Sidewalk sale eats

Despite threatening weather both Friday and Saturday, the annual Northville Sidewalk Sale drew crowds downtown. In addition to sidewalk displays of downtown merchants, on Saturday the event included music, arts-and-crafts booths, and fresh-cooked food. Above, Babe Vermiglio serves up Italian sausage outside Genitti's.

Races take shape in fall city election

By DARRELL CLEM

A rematch between Mayor Christopher Johnson and G. Dewey Gardner, defeated by Johnson in 1987, appears possible as November elections draw nearer.

Johnson, who defeated Gardner by a 274-vote margin two years ago, affirmed this week that he definitely plans to seek a second, two-year term as Northville mayor.

Gardner, meanwhile, said he plans to enter a political race in November, although he has not decided whether he will attempt to unseat the mayor or seek one of two other city-council seats at stake.

The posts occupied by council members John Buckland and Jerry Mittman also will be on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Mittman said this week he is leaning toward running, although he has made no firm commitment. Buckland said he has not reached a decision.

Besides Johnson and Gardner, the only other confirmed candidate is Northville businessperson Mark McManus, who said he plans to seek a city-council seat.

The mayoral race is for a two-year term; city-council seats are for four years.

Candidates seeking office must file petitions with 50 to 75 signatures at city hall between Sept. 1 and Oct. 1.

Johnson, an attorney, said he wants to keep the mayoral post because "there's a lot of new and exciting things happening in the city," some of which he said he has helped get started.

Specific issues of interest to Johnson include the Ford plant

Local planners okay Ward plan

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

With a room full of people hanging on each vote, the township planning commission Tuesday approved preliminary site plans submitted by Ward Presbyterian Church.

The vote was 4-3. The church property is located on the corner of Six Mile and Haggerty roads.

Commissioners Charles Deland, Bernard Bach, Larry Sheehan, and John Leinonen voted for the church plans, while Barbara O'Brien, Karen Woodside, and Richard Allen cast no votes.

By gaining the approval, the church has cleared a major obstacle in developing its 42-acre parcel.

Deland, who is commission chairperson, conducted the meeting by reviewing each of the eight problem areas encountered during the tabling of the initial Ward plan in April.

The major stumbling block identified by commissioners in both the initial and revised plans was the church height. Planners talked at length with Ward officials on the possibility of further lowering the revised height of the sanctuary.

Ward architect Randall Lindstrom said the new height of 107 feet is the lowest peak height at which Ward can maintain the integrity of the church. In Ward's initial plans, the proposed height of the main sanctuary was about 125 feet.

Lindstrom said the 107-foot proposal will make Ward "a pleasurable and inspirational place for worship, which is what we were charged with doing."

He added the highest point on the roof will be 107 feet, and no steeple will be raised above that height.

Commissioner Karen Woodside said even with the revised plans approximate 15 percent height reduction "I still have a problem with the height."

"I just don't feel that this proposal fits the character of this community," Woodside said. "I know this church could be built lower."

Beginning with fire safety of the revised plans — which provide for a 107-foot main sanctuary — Deland read a letter by Township Fire Chief Robert Toms that said the revisions made by Ward are satisfactory. Toms originally pushed for a lower height.

Planners also reviewed prior concerns regarding traffic, parking, berming and sight lines, trash containers, loading dock, and woodlands.

Commissioners appeared satisfied that Ward's revised plan addressed each of these problem areas, except church height.

Township sees rise in home starts

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

The number of township home starts increased substantially for the first half of 1989 compared to last year's figure, while commercial development declined slightly.

Figures obtained from the Northville Township Building Department show that 81 permits for single-family and condominium dwellings were issued through June 30 this year.

In comparison, 68 home starts were made through the first six months of 1988 and only 130 in all of 1987.

Township Planning Director Carol Maise said that while two or three single-family subdivisions are being planned, the housing trend is shifting locally to condominiums.

"Because of the PRUD (planned residential unit development) and cluster rules, there is now a big demand for cluster housing in the township," Maise said.

She added demand for cluster housing is coming from both developers and prospective residents.

"Residents today don't want to do their own landscaping," Maise said. "And the people moving out here can afford the condominium prices."

The total price of the 81 home starts for the first half of 1989 is roughly $10,050,000. The figures are not broken down into separate categories for single-family and condos.

Maise noted developers seem more willing to construct condominium complexes than subdivisions.

"The process for developing a subdivision is long and cumbersome," Maise said. "For site condos, the process is much easier and the market is definitely positive."

She added developers are coming to township hall daily for information on the PRUD and cluster ordinances.

Condo complexes currently underway in the township include Country Club Village on Six Mile Road, Blue Heron Pointe on Beck Road, and Northridge Villas on Seven Mile and Haggerty.

New township subdivisions include Northville Trail on Six Mile Road, Pickford Meadow on Beck, and Crestwood Manor on Six Mile Road.

While residential development continues to thrive in Northville, commercial building statistics show a decline from last year.

According to figures from the township building department, no commercial or industrial permits were issued through the first six months of 1989.

That figure is down from the two permits issued for the first half of 1988, and is markedly lower than the 17 permits issued for all of 1987.

"There is not much commercial building in the township because there is not a lot of vacant land that is zoned for business or industrial," Maise said.

She added the largest area of potential commercial development is along Haggerty Road between Five Mile and Eight Mile.

Recent approval of the Haggerty Road sewer project by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and the township will definitely spur development along the corridor, Maise said.

Officials disagree on home deliveries

By DARRELL CLEM

Northville city officials disagreed Monday night on the merits of allowing home deliveries of food in the city's Central Business District (CBD).

Mayor Pro Tem Carolann Ayers balked at a proposed zoning ordinance amendment, recommended by City Manager Steven Walters, that would permit home-delivered food.

Ayers charged that the amended ordinance would not promote "the kinds of businesses that we envision for the CBD."

The issue stems primarily from pizza deliveries. Primo's Pizza, which plans to open a business at 117 Dunlap St., has filed a lawsuit challenging a city ordinance that prohibits home deliveries of food in the CBD.

The suit claims that a decision by the city Zoning Board of Appeals not to permit Primo's to deliver pizza is "unreasonable and creates an exceptionally undue hardship" on the pizzeria.

As a result of the ordinance, Primo's contends it "will not be able to successfully operate its business and compete with other pizzerias."

Two other pizzerias in the CBD — Domino's and Pizza Cutter — are allowed to deliver pizza because they did so before adoption of the ordinance. City officials were given legal advice not to make the ordinance retroactive.

But Primo's, in a lawsuit filed June 6 in Wayne County Circuit Court, contends that the ordinance "is unreasonable and constitutes discriminatory enforcement in violation of the equal protection clause" of both the state and U.S. constitutions.

In a memo submitted to city council members, Walters addressed concerns about traffic congestion — an issue that city officials cited in adopting the ordinance.

Walters noted that "take-out" restaurants, which are permitted in the CBD, "might actually generate more vehicle trips per day than the home-delivery restaurant which would tend to consolidate deliveries whenever possible."

Moreover, Walters added, "certain other uses allowed in the CBD tend to generate vehicle trips exclusively related to their operation . . . These include bakeries, hardwares, barber shops, and theaters."

Walters recommended that home deliveries be permitted as long as certain parking requirements are met.

Ayers, however, said traffic was not her concern. She said businesses in the CBD should aim at drawing people downtown, and that home deliveries would not serve that purpose.

Ayers charged that home deliveries would be "using up space" that should be used for "people-related activity."

Of home deliveries, she continued, "It just seems somehow not compatible with what we were trying to do downtown."

Some council members appeared less resistant to Walters' recommendation but, nonetheless, voiced some concerns.

Council Member John Buckland, for example, said that home delivery businesses should perhaps be limited to two delivery vehicles.

"I think three (vehicles) would be excessive," Buckland said. "I think two would be plenty."

Meanwhile, city council members decided to defer action on Walters' proposed amendment until the council's Aug. 21 meeting.

Baseline Road construction has the street completely torn up

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Baseline Road project gets under way

By DARRELL CLEM

The long-delayed reconstruction of Baseline Road has begun, much to the delight of residents.

"I'm real pleased that they've started," said Nancy Berg, president of the Cabbagetown Residents Association.

Berg was among a group of residents that approached the Northville City Council earlier this year to complain about the project's delay.

Construction crews have removed the old pavement, prompting the closing of Baseline to through traffic.

Workers are now installing a storm sewer system along portions of the road, said Maureen Turner of the Northville-based engineering firm McNeely & Lincoln Associates Inc.

The next steps will include excavation work and paving, she said. Barring inclement weather, the $360,000 project is expected to be completed in late September.

Although the contractor, Thompson-McCully Co., has closed the road, Turner said "access will be maintained when possible." Baseline residents have been advised to park on side streets.

Baseline Road is being reconstructed from Center Street east to Old Novi Road, then north to where Anger Manufacturing Co. is located, Turner said.

Berg said the project, which is part of the city's long-term street-improvement plan, is about two years behind schedule. She said residents last fall took pictures of Baseline and presented them to city officials to point out the urgency of the project.

But Berg recently commended officials for finally getting the project started.

In a memo to residents, officials asked that "homeowners on Baseline and residents on adjoining streets please use the side streets for access and overnight parking of vehicles when necessary during construction."

In those cases, residents are not being required to have a parking permit.

Resident arraigned on sex charge

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

A Northville Township resident is free on $50,000 bond after a preliminary examination Thursday, Aug. 3 on two counts of second-degree criminal sexual conduct (CSC) and one count of child abuse.

Darryl Maggio, 26, stood mute at his July 25 arraignment in 35th District Court. If convicted of the CSC charges, Maggio faces a maximum of 30 years in prison.

Township police Capt. Phil Presnell said Maggio has been bound over to Wayne County Circuit Court. He will face an arraignment on information Aug. 17.

Presnell said township police began investigating the case in mid-April, after being contacted by Northville school officials of possible child abuse against two students.

The students, who are brothers, are aged 7 and 9. Presnell said through interviews with the boys, police were able to come up with the CSC charges.

Presnell said the boys were living with their natural mother and Maggio, who was their mother's boyfriend, at the time of the incident.

He added the boys are currently living with their natural father out-of-state. Presnell said the mother has also moved from Northville.

Maggio's attorney, Steve Sonenberg, said he is uncertain where his client is currently living. He added Maggio had been living in the Innsbrook Apartments prior to his arrest.

According to Presnell, the second-degree CSC charge constitutes making physical contact for sexual gratification. The charge does not include penetration.

The child abuse charge includes nonsexual abuse. It carries with it a one- to two-year misdemeanor sentence.

Retarded-citizens group says Northville teacher is tops

Record/JANET L. COX

Vicki Greiner's teaching recently earned her an award

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

Vicki Greiner is not only a good special-education teacher, but a person who makes things happen in the district, according to Old Village School Principal Chris Clinton-Cali. "Vicki is a very good teacher, but beyond the program, she is someone who gets involved with the district," Cali said of Greiner, who was recently named 1989 Northwest Communities Teacher of the Year by the Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC).

A Northville teacher for the past 14 years, Greiner said she is very appreciative of the award. "It's nice to know that a lot of hours of work don't go unnoticed," she said.

However, awards aside, Greiner said being a special-education teacher is, in itself, very rewarding.

"Being a special-education teacher, I work with children who need a lot of repetition and structure," she said. "But whether it takes two or six months for a child to accomplish a task, when he or she does, it is very rewarding." Greiner, who has been teaching adaptive physical education for the past seven years, graduated with a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University in 1974 and a master's degree in special education from Eastern Michigan University in 1979.

Over the past 14 years in Northville, Greiner said, she has seen many changes in the special education department — with almost all of them for the better.

"Northville's commitment to special education gets better each year," she said. "And a lot of the quality programing could not happen with the support of Chris (Clinton-Cali) and the rest of the administration."

In addition to her teaching duties, Greiner said she has worked with the Wayne County Special Olympics Management Team and served on one of the district's strategic planning committees.

But no matter how involved she gets with other projects, Greiner said her first love is working with kids and seeing them accomplish new tasks.

"I like watching children try a new activity and growing into learning the skills," she noted. "I like watching kids succeed in new challenges."

While helping children succeed, Clinton-Cali said, Greiner shows great patience, but also high expectations for each of her students.

"In special education, teachers have to break skills down into small steps and adapt materials for each program," Clinton-Cali said. "Vicki is patient with the children, but she'll adjust materials to get the growth she is looking for."

In addition to working well with children, Clinton-Cali said, Greiner also has an excellent rapport with the parents.

"Vicki's real good with parents," she said. "All of the programs she has done include some type of parent component."

Clinton-Cali noted one of Greiner's latest programs — the Leisure Recreation Program — is geared for special education students to be able to engage in activities with their family.

She said the program, which started two years ago, allows the students to learn a recreational activity that they can later enjoy with their family.

"Teachers don't get awards for being a nice guy," Clinton-Cali said. "And Vicki refuses to let children use their handicap as an excuse for not succeeding."

CSX safety record blasted

By TIM RICHARD

FREELAND — The rescue operation was just great. But residents near the CSX railroad in this Saginaw County village told state legislators to make sure tank cars carrying hazardous chemicals don't derail in the first place.

"Once the accident has happened, the system has failed, regardless of the good evacuation," George Blackhurst of nearby Midland told a House subcommittee chaired by Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton.

"To them, it (a crash) is just one of the costs of doing business," said resident Wayne Ziegler, who attacked CSX's safety record as the worst per mile in the United States.

"Freeland was a 5 or 6 on a scale of 1 to 10," said Tom Horrigan, a Northville resident and spokesperson for Citizens Against Toxic Trains (CATT), formed after the April 25 Highland Township derailment. "Think in terms of a Saginaw, a Detroit, a Grand Rapids. Prevent — that's the key word."

There was standing room only in the Tittabawassee Township Hall on Monday as nine lawmakers heard public-safety officials, CSX and Dow Corning managers, and local residents tell of the July 22 crash of 14 rail cars and a fire that injured 40 and forced 3,000 to evacuate the area for days.

Rep. Willis Bullard Jr., R-Highland, ripped CSX for having an inaccurate manifest on a "death train" that derailed in his community north of Milford.

But Al Crown, CSX Transportation's divisional manager, said the only error at Highland was that a clerk failed to radio the train crew that a car had been added shortly before that train left the terminal, and that accurate records of the chemical cargo were ready at the terminal.

The train that derailed in Highland — but not the one that derailed near Freeland — goes through Northville on CSX tracks.

To Rep. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, the issue was why the tank cars broke open when they were built to withstand such crashes. "That should be the focus of any legislation," said the north Oakland lawmaker.

Mark McKeon of the Federal Railroad Administration's regional office in Chicago said the federal government has pre-empted that field. In reply to a question from Bullard, McKeon said the National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the crash. "Those reports usually take nine months or so," he said.

Spokespersons for the State Police, the Saginaw Sheriff's Department, CSX, and Dow Corning heaped praise on Bill Kirchner, chief of the 24-member volunteer fire department in this rural township of less than 5,000. Kirchner chaired what was described as a cooperative and highly professional effort to identify the burning chemicals, evacuate people, control traffic, and minimize damage.

Said Deputy Fire Chief Pat Haley: "The response was immediate — within minutes. It was a major incident, but there were no injuries to rescue workers, no fatalities. We had help from business and surrounding fire departments."

"We're working with the petroleum industry," said Lt. Arthur

Nash Jr. of the State Police Fire Marshal's Division, "to build a center for training in Lansing by the first of the year."

Within a half hour, managers from CSX and Dow Corning — whose tank cars loaded with hazardous chemicals burned — were on the scene. Despite the fire, they could read labels on burning tank cars through binoculars, Haley said.

Capt. Arlen Brower of the State Police said the state, with federal funds, has trained more than 4,000 emergency materials handlers in 18 months, but added that the federal government failed to renew funding for fiscal 1990.

Residents of Freeland, in northwest Saginaw County, and nearby Midland had their own agenda of what the authorities should do:

- Place an executive order speed limit of 25 mph on trains carrying hazardous chemicals. The CSX train at Freeland was going 37.

- Don't place legal dollar limits on CSX's liability. Even if residents sign settlements with the railroad, this would allow later recovery for later ill effects that might be undetected now.

- Inspect tracks and bases more frequently and more stringently, and improve the unstable bases.

- "Lessen our dependence on products that require hazardous chemicals," said Ann Hunt of Citizens for Alternative to Chemical Contamination. She said CSX's attitude is "Aw, shucks, ma'am, there's nothing to worry about."

- Impose even stricter standards for rail-car construction. "The CSX cars exceeded federal standards," said Kathy Garthoff of Concerned Citizens in Freeland.

City to help fund speed zone

By DARRELL CLEM

A proposal to create a school speed zone on Eight Mile Road near Center Street cleared another hurdle recently as the Northville City Council voted to pay 50 percent of the cost.

The move placed the project back in the hands of the Northville Board of Education, which has not yet formally approved splitting the cost.

Schools Superintendent George Bell said that he would have to discuss the matter with board members.

Earlier this month, the school-speed-zone project won the school board's formal endorsement, although questions of funding remained unanswered.

City Manager Steven Walters said during a recent city-council meeting that the project is expected to cost "well below" the $8,000 projected by Wayne County officials. However, the exact price tag is not yet known.

The Wayne County Road Commission has approved creation of the speed zone.

The Northville City Council is currently petitioning the county to let the city — instead of the county — install signs and flashing lights on Eight Mile near Center.

The speed zone would result in the speed limit being reduced from 40 mph to 30 mph in the area of Amerman Elementary School and Northville High School.

The proposal was endorsed by a local committee that studied safety in the area and recommended that the school speed zone be established. The committee formed in response to concerns about student safety in the area.

Commission resumes debate on survey, master plan

By DARRELL CLEM

A majority of Northville residents oppose further commercial or industrial development, but they don't want to pay higher taxes. "I'm not sure the two go together, although we would all like that," Northville Planning Commission Vice Chairperson John Hardin remarked last week.

Hardin's comments surfaced as the commission pored over the results of a citizen survey conducted earlier this year to gauge public opinion on the city's future development.

Official remarks about the long-awaited survey began surfacing after results were made public by city Planning Consultant Don Wortman.

The survey, which sparked a heated debate at a previous commission meeting, came up for discussion last week as commissioners continued talks aimed at charting a long-term master plan to guide the city's growth.

Commissioner Rolland Stapleton was among those who earlier blasted the survey, calling it statistically insignificant because it failed to provide a wide-enough range of responses for residents.

Some commissioners last week still appeared reluctant to accept some findings in the results of the survey.

Although Wortman could not attend last week's planning commission meeting, his associate, consultant Glen Bowles, was told that commissioners were not happy with some of the analysis that Wortman provided in the survey.

Commissioners indicated that some of Wortman's analysis of the statistics should be removed from the survey and that commissioners be allowed to interpret the statistics for themselves.

Of the 3,500 questionnaires received by city residents, 1,292 responses, or 36.9 percent, were returned.

Commissioner Gregory Presley said the survey indicates that the respondents want to see Northville "stay the way it is" — an observation supported by the fact that 92 percent of respondents held a "universally positive" attitude about the current downtown.

However, Presley questioned how the survey will blend with the planned redevelopment of East Cady Street, where some retail development is under consideration.

Presley, commenting later on the city's tax base, questioned how far commercial development might go toward resolving some tax-base issues.

Commissioner Chris Gazlay questioned whether the planning commission should even be discussing the citizen survey at this point in the master-plan process.

At a commission meeting in June, some commissioners said that they should develop their own goals for the master plan before ever considering the results of the citizen survey. Gazlay reminded commissioners of that last week, although they have set some preliminary goals.

Some commissioners, primarily Stapleton, commented in June that the results of the survey could set the tone for the master-plan study even before commissioners had established areas they want to explore.

Presley, however, was among those who said last week that he had already read the results of the survey.

"I'm already jaded," he said. "I've read the thing."

Presley said he believed that the survey "has some validity," but he questioned how significant it should be in terms of the overall master-plan process.

Hardin, meanwhile, noted that the response rate was low and added that city officials should "answer" those who took time to fill out the survey and perhaps "ignore" those who didn't.

In other developments, a memo that Wortman has submitted to planning-commission members outlines several general master-plan goals that emerged from previous discussions on the matter.

Among those goals, which drew largely on an earlier written statement provided by Stapleton, are:

- To establish land uses and programs which serve the citizens of Northville.

Listed under that goal are such objectives as improving downtown parking facilities; improving intergovernmental relations between the city, township, and other local government units; and improving the city's recreational facilities.

- To establish and maintain Northville as an "identifiable, economically viable, and defensible" community.

Objectives to that goal include maintaining the economic base; creating a "commercial mix" that meets the community's desires and provides needed retail services; determining the "optimal" population of the community; and enhancing the local tax base to a level to support necessary public services.

- To preserve and promote the "community values which make Northville a desirable community in which to live."

Some objectives: Enhance the small-town Victorian character; emphasize the residential character; improve the quality of life; and continue to have Main Street as the downtown's focal point.

- To provide direction and guidance for the proper use of the remaining unused land, or the redevelopment and revised use of existing areas.

Among the objectives: Improve traffic; encourage more green space downtown; enhance entrances to the community; and develop public policies for neighborhood transition and for development of vacant and under-developed parcels.

Meanwhile, planning commission members plan to continue the extensive process of developing a master plan today (Thursday, Aug. 10), when they will meet with Wortman for further talks.

CATHY M KONRAD, CMC CITY CLERK (8/10/89 NR)

City sets public hearings on sidewalk program

By DARRELL CLEM

City officials have scheduled two public hearings to accept comment on the city's plans to install new sidewalks.

The sessions will be among a series of ongoing public hearings that will be held between now and next spring as officials prepare to implement a citywide sidewalk-installation program.

The first hearing, concerning property owners along Eight Mile Road east of Taft, will be held Aug. 21, City Clerk Cathy Konrad said.

The second hearing — for property owners in the northeast section of the city — will be conducted Sept. 5.

The hearings are designed to accept public comment as the city begins to install sidewalks in sections of the city that have never had them.

The project will come on the heels of a sidewalk-repair project in which construction crews are replacing or repairing existing sidewalks throughout the city.

Residents affected by the new-sidewalk project will be notified by mail at least 10 days prior to the public hearing focusing on property in their area.

City officials have said that they will try to give residents even more notice — perhaps three weeks.

City Manager Steven Walters has said that homeowners will be forced to pay for sidewalk construction adjacent to their properties, although they will be allowed to have the cost attached to their city tax bills over a period of about 10 years.

The city will pick up the tab for sidewalks on city property. The city also plans to pay for some expensive items such as paving steep slopes that could cost as much as $10,000 in certain areas.

In some instances, city officials plan to try to negotiate an agreement with property owners such as the school district. In one area, new sidewalks are planned along property used as a school bus yard.

In a memo that City Attorney James Kohl sent to Walters, Kohl wrote that "it appears that only a special agreement between the school district and the city would obligate the former to pay any special assessment levied against it."

Walters said that, in essence, that special agreement "really means voluntarily."

In another area, Walters was asked to try to reach a voluntary assessment agreement with the Northville Estates Association for a stretch of sidewalk to benefit that area.

Most of the new sidewalks are expected to be installed next spring. But since several public hearings will be required, city officials decided to begin that process in August.

Although city officials have outlined the targeted areas on a map, they still are in the process of fine-tuning some of the plans.

Our Opinions

Ford plant should mix library and retail use

With the formal study of the Northville Ford Plant's future in hand for the past three weeks, the time is finally at hand for some real plans for the site to start taking shape. The study turned out to be a very informative piece, and the community should follow the general tone of its recommendations as much as possible.

The study, done by Quinn Evans / Architects of Ann Arbor, offers several conclusions for different parts of the Ford land. All merit attention, and most of them sound like the definite best choice for the community.

Starting with the west part of the Ford area — Ford Field and the parking area west of Griswold — the study basically suggests that it ought to stay the same. This conclusion is easy to support. No matter what happens to the rest of the site, parking will be needed. (It may need to be expanded.) And Ford Field is a valuable community resource which, if possible, should be maintained as it is.

Moving to the east, the study splits the plant building into two separate concerns: the original plant, built in 1936, and the two additions, built several decades later.

The study sees the original — that is, the east — wing of the plant as an ideal site for an expanded Northville Public Library. It certainly is. The library unquestionably needs more space; its current physical limitations force it to lag behind the quality of the other public programs in the city and township.

The Ford site is a perfect new alternative. The location — within walking distance of downtown and a great many homes, and within easy biking distance of many more — is ideal. It keeps the close-knit, centralized feeling of the community intact. At the same time, its location on the edge of the city limits may help Northville Township residents feel the library belongs to them as much as to the city residents, which of course it does.

There's more: a library seems like the ideal tenant for an undeniably historic building worthy of preservation. And finally, this site would perfectly complement a future branch library in the township if plans proceed for the land at Six Mile and Beck; those two locations combined should provide relatively easy access for everyone in the area.

The study leaves the west wing a little more up in the air, intensively considering two options: a school service center / administration building and a small retail mall.

A retail mall is the stronger alternative. A new school service center does not appear to be a pressing need in the community. The school district is proposing to address its building needs in a bond issue this fall — a bond issue which does not include a service center.

Using part of the building for retail makes a lot of sense. To echo a point made during the presentation of the study, a mall is a use much more open to the general citizenry than a "public" school service building which a majority of residents might never enter. And a mall would provide tax revenue which the school use would not.

That brings up the major objection to keeping most of the site public and off the tax-rolls: it seems to miss a chance to ease the tax burden on the people of Northville. But it doesn't really.

The site's location in a floodplain renders it essentially unbuildable for any new project. That eliminates most commercial uses. The existing building could be adapted to some other industrial use, but it would very likely be difficult to develop an economically viable industrial use in that old building with its surrounding vacant land. In addition — this is a fact worth considering — no other industrial tenant can be expected to be as good to the ducks as Ford has been.

The prime concern is to keep that valuable site, its river frontage, and especially its ducks open to the public to the greatest degree possible. The new study strongly affirms that idea and makes it sound completely feasible. We are anxious to see the concepts become reality.

Height limit needs study

A very interesting idea arose at a Northville Planning Commission master-plan discussion a few weeks ago, and we hope it does not get lost in the planning shuffle.

During commission consideration of the city's master-plan update, Commissioner Gregory Presley suggested one thing the city might want to do is limit buildings in the Central Business District to three stories in height. The current limit is five stories or 60 feet.

The Main Centre complex downtown will be four stories tall facing Cady Street. This is going to be a very imposing building in a small downtown like Northville's.

The possibility of someone putting up a five-story building downtown — without needing any variances whatsoever — is a little disturbing. Quite simply, that's far too big for a town that is working to maintain and enhance its Victorian charm.

The city ought to act on Presley's suggestion quickly, before it's too late. His impending move from the Planning Commission to the Downtown Development Authority only increases the odds that his idea will get lost. It deserves serious attention.

Inconsistency

By Bruce Weintraub

Ahhh, politics.

Unfortunately, threatened lawsuits and high-priced consultants overlooked the good sense of three township planning commissioners Tuesday, as Ward Church received site-plan approval.

Four planners voted to approve the project. Only John Leinonen has an alibi. Throughout the meetings with Ward, Leinonen has stated his liking to large churches. Also, during the commission's discussion on an ordinance limiting average church height to 48 feet, Leinonen reaffirmed his views.

Which brings us to the other three commissioners who voted for Ward's "revised" site plan. Remember these names: Charles Deland, Bernard Bach, and Larry Sheehan. These are the three people who voted for the church-height ordinance, then did a 180-degree turn and voted for Ward — a project providing for a 107-foot main sanctuary.

At Tuesday's meeting, Township Attorney Ernest Essad said the proposed church ordinance, which is currently at the township-board level, may apply to the Ward plan. So, Tuesday's vote approving the 107-foot structure may be a moot point.

Essad added that while planners could not consider the church-height ordinance as law, "the same reasons why you passed it to the board still exist."

However, the votes of Deland, Bach, and Sheehan created one more obstacle for the township to overcome in order to retain its character. After all, two things can now happen. The township can get into a potentially nasty lawsuit with Ward over church height. Or, if the church ordinance is passed and Ward is built 107 feet high, it will potentially be the highest structure in the township — forever. How, then, can this church blend in with the character of the community?

This project may be the only church to submit a site plan for a structure this tall. And, conceptually, Deland, Bach, and Sheehan said they do not want churches in this community over 48 feet tall. Yet, when an actual site plan came up — they folded.

So did Township Fire Chief Robert Toms. Beginning with the Planning Commission's first meeting with Ward on Jan. 31, Toms said he could not fight a fire in a building over 70 feet high. In an interview last May, Toms said, "It is important that the fire department can reach the roof and all points of the building."

Only in a letter recently written to commissioners did Toms change his mind about Ward. Now he can fight a fire in a building over 70 feet high, even though he still cannot get to the outside roof.

What made Toms change his mind? My guess is politics.

When the new Ward hearing was scheduled last May, the Aug. 8 date was chosen to assure commissioners that Toms would be present to answer their questions. Two July dates were overlooked because Toms was on vacation. Yet, curiously, Toms was nowhere to be found Tuesday. Nor was his assistant. However, the township's attorney did manage to make the meeting. The winds of potential lawsuits must have swirled their way to the township.

Ahhh, politics. Seeing the attitude change of three commissioners and a fire chief makes you appreciate the guts it took planners Karen Woodside, Barbara O'Brien, and Richard Allen to vote no on the plan.

These planners also voted for the church height ordinance. And to back up their commitment to the community, they voted against the Ward plan — even though the plan meets every township ordinance.

Many times throughout the Tuesday meeting, Woodside questioned key issues of the plan, most notably the height and traffic concerns. And just before casting her "no" vote, Woodside said something that I had been thinking throughout the meeting.

"I have no objection to the church," she said. "I just feel it's too large for the community. I just don't feel that this proposal fits the character of this community. I know this church could be built lower."

Unfortunately, three commissioners did not feel they had to back up their initial feelings.

After the fact

By Phil Jerome

Cheryl Gazlay and Kathi Jerome have a suggestion for Novi — build a swim club.

Cheryl and Kathi (yes, the latter is my sister-in-law) are honchos at the Northville Swim Club — the private little club under the water tower behind Northville High School. Cheryl is president of the swim club, while Kathi is membership chairperson.

And the problem they're having is that the Northville Swim Club is just not big enough to accommodate all the requests they have for membership.

It's a relatively small piece of land, and the current members don't want to see the place become so crowded they can't enjoy it any more.

The membership chairperson tells me the waiting list is so long that they aren't even accepting names any more. The waiting list they have right now will probably take from four to five years to exhaust.

And even though it's the Northville Swim Club, a lot of the people on the waiting list come from Novi.

"Why don't you tell somebody out in Novi to build their own swim club," Kathi suggested recently. Cheryl said the same thing while we were splashing around in the shallow end of the pool last Saturday afternoon.

And I thought it was a pretty good suggestion. Nobody asked me to fill out one of those surveys circulated by the Novi Parks and Recreation Department earlier this year. But if they had, I would have made "swim club" number one on my list.

So there you have it, Novi officials. A suggestion to consider the next time you're studying recreational needs in the city — a nice outdoor swimming pool.

And now that I've put her suggestion in print, maybe Kathi will let me have another guest pass to the Northville club the next time I want to cool off on a hot summer afternoon.

Private use for Ford needs study

To the Editor:

Regarding your article on potential uses for the Northville Ford plant in the July 27, 1989 edition of the Record, you state: "Market data used to develop the report indicated there is 'a strong market' for any such use. (It adds that), from the community's viewpoint, private uses would be less expensive to develop and would contribute to the tax base."

The article goes on to state that each official (the mayor, library director, recreation director, and school district assistant superintendent of administrative services) appears to support public use of the Ford plant. Your article did not reflect a fair balance for the "private-use" case for this site. Everybody would like unlimited services, new libraries, and community buildings; however, the public sector must balance "wishes" with fiscal reality, as each individual household must. In a community (the City of Northville) which already has a tax rate higher than Birmingham or Bloomfield Hills, is another source of expenses, and a non-contributor to property taxes, prudent? With City Hall, the Northville Recreation Center, Old Village School and the Board of Education on West Main, plus four other schools, or ex-schools in the city, there appears to be plenty of public buildings generating expenses and precluding tax revenues. It's about time we looked at who is pulling their weight when it comes to paying for community services. If there truly is a burning desire for public facilities in Northville, a fundraising drive would generate the money. Our system is good, but bond and millage elections favor the most organized factions, which typically are the local officials who stand to gain from their passage.

Let's not repeat the same mistakes at the local level that have been made in Washington, D.C.

Church height

To the Editor:

It appears that your opinion is as idiotic and ridiculous as Northville

Township's in regard to the building plan for Ward Presbyterian Church. Ward's attorney was and is correct when he mentioned an "arbitrary" height limit. Their request, revised to 108 feet, is for a roof line, not an area where people will be! Where people will be should be the only determining factor as to height, because that's the only sensible reason for restricting the height of the building based on available fire-fighting equipment! And if you'll look, the plans for seating of people fall well within the 70 feet.

What this is really about is power. The board has the power to stall as long as they want and make Ward come groveling to them. To what point? There is no height limit in the zoning ordinance. The board should only be concerned with the safety of the inhabitants of the building, and that they can do with their present equipment. The extra 38 feet is just roof! No people, no floors, nothing but air! Is the fire chief saying his equipment can't shoot water 38 feet?

Let the board get off their high horse and quit playing this power game and quickly approve the plan as presented and allow this congregation to begin their new building and join this community. That is, if they still want to.

Civic pride

To the Editor:

We would like to congratulate Bob and Charlene Frellick and the other Northville Junior Baseball volunteers for their efforts in hosting the National Amateur Baseball Federation World Series tournaments.

Through their efforts, visitors from New York, Ohio, Washington, Maryland, and Kentucky have come to realize what a wonderful community Northville is.

The Frellicks and the other volunteers are wonderful ambassadors for this community. It's civic-minded people like Bob and Charlene who make us proud to call Northville our home.

Gas stations cited for violating city ordinance

By DARRELL CLEM

Two Northville gas stations have violated a city ordinance by failing to provide full-service pumps, according to police.

Police Chief Rodney Cannon said that Gas & Go (now Mobil) on Eight Mile Road and the Clark station on South Main Street have been cited for violating the city's flammable liquids ordinance.

Police Capt. James Petres said that Gas & Go pleaded guilty and was fined $300 in the 35th District Court.

He said he did not know when the Clark case would be resolved.

Petres said the citations, which stemmed from citizens' complaints, prompted police officials to issue copies of the flammable liquids ordinance to the city's four service stations.

Even though gas stations may be primarily self-serve, Petres said the ordinance requires them to provide full service to customers who want it. The ordinance also covers such safety aspects as the storage of flammable liquids.

Cannon said the ordinance is designed to ensure that there is no "slipshod hazard to the public."

Petres said police officials "occasionally get complaints" about gas stations failing to provide full service. He said such complaints are processed through the city attorney's office.

Petres said the service stations generally cite the lack of available workers as the cause for failing at times to provide full service to customers requesting it.

"They claim they sometimes have a problem with someone showing up late for work or calling in sick," Petres said. "As a rule, they say that they do provide full service."

In a memo to service stations, Petres noted that police "are providing all gas stations in the city with a copy of the ordinance so that each may review the ordinance and their operation to ensure compliance."

The memo notes that one section of the ordinance "requires a full-service island with an attendant on the premises to service those customers desiring such service."

Reason family pulls together to run area golf shop

Mark Reason, left, Barbara Reason and Roger Reason, along with Bryan Reason (not pictured) run an area golf shop

By DAVE WASKIN

Owning and operating a retail store may be something new to Roger and Barbara Reason, but the game of golf is as familiar to them as an old friend who has become like a part of the family.

On March 4 of this year, the husband-and-wife team opened R&R Golf in Milford's Prospect Hill Shopping Center, and, with help from sons Bryan and Mark, they have made their golf discount store the definitive family business.

Bryan Reason, a certified public accountant, serves as the store's accountant. Mark Reason, head PGA professional at Pontiac Country Club, provides lessons for store customers, giving R&R Golf a stroke on its competitors.

Offered in a single session for $25, or a series of five for $100, the lessons are scheduled at the mutual convenience of Mark and his customers. The single session is usually given at the store's fitting range and covers the basics of the golf swing, including proper grip and shoulder turn. The series of five begins with a lesson at the fitting range, then moves to Pontiac Country Club, where more than the basic swing is taught.

"The lessons cover putting, chipping, driving and sand wedge shots," noted Roger Reason.

Should a beginner, not having taken the lessons, swing his club into something besides a ball, he need look no further than R&R Golf.

"We have complete club repair in the shop," Roger said. "Folks come in with a broken shaft, we can repair it for them, and they can have it the next day. They don't have to wait a week or 10 days."

The store also makes custom woods and irons on the premises. "First, we size a customer, find out the proper club length. Then we check the loft — if they need a standard, upright or flat lie on the club," Roger explained. "And you check out the grip size."

The customer also selects a shaft and head before the clubs are built. "Folks have been really pleased (with the clubs) so far," said Roger.

Barbara Reason added, "One thing that's been very gratifying to us is that we've had people come in, and now they're coming back to see us again."

Of course, there was the time that a customer who had recently bought a set of custom-made irons walked into the store acting grumpy about them, Roger pointed out. "Then he said, 'Listen, I just want to tell you I really enjoy the clubs.'"

"We have a complete line of golf equipment which includes bags, clubs, all the accessories. We are very strong in ladies' clubs and apparel. Hopefully, we can get 40 percent of the lessons, swing his club into something besides a ball, he need

RUSS GARDNER

ROBERT SCHRAM

RUSS GARDNER of South Lyon, local agent for Farm Bureau Insurance, has earned the company's 1989 All American Award, recognizing him as one of the top agents in the state. He received the award for his excellent record of sales and service during the past year.

The award, reserved for the company's top producers, recognizes Gardner for his outstanding sales achievements and superior client service during a recent 12-month period.

He also earned membership in the Executives Club, an honor reserved for the company's top 25 agents.

Farm Bureau Insurance, one of the state's major insurers, has a statewide force of 400 agents serving over 300,000 Michigan policyholders.

ROBERT SCHRAM of Novi has been appointed vice president of Triad Realty Associates.

Schram comes to Triad with extensive experience in the field of real estate and property management. After graduating from the University of Michigan, Schram began his career with Charter Realty, Inc. in Ann Arbor and was the founder of the Maize and Blue Management Company. He subsequently moved to First Property Management Corporation based in Tampa, Fla., where he served as regional director before joining the Triad Corporation.

Schram begins his work with Triad, the condominium and conversion specialists, at a time of substantial growth and expansion. Triad Realty is currently converting over 900 homes in the Ann Arbor area. As vice president, Schram's responsibilities will include multi-site administration, personnel training and direction, budget preparation and management, and the implementation of marketing and sales programs at all of Triad Realty's projects.

Schram resides in Novi with his wife Kathy and three children: Brian, Jeff and Susan. He is active in the community and has been elected to three four-year terms on the Novi Board of Education.

PATRICIA L. WOODY, CPCU, of Northville has been promoted by the Amerisure Companies to assistant vice president/claims operations. She continues as manager of the home office division, which coordinates claims management and educational programs for the company's seven regions.

Woody joined Amerisure in 1982 as a customer service representative at Livonia. In 1985 she was named liaison between the claims and data processing departments. She was promoted to manager of claims operations in 1987.

She was graduated from Eastern Michigan University in 1972 with a Bachelor's degree in English. Woody earned the Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriter (CPCU) designation in 1987; Associate in Automated Management in 1989.

Michigan Mutual Insurance Company is the parent organization of the Amerisure Companies, which include Amerisure Insurance Company, Amerisure Life Insurance Company and Amerisure, Inc. All companies have headquarters in Detroit.

TIMOTHY E. KUTYNA, a market sales consultant for Consumers Power Company's Metro Region, has been named Rotarian of the Year by the Novi Rotary Club.

Kutyna was recognized for his leadership in helping to raise over $17,000 for the Rotary International campaign to eliminate polio around the world.

Kutyna is a member of the Novi Rotary Board of Directors and a member of the Novi Chamber of Commerce. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from Tri-State University and his Masters degree in Business Administration from Oakland University. He and his wife, Christine, reside in Berkley.

RICH AND PAULA HERSTEIN, owners of the Little Professor Book Center in Farmington, won recognition for success in customer service, marketing and financial management during the American Booksellers Association Convention at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

The Hersteins also were recognized for superior window displays.

The Hersteins attribute the store's success to the desire of its staff "to solve book problems which customers bring them, as well as their deep knowledge of books."

RICHARD C. STURGIS of Novi has been named the Digital Equipment Corporation Automotive District "Sales Professional of the Year." The formal award banquet was held at the Novi Sheraton Oaks on July 12 with Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler on hand to do the award presentation.

Sturgis earned the distinguished award for meeting account management and quantitative metrics for two major operating sectors within the General Motors Corporation; American Car Components Groups and the Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac Divisions.

Sturgis, his wife Kathleen, son Richard and daughter Jennifer moved to the Novi area from Rochester Hills in September 1988.

The Digital Equipment Corporation is a Fortune 35 company with offices and manufacturing facilities throughout the world. The Automotive District is located in the Orchard Hills Place Office Park on Haggerty Road in Novi.

KENNETH A. JOSWIAK of Lafontaine Pontiac-Cadillac-GMC in Highland recently graduated from the Dealer Candidate Academy of the National Automobile Dealers Association. The specialized training curriculum is tailored to prepare dealer-successors and key management personnel to operate a new car or truck dealership.

Joswiak plans to use the leadership and management skills developed as an academy student to prepare for further responsibilities in dealership management. He holds a certificate in automotive marketing from Northwood Institute.

TAMMY CHAPMAN, a health and beauty department employee, was named the South Lyon Big Wheel's "Associate of the Month" for June. She has worked at the local store for two years.

Vacation-home stay can affect taxes

Money Management

If you're spending this summer weekend at a vacation home, the Michigan Association of CPAs has news for you. Extending or reducing the number of days that you spend at your vacation home can mean a savings — or loss — of thousands of tax dollars.

How can you unravel the mystery of deducting a vacation home? The answer is far from elementary. If you rent your vacation home for a portion of the year and at other times use it for personal enjoyment, calculating the amount of your allowable deductions can be a herculean task. First, you have to determine whether your vacation home qualifies as a second residence or as a rental property.

Is your vacation home a second residence? If you use your vacation home for personal purposes more than 14 days or for more than 10 percent of the number of days the property is rented, whichever is greater, the home qualifies as a residence.

If the vacation home is the only house you own other than your primary residence, you still get the full property-tax and mortgage-interest deductions. After subtracting these deductions, you can begin deducting rental expenses — but only up to the amount of rental income that the property generates.

One pleasant surprise is that you can carry excess deductions into succeeding years to offset any rental income attributed to that same property. Another exception is that if you rent your property for 14 days or less, you are not required to report rental income or losses.

Is your vacation home a rental property? What happens if your personal use of a vacation home is limited to 14 days or less than 10 percent of the time it is rented?

In this case, tax law will treat your vacation home as it does any other rental property. Generally, you will be entitled to deduct some or all of the mortgage interest and property tax deductions plus depreciation write-offs.

In addition, you can deduct a portion of such operating expenses as utilities, fire and liability insurance, repairs, advertising costs and even maid service.

Deducting 'Passive Loss?' If you have a loss from renting property, that loss is considered "passive" and thus can be deducted only from passive income.

However, if you actively participate in renting your property and your adjusted gross income (AGI) is $150,000 or less, you can deduct rental losses of up to $25,000 from your regular income. If your AGI is over $100,000, the $25,000 active rental loss allowance is reduced by 50 cents for every dollar of income above $100,000.

Once your AGI exceeds $150,000, the allowance is totally phased out. However, if you rented your home before the new law was enacted and you exceed AGI limits, you can still deduct 20 percent of your disallowed losses in 1989; 10 percent in 1990 and none thereafter.

How much can you deduct? To determine the amount of your deductible expenses, you must allocate the rental expenses in proportion to the number of days you use the property depreciation), simply multiply all expenses by the number of rental days, then divide that sum by the total use figure. The result is your tax deductible amount — subject, of course, to the passive loss rules noted previously.

For example, if your operating expenses were $5,000 and you rented your property for 90 days and the total-use figure came to 100, your deductible amount would be $4,500 ($5,000 times 90, divided by 100).

Some CPAs recommend you figure the amount of deductible mortgage interest and property tax separately from operating expenses. To do this, multiply the amount of mortgage interest and property tax by the fraction of rental days to the total days in the calendar year. You should note, however, that while the Tax Court decisions have upheld this method of determining the amount of deductible mortgage interest and property taxes, the IRS does not.

To make matters more complicated, the tax law also dictates the order in which you deduct the expenses calculated by these two formulas; first, property taxes and mortgage interest, then operating expenses and finally, depreciation.

In some cases, you may benefit more by extending your personal use so you can claim the deductions allowed to a second home as opposed to those for a rental.

cent of our business from ladies, and that's the way it's been working out so far," Roger said.

"I would say on an average, we carry more clothing than you would find in a golf-discount store. Much more ladies' clothing. They (other golf stores) really still cater to men." "This fall," Barbara said, "we're planning to carry some out-of-season clothing, so that people will still come to see us in the winter."

Having seen all four of their children through Huron Valley Schools, the Reasons' ties to the community are significantly older than their retail store.

"I was in the electrical distribution business for 30 years," Roger said. "Something totally opposite from this. We were never in the retail business, but we dealt with wholesale business. So I've had some direct experience with the concept of selling merchandise. This is our first endeavor to open a retail store."

While R&R Golf has served customers from West Bloomfield, Clarkston and Brighton, most of the store's business comes from its hometown. "We think this area is ready for a golf discount store, with all the courses around the area and all the folks playing golf," Roger said.

Despite the increasing participation in men's and especially ladies' leagues, the Reasons do not foresee opening another store should business continue to go well. "We want to provide a good service without stretching ourselves so thin that we cannot do that," Barbara explained.

We're providing a service and enjoying it also, because we enjoy golf."

Popular apartments have waiting list

Lavish use of windows in living areas add to the spacious feeling at Park Place Apartments in Northville

Anyone interested in renting an apartment in the new Park Place Apartments in Northville may have to wait awhile.

Christine Kelly, manager of the huge apartment complex off Eight Mile at Silver Springs Drive in Northville, reported that Park Place is currently at 97 percent occupancy even though the second phase of construction has only been completed recently.

And, she said, there's already a waiting list for apartments in the two remaining phases.

The apparent success of the Park Place Apartments is in contrast with the apartment market in other parts of the country in general and other parts of the Metro Detroit area in particular.

Nationally, building permits for apartment complexes are on the decline. And there's something of a trend for complex managers to offer incentives for people to move into their apartments.

Just as banks have attempted to lure clients with gifts ranging from electric toasters to mink coats (depending on the size of the account, of course), some apartment complexes are offering incentives that may include one month's free rent or free cable television service.

Park Place, on the other hand, has experienced no trouble attracting renters — a fact that Kelly attributes to acceptance of the concept of apartment living in a predominantly country atmosphere.

"We picked Northville as the site for this complex for a number of reasons," she said. "The thought was that there's a strong market for people who want the conveniences of apartment living, but don't want to live in high-rises surrounded by busy highways.

"Northville has a quaint downtown. There's a cider mill right around the corner. And yet there's lots of convenient shopping nearby at Twelve Oaks and there's easy access to the expressways.

"We tried to capture the feeling of Northville ... that people are part of the suburbs, but they're still part of the country."

Park Place of Northville is a project of Mark Jacobson and Associates, a Birmingham-based company that has been developing single-family homes, strip malls and single-family homes for some 25 years.

Construction of Park Place of Northville started early in the summer of 1987 and the first units were available for occupancy in August of 1987.

Currently, the complex contains some 352 one- and two-bedroom units, but plans call for a total of more than 700 units on 105 acres of wooded land when the complex has been completed.

Nine different models are available, with the one-bedroom units ranging in size from 760 to 820 square feet and the two-bedroom units ranging in size from 920 to 1,175 square feet.

Monthly rents range from $590 to $800.

Kelly believes that the fast-paced contemporary society is one of the reasons people find apartment-living attractive. "Lots of people are moving away from single-family homes because the cost almost requires two incomes. And, when both people are working, they don't have time for the upkeep and maintenance associated with single-family homes," she said.

"So many people now work 10-12 hour days six days per week. When they have time off, they want to be able to come home and relax without having to worry about mowing the grass or weeding the flower beds.

"Park Place appeals to those types of people," she continued. "They can come home after work and relax in a setting which is beautifully landscaped."

The complex offers other amenities as well. There's a clubhouse with an indoor sauna and an exercise room. Ultimately, said Kelly, they will offer aerobics classes.

The most striking features, however, are a large (70,000 gallons) swimming pool complete with a Jacuzzi and a huge sundeck.

"We have 150 chairs on the deck right now, and we could probably put out twice as many if we had to," said Kelly. "We didn't want to be one of those apartment complexes which offers a swimming pool, but a swimming pool so small that it's always overcrowded."

"We should be able to accommodate everyone ... even at total occupancy."

Kelly said it's difficult to categorize the typical Park Place resident. "There are young people here and there are senior citizens ... empty nesters who don't want to be bothered with the upkeep of a home any more," she noted.

"But the majority of the people are are 25-40 years old — young professional people.

"It's not at all a 'swinging singles' kind of complex," she added. "We have a mixture of everything. It's very residential; basically what you'd find in any other suburban neighborhood."

Around the Yard: Gardening

Harvest often to keep garden producing

Your garden will be more productive and produce longer if you harvest crops as they ripen.

Cucumbers, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, summer squash, snap beans, asparagus, broccoli and spinach will slow their production of new fruits or leaves if you let fruits mature, explains Bernie Zandstra, horticulturist at Michigan State University. Keeping these crops harvested will keep them producing.

In some cases, it will also provide you with some better eating. Summer squash and cucumbers are best picked when they are still small. Snap beans are at their peak of quality when pods are nicely rounded but before they start to bulge with seeds.

Harvest these crops carefully to avoid injuring the plants, Zandstra advises. Use scissors or a sharp knife to snip eggplants and peppers from the plants, for instance. Twisting or pulling the fruits off may damage the plant or make it susceptible to invasions by insects or disease organisms.

When a crop or row of plants is done producing, it's a good idea to remove the plant debris. It can become a source of insect or disease problems. Removing it also clears the way for successive plantings of other crops.

Hugh Price, horticulture specialist at Michigan State University, advises gardeners to control asparagus beetles and fertilize asparagus to promote healthy plants and good yields.

"Asparagus beetles are small, oblong insects that lay their eggs on asparagus spears and feed on the foliage," he says. "If they're present in large numbers, their eggs will contaminate the harvest and their feeding will defoliate the plants."

The asparagus leaves produce the food that's stored in the roots to produce next year's spears, he points out. Defoliation weakens the plants, and that will reduce next year's harvest.

Fertilizing after harvest helps build up root reserves for next year's growth and so maintain high yields.

Price recommends using a complete fertilizer such as 5-10-10, 5-10-5 or 10-10-10 at a rate of 2½ to 3 pounds per 100 square feet of garden area. Or, better yet, have a soil test done and follow its recommendations.

Distinctive hip roof for single story ranch

By James McAlexander

Hip roofs and a long, one-story floor plan give the Truman 2 a low ranch profile. The overall effect, however, is much different from the typical ranch house.

The entrance to the Truman 2 is quite formal, a pillared porch in front of the double door with side lights. Instead of a front hall, the Truman 2 has an entrance landing above an open area at the junction of the living room, dining room and side halls. Even in this open space, a visual sense of separation is maintained by freestanding pillars.

Within this regimen of designated spaces are islands of informality. The roomy kitchen, across the hall from the dining room, has its own nook for casual meals. Doors lead outside onto a rear deck for warm weather entertaining. One end of the deck abuts a solarium at the back of the living room.

FLOOR PLAN PLAN NO. 120 02

OVERALL DIMENSIONS 78 0 x 48 0
LIVING 2440 square feet
GARAGE 576 square feet
COVERAGE 3016 square feet

The bedrooms are clustered at the end of the house opposite the family room and garage. The master suite contains a private bath, double vanity and walk-in closet. A main bath at the end of the hall is shared by two smaller bedrooms. This arrangement keeps the sleeping areas essentially separate from the rest of the house.

This might be important in the Truman 2 because the garage is the kind of place that would appeal to the do-it-yourselfer who likes to run power tools at any hour of the day. Complete with built-in workbench and storage lockers, and with a utility room and half-bath next door, the garage offers a self-contained haven for the weekend mechanic.

In the Kitchen

We all scream for ice cream

By Carol Cutler

Ice cream is big. Grown-ups stand in line for cones right along with the 6-year-olds. Any benefit auction with an ice cream party to offer is guaranteed high-powered bidding. Dieters mind their calories all week, then treat themselves to a dash of the satiny, cooling frozen delight.

If by some small chance folks need an excuse to eat ice cream, treat them to a party devoted to the delicious dessert. History is on your side.

Years back, before the home refrigerator-freezer became a standard kitchen fixture, the ice cream social was a very posh affair. Just the fact that you were serving ice cream meant that you had help in the kitchen to do the churning. Now, with so many upscale brands of ice cream on the market, you don't even have to make your own—but it certainly is a rewarding thing to do.

The hour to begin an ice cream party depends on whom you invite. If it's a mix of adults and children, or just children, a weekend afternoon is perfect. An adult party could be after dinner, making it a very different kind of dessert party. Depending on what time your friends generally sit down for dinner, plan the ice cream party about one hour later. This allows time for a leisurely meal and some cleanup.

Have three, four, even five selections of ice cream flavors. Don't fight the figures, give them America's favorites—vanilla, chocolate, butter pecan, strawberry and chocolate chip, in that order. New flavors dreamed up to entice ice cream loyalists from the old tried-and-true just don't make it. But anyone who has ever bought or made ice cream from truly ripe mango recognizes a taste that easily could vie for top honors.

Next prepare toppings. Hot fudge is a great favorite. Prepare it in a heavy pot that will hold its heat and not scorch easily, then transfer it to a stand with a heating candle or adjustable electric grid.

Butterscotch, caramel and strawberry also are popular toppings.

But that is only the beginning of the possibilities. Consider raisins soaked in rum (not for the children's party), cut-up fresh fruit, coconut, maple syrup, coffee beans, jelly beans and chopped-up cookies. Nuts, of course, are obligatory.

Drinks are quite simple. Iced tea, iced coffee or lemonade would all compliment America's favorite indulgence. Hot coffee would be welcomed by some guests as well. Stay away from fruit soft drinks that would compete with the fresh quality of the ice cream. Root beer and colas, however, are great to sip or turn into floats.

It may not make the top of the list, but my idea of ice cream nirvana is coffee, especially when it's this heavenly rich.

Coffee Ice Cream

- 1½ cups espresso coffee beans
- 3 cups half-and-half
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 7 egg yolks
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Optional: 1 tablespoon chocolate-flavored liqueur

Yields about 1½ quarts.

Put beans in food processor or coffee grinder and grind to very coarse texture. In heavy 3-quart saucepan combine half-and-half, cream and coffee beans.

Over medium heat slowly bring mixture to simmering point. Reduce heat to very low at once and gently cook three minutes. Cover and steep about 1 hour.

In medium bowl, beat egg yolks until very pale and creamy. While beating, gradually add sugar, a few tablespoons at a time. Continue beating until mixture becomes very pale and forms ribbons when beater is lifted over the satiny mass.

Slowly add coffee-cream essence while beating. Pour mixture into saucepan and place over medium heat. Stirring constantly, cook about 6 minutes, but be careful that mixture does not reach simmering point. Cook until mixture is thick enough so that when a finger is pulled across the back of a spoon a clean stripe remains.

Pour mixture into bowl, cool and chill thoroughly. Strain, add vanilla and optional liqueur, and pour into ice cream maker. Freeze according to manufacturer's instructions.

Sauces to toss with pasta

By Desiree Vivea

It doesn't make much sense to microwave pasta. Pasta takes the same amount of time to rehydrate no matter what the method you use to cook it, and the large amount of water needed to cook pasta actually heats more efficiently on a regular stovetop.

But that doesn't mean that microwaves and pasta don't mix. A microwave is the perfect way to prepare sauces for pasta.

Today's sauces are not to be ladled over pasta, but instead are tossed with piping-hot pasta just before serving.

Prepare pasta conventionally, according to package instructions (al dente is best—don't overcook), and drain well. Because these sauces don't take long to cook, you'll want to time the pasta to be done just before the sauce finishes cooking.

Gently toss freshly cooked, well-drained steaming hot pasta with sauce fresh from your microwave, and dinner's ready.

If the pasta cools before the sauce is ready, just place it in a microwave-safe dish and give it a quick zap to reheat at serving time. In fact, because cooked pasta reheats so well in the microwave, you could prepare it ahead of time and refrigerate; then just heat in the microwave immediately before serving time.

The recipes below all contain milk or milk products, which tend to boil over easily in the microwave. Keep an eye on the sauce as it cooks, following directions for stirring, and be sure to use a container large enough to contain sauce as it bubbles up during microwaving.

A mixed green salad or antipasto salad sprinkled with a savory vinaigrette and chopped fresh herbs would go well with any of these dishes. Add a side dish of sliced Italian plum tomatoes marinated in olive oil and herb vinegar or summer melon slices wrapped in paper-thin prosciutto for an extra special touch.

Micro-Tip of the Week: Is it safe to open your microwave during cooking? It sure is. As soon as the door is opened, for any reason, all microwave production stops, so you may stir or check food safely.

Yields 4 side-dish servings
Preparation time: 10 to 15 minutes
Cooking time: 5 to 8 minutes
Oven setting: high (100 percent power).

Place butter, onion and garlic in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave 2 to 3 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time, until onions are just limp. Blend in flour, paprika, thyme and pepper, then slowly blend in milk. Cover and microwave 2 to 3 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time, until sauce is thickened.

Stir in mushrooms, Parmesan, wine and parsley. Cover and microwave 1 to 2 minutes longer, or until sauce is heated through. Toss immediately with 1 pound hot, well-drained vermicelli.

Garnish with additional Parmesan and parsley, if desired.

Parmesan Mushroom Pasta Toss

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 medium onion, chopped
- 5 or 6 medium cloves, garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 teaspoon crumbled dried thyme
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 tablespoons red wine
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley or 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
- 1 pound vermicelli, cooked and well drained

Pasta St. Jacques

- 5 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided usage
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1 1/2 cups half-and-half or light cream
- 1/2 cup dry sherry
- 1 pound fresh or thawed frozen scallops
- 1 1/2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 pound pasta shells, cooked and drained
- Paprika
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Yields 4 to 6 servings
Preparation time: 15 to 20 minutes
Cooking time: 12 to 17 minutes
Oven setting: high (100 percent power)

Place 3 tablespoons butter in 4-cup glass measure, microwave 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 minutes, or until melted. Blend in flour, pepper and garlic salt to make smooth paste. Slowly blend in cream, and microwave, uncovered, 5 to 7 minutes, stirring twice, until mixture boils and thickens. Blend in sherry and set aside.

Place remaining butter in a 13-by-9-by-2-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 minutes to melt. Cut larger scallops in half, if necessary, and add to buttered baking dish along with mushrooms and green onions. Cover and microwave 4 to 5 minutes, stirring after 3 minutes, until scallops are tender. Sprinkle with lemon juice and toss.

Turn hot cooked pasta shells into large mixing bowl. Add cooked scallop mixture and reserved cream sauce; toss to combine.

Serve immediately, garnishing with paprika and chopped fresh parsley.

Marcus donates time

By DOROTHY NASH

"People who lay back are foolish," said Tom Marcus, owner of Marcus Glass of Novi. Being involved is the way to go.

When he and his wife were first married, they moved to Novi, and he got into the Jaycees, which meant instant involvement in community affairs.

Then nine years later Dr. William Barr came to Novi to take over as assistant superintendent of schools, and he talked Marcus into helping him organize a Lyons Club.

"Lyons are actually like Jaycees," commented Marcus, but there is no cut-off age.

So Marcus got more involved in the community.

"I've been on committees," he said, "and many times I've stood in front of stores, selling candy canes at Christmas and white canes in the spring" to raise money for one of the Lyons Club's projects - sight conservation and work with the Blind.

But service club involvement isn't the whole story.

Marcus volunteers time for the Novi Educational Fund, too.

And on a more personal level there are things this year like these, which have also involved, he said, his wife and partner, Thelma.

- Helping with decorations for the 1989 high school class party
- Giving a second grade class pieces of glass with which to make kaleidoscopes.

- Serving coffee and doughnuts to anyone who passed by during the Memorial Day parade.
- Coordinating with owners of nine other Novi businesses on July 18 to have an ice cream social for all comers to celebrate the 50's festival.

Why so much involvement? In answer, Tom Marcus said, "You get so much out of it - friends and interesting things to do."

And, too, he said, that although he knows that "sometimes we've got to unwind," it's hard to say NO when you're asked to do something

Tom Marcus enjoys being involved

A good love story

Northville graduate writes novel

By BRENDA DOOLEY

She's a romance writer. And Shelly Thacker Meinhardt is first to admit she doesn't fit the typical stereotype.

She doesn't lounge around the house in a pink negligee, eating bonbons while writing passion-filled passages of a steamy novel. Meinhardt says that's what most people erroneously think romance writers are like.

"The vast majority of romance writers are intelligent, highly educated professional women," Meinhardt says. "We don't get any respect — we're kind of the Rodney Dangerfield of publishing."

The 1981 Northville High School graduate admits that overcoming the preconceived notions tends to become rather frustrating. Yet, in the next breath, Meinhardt delightedly points out that romance novels have surpassed mysteries in popularity this year.

"We're just a different genre," she explains. "I think we'll surpass the stereotypes."

They also have to be dedicated. "It's extremely hard to break into," Meinhardt explains about gaining recognition in the publishing field. "There's no way to get rich quick. This writing is just as hard as any other type of writing — you need a fresh voice."

That's a fact with which Meinhardt is quite familiar. She recently finished writing Falcon on a Silver Wind, a manuscript that won praise from the Romance Writers of America (RWA). Meinhardt was named a finalist in the Rita Golden Heart Award competition, sponsored by the RWA.

Her novel was judged one of the top six of 137 manuscripts in the historical romance category. She received her Golden Heart award at the RWA annual conference in Boston on July 22.

Currently Meinhardt lives in Beechwalk Apartments in Walled Lake with her husband, Mark, a technical writer for Unisys. Currently she is discussing the possibility of publishing her novel with two agents.

"It's been a long, hard road," she says about writing the novel, a process that took nearly two years. "I never realized how much hard work it would be. I really feel driven to do this — it's my dream of a lifetime."

"It's not so much that writing makes me happy. Sometimes it can make me miserable if something doesn't come out the way I want it to. But not writing makes me very unhappy," she says.

Meinhardt quit her job as a public-relations writer for Crittendon Hospital in Rochester to give her time to finish the novel. Meanwhile she wrote free-lance articles for magazines including "American Bookseller," "Romance Writers' Report," "Entrepreneur," "Flowers," and "Looking Fit" for income. She and her husband bought a computer and printer and set up an office in the second bedroom of their apartment to give her a place to work.

"I have never been a corporate kind of person," she says. "I liked my job and I liked my boss, but I wanted to do something more. Ever since I was a kid I knew I would be a novelist."

As a student at Northville High School, Meinhardt was enrolled in honors English classes. She pursued her education at Albion College, where she majored in French and English. At college, she received the encouragement she needed from English professors, fueling her desire to write.

Soon she learned about the RWA and met other writers with common interests. After six months of research — mainly of history in the Middle Ages — she sat down to write Falcon on a Silver Wind. The novel is set in 1295 and follows the romantic lives of ex-mercenary Sir Connor of Glenshiel and Lady Laurien d'Amboise, who fall in love against all odds.

While writing the novel, Meinhardt says she received a lot of support from her family, especially from her husband.

"Even in the lean times he's been wonderful," she says. "I'm fortunate to have an understanding husband. He's always putting the fire under me."

Now that her novel is complete, Meinhardt has hopes of getting it published. She also plans to complete free-lance assignments and start working on another novel. She is also president of the Greater Detroit Chapter of RWA and one of her goals is to see the romance genre earn the respect it deserves.

Meinhardt's advice to aspiring writers is simple — just write.

"No one will do it for you," she says. "You have to apply the seat of your pants to the seat of your chair and write."

"I'm not in this for the money — I know the average advance for a first-time romance author is $3,000. I write historical romance because I love to write, I love history and I love a good love story," Meinhardt says.

Cranbrook presents dinosaur display

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Don't worry, this creature truly won't bite. Dinosaurs like this one are featured in an exhibit at Cranbrook

By BRUCE WEINTRAUB

From a three foot Maasaura to a 15 foot Tyrannosaurus, an all-new cast of scaly-skinned, jaw-grinding prehistoric creatures are on display at Cranbrook Institute of Science.

Called Dinosaurs! Dinosaurs!, the exhibit features 12 lifelike lizards, including a nest of eggs and hatching babies, plus juveniles interacting with their mothers.

"This is really a fun and enlightening exhibit," said Sylvia Crawford, communications coordinator for the institute of science.

"The exhibit is particularly interesting because it gives children and adults a realistic look at what animals who roamed the earth millions of years ago were like," Crawford said.

She added this exhibit is vastly different from the one which appeared at Cranbrook two years ago — mainly because of the inclusion of the Maasaura species.

"The Maasauras were discovered in Montana in 1978, and this is the first time they'll be featured in an area exhibit," Crawford said.

"This is the first dinosaur species to show interactions as a family."

Created by Kokoro Co., Ltd., the dinosaur models are displayed in a setting intended to reflect the earth's environment 65 to 175 million years ago.

"In addition to the dinosaurs, exhibit-goers learn about the history of the earth and also get an idea about life cycles in many generations," Crawford said.

She added each dinosaur is a robotic animal designed by Cranbrook staff in consultation with paleontologists at museums and universities across the U.S.

In addition to the robotic model dinosaurs, Crawford said the exhibit includes an outdoor dig site for children and a planetarium production.

Built like "giant sandboxes," Crawford said, the simulated dig site gives children an opportunity to explore what paleontologists do while locating and excavating fossils.

"The kids go digging on a natural trail — away from city commotion — and are able to relate to what an actual site looks like," she noted.

Actual cow bones are strewn throughout the simulated dig site, giving children an opportunity to pretend they are real paleontologists, Crawford said.

For adults and children, Cranbrook presents an auditorium slide show called "How Do We Know About Dinosaurs?" which explores the way scientists formulate ideas on the physical features and characteristics of dinosaurs.

A fossil lab also allows visitors to participate in scientific, hands-on activities with authentic fossil materials, Crawford said.

Running through Sept. 10, including Labor Day, exhibit hours are Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Admission for the entire exhibit is $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, and $2.50 for children aged 3 through 17. Children under 3 are admitted free of charge.

For more information on the exhibit, call 645-3200.

Dixie tops Westland to win NABF Series

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Bayside's Anthony Sylvester prepares to slide while Dixie catcher Huston Venters awaits the throw

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

As soon as Lexington Dixie nipped Westland 2 in the championship game of the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) Junior World Series on Sunday afternoon, Tournament Director Bob Frellick left for a well-deserved vacation.

Well deserved indeed. Frellick and the rest of the volunteers from Northville Junior Baseball were the ideal hosts during a hectic 13-day span in which three NABF tournaments were held. The last tournament — just as the two that preceded it — came off without a hitch.

"The tournament ran smoothly," said Ivor James, president of the Little Caesars Amateur Baseball Federation, which sponsored all three NABF events in Northville. "As usual, there weren't any major problems."

The seven-team, double-elimination tourney for players age 15-16 made its eighth straight appearance in Northville. Lexington (Ky.) Dixie — a qualifier from the Nashville, Tenn. Region — took home the World Series title with a 9-5 win over Westland 2. Because Northville didn't field a Mickey Mantle-level squad this summer, Westland was brought in as the host team and came within an inning of stealing the championship.

"(Westland) played excellent ball in the tourney," James said. "The team was made up of mostly 15-year-olds, so even though they were younger than everybody else, they gave a good accounting for themselves. With a break here and there, they could have won it all."

Westland made it to the final round by beating the Bayside Yankees, a nearly perennial fixture in the Junior World Series with six appearances in the last eight years. In the preliminary round Saturday, Dixie topped Westland 15-6 to hand the team its first — and only — loss prior to the finals. Dixie headed into Sunday without a loss and needed to beat Westland once out of two games.

But the Westland squad made things interesting with an impressive 10-7 victory over Dixie in a game that was started Saturday evening, called due to darkness, and completed Sunday morning. That set up a winner-take-all final at noon.

Westland jumped into an early lead and had a slim 5-4 advantage after five innings of play. Dixie tied it with a solo home run in the sixth and then broke the tie with a four-run rally in the final inning to take the title. Dixie — coached by Tom Brooks — finished the tournament with a 5-1 record. Head Coach Gary Pierce helped

Lexington Dixie players celebrate a homer by Kevin Wallace (17) in NABF World Series action last Friday guide Westland to the second-place finish with a 4-2 mark. The Bayside Yankees (2-2) were third; Town Center from Redmond, Wash. (1-2) and the Taylor (Mich.) A's (1-2) tied for fourth; while winless Harbor Federal of Baltimore, Md. and the Moundbuilders Juniors (also 0-2) from Newark, Ohio tied for sixth. The batting title for the tourney was split three ways. Robert Mach, a right fielder for Taylor — the Michigan Region winner — shared the honors with Matthew Guiliano and Anthony Sylvester of the Bayside Yankees. All three batted .500.

"The Junior World Series was more competitive than the Sophomore World Series, when Nuckols rolled over everybody," James said. "There seemed to be a lot of walks, and that resulted in some high-scoring games. From the comments I heard, the out-(of)-state teams feel this is the best-run tournament they've been to. There are very few adverse comments each year." James, a past president of the NABF, said the tournaments will probably return to Northville next summer, unless the Little Caesars Organization decides not to continue as sponsor.

"We're very happy with the way Northville runs the tournaments," he said. "As long as (Little Caesars) elects to provide the financial backing, Northville will continue to be the host city."

"Bob Frellick and his people put in a lot of hard work to make it successful. If we did decide not to continue as the sponsor, it wouldn't be a bad reflection on Northville. It's really a decision by our board of directors."

MHSAA sponsors 'Steroids and Our Students' seminar

In its first move to address growing concern regarding steroid use by prep student-athletes, the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) will co-sponsor a one-day seminar called "Steroids and Our Students" in Lansing on Sept. 13.

Working with the Michigan Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association, the Michigan Office of Substance Abuse, and WBA Ruster Foundation of Sturgis, the conference is geared to high-school administrators, coaches, and team medical personnel. Information will be presented to equip educators with the knowledge and skills to conduct appropriate in-school programs to prevent drug abuse and to respond to those who have developed substance-abuse problems.

"While substantive data is not yet available regarding steroid use by students in general in our schools, the threat of the drug and its lure of temporary performance enhancements is strong enough to warrant this conference," said Jack Roberts, executive director of the MHSAA. "This is the first of several steps we plan to take in this area as an association."

FALL PRACTICE SCHEDULES: The rites of autumn hit the preparation stage Aug. 14, when over 100,000 boys and girls statewide begin practice for the eight fall sports under the jurisdiction of the MHSAA.

For football, practice without pads was allowed to commence yesterday (Aug. 9), regardless of when grid practice begins, schools must conduct three days of padless drills and 14 total days of practice before the first scheduled date for varsity competition, which is Sept. 1.

Football is the only sport in the fall which requires a practice minimum prior to the competition. All other activities can engage in competition as soon as member schools determine their team is ready to play.

The new season brings some changes in the MHSAA tournament schedule, affecting girls basketball and swimming. Finals in the girls basketball tourney will be a week earlier this season, with the title games to take place in Allendale on Dec. 2. The switch moves the regional competition to the three days preceding Thanksgiving, with district competition occupying the previous week.

The overgrown nine holes north of Grand River has spurred false rumors that Westbrooke has closed

Record/CHRIS BOYD

Rumors surround Westbrooke's fate

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

This is the fifth in a series of feature articles on the local golf scene, courses, and participants. Westbrooke Golf Course is located at 47666 Grand River Avenue in Novi.

Contrary to the rumors currently floating around, Westbrooke Golf Course is not closed, and plans are in place for Novi's only course to continue serving the area for many years to come.

That's the message from Westbrooke Manager Jack Nelson, who's had to personally deal with all the rumors and gossip concerning the future of the facility — at the corner of Grand River and Beck Roads — that's been in business for over 40 years.

"We get questions every day," he said. "I tell everyone the same thing: don't believe any of the things you are hearing or reading because they are invariably wrong. We are open and plan to be in the foreseeable future."

To help explain why Westbrooke is the topic of so many rumors, you have to go back three years, when the 27-hole course — then called "Bob-O-Link" — was sold by Midge and Julie Cova, the original owners, to a developer. The developer, in turn, sold the 18 holes south of Grand River to a group headed by brothers Kenneth, Richard, and Earl Cova. They renamed the course "Westbrooke." The remaining nine holes north of Grand River were retained for development.

Since last fall, the north nine has been closed in preparation for the development of "Westbrooke Place," a proposed office / commercial complex. But to make matters even more confusing, it's been reported that Providence Hospital in Southfield is interested in buying the remaining land south of Grand River to build a new hospital. As you might expect, the whole scenario is very confusing and concerning to local golfers.

"The only thing that's been going on upon between the owners of the course and Providence is a purchase of the land but nothing's been understood that from the piece of land is acquired to the first shovel of dirt is turned. In cases like this, it's usually six to ten years down the road. This whole thing is a long ways away — it happens at all."

It's believed that even if the land goes through, Westbrooke will be able to lease the land back from Providence and keep the course running for another five to 10 years while the lengthy state and local approval processes are completed.

Holzer catcher fights to overcome arthritic condition

By STEPHANIE FRANIA

Normal growing pains suddenly became a potentially life-threatening disease when 13-year-old John Frazzini woke up unable to walk or even get out of bed.

Now, six years later, the Highland resident is an outstanding athlete. This summer, he was an All-Star catcher for the Northville-based Tom Holzer Ford team, an entry in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League.

Frazzini is winning a battle every day against all odds — but it hasn't been easy.

Diagnosed with ankylosing spondylitis, more commonly known as chronic inflammatory arthritis, Frazzini has never lived the life of a carefree teenager.

"I can't bend, I can't twist, I can't touch my toes," he explained. "If I can't physically do something, I have to find different ways of doing things."

One August morning, before he was about to enter the eighth grade, Frazzini woke up with enormously swollen joints. So swollen, in fact, he couldn't even get out of bed.

"He said, 'I can't move my legs; go get Mom,'" recalled his brother, Michael, who is now 13. "I said, 'What?'"

Frazzini was rushed to his physician and then sent directly to the hospital.

"It was horrible," remembered Dottie, his mother. "They ran tests and ruled out a lot of scary, real serious life-threatening things."

It wasn't until December that Frazzini was finally diagnosed with the inflammatory disease.

"Even when they told me, I said, 'Big deal. I already knew I had something,'" he said.

"And now it has a name," added Dottie.

There is no known cause of this disease. However, it usually strikes between the ages of 10 and 15 years. With few exceptions, this arthritis affects the lower body more than the upper body.

"It affects my knees, hands, shoulders, back — really all my joints," he explained. "All I can do is take aspirin and a lot of hot baths."

For a long time, Frazzini felt as if there wasn't anything really wrong with him. Although he was a standout athlete at Millford Lakeland High School, participating in football, basketball, and baseball, he never informed his coaches or friends that he was afflicted with the disease.

"I never said anything, because I didn't want it to be a disadvantage," he said. "I always thought maybe they (the coaches) would think I wouldn't be able to do the job they wanted me to do. I didn't want to be babied or get special treatment."

— John Frazzini
All-Star catcher

Because of his inability to move his joints in normal ways, Frazzini cannot master all athletic maneuvers. So, he simply compensates by finding a way his body will move.

For example, he explained that he is unable to swing a baseball bat like most batters. "I just can't. Once I tried to twist a way I couldn't, and I just lost my balance," he remembered.

Being unable to compete in the same manner as his teammates may seem like quite a disadvantage for someone who plays in the LCBL, which features some of the area's top college players.

As the Holzer catcher, Frazzini was selected to play in the LCBL All-Star game, held July 5 in Tiger Stadium. Only two catchers from the Livonia league were chosen for this honor. The LCBL was pitted against the Detroit Adray League.

"I think it's a great opportunity (to play in Tiger Stadium)," he said. "I got to play in the Silverdome when I was in high school, and a lot of people get to play there. But not many get to play in Tiger Stadium."

Frazzini was particularly excited that "tons of scouts" were expected to be on hand at the stadium to watch the all-stars.

"Obviously, you have to be a good baseball player or you wouldn't be there," he explained.

When asked if he hopes to play professional baseball, Frazzini doesn't hesitate to admit he does. "It's my ultimate hidden goal. But if I don't get to play pro," he said, smiling and shrugging his shoulders.

Stressing Frazzini's fierce competitiveness as an athlete, Holzer coach John Osborne says he plays the game very hard.

"He believes in himself. He's one of the best, if not the best, catcher in the league," Osborne continued. "Hitting-wise, he was one of our bright spots offensively. His arm is just an excellent arm. He does an excellent job behind the plate in terms of keeping the ball in front of him."

Osborne was among the many coaches from whom Frazzini hid his battle with arthritis. "I didn't realize it until the end of the season when his mom told me," the coach added.

Dottie compares his acceptance of the disease to his dream of playing in Tiger Stadium.

"He made up his mind that his goal was to make it to Tiger Stadium, and he did. It's just like the arthritis. His goal is not to let it get him down," she said.

Frazzini attributes much of his success to Nate Philpot, who was his coach on the Huron Valley team last summer.

"He gave me a lot of confidence to play baseball," he explained.

Some days are better than others for Frazzini. "I've seen him not be able to open a Gatorade bottle because he has no strength in his hands," Dottie said. "But the best part is that he never gives up."

Playing the catching position doesn't help ease the pain, of course. "It's called the most natural athletic position," he explained. "Five times your body rests at the top of your knees."

Often, Frazzini becomes stiff and sore. "Sometimes everything just starts throbbing," he said. "So I have to keep moving so I don't get too stiff."

It is usually impossible for him to go to movies or to sit anywhere for an extended period of time.

"When I go to a movie I always find myself saying, 'Is this movie over yet?'" he commented. "One time I couldn't even sit through a Tigers game because I was too sore."

Last year, Frazzini attended Grand Valley State University. "I hated sitting through classes," he smiled.

He is unsure where he will attend college this fall.

It may seem at times that the pain is too much and the pressure too hard to bear for Frazzini. But his attitude is more than positive.

"If he hurts, he hurts," said his sister, Lisa, 20. "He knows how to fix it."

Novi's Westbrooke Golf Course plans to remain open into the '90s

The unkempt and overgrown appearance of the land north of Grand River and south of I-96 is also another big concern for Nelson and Westbrooke.

"We were told that the land will be developed this spring," Nelson said. "We were told not to cut it, fertilize it, or water it because of that. Well, the deal fell through on the development, and now it just sits there, looking like a hay field."

"People driving by look at the north nine and think we are closed. We've lost a lot of business because of it."

There is some good news for local golfers, however, if the planned development is put on hold.

"I've been told by the owners that if there is no development, there is a possibility we will reopen the north nine next season," Nelson said. "It's a shame to see it just sitting there, becoming overgrown."

Even though there are no guarantees that Novi's only golf course will remain open in the near future, there are many indications that it will remain in business for quite some time. For instance, a new $250,000-plus sprinkling system was installed on the south 18 last year, and nearly $100,000 in renovations have been made to the course in the last 12 months.

"The irrigation system is controlled by computers and timers and cost us more than a quarter of a million dollars," Nelson said.

"Treasures of Childhood" -150 Years of American Toys-

Trainload of Toys to Visit Brighton

Artrain, the nation's only traveling museum on a train, will be in Brighton from August 10 to August 13. It will be located in Downtown Brighton. Within Artrain's three gallery cars are delightful displays of a wide variety of antique and classic toys including model trains, historic board games, whimsical mechanical banks, beautifully crafted china dolls and a timespan of well-loved teddy bears. The exhibition, "Treasures of Childhood": 150 Years of American Toys, presents over 300 of the finest objects from the Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson Collection, one of the most distinguished toy collections in the nation. In Artrain's fourth car, the studio car, visitors can watch artists and toymakers at work.

Artrain will be open to the public from noon to 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 10; from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 11; from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 12; and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 13. It takes approximately 45 minutes to tour the train. There is no admission charge, but a small donation is requested.

A visit to the Artrain will evoke the look and feel of childhood in the distant and recent past. In addition to providing a nostalgic view of play and playthings, the exhibition will help the audience explore the lessons that toys teach and the social values that they transmit.

Upon entering Artrain, visitors will view an audio-visual presentation introducing the "Treasures of Childhood" and featuring historic photographs of children at play. The first gallery features early childhood toys, including blocks, Mickey Mouse and Mother Goose toys. Several displays compare ancient, antique and modern toys; dolls, dice and tops from the Fourth Century A.D., borrowed from the University of Michigan's Kelsey Museum of Archeology, rest alongside remarkably similar toys made as recently as 1982. Through reading labels to a magical window filled with teddy bears, visitors will see how the bear was "invented" and discover how today's versions of bears are similar to those of their parents'. Recreated toy shop windows from 1895, 1920, 1945 and 1960 display dolls, trains, games and other toys of each era.

In the second gallery car, visitors will find a variety of toys, many with accompanying hands-on displays. Rows of cartoon character toys, from early figures like Buster Brown to ageless heroes like Dick Tracy, recreate the Sunday funny papers on the walls of the gallery. The history of board games from the Victorian period to contemporary times will intrigue viewers of all ages. Visitors will be able to try their skill at three different games from the 19th century. Hands-on mechanical banks and videotapes of mechanical toys in motion will allow visitors to experience how these fascinating objects work.

Gallery Three provides a panorama of transportation toys, including boats, trains, horse-drawn carriages, automobiles, airplanes and spaceships, all in specially "landscaped" displays. The third gallery ends at the Museum Shop where a variety of toys, including ones handcrafted by Michigan artists, are offered for sale. After touring the galleries, visitors will see toymakers and artists at work in Artrain's demonstration car.

Mr. Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson is a former buyer and Vice President of F.A.O. Schwarz, New York's famous toy store. His collection of over 5,000 toys represent American life over the last century and a half, from horse-and-buggy days through moon landings and space travel. Portions of the Wilkinson Collection have been exhibited in the United States, Europe and Asia. London's Victoria and Albert Museum described the exhibition there as "the most important and comprehensive collection of American Toys ever assembled for exhibition in this country."

Artrain has traveled to twenty-eight states and has welcomed aboard nearly two million visitors since it began touring eighteen years ago. Artrain is supported in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts, the Institute for Museum Services, the Michigan Council for the Humanities, and local sponsors including the Livingston Arts Council.

Enter Your Car! in the

Summerfest Saturday, Aug. 12th

The fourth annual classic car parade sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Brighton will be part of the Brighton Summerfest. We invite you to display your classic car at the Middle School starting at 3:00 p.m. The parade starts at the Middle School on Spencer Road (on your left as you enter Brighton) and proceed down Main Street to the Mill Pond Park. Immediately following the parade, park your classic car in a reserved area and enjoy a free concert held at the park featuring the great sixties band:

MOOSE and DA SHARKS

The afternoon will be a lot of fun and a great way to show off your classic car. Last year over 100 classic cars paraded and enjoyed the concert that followed. There is no cost to have your car in the parade, receive a free dash plaque. This year we will be giving awards to select cars. We hope you will be able to join us. The parade will form at 7:00 p.m. and will start at 7:30 p.m.
