, when a pair of noted sports psychologists conduct a series of workshops called "a mental training program for dedicated athletes and coaches" at Schoolcraft College.

The first of the workshops started back on June 24 and was for coaches. There will be a second coaches' workshop Aug. 5 (same times). Cost for the one-day coaches' clinic is $125, which includes workbooks, beverage breaks and lunch.

The first of the athletes' two-day workshops was July 8 and 15, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. each day; the second is Aug. 12 and 19 (same times). There will also be two four-day workshops, 6-10 p.m. July 10, 12, 17, and 19, and July 25, 27, Aug. 1, and 3. Cost for the athletes' workshops is $195, which includes workbooks and beverage breaks (two day clinics include lunch).

The object of the workshops is simple. As Terry Mills, the director of the Competitive Performance Center (a workshop sponsor), explained: "Most athletes spend 75 to 80 percent of their training time preparing physically. But if you ask them what's more important, they'll say their sport is 90 percent mental."

"We just want to balance the scales a bit between mental and physical training."

Both Mills, who has a master's degree in sports psychology, and Northville resident Hugh Bray, who has a doctorate in Psychology, are well qualified for such a program. Bray has served as the Detroit Red Wings team psychologist for the past four seasons; prior to that, he had a similar position with the St. Louis Blues for 2½ years.

"This is probably the wave of the future," said Bray. "We may be a little ahead of time with it, but I think you're going to see a lot more camps dealing with the mental end of sports (for youths)."

Not that Bray and Mills are breaking new ground. As they pointed out, the United States is lagging far behind other countries — particularly in the Eastern bloc — in mental training for athletes. "Even Canada is ahead of us," noted Bray.

Bray added that some pro hockey teams, like the Red Wings, have sports psychologists on staff. But teaching techniques on how to mentally approach a sport have not been available to the young, aspiring athletes before.

"It's a logical way to go, because it's already been accepted by the pros," said Mills. "So amateurs should accept it."

- Self-talk, in which an athlete learns how to correctly evaluate his performance.
- Visualization, or envisioning success.
- Relaxing ("A relaxed athlete has to work far less than an intense athlete," said Bray).
- Goal setting, or how to set proper goals for yourself.
- Self confidence, which is positive thinking but with consideration of reality.
- Pre-game preparation.
- Concentration, both improving it and knowing when and how to turn it up a notch.
- After-the-game evaluation ("Most athletes evaluate performance, but on a win-or-lose basis," said Mills.)

Many of the skills and techniques taught by Bray and Mills originate with the most successful of pros. "Most of the above-average athletes do many of these things intuitively," said Bray. "What we do is break down what they do to be successful."

Bray noted that they will not set goals for athletes, but will teach them how to set them. "There should be an A, B, C, D approach to setting goals, so you're going one step at a time and not trying to skip from A to Z," said Mills.

Bray added, "The focus of self-evaluation is on the process, instead of the end result." Which means that, if sights are properly set, winning or losing becomes secondary to goal accomplishment.

The whole idea is to enhance performance with the proper mental attitude. "This isn't hocus-pocus stuff," said Mills. "It's a scientific approach."

Entry forms and information on the workshops is available at Schoolcraft College's athletic department, or by calling the Competitive Performance Center a 349-7274.

Tickets are available by calling the ALS of Michigan at 352-3070. Tickets for the outing are $150 per player and $600 per foursome. Proceeds from the event provide support services for patients with ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

The event ticket includes 18 holes of golf, course refreshments, a steak dinner, and a celebrity auction. Former Detroit Lion great Lem Barney has been named the honorary chairperson of this year's event.

Holzer pitcher Craig Bowman prepares to fire toward home plate

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Tom Holzer Ford falls to 2-17 with twinbill defeat

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

It was only fitting that such a strange game would end on a bizarre play.

Trailing by a run in the last inning, Tom Holzer Ford — Northville's entry in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League (LCBL) — was poised to win its third game in four tries with a runner on third and only one out. But an unorthodox double play, including the game-ending out at home plate, stopped Holzer's comeback bid in its tracks and gave Walter's Appliance an 8-7 victory. A 10-2 win in game one gave Walter's the doubleheader sweep on July 8.

"It was certainly a strange game," Holzer Coach John Osborne said. "The lead went back and forth, but we had one of our disastrous innings and it ended up costing us the win."

With Walter's ahead 2-0, Holzer scored a run in the second on a Chris Williams RBI and then took the lead with two more in the third. Steve Ross doubled, advanced to third on an infield hit by Rob Baumgartel, and then scored on a ground-out. An error by Walter's enabled the second run to cross the plate.

The lead was short-lived, however. In the fourth, a two-out error by shortstop Eric Regnier opened the floodgates, and Walter's went on to score six times on four straight hits and a walk.

"All the runs came after the error — it should have been the third out of the inning," Osborne said.

A Tom Skynar triple and three consecutive walks spurred the Holzer comeback in the sixth, and then it continued in the seventh. Regnier led off with a triple, and after a walk to Derek Osborne, he scored on a single by Skynar. A pair of walks and a passed ball with the bases loaded allowed three more runs to score, and suddenly it was 8-7 with only one out.

"I definitely thought we had them on the ropes," Osborne admitted. "We forced a pitching change and it looked like we were going to win the game."

But it wasn't to be. The next batter, Ross, struck out on a pitch low and in the dirt, but when the ball got past the catcher, he took off to first base. As the catcher retrieved the ball and threw to first, Williams sprinted from third and tried to score the tying run. In a flash, Ross was thrown out at first and Williams was then tagged out at home on a close play to end the game.

"The gamble didn't pay off," Osborne said.

Todd Griggers started for Holzer, went the first five innings, and was saddled with the loss. Craig Bowman relieved him in the sixth. Offensively, Ross (two hits and a walk) and Skynar (two hits) paced the attack.

In the opener, Walter's tagged starter Rob Moore for four runs in the first inning and then cruised from there to a 10-2 victory. After the slow start, Moore settled down and held Walter's scoreless for the next four innings, and his teammates squeezed a run across the plate in the fifth on hits by Ross and John Frazzini.

But another bad inning ended all the suspense. Walter's scored six runs on four hits and two walks in the bottom of the inning to chase Moore. Jeff Kot got the final two outs, but the lead was now 10-1. Holzer scored once more in the seventh on an RBI hit by Regnier to provide the final score.

"When it was 4-1, we were not without our chances," Osborne said. "We stranded runners on third base in the first, second, and fourth innings. As a matter of fact, we left runners on base in every inning except the sixth. It was a matter of not being able to get that key hit when we need it."

Ross led the team again with two hits.

TOM HOLZER FORD 7, WENDY'S 0: Holzer notched its second victory in a row on July 8, but didn't actually play the game.

There was a site change for the contest and apparently the word never got to the Wendy's team, because they never showed up. As a result, Holzer was credited with a forfeit victory.

"One of my players went to the wrong field and so did six Wendy's players," Osborne said. "Obviously, there was a problem getting the word out about the site change."

With only a couple more weeks of regular season action, Holzer has a 2-17 overall mark.

with a camera that breaks down the motion into 160 frames per second. With the help of the computer program, he can play back the swing and analyze everything from the address to the follow-through with special graphic lines he can plot on the screen. He can stop the tape at any time as well.

"I can show a person that their head is out of position and they can see it graphically," he said. "With the naked eye, the swing is a blur. But with the video equipment, I can use the super-slow motion, break it down, and see it clearly."

The big advantage is that there's no guesswork. If you're not staying behind the ball, Koch can draw lines on the screen showing you just that.

"The naked eye can see errors, but it can't relate them to the ball," Koch explained. "The lines on the backdrop and on the screen can plot it and show exactly what the problem is. I firmly believe you can teach better by giving your students a visual picture rather than just a mental picture."

Koch also shows tapes of professionals on the PGA Tour and analyzes what they are doing correct. He can then relate certain common denominators to his students.

Beat the heat while keeping active

The balmy days of summer encourage us all to start on an exercise program, or to stay on a program already started. But when the weather turns hot and humid, even athletes at the peak of condition should take precautions.

That's when heat stroke or heat exhaustion — a medical condition called hyperthermia — can strike, regardless of age or physical condition, warns Dr. Larry J. Sell, senior vice president for Health Care Affairs at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan.

Here are some tips Sell suggests you follow when exercising during heat spells:

- Exercise during the morning or evening hours.
- Wear a hat because as much as 30 percent of body heat is absorbed through the head. Cotton clothing is best because it absorbs water and helps cool the body. Loose clothing lets air flow through.
- Before exercising, drink at least a pint of water, even if you're not thirsty. Drink more as you exercise. Cold water is easier to drink and helps bring body temperature down.

During the hot weather, sweat glands secrete moisture that evaporates from the skin and cools it. Most people can maintain normal

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Summer heat drove this threesome to Novi's Lakeshore Park for relief temperature in the face of very hot external temperatures. But sometimes the regulatory system of the body simply doesn't work and body temperature rises out of control, causing hyperthermia. When body temperature rises to 105 degrees, a true medical emergency exists, and immediate professional medical attention is required.

These are warning symptoms of hyperthermia to look for, according to Sell:

- Hot, dry, flushed skin, but no sweating.
- Agitation, confusion, seizures.
- Faintness, dizziness, lethargy, or coma.
- Headache, nausea.
- Rapid pulse and heartbeat.
- Slow, deep breathing if the victim is still; rapid, shallow breathing if the victim is moving about.

If any of these symptoms appear, a doctor should be called immediately since not all victims will have all the symptoms.

Those who haven't been exercising regularly shouldn't start on hot, humid days, Sell said. Even those with a good training base should proceed slowly during a heat wave or when the weather suddenly goes from warm to hot.

Seniors — and those with chronic diseases, particularly heart ailments — or persons on drugs that reduce the ability to sweat, such as diuretics, should not exercise when it's very hot.

Pay attention to body signs during hot, humid weather, Sell suggests. When you experience discomfort — stop. Otherwise, regular exercise in the summer, done moderately, can contribute to physical and emotional good health.

Fitness Tips

Link established between heart disease, diet

By SYLVA DVORAK

It has not been so long since scientists first discovered that Eskimos and Japanese fishing villagers and farmers have virtually no heart disease.

The reason for this lies in their daily diet. These people have only one thing in common: they both consume 90 to 319 pounds of fish per year.

Researchers found that fish and other marine life contain highly unsaturated Omega-3 oil, which may protect us against heart disease in three major ways.

First, Omega-3 fatty acids in the diet may lower total blood cholesterol and change the levels of high-density lipoproteins (HDL) and low-density lipoproteins (LDL) in the blood. The low-density lipoprotein cholesterol is decreased. This decrease is a good sign because high LDL levels are associated with a buildup of fat on artery walls. The other cholesterol component, HDL cholesterol, may be increased on an Omega-3 rich diet. The HDL cholesterol has been called the good cholesterol because it removes cholesterol from blood vessel walls.

Second, Omega-3 oil decreases the total triglyceride levels in the blood. Triglycerides are the most common form of fat in the body and have been implicated in the development of heart disease.

Third, Omega-3 oil alters platelet function. Platelets are important clotting agents in the blood. They make blood less "sticky" or less likely to clump. This anti-clumping function is important because more fluid is less likely to clot, which may prevent a stroke or heart attack.

Now that you know the benefits of eating fish rich in fat, Omega-3 fatty acids, how much and what kind of fish should you eat? Even though more Americans are becoming "health conscious," according to the Department of Agriculture, we still only eat approximately 14.5 pounds of fish per person per year. (Compare this to 144.5 pounds of red meat and 69.7 pounds of poultry.)

The nutrient composition of fish may vary within a species as well among different species. The highest in Omega-3 oil is Chinook Salmon which contains approximately 3.6 grams per 4-ounce serving. On the lower side is haddock, cod, northern pike, tuna in water, and clam, which contain about .2 grams per 4-ounce serving.

What about taking fish oil supplements? All the evidence on taking supplements is not in yet. Omega-3 capsules are being used in experimental studies under the guidance of medical specialists. The appropriate dose has not been determined, and scientists do not recommend that supplements replace good eating habits. Cod liver oil is a good source of Omega-3 fatty acids. However, excessive amounts can be dangerous. (Cod liver oil contains vitamins A and D. These are fat-soluble vitamins which are toxic in large doses.)

Selecting, Storing and Cooking Fish:

- The odor should be mild and subtle rather than "fishy."
- Look for translucent flesh that is consistent in brightness and color, with tight scales and red or pink gills.
- Live lobster or crabs should be lively, not sluggish.
- If lobster or crab is cooked in the shell, the shell should be red and the meat white with a red tint.
- Shrimps and scallops should be firm with a sweet, mild odor.
- Clams, mussels, and oysters in the shell should be alive. You can tell if you tap them and they are tightly closed. If you buy them shucked (out of the shell), the meat should be plump and covered with a clear juice.
- Frozen fish should have been flash-frozen at sea.

Storing:

- Fresh fish should be wrapped in an airtight package and kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator.
- Eat fresh fish within two days.
- Frozen fish should last many months in your freezer.

Cooking:

• It's best to broil, bake, poach, or steam fish. Frying, breading, and using heavy sauces adds calories and cholesterol to fish.

• Don't overcook. Fish is naturally tender.

• A good rule to remember is to cook it for 10 minutes per inch of thickness. (For example, if salmon steak is ¾ inch thick, broil it for 7½ minutes.)

• Test with a fork. Make sure it is thoroughly cooked and no longer shiny.

• Don't thoroughly thaw fish before cooking; cooking it just before being totally thawed will make it more moist.

• Rubbing your hands with lemon juice will help remove odors.

• Eating more fish can't hurt. But, as with any food, moderation and variety are important. Vary the type of fish you eat: eat fish at least two to three times a week, and keep portion sizes at about three to four ounces. The many benefits of fish rich in Omega-3 fatty acids makes it very good for you, so make it a choice on your weekly menu.

The Open queen

Neumann feels reign strain

By Marty Budner
staff writer

LISELOTTE NEUMANN is finding out that life at the top is not always easy.

The 23-year-old Swede registered record rounds on her way to the 1988 U.S. Women's Open Championship at the Baltimore Country Club. She admits her year-long reign as queen of women's golf is more of a strain than she anticipated.

Indeed, there will be some pressure if she hopes to become the first woman to win consecutive Open championships since Hollis Stacy performed the arduous double in 1977 and 1978. There have been four back-to-back winners in the 43 prior Opens, and Neumann would like nothing better than to be the fifth in the 44th championship, slated for July 13-16 at the Indianwood Golf and Country Club in Lake Orion.

"I've been putting too much pressure on myself after having a great year last year," she recently confessed. "I probably put more pressure on myself than what others put on me."

That self-induced pressure may partly explain the inconsistency of her 1989 season.

Although she has won more than $86,000 this year, Neumann has placed among the top 10 finishers in only five of her first 14 tour stops.

Liselotte Neumann
1988 U.S. Open champ

NEUMANN'S BEST finish thus far was a tie for second two months ago at the Crestar Classic in Virginia. In her four June tour stops, she tied for 38th (McDonald's Championship), tied for third (Lady Keystone Open), tied for 28th (Rochester International) and missed the cut (LPGA Corning Classic).

It has been a struggle for the blonde-haired Swede who grew up dreaming about a British Open championship.

"When I was growing up it was always the British Open everyone talked about winning — not the U.S. Open," said Neumann. "I did get a lot of attention (in Sweden) for winning the U.S. Open."

"I spent a lot of time on the golf course when I was growing up. We had a nine-hole golf course — it's 12 holes now — right in our back yard and my father got us into golfing," she said. "Golf is really picking up in that country."

But instead of the British Open crown, that finely honed golfing background brought her the U.S. Open trophy she covets.

Last year's tournament at the Baltimore Country Club included a record 735 golfers hoping to land an Open berth. And Neumann managed to beat them all with her history-setting score of 277, which broke the old mark of 279 set by Pat Bradley in 1981.

NEUMANN NEVER trailed as she shot rounds of 67, 72, 69 and 69 — seven under par.

Neumann nervously opened her final round, scoring a double-bogey on the seventh hole. She gained her composure and tallied birdies on five of the final nine holes to muster her record 277.

It will take a lot of that same type of stamina and concentration to log similar scores at Indianwood — a par-71 course (35-36) some 6,123 yards long. Neumann is hoping to recapture some of last year's magic.

Profile

LISELOTTE NEUMANN

AMATEUR: Neumann established a notable amateur career in Europe. She was the Swedish Amateur champion in 1982 and 1983, Swedish Match Play champion in 1983 and represented Sweden in the European Team Championship in 1984 and the World Team Championship in 1982 and 1984.

PROFESSIONAL: Last year, Neumann, a native of Sweden, led an impressive group of rookies in earnings and claimed the prestigious 1988 Gatorade Rookie of the Year Award. Of her 22 tournament starts, Neumann earned $188,729. The highlight of her rookie season was her victory at the U.S. Women's Open to become the 12th LPGA member to claim the U.S. Women's Open as her first LPGA victory. In addition, she became one of nine Rolex First-Time Winners in 1988. The following month, Neumann posted a 66 in the final round of the Nestle World Championship to win runner-up honors. Entering the final official event of the 1988 season, the Mazda Japan Classic, Neumann was $7,846 behind Laura Davies in earnings for the rookie race.

Neumann lost on the third playoff hole to Patty Sheehan to finish second. Her strong showing carried her past Laura Davies in season earnings to capture the Gatorade Rookie of the Year Award.

Women's golf on the upswing

By Bill Parker

staff writer

WOMEN'S GOLF has come a long way in recent years. Just ask Margie Masters, head pro at the Royal Oak Driving Range.

Masters competed on the women's tour for 20 years back in the 1960s and 70s. Her best year was 1969 when she won the Lake Waco Classic in Waco, Texas. She pocketed $1,700 for winning the tournament.

"The money the ladies make today is tremendous, compared to what we used to play for," said Masters. "Now, it's entirely possible for someone to make a half-million dollars. Women's golf has really boomed. There are a lot of college girls coming up that are great golfers and they're playing for big purses now."

"I was on the tour for 20 years and we used to all play for $400,000 on the entire tour," continued Masters. "Now $400,000 is an average purse for just one tournament."

THE 1989 United States Golf Association (USGA) Women's Open, July 13-16 at Indianwood Country Club in Lake Orion, is one of those big money tournaments. Participants will split a whopping $450,000, with the champion alone claiming a cool $80,000.

But the Open, celebrating its 44th birthday this year, hasn't always been such a big event.

The USGA became the sponsor of the Women's Open in 1953. There were 37 entries in that tournament and the total purse was a mere $7,500.

By 1965, television had picked up on the tournament and aired the final round nationally. The TV exposure was a huge shot in the arm. The purse for the 1965 tournament, held at the Atlantic City Country Club in New Jersey, had climbed to $17,780 and the entry list had grown to 84.

The tournament continued to prosper at a steady rate. By 1976 better than 200 golfers participated in the Open, while in 1978 there were 297 entries and the tournament featured its first ever $100,000 purse.

"Throughout the 60s the purses ranged from $50,000 to $75,000," explained Betty Richart, Chairman of the USGA Women's Committee. "In '78 we had our first ever $100,000 purse for women and it has been steadily climbing ever since."

Last year, the Open drew 736 entries. First place paid $70,000 while 60th place paid $1,736, still more than Masters earned for her Women's tour victory in 1969.

SO WHAT'S the reason for this increase in the popularity of women's golf?

"The equipment is better, the balls are better, the golfers are better. Everything is just better," explained Masters. "Even the teaching is better. Everything is just a little more advanced."

"Another thing that attracts the crowds is that there are some great golfers out there and some of them are very pretty girls," Masters added. "People want to come out and see if the pretty girls can play golf. And let me tell you, they can."

Richart had other thoughts on the advancement of the game. "I think the key to the whole thing is the development of the junior golf programs," she explained. "Girls start playing golf in the junior programs and enter high school with a pretty good background on the game. In high school, they can earn a college scholarship and by the time they get out of college they are very good golfers looking for a career in the game."

"The key is in the junior programs," Richart continued. "There is no other way women's golf could have grown like it has without the junior programs."

THE FUTURE also appears bright for women's golf as more and more women become involved in the game.

The Public Links Championship, held the last week in June in Spokane, Washington, drew 1,052 entries in each of the last two years while this year's Women's Amateur drew another 457 golfers.

Playing it straight is the way to finish 1st

A word of caution for all United State Women's Open contestants — don't get greedy. Accept what the Scottish link-style course provides and don't ask for anything more.

The 44th U.S. Women's Open Championship, which begins July 13 at Indianwood Golf and Country Club in Lake Orion, will be a test of accuracy and patience for all competitors, according to Indianwood's club professional Dave Zink.

"It will be an absolute must they keep every shot in play," said Zink, a Rochester native. "The golf course is in the best shape I have seen it in my nine years here."

The 6,123-yard, par 71 design features four tantalizing par threes, three grueling par fives and a host of demanding par fours.

Zink was recently asked to provide his course expertise on the do's and don'ts required for playing each of the Carrie Nosanchuk, a member of Kingswood's girls golf team the past three years, takes in the full view of the hazards that await errant tee shots at Indianwood Golf and Country Club. Those same hazards will have a strong effect on the outcome of the 44th United States Women's Open Championship.

18 holes.

No. 1 — 462 yards, par 5 — A demanding opening hole where birdies can be made as long as drives don't stray left. Heather is prominent along the left side and bunkers line the right fairway approximately 245 yards out. The green, surrounded by five pot bunkers, can be reached in two shots. A strong birdie hole.

No. 2 — 370 yards, par 4 — Bunkers can be found on both sides of fairway. A straight drive gives the player a big advantage because the green can be reached with anywhere from a 4- to 7-iron. Bunkers, however, grab shots that may stray right. Another strong birdie hole.

No. 3 — 142 yards, par 3 — A short iron shot to the center of the green leaves the player with an ideal shot at birdie. If the tee shot goes awry, it's into any one of seven bunkers and a scramble to save par.

No. 4 — 316 yards, par 4 — The key to playing this hole is a strong drive down the center of the fairway. Missing the fairway right results in heavy rough, while a missed shot left will most likely find a bunker. Big hitters can set up a 9-iron into a receptive green.

No. 5 — 170 yards, par 3 — Pin placement will be crucial on the two-tier green. An accurate tee shot onto the green is a must as the front sides are protected by two large bunkers. There will not be a lot of birdies.

No. 6 — 394 yards, par 4 — Not a big birdie hole, a straight tee shot is necessary due to the 12 bunkers that dot both sides of the fairway. From there a 4- or 5-iron will get the player to the green.

No. 7 — 367 yards, par 4 — Accuracy off the tee takes a step back for the time being on the widest fairway on the course. Not for too long, however, as 40 yards before the green the fairway narrows with bunkers on the right. A large green, which slopes toward the fairway, will be receptive to second shots.

No. 8 — 371 yards, par 4 — One of the most difficult driving holes on the course, the tee shot is uphill and must be kept in the fairway. Heather, dotted with bunkers, lines both sides of the fairway. The approach shot is onto a small, sloping green. Par will be a good score.

No. 9 — 339 yards, par 4 — A long, uphill tee shot is required on this dogleg right. Once at the top of the hill, the fairway drops sharply toward a green guarded by three bunkers. A short iron will get the player home, but a shot that goes over the green will result in a steep, downhill putt.

No. 10 — 351 yards, par 4 — Some players may drop to a 3-wood off the tee because of a water hazard 220 yards out. Approaching the green, the right side is lined with several bunkers. Once on, pin placement will be factor because a misread putt can put the ball into one of three bunkers around the green.

No. 11 — 334 yards, par 4 — A well-placed drive uphill will leave a player with a medium iron onto an elevated green. A stray tee shot will find heather and bunkers that line both sides of the fairway. Once on the green, it is important to keep the ball below the hole.

No. 12 — 456 yards, par 5 — The shortest of the par 5 holes, the gambling golfers can reach the green in two. Accuracy is still essential as a lateral water hazard can be found 225 yards off the tee and an assortment of bunkers are found farther up the fairway. Short iron skill is vital as the green slopes toward the fairway.

No. 13 — 204 yards, par 3 — All the players will be hitting a wood off the tee and all will be searching for accuracy. Getting on the green won't be easy as the landing area is cut into a hill which directs the prevailing wind directly into the golfer's face.

No. 14 — 377 yards, par 4 — The big hitters will have a great advantage because the tee shot must carry over heather and reach a fairway that slopes toward the green. The approach shot requires some finesse because the uphill slope eliminates any roll. It is essential to land on the green for a chance at par.

No. 15 — 520 yards, par 5 — The longest hole on the course requires a trio of accurate shots to land on the putting surface. A strong tee shot will put the player at the top of a hill overlooking a 60-yard-wide water hazard. A straying second shot could find heather or bunkers on the left or a 50-foot oak tree guarding the right side. The approach shot is uphill to a green that slopes severely toward the fairway.

No. 16 — 380 yards, par 4 — A dogleg right, the big hitters will gain an advantage if they are successful at cutting the curve. Short hitters will be forced to play it straight on. The green, a receptive one, is the narrowest on the course and flanked on both sides by bunkers.

No. 17 — 188 yards, par 3 — An absolute must to land on the green, players will be using anywhere from a 3- to 5-iron. The green is the hardest on the course and one that slopes severely back and left. There won't be many birdies made.

No. 18 — 382 yards, par 4 — An ideal finishing hole, the women should be able to play the dogleg right pretty well as long as they stay away from the right side where an errant shot can find any one of 31 bunkers. The approach shot won't be difficult to find the 24,000 square feet of green, but finding the bottom of the cup may pose some problems. The severe undulation makes putting tricky and may be a deciding factor in the outcome of the tournament.

Course changes brings major back to Indianwood

By Jim Toth
staff writer

Unique may be the quickest and safest way to describe the playing conditions at Indianwood Golf & Country Club, host of the 44th United States Women's Open Championship.

Designed and built by Englishman Wilfrid Reid in the mid 1920s, the reputation of the Scottish links-style course quickly spread throughout the state.

In 1928 the club was the site of its first Michigan PGA Championship. In 1930 the Western Open, won by Gene Sarazen, stopped by for a visit. Two Michigan Opens have also been decided at Indianwood.

The course also was frequented by many of the game's early greats, including Walter Hagen, Tommy Armour and Al Watrous.

Owned by the Ruebelman family since the early 1940s, the club had fallen into disrepair before being sold in 1981 to its current owner, Stan Aldridge.

NUMEROUS CHANGES were made, including lengthening of holes and adding bunkers. Even the dining room has been expanded.

A major club house expansion project began in 1988 with the opening of Indianwood's New Course in June of that year.

"There are presently 550 members, and it is one of the best jobs there is," said Indianwood club professional Dave Zink. "Mr. Aldridge has made it a nice place to work."

The changes have, in part, played major roles in returning a major championship to Indianwood. The only previous visit to Michigan by the Women's Open came in 1958, when the tournament was played at Forest Lake Country Club in Bloomfield Hills.

The Women's Open will be the fifth United States Golf Association championship played in the state this decade. The 1980 Junior Amateur was played at Pine Lake Country Club in Orchard Lake, the 1981 Senior Open and 1985 U.S. Open at Oakland Hills in Birmingham and the 1984 Senior Amateur at Birmingham Country Club.

The Women's Open is the seventh of the 13 national championships sponsored by the USGA.

● MALLON'S HOMECOMING

Meg Mallon, a former Birmingham resident who graduated from Farmington Hills Our Lady of Mercy High School, joined the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) in 1986 and has been a steady tour player the last three years. She is slated to participate in this year's women's Open at the Indianwood Country Club in Lake Orion.

Mallon, 26, attended Ohio State where she earned All-Conference honors in 1984 and 1985. She was runner-up in the 1985 Big 10 championship tournament, and, in 1983, Mallon captured the Michigan Amateur title.

Mallon said her career 'thrill' was playing in the 1986 U.S. Women's Open.

Now a resident of Ramona, Calif., Mallon earned $25,000 last year to break into the top 90 on the LPGA money list and earn exempt status for this season. She registered a career-best showing in the Safeco Classic last summer with a 21st-place finish. She also tied for 23rd in the 1988 Jamie Farr Toledo Classic and tied for 27th at the Women's Kemper Open.

Mallon, who was a member of The Observer and Eccentric's All-Area girls golf teams in both 1980 and 1981, tied for 44th at last year's women's open at the Baltimore Country Club.

● 1958 REVISITED

The Forest Lake Country Club in Bloomfield Hills hosted the 1958 U.S. Women's Open Championship. This year's Open at Indianwood will mark just the second time the women will have played their most prestigious championship in Michigan.

Just for nostalgia's sake, the winner of that 1958 June tourney was Mickey Wright. She shot a four-round score of 290 — two under par. Louise Suggs placed second at 295.

Incredibly, those same two golfers finished one-two the following year in the open hosted by the Worcester Country Club in Worcester, Mass.

A total of 57 golfers were entered in that 1958 tourney. Today, the women hold qualifiers around the country. Last year, a record field of 735 attempted to qualify for 153 open slots.

● PRIZE BREAKDOWN

The winner of this year's open will receive a check for $80,000. The runner-up will get $40,000.

The total purse for the 1989 open is $450,000.

● USGA THIS DECADE

The United States Golf Association (USGA) took over sponsorship of the women's open in 1953 and has run the event each year since. Michigan has been a frequent stop on the USGA tour this decade.

In fact, this year's open marks the fifth time this decade a USGA-sponsored event will have been played in the Great Lakes State.

Area All-Stars offer pro advice

By Bill Parker
staff writer

The heather at Indianwood Country Club in Lake Orion seems to reach up and grab the balls like the greedy fingers of a troll, and some of the bunkers are deeper than the U.S. deficit.

The greens are hilly, causing putts to pick up steam like a runaway locomotive, and if you get caught in the rough, simply forget it. You'll never find the ball.

Sound tough? It is, according to the Eccentric Newspaper's 1989 All-Area girls golf team. But they also agreed the course at Indianwood, site of the 1989 United States Golf Association Women's Open, can be loads of fun.

Five members of that team — Carrie Nosanchuk, a senior from Cranbrook/Kingswood; Angela Ford, a junior from Rochester; Katie Podlesak, a senior from Rochester Adams; Kara Packwood, a senior from Troy Athens and Drea Wieme, a sophomore from Athens — had the opportunity to play the course recently. The sixth member of the team, Katie Shannon, a sophomore from Bloomfield Hills Lahser High School, was unable to shoot the course.

Although they all enjoyed the 6,123-yard, par 71 course, none were hesitant in admitting how tough it could be. The key to a good game, they all agreed, is to play straight, consistent and aggressive.

"THE HEATHER IS really tough," admitted Podlesak, the Metro Suburban Activities Association champion. "The women (in the U.S. Open) will have to play pretty conservative so they don't go into the heather.

"I think they'll probably go for it on the first day, but then they'll learn."

Ford agreed. "Once you're in the heather, it's hard to find your ball. Once you're in (the heather), the best thing to do is not to try to play it, just get out. It's really tough."

The bunkers, including 31 on hole 18, also will offer a challenge.

"There is a lot of sand, and some of the traps are really deep," said Packwood, runner up at the All-Oakland County meet.

"Once you're in, it's hard to get out. Some of the traps, like the one on (hole) 11, need a ladder. That one's tremendous."

Wieme agreed the sand could be tough at times and believes it could get even tougher by tournament time.

"If we get a lot of rain before the tournament, they (Open participants) will be in trouble," said Wieme. "They'll have a hard time getting out of wet sand. But (a lot of rain) may slow the greens down; that would help a little."

THE GREENS will offer yet another challenge for the women, especially the 18th — one of the biggest in the Midwest, encompassing better than 24,000 square feet.

"Most of the time you're putting downhill," said Packwood. "And the greens are really fast. All you can do is tap it (the ball) and try to read (the green) real well."

Katie Podlesak found the heather unfriendly during a recent round of golf. The Rochester Adams graduate was quick to note that it doesn't take much to locate trouble on the 6,123-yard layout. However, it may take some doing to locate an errant shot.

Kara Packwood may have thought she was spending the day at the beach with all the sand that surrounded her during play at Indianwood. Once out and on the green, the task didn't get any easier with the quick and undulating putting surface.

Podlesak added, "You can get into trouble wherever you go. If you get on the fringe, you're always chipping downhill, and the greens are really fast."

With all these hazards scattered throughout the holes, the course is obviously challenging. But which hole, in particular, is the toughest?

"The 18th," said Ford. "The 11th," said Packwood. "The 15th," added Wieme. Take your pick.

THE 18TH, a par 4, 382-yard dog leg right, includes 31 bunkers and an enormous green.

"The heather on the right is real tough, and it's hard to take a short cut," said Ford. "If you miss, just a little, your in the heather, and then your in trouble."

The 11th is a par 4, 334-yard hole with tall rough and bunkers along both sides of the fairway from the tee to the elevated green. There are several bunkers behind the green and a 10-foot-deep trap on the front left.

"That trap is just incredible," said Packwood. "If you get in it, you're definitely in trouble."

The 15th, a par 5, 520-yard dog leg right, includes a 60-yard-wide water hazard, a 50-foot oak tree and tall rough along both sides of the fairway.

"There is sand and heather on the right and a lot of water," said Wieme. "If you get tired on this one, you're dead."

DESPITE THESE stringent conditions, members of the All-Area team believe the scores at the U.S. Open will be low.

"I think the scores will be pretty low," Packwood said. "They're long hitters, and when they get to the greens, they're pretty much all the same. Plus, they hit the ball straight."

"(The pros) hit long and straight," added Wieme. "If they stay on the fairways, they can shoot a great round."

Wieme, whose parents are members of Indianwood, has been playing the course for four years and is impressed with the improvements made for the tournament.

"They've been working on the course for four years, and now it's just gorgeous," she said. "It's a totally different course than four years ago."

"They added 164 bunkers this year. The club house is gorgeous. Everything is brand new. I'm really impressed with the changes they've made for the tournament."

Ford also liked the aesthetic appeal of the course.

Put on our shades for a fabulous shine.

SHADES EQ™ Color Gloss
by REDKEN

Finally. BoRics brings you natural-looking highlights that are more than just a shade better. Why? Because Redken's exclusive color-on-color system provides superb condition and shine to any hair type. And it lasts for weeks or longer.

Add color in your choice of ten rich shades that won't lift your natural color; an unlimited palette allows us to custom-blend the most flattering shade for you. It even softly blends grey hair.

For the best in color gloss, perms and haircuts, BoRics outshines all the rest.
