Kidnapping investigated — child safe

By MIKE TYREE

Township police are investigating allegations that gunmen who identified themselves as police officers abducted an infant from her father Sunday evening at an apartment complex on Seven Mile Road.

Captain Philip Presnell said township police received a report at approximately 9:40 p.m. Sunday that three men in a beige van had abducted 1-year old Brittany Roberts from her father Christopher Roberts, 22, a Macomb Township resident.

Tuesday afternoon, police located the child, who is in hiding with her mother in Shelby Township.

Roberts reportedly was visiting his aunt at a condominium adjacent to Northridge Apartments when the alleged abduction occurred, police said.

BRITTANY ROBERTS

The incident allegedly was sparked when Roberts' wife, Deborah, took the child from their Macomb Township home March 23.

According to Macomb Circuit Court records, Deborah Roberts filed for divorce March 30 and was awarded temporary custody of the child, a day after Christopher Roberts forcibly took Brittany from his wife during a meeting at the Lake-side Mall in Sterling Heights.

Christopher Roberts reportedly lived at undisclosed locations with Brittany for two weeks and had spent the weekend at the Northville Township condominium of his aunt Anita Lisowski, who police said testified that she witnessed the alleged abduction.

According to Presnell, Christopher Roberts and Lisowski testified they were in a vehicle preparing to leave Lisowski's condominium when a van pulled up and blocked their driveway exit. Two men emerged from the van, waving handguns and identifying themselves as police officers, Presnell said.

The men allegedly pointed the guns at Roberts and Lisowski and demanded the child. Roberts said he handed Brittany to the men when they loaded and pointed the handguns at him.

"I would not give my kid up if there wasn't a gun stuck to my head," Roberts said Monday.

Roberts then said the men shouted to a third person in the van He said they called the man "Doug" and Roberts said he recognized him as Doug Allor of Utica, his father-in-law.

With Brittany allegedly in their possession, the three men drove away in the van, according to Roberts.

Presnell said Monday police were looking for "a relative of the natural mother" in connection with the alleged abduction.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Doug Allor had not been located by township police. The two alleged gunmen were also at large, Presnell said.

Numerous attempts to contact Allor at his Utica home were unsuccessful as of Tuesday evening, but relatives of Deborah Roberts have been quoted as saying Christopher Roberts voluntarily gave Brittany back to the Allor family.

Despite the apparent struggle over custody of the child, Presnell said the incident could not be classified as a domestic dispute if the allegations against Allor and the two gunmen are true. He said potential charges against the occupants of the van could include kidnapping, commission of a felony with a handgun and assault.

In addition, Roberts and Lisowski could be charged with filing a false police report if the abduction did not take place, Presnell said.

Tuesday afternoon, Presnell said township police were attempting to determine if the incident actually did occur.

He attributed the emotionalism of the case to the nature of the incident. "These things get so volatile with a child involved," he said.

Probate judge to hear cases at state hospital

By MIKE TYREE

A probate judgeship will be established at Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital this summer to hear mental competency cases, a move supporters say will benefit patients and taxpayers.

Chief Judge of the Wayne County Probate Court Freddie Burton Jr. said Tuesday that a probate judge will be elected in August to sit full-time in court at NRPH to hear competency cases and cases involving western Wayne juveniles.

Burton said the move was prompted by the "dehumanizing nature" of moving NRPH patients and hospital support staff to court in Detroit for mental competency hearings.

"Right now, an average of 25 cases a day from Northville are heard in Detroit," Burton said.

He said that moving patients, doctors, and attendants downtown is time-consuming and costly and causes hardships for patients and their families.

"This is a tremendous boon for the Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital," he said. "It's more viable, diversified and is an opportunity for patients to receive treatment and justice at the same time."

"I'm excited and optimistic about this plan."

Burton said the possibility of moving a probate judgeship to NRPH has been discussed the past five years. Whenever questions of funding the position arose, the talks broke down, he said.

"Insufficient funding was the problem," he said. "But by negotiating with the state, we believe we have enough money."

Over $250,000 to fund the court will be supplied by the state, through the Department of Mental Health, ac-

Vandals leave mark throughout city

By STEVE KELLMAN

Several Northville City sites were the objects of an extensive and expensive prank Tuesday night. Among the sites hit was McDonald Ford's storage lot on Griswold Street north of Main Street, the former Ford Valve Plant parking lot.

A total of 33 cars at the fenced storage site were spray-painted, scratched or both, with total damage estimated at $7,332. The damage was found at 10:40 a.m. Wednesday morning, April 11, after the site was secured the previous day at 3 p.m.

The cars, many of which were brand-new vehicles destined for the dealership's rental fleet, were painted in black or scratched with phrases like "Cops suck," "Buy me," and "Nice car."

But one slogan, "Smooth Criminals," appeared repeatedly on the cars. The phrase was also found at two other locations in the city the next morning.

The phrase was sprayed in red on the side of the Dandy Gander restaurant, 333 East Main Street, between 12:30-5:30 a.m. on Wednesday.

Earth Day featured in today's Record

The Northville Record is marking Earth Day 1990 — this Sunday, April 22 — in two different ways.

Earth Day 1990 is an international event marking the 20th anniversary of the first Earth Day, considered a major boost to the nation's environmental movement. Organizers hope this weekend's activities will become the largest environmental demonstration ever.

The first way the newspaper observes the day is a four-page special report in this week's paper. Titled "Taking Stock," the project steps back for an overview of the condition of our local environment.

The project, which begins on page 13A, includes reports on the status of our local wildlife, woods, wetlands, water, and air; a calendar of Earth Day events in the area; progress reports on local recycling programs, and information on how individuals can contribute to the effort; and more.

The second contribution is more direct: this week's edition of the Northville Record is being printed on recycled newsprint.

Sliger/Livingston Publications, which publishes the Record and five other weekly papers, is using the recycled paper to show the company's commitment to the goals of recycling in general and Earth Day 1990 in particular, said Richard Perleberg, vice president and general manager.

Perleberg explained the company has contracts with three newsprint suppliers, one of which offers stock made of 51 percent recycled fiber. This week's papers are being printed entirely on that stock, he said.

Last year, about 14 percent of the company's total paper consumption used the recycled stock, Perleberg said. This year's total will probably be about the same.

The company hopes to increase its use of recycled paper, Perleberg said. But there are a couple of conditions limiting its use.

For one, the company operates

Hopping into town

The Northville Jaycees annual Easter Egg Hunt was a hit with children and adults alike, despite the rainy morning which forced the hunt to move indoors. One visitor who was easy to spot in the crowd at the Northville Community Center on Main Street was the Easter Bunny himself. He was immediately surrounded, above, when he arrived.

Assessment reductions due

By MIKE TYREE

A trip to the Board of Review apparently was worth the trouble for a number of township residents.

Nancy Molloy, administrative assistant to the treasurer, said Tuesday that the Board of Review — established to listen to arguments from residents who felt their property tax assessments were too high — heard a total of 474 cases during March.

And the effort will pay off with good news for some of the residents who were upset with a township-wide 13.5-percent increase in assessments, she said.

"I would say a significant number of property owners received reductions in their assessments," she said.

Molloy said statistics on the reviewed cases were still being compiled and an exact number of reductions would not be available until next week. But she said results would be known to individual residents late this week.

"People should be notified by the end of the week (on the outcome of individual cases)," she said.

Supervisor Georgina Goss said the review process allows a property owner to come in and "appeal their assessment based on various criteria."

After the board hears the case, the assessment will be lowered or the assessment will be deemed correct and left as issued, she said.

Goss said she has directed Township Manager Richard Henningsen to create specifications for reassessing some Northville Township properties.

"He'll be looking at the possibility of reassessing some sites because enough people were pointing to discrepancies that should be looked at on an individual basis," she said.

Goss listed subdivisions such as areas three, four and five of Northville Colony, and Park Gardens, Northville Commons, Knapps subdivision and portions of Highland Lakes subdivision as sites that may be reassessed.

"The Board of Trustees would have to vote on the expenditure, but an analysis for cost is being prepared at this time," she said.

NEWS BRIEFS

SEEDLING DISTRIBUTION FOR NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP

On the heels of last year's successful tree give-away, the township beautification commission will sponsor the second annual Arbor Day Seedlings Distribution from 10 a.m. until noon at township hall, 41600 Six Mile Road.

Approximately 2,200 seedlings — Austrian pine, red pine, Scotch pine, white pine, Douglas fir, Colorado blue spruce, Norway spruce, white spruce and thornless honey locust — will be available for distribution on the day before Earth Day.

To obtain one seedling of each variety, proof of township residency must be furnished. A container to carry home the seedlings is also required.

The seedlings are purchased by Northville Township through the Wayne County Soil and Water Conservation District and will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Last year's giveaway was a big success, according to Beautification Commission Chairperson Tina Sellas.

"People turned out in droves," she said. "(We) received favorable comments and encouragement."

ABSENTEE BALLOTS FOR VOTE INCREASE — Township Clerk Thomas L.P. Cook said that 779 absentee ballots for the May 1 township vote on the Haller Library proposal had been received in his office by Tuesday afternoon.

He said more than 1,600 absentee ballots were received for each of two elections — including a police and fire millage and a recreation millage — in 1988.

Cook said absentee ballots are sent to every registered township voter who have used the ballots in the past and to all senior citizens.

Deputy Clerk Eunice Switzer said township residents can pick up absentee ballots at township hall until April 28. Those with absentee ballots can vote until 4:30 p.m. April 30, she said.

BOOK DISPLAY — Northville Public Library's Adult Book Display for March 26-May 5 is the popular "Staff Recommends." This will be the third year in which a wide variety of books read and enjoyed by the library staff members will be gathered together to share with the public. An accompanying pamphlet has also been prepared.

WILLIAM ALLAN OPEN HOUSE — William Allan Academy will hold its spring Open House on Tuesday, May 1 from 6:30-8:30 p.m. Preschool parents are welcome. There will be a meeting for prospective kindergarten parents for the 1990-1991 school year on Friday, May 4 from 2-3 p.m. William Allan Academy is located at 49875 W. Eight Mile Road in Northville.

Wagers up at Northville Downs

By STEVE KELLMAN

Northville Downs showed its first increase in wagering in five years, posting a total "handle" or amount of money bet, of $79,141,726 during the 1989-1990 racing season.

That amount is 4.3 percent more than last year's total.

Northville City's share of the track's revenue is capped at $900,000.

The yearly handle at the track has been declining since the 1985-1986 racing season, when the track took in $89,370,335 in wagers.

A total of 393,794 people walked through the gates of Northville Downs for the 1989-1990 racing season; an average of 2,773 people on each of the 142 days the track was open.

In other words, the average person bet just over $200 a night.

The Jackson at Northville meet, when Jackson Harness Raceway officials run the track, ran from Oct. 15 through Dec. 31. The Northville Downs meet ran from Jan. 1 through March 31.

Margaret Zayt, general manager of the Downs, was pleased with the year's results. "We're up 9 percent in handle and attendance," she said of the Northville Downs portion of the season. "We were up 20 percent until we had the fog and the rain and the last two weeks of the season."

Zayt attributed this year's success to a number of factors. "I think (the opening of highway) 696 had something to do with it," she said. Zayt noted that attendance at Hazel Park has also been higher than usual since the highway opened.

The Hazel Park Harness season began April 2.

Also, Northville Downs is currently undergoing a $2-million renovation project. Last year saw the reflooring and refurbishment of the grandstand, and replacement of the grandstand's 3,000 seats. A new tote board and driver's lounge were also installed.

This year, Zayt said, the clubhouse will be remodeled and new lighting installed.

"I think the renovations had something to do with it, because people were very pleased with the results," Zayt said. "One thing people usually say about Northville Downs is that we're very clean compared to other tracks."

Recycled print used by paper

under quotas from its three suppliers. "When we get beyond (the quotas), we are tending to favor recycled newsprint... whenever possible," Periberg said.

A larger limitation is the fact that demand for recycled newsprint far exceeds the supply across the nation.

"Most of the recycled newsprint in the country or North America is being used by somebody," Periberg said. "There's not a whole lot of room for us to move at this point."

"We're totally in support of using as much recycled newsprint as we can, and encouraging the increase in supply... We expect to be using more and more as time goes on."

Periberg expects that questions of price, quality and supply will be answered. "All of those seem to be reachable goals," he said.

Police Blotters

Reports from Meijer top police blotter activities

The following larcenies were committed at Meijer, 20401 Haggerty, and recorded in the Northville Township police department media book during the week of April 6-13:

On April 6 at approximately 5:50 p.m., a 42-year-old Taylor man was arrested for attempting to steal a Detroit Pistons Jacket

On April 7, a 38-year-old Romulus woman was arrested at 1:30 p.m. for attempting to steal earrings, a fashion pin and a 35mm camera. The case is open pending a court date, according to township police.

On April 8, a 35-year-old Detroit woman was arrested and charged with retail fraud after a 5:10 p.m. incident at Meijer, according to police. The woman attempted to steal an electric shaver and a leather wallet, police said.

Also at Meijer, a female shopper told township police that a man indecently exposed himself in the parking lot April 8 at approximately 11 p.m.

LARCENY — Township police received a complaint that a customer of Silver Screen Video, 40400 Five Mile, failed to return rented videotapes. The tapes were initially rented Jan. 20, police said.

VEHICLE DAMAGED — Township police received a report that a 1971 Chevrolet Corvette belonging to a Northville Place resident was damaged late April 7 or early April 8. The complainant said someone hit the vehicle with an egg, causing potential damage of $1,000 to his custom paint job.

LARCENY — Tires and rims valued at $400 were stolen off the passenger's side of a 1985 Ford Escort that was parked on Mann Court April 5 between 1-8:30 a.m., township police said.

VEHICLE DAMAGED — A 1987 Chevrolet Beretta parked on Innsbrook Drive received an estimated $500 damage sometime late April 10 or early April 11. Township police said the windshield of the vehicle received extensive damage.

OUIL — A 28-year-old Northville man was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of liquor April 6 at approximately 2:15 a.m. The driver was traveling north on Six Mile when the arrest was made, police said.

LARCENY — A men's 26-inch 10-speed bicycle valued at $219 was reported stolen sometime between 8:30 a.m. April 4 and 5:30 p.m. April 5, according to police. The complainant told police that he rode the bicycle to school April 4 but forgot it and left it at school. When he returned the next day, the bike was gone, he told police.

OUIL — A Plymouth woman was stopped on Main Street east of Sheldon Road by Northville City police at 8:35 p.m. April 10, after Plymouth Township police broadcast a warning that the driver might be intoxicated. When stopped, the woman reportedly denied having had anything to drink, and said she was on her way to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. She failed several sobriety tests and was placed under arrest. Her blood alcohol level was later measured at .14 percent, above the state's legal level of below .1 percent.

STOLEN CAMERA — A Randolph Street man reported the theft of a camera from his car, which was parked in his driveway at the time. According to city police reports, the camera, which was in the glove compartment of the man's vehicle, was stolen sometime between 6 p.m. April 10 and 9:30 a.m. April 11. The camera, a black 35mm Nikon in a dark brown case, was valued at $400.

MISSING VIDEOTAPES — City police received a report of three tapes missing and presumed stolen from the Northville Public Library. The tapes, valued at $130 altogether, were "Casualties of War," missing since March 27; "Guide to Hawaii," missing since March 22; and "Gunga Din," missing since Dec. 29, 1989.

BROKEN WINDOW — A Yerkes Street homeowner reported the breakage of a $30 storm window at the rear of the home, according to city police reports. The damage was reportedly done between 7 a.m. April 8 and 11:15 p.m. April 11.

FOUND PROPERTY — City police found a girl's bicycle at Northville High School, 775 N. Center Street, at 2:15 p.m. on April 14. Anyone wishing to claim the bicycle is asked to call the Northville City police at 349-1234 with a more detailed description.

Heintz tells city council Eight Mile help is on the way

Northville and Novi residents can look forward to a smoother ride on Eight Mile Road, though not for a year or two.

Wayne County Commission Vice Chairperson Susan Heintz, R-Northville, recently assured the Northville city council that work on the road would begin within the year, and that repaving would start in 1991.

Heintz said that pressure from Northville city and township officials had been effective in getting the county to set a schedule for the paving project. City officials drafted a resolution several weeks ago urging that the county consider repairs to Eight Mile a priority. "Also, I've received many inquiries from residents of the city and township in regards to this repaving," she said.

"We have actually gotten a schedule for the repaving and widening of Eight Mile," she said. The road is also scheduled to be widened to five lanes between the bridge just east of Novi Road and Farmington Road.

Under the schedule, the necessary road engineering studies will be performed in 1990. Eight Mile between Meadowbrook Road and Newburgh Road in Livonia will be paved in 1991, and the stretch between Novi Road and Meadowbrook will be repaved in 1992. The road will be widened during the repaving process.

According to Heintz, part of the delay in getting Eight Mile repaved has been that Oakland County has different priorities than Wayne County. Each county is responsible for maintenance of various parts of the road.

Heintz said Oakland County has more pressing traffic concerns about Twelve Mile and Fourteen Mile roads. "It hasn't been easy getting them to take a look at Eight Mile," she said.

The repaving project will be overseen by Wayne County and contracted out to a private builder, Heintz said.

The Novi Road bridge represents another potential problem. Though the bridge may eventually be widened from four to five lanes, Heintz said that would not happen without participation from Oakland County. "The bridge is going to require something from Oakland," she said.

The stretch of road from Novi Road to Center Street is only scheduled for light repaving at this point, which consists of patching holes and replacement of small portions of the road, rather than full repavement.

Parents, tots protest paving

By STEVE KELLMAN

City Council members faced the wrath of parents and toddlers alike Monday night over the proposed paving of green space behind the Scout Building at 215 West Cady Street.

Council members reviewed two proposed parking lot layouts from Singh Development, developers of the MainCentre project. The layouts would provide between 65 and 72 parking spaces behind the Scout Building and involve paving of much of the site.

The 65-space parking lot would leave about 128 feet of the 353 foot deep lot as green space.

Part of the original agreement between Singh and the city to provide MainCentre parking was to build a parking lot behind the Scout Building.

Singh originally contracted with the city to provide a 45-space parking lot behind the property — 27 for the use of the post office, and the remaining 18 to be credited to Singh Development for parking credits. The 45-space parking lot would leave 177 feet of the site open.

Said City Manager Steven Walters, "The parking of course was to originally allow shifting of some post-office parking."

The building is now slated to be used by the Senior Citizens and Civic Concern programs, and various scout troops. The two programs will have to vacate their current sites at Cooke School when the facility reopens as a middle school in September.

The council and several members of the audience debated the amount of parking needed at the site, especially if the post office moves to a larger building, as has been rumored, and the Senior Citizens program moves to the proposed Haller Complex.

Several parents and children turned out for the meeting, including Steve Calkins, sons Timothy, 5, and Geoffrey, 3, as well as daughter Virginia, 1.

"I'm here to talk about a little park and a big principle," Calkins said. "We have too much pavement and too few parks."

Calkins pointed out that the city's latest draft of parks and recreation policies for the Master Plan specifies the need for more parks and green space. He also presented the council with a petition signed by 78 city residents who "strongly oppose turning parks into parking lots," particularly in the case of the Scout Building.

Sons Tim and Geoff told the council they play at the park "every Saturday and Sunday." They even presented council members with drawings they had made of the playground equipment that was recently removed from the site.

When asked what to do with the site, Tim said, "Don't pave it!" When asked what to do about the playground equipment, Geoff said, "Put it back!"

Another area resident, Connie Qualman, said, "Little by little, pavement is eating away our reasons for coming to Northville in the first place, and for staying."

"It has certainly been evident that we do have a deficiency of places to use for our children," said Kathleen Otton, a planning commissioner speaking as a concerned resident. She urged the council to view all sites with an eye towards preserving any existing green space.

Recreation Director John Anderson estimated that the current Senior Citizens program at Cooke School uses 30 parking spaces. "It seems like that number is both realistic and long-term," Walters said of the parking figure. Because use of the Senior Citizens Center is a day-time activity and the other uses are primarily evening, Walters estimated that the site would seldom need more than 30 spaces.

Said Anderson, "The present parking is insufficient for the site, with the numbers that we anticipate will be over there."

Though the city council agreed that the 65-space and 72-space plans were too large, members were divided over whether to provide 45 spaces as the original agreement specified, or scale back the parking lot further to leave more green space.

"I'd sure hate to see most of it being paved," said Council Member Jerry Mittman. "I'd rather save the park and have the post office (traffic) park over at the MAGS lot."

"I guess I don't think we need 45 spaces," Mittman said. He proposed building only a portion of the 72-space lot, to provide about 26 spaces.

Mittman also wanted to see the area behind the building formally designated as a neighborhood park.

"I'm entirely opposed to doing anything more to this area than we have to at this time," said Council Member Dewey Gardner.

Carolann Ayers and Paul Folino disagreed with a smaller parking lot

Council agrees

The Northville City Council had a much easier time deciding what to do with the interior of the Scout Building than parking for the site (see related story).

Of course, the decision by Northville Township officials to split the estimated $12,000 renovation costs made the decision even easier. The Township Board of Trustees agreed April 16 to pay 50 percent of the cost.

The Scout Building at 215 West Cady Street needs the repairs to meet fire and building code requirements for use as a public meeting place. The building will soon serve as the home of the Northville Senior Citizens and Civic Concern programs, after those programs are forced to vacate Cooke School. Area boy scout and girl scout troops also plan to use the site.

Some of the renovation work at the site has already begun, including replacement of broken doors and the removal of wiring and unneeded partitions.

Among the work that still needs to be completed is replacement of a sink and countertop; installation of fire extinguishers, emergency lighting, exit lights, and a uni-sex bathroom; installation of a sprinkler system in two storage areas for fire protection; and painting of the building's interior.

The cost of replacing the existing carpeting in the building is not included in the $12,000 figure. The cost is also based on the use of volunteer labor where possible.

than originally proposed. Said Ayers, "I think we should definitely take Singh up on whatever parking spaces they agreed on. That would still allow more than half the lot to be open space. "I'm very reluctant to call it a park," she added.

Ely faces DNR deadline

By STEVE KELLMAN

Though local business owner Charles Ely is trying to comply with a state-ordered cleanup of his fuel storage site, he is uncertain whether he can meet a 30-day deadline for submission of cleanup plans.

Ely, owner of Ely Fuel at 316 North Center St., was recently ordered by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to correct several violations of state law at his 118 Railroad Ave. fuel storage site.

The DNR letter, dated March 20, listed four violations of state law, including petroleum spills during unattended off-loading of fuel, lack of necessary diking or fuel spill recovery equipment, and lack of a properly filed Pollution Incident Prevention Plan (PIPP).

Ely was given 30 days to submit a plan to remedy the violations.

"That's going to be kind of tough to do, but we're doing the best we can," he said.

"We're trying to clean it up to the DNR's specifications," Ely said. Though the company has not yet contracted with an environmental cleanup firm, Ely said he is involved in negotiations with several firms, including Groundwater Technology of Farmington Hills, to perform the necessary soil testing and cleanup.

Ely was uncertain what the cleanup effort would cost, though he feared it might bankrupt his business. "There's no set cost," he said. "I hope I can stay in business long enough to pay for it."

"We're just a small business, we're trying to make a living down here," he said.

"We have every intent of complying. It's not that we aren't," said Phyllis Ely, who works in the Center Street office. "It just takes time."

Ely estimated that the present cleanup would take at least two years to complete.

He speculated that the most difficult phase of the project would be excavation of contaminated soil, assuming that soil is found to be contaminated.

The DNR requirements are not the end of Ely's woes, either. City officials may delay approval of planned improvements at the site until the state's concerns are addressed.

Ely had intended to renovate the site's loading dock, and had begun work on the project without obtaining the necessary building permits. A stop-work order was issued by the city last October after complaints by Fire Inspector Robert Turner of storage-tank leaks and oil spills.

The building department has received plans from Ely for additions he wants to make to the site. But Turner would like to see the site's present problems addressed before any more construction takes place.

"Because of that (DNR) letter, I recommended that things be held off until the letter is addressed by him," Turner said. "He's got to address this letter."

Turner wants to see the hydrological tests required by the DNR performed before he issues Ely a building permit for the additions.

After the DNR letter was issued, Turner sent a letter to Ely requesting a complete engineering plan review with grading, paving and utility designs for the new loading dock, and cleanup of the existing site and issuance of a building permit before new construction begins.

"He wants to update his equipment, which is great," Turner said. "But he has a responsibility as a landowner and a businessman to take care of these things."

Problems at the site have dated back to 1979. In 1986, a DNR official required cleanup of the site, improvements to the diking system around the fuel tanks, and submission of a PIPP.

CHANGING YOUR FACIAL CONTOUR

Although the human body continues to change throughout life, changes in the adult occur much more slowly than in the child and are called "maturing features". In most people, the middle, autumn and later years of life are characterized by a thinning and sharpening of the facial contours. During these years, the support provided by intact teeth is critically important in maintaining a symmetrical and pleasing facial appearance.

The teeth, especially the front teeth (incisors) and the eye teeth (canines), provide direct support to the shape of the lips, corner of the mouth, and front part of the cheeks. If these teeth are not replaced immediately, their loss can cause or accentuate folding, drooping and hollowing of the facial tissues resulting in facial features that can be unattractive and downright unpleasant. In the older person, loss of the bicusps and molars (back teeth) accentuates the hollow configuration of the cheeks and deepens the natural lines and wrinkles. You only have one face. Don't let negligence keep it from looking as young as you are for life. Replace any missing teeth now!

Vacant Ford Plant prepared for sale

By STEVE KELLMAN

While the May 1 deadline for the township vote on the Haller Library fast approaches, a former proposed library site still lies vacant.

The Ford Plant on Main Street has remained vacant since the auto company closed the plant last year.

But asbestos abatement efforts and the removal of the plant's four underground storage tanks have been completed within the last two months, and the auto company has begun holding tentative negotiations for sale of the plant.

The Ford Motor Company recently quoted an asking price of $2.5 million for the 14.3-acre site. A $1.4-million offer for industrial reuse has already been made, according to Northville City officials, though no details of the offer have been released.

According to City Manager Steven Walters, another developer approached the city last month regarding the plant, and was referred to Ford. The buyer was interested in office / retail redevelopment of the site.

Walters would not reveal the name of the developer.

"It's a leftover development from when we thought the library was proceeding," he said. "Obviously, we still have an interest in what's developed."

The city is interested in preserving public access to the waterway at the site, and public use of the parking lot and Ford Field west of the plant.

The Ford Motor Company is considering the city's interests in Ford Field while negotiating with potential developers, Walters added. "They've made a tentative indication to us that they see Ford Field as a potential donation to the city," he said, and the company is making that clear to potential buyers of the site.

Much of the 8.5 acres of land across Griswold Street is within a floodplain, which limits the potential for reuse of that portion of the site.

A city proposal to reuse the plant as a library was put on hold in November with Frieda Haller's offer of 72 acres of land to the township for construction of a library. At last month's public hearing on the cooperative-services agreement between the city and township, Walters presented an updated projection of the cost of renovating the Ford plant as a library.

Given a projected $1.4-million site acquisition cost, to be split evenly with a private developer, Walters estimated the public cost of developing a 22,500-square-foot library with 22,325 square feet of basement space at $149 per square foot, or $3.3 million overall. The estimated cost of the proposed Haller Complex is $154 per square foot.

Walters figured city-only operation of such a library, together with the cost of bonding its construction for 15 years, at an estimated 4.84 mills in 1992.

Township officials have said they would proceed with the Haller Complex if the project was approved by township voters in May and city participation was voted down by city voters in August.

Brother's memory Tags stir up thoughts

By STEVE KELLMAN

When asked to write a poem from a different point of view, one Northville High School student had only to glance down for her subject.

Amy Lewis, 16, lost her brother Richard in the USS Iowa tragedy last April. Since then she has worn her brother's aluminum dog tags around her neck in his memory.

As a student in Bo Hall's 11th-grade creative writing class, Lewis had a chance to write about what the dog tags mean to her, and about the brother who originally wore them (see poem).

Amy has been wearing her brother's tags since the family received his personal effects in November, "after about an hour and a half argument with my mother," as Amy recalls. "She thought she was going to wear them."

"She gave in, and I've been wearing them ever since."

"It's a little part of my brother that I can carry around," Amy said. "Every time I hear them I think of him."

While Amy said she labors over much of her poetry, this latest work almost wrote itself. "This one was like a freak accident, really," she said. "I was sitting in creative writing, feeling really down. I was playing with my dog tags. I got a thought, grabbed my pencil and wrote it down."

The poem only needed minor revisions after that, Amy said.

The Lewis family continues to remember Richard in other ways. Amy and her mother, Nancy Lewis, are in Norfolk, Virginia this week for a ceremony honoring the 47 sailors killed in the USS Iowa tragedy last April 19.

The sailors were killed during an explosion in the ship's center gun turret. The ensuing Naval investigation into the disaster has been repeatedly criticized by members of Congress and the House Armed Services Committee.

Nancy Lewis has attended the Congressional hearings into the disaster, and is still involved in the fight to reopen the investigation. She is circulating a petition along with other Iowa family members to that effect.

The group has also had a composite picture of the "Iowa 47" printed by a local portrait studio, Prestige Portraits by Life Touch. The studio donated its time and expertise to the project.

Silent

Cool

Girl says success due to teacher

By STEVE KELLMAN

Though she has been writing poetry for years, Northville High School student Amy Lewis has never felt comfortable enough with her work to share it with others, until now.

She credits her creative writing teacher, Bo Hall, for much of her newfound confidence.

"This is the first year that I've showed anybody else," she said. "I always wrote it for me."

"And then Mrs. Hall came along," she said, laughing. "She taught me how to strengthen it and make it better, and she made me feel better about it. She's really a great confidence-builder."

"A lot of it's her personality. She's very outgoing, open-minded, and she grades on improvement, not on how well you write."

Amy has even entered several of her poems in writing contests. "Even if I didn't get an honorable mention, just the fact that it's getting circulation is good enough," she said.

This is Bo Hall's first year as a full-time teacher after a 25-year hiatus. The Northville resident, 52, only taught two years before her break, but has remained in the Northville school system as a secretary and a substitute teacher.

"I decided after my kids were grown and off to college that what I really wanted to do was get back into the classroom," Hall said. "I'm in for the duration now."

"To find young writers like Amy who really does have some outstanding abilities, is really a thrill for me as a teacher," Hall said.

"She has the ability to put down poetic prose," Hall explained that she does not insist her students write rhyming couplets, or Shakespearean sonnets. Instead, she encourages them to express their feelings first, and worry about the formal structure of a poem later.

"As soon as you tell kids they have to rhyme something, they get caught up in rhyming the words and lose the ability to put down what they wanted to say," she said.

Amy is so pleased with Hall's class that she doesn't want to leave. "If I could take it over and over again for the rest of my school years, I would," she said.

Though she will not be taking creative writing again next year, Amy will still be in Mrs. Hall's class. Only this time Hall will be teaching journalism.

Next year the teacher will be overseeing the Northville High School newspaper as well as the school's only journalism class.

"Twenty years from now, when I look back, if somebody asks me who had a real positive impact on me, I'll probably think of Mrs. Hall," Amy said.

Township Supervisor to review O'Brien meeting

By MIKE TYREE

Township Manager Richard Henningsen's report on his meeting with Planning Commissioner Barbara O'Brien has been compiled and is awaiting review by Supervisor George Goss.

Goss said Tuesday the report, which she called "basically an internal matter," represented Henningsen's findings from a meeting scheduled with O'Brien.

"I haven't reviewed it yet," she said. "It's a personal and confidential memo to the supervisor."

Henningsen said last week that the meeting was held to "get out of the headlines" a verbal sparring match between O'Brien and Planning Commission Chairperson Charles DeLand.

DeLand wrote Goss a letter March 1 that detailed his complaints against O'Brien. He said O'Brien had not progressed as a planner during her first year on the commission, which deals with zoning and development issues.

DeLand asked Goss to remove O'Brien as a planning commissioner, and Goss directed township attorney Ernest Essad to review guidelines for such a removal.

O'Brien then launched a counter-attack with a $540 newspaper advertisement which accused DeLand of playing politics with her case.

Supporters then gathered over 270 signatures backing O'Brien and sent them to Goss.

Goss did not say when she would review Henningsen's report and she would not state specifically what her plans for O'Brien are.

"I'll review it and try to reach a solution amenable to both Mrs. O'Brien and Chairman DeLand."

Paving opposed

"When we live in a city, we all have to make compromises," Ayers told the audience. "We all want exactly what we want, and sometimes we're unwilling to look at what other people might want, and what might be more important for other people."

"I do understand your concerns," she added, but she continued, "I think we have to be willing to make compromises sometimes."

Walters pointed out that if the post office moves within the next several years, as has been suggested because of its growing space needs, then the additional parking may not be needed. Also, if the Haller proposal passes, Senior Citizens will move there eventually, leaving the Scout Building available for other uses.

As an office building, the site would only require 18 parking spaces, Walters said.

The council decided to have Walters draw up a list of various options between the present situation and the 45-space lot originally agreed to by Singh.

More activities planned for seniors

There is more news about spring activities from the senior center at Cooke School.

This year the Northville Area Senior Citizens Center will offer two senior citizens softball teams for men only.

This will be the third season the center has offered a team. Because of the success of the teams efforts the past two years, the center is sponsoring two teams this year.

One team will be for men aged 65 and older and the second team will be for men aged 55-65.

For further information drop by the Northville Community Recreation Building on Tuesday mornings between 9:30-11 a.m., when the baseball team will be warming up. Or call the senior citizens activity center at 349-4140. Last year's team sponsors were Perrin Sporting Goods and M-Care. The season begins May 6.

Northville area seniors are invited to attend the final concert of the Plymouth Community Chorus. Transportation will be available to see the concert at Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium on April 29 at 2:30 p.m. Cost for the afternoon performance is $8 per person and includes: round trip transportation from homes or apartments and admission to the performance. For information call 349-4140.

City offers more recycling hours

The Northville City Council voted Monday night to provide Wednesday and Saturday hours at the city recycling center, after voting two weeks ago to limit the center's operation to Saturday only.

The council voted 4-1 Monday to decrease Saturday hours from a proposed 10 a.m.-5 p.m. schedule to 11 a.m.-5 p.m., and have the center open on Wednesdays from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The center is located at the Department of Public Works (DPW), at 650 Doherty Drive.

Monday's council vote comes after criticism of the proposed cutback of recycling center hours at a recent public hearing. City residents had criticized the council's plan to cut hours from their present six-day schedule to Saturday only.

In voting against the Wednesday hours, Council Member Jerry Mittman said, "I think we need to encourage less costly alternatives for recycling." Mittman had proposed a 3-6 p.m. Wednesday schedule, to avoid having to pay a DPW employee an added hour of overtime each week.

City officials are providing staffing for the center to assist city residents in recycling, and to make sure recyclable materials are properly separated before being placed in bins.

Cars vandalized

A tractor trailer parked behind the Shopping Center Market was painted in red as well, with the words "Smooth Criminals try and stop us 90," sometime between 10 p.m. Tuesday and 6 a.m. Wednesday. A cement wall on the site was painted with the words "Moo Goo" at the same time, and another truck was broken into, though nothing was taken.

Sgt. David Fendeleit of the Northville City Police is overseeing the investigation into the incidents. Fendeleit said the number "90" was found in several places Wednesday, indicating that students such as high school seniors may be involved. "That's what we're assuming," he said. "Whether they're students at the high school, I'm not sure."

Fendeleit said the police department is following up some tentative leads in the case. "We have a couple of ideas, but that's all they are at this point," he said. "Hopefully they'll pan out."

David Rekuc, general manager at McDonald Ford, said the incident may be a sign that stricter security measures are needed at the dealership's various lots.

"We're trying to keep with the atmosphere of the community and not fence the lots in," he said. "But I'm finding even the fence isn't necessarily going to work."

Rekuc believes the culprits were teenagers because of the phrase "Smooth Criminals," which is the title of a Michael Jackson song, and because the name of the rock group Guns n' Roses was found spray-painted on another car. He urged parents who have noticed spray paint on their children's hands or other unusual items to come forward.

"If it were my kid, I'd want to know," he said.

Novi to host first ethnic festival

By Jan Jeffres
Staff Writer

NOVI — Hart Plaza's loss could be the Novi Town Center's gain.

Novi Rotary Club member Dr. Mav Sanghvi has at least one day booked solid for the first Novi International Festival, an ethnic event he is hoping to pull together with the assistance of the city's service clubs. For the past 15 years his sister-in-law, Livonia resident Jaydevi Sanghvi, has been the director of the Festival of India, formerly part of the Detroit Riverfront Festivals.

But Sanghvi says the Indian committee has bowed out of Detroit this year due to what she describes as the high costs and low profits for holding an event at Hart Plaza. She'll be bringing the whole Festival of India — including 30 performing groups, food booths, a fashion show and an arts exhibit — to Novi on Saturday, August 25.

It'll be one day of three scheduled for the Novi International Festival set for August 24-26 at the Novi Town Center. At present, Friday will be reserved for European ethnic groups, Saturday for India, and Sunday for "the rest of the world."

"I pulled out because they were a horror and we could never get our expenses," she said. "Most of them are pulling out, but I don't know how many Dr. Sanghvi has gotten yet . . . The plaza is changing so much that we can't afford it."

She said that a number of Indian dance groups which are well-known on the ethnic festival circuit will be performing in Novi, including the Oak Park-based Vidyajali and the Southfield-based Nadanta. India has a tradition of classical dance reaching back to ancient times and a rich repertoire of folk dances as well.

Many Earth Day events planned in area

Several events are planned in the area to celebrate Earth Day 1990, this Sunday, April 22. Several events are planned for Maybury State Park, on Eight Mile between Beck and Napier roads. Events include:

SATURDAY, APRIL 21—ARBOR DAY

9:30 A.M. ECOLOGY SEMINAR: The Community Center of Farmington/Farmington Hills has planned an informational event for the entire family. The program is called "What on Earth Are We Doing?" and is scheduled for Saturday, April 21 between 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Joe Derek, naturalist and outdoor educator, will show how the environment is affected by our current '90s lifestyle with demonstrations, exhibits and talks. Topics include wetlands, green spaces, streams, lakes, woods, pesticides and fertilizers; habitat for wildlife and how the lack of it does affect all of us; backyard habitat, bird houses; recycling — how it works, why it's important and unique ways that major corporations are recycling. A display by Friends of the Rouge and a chance to design your own environmental T-shirt will be part of the event. Each family will leave with their own tree to plant.

You must register for the two-hour session, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. or 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Admission fee is $2 per child, $4 per adult or $10 per family up to five. Call 477-8404 for further information.

10 A.M. SEEDLING DISTRIBUTION FOR NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP: On the heels of last year's successful tree give-away, the township beautification commission will sponsor the second annual Arbor Day Seedlings Distribution from 10 a.m. until noon at township hall, 41600 Six Mile Road.

Approximately 2,200 seedlings — Austrian pine, red pine, Scotch pine, white pine, Douglas fir, Colorado blue spruce, Norway spruce, white spruce and thornless honey locust — will be available for distribution.

To obtain one seedling of each variety, proof of township residency must be furnished. A container to carry the seedlings home is also required.

The seedlings are purchased by Northville Township through the Wayne County Soil and Water Conservation District and will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Last year's giveaway was a big success, according to Beautification Commission Chairperson Tina Sella.

"People turned out in droves," she said. "(We) received favorable comments and encouragement."

NOVI TREE PLANTING CEREMONY: Several trees will be planted behind the Novi Civic Center in a special ceremony at 11 a.m.

At least five trees from various nurseries will be planted in the Power Park area at the civic center, on Ten Mile east of Taft. A demonstration of how to plant a tree will also take place.

The planting is part of a worldwide effort called Global ReLeaf designed to combat global warming. Volunteers are needed; call Novi Parks and Recreation at 347-0400.

The state of the environment in Northville/Novi on Earth Day 1990

Cause draws student work

By MIKE TYREE
staff writer

Jason Baker didn't observe the first Earth Day celebration.

In fact, the founder of Northville High School's Students Aware of the World group hadn't even been born when the first organized green wave of awareness washed across the campuses, cities, and small towns of America in 1970.

Baker and his close-knit SAW group may not have a lot of past Earth Day experience under their belts, but they do possess one of the most vital ingredients for successful activism: enthusiasm.

"We've got about 30 very dedicated people in SAW," Baker said. "We're going to have a booth at Maybury State Park and we'll be trying to educate everyone to how important this day is."

The SAW booth will be in operation between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the state park, Baker said.

SAW was organized at the high school last November, and Baker said the group's main environmental thrust is increasing public awareness of recycling.

"Our theme on Earth Day will be recycling," he said. "We're making posters to show the things people can do to help with recycling; where they can take recyclable items, and how you can do it yourself."

Baker said the SAW group has been busy saving and separating papers at school for a trip to a local recycling center. Several hundred pounds of papers are waiting to be sorted — white paper, colored paper, and computer paper must be separated — and Baker said the SAW is "getting a lot done."

SAW also is sponsoring an upcoming tree planting. Nine Silver Maples will be planted on the grounds of Northville High School April 26, according to Lisa Rhode, SAW advisor.

Rhode said she has been pleased with the efforts of the SAW students.

"I think things are going very well," she said. "They are working very hard on recycling projects. I think Earth Day at Maybury will be a positive experience for them."

Students Aware of the World prepare for the big day

Healthy homes: still a challenge

By ROBIN GAINES
special writer

Since the first Earth Day 20 years ago, the local residential construction industry has witnessed several changes in the way homes are built. But the industry still has a long way to go before "environmentally sound homes" are affordable to the masses.

"There's been lots of changes, some for the good, some for the bad," said Jim Bonadeo, president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan and Bonadeo Builders in Plymouth.

Bonadeo, who built his first home in 1946 and is currently involved in several residential developments in the metropolitan Detroit area, said the biggest impact environmentally with new homes has come from government regulations and customer-demanded products.

One significant change in the last 20 years, Bonadeo said, has been the ban on asbestos insulation and lead-based paints. Both hazardous materials, they are no longer used in new construction, he said.

Still, for builders and their customers, the price of doing their share in protecting the environment when building new homes does not come without a substantial price tag.

Prior to the 1970s, it was not uncommon for a builder to come in to a development and level most of the trees before building the first house, Bonadeo said. Now, builders will construct homes around existing vegetation and natural habitats since customers will pay top dollar for these premium lots.

"Environmentally, our concern has always been to preserve what's already there," said Ellen Whitefield, director of marketing for the Selective Group of Farmington Hills.

Selective's local developments include Timber Ridge Estates in Novi and St. Lawrence Estates in Northville.

"It's a lot cheaper to come in and bulldoze down the trees, but we work around them," she said.

Lifestyle Homes, builders of Royal Crown Estates in Novi, offers lots backing up to several feet of wooded area, said Pam Solberg, sales manager for the development.

Lot premiums — an extra cost added on to the price of the home and basic lot — run anywhere from $5,000-$20,000 in both Timber Ridge and Royal Crown Estates.

Builders also responded to customer demand during the energy crunch in the early 1970s, Bonadeo said, and began offering high-efficiency furnaces and appliances and better-insulated homes.

"It's true homes are being built tighter than they were years ago," Bonadeo said. "But now we have the environmentalists telling us we've polluted the air we breathe inside our homes because we're so well-insulated against the outdoors. You reach a point where you just don't know what to do anymore."

Indoor air pollution — which can include radon gas, formaldehyde from carpets and furniture, excessive moisture, food odors and cigarette smoke — is more concentrated in tightly constructed homes, and some builders are taking action.

Most local builders try to correct indoor air pollution by installing exhaust fans in bathrooms, kitchens and laundry areas. But one builder in Colorado uses heat recovery ventilators to combat the problem.

Bob Cunningham, co-owner of Elk Mountain Builders of Basalt, Colorado, a specialist in the construction of "environmentally sensitive homes," said the ventilators work by picking up warm, stale air within the home, then transferring the heat from this air to fresh air outside without losing precious inside heat.

Cunningham also uses radiant floor heating in his homes instead of conventional furnace systems. Radiant floor heating transfers heat directly through tubes laid out under floors

Water, warmed by a hot water heater, then flows through the tubes, thus heating the floor and room.

The homeowner saves several dollars each month in heating bills with radiant heat (an average monthly cost to heat a 1,200-square-foot home per winter month is $47), Cunningham said, "but try to find a plumber (in Michigan) who will lay the pipes without charging a fortune."

Cunningham's homes are not inexpensive either. Prices for one of his "environmentally sensitive homes," which in addition to radiant heating and ventilator systems include solariums, double-pane windows and solar panels: $250,000 to $500,000.

Locally, solar-paneled roofs and solariums, once a trend in the 1970s, are no longer requested by new construction customers, Bonadeo said. Solar panels can run into thousands of dollars and Michigan homeowners still have to use alternative devices to adequately heat a home, he said.

"It dawned on some people that they'd have to live in their solar-paneled house around 64 years before the savings in heating bills would offset the cost of the panels," he said. "Michigan just doesn't see enough sun in the winter to make those panels cost-effective."

Most builders began using double-pane wood encased windows in all new homes built after the mid-1970s, Bonadeo said, because of their energy efficiency and practicality.

"(The windows) were a real selling point for our homes since the homeowner never had to install storm windows again," he said.

Despite high initial costs for some of these items, most builders agree that the customer saves money in the long run by including energy-efficiency features in a new home.

"It's cheaper to include these while the house is being built," Solberg said, "than to wait and try to renovate later. Not to mention, of course, the contribution you are making to the environment."

The Pargoffs display their Earth Day 1970 souvenir

Living reminder

By BOB NEEDHAM
editor

Chris Pargoff was 22 years old in 1970, and he had already been interested in ecology for years.

So when his mother brought home a sapling white pine from Hudson's — which was offering the trees as an Earth Day promotion — he liked the idea. He planted it at their Dearborn home and made sure it grew up well.

And when in 1980 he moved to Novi, the tree went with him.

"My mother went shopping. I'm pretty sure it was at Hudson's in Northland. She came home with this little plastic bag with a tree in it," Pargoff recalled.

The tree was about 10 feet tall by the time of the move to Novi, where Pargoff would run a tree farm on Ten Mile. He packed his white pine up into a Suburban one September day and made the drive from Dearborn.

"I didn't think it would make it," said his wife, Louise.

But Pargoff — who holds degrees in horticulture and urban forestry from Michigan State — "watered it and watched it and took care of it," and the tree did indeed make it.

"It really took a shock for about two or three years there" after the move, Pargoff said. Then, just as it was recovering, a moth infestation hit — but the tree again made it through. It now stands about 20 or 25 feet tall.

"I've always been interested in growing things," Pargoff said. "I take care of things. It's just a matter of observation and watering it."

Area still supports a variety of animals

By JAN JEFFRES
and MIKE TYREE
staff writers

There's plenty of wildlife in Novi and Northville, and not just at the local bars.

Deer roam in certain sections. Foxes trot through fields at night. Opposums and raccoons can be found at places other than the side of the road.

But all of these animals must learn how to adapt to a rapidly changing and less-friendly environment.

"I think it's important that people recognize that we have a community of plants and animals. We have a whole ecosystem and each one is reliant on the other. They're all interrelated," said Linda Lemke, a woodlands consultant and award-winning landscape architect.

"There's an abundance of wildlife." "Have you got all day?" said Dave Luukkonen, wildlife biologist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources in Pontiac, when asked if he could provide a list of local animals.

Luukkonen said approximately 300 species of animals — "the ones that people would often see" — can be found in southern Oakland and western Wayne Counties.

Wooded areas, brushy thickets and lakes and streams common to the area are ideal for mammals such as white tail deer, raccoon, skunk, opossum, red fox, several species of weasel, mink, muskrat, cottontail rabbit, and fox squirrel.

In addition, many types of birds, reptiles and fish are indigenous to the area.

Some small mammals find it easier to adapt their lifestyles to a changing habitat. These would include opossum, raccoons, striped skunks, wood chucks, rabbit, small mice and squirrels.

"A lot will adapt to people living around them. They end up in culverts and garbage cans, stuff like that," Lemke said.

Birds of all varieties fly through or stay in the area, including pheasant, seasonal woodlands songbirds such as the Kentucky warbler and the tree sparrow, and year-round songbirds like tufted titmouse, juncos, and chickadees. Wetlands birds such as the great blue heron, with a wingspan of five feet and a height of three feet, and the somewhat smaller sand crane are especially spectacular. Trumpeter swans return in the spring to Shawood and Walled Lakes in northern Novi. They share the lake with ducks such as mallards, black jellies and Canada geese passing through.

"There's also the white owl and eastern screeching owl. They're a little bit reclusive but I've seen some of them around," Lemke said.

Lemke: "I think it's important that people recognize that we have a community of plants and animals. We have a whole ecosystem and each one is reliant on the other. They're all interrelated."

Residents can design their yards to encourage bird life by planting trees and bushes bearing edible berries, including the flowering crab, the amelanchier tree and any cherry or fruit trees.

Shawood Lake and Walled Lake create a habitat for fish such as large-mouth bass, pike, carp, blue gill, pumpkin seeds and smallmouth bass. The Seeley Drain near Thirteen Mile Road is home to a more rare fish species, the red-sided bace.

Environmental consultant Susan Keast, of JCK Associates, said she counted 34 bird species near Shawood Lake several years ago. Along with the more benign animals found in wetlands areas, including frogs and painted turtles, snappers and blanding turtles Keast has also heard that foot-long Massaga rattlers have been seen. The snakes are poisonous, but "not as much as regular rattlesnakes," she said.

Despite the lengthy list of animals that live in the region, perhaps a more telling — and prophetic — tale comes from past inhabitants.

Luukkonen said bald eagles ("except for the occasional migratory bird"), osprey, elk, caribou, and wolf have vacated the area due to the encroachment of humans. Some of the animals disappeared in the late 1700s; others were sighted in the area this century.

"Extensive hunting and altering of habitat are the primary reasons for extinction of those species here," he said. "With all the development that is going on in the Northville area, some species are going to be hit hard."

"Every house that is put up and every acre of concrete will have an impact on some species," he said. "Several species of birds — such as the great blue heron — are not very tolerant of human encroachment."

A pair of birds — the short-eared owl and the barn owl — live in the area but are among threatened and endangered species, Luukkonen said. The status of species in the mammal category depends on personal interpretation.

"We really don't have any threatened or endangered species listed for the Northville area," he said. "They're already gone."

Two other species currently living here have lifestyles which are possibly endangered by the growth of the community: the white-tailed deer and the fox.

Although she hasn't seen too many deer, Lemke says she frequently sees evidence where small groups have bedded down for the day in tall grass at locations such as near The Springs Apartments at Pontiac Trail, on the western side of Beck Road, in the boundaries of the Novi Tree Garden, in the Maples of Novi site and by River Oaks and Saddle Creek, where they can take advantage of orchards for feeding opportunities. She estimates that about 100 deer live in Novi in small herds.

"They like a mixture, they like some cover and some open fields," Lemke said. "The deer of course need quite a bit of area to move in."

Will they be there in ten years? "If we preserve large enough areas, I think you can have small amounts of deer, four to six in a herd. I think it's a good possibility," she said.

Plans call for areas of Novi to be left as wildlife corridors, Lemke said. The linear greenway system will preserve the habitats of many wild creatures.

But "very shy" and nocturnal red and gray foxes may also find their preferred lifestyle threatened by development, as they tend to roam both open fields and woodlands. Squatters by preference, the foxes like to bed down in the burrows built by the local hardworking woodchucks. Many of them live at Briarwood, Chase Farms, and in the Ten Mile/Beck area.

Despite the oft-gloomy picture painted by bulldozers, site plans and an escalating demand for developable land, Luukkonen said all is not lost for animals and their human friends.

"A lot can still be done for wildlife, even in cities," he said. "If some areas are left uncleared, animals can survive. They have to have a place to live and raise their young."

Rules protect woods

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
staff writer

"What is it? Should we plow it down?" the construction worker asked his foreman.

"Boy, I haven't seen one of those in a long time — I almost didn't recognize it," the boss replied.

"Well, what is it?" the worker asked again.

"A tree," the foreman sighed, staring at the foot-high plant which had grown through a crack in the pavement.

Obviously, this is only an anecdote. But environmentalists are worried that it could become reality — which has led to a recent push for local woodlands-protection ordinances.

"It used to be that developers came in to the city and plowed everything down before they started building because it was cheaper," said Novi Planning Commission Chairperson Charles Kureth. "They can't do that anymore because we have a woodlands ordinance."

He said that local woodlands ordinances are instrumental in maintaining woodlands because there is no state or federal protections in place. Northville Township also has a woodlands ordinance, while the City of Northville does not.

Local woodlands consultant Linda Lemke said that Novi's woodlands ordinance is one of the toughest in the state, protecting all wooded areas one-quarter acre or larger. Northville Township's ordinance is similar but less strict in some respects.

"We are saving about 80 percent of the mature woodlands in the city," Lemke said.

"There are more trees in Novi today than there was 40 years ago," Kureth commented.

Novi was a leader in terms of woodlands ordinances. In fact, it was the second community in the state to adopt such an ordinance, right behind West Bloomfield, according to Lemke.

Kureth said that Novi has a solid woodlands ordinance. However, there are still ways to improve it.

"We need to encourage developers not to touch woodlands at all," he said. "We need to look into the feasibility of offering a tax break to developers that exceed woodland requirements."

"We take a more 'hammer' approach when it comes to developers and I would like to see that tempered with a more encouraging approach."

Under Novi's ordinance, a developer must obtain a permit before encroaching on mapped woodland areas.

If developers are allowed to remove trees from a protected area, they must transplant them, plant trees in another portion of the community or put money into a citywide tree fund.

The Novi Parks and Recreation Department uses the fund to plant trees along the rights-of-way across the city.

Lemke also drafted Northville Township's woodlands regulation, which is incorporated into its zoning ordinance.

"It is (almost) identical to Novi's ordinance, but it is not quite as restrictive because it isn't a separate ordinance like it is in Novi," Lemke commented.

She explained that Northville Township only regulates the removal of trees during the site plan process, leaving developers free to cut down trees after they finish building.

Sprawl threatens valuable wetlands

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
staff writer

It spreads faster than chicken pox in kindergarten. It consumes everything in its path and grows by monstrous proportions. No, it's not the blob — it is urban sprawl.

Over the last 10 years, development has been eating away at rural land in southeast Michigan. And urban sprawl, according to some critics, is turning the metropolitan area into one giant parking lot.

Many local communities, however, are now going beyond state and federal guidelines to protect their wetlands from the hungry jaws of this urban menace.

"It is very important to protect a community's wetlands for a variety of reasons," said Novi wetlands consultant Susan Keast. "There are not only aesthetic reasons for protecting wetlands, but they also provide habitat for wildlife."

More species of wildlife live in wetlands than in any other type of habitat, according to Keast. "That is why it is so important we protect these areas on a global scale."

Wetlands also act as natural recharge areas, filtering out impurities in the environment.

Novi's wetlands ordinance — which was adopted in 1985 — goes beyond state mandates and protects wetland areas as small as two acres, or any wetland that is contiguous to a stream or lake. Northville city and township do not have wetlands ordinances of their own, although township officials have discussed the idea.

All wetlands five acres or greater are protected by state statute under the Goemaer-Anderson Wetlands Act of 1979.

If a developer encroaches on a wetland larger than five acres in Novi, a permit must be granted by both the state Department of

Development can threaten wetlands

Natural Resources and the city. If the wetland is smaller than five acres, only a city permit must be obtained.

"The (city's) ordinance has been very successful in protecting Novi's wetlands," Keast said. "Without the ordinance developers would be able to fill in smaller wetlands."

Smaller wetlands are usually of higher quality than larger wetlands and house a great deal of wildlife, the wetlands specialist said.

"Our wetland ordinance is doing quite well — it is among the best in the state," agreed Novi Planning Commission Chairperson and environmental consultant Charles Kureth.

According to Keast, West Bloomfield is the only community in the area with a stronger wetlands ordinance than Novi. That ordinance protects all wetlands and does not set a minimum size requirement. Novi's ordinance has never been challenged in court, unlike West Bloomfield's.

Kureth said that the reason Novi hasn't been inundated with court cases is that the city is flexible: "We are willing to work with developers in order to save wetlands."

However, Kureth said that there is a down side to ordinances protecting both wetlands and woodlands.

"These ordinances do increase development costs," he said. "This means that it costs more to build a house or a business."

Ultimately, the consumer foots the bill in the form of higher housing costs. "There is a tradeoff involved between affordable housing and woodlands and wetlands," Kureth said.

Although the Northville/Novi area suffers from few industries considered major contributors to air pollution, the community shares one worry with the rest of lower Michigan.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources oversees a regular testing program of air quality in the state, and it issues an annual report summarizing the findings. The report lists test results for seven different types of airborne pollution.

For five of the seven pollutants, the closest monitoring site to Northville and Novi is at Madonna College in Livonia. For the other two, the closest meters are in Ann Arbor and Detroit.

Only one of these nearby meters exceeded the federal standards during 1988, the latest year for which the DNR report is out. The Livonia meter exceeded ozone standards three times in the year.

"The EPA has established what are called ambient air standards that are designed to protect public health," said Chuck Hersey, environmental coordinator for the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "Most of southeast Michigan is meeting all of the standards EPA has set, except for ozone."

Ironically, another environmental issue receiving attention is the thinning of ozone in the upper atmosphere, Hersey said.

Although the hot summer of 1988 is considered something of an aberration, the concern with ozone in lower Michigan has been around for years. Scientists consider lower-atmosphere ozone the main component of smog.

"Ozone isn't emitted directly into the air in large quantities," Hersey said. "What happens is a lot of the emissions come from urbanized areas."

In spite of the non-attainment status, he added, "We don't frequently violate the standards. It occurs rarely, but it does occur sometimes."

Ozone pollution comes from two main sources, Hersey said: automobile tailpipes and industry. A state inventory in the early 1980s estimated that each source produced roughly the same amount, although the percentage from motor vehicles is probably lower now, he said.

"Total emissions from both of those sources are way down from what they were," he said. He praised auto companies and oil companies for working to reduce auto emissions — although when autos in the greater Detroit area drive an estimated 90 to 95 million miles per day, "There's still a significant contribution."

Although ozone is the major air-pollution concern for the Northville/Novi area, it may not be the only one. There may not be any known major polluters right in town, but two have been identified nearby.

When the National Wildlife Federation and the Michigan United Conservation Clubs last summer issued a report on the biggest 100 polluters — of all types of pollution — in the state, two nearby industries were cited for air discharges.

The Ford Motor Co. plant in Wixom ranked 47th on the list, with reported discharges of eight different chemicals into the air. The total amount released was 1.5 million pounds. Precision Coatings in Walled Lake ranked 54th.

Cutting driving will reduce smog

The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments offers suggestions for individual actions to fight air pollution.

The biggest item is cutting down on driving, in several different ways: walk or bike when you can. Drive in pools, go to work, or even the grocery store, with a neighbor. SEMCOG offers a "Rideshare" program to aid car pools; call 963-RIDE.

"Theoretically, those kinds of things can apply to cutting down on your trips to the store or whatever," SEMCOG Environmental Coordinator Chuck Hersey said.

There are now gasolines available which claim to burn cleaner, and while Hersey said studies need to be done to verify the accuracy of the claims, he said the technology for cleaner fuels is indeed available. "I think you're going to see a lot more of it," he said.

Reducing driving helps all down the line, he explained: there are fewer tailpipe emissions, less demand for fuel, meaning less oil drilling, which can release pollution, less oil transporting, which can result in oil spills, less oil refining, which also cuts pollution, and less putting gas into cars, which in itself, also releases some damaging fumes into the air.

"All along the way there's sort of a benefit," he said.

TAKING STOCK: our water

Local lakes' health varies

By BOB NEEDHAM
editor

Lakes in the Novi/Northville area vary in water quality and usability, but there are a couple of basic truths: things could be better, and things could be worse.

The major natural and semi-natural lakes in the area — Walled/Shawood in Novi, Waterford and Phoenix in Northville — are directly tied to the Rouge River system. The headwaters of the middle branch of the Rouge are basically an extensive wetland southwest of Walled Lake, and most of the other lakes in the system are Rouge River impoundments — places where the lakes form from a widening and deepening of the river, usually caused by dams.

Walled is probably the healthiest of the major lakes, with lots of fishing and a popular swimming beach. Conditions get progressively worse downstream, with swimming prohibited in Waterford and Phoenix lakes. A Department of Natural Resources advisory issued last year recommended that people not eat any Middle Rouge fish taken from anywhere below the south end of Phoenix Lake.

Walled Lake is also usually healthier to the naked eye; during summer Waterford and Phoenix lakes choke up with algae and scum.

"In Michigan streams, as in a lot of areas, the limiting material in terms of algae blooms is phosphorus. Lakes tend to become phosphorus sinks," explained Roy Schrameck, district supervisor of the DNR's surface water quality division.

Phosphorus encourages the growth of algae, Schrameck explained. It is present in the water and often attaches to sediment in the bottom of the lakes. As lake weeds die off and decompose, they release even more phosphorus.

Hot weather and sunlight encourage algae growth, but the more it grows, algae and other weeds cut off the sun and those plants die. It all creates a cycle which gets worse as the summer goes on.

The situation gets more extreme farther downstream. In many spots along the Rouge, sanitary sewers sometimes overflow into the river — and the sewage is another big source of phosphorus, Schrameck said. But there are no sewer overflow points on the middle branch until the river hits Plymouth.

Lawn fertilizer can exacerbate the problems in lakes. Rain will wash fertilizer down into lakes even from a distance, and that will encourage more weed and algae growth.

"Most places you do have a problem with the lawn fertilizer," Schrameck said. "If they can get away without doing it at all, that's (best). Don't pursue the theory that if the bag says one, two is even better... If everybody is just conservative about what they do, it'll help in the long run."

Sarah Phelps, president of the Lakes Area Residents Association around Walled/Shawood, said the lake has been in fairly decent shape recently, although recent summers have seen somewhat unexplained fish kills and the usual weed problems.

"It's not half as bad as it was 20 years ago, before the sewer went in," she said. Occasional tests of Walled Lake's water on file with the Oakland County Health Department support the idea that the sewer installation dramatically improved Walled Lake's water.

Road salt draining into the lake is a concern for the area, Phelps said, and residents also wonder about the impact of several new subdivisions going up in the area.

"We're presuming that these people are going to have nice green lawns, and where is that (fertilizer) going to go?" she wondered. "Basically, you can't have green lawns and not expect a green lake."

Glenn Brown, director of environmental health for Wayne County, said of the quality of Phoenix and Waterford water, "I'd be in trouble trying to hazard a guess at this point."

The last study of the Rouge impoundments was done in 1987, he said, but generally in an urban area, "Sometimes it's hard to maintain quality at an acceptable level. It's going to be a struggle."

He added that state officials are considering a switch in the way they require water quality to be measured. If that happens, "We might find somewhat different conditions," Brown noted.

The DNR's Schrameck said that some action could be taken to improve lake quality, such as harvesting algae or dredging the bottom. The cost of such operations has stymied any moves in that direction, however.

Still, Schrameck said it may be possible for people to someday swim in a lake like Phoenix, particularly if "Rogue Rescue" efforts continue.

"I would think it's realistic. That's kind of where we're going with this whole Rouge project."

River pollution battled

By STEVE KELLMAN
staff writer

The local branch of the Rouge River acts as a visible reminder to Northville and Novi residents of the environmental problems faced by the state, and how expensive the cleanup of contaminated areas can be.

The four branches of the Rouge River stretch for some 125 miles through much of southeast Michigan. What could be a valuable recreational resource for much of the region is, in many places, too polluted to swim in, to fish, even to use for irrigation.

Approximately 40 miles of the waterway fail Michigan water-quality standards or the objectives of the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement. Most of the river is under a state fish consumption advisory because of high concentrations of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), a toxin which persists for long periods of time in the environment.

Other contaminants include heavy metals; organic chemicals including cyanide, oil and grease; and other industrial byproducts. In addition, several publicly owned wastewater treatment plants are potential sources of heavy metals, bacteria and organic chemicals.

The treatment plants include the Walled Lake Treatment Plant for Novi and Walled Lake. "That stream contains effluent from the treatment plant," said Pat Brunett, manager of environmental programs for the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "It feeds directly into the very beginnings of the middle branch of the Rouge River."

"But that's a very first-class treatment plant and the effluent is very clean," he added.

Some 30 private industrial dischargers also pose potential hazards. The dischargers include companies that use water in their manufacturing process, usually as a coolant. The state Department of Natural Resources issues such companies permits allowing them to discharge the water and requiring them to remove certain contaminants before doing so.

"We know that there are some spills and illegal dumping that goes on there," Brunett added. "That's been documented over the years."

Another problem in the Northville / Novi area is sediment from construction projects which leaches into the water. "Some of the impoundments on the river have to be dredged periodically because of the sediment buildup," Brunett said.

Brunett added that Johnson Creek, the drain that runs through the Middle Rouge Parkway in Northville and joins up with the Middle Rouge near Seven Mile Road, is affected by agricultural runoff. Such runoff from farms and fields can contain chemical fertilizers and pesticides used to grow crops.

While the Rouge faces contamination from many sources, the battle to clean up the river is being fought on several fronts. The most comprehensive cleanup plan is outlined in the Remedial Action Plan prepared by SEMCOG and representatives of the 48 communities within the Rouge River basin, with the help of the DNR.

The total cost of the cleanup has been estimated at $900 million, while the cost of fully implementing the RAP has been estimated at $1.8 billion. "The feeling is that the bulk of that cost will have to be borne by the communities within the Rouge River basin," Brunett said.

Among the RAP efforts now underway to improve the Rouge is the Rouge Valley / North Huron Valley Interceptor, a regional sewage treatment project which involves Novi, Northville City and 10 other western Wayne communities. Cost of the project has been estimated at nearly $200 million.

Detroit is also investing $200 million in the Rouge by installing a computerized flow management system and pump station to allow treatment of more sanitary and combined sewage.

"These improvements are already underway," Brunett explained.

Annual Rouge Rescue works to restore river

With friends like these, the Rouge River stands a fighting chance against its enemies.

Friends of the Rouge is a Livonia-based citizens organization committed to cleaning up the Rouge. The Friends use public education and awareness campaigns to draw the public's attention to the problems the river faces, and possible solutions.

One of the most popular programs sponsored by the Friends is the annual Rouge Rescue. Started in 1986, the program has involved more than 10,000 volunteers in the past four years and removed over 11,000 cubic yards of debris from the river.

This year, the Friends expect to draw 3,500 volunteers from 21 communities within the Rouge River watershed. Volunteers will meet Saturday, June 2 at 8:30 a.m. at more than 25 different sites to register for the cleanup.

Locally, Northville citizens can meet at the Northville Community Recreation Building, 303 West Main Street. For information call 349-0203.

In Novi, participants will meet at Michigan Tractor and Machinery, 24800 Novi Road. For information call 349-0454.

The Interactive Rouge River Water Quality Project, another program sponsored by the Friends, provides middle and high school students a chance to test the river's water quality themselves, and share their results with other students. Novi High School is among the 50 area schools participating in the project.

Several environmental groups active in the area

By LESLIE PEREIRA
staff writer

From saving sea turtles in distant oceans to controlling landfills or planting flowers in neighboring cities, environmental groups have taken on a range of causes wider than ever before.

Even the term environmental group has taken on a new meaning. No longer is "environmentalist" a label saved for long-haired hippies fighting to save the whales. More and more groups and individuals are proud to call themselves environmentalists as they fight for causes with increasing importance to most people's everyday lives.

The following is a list of active environmental groups in the area and their pet projects. Most of these groups are constantly looking for volunteers with similar concerns. But for those not interested in volunteering, at least you will know who is standing on your porch and what they represent the next time a canvasser comes knocking on your door.

SIERRA CLUB: For the first portion of its existence the Sierra Club was simply a West Coast group of nature lovers who got together to hike and camp. In recent years it has become one of the most influential lobbying groups in Michigan and the nation. The group has a statewide membership of 12,000 with a budget of over $130,000.

Some of the Sierra Club's major interests are forest preservation and management and waste disposal, although "we get involved in a whole range of issues," said Barbara Powell, an active member of the Huron Valley group based in Ann Arbor. "We want people to enjoy the outdoors and appreciate nature."

The Sierra Club's Huron Valley group welcomes volunteers and people who want to participate in nature outings. Call 996-5656.

EAST MICHIGAN ENVIRONMEN-

TAL ACTION COUNCIL: Another group active in the local area is the East Michigan Environmental Action Council. This is largely a group of legal minds seeking to help interpret and influence the environmental legislation coming out of Lansing in favor of green interests. Additionally, the group develops and distributes educational materials on its special environmental interests. They are: toxic substance management, water resources and farmland preservation.

Located in Birmingham, the group welcomes volunteers. Call 258-5188.

AUDUBON SOCIETY: One of the oldest groups in the state is the National Audubon Society, which, surprisingly to many people, does more than watch birds and publish a glossy magazine. The Audubon Society has a statewide membership of more than 10,000 and a budget of more than $1 million. Although the major issue area is birds, the group also helps staff and fund educational nature centers and nature preserves. The Audubon Society of Detroit is currently involved with the Detroit incinerator issue, development of a lecture series, conservation of wetlands and halting deforestation in Brazil, according to Elizabeth Chouinard.

The group is open to anyone. For more information, call 347-3433.

ECOLOGY CENTER: Ann Arbor's Ecology Center is tucked away in a tiny building in a quiet section of town. But don't let size fool you; this small office holds a wealth of information and an enormous amount of environmental activism.

Anyone can become a member and their arms are open to volunteers. For information, call 761-3186.

GREENPEACE: Because it is an international organization, the issues and goals of Greenpeace are more global in nature than most other groups.

"Greenpeace has grown tremendously," according to Assistant Director of the Ann Arbor office Chris Law, who said the group now has more than 1.5 million members worldwide.

Out of a small field office in Ann Arbor, the scores of members spread the news of destruction of the ozone and the looming extinction of dolphins, sea turtles, kangaroos and Japanese whales while demanding nuclear-free seas and the cleanup of leaking weapons plants.

For more information or to volunteer, call 761-1996.

GARDEN CLUBS: When someone mentions one of the area's several garden clubs, the term environmental group does not immediately come to mind. But in the purest sense of the term — a group seeking to safeguard and enhance the environment — the term fits garden clubs like a glove does a hand.

"Over the past couple of years, we have been working quite diligently to get a recycling program in place," said Olga James, who is chairperson of the conservation committee for the Northville Branch of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

Although recycling is not the main portion of a garden club's activities, they are also active in restoration and beautification. James' group has probably spent more than $50,000 over the past 50 years on trees, flowers and shrubs that they have planted in and around Northville.

"We also used to do the watering in town before they got sprinklers," James said.

Betty Moran, president of the Country Girls, another Northville garden club, said her group's activities are, for the most part, similar to those of the other Northville garden club.

And, "We always include conservation speakers at our monthly meeting to keep in tune with our environment," Moran said.

TAKING STOCK: individual action

Many common wastes need special care

By LESLIE PEREIRA
staff writer

Have you ever changed your own oil, dumping out the old used stuff? Or thrown dead batteries into the garbage can? If the answer is yes, then you have contributed to the increasing hazardous waste problem.

Most people have the notion that hazardous waste is something only generated by nuclear facilities and chemical companies. However, household hazardous waste is a potentially larger threat to the environment and is something over which everyone has some control. Dirty motor oil, used batteries, fingernail-polish remover, bug spray — these are all examples of toxic or flammable materials that can do serious harm to the environment if disposed of improperly.

One of the most common and serious environmental violation with a household hazard is the dumping of used motor oil. Used motor oil can be recycled, and environmentalists consider stopping the irresponsible disposal of used oil as one of their greatest challenges. Not only would the recycling of this oil stop the environmental degradation due to dumping, but it would also preserve a scarce resource by decreasing demand.

According to Jeanne Eisenstadt of the East Michigan Environmental Action Council, there has been progress made toward reliance on recycling.

"There is an increase in the number of people that recycle used motor oil," Eisenstadt said. In 1987, her organization reported that 36,807 gallons of used oil were recycled in the metro-Detroit area. In 1989, they recorded the recycling of 64,630 gallons of used oil, an increase of 76 percent.

"Novi really needs some more collection sites because they have had a tremendous increase in the last year," Eisenstadt said.

Currently, there are two oil collection sites in Novi: Sears Auto Department on Novi Road and Sovel's Service Center on Ten Mile. There are three in Northville: at Cal's Car Care on Main Street, and at both the city and township recycling centers.

According to Eisenstadt, problems arise with only a small number of oil collection sites because each location has only a limited used-oil storage capacity.

Additionally, some places are reluctant to accept oil from strangers because if one person brings in oil that is contaminated, it may ruin the entire container of oil. And subsequently, stations with contaminated oil, whether knowingly or not, may be slapped with a fine.

Eisenstadt admitted that circumstances were not conducive to promoting oil recycling as an option and she said changes in the programs needed to be made.

Despite all the problems with motor oil, it is not the only automotive product that requires special arrangements when it wears out or runs down. Brake fluid, transmission fluid and antifreeze are also worrisome liquids that should be given to people equipped to deal with them, although limited alternatives have begun to surface.

As far as antifreeze goes, there is a new company, the Glyclean Corporation, that manufactures special equipment which can recycle used antifreeze.

"I am trying to get this equipment accepted by the quickie oil-change shops," said Dave Schmidt, a hazardous waste educator for the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service. "It could just be another service they offer to customers."

Schmidt said unless this happens, it will probably be a struggle to persuade the general public to recycle antifreeze because it is hard to find a place which accepts it.

Residents of Oakland and Wayne counties may take some hazardous wastes to the Chemical Analytics, 3666345 Van Born Road, west of Wayne Road, Romulus from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 326-9400 to make an advance appointment.

If you are unsure of how to dispose of a product that you know or suspect to be hazardous, there is a Household Hazardous Waste Hotline. For information about proper use or disposal, call 1-800-468-9612.

Idea catches on in Novi

By JAN JEFFRES
staff writer

An estimated 3,468 trees were spared in the first nine months the Novi Recycling Center has been operating.

The center opened for business on May 1, 1989. Superintendent of Public Works Bruce Jerome said that statistics he's estimated indicate that as of Feb. 1, 1990, the volume of newspapers dropped off at the center and reused by recyclers not only saved the trees but also, by reducing the need to make new paper, removed 12,240 pounds of pollutants from the air, preserved 856,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy (enough to heat an average home for almost three years) and conserved 14 million gallons of water. Moreover, 673 cubic yards of landfill were freed.

Jerome calculated the local figures based on data he found in trade journals.

The 24-hour-per-day, seven-day-a-week drop-off recycling center is located at the back parking lot of the Novi Civic Center, 45175 West Ten Mile Road. Items accepted are newspapers, plastic containers with no caps; metal cans crushed with lids removed; and glass containers separated by clear, green and amber with the lids removed. All containers should be rinsed out. By midsummer, the center will also take office paper and computer paper.

In addition, large metal appliances such as washing machines and dryers, as well as scrap metal, may be left at the city's department of public works yard at 26300 Delwal Drive at Eleven Mile Road. Drop-off times are Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. This center is also open on the third Saturday of each month from 8 a.m. to noon. The city plans to inaugurate curbside appliance pickup by 1992.

Jerome said that by February 1, the center had taken in: 204 tons of newspapers, 15 tons of clear glass, 2.5 tons of green glass, one ton of amber glass, five tons of plastic (the equivalent of 60,000 milk jugs) and three forty yard roll-offs of large metal items.

"We receive money for everything we collected but we're not making money. What we feel we're doing is providing a service."

From May to February, Jerome said recycling companies paid the city $482 for glass and $837 newspaper and plastic.

But the city's not into recycling for the revenue. Jerome said that the goal is to "think globally, act locally" to protect the environment and reduce waste sent to landfills.

And apparently many Novi residents agree. The recycling program is doing "far better than anyone anticipated," Jerome said.

"We feel we've done fairly well. It's amazing when you look out the window and there won't be a five-minute period during the day when someone's not dropping something off," he said.

Takes hold in township

By MIKE TYREE
staff writer

What a change a few months can bring.

After a slow start, the Northville Township Recycling Center is handling so much recyclable material that officials are scrambling to maintain the 16155 Sheldon Road site.

"We can't keep up," said Township Manager Richard Henningsen. "We've had a lot bigger response than we anticipated."

Henningsen said the recycling collection center, located just north of Five Mile Road, suffers from the usual assortment of woes that plague other experimental projects.

"All the members of this community appreciate the efforts to keep recyclable products out of landfills, but we need education on what to put in there (the center)," he said. "We're spending more than we expected for material sorting."

Henningsen said the trailer used to hold newspapers is often mistakenly filled with cardboard, magazines and other products that should be placed elsewhere. The trailer is for newspaper only, he said.

Problems have been noted with plastic container storage bins, as well.

"People should crush plastic milk cartons and other clear cartons and bottles," he said. "That would save space and would prevent us from having to hire people to crush them."

Colored containers should not be placed in the clear container bins, Henningsen said. Even the caps from milk containers must be removed from the clear plastic bins, he added.

Temporary service workers are hired to do the sorting, he said.

Walter Holinoty, director of the township water and sewer department, noted the center's use in a quarterly report to the township Board of Trustees April 12.

"The public response and activity at the collection center has exceeded expectations," he wrote.

Holinoty said 15.8 tons of paper had been collected at the site between the December 28 grand opening and March 31. The paper earned $79.04 in revenue for the township, he said.

A 300-gallon oil collection drum was filled to capacity and emptied Feb. 6 and is full again, Holinoty said. Dumpsters for plastic jugs, glass and metal are also full, he said.

New clipping rule in city

By STEVE KELLMAN
staff writer

The need for recycling and diverting rubbish from the waste stream in Northville City is clear, both from an environmental and economic standpoint. The cost of city trash disposal has risen from $131,842 in 1985 to a projected $384,000 in 1990, nearly tripling the annual cost.

Northville City is encouraging recycling both at the city's recycling center and at home. The recycling center, at 650 Doheny Drive, is currently scheduled to be open Saturdays between 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Both recyclable materials and general rubbish are accepted, but users must show a driver's license to demonstrate city residence.

The recycling center accepts the following materials, in the following condition:

Newspapers must be tied in string or put loose in brown paper bags.

Glass bottles must be cleaned and sorted by color, with lids and other non-glass material removed.

Semi-transparent plastic milk and water containers must be cleaned and flattened, and the lids must be discarded.

Tin and steel cans must be clean and flattened, and paper labels must be removed.

Motor oil must be clean and brought to the center in covered plastic containers no larger than a gallon in size.

Car and household batteries are accepted at the recycling center, but are not allowed in curbside garbage.

Grass and garden waste are accepted in containers or clear plastic bags, and brush and branches are accepted either loose or tied in bundles.

Northville City is following in the footsteps of Dearborn and Southfield by requiring home separation of recyclable materials. The first recycled materials, grass and yard waste, should be placed in clearly marked containers or clear plastic bags.

Other materials are expected to be added to the list of recyclable materials once collection and disposal become more economically feasible for the city.

Recycling is one popular way to aid the environment

Composting is easy, effective

By LESLIE PEREIRA
staff writer

One person's trash is another one's treasure.

Nowhere is that age-old cliché more true than when it comes to composting. Old food scraps, grass clippings and dead leaves — this commonplace refuse is a composter's dream come true.

Composting is the process by which kitchen and yard wastes can be turned into nutrient-rich soil or fertilizer for use by the conscientious gardener, and it is a practice hailed by both gardeners and environmentalists alike.

Gardeners are increasingly relying on this ideal way to save money on fertilizer and at the same time reduce the flow of garbage into landfills.

"Almost any kind of kitchen waste can be composted except for fat, meat or bones," said Master Gardener Diane Hoaglund at a composting class in Novi recently.

Starting a composting heap is easy. The basic ingredients are grass clippings and weeds from the lawn, piles of dead, dried-out leaves with a sprinkling of some unwanted kitchen scraps. The result after only a few weeks or months: soil supplements more fertile than the store-bought stuff.

Green grass clippings are an essential component of a healthy compost pile because they are rich in nitrogen. Most dedicated composters save their bags of lawn trimmings after mowing to add to their compost piles as needed.

"I even go over and collect grass clippings from my neighbors," laughed Lea Van Renterghem, a master gardener from West Bloomfield who does her own home composting.

Another important composting component is brown leaves. The carbon-rich leaves are needed to counteract and help break down the grass. If you include the glossy, wax-like leaves, they should be chopped up to facilitate breakdown, Van Renterghem said.

In addition to nitrogen and carbon, the third crucial addition to a compost pile is oxygen. These three elements, taken together, allow for the quickest and most thorough chemical break-down of the compost pile. Piles should not be made so heavy that they are compressed and oxygen is unable to get in; they should be turned over frequently.

Some of the finer points of composting:

□ A compost pile should be at least four feet long, four feet wide and three feet high, so that it can contain the heat it will be generating.

□ The compost pile should always be moist. Rule of thumb is that the pile should be as moist as a damp sponge.

□ Compost cannot be used in your home on house plants, unless it is sterilized in the oven for 20 minutes at 200 degrees.

□ Compost piles should not smell. If your heap reeks of ammonia, that could be your indication that something is not quite right.

□ Dog and cat droppings should not be used, as they may carry diseases, but horse and cow manure can be an excellent source of nutrients.

□ Earthworms in the compost pile are good. Van Renterghem breeds them in a box and then throws them into her fertile pile.

Ecological shopping gets respect

By JAN JEFFRES
staff writer

Just when you thought it was safe to go shopping, the rules of the game are changing for those who want to be environmentally responsible.

The pressing need to reduce the volume of trash headed for landfills and incinerators is convincing many people not just to voluntarily recycle their refuse but to also alter their decisions at the front lines: the cash registers of their neighborhood supermarkets, drug stores and department stores.

Ruth Kraut, environmental education coordinator for the Ecology Center in Ann Arbor — which was founded 20 years ago in response to the first Earth Day — said the volume of calls to the center from people who want to learn how to put their money where their philosophy is, has recently increased. She advises them to always buy products using less packaging; to actively search out purchases which would fit into the category of the three R's, reusable, recyclable or already recycled; and to look for products that are durable rather than disposable.

A good example, Kraut said, is to buy a refillable razor rather than a supply of disposable ones. One significant way to cut down on the load sent to landfills is for parents of un-housebroken children to engage a diaper service rather than buying disposable diapers.

"Disposable diapers are not biodegradable, they're not reusable and they add untreated human waste to our landfills," Kraut explained. "Most people don't want to wash diapers but our surveys show you diaper services are a little bit cheaper than buying disposables."

Another alternative would be using cloth handkerchiefs instead of Kleenex.

Research has shown that people are still resistant to buying unpackaged goods. One study found that packaged basketballs sold better than unwrapped ones, Kraut said, pointing to an education problem.

"Companies have found that people prefer packaging, but from an environmental point of view that's not as good," she added.

When you do your environmentally sound shopping, it's best to take your purchases home in a reusable canvas, plastic or net shopping bag, she explained, adding that in countries such as France and Israel most people carry their own shopping bags to market.

Many companies have become increasingly sensitive to environmental issues. Meijer kicked off a program of "environmental commitment" in October 1989 to coordinate waste-reduction efforts throughout the corporation, including in-store signs to help shoppers make environmentally sound shopping decisions. The stores now sell eggs in pulp cartons made of 100 percent recycled paper, they added a section of organically grown produce, they redeem 150 percent of the beverage containers sold, and they collect used motor oil at those stores with a gas station.

Beginning on May 1, the stores will give shoppers a three-cent discount per each shopping bag they bring back and reuse for their next purchases.

Jennifer White, public and consumer affairs coordinator for the Meijer corporation, said that the increasing awareness of their customers encouraged the company to adopt the environmental programs.

Shoppers at the Good Food Company in Livonia will find a large array of products catering to the ecology-minded, including organic, biodegradable cleaning products such as dishwashing liquid which leaves no toxic residue.

The Good Food Company is now promoting canvas shopping bags with handles and an Earth Day logo for $4.95 apiece. Customers on April 22 who spend over $20 will receive a free seedling poplar or blue spruce.

"We'd like to turn Earth Day into a 365-day-a-year holiday. It should be on peoples' top-priority list. It's an important concept to us," said general manager Michael Williams.

The Good Food Company has an organically grown produce section, which helps conserve soil and does not deplete minerals from the earth, he said.

The company also collects and recycles customers' plastic water jugs.

But while many of the shoppers at the Good Food Company may be more in the vanguard of ecological sensitivity than the average consumer, environmentally sound shopping appears to be the trend of the 1990s.

Gilbert Borman, director of public relations for Farmer Jack and A & P of Michigan, said the grocery business will change radically within the next 15 years in response to trash-disposal problems.

Efforts are underway to create national standards for recyclable wrapping for a variety of products, but one thing the industry won't sacrifice is the safety of tamper-proof packaging and the preserving of freshness.

Borman said Proctor and Gamble is now working on creating environmentally sensitive packaging which may include selling detergents in a concentrate, reducing the volume of packaging by half.

"You're going to see every facet of the business being re-evaluated in an environmental light," Borman said. "Be patient. It can't be done in one puff of smoke with mirrors. It's going to be a process."

Some of the impetus to change will come from consumer demands.

"You kind of solve these problems as you go along. It's hard to change your lifestyle all at once. I personally advise people to take a slow and steady approach. Start with one area of your life and move along," Kraut said.

Canvassers seek moral, fiscal support for cause

By STEVE KELLMAN

The two men walked up and down the quiet city streets, armed only with clipboard of materials on the U.S. military budget and figures on the share of a citizen's tax dollars that goes to build bombs.

As canvassers for Michigan Sane / Freeze, Joe Howard and Gerry Butterworth have seen thousands of such streets, and they know what's waiting behind those curtained windows and closed doors.

As they walked down the tree-lined sidewalk of a residential neighborhood in Northville, Howard pointed out a house on the right with a wind sock hanging in a tree. "That's a liberal flag, we'll do that one," he said. "Anyone with a wind sock is good."

"And people with bumper stickers are a pretty good bet," Butterworth added. An economy car parked in the driveway had an anti-nuclear sticker on the back bumper.

But no one was home, or at least no one came to the door.

There are certain things you look for, like Volvos and VWs. Those are good signs," Howard explained. "And of course the door knockers that say 'Peace to all who enter here.'"

After crossing the street, the two approach another home. "Uh oh, they've got an American flag on the mailbox," Butterworth said. "This is going to be a tough one." Sure enough, a middle-aged man comes to the door and says he is not interested before Howard can get into his rap.

"That's most of them," Howard said as he turned away from the door. "It gets to be real depressing sometimes, because you put your whole heart into it and people don't respond."

PUBLIC AWARENESS

The Sane / Freeze canvassers are currently trying to increase public awareness of the Air Force proposal to place MX missiles on railroad cars at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, and raise funds for a Sane / Freeze campaign against the plan. Under the proposal, the missiles would roam the country's railroad system during times of increased military tension to make them harder to target.

The CSX rail line which passes through Northville and Novi has been cited by an Air Force official as one of the likely routes for the missile-bearing trains.

But the canvassers had little luck finding people to talk to in a neighborhood within sight of the CSX line. "It's been going pretty rough," Howard said of the campaign. "If it doesn't directly affect the way they live, it doesn't matter."

Though the two report a positive response from as many as half of the people they see some nights, that is not always the case. "There's other nights where nobody will listen to you," Howard said.

"We usually only get about half," Howard said. "That's signing a petition," Butterworth added. "As for people letting me into their house, I'd say five a night."

Said Butterworth, "We try to talk to about 30 to 50 people a day."

The two talk of horror stories like having dogs sicked on them and people threaten them. Butterworth recounts the story of the woman who wrote a check out to Sane / Freeze, whose husband, clothed from head to foot in camouflage clothing, ran up to him afterward and demanded the check back.

"We had a $100 member in Royal Oak pull a gun on a canvasser once."

Many views expressed by area organizations

Northville and Novi residents may see dozens of canvassers at their doorsteps in the course of a year, each asking for moral and financial support of their organizations. What's a socially conscious homeowner to do?

Following is a partial list of state and national organizations that canvass in the area and a description of the issues they are involved in:

- Clean Water Action — this national environmental organization has been in Michigan for two years, and is working to protect the Great Lakes, encourage more recycling and better solid-waste management, and discourage the building of incinerators.

- Greenpeace — this international environmental organization has worked to stop the slaughter of whales and seals, and the proliferation of nuclear power plants and weapons.

- Michigan Citizens Lobby — this state group is affiliated with the national Citizens Action Coalition. The group is presently working for auto insurance rate reform, and deals with controversial health care issues including doctors who overcharge Medicare recipients.

- Michigan Sane / Freeze — this political awareness group argues against the proliferation of nuclear weapons at the expense of social programs. The group is currently taking a stand against the U.S. Air Force proposal to station MX missiles on railroad cars at Air Force bases across the country. Wurtsmith Air Force Base in Oscoda is one of the bases slated to receive the missiles.

- Michigan United Conservation Clubs — this non-profit organization represents the Michigan chapter of the National Wildlife Federation, and seeks the environmental conservation of land and water resources.

- Public Interest Research Group in Michigan (PIRGIM) — this consumer-advocacy group is one of 25 such groups across the country. The group backs the state "Comprehensive Cleanup Act" to hold polluters accountable for the cleanup of toxic waste sites, and backs renewal of the federal Clean Air Act. The group also argues for truth in advertising.

Howard added.

With their long hair tied into pony-tails, their clipboards bearing bumper stickers with slogans like "Ask Why," the two do seem out of place in the conservative neighborhoods.

"It's just like any other town where people are comfortable," Howard said. "Nobody gets involved, and that's what democracy's all about."

"We see a lot of what we do as educational," Butterworth added. "We've at least placed something in their heads that's going to cause them to think of the bigger picture."

"The thing with this job is you have to learn to be persistent without being aggressive," Butterworth said. "One of the standard things I use in my rap is, 'You put $50,000 into a missile and it's gone. It just sits there. You hope it will never be used. We have enough missiles to blow up the world 40 times over.'"

"You're only dead once," Howard added.

COMMUNICATION SKILLS

"Canvassing is the backbone of the organization," said canvass director Tom Morse from the organization's Ann Arbor office. "We've had a canvasser working out of Ann Arbor since 1984. Right now Sane / Freeze has a membership of 17,000 and that is canvass-generated."

The canvassing programs also generate volunteers for the organization, Morse added. "We have gotten hundreds of volunteers through canvassing."

Morse estimated that his canvassers talk to as many as 200,000 people each year. Besides the funds generated by the program, canvassing also helps awaken people's awareness to political issues, and generate public comment and debate in the form of letters to the editor of local newspapers. "It's hard to measure but it can't be overlooked," Morse said of the educational effects of canvassing.

While the current Sane / Freeze canvass staff only has about 15 members, their ranks swell to as many as 35 members in the summer as college students return to work.

Among the skills necessary for a good canvasser are "communication skills, creativity, and a history in activism," Morse said. "Before they're canvassers, they're activists."

Communication involves "your ability to find common ground on these issues with the public at large, so that they can relate it to their own lives," Morse said.

Hospital gains judgeship

According to Wayne County Commissioner Susan Heintz.

The county's contribution will be about $54,000, Heintz said.

Heintz echoed Burton's excitement for the project.

"Everybody will benefit," she said. "Witnessing these patients as they were taken to the city-county building with their possessions for their hearings; you know it is dehumanizing."

"But it's going to save a lot of money, too," she said.

Burton said the estimated cost of the new seat will be between $3-400,000 per year. Savings will be realized on the state level, he said.

Dr. Walter Brown, director of NRPB, also said patients will be better served with an on-site judge.

"I think the most important impact will be to the patients," he said. "It will be much more humane in terms of treating our patients by not having to transport them downtown."

Burton said a tentative schedule for the new judge — who will be elected during the August primary — would consist of hearing the mental docket during Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings. Cases involving western Wayne juveniles would be heard Wednesday mornings and every weekday afternoon, he said.

Burton also said an interim judge would be used to get the program off the ground.

"We're possibly looking at July 1, but more realistically August 1 (to begin hearing cases)," he said.

Brown said the hospital is "physically ready" to handle the position.

"We've already renovated an area and it's modeled after a courtroom," he said.

Father of alleged kidnap victim recounts events

By MIKE TYREE

Christopher Roberts told police Sunday evening that his 1-year-old daughter, Brittany, had been abducted at gunpoint from the Northville Township home of his aunt, Anita Lisowski. Roberts was interviewed at the site of the alleged kidnapping Monday afternoon.

Christopher Roberts, 22, wearily opened the door of his aunt's Northridge Villas condominium and told the reporter and photographer to come inside.

His mother and other family members were huddled around a portable television and one of them shrieked "Here it is! Here it is!" as their images flashed across the screen.

The broadcast captured the circus-like atmosphere which existed at the Northville Township hall that afternoon. It showed an angry Roberts slamming a car door and refusing reporters' requests for comment on the alleged at-gunpoint abduction of his 1-year old daughter Brittany.

At his aunt's home, Roberts was asked to recount the events which led to the alleged kidnapping.

"At 9:30 Sunday night, my aunt answered the phone and somebody asked for Chris," he said. "I answered and they said 'Chris? The cops are coming after you; better get out of there.' I was scared because I knew there was a warrant out for me from when we (his estranged wife Deborah) had an argument (March 29 at a Sterling Heights mall).

"I went in and got the baby, who was sleeping, and my aunt and I went out to get in the car, to drive away. We just started to back the car out when a van pulled up behind us and two men jumped out. They yelled 'Stop! Police! Police! Stop!' and I saw they had guns. I was on the passenger's side holding the baby and one jammed a magazine (an ammunition clip) in his gun and stuck the gun against my right eye.

"He said, 'Give me the baby or I'll blow your f---ing head off.' 'I gave him the baby. I would not give my kid up if there wasn't a gun stuck to my head.'"

Roberts said that after he turned Brittany over to the gunman, the man called to another man who was crouched in the van.

"He called him Doug," Roberts said. "I looked around and saw it was my father-in-law (Doug Allor). I saw him clearly."

Roberts said Allor took the child and one of the gunmen told him, "I'll finish you off later."

Roberts talked about his stormy

"They wouldn't have got her if there wasn't a gun to my head."

2½ year marriage to Deborah during the interview. He said she left him with Brittany in tow — March 23.

"I started looking for her," he said, "and it turned out she was at her parents' (Shelby Township home). Her mother wouldn't let her speak to me. She then filed for divorce."

Roberts said he convinced Deborah to have breakfast with him the morning of March 29. Deborah brought Brittany along for the breakfast and the three eventually made their way to the Lakeside Mall in Sterling Heights.

An argument ensued, and soon Brittany became the literal object of a tug-of-war between the parents, Roberts said.

"We were pulling her back and forth," he said of the child, whose birthday was celebrated April 13.

Roberts said he gained control of the baby and jumped in a van and drove away from his wife. He then "laid low" for two weeks.

"I called her (Deborah). I called her night and day," he said. "Just to let her know the baby was okay."

Roberts said his wife then gave him a "deadline" to return the baby. "My deadline was Easter," he said. "She said if she didn't have her back by then, she was going to look for the baby."

Deborah's family was able to locate Roberts at his aunt's Northville Township home via a telephone-company-installed tracing device, he said. He said he did not know the identity of the caller who had tipped him to the "police," but he said that he thinks the call came from a car phone in the waiting van.

Roberts, a truck driver dressed in a Detroit Pistons T-shirt and blue jeans, shouted at the television as another report on the incident appeared on the screen.

"They're trying to say I made this up," he said. "Their family is trying to say bad things about me so that I can't get her (Brittany) back."

"Like I said before, they wouldn't have got her if there wasn't a gun to my head. I'd have given them a fight."

Township police oversee kidnap inquiry

By MIKE TYREE

Northville township police became involved in the alleged Sunday kidnapping of Brittany Roberts at approximately 9:40 p.m. that evening when Christopher Roberts called the emergency 911 number.

The next several hours saw detectives from Northville attempt to formulate a strategy to locate the missing infant, create lines of communication with other law enforcement agencies, question Roberts and other potential witnesses of the incident, obtain composite drawings of the suspected gunmen—and constantly update and answer the questions of the assembled representatives of the media that stalked the halls of the township offices Monday.

At approximately 8:20 a.m. Monday, Captain Philip Presnell ushered a newspaper reporter and a television reporter and cameraperson into his office for a briefing. Presnell handed out a press release that outlined the alleged events of the previous evening.

Presnell said the father of Brittany Roberts was visiting friends at the Northridge Apartments when a beige van carrying three men allegedly abducted the child. Two of the men identified themselves as police officers and were brandishing handguns. The men were not wearing uniforms and did not show badges, Presnell said.

He was asked if a relative of the family was involved in the alleged abduction.

"My understanding is that one may be a relative," Presnell said, "a relative on the natural mother's side."

Presnell said no shots were reported in the incident and that the father apparently had been hit and had some kind of "legal papers" thrown at him.

"We don't know yet if they are valid legal documents," he said.

Presnell would not release the names of the father, mother, or name the relative suspected of taking part in the alleged abduction.

He then offered descriptions of the three men in the van and said if the prior evening's incidents were factual, the men could face charges including kidnapping, assault and commission of a felony with a firearm.

Presnell then said he would handle all media requests for information during the day. Sgt. John Sherman was assigned to oversee the case and officer Fred Yankee was positioned as the actual case officer.

After a television interview, Presnell escorted the media from his office. As he opened the police department door, a dispatcher told him he had messages from three media representatives.

"It's going to be a long day," someone said.

Presnell just nodded.

At approximately 11 a.m., Presnell was asked if the baby had been forcibly taken from her mother at an earlier date. He said "the investigation is ongoing," but that angle was being researched. He was also asked if it was believed that the baby had been taken across state lines and if the Federal Bureau of Investigation was involved in the incident.

"All I can say is that we are working with other law enforcement agencies to attempt to locate the baby," he said.

"We always fear for the child in a situation like this."

Presnell told the press that a briefing would be held at 3 p.m. At approximately 2:30, he said that a warrant for the arrest of the relative would not be issued at that time by the Wayne County Prosecutor's office.

At 3:05 p.m., Presnell met with the media, including representatives of four television stations and two newspapers. He offered composite drawings of the suspects, a picture of Brittany Roberts, and asked the media to alert the public to be on the lookout for the child.

Reporters then told Presnell that contact had been made with relatives of the baby's mother and that the child was safe with her mother at a location in Shelby Township.

Presnell said he was not aware of that scenario but said "if anyone knows the whereabouts, they should come forward and tell us."

At that time, Christopher Roberts, the father of Brittany, and members of his family emerged from the police department. Roberts left through the front door of the township hall and the media followed en masse.

Roberts clearly was flustered by the surrounding cameras and microphones. He was especially upset with some of the media who asked him if the kidnapping report was a hoax.

As reporters swarmed around the door of a car that he and his family were piling into, Roberts yelled, "No comment."

the top of the township hall steps, shook their heads and turned away.

Reporters then crowded around Presnell, who again stated that he knew nothing of the reported sighting of the mother and child.

"But I have been out here; something may have happened in the last few minutes," he said.

At 6:05 p.m. a press release was issued by the police department. The release said:

"Detectives from this department have located the missing subject. They have identified her and are satisfied she is safe at an undisclosed location in Macomb County. Other facts and suspects are still under investigation by this department."

At 8 a.m. Tuesday, Presnell reiterated that the child had been located.

"We wanted to make sure that it really was her; that no switch had occurred," he said.

He said no contact had been made with the relative suspect—identified the day before as the baby's grandfather on the natural mother's side.

"We've tried, but haven't been able to locate him. It's part of the continuing saga," he said.

Presnell said then that the department had "some possible leads" as to the whereabouts of the suspected gunmen. He added that Christopher Roberts and his aunt, Anita Lisowski of Northville Township, had given sworn statements in writing that the armed abduction had occurred.

He also said Roberts had been arrested on a misdemeanor assault warrant "Sunday night or Monday." The warrant was issued after an altercation between Roberts and his wife March 29.

Presnell said the department's next moves were to "try and make contact with the third person in the van" and "to review all the steps and statements" made to this point.

At 3:10 p.m. Tuesday, Presnell reported no major progress in the case. He said "personal" contact had not been made with the relative suspected of abducting the child. The two suspected gunmen had not been located, either, he said.

"Detective Yankee's been in the field all day," he said. "We're working to confirm (that the abduction did take place)."

"I really don't expect any breakthrough today," he said. "I hope things will clear up by Thursday."

Candidate deadline earlier

Filing deadlines for political candidates are three weeks earlier this year, the secretary of state's office announced.

Michigan changed its laws because the U.S. government said troops overseas and on submarines had too little time to obtain and return their absentee ballots.

Aug. 7 is the primary election for partisan offices such as governor, U.S. senator and representative, state legislators and township officers, as well as for nonpartisan district, circuit and probate judges. It is also election time for precinct delegates to county political party conventions.

Here are major new dates:

- May 8 by 4 p.m.: Candidates for county convention delegate ("precinct delegate") to file petitions with county clerk.
- May 11 by 4 p.m.: Withdrawal deadline for candidates for precinct delegate.
- May 15: Deadline to place local questions on the primary ballot to be filed with county or local clerks.
- May 15 by 4 p.m.: Candidates for partisan and nonpartisan offices to file nominations petitions (or fees) for the primary election.
- May 18 by 4 p.m.: Withdrawal deadline for the primary.
- June 23: County committees of major political parties to call county conventions.
- July 9: Last date to register for primary election.
- July 27: Pre-primary campaign statements to be filed.
- Aug. 4 by 2 p.m.: Deadline to apply for an absent voter ballot by mail.
- Aug. 7: Primary election.

Registration for upcoming activity programs begins

Registration is now going on for the 1990 spring and summer programs of the Northville Community Recreation Department.

Brochures outlining available programs are available at the Recreation Center at 303 W. Main Street in Northville. For more information contact 349-0203.

Some of the newer activities offered this season include scuba diving classes. Two opportunities are offered to enjoy the sport of scuba.

First timers are welcome to try out the art of scuba during a "Discover Scuba" experience put on by Don's Dive Shop on April 23.

Participants will be able to be under water, breathing air — all in the safe confines of a pool. All equipment is provided, but participants should wear a swimsuit. Registration is limited to 20 participants per session. The class is held at the Northville High School pool.

Two times are offered for people aged 14 and older, at 8 p.m. on April 23 and again at 9 p.m.

Scuba Diving, the class, is offered through Northville Community Recreation beginning April 30 and running through June 11. The class will allow participants to become certified scuba divers. Don's Dive Shop will lead the class through classroom work and water training. At the end of class an open water dive will be scheduled for completion of certification.

Modest swimwear is recommended. Students will need mask, fins, snorkel and boots, in addition to tank rental. Rental information is available at Don's Dive Shop at 477-7333. Class fee does not include rental or open water training. You must be a good swimmer to enroll in this class. The fee is $65 for the six week class which meets from 6-10 p.m. The class is open to people aged 14 and up.

A special Soccer for Women class will be held on Mondays April 23 through May 21. If you have children playing soccer and want to find out what it's all about, this class is for you. It is geared especially for women — participants will learn basic soccer skills, game rules, plus have a great workout. The class is taught by Toby Fowler, soccer mom and certified physical education teacher. Class is held at Northville Community Center from 7-8:30 p.m. and is open to women aged 18 and over. The fee is $15.

This spring and summer Northville Community Recreation is offering a variety of swimming classes for children of all swimming abilities. Swim instruction classes are divided by ability, not age. Classes include aqua tots, pre-beginner I, pre-beginner II, beginner I, beginner II, advanced beginner, intermediate, swimmer and introduction to competitive swimming (this is not a swim team). Class fees and requirements differ. Contact the Rec Center for more information.

Bill to make local gun control illegal

By TIM RICHARD

LANSING — Local gun-control ordinances would be illegal under a Senate-passed bill aimed at giving Michigan a uniform law.

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, was the only area lawmaker to oppose the Senate Bill 813, which passed 28-5 and goes to the House.

Faxon, whose district includes Novi, heaped ridicule on the bill and was in turn accused of "demagoguery" by sponsor Chris Dingell, D-Trenton.

"This (local control) is fertile ground for abuse of power," said Dingell, a first-term senator whose congressman-father is an avid outdoorsman.

Dingell told stories about abuses of local control:

o Detroit used to have a waiting period of up to six months for a handgun permit and made an assistant county prosecutor wait the full six months.

o Detroit advertises it has a training school for gun permit applicants, but a Dingell staffer calling the number was able only to reach an annoyed water department clerk. (A senator from Detroit said the program started in late February.)

o A sheriff in a southern state told him: "Don't worry about having a local permit around here. We've never heard of a white person having a problem." Added Dingell: "That was in the mid-'70s."

Dingell argued that amendments allowing local units to have stiffer handgun rules than state law were unnecessary because they wouldn't result in longer prison terms for the guilty.

"Michigan has a practice of concurrent sentencing. A person wouldn't get a longer sentence (for being convicted under a local ordinance). He or she probably wouldn't even be charged for the second offense."

Faxon opposed the bill and supported every unsuccessful amendment to allow cities, townships and villages to write tighter rules.

"We are not taking away anybody's guns. You can't measure what the (local) waiting period does because the people are still alive."

"It's like there's some fundamental right to buy a gun and fiddle around with it and see what happens."

Supporting a losing amendment to allow cities to prohibit guns in many institutions, Faxon said, "It's like we're sending a message: This is a free gun state. You can go into nursery schools, private schools, hospitals. Give them their guns! Give 'em an Uzi!"

Replied Dingell: "The demagoguery of my colleagues has hit a new low."

The bill was supported by area Sens. Richard Fessler, R-Commerce; Robert Geake, R-Northville; and Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville. They took no part in the three-hour debate, which was led entirely by Dingell.

Dingell said his bill was supported by the Michigan Sheriffs' Association, Michigan State Police, outdoors groups and the National Rifle Association.

He said local ordinances were unnecessary to require training — as in Detroit — because the injury rate "has been coming down drastically through private action — not through government."

He praised groups such as Michigan United Conservation Clubs for conducting hunter-safety and gun-safety programs.

Township Police get new officer

By MIKE TYREE

The Northville Township Police Department welcomed a new member April 16 when Jim Fisher was added as a patrol officer.

Fisher, who has spent the past 1½ years as a member of the Dearborn Heights Police Department, was selected over two dozen other candidates, according to Captain Philip Presnell.

Presnell praised Fisher, calling him "outstanding in all areas."

He said Fisher is four credits shy of graduation from Madonna College, where he is working toward a degree in criminal justice.

Fisher said he was attracted to the Northville Township job because of the potential for "financial growth and growth in the department."

Supervisor Georgina Goss administered the swearing in of the new officer Monday afternoon.

The township police department roster stands at 17 with the addition of Fisher.

Our Opinions

Earth Day 1990 is to learn and enjoy

Globally significant events often get lost in the day-to-day shuffle of personal problems and needs. What happens in Europe, in Detroit, and even to the family on the other side of town, doesn't often affect us as much as the things that happen directly to us and to our homes, our families and our pocketbooks.

An event as global as Earth Day 1990 could easily be one of those things that is read about briefly and forgotten. If that were allowed to happen, everyone would be the poorer.

Northville residents should give the day some attention precisely because the matters it addresses are so extremely personal. They affect every aspect of our lives from how we shop and get to work, to how we store our trash and diaper our children.

The four-page special report carried in this newspaper this week shows just how much the environment affects us, from the air we breathe to the quality of the water that runs through our backyard river, the Rouge. More importantly, though, is the extent to which we affect the environment.

Our buying habits influence how products are packaged and marketed. Our decisions regarding recycling not only affect the amount of garbage that will eventually find its way to a landfill, but directly affect our tax dollars. The price of landfill space is soaring and is costing municipalities more and more of their precious tax dollars. And as we all know too well, that hurts us very personally indeed, right in the pocketbook.

Although Earth Day 1990 is fast becoming a media event — with even its own TV specials and rock-star spokespersons — it is far more than another chance to hold hands and sing. Earth Day is a chance to make changes in our individual lifestyles that may eventually change the world.

Earth Day 1990 takes off this Sunday, April 22 with a local day of events here in Northville at Maybury State Park. There is a run and a walk to promote both fitness and the fact that we don't always have to drive everywhere. There are booths and demonstrations on recycling, waste management and a puppet show.

We hope to see everyone out there, enjoying the day and thinking about how to improve life in their own personal ways.

School volunteers get deserved recognition

The Northville School district will celebrate its 10th annual Founders Day Banquet on Wednesday, April 25. The event is a special one in several ways for members of the Northville community.

The annual Founders Day celebration is sponsored by the Northville PTA and is an evening dedicated to honoring the volunteers in the Northville Public Schools.

The Northville school system is a good one for many reasons. One of the most important is because of the active participation of parents in the education of their children. Again and again studies are released on methods for improving educational systems and all of them point to one important element: strong involvement and support from the student's family.

The Northville PTA is a strong and vital organization. Volunteers in each of the schools put in long hours performing a variety of tasks. From parent involvement in the Great Books programs, to the fascinating and creative Junior Enrichment Series, the PTA coordinates fundraisers and special activities to benefit the students. Parents who attend monthly meetings at the schools are kept abreast of the latest changes in curriculum, policies and new educational philosophies. The PTA has sponsored special speakers for parents on topics relating to child growth and self-esteem.

The Northville community is rich in volunteers. On April 25 a few of those who put in time to help the schools will be honored. The community is invited to attend the Founders Day Banquet. The evening begins at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $13 and are available in each school office and the Board of Education office.

It is easy to overlook or take for granted organizations such as the PTA that appear to have been going on forever and ever. The community has a chance to take a moment and thank the people who volunteer to keep this important organization strong.

Twenty years later

By Ann Willis

In 1970 I wore my environmental consciousness on my... well, it wasn't my sleeve.

Let me put this another way. In 1970, the year of the first official Earth Day celebration, the big thing was to wear patches on your bell-bottom jeans. I had a peace symbol sewn over my left knee. I had a candy-bar patch sewn on the other knee. And the green circle that symbolized the burgeoning environmental movement — well, that was sewn on the place people couldn't see when I sat down.

It is easy to dismiss Earth Day as a massive baby-boomer flashback. Hey, it was fun in the '70s, let's do it again. Woodstock with a cause. The "Big Chill" with a '90s beat.

But that would be selling the entire idea a little short. Earth Day 1970 is now credited with starting the environmental movement in a big way. Probably the only thing the first Earth Day did was to get us all thinking about what we were doing to the earth. And the idea of getting some five billion people in the world thinking about any one subject — well, the cosmic energy has to do some good.

Earth Day 1990 has already done that. People are talking about the day a lot. They are connecting Earth Day 1990 with a renewed interest in recycling. There's discussion involving words like "wildlife habitat," "ecosystems," "green-belts" and "alternative modes of transportation." It's a shade different from the '70s lingo, but the point is we're all starting to focus on the environment again.

What Earth Day 1990 can do more than anything is to take the term "environment" and make it mean something to our everyday lives. We don't live in an "environment," we live in houses. And these houses need to be checked for radon levels and energy efficiency. We live in back yards. And we need to think about what we do with the grass we mow from that backyard, and what the effects are from the fertilizer we put on those backyard lawns. We live in our cars. And we need to understand that pouring oil and antifreeze from our cars into storm sewers or the ground is not right.

That's what Earth Day 1990 can do for us. And the best part about it is we can do it without wearing bell bottoms.

Doing our bit

By Bob Needham

So what are we doing? This newspaper devotes a lot of attention, in news columns and editorials, to issues of environmental concern. These issues are increasingly important to the public, particularly in areas like Novi which are rapidly developing.

In today's paper, to mark Earth Day 1990 this Sunday, we are running a special four-page project on the state of the local environment. It's a sort of progress report on the issues our local communities face. Please read it; the piece includes a lot of good information on a much more local level than you'll find anywhere else. I'm amazed at the attention that Earth Day is getting in all the media, at all levels. Many times more than I expected.)

Our project this week is just one part of our continuing environmental coverage; we've done a lot in the past and expect to do a lot more in the future. But even though the most important thing a newspaper can do is inform, that isn't the only thing.

You probably know that old newspapers make up quite a large share of all the trash discarded by American society. Luckily, they are one of the easiest things to prepare for recycling: just tie them up or put them in a shopping bag and dump them into a truck. They are then supposed to be shipped off and turned into blank newsprint or certain other products.

What's happening now, across the country, is that the supply of used newsprint exceeds the capacity of the newsprint industry to recycle it. Although all of the newsprint we used this week is made from recycled fiber, our average use for the year is about 14 percent of our total.

That figure puts us right in the national average, according to the Stanford University organizers of Earth Day 1990. Our company, like many others, is pushing for more recycled paper from its suppliers, but it's going to take a while for supply to meet demand.

At the other end of the "waste stream," we end up with quite a few waste newspapers here in the office, as you might imagine. Those papers are picked up by the folks from the Living Science Foundation in Novi, where they are used as animal litter — an effective reuse.

Pushing for more recycled newsprint, reusing our own waste newspapers, and, most importantly, trying to keep the public informed. In case you were wondering, that's what we're doing.

Bob Needham is editor of the Novi News and The Northville Record.

Locals deserve thanks

To the Editor:

Hooray! Thanks to efforts from the community and local municipalities, the Holloway landfill was removed from the list of proposed landfills in Oakland County. A special thanks should go to Andy Byerly and Linda Clancey who did some great work which helped influence that decision. Linda researched and pulled historical documents together; Andy synthesized the information, developed a statement on behalf of 25 homeowners and attended many long, late-night meetings.

The whole process was an education for many of us. We learned about the history of this area, Act 641 and some of the major problems associated with landfills of any nature.

We are all relieved that the landfill will not be "in our back yard," but I feel we have only borrowed time and not solved a problem. We are running out of landfill space. Nobody wants to live next to a landfill, yet each year we continue to generate 10 times our weight in trash, or about one-half ton per person — a total of 146,000,000 tons.

Please take the opportunity on April 22, Earth Day, to learn how to stop generating so much trash either by buying products that can be reused or by recycling. Watch for TV specials and newspaper articles on the environment. I invite everyone to come out to Maybury State Park on Earth Day, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to learn more about what you can do to help our planet.

Only one

To the Editor:

The Northville City Council's decision to allow city residents to vote on the proposed Haller Library is indeed the correct course of action — it exemplifies true democracy.

But township officials plan to build the Haller Library even without city participation. Township Supervisor Georgina Goss said, "If the city turns down the proposal in August, we would go ahead and build the library." (Northville Record, April 5, 1990). This would make two libraries serving the Northville community.

That's right — two libraries. One downtown; one at Six and Sheldon. The Northville City Library, and the Northville Township (Haller) Library. Split up the books — half remain downtown, the other half to Haller.

Between now and May 1, the pro-Haller forces will promise township residents that they will be able to "deliver" a positive city vote on Haller. But can they? City residents' opposition to Haller is mounting. And, the last city vote for a township project (parks, November 1989) was rejected by a three-to-one margin despite massive campaigning.

Township residents: Send the trustees a message — we don't want and can't afford two libraries! Work with the city to develop one unified library of reasonable size in a location suitable to all Northville residents. Vote no (twice) May 1. It's the right problem but the wrong solution.

School funds

(The following letter was sent to The Record for publication.)

To Mr. Deland and Northville Township Planning Commission Members:

I am writing on behalf of the Northville Council of PTAs, representing 2,100 members.

As a PTA, we are concerned with education in the Northville Schools. The quality we have come to expect of Northville Public Schools cannot continue with a purely residential tax base. As a general rule, residential taxpayers pay less in property taxes than the cost of the local government services they consume, whereas commercial and industrial taxpayers pay more. Industrial property generates more tax revenue than it uses. Therefore, we must diversify and expand our sources of revenue if we are to meet the increasingly demanding needs of educating children into the next century. If our children are to compete in an ever more competitive world, we must have the resources to provide them with a high-quality education that will prepare them for the future.

Northville is a growing community with an increasing tax burden. Encouraging controlled, well designed light industry, compatible with our community, would help share that burden while providing revenue for municipal services and education. Business should be viewed as a partner in the development of our community. We strongly recommend that the proposed proportion of light industrial development in the DeMattia plan should proceed.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Lynda Baca, President Northville Area Council of PTAs

Yes to library

To the Editor:

This is another letter on the hot topic of the 1990 spring season, the Haller Library. I would like to make some points that I have not seen published elsewhere.

First, the cost of turning the Ford Plant into a library was estimated to be $5,800,000 for the main floor (approximately 22,000 square feet) and another $1,000,000 for the basement (an additional 22,000 square feet). The $100,000 savings between $6.8 million and $6.9 million is no bargain since the Ford Plant does not come with an additional 71 acres of land.

I have not seen any cost figures for the post office, but the parking situation there is as bad as it is at the present library. Furthermore, the post office did sign a 20-year lease in 1981.

Second, anyone who says higher taxes cause property values to go down has never priced property in the Birmingham-Bloomfield area. When people live in a desirable location, they expect to and want to pay higher taxes for items (a good library, for instance) that will continue its desirability.

Third, the cost to a person with a home assessed at $100,000 and with a $200,000 fair market value has been estimated at $180 per year. If you assume a 5 percent inflation rate, by using the annuity compound amount factor of 21.5786 from any present value table at 5 percent for 15 years, the total additional cost would be $3,884 (180 x 21.5786), not over $5,000 as some of the opponents of the Haller Library would like you to believe.

Fourth, property taxes are deductible on line 6 of Schedule A of the federal tax return. This is not a credit, but it is a deduction. If a person is in the 33 percent bracket and his property taxes are $1,000, his actual cost would be $667 because he would be getting a deduction from his income taxes for the other $333. Furthermore, if a person's income is less than $82,650, he can get a credit of up to $1,200 on his Michigan income tax return by filing a Homestead Property Tax Credit Claim with his Michigan 1040.

The amount that each Northville resident would have to pay is not really that much when you consider that Northville would be getting a library-community building, room for recreation fields, and land that would not be commercialized for 50 years.

Vote yes! Yes! on May 1.

Joyce Murdock

Dream on

To the Editor:

The Haller property has been called a field of dreams. There is the dream of a library, an auditorium and meeting rooms. Voters are being asked to make this dream a reality by approving a 1.9-mill tax increase on May 1.

There is also the dream of athletic fields, a new town hall which will also have an auditorium, a new fire station, possibly a new police station, etc.

The proposal being considered on May first is just the beginning of millage increase proposals involving this field of dreams.

Richard Bohn

Fragile legacy

To the Editor:

We, the city and township residents of Northville, have a unique responsibility. We are very fortunate to have a residence in the community of Northville. This community is actually a legacy that has been handed down for our keeping through many years. It is a slice out of our past, it is our roots, it is Smalltown, Michigan, it is Mainstreet, USA, it is distinct and unique from Livonia, Novi and Canton. It is, however, a fragile legacy.

Every change that we make, however major or minor, preserves and enhances or detracts from this legacy that has been entrusted to us and will be passed on to our next generations. It is up to the city and township residents to preserve that legacy.

Removing the library from the heart of the community is an action that detracts. It takes people away from the business district that is the lifeblood of the town. It is trying to establish two community centers instead of one and that, of course, will detract from the original legacy.

The library itself will also suffer because it has been removed from the rest of the activities. The stop at the library would no longer be a part of a trip into town. The library would not be an easy walk from the post office or the hardware store or the pharmacy. It would no longer be handy to stop in during the sidewalk sale or Tivoli Fair or the arts and crafts shows or any of a dozen things that go on in town.

The library unfortunately is being used as a pawn in the great giveaway of the century. The giveaway that no one can afford. Our business should be to recycle and use what we already have inherited. Proposals have been made for ideal library locations in buildings that already exist in the center of Northville.

All the communities around us are not unique — they all have the same urban sprawl. Downtown Northville is unique, it is a legacy, and it should have a library.

William and Carole Jean Stockhausen

Money not the problem

By Phil Power

The widest gap between diagnosis and prescription is not in medicine. It's in education. Ten years have passed since we were warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in our public schools. Since then, we have been bombarded by diagnoses of the malady.

You pick: We need more teachers... better trained teachers... more authority for teachers... more money... more classroom discipline... a longer school day... a longer school year...

Teachers unions are too powerful... too many administrators with too much power... And so on.

A common diagnosis: We have not spent enough on kindergarten through 12th-grade public schools. The easy prescription: Spend more.

And we have. Last year, total state expenditures on education topped $2.5 billion, up 58 percent from the $1.6 billion five years ago.

The results? For 17 years the state Department of Education has tested achievement levels in reading, math and science for grades 4, 7 and 10. Over the past 10 years, scores have drifted up — an average of 18 percent for math, 8.5 percent in reading.

Spending 58 percent more to get 18 percent better results isn't cost-effective. The prescription didn't make us well.

Another common diagnosis is that the way we distribute money among school districts is unequal and unfair. Evidence supports this. The level of spending per pupil in rich districts such as Birmingham or Southfield is as much as three times that of poor districts such as Detroit or Iron Mountain.

A prescription has been hard to find. The state Legislature last year couldn't agree on how to equalize the way dollars were allocated to districts. So lawmakers ducked and put two quite different plans on the ballot.

Not surprisingly, both were defeated. Now there's another attempt to get from diagnosis to prescription. Gov. James Blanchard recently signed a bill giving new powers to the State Board of Education to oversee local school districts on the basis of performance — what kids actually learn.

House Bill 4009 empowers the state board to set up a "model core curriculum," though it stops short of requiring particular courses. It does require schools to set knowledge goals or risk losing state aid.

In extreme cases, it gives the state power to send in a special administrator to run a school that fails for three years to meet the accreditation standards — or even close it.

The law requires districts to work out improvement plans, including "goals based on student outcomes for all students." Their plans are to spell out what all students are expected to learn. Schools will start to be held accountable for what students achieve.

This is important. For years, schools tended to focus on getting kids to graduate. A diploma was the index of performance.

But employers screamed they were hiring kids with diplomas who couldn't read, write or think their way through a simple problem. All a diploma proved was that a kid had been an inmate in a school for a suitably long time.

Counting diplomas was to concentrate on an irrelevant thing: process (how long a kid has been in school). The right thing is to concentrate on outcome (what a kid actually learns).

The new law will help correct the mistake. Despite what politicians say, House Bill 4009 is not a silver bullet which alone fixes our problems. But it is a step forward.

These days, be grateful for small favors. Phil Power is chairperson of Suburban Communications Corporation, which publishes The Northville Record. His state and national award-winning column will appear periodically.

to what transpires at meetings.

If there's anyone who doesn't understand an issue, it's Mrs. O'Brien. If there's anyone who needs an explanation, it's Mrs. O'Brien. If there's anyone whose remark is unrelated, it's Mrs. O'Brien. If there's anyone to vote "no" consistently on anything, it's Mrs. O'Brien. Her consuming passion is trees. The tree issue is usually unrelated to the issue discussed.

Loyal meeting attendance and site visitation are responsibilities of all board members. Mrs. O'Brien may be a loyal committee member, but her judgements leave much to be desired.

From my observation, Mr. Deland should be commended for this action. I think, in his position, I would have done it long ago.

Library thanks

To the Editor:

The Northville Public Library wishes to thank the many users who assisted us during the recent installation of more shelving. Thank you to everyone who borrowed 10 books or more from the fiction and youth sections. It made the job much easier with fewer books to move!

Special thanks to our volunteers: Nancy Graybiel, Helen Smolek, Barbara Furmanski, Kathleen Landrum, Phyllis Schade, Helen Anderson, Barbara Williams, Mary Fairhurst, Edie Dunbar, Claudine and Bill Kinnaird and Bob Russell. With their assistance, we were able to move more than 14,000 books off the shelves easily and efficiently.

It is never convenient nor desirable to close the Library, and we regret any inconvenience to the community. The additional shelving will ease the overcrowded shelves temporarily, while we look for room to grow.

Save don't pave

To the Editor:

Until Monday there was a slide, a jungle gym, a rocking motorcycle and a climbing turtle in the park behind the Scout building (beside the Cady Street cemetery). Now they are gone.

Why? Northville's City Council, popularly known as the Paving Fanatics, apparently discovered that park. Reacting to the color green the way a bull reacts to red, they charged in and condemned a third of the park to death at the hands of an asphalt spreader. Yes, once again, in Northville our motto is "parking uber alles." If you know of a neighborhood playground, please erect some camouflage.

The irony, of course, is that the council just agreed (subject to voter approval) to participate in erecting a palatial library/senior citizen center/performing arts complex/community group meeting place far away from downtown. Surely that action requires the rethinking of any decision to pave parkland. Anyone walking around Northville can see that we are desperately short of play areas. We need more grass, not more concrete.

My understanding is that the council wanted to provide parking for seniors using the Scout building. That is a legitimate concern. But will the Scout building be used by seniors once the Haller senior citizen center is available? How frequently will the demand for senior citizen parking exceed the 20 or more spaces already available on the driveway and along Cady Street (not counting spaces behind the recreation center and in the MAGS lot, which could be used by more vigorous seniors)?

I am pleased that Council Member (Jerome) Mittman, contacted Monday night, volunteered to ask the city manager to spare the Scout building park until the matter can be considered at a city council meeting (likely this Monday). The council's one great virtue is its responsiveness to citizen concerns. We would all benefit from a chance to reconsider the destruction of parkland in light of the Haller developments, the MAGS parking deck, and evolving thinking about our city's needs and the best ways to balance the needs of children and seniors.

Stephen Calkins

Editor's Note: This letter was written April 10 and was meant for publication in the April 12 edition of the Record; however, it was received after the Monday, 3 p.m. deadline for letter submissions. The Northville City Council agreed during its April 16 meeting (the Monday meeting referred to in the above letter) to reconsider the issue.

Yes DeMattia

To the Editor:

Dear Mr. Deland and Commission Members,

I am writing to urge you to support the development of light industry in the DeMattia project at Five Mile and Sheldon Road. Northville needs light industry to help provide tax money for our schools. It is becoming increasingly more expensive to educate children and prepare them for the high-tech world they will enter after high school. A strictly residential community will increasingly fall behind in money for education and community services. A controlled, smokeless, light industry can help provide the money we need.

It is true that I live in Novi but, because we are within the Northville School System, we pay school taxes to Northville and are vitally interested in everything that occurs in Northville. We see this as a wonderful opportunity to help maintain the Northville Schools as the excellent schools they are.

For industry

To the Editor:

Dear Northville Township Planning Commission Board Members:

I am very concerned about the future of the Northville Schools. Even though I live in Novi, my children attend the Northville Schools and I am currently Amerman's PTA vice president. I would like to express my support for Mr. DeMattia's plan to improve our tax base with 300 acres of light industry along Five Mile Road.

Many of us are committed to quality education and have come to expect it in the Northville Schools. I realize that residential taxes cannot continue to be the main provider for the quality we expect. I would hate to see the quality of our schools diminish after many of us have worked so hard to provide special programs and services for our children.

I hope you will take this letter into consideration as decisions are being made for the children of Northville Schools. As a former Livonia Teacher, my expectations continue to remain high for quality education in Northville.

Brown tribute

To the Editor:

A deep feeling of sadness was felt as I read of the death of Philip N. Brown, former medical superintendent of Northville State Hospital (now the Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital).

I joined Dr. Brown's staff as Associate Director of Nursing Services in Jan. of 1953, a short time after the hospital was opened in 1952. I remember him as a caring, compassionate human being. It was he who promoted me to the position of Director of Nursing Services as I was completing my studies at Wayne State University for my masters degree in Nursing Service Administration.

I agreed fully with what I believed was Dr. Brown's philosophy that, in our fast-paced, high-powered society, there will always be those individuals who cannot meet the required minimum qualifications to satisfactorily participate in the race for economic survival. Lack of education, growing up in a dysfunctional family, mental or physical handicaps - or both, all these and many other factors may contribute to one becoming a misfit in our society. In such cases society has an obligation to provide humane care and treatment for those who cannot compete in the work world, rather than forcing them out into foster homes where neighbors look askance at their presence in their midst. Too often, they fail to report to their designated clinic for drug prescription renewal, when placed in half-way houses with minimum supervision.

Dr. Brown deserves credit for his integrity and moral courage in resigning in 1965 when the Michigan Department of Mental Health policy became one where many of the patients were released to wander the streets, commit suicide, or become the flotsam and jetsam of an uncaring society.

Diners can select two restaurants under one roof

By PHYLLIS STILLMAN

The old saying cautions that you can't please all of the people all of the time, but G Willikers restaurant, located at 57036 Grand River in New Hudson, is working on it.

Under manager Tom Sawyer, G Willikers is diversifying and, in effect, becoming two restaurants under one roof. It is an attempt to at least please more of the people more of the time.

G Willikers has recently turned the upstairs portion of the building into a second restaurant called Prime Time, a prime rib and steakhouse-type restaurant.

Prime Time offers an angus prime rib dinner with all the trimmings for $8.95 every night of the week and all day on Sunday (a full-course turkey dinner is also available on Sunday).

Featuring a somewhat limited menu consisting primarily of the angus beef, Prime Time is a casual, family-style alternative to the downstairs restaurant, which has been upgraded and features a more elegant dining atmosphere.

Opened in 1986, G Willikers had evolved into a standard American-style restaurant. Taking over as manager last year, Sawyer had Prime Time in mind from the start.

However, he knew that his staff had to be up to the challenge.

"People want it perfect no matter what the price is. If you're advertising you've got this, they want it to be just right," he said.

So he set about training and keeping a good staff. "I've worked since I've been here to retain the best people I could get and keep turnover down, and I've been pretty lucky," he said.

G. Wilker's Restaurant offers new dining options

An undertaking like this always brings with it some risk, and Sawyer had his concerns. When arriving at G Wilker's now, customers must choose between two separate dining rooms and menus.

"It's just as if this restaurant (Prime Time) were next door (from the dining room downstairs). They can have only what's here."

But so far, that hasn't been a problem. "People don't mind it. I put out the two menus and I give them a brief rundown on it and I sort of direct some people," he said.

The response to Prime Time has been quite good. "People have enjoyed it. Of course, I put myself on the back, what else would I say? But they really enjoy the product we've turned out up here. Plus, I think a lot of people like the improvements we've made downstairs," Sawyer said.

Prime Time was created in the hopes of luring in more families with children, who like a more casual setting, with more casual food.

"This (Prime Time) is very family oriented. People want to bring their kids up for this. We have the sandwiches up here and we don't downstairs anymore," he said.

Prime Time is not the only change Sawyer has in mind for G Wilker's. "We're going to do a La Cantina menu, which is Mexican style. Just like this, I'm going to practice it and get it exactly right before I do it, because I don't want to do it and then turn people off with it."

Customers are already having a hand in shaping how the La Cantina menu will work. Sawyer had originally intended to feature that menu just in the lounge.

But customers and his own children commented that this type of menu would appeal to children and shouldn't be served only in the lounge. Sawyer is now planning to add La Cantina to the Prime Time menu, hopefully sometime this summer.

All of this innovation is a response to what Sawyer sees as an unusually diverse service area for a restaurant. "We have people who live in this area and work in Ann Arbor or in the city. Then we have the older people out here, what you would call the local business. They expect certain things to be maybe the way it was 10 years ago. And you certainly don't want to lose that business. Then you have people with families. I'm trying to cater to all three of those groups without excluding anybody."

Sawyer takes a real interest in the restaurant and its customers. "I'm a manager here, but I give it family-run care." He pays attention to details that can help keep the costs down, which in turn helps to keep the prices down.

"You've got to think like the public does. I try to give as much as I can without raising prices," he said.

Sawyer started out in the restaurant business by opening his own restaurant, with his wife, in Kalamazoo. At the time, however, neither of them knew much about the business.

The first day they were open, "One of our customers, just a kid, asked 'How can you offer this (a meat and cheese tray with crackers) for just 95 cents?' We told him to just enjoy it. We're closing after tomorrow because we don't know what we're doing." They later reopened the restaurant and made it into a success.

In addition to its regular trade, G Wilker's is also available for groups and banquets. They can handle monthly group meetings as well as special events like showers, wedding receptions and rehearsal dinners.

"We can do anything. There is no cuisine we can't do. When they want to book a banquet, I try to steer them. People don't want a lot of choices, but I give people variety. I usually make a recommendation and about 90 percent of the people take that," Sawyer said.

"I usually try to determine what budget they have. Most people are looking for a reasonable price. I try to direct them away from an open bar. An open bar is always more than they think it's going to be."

Sawyer thinks his prices and services compare well with other facilities in the area. "I want to do their business. I'm very competitive."

Prime Time is open from 5-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 5-11 p.m.

Friday and Saturday; and 12-9 p.m. on Sunday. G Wilker's is open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and 12-9 p.m. on Sunday.

Consumers must be wary of schemes

The Detroit Better Business Bureau advises consumers to exercise caution when considering responding to advertisements that offer an opportunity to earn extra income by doing work at home, especially those that promise large profits in a short period of time.

When an interested person responds to the advertisement, they usually receive a mailing which makes another pitch for the program. The mailing also states that a deposit or application fee ranging from $15 to $50 is required.

GARDEN TIPS

Spring flower bulb care

- Deadheading: remove tulip, daffodil and hyacinth blooms by cutting off at base as soon as they begin to fade - prevents seed formation and ensures bulb strength.
- Mulching: Following bloom, rather than fertilizing, help bulbs rebuild with a shallow mulch layer of compost, old manure or dampened peat; adds richness and retains moisture in soil.
- Foliage ripening: Foliage must be left to fade and wither to rebuild bulb - do remove foliage once it has died down.
- Lifting and storing: Smaller bulbs may be left to naturalize unless you wish to change location or uncrowd plants; tulips, daffodils and hyacinths should be lifted and stored.

Tips on caring for flower bulbs

Few plantings over the course of the year bring such sprightly loveliness and welcome color to our gardens as the flower bulbs that bloom in the spring.

So highly should you prize these special spring flowers that even as they bloom you should be thinking of how to ensure that they'll flower just as beautifully next year.

Here are a few simple steps to take in the routine care of my spring flower-bulb plantings.

Deadheading

Remove tulip, daffodil and hyacinth blooms by cutting or snapping them off at their base as soon as they begin to fade. This will prevent the formation of seed, a process that uses a good deal of the bulb's stored energy that is better spent building the bulb for good bloom again the following year.

It's important to leave the stem that, together with the foliage, helps the plant assimilate nutrients to replenish the bulb.

It is not necessary to remove the faded blooms on the smaller bulb flowers. Left alone, many of these will spread themselves around by means of seed.

Mulching

After deadheading, mulch rather than fertilize. According to the Netherlands Flowerbulb Information Centre, the time for fertilizing spring flower bulbs is in late summer, as established plantings begin their yearly cycle with new root growth and in the fall prior to planting new flower bulbs.

The period following bloom is a crucial one in the life of a flower bulb. It's during the weeks after the flower fades that the bulbs need to rebuild themselves for another season of bloom the following year.

A shallow mulch layer of compost, old or processed manure or dampened peat mixed with any of these will help to add richness to and retain moisture in the soil for the general health of the bulb planting and for another round of really good growth and bloom.

Mulching the ground lightly in a bulb planting also prepares it for receiving annual flowers to follow the flower bulbs. Simply make shallow holes in between the bulb plants to receive annual transplants such as pansies, snapdragons, stock and calendulas. Wait until the soil has thoroughly warmed to set out warmth-lovers such as marigolds and zinnias, verbena, portulaca, celosia and geraniums.

Another quick way to start a fast follow-up wave of flowers over a flower bulb bed is to set nasturtium seeds individually or to scatter seeds of clarkia, alyssum or candytuft over the area, and then top the seed with

HOST attracts interest

First-time buyers get chance to own home

By Robin Gaines

Despite initial criticisms and an obscure publicity campaign, the Home Ownership Savings Trust (HOST) program has attracted enough interest that the state is no longer accepting applications for participation in the program.

Since January, the state treasurer's office has received over 2,000 applications, said Lynn Rycus, public affairs assistant. "We don't know how many participants in the program we actually have until we start receiving payments," she said, "but the response has been fantastic."

Proposed by Gov. James J. Blanchard last year in his annual "State of the State" message, HOST will allow young people and young families a personalized down payment savings program for their first home.

With the program, first-time home buyers will be able to pre-select the value of the home they want and the amount of down payment they want to save for the home in a specified number of years. Once these figures are established, participants will then make monthly payments to the state. The state, in turn, will invest the money in state-backed bonds.

The bonds will have a variable interest rate guaranteed to equal or exceed the annual increase in Michigan home prices, and the interest income is tax-exempt. Plus, participants can withdraw their savings at any time for a down payment or other need without penalty.

Sound too good to be true? Some critics think so.

One of the chief criticisms rallied against HOST when it was first introduced was that Michigan taxpayers will have to bail out the program if the treasury department's predictions about housing inflation and rates of return on bonds are incorrect.

According to literature distributed by the state, it is anticipating a 5-percent yearly increase in the cost of a home and an annual rate of return on the bonds of 7.5 percent. Some real estate experts say home prices will increase more than 5 percent per year, thus using up the $40 million in bonds the state has set aside for the HOST program sooner than expected.

In 1988, Michigan voters approved the issuance of $600 million in bonds for environmental cleanups and recreational purposes. A portion of these bonds, about 5 percent, are reserved for participants in the HOST program.

It's too early to tell just how successful the program will be, but one area real estate agent seems optimistic.

Critics charge taxpayers would have to bail out HOST if treasury department predictions on housing inflation and rates of return on bonds are incorrect

"The whole program is designed to help the first-time home buyer," said Gene Komarynski, owner of Bruce Roy Realty in Northville.

"The program gives you the incentive to save money, but it's important to remember you're not getting a home... you're getting a great savings program," he said.

Komarynski said he has had a few couples ask about the program, but added most people don't know it's available.

Two other real estate companies, Home Master Realty in Milford and Noling Real Estate in South Lyon, were not familiar with the specifics of HOST.

Doug Courtney, president of the Western Wayne/Oakland County Board of Realtors, said the program was too new to know if it would help the state's housing markets.

"We support the concept of saving to buy a home," Courtney said, "but as far as individual programs are concerned, we haven't taken a position on it one way or another."

Because the HOST program is unique to Michigan, Treasurer Robert Bowman, an architect of HOST, has received several calls from other states interested in learning more about how it works, Rycus said.

The treasurer's office is currently compiling statistics from the 2,000-plus applications it has received to get a better idea of who the program should be targeted toward in the future, Rycus said. As far as she can tell, applicants are not concentrated in any one sector of the state.

After current applications are processed and payment schedules are begun, the treasurer's office will then decide when the next application process will begin, Rycus said.

Modeled after the state's Michigan Education Trust (MET) program, HOST has been praised for bringing to attention the problem middle income young people have in saving for their first home.

"Our Constitution states that everyone should have a home," Komarynski said. "But the reality is only 14 percent of the population can afford an average-priced home."

"This is a good tax-exempt savings program for these people if the economy remains relatively stable," he said.

For more information on the HOST program, call the HOST hotline at 1-800-642-4178.

Around the House: Designs for Living

Cabin can be used year-round

By James McAlexander

While the cozy, compact Oxford was designed as a vacation cabin, it has the amenities necessary for year-round living.

Friends, neighbors and family members will naturally gravitate to the large country kitchen, extended and brightened by a sunny breakfast nook. A built-in dishwasher, pantry and work island/eating bar provide modern touches of efficiency and convenience.

The utility/den could be anything—a conventional den, a bedroom, a home office, a studio for an artist, a sewing and crafts room, or it could just be left as a catch-all for storage and laundry, since the washer and dryer are tucked behind folding doors at one end.

The downstairs has its own full bath. Another serves the two identical bedrooms nestled under the peaked roof upstairs. The big bay window in the living room is a natural for a cushioned window seat, a great spot for reading and daydreaming.

The Oxford's covered porch opens into a unique entryway. The ceiling slopes down into an extended low-ceilinged cranny. Plants would do well there, bathed in natural light from the low window.

For a study plan of the Oxford (208-34), send $5 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307 CN, Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

Adding drywall can deaden sound

By Gene Gary

Q: Our townhouse has a common wall shared with our next-door neighbor. The wall is made of concrete block with sprayed-on insulation and finished with a dry wallboard. The noise from the neighbor's side is very disturbing, especially at night in our bedroom. Is there anything that can be done to the wall to insulate it better against this sound?—G.S.

A: A quick way to improve the sound resistance is to use a manufacturer's recommended adhesive to attach a second layer of drywall over the original (preferably your neighbor's side of the wall as well as yours.)

If the first layer of drywall was installed vertically, install the new layer horizontally, and vice versa. You also can install a sound-deadening board under the dry wall. A better way is to build a free-standing wall two inches away from the existing one, which will require about 5 to 6 inches of floor space.

It is important that there is no connection between the second wall and the first wall. The framing of the second wall should be from wall to wall and ceiling to floor, leaving one to two inches of dead air space as a buffer for sound transmission. A blanket of insulation between framing members also will help.

Additional sound resistance can be obtained by installing resilient metal channels to the studs of the new (second) wall.

the mulch layer. These are fast-growing annuals.

Foliage ripening

There isn't much to be done about this messy stage in the life of our spring flower-bulb plantings. Agonizing though it may be for the extremely tidy-minded among us, the foliage must be left to fade and wither in order to rebuild the bulb. Do remove the foliage once it has died down.

Lifting and storing

Which bulbs to lift and store once the foliage has ripened is a topic of some discussion among home gardeners. As a general rule, the smaller bulbs, such as crocus, snowdrop, grape hyacinth and chionodoxa can be left to naturalize unless you wish to change their location or they become overcrowded, spindly and sparse of bloom.

Many gardeners prefer to lift their tulips and hyacinth bulbs each year so they can sort through them and keep just the largest ones to replant. This does ensure a continued top-rate display of flowers from year to year. However, some have kept hyacinth plantings in fine flowering form for more than five years by planting them eight inches deep, applying a rich mulch layer after the blooms fade and fertilizing in the summer.

Tulips given the same treatment will usually remain in good flowering condition for three years. Given a site that is dryish and warm in summer, species tulips will naturalize indefinitely.

Daffodils need to be lifted and stored for replanting in August only when they become very thick clumps that bloom poorly. This indicates a need for dividing and replanting.

The Foreign Adoption Option

Stories by SHARON ROSE

When Patricia Moylan celebrated her 35th birthday, she took a long look at her life and knew something was missing.

She had a satisfying career as a pediatric neuropsychologist at Children's Hospital in Detroit that kept her days busy, but she hated returning to an empty home at night. Last November, she traveled to Paraguay for a cherubic, curly-haired toddler she named Max, and her life changed "completely."

"I needed something else to make my life complete," Moylan said. "I wanted to find a good man and have children. Since I couldn't seem to find anyone I wanted to marry," she chuckled, "I decided to go ahead and adopt a child."

As a single person, Moylan was faced with a seven-to-nine year adoption waiting list for a healthy infant in the United States. "I work in a children's hospital, so I know what it takes to care for a handicapped child," she explained, "and since I knew I'd have to support us too, I realized I couldn't do that."

Within one year of her initial contact with an agency specializing in inter-country adoptions, seven-month-old Max was sleeping in his Northville nursery. The year of waiting was filled with excitement, anxiety, elation, worry, baby showers and considerable expense. Pretty much what most expectant moms experience during the period of waiting for a child. Only Moylan had mountains of extra paperwork, extensive travel arrangements to make and maddening delays.

One year ago, 9-year-old Johnny Lee didn't know how to ride a bike. He'd never played baseball or football, had never gone roller-skating or ice skating, and never owned any toys at all. He is a bright child, but couldn't read, and could barely count to twenty. Home was an orphanage in Santiago, Chile.

In July 1989, everything changed for Johnny. Mary Eckert and Bob Lee brought him home to live in Northville, and his world exploded with love, opportunity and challenge. It was wonderful, but also intimidating and not a little scary.

Adoption of older children is a special challenge for both parents and child. Eckert and Lee wanted to adopt but encountered restrictions because of their ages (over 40) and length of their marriage (at the time, only a year). Foreign adoption gave them a chance to find a child.

In November 1988, the couple saw a picture of Johnny and decided they wanted him.

"Nothing I've ever done compares to the paper trail of an adoption process in terms of complexity and frustration," Eckert said. "Available immediately" slowly turned into an eight-month wait.

They helped fill the time by preparing a picture album and writing a story to send Johnny that would prepare him for his new home, bedroom school and family. "He had it memorized when we picked him up," Eckert said. "He still has it and shows it to friends." The Chilean orphanage was so impressed with the idea, they requested a copy.

Cathy Beal teaches second grade in Farmington. She's been a teacher for 21 years, but never had any children to love at home. A widow, she contemplated the lengthy waiting list and dubious attitude that most single adoptive parents encounter, and decided on foreign adoption. Today she's mother to 3-year-old Joseph Rajan from India and nine-month-old Daniel Roberto of Paraguay.

"I read a newspaper article about MASAP (Michigan Association of Single Adoptive Parents) and started networking," Beal explained. "I wanted to share my life with a child and I wanted an infant. A lot of local agencies really don't give singles much hope."

Both adoption procedures were relatively quick for Beal. She picked up Joseph at Metro Airport in 1986, when he was four months old, after a 13-month process. She saw a picture of Daniel in August 1989, and brought him home from Paraguay after a two-week visit in December. The second adoption was expedited since she'd already completed many of the requirements during the first adoption.

"There are a lot of ups and downs with foreign adoption, and you're often helpless to control the circumstances," Beal commented. "Sometimes foreign governments change their regulations midstream. You have to fill out a million forms in a hurry — then wait. It can be frustrating."

Adoption across the border can be solution

Every year, thousands of foreign-born youngsters find homes in the United States through adoption.

In 1987 alone, more than 10,000 children arrived with visas in hand. Increasing numbers of parents-to-be, discouraged by five-to-seven-year waiting lists for healthy babies, are crossing the border to find a child to love.

There are several reasons why international adoptions are attractive. Many countries — particularly those with limited availability of birth control and no welfare system to provide for unwanted children — have more babies in need of homes than they can accommodate. Therefore, the wait for an infant can be as short as a year. Also, some foreign countries are willing to allow older couples and single parents to adopt — two groups traditionally pushed to the bottom of American lists.

More than 80 percent of all foreign adoptions are from Asian and Latin American countries. The vast majority of these have come from Korea, a country which in the past made it relatively easy for American families to adopt. Most other countries of the world forbid the emigration of their orphans for social, religious or political reasons. Due to a rise in nationalism and increased emphasis on family planning, the flow of Korean infants has slowed to a trickle, and agencies specializing in inter-country adoptions forecast reduced emigration rates for 1990.

Still, for the parent in search of a child, careful investigation across the border may be worthwhile. Inter-country adoption is a complex and expensive process fraught with all the risks, postponements, worry and disappointment of a regular adoptive process. Despite the difficulties, many area families (see related stories) have found special joy in welcoming a foreign child into their homes.

The first step in any adoptive process is to seriously examine one's motives to adopt. Talk to a trusted friend or a counselor to be sure you can handle the risks and realities of a child from a foreign country. There are interracial aspects which will affect a family for generations, public curiosity and attention which may be unwanted, and medical problems that are more common in underdeveloped nations.

Patricia Moylan, an adoptive mother from Northville, offered some advice. "Realize that you're not buying an exotic plant, you're adopting a person. And understand that the child will likely be the throw-away person of another country — not the king's son. He or she will come with problems and risks, like any kid."

"Be honest with yourself about what you will accept and won't accept in a child," Moylan continued. "Look at a realistic list of handicaps and decide on your limits. Know what you can deal with and then be comfortable with your decision."

Next, investigate methods of adoption. Persons can attempt the process independently, or through an agency. In an independent adoption, an individual must contact a foreign embassy for information and legal referrals. Fluency in the native language will be helpful, since the parent would need to work with a foreign attorney and agency; be aware of both countries' legal adoptive procedures and arrange for necessary paperwork to be translated.

Several state-licensed Michigan agencies specialize in foreign adoption. Check with each to compare procedures, fees, policies, waiting lists, restrictions and the countries where they have a liaison agency. Contact adoption support groups for valuable voice-of-experience information. There are several that are strong in Michigan and meet regularly, such as FOLK (Families of Latin Kids), FFC (Families for Children), and MASAP (Michigan Association of Single Adoptive Parents). Consult periodicals like OURS for articles on pertinent topics, addresses of support groups, networking opportunities, and pages of pictures of special children waiting for permanent homes.

While considering countries, familiarize yourself with their requirements. Some insist a parent travel and stay within the country for a period of weeks to complete legal adoption there. Others would prefer a parent not enter the country and would rather deal with an agency. Every country has its own agency and legal fee schedule — some of these fees subsidize foster care, medical and institutional (orphanage) care costs.

Students strong in math and spelling

MEADS MILL MIDDLE SCHOOL

Students are chalking up awards and honors this month at Meads Mill.

The Math Counts Team competed at the state level at Michigan State University on March 17 and finished 13th overall.

On March 24 at Detroit Country Day School the Math Invitational Tournament was held. The team from Meads included seventh graders Vivek Mohta and Meghan Walsh. Eighth-graders Roupal Vashl and Eric Nelson had a fine fourth place finish. Individually, Mohta took a first place among all seventh-graders and Walsh finished fifth.

Andrew Song, a sixth grader, won the Detroit News/Lawrence Tech northwest suburban area spelling bee. He competed in the state finals on April 10 and did a great job of representing Meads Mill. The competition was open to all students in grades 5 through 8 in the State of Michigan.

Our congratulations to all of these talented and ambitious students. You have made Meads Mill proud of you. The Gifted and Talented Creative Night will be on April 26 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

This year several groups will be performing in different areas of the school including Jazz Band and the Forensics Team. All families are invited to attend. Refreshments will be available for purchase.

On April 25, Meads Mill will honor Jeff Radwanski and Linda Baca at the annual Founders Day Banquet. It will be held at the High School at 5:30 p.m.

A committee for the transition to opening Cooke Middle School has been formed and the PTSA by-laws for that school must be approved. Parents in the Cooke attendance area are needed at the next Meads Mill PTSA meeting to vote on the bylaws. The next meeting of the Meads Mill PTSA will be on Monday, May 7 at 9:30 a.m. in the lecture area of the library. By Sue Nix

Puppeteer at library

Monkeys and snakes are coming to the Northville Public Library. Monkey and snake puppets, that is. To honor National Library Week, the library has invited a well-known entertainer and puppeteer to present her special show "Animal Fair" to the children on Tuesday, April 24 at 7 p.m.

Novi resident Maureen Schiffman, who has a degree in education from the University of Michigan and has taught preschool through high school students, has focused her numerous talents and energies on the child entertainment business.

Schiffman's 40-minute show is complete with her mandolin (a guitar-like instrument) music, an assortment of hand and rod puppets and Coco the Monkey, usually a favorite with the children because of their combined kazoo routine.

Schiffman's show has become especially popular with children and adults alike because she does not just stand up on the stage and perform but she encourages the children to sing and talk with her and the puppets. "I'm real big on involving the kids," Schiffman said.

Adoption

At this point prepare to tackle the mountain of required paper work. All adoptive parents must prepare a dossier on themselves, arrange for a home study to be completed by a social worker, and apply for a visa from the local office of U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Agencies can assist in these processes.

A dossier may involve an autobiography, letters of recommendation, documentation of your own and other family members' births, deaths, marriage and divorce, financial records (checking and savings account and tax statements), fingerprints and a criminal records check with local police and the FBI, physical examination reports, and photos of self, home and the prospective child's room.

A home study involves interviews at your home with a social worker. Topics addressed would be motivation; personal relationships and personality; religious, moral and ethical beliefs and practices; education; environment; child-rearing practices; family interactions and cultural issues. Copies of the home study would be sent to the foreign agency before a child could be referred.

The total cost of foreign adoption depends on the individual agency, country chosen, and home study.

Pianist speaks to locals

The final lecture for the 1989-90 Town Hall speaker series turned out to be more like a music recital as the renowned composer and music critic seemed more comfortable behind the piano than the microphone.

Composer and pianist Michael Walsh has been Time magazine's music critic since 1981 and was a winner of the prestigious ASCA-Deems Taylor Award for music criticism. Walsh traveled all the way from Munich, Germany to perform before the large crowd at the Plymouth Radisson Hotel last Thursday.

Walsh's appearance, vacillating between a lecture and performance, began with selections of a popular piano piece. He asked the audience to try and identify the composer when he finished. There were some good guesses, but no one named the correct composer. The tranquil piano piece turned out to be the creation of the German composer Johannes Brahms.

After identifying Brahms' work, Walsh recounted the sad story of Brahms' life complete with intimate detail. Walsh said, "Brahms' music reflects this deep melancholy."

Throughout the afternoon Walsh amazed the audience with his detailed knowledge of the personal lives of many other composers. Walsh said it is important to understand the composer in order to understand the composer's work.

"It helps," Walsh said, "and I think everyone learned something about Brahms that they didn't know before they came in here."

Walsh's experience as a music teacher was apparent in his discussion as he seemed intent on making sure that everyone in the audience went away with something new.

"I hope the audience will leave with the feeling that music is for everybody," Walsh said. That point seems to be genuinely important to Walsh, who wrote an entire book, "Who's Afraid of Classical Music?" underscoring the theme. His book is a sort of beginners guide to understanding and appreciating classical music.

Walsh is living in Germany to do research on his next book, about the German experience in World War II, rather than music.

Moylan's adoption

After seeing baby Max's picture, and accepting him emotionally as her own, the waiting began. Legal and political problems developed which kept Moylan from collecting her son for seven months. It was a difficult period.

"I had to close the door to his room for a while," she said. "At one point, I thought I'd never get him."

Moylan kept in touch with her South American attorney — "My phone bill was about $500 one month!" — and he visited Max at his foster home for her. In November, Moylan flew to Paraguay to collect Max and complete his adoption. She enjoyed her time in South America, staying at a hotel which offered special facilities and help for adoptive families.

Moylan plans to re-adopt Max in the U.S. to provide him with an American birth certificate. She also wants to educate him about his native country when he's older and plans to incorporate some Paraguayan traditions into her holiday celebrations.

"Max is not going to be a transplanted Paraguayan growing up in Northville, Michigan," she explained. "He's going to be my son. If I never get married, he and I are going to make a family. He is going to be an American citizen in the same way my grandparents who were all born in Europe, became Americans."

It has been a difficult week. Max has an ear infection and isn't sleeping well. As a consequence, his mom is getting by on about four hours sleep per night. Does she mind? Not too much.

"I'm really lucky! Max is a wonderful kid — easy-going, social, healthy and bright," she beams. He's a charmer."

Eckert and new son Johnny

The couple prepared for the trip to Chile by taking Spanish lessons. "After six months of lessons, we were still pathetic, and we had both spoken other languages," Eckert laughed. "It gave us an idea how difficult it would be for Johnny to learn English. When we got him, he could only say 'mother' and 'father' in English. Within six weeks, he chose not to speak Spanish anymore. He has made incredible strides in the seven months since he's been here."

Language wasn't the only challenge. Johnny had to work hard to fit into an American classroom. The Chilean education system didn't compare to his new Northville school. Johnny was placed in a third-grade classroom, and since Northville does not have a bilingual program, his new parents hired reading and math tutors to help him adjust.

"We talked to teachers in bilingual schools for ideas and help, and the Northville schools have been immensely cooperative," Eckert said. "Johnny's progressed from first- to third-grade level in math. He's reading for the first time in his life, and he's learning how to draw. He'd never had these challenges or opportunities before. He's doing amazingly well."

"It's important to note that transition and adjustment for older children takes a long time," Eckert continued. "The standard problem for them is learning to trust us not to abandon them. They'll keep checking to make sure you won't."

Lee and Eckert operate a consulting business, Leaders in Management Inc., located in Northville.

"When we decided to adopt, we made a commitment to cut our work hours about in half, so someone could always be home with Johnny," Eckert explained. "We quickly learned not to say we'd be home at 8 and mean 8:30. He'd watch the clock and worry. It raised a lot of fears."

"The most difficult aspect of adopting an older child is understanding what's going on inside of him and responding appropriately — in a helpful way," Eckert continued thoughtfully. "Just think of the stress a 10-year-old feels in a classroom situation where all the other kids speak a different language and can read books that he can't read yet. He receives constant, unintentional messages that he's not okay. It's important for the people around him to understand that he's really feeling afraid, when he's acting angry."

In spite of all the challenges the new family has faced, some important things are working out just right. The most satisfying part of the last few months, according to Eckert, "is seeing Johnny's absolute delight and joy in having his own parents."

Beal adopts two sons

The process was rewarding for Beal, however, and she advises those considering foreign adoption to contact other adoptive parents for moral support. Prospects for a rosy future aren't good for orphans in many countries without welfare systems. "Many die, or are abandoned to street life," Beal stated. "Adoption offers these kids a better chance in life."

Motherhood has changed Beal's lifestyle. Formerly active in education associations and politics, she devotes most of her non-work time to parenting.

"I'm involved, but not a leader in those organizations anymore," she said. "I'm a little more private now. It's just one of the decisions you make."

As Beal cleans up cereal scattered on the floor by little boys intent on making a "bumpy road" for their toy cars, one wonders if she has any regrets.

Not a one. "They're the joy of my life," she says quietly.

Statewide musicians assemble in Ann Arbor

They come from as far away as Benton Harbor, Pinconning and Mt. Pleasant.

They come here for eight Sundays in the fall and eight more in the spring, often spending more time on the road than they do in their three-hour rehearsals with members of The University of Michigan School of Music faculty.

And at 8 p.m. on March 26, these 324 junior high and high school musicians came to Hill Auditorium on the U-M campus for the free, public Michigan Youth Ensembles spring showcase concert.

The ensembles include the Michigan Youth Band, Michigan Youth Symphony, Michigan Youth Concert

Choir and Michigan Youth Chamber Singers. Some youngsters are in more than one group. All have already shown the kind of talent and dedication necessary for successful academic and musical careers, says program coordinator Donald J. Sinta, professor of saxophone at U-M.

The program, founded in 1973, is designed to improve the level of music performance and teaching at the secondary school level, and to establish relationships with students who might be interested in attending the U-M School of Music.

"It's a commitment we have to further the quality of music and to help the kids improve their skills,"

Sinta says. "The comment we get from so many kids is they just didn't know that so many other kids were so good and so serious."

That may not be an issue for students from major metropolitan centers, but it can be for those in more remote areas.

"It means a lot to them in keeping motivated throughout the year," Sinta says. "Kids stay involved in their school programs because their skill level is higher."

Auditions are held over a four-day period in September at the School of Music, and a turnout of 500 is not unusual. Any primary or secondary student in the state is eligible, although few elementary students are selected.

The program is also helpful in identifying and recruiting talented minority students for the U-M, according to Sinta. Toward that end, Sinta conducts all-day auditions every year in Detroit at Cass Technical and Renaissance high schools.

At the March program, the Youth Symphony, under the direction of Donald J. Schleicher, U-M assistant professor of conducting, performed Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" in its entirety. The Band, also led by Schleicher, played Hindemith's Symphony in B flat. Jerry O. Blackstone, U-M associate director of choirs, led the Concert Choir in Vaughan Williams' "O Clap Your Hands" and Pinkham's "Wedding Cantata," while the Chamber Singers, a small vocal ensemble conducted by David F. Jorlett, featured selections from the King's Singers collection.

For information on auditions, call 763-1279. For information on School of Music events, call 763-4726.

Northville High School students participating included: Ted Dewey, MYCC; Dave Garry, MYS and MYB; Jennifer Johnson, MYCC and MYCS. Novi High School students participating were: Jennifer Asher, MYCC; Brian Campbell, MYCC; Eric Haenke, MYCC; Haley Hoops, MYS and MYB; Caryn Howard, MYS; and Melinda Watkins, MYCC.

Take break to Kensington park

A group of kids stroll along one of the park's foot paths in search of the perfect picnic place

Feeling a little cagey?

Maybe it's because just about everybody knows someone that has headed south for spring break.

Yes, it's that time of the year again. Time when lucky high school students head south to do such exotic things as tumble in the ocean surf, go on cruises, jet ski, water ski, or simply lay for hours on the beach, browning like ground beef in a frying pan.

It's time to get outdoors. But if you can't muster up much time off from work or the plane fare to the deep south, do the next best thing. Go to Kensington Metropark. Not only does the park have numerous nature trails for hiking and biking, open fields for Frisbee, lawn darts or anything else, there is fresh air to breathe, lush green to sit on and tranquil bodies of water to watch.

Additionally, Kensington has some special features with upcoming activities planned:

Two popular events will be held at the Farm Center of Kensington. "Horsing Around," a demonstration on the art of horseshoeing followed by a discussion, will be held on April 22, 1-3 p.m.

"Harnessing A Horse's Power," a demonstration on the training of young draft horses to work, will be held on April 22 at noon. This program will feature breaking to halter, lounging, ground driving and hitching. Advance registration is required, as this is usually quite popular.

Three nature events will be held at Hudson Mills Metropark near Dexter/Ann Arbor. "Things That Go Bump In The Night," an opportunity to enjoy an evening walk while listening and learning about the sounds of night, will be held on April 20 at 8 p.m. Participants should meet at the Activity Center.

"Earth Day Walk — A View of Blue," a naturalist-led walk through a bluebird habitat, will be held on April 22 at 1 p.m. Participants should meet at the Activity Center.

"Earth Day Celebration For Children," an hour of stories and activities for children 5-10 years old, will be held on April 22 at 3 p.m. Participants should meet at the Activity Center.

Most of these programs are free, but some may have a nominal charge and advance registration and a vehicle entry permit are required.

You probably won't come back from your day at Kensington with a deep dark tan, at least not yet, but the fresh air and exercise is enough to kill the claustrophobic feelings. And for the same money you couldn't even see a movie about someone else's spring break.

For information/registration contact the Huron-Clinton metroparks, 1-800-47-PARKS (toll-free).

The Northville Record

Kickers dominate Spartans — tie

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

The Northville kickers did absolutely everything on April 9 against Livonia Stevenson — except, of course, put the ball in the back of the net. The second-ranked Mustangs peppered the 10th-ranked Spartan defense, and goalie Alicia Smith, with shot after shot — but never did hit paydirt and had to settle for a very disappointing 0-0 tie in WLA action.

It was the first setback of the young season for Northville, which outscored its first three opponents 15-2.

"We were definitely expected to beat Stevenson, and we probably should have, but some things in our offensive third just weren't clicking," Mustang Coach Bob Paul said. "We pounded (Stevenson) as far as shots on goal but we couldn't cash in."

"It seems to happen more than it should in soccer, and it's an area we'll have to improve on. A key in soccer is who can turn offensive threats into goals — we didn't do that."

The highlight of the match was the Northville defense — which notched shutout number two and prevented the Spartans from really threatening. Senior netminder Kristi Turner didn't face many shots and Paul credited fullbacks like Neysa Colizzi and Michelle McQuaid.

"They did a good job," he said. "We didn't get much offensive help from the defensive third but as far as doing their job, I was happy. We're confident with our defense, although we still have some things we need to work on. But we really need to get better at moving the ball up through the opposition defense and that takes a lot of teamwork."

"The focus of our practices is now the offense — finishing our chances."

When the match ended in a scoreless deadlock, it was easy to determine which team was the underdog. While the Stevenson players celebrated, the Mustangs were left to wonder how they could totally dominate a game and yet have to settle for a tie.

"It felt like a loss, but I'm hoping it will be a blessing in disguise," Paul said. "It certainly brought us back down to earth."

The Spartans, on the other hand, were ecstatic. They played the game minus midfielders Ragen Coyne and Shannon Wilkinson.

"That's why we're real pleased to tie them having two of our best players gone," Stevenson Coach Mary Kay Boots said. "So, this is a game we're glad to have over."

"We had to play a defensive game because Northville was really coming on. They pressured us the whole game."

NORTHVILLE 5, NORTH FARMINGTON 0: The Mustangs rebounded nicely on April 11 to register shutout number three on the road against the Raiders.

"We came out a little slow but after a while everything started to click,"

Joe Kaley delivers game-winning hit

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

If you can single out the third game of a long baseball season as a key win, then Northville's extra-inning 6-5 road win over Farmington Harrison on April 9 certainly qualifies.

Senior shortstop Joe Kaley delivered his second timely hit of the game in the top of the eighth inning which drove in what ended up being the winning run. Kaley wound up with a game-high three runs batted in.

The victory ups Northville's record to 2-1 overall (1-0 in the Western Lakes League) heading into the Easter break. The Mustangs don't get back into action until April 23 against Plymouth Canton.

"That was a big win," Northville Coach Bob Frelick said. "We played a very solid ballgame. Even when we were behind, the kids hung in there and came back. Even though we only had six hits, we really stung the ball."

The Mustangs took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a run-scoring single by John McNeil, but Harrison knotted the score off starter Mike Lang in the third on a walk, a stolen base, and a hit.

Northville regained the lead in the fifth with two runs on two walks and a two-run hit by Kaley, but it was short-lived.

Lang had some control problems in the bottom of the inning — including three walks — and that helped the Hawks close to 3-2. Then in the sixth, Harrison ripped him for three hits and three runs, including a base-clearing double, and Northville faced a 5-3 deficit heading into the final inning.

With their backs to the wall in the seventh, the Mustangs scratched out two runs on an error, a Steve Vigh double and a Brent Barzantry single, to send the game into extra innings.

"That was a big win. Even when we were behind, the kids hung in there and came back. Even though we only had six hits, we really stung the ball."

— Bob Frelick
Mustang Coach

That's when Kaley came through again. In the top of the eighth, he knocked in Ryan Huzjak for the winner. Huzjak reached base on a walk and was sacrificed to second by Pat Kozdron.

"Hey, that was real impressive the way we hung in there and pulled it out when we did," Northville Assistant Coach Tom Lang said. "Kaley is our leader out there and the boys really have a lot of respect for him. We hit the ball hard all day but it wasn't until late in the game they started dropping in."

Lang then retired Harrison in the bottom of the inning to record his first victory of the season. In eight innings of work, he allowed five hits and three earned runs, walked 10 and fanned 12.

"Mike was a bit wild but they didn't get many hits off him," Tom Lang said.

Kaley went 2-for-5 and was the only Mustang with more than one hit. Defensively, Northville didn't commit an error.

"Harrison won the Western Lakes Division last year, and they are tough on their field," Lang pointed out. "It was a big victory."

Mustang boys crush North in track meet

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

Mustang boys track Coach Dennis Faletti is still learning about his team, and he certainly didn't know much about North Farmington. So when the two teams met on April 11, there were really no expectations or anticipations.

Maybe that's why Faletti wasn't all that surprised when his trackers went out and clobbered the Raiders 91-38 in Northville's Western Lakes League opener. It was quite a turnaround from the team's lopsided non-conference loss to Novi a week earlier.

"Considering the cold, snowy weather, I was very pleased with the way we performed," Faletti said. "The big difference between this meet and the Novi meet was that I had a better idea of what events to put some of these young kids in. And with one meet under their belts, they had a better idea what they should be doing."

The Mustangs cruised to the victory with wins in 12 of the 17 events. Hurdler Bret Butz and distance runner Steve Coon paced the attack with a pair of first-place finishes each. Butz won the 110-meter highs in 16.4 and the 300 intermediates in 45.6, while Coon took the honors in the mile (4:52.6) and the two-mile (10:42.2).

Northville also managed to win three of four relays, and senior Neil White was the anchor in all three. He was joined by Noel Korowin, Matt Hemp and Jamie Miller in the 400 relay (47.0); by Korowin, Chris Lehr and Miller in the 800 relay (1:38.0); and by Rob Subotich, Lehr and Mark Hillinger in the mile relay (3:53.8). The rest of the Mustang wins came from Miller in the long jump (19'-2 1/4"), John Okasinski in the pole vault (10'-0"), Colin Campbell in the 100-meter dash (11.6) and Bill Kelley in the 200 (24.4).

Brandon Hayes registered two runner-up finishes in the high jump (5'-3") and the 300 hurdles (46.4). The other seconds included Kevin Gill in the shot put (37'-4 1/4"), Korowin in the long jump (18'-7"), Aaron Wiseley in the pole vault (9'-6"), Miller in the 200 (24.7), and Jon Meek in the 800 (2:14.9). The thirds came from Gill in the discus (104'-2"), Korowin in the 100 (11.8), Hillinger in the 400 (55.4) and Karl Goerke in the mile (5:06.1).

"We have a lot of sophomores and freshman scoring points for us," Faletti pointed out. "As a matter of fact, that's where the majority of our points come from. It's a nice situation because they will do nothing but improve."

Northville (1-1 overall, 1-0 in the WLA) won't get back into action until April 24 against Walled Lake Central in a make-up meet.

Winterlike weather woes

Neil Geoghegan

The paper on my desk that includes the spring sports schedules for the Novi and Northville varsity teams is starting to look like those famous scorecards of 20-inning baseball games. Messy, messy, messy.

Dates are scratched out all over the place, and new dates are penciled in. Some of the scheduled contests have been canceled, with no new dates planned. Others have been rescheduled. And it's getting harder and harder to decipher.

At the heart of this entire problem is the weather. Springtime is the worst time of the year when it comes to rain-outs, snow-outs and the like, but this year has been absolutely horrible. Longtime Northville tennis coach Dick Norton said, "It's about the worst weather I can ever recall for such an extended period at this time of the season."

Novi soccer coach Nick Valenti said: "It's the worst spring since 1983 when I started coaching. I'd say it's been at least 10 degrees colder this year than any other year I can remember."

I agree. I told our photographer, Chris Boyd, that if anybody wants to know what day it will rain or snow, just look for the days I have him scheduled to take pictures. After two weeks of action, I am batting well below .500. Five of six Mustang teams have already had at least one contest postponed, and the baseball team was the hardest hit — with three outings in a row affected. Five of six Novi teams have also had rain-outs, including the Wildcat baseballers, who had to wait an extra week before opening the season.

An ideal case in point is the Novi-Northville clashes in both baseball and softball. Those games were originally scheduled for April 3, but cold weather and snow forced a cancellation. Of course, I had Chris penciled in for photos at both games since they would be going on simultaneously at adjacent fields.

The remake was all set for April 10, but the rains washed that one away as well. You guessed it, I had Chris scheduled again. Now, according to Northville Athletic Director Dennis Colligan, the games may be played after the Easter break, or they may be scrapped all together.

While many contests have been canceled, many others have gone on as scheduled. Players, coaches and fans have braved the elements in some of the worst conditions imaginable. Do you know how difficult it is to hit a tennis ball when the wind is whipping up and the temperature is dipping below 40? Just ask the Mustangs and Wildcats. They hooked up on a windy, cold day with snow flurries in the air back on April 6.

Another example was the second half of Northville's soccer match with Grand Blanc, also on April 6. Mustang Coach Bob Paul complained of "snow squalls," and noted that the caliber of play dropped as soon as the snow started falling and sticking.

The track meet between Novi and Northville (both boys and girls teams) on April 5 was more of a battle against the conditions than anything else. Consider this comment by Ladycat Coach Connie Ahrens: "The girls are doing fantastic, and that's saying something in this kind of weather. We had everything — rain, sleet, snow and even sun."

I also feel sorry for Colligan and Novi A.D. John Fundukian. When the weather plays havoc with the schedule, they are the ones that must make all the plans for the remakes. And with all that's gone on this spring, I can assure you, they have been very busy.

Mustang kickers shut out N. Farmington

said Northville Assistant Coach Doug Lyon. "I think the girls were a little upset about the Stevenson tie because they thought they should have won it. Things like that provide additional motivation."

The first goal, and the eventual game-winner, came about 20 minutes into the first half from Cindy Tolstedt. By halftime, the lead was 2-0, thanks to a tally by Wendy Carroll.

In the second half, Marcie Dart scored her third goal of the season to make it 3-0. Colleen Regan added a fourth and then Nikki Higdon wrapped it up with her fourth score so far this season.

"It was a good opportunity to get some of the other girls on the team some playing time," Paul said. "A win is always nice to have and 5-0 is pretty convincing. It's nice to buffer that Stevenson game with a win."

Apligian, Staknis pace Northville nine

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

With Melanie Apligian providing the hitting, and Rozann Staknis dominating from the pitching mound, the Northville softballers cruised to an easy 11-2 season-opening victory on April 9 over Farmington Harrison.

But Mustang Coach Bob Gerlach is the first to temper any overconfidence after such a lopsided win, because, as he put it: "Harrison isn't a great team."

Apligian had the perfect start to her junior campaign by going 4-for-4 at the plate with three runs batted in and four runs scored. With the graduation of star hurler Amy Freimund, pitching is a major concern for Gerlach. But with the way Staknis performed, he may be worrying needlessly.

"Staknis picked up where Freimund left off last year," he said. "She had a no-hitter going into the final out of the game — I was impressed."

For the game, Staknis fanned 15, walked only two and allowed just three hits. But with two outs in the bottom of the seventh, Staknis tired and surrendered three hits and two earned runs.

"It was a little frustrating to be that close, but we are out there to get the win, and that's what we did," Gerlach said. "To get 15 strikeouts on a cold day like that is outstanding."

Apligian wasted no time by clubbing a towering two-run homer in the first inning. It was her first at-bat of the '90 season, and it came with two out.

"Melanie hit one of the farthest balls I've seen on our field — it's probably still going right now," he joked. "It really set the tone for the rest of the game."

Northville added a second run in the second without getting a hit, and then Apligian made it 4-0 when she scored following a single, a stolen base and an error in the third.

The fifth inning featured a three-run rally and again Apligian contributed with a clutch single. Kim Cooley and Diane Beckert also had key hits to make it 7-0.

The lead increased to 11-0 when the Mustangs pushed four more runs across the plate in the sixth. Karen Pump, Laura Apligian, Cooley and — you guessed it, Melanie Apligian — all had big hits in the rally.

"We had eight steals in this game," Gerlach said. "That's probably more than we had all of last season. I think we are going to have to run in order to manufacture some runs this season. We did not, however, bunt very well and that's an important part of the running game. So that's an area we are really working on."

Pump scored two runs in the game and Beckert, a senior firstbaseman, also scored twice and added three stolen bases.

"We were a little shaky on defense," Gerlach pointed out. "We made some plays but we did have three errors. Defensive is always my number one objective."

The Mustangs (1-0 overall) don't get back into action until April 23, on the road, at Plymouth Canton.

LOST HOME DATE: The cold, rainy weather conditions prior to the holiday break cost the Northville softballers a home game with Livonia Churchill. The Mustangs and the Chargers were slated to play on April 11, but the game was postponed because of the weather.

Mustangs of the Week

MELANIE APLIGIAN

JOE KALEY

The way Melanie Apligian hit the ball in Northville's 11-2 season-opening triumph over Farmington Harrison on April 9 only confirmed coach Bob Gerlach's high expectations for the junior outfielder. Apligian went 4-for-4, scored four runs, batted in three runs and stole a base. It's easy to see why that performance was enough for "Mustang of the Week" honors. The highlight of Apligian's outing was a two-out, first-inning home run that broke a 0-0 deadlock and set the tone for the rest of the game. "Melanie hit one of the farthest balls I've seen on our field," Gerlach said. "It really set the tone for the rest of the game."

Senior shortstop Joe Kaley delivered two clutch hits in Northville's 6-5 extra-inning, road win over Farmington Harrison on April 9. The second was a single in the top of the eighth inning that drove in the game-winning run. For the game, Kaley (2-for-5) was the only Mustang player with more than one hit, and he led the team with three runs batted in. For the effort, we think he is the ideal recipient for "Mustang of the Week" honors. "Kaley is our leader out there and the boys really have a lot of respect for him," Northville Assistant Coach Tom Lang said. "We hit the ball hard all day but it wasn't until late in the game they started dropping in."

Norton disappointed with 4-2 loss to Harrison

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

If the Mustang netters are going to be a legitimate contender in the Western Lakes Activities Association, they certainly didn't show it on April 11.

In a contest shortened because of snow, Northville fell 4-2 to Farmington Harrison by dropping two-of-four singles matches and two-of-two in the doubles. Needless to say, Mustang Coach Dick Norton was not pleased.

"I was a little disappointed," he admitted. "We let a few matches get away from us and that made the difference. We should have won it."

The bright spot may have been the continued solid play of super freshman Mark Schwegle, who crushed Dan Fulga 6-1, 6-2 in the No. 1 single match. Brit Davis turned back Brandon Sandler 6-0, 6-3 at No. 3 for Northville's other single victory. At No. 2, Jason Baker fell to Brad Aldrich (0-6, 3-6) and at No. 4, Erik Black lost to Dennis Sayles (2-6, 2-6).

The pivotal match came at No. 1 doubles, where Kyle Legel and Andy Haas had a lead but couldn't hold on, and eventually fell to Mike Sapulo and Chris Sarsfield (6-2, 4-6, 4-6). Legel and Haas were ahead 4-3 in the third set before dropping the final three games.

At No. 2, Nick Watanabe and Brent Garner couldn't handle Ryan Cahill and Mike Jacobs (3-6, 3-6), and that provided the Hawks with the needed points to win the contest. At No. 3, Jeff Lower and Sharduhi Shah split the first two sets with John Huang and Vito Orsini, but with the third set tied 1-1, the match was cancelled.

"I think I'll have to make some personnel changes in my doubles lineup," Norton warned. "We don't have much offense in our doubles and that's where we came up short."

"At No. 1 doubles, it looked like we had the match in hand and we let it slip away."

The Mustangs (1-1 overall, 0-1 in the WLAA) will get back into action on April 24 at North Farmington. Despite beating his team, Norton wasn't all that impressed with Harrison, and still believes that Plymouth Canton is the team to beat. He also knows that to contend, the Mustangs must improve.

"We need to work on playing smarter tennis," Norton said. "We need to cut down on silly mistakes, like double-faulting. I'll try a lot of different combinations and find out who the most competitive players are."

"Right now I'm not sure who that is."

Area hosts pair of running events

Hartley Vezina ran in the 1986 Novi Providence Run — and placed first Put your running shoes on! Two major runs are scheduled in the Novi/Northville area in the immediate future: one this Sunday and one next Sunday. One of them is the first-ever event of its kind, and the other is the 10-year anniversary of a very popular annual happening.

The very first EARTH DAY 10K FUN RUN AND TWO-MILE WALK is planned for this Sunday. It's part of the festivities marking Earth Day, many of which are taking place locally at Maybury State Park, on the south side of Eight Mile Road between Beck and Napier.

The run begins at 10 a.m. at the state park, and it uses the park's trail system as a course.

All participants in the run will receive a canvas tote bag. Refreshments will be provided by Edwards Caterer. In addition, runners will be eligible for awards in each age group and for a prize drawing.

For the less energetic, there is also a two-mile walk scheduled. This starts at 10:15 a.m. and also winds around Maybury.

Walkers also get the tote bag and refreshments, and are also eligible for a prize drawing.

Registration for either of the Earth Day events, the run or the walk, is $6. In addition, entry to Maybury requires either an annual state parks entry sticker or a $3 daily permit. Call 349-0203 for an application for either event.

Then, just a week later, participation is encouraged in the 10TH ANNIVERSARY PROVIDENCE NOVI RUN. Registrations are now being accepted.

This popular run offers 5K and 10K run distances, as well as the Mile Fun Run/Walk. Everything starts from the Novi Civic Center, on the south side of Ten Mile east of Taft Road.

As in all the previous runs, the Novi Trackers Running Club is playing host. The event is sponsored by JCK & Associates, Novi Parks and Recreation Department, and Providence Hospital.

The one-mile Fun Run/Walk starts at 12:30 p.m. It is entirely on flat pavement. All participants receive a ribbon. Registration is $5.

The 5K and 10K runs begin at 1 p.m. They stay in the general vicinity of Taft Road, on flat pavement and some gravel roads.

The entry fee is $8 until tomorrow, April 20. Entry forms are available at, and should be sent to, Novi Parks and Recreation, 45175 W. Ten Mile Road, Novi, MI 48050.

Late registration is available from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m. on race day at the Novi Civic Center. Late registration fee is $10.

There are nine age divisions, plus a wheelchair division.

For more information call 347-0400.

'Run for the Kids' comes to Dearborn

The seventh annual Run for the Kids will take place April 29 at Fairlane Charley's in Dearborn. More than 500 runners, walkers and roller skaters are expected.

All proceeds from the 10K run and one-mile fun run will benefit charities.

Registration the day of the race will begin at 8 a.m. and the race will get underway at 10 a.m. For a $10 entry fee you get a T-shirt, two complimentary dinners at any metro Detroit Charley's restaurant, and will be eligible for a random drawing of prizes.

For more information, call 336-8550.

FITNESS FOR THE '90s: The Novi Community Education Department is offering an eight-week "Fitness for the 90s" class. Aerobic conditioning is combined with progressive resistance exercises using weight machines to reduce body fat and achieve good muscle tone.

Information pertaining to nutrition, diet and stress reduction is provided to complete the total fitness program. Students must be at least age 17 to participate.

The program starts on April 23 at the Novi High School Wrestling Room. The Monday/Wednesday sessions cost $25; the Tuesday/Thursday sessions cost $27. For more information, call 347-0400.

OPEN SWIM: The Novi High School Pool will be open for swimming from now until June 14. Open swimming on Tuesdays and Thursdays will be from 7-8:30 p.m. and lap swimming follows until 9:30 p.m.

Fee is 50 cents and senior citizens are free. Children age 10 and under must be with an adult. The pool will be closed on April 19.

HALF MARATHON: The annual West Bloomfield Half Marathon has been scheduled for April 22, at 12:30 p.m. This will be the 14th running of this TAC (The Athletics Congress)-certified race which is sponsored by West Bloomfield Parks and Recreation.

The race begins in the front of West Bloomfield High School, Orchard Lake Road at Green Road, and winds through the scenic residential streets of

Fitness Notes

West Bloomfield Township.

Annually the race attracts runners from many midwest states and Ontario, Canada. A new course record was set in 1989 by Doug Kurtis, 37, of Northville, with a time of 1:07:32. Cheri Sly, 24, of Dexter, Michigan set the women's course record at 1:15:57.4 also in 1989.

The 1990 race looks to continued excitement in long distance racing and high quality in race organization. Categories this year will include walkers and wheelers in addition to the many runner divisions.

For an entry form, send a self addressed, stamped envelope to West Bloomfield Parks and Recreation, 3325 Middlebelt Road, West Bloomfield, Michigan 48033. Entrants in the 1989 race will automatically receive an entry form. Registrations are taken up until one-half hour before race time.

After April 13 and through race day the fee is $14. There are no guarantees on a t-shirt with a late registration.

For further information, contact the parks and recreation office, 313-334-5660. The West Bloomfield Half Marathon is directed by Sally Slater Pierce.

WALK MICHIGAN PROGRAM: The Novi/Northville area is participating in the 1990 Walk Michigan Program, and Twelve Oaks Mall is the site for the next two events. On April 19 and May 15, walkers will be meeting at the Lord and Taylor mall entrance at 8 a.m. There will also be three other events this summer.

Each time a person participates in one of the scheduled walks, their name will be entered into a grand prize drawing: a trip for two to Macinac Island to participate in the annual bridge walk on Labor Day.

For more information, call 347-0400.

EXERCISE PROGRAM: A one-hour exercise program is held Monday and Wednesday mornings at Twelve Oaks Mall. It takes place 9-10 a.m. in the Lord & Taylor corridor near the east entrance.

The program, conducted by The University of Michigan Division of Physical Education, is particularly aimed at older people and others who would benefit from an invigorating but non-strenuous exercise program.

"The format consists of carefully guided warm-up and stretching exercise followed by light aerobics and a cool-down period, all synchronized to music," according to Prof. Phyllis E. Welkart, director of U-M's Adult Lifestyle Program. "Our objective is to improve the participants' strength, flexibility and energy level through activities which are safe and enjoyable."

Welkart and her staff have been leading the popular Fitness Over 50 classes for 12 years on the U-M campus and for the past two years at Ann Arbor's Briarwood Mall, where it regularly attracts some 125 participants.

By expanding the program to Twelve Oaks Mall, they have made it more accessible to residents throughout Livingston, Wayne and Oakland Counties.

"Twelve Oaks is open an hour before the stores open (at 10 a.m. daily and noon Sunday) to accommodate people who want to use the mall for walking," notes Twelve Oaks marketing director Elaine Kah. "This exercise program adds a new dimension to this activity. We are pleased to be a part of the program."

Fitness Over 50 welcomes all interested persons, regardless of their age and current activity level. Call the Twelve Oaks Management Office, 348-9438, for further information.

Twelve Oaks is a major regional shopping center located in Novi on I-96 and Novi Road. The center hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 6 p.m.

Fitness Tips

Running can have positive effect on health

By SYLVIA DVORAK

Running has become one of the most popular physical activities people have taken up for physical fitness. It is easy, convenient, and inexpensive. You do not need lessons or access to a fitness facility to participate. And, you can do it in a group or by yourself; you can set personal goals or join races and be competitive. Whatever the reasons for running may be, its many benefits can be experienced by all. Running gets you in shape quickly, and provides a fitness base for other sports such as tennis and baseball.

As with any other exercise, if you have been leading a sedentary life you should check with your doctor before starting your program. Find a specific time of day that running will best fit into your schedule — this will help you adhere to your program. Almost any time is acceptable; except if you have just eaten, give yourself about an hour so your stomach can digest the food, and try to avoid exercising in the middle of a hot, humid day to prevent heat exhaustion.

When you are just starting out it is best to run every other day or at least three times a week; running every day will increase your chances of injury. Be sure to warm up and stretch before you start. At first you may need to begin your program with walking; for example, walk two minutes for a total of 20 minutes. You set your own pace, it does not matter if it takes you a couple months, before you are ready for a 20-30 minute continuous run. Take your pulse once or twice during your run to check if you are at your target heart rate. Don't forget to cool-down and then stretch after you are done running. If you want to exercise every day, alternate your workouts with other forms of exercise such as swimming and/or lifting weights.

Wear clothing that is comfortable and reasonably loose. Your clothing should keep you cool in the summer and warm in the winter. Wear some kind of reflective material if you run when it is dark outside. Many runners have been hit by passing cars because they could not be seen.

What about shoes? Proper shoes are essential for running. A shoe should not fit too tightly and the soles should be firm. Running shoes should support your arches, cushion the balls and heels of your feet and have a flexible front toe for an easier push-off. Good shoes and socks are your best prevention against blisters, sore feet and aching knees and ankles.

It is best for you not to run on hard surfaces such as cement or asphalt. If possible begin your program on a running track (most secondary schools have one). Try to run on grass or a dirt path. Harder surfaces increase your chances of injury.

Running Tips

- Keep a daily record of your progress; include in it date, distance, heart rate and your weekly weight.
- Try to stay away from busy streets.
- Run in a heel-to-toe fashion, avoid running strictly on our toes.

• Run at a speed comfortable to you.

• Run in a relaxed manner and breathe regularly.

• Motivate yourself to stick with the program by keeping it convenient.

• Change the location where you run such as golf courses and parks to add variety and interest to your program.

• Run with a friend who runs at the same pace so you can encourage each other.

If done properly, running will have positive effects on your health. Running will make you feel like you have accomplished something and it can help keep your weight down. It can make you feel healthy and make you feel good about yourself.

Golf continues to boom around state

By DENNIS KEENON

Jim Dewling, take a look into your crystal ball, and tell us what you see about the future of golf.

Dewling, of the Oak Pointe golf complex in Brighton, has gained a reputation of being a visionary in the golf business. And he sees nothing but good things for the sport in the next 10 years.

"Golf is a $20 billion industry today, and it will be $40 billion at the turn of the century," Dewling said.

Dewling recites National Golf Foundation statistics that say 400 new courses must open annually by the year 2000 to satisfy rapidly mounting demands.

Michigan has some 1.3 million golfers, and that number could double by the year 2000 if growth continues at the current pace, Dewling said.

The boom is here and here to stay in golf. But why? Why such popularity, especially in Michigan, where golfers sink an estimated $500 million into the state's tourism economy over a season that lasts essentially just six months?

Dewling cites these reasons. "You can be entertained at any level—whether it's at the driving range, playing a public golf course and at a private club," he said.

A primary reason for the game's appeal, Dewling said, is "that's it's the only game played on an unregulated playing field. Every course is different, and it's played in a natural environment."

The third reason Dewling gives is because of golf's handicap system, players of different abilities can play in the same foursome and compete with each other.

Dewling also pointed to the industry's continuing promotion of junior golf programs (Oak Pointe runs a program with 300 junior golfers each summer) and the success of the Senior PGA Tour as reasons for the game's burgeoning popularity.

Dave Hill, of Jackson, the former PGA Tour star and now a dominant player on the Senior Tour, would agree with Dewling's last point.

"The success of the Senior PGA Tour has given guys like me (over 50 years old) something to do," Hill joked with an audience at the Golf Manufacturers Expo at Schoolcraft College in Livonia last month. "We're making more money on the Senior Tour than we did in our younger days on the regular tour."

The Senior Tour has helped feed golf's growth and benefited from the boom in the 1980s. Michigan, in fact, will have three Senior Tour stops in 1990, including the Mazda Senior TPC Championship at the Dearborn Country Club, June 7-10; the Ameritech Senior Open, Grand Traverse Resort Village, July 20-22; and the Greater Grand Rapids Senior Open, Elks Country Club, Sept. 14-16.

Nathaniel Crosby, the 1981 U.S. Amateur champion and son of the late actor/singer Bing Crosby, ties the sport's booming popularity to the growth

Ten Mile corridor is hot spot for golf

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN

When Ed Hock built a golf range on Ten Mile Road between Chubb and Currie Roads in Lyon Township 13 years ago, little did he know that it was in essence the start of what is now developing into a future hub for area golfers.

Hock Acres Golf Range was apparently the start of something big. Godwin Glen Golf Course — a 27-hole facility, was just a mile and a half away (north of Ten Mile on Johns Road) when the range was built. Soon, Pebble Creek — another public course — was built only a few 3-irons west, on the corner of Ten Mile and Currie.

Now, three new courses are either in the planning stage or are in the process of being built and all are within several miles of one another and the existing courses. The newcomers include "The Links of Novi," "The Lion" and "Cat Tails." What was nothing more than wide-open farmland a decade ago is transforming into a corridor of golf unparalleled in these parts.

"There is so much growth going on in this area, it's a real hot spot," said Pebble Creek Manager Bonnie Edwards. "Golf is just a part of the overall boom, and I think that's good. The more courses in the area, the more people you'll attract."

Within the last few years, Godwin Glen was sold and became Walnut Creek Country Club, a private course that was formerly the Farmington Hills Country Club. And for the past four years, Pebble Creek has been working on an additional nine holes that is expected to open by this fall.

"We hope the second nine holes will be finished by September," Edwards said. "For years, there hasn't been enough tee times for the number of golfers we have, and it's only been getting worse. I still think it will be a problem after all these new courses are finished, but it should help the problem quite a bit."

As for Hock, the additional courses should certainly increase his business, as golfers often look to practice at a range before playing a round.

"This is really a boom for the whole area," he said. "The land is available out here and courses are very much needed."

"Every year, our business seems to get better and better, and I think a lot of it has to do with areas like Novi and South Lyon growing so much."

Gary Whitener, a partner in Novi Golf Associates Inc., said in February that the Links of Novi Championship Golf Course will open the first nine holes at the earliest in late August of this year. The 200-acre plot is located on Ten Mile between Beck and Napier Roads, and when completed, will feature 27 holes and a 3,500-square-foot clubhouse that isn't slated for completion until the spring of 1991.

As for The Lion, it is part of the Tanglewood Development headed up by Freund Associates, and is located just down the road from Hock Acres. The course is set on 497 acres and plans are for 27 holes with 40 housing units surrounding the course.

"It's laid out as a 27-hole course and 18 are now built, with the third nine hopefully finished by the summer of 1991," said Bob Freund.

The course was designed by well-known architect William Newcomb and the tentative opening date is set for July 1, 1990.

Not much is known about Cat Tails, because it is still in the planning stage. The site is owned by Limited Enterprises and is located on Nine Mile between Griswold and Currie Roads.

Marion Oaks leads new course parade

Photos by SCOTT PIPER

The golf boom hasn't neglected the Livingston County area. A variety of challenging courses awaits players of any caliber. And more are on the way.

Here's an update on new courses in the area.

Marion Oaks. June 1 is the target date for opening the new Marion Oaks golf course, which sits on 190 acres at the corner of D-19 (Pinckney Road) and Wright Road, about two miles south of Howell.

Work is being completed on the Marion Oaks clubhouse and the finishing touches are being placed on the course as well, said Frank Godwin, whose family built the Salem Hills and Godwin Glen courses.

Marion Oaks hopes to live up to the reputations of Salem Hills and Godwin Glen, which had country club-style playing conditions, Godwin said.

"We hope to come as close to country club conditions as possible," Godwin said. "It's more expensive, but people like it."

Diversity is one of the words Godwin used to describe the Marion Oaks layout, which will play to a par 70 over 6,700 to 6,800 yards from the back tees. "There are five holes that are quite rolling and hilly, and three holes are cut through the woods," he said. "We have six ponds on the property, with large oak trees sprinkled here and there."

"There's good diversity. The course is well-balanced."

Godwin said Marion Oaks will provide a true test for expert golfers from the back tees, but players should have some fun from the shorter regular men's and women's tees. Some tees are 60 to 80 yards long, so each hole can be made to play easier or tougher just by adjusting the tees.

The course has four par 5s, six par 3s and eight par 4s. "The par 3s are all solid golf holes," Godwin said.

Marion Oaks is the Godwin family's first golf course in Livingston County. But Frank Godwin knows the area well. "I've lived in Brighton for 17 years, and as I've watched the county grow, I saw the opportunity to develop a golf course here," he said.

Construction began on Marion Oaks in July 1988 with the clearing of wooded areas, digging of ponds and shaping the land, including tees and greens. Last year came the "finish" work, and the course was seeded in August and September.

"It (grass) came in pretty well," Godwin said. "We need to repair some wash-outs in some areas, but it's looking pretty good. We'll be shooting for the June 1 opening date."

Hudson Mills. Nine holes of the new golf course at Hudson Mills Metropark near Dexter are scheduled to open in May with the second nine ready for play in July.

Hudson Mills covers 6,634 yards with a par of 71. The Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority spent $1.4 million developing the course.

Entrance to the new course is at 4800 Dexter-Pinckney Road, between the Village of Dexter and North Territorial Road in Washtenaw County.

Whispering Pines. Brighton area developer Donald Moon always had a desire to build a golf course, says his daughter, Deborah Moon. And now that dream is coming true in the form of Whispering Pines, a golf course/residential home community off McGregor Road in Hamburg Township.

The Moons hope to open nine holes of Whispering Pines later this summer and get the second nine ready for next year.

"Nine fairways have been cleared, and we're working on putting the sprinkling system in," Deborah Moon said.

Whispering Pines has become a family affair. Donald Moon is working on the design, while his son, David, and son-in-law, Jeff Barton, can be seen at the controls of heavy-equipment machinery shaping fairways, and Deborah is designing the clubhouse.

The new development rests on a former Christmas tree farm, covering 400 acres. About 200 acres are devoted to the golf course, while there's room for 180 single-family dwellings and 160 condominium sites on the remainder of the property. The first phase of the residential development will contain 52 home sites, Deborah Moon said.

Her clubhouse design will include a restaurant, bar and swimming pool.

Whispering Pines will start out as a public course, Moon said, but once the development is completed, the property owners' association will be given the option of purchasing the course.

Oak Pointe. Meanwhile, at the Oak Pointe complex off Brighton Road in Brighton, completion of the highly acclaimed Arthur Hills Honors course is scheduled in 1991.

Right now, the Honors is a nine-hole layout, but work on the second nine, on the west side of Chilson Road, continued through the winter months, Oak Pointe's Jim Dewling said.

"The fairway corridors are completed, and we'll be working this spring and summer on it, and seed it this fall," he said. "We anticipate the second nine will be ready for play by mid-summer 1991."

Conditioning of the first nine on the Honors course "is so good, it's unbelievable," Dewling said. "It's being maintained at a level superior to most private clubs."

When it's all done, the Honors course will play to a par 72 over 6,800 yards from the back tees. Future plans call for a clubhouse to be built near the Honors course first tee, which will service the Honors as well as Oak Pointe's 18-hole Championship course and the par-3 Challenge course.

A new, open-to-the-public driving range accompanies the Honors course this year. Construction of the 30-stall range was completed last fall and is now open. Golfers will be able to practice an array of shots to four target greens.

The Challenge course has been renovated and constructed into a nine-hole, par 27 layout, with par 3s ranging from 120 to 230 yards in length. Located next to the practice facility, the Challenge course provides the novice golfer the opportunity to practice his game and play a course less difficult and more forgiving.

The golf boom is continuing

of residential/golf communities in the 1980s.

"The popularity of golf (in the 1980s) came about when real estate developers started building golf courses as part of their developments," said Crosby, who now runs the Tony Penna Golf Co., at the Schoolcraft College show. "Thirty percent of the people who buy a home on a golf course play golf. These developments will guarantee the popularity of the game, and interest in the game will continue."

"I think the golf boom is here to stay."

In Michigan, it apparently is. The state boasts a total of 727 regular courses, and 23 more are now being developed with 27 more in the planning stages, according to AAA Michigan. Including several in this area (see related story).

If you don't play golf, you'll have plenty of opportunities to watch some of the best players perform. In addition to the three Senior Tour stops, there's the AAA Michigan Open, the state's oldest golf tournament, June 25-28 at the Grand Traverse Resort Village; and the Buick Open, a fixture on the PGA Tour, at Warwick Hills Country Club, Grand Blanc, July 26-29.

The state's top amateur tournament, the 79th Michigan Amateur Championship for men, will be played at Meadowbrook Country Club, near Northville, June 19-24.

New tour designed for average players

By MATT SEIDL

An opportunity for golfers to play "The Tour" has arrived in southeastern Michigan.

Of course, there are some catches for those interested in signing up. They include paying an entry fee, qualifying through the "Q" School, and — perhaps the most important — owning amateur status.

That's right. Mark Calcavecchia and Greg Norman will not be allowed on this circuit. Instead, you might find twice-a-week players from Milford, Brighton, Novi, Jackson, Ohio and even Canada battling it out for the top prizes.

The circuit, better known as the Great Lakes Amateur Tour, will kick off its inaugural season this summer. It is open to all amateur players who have an established USGA handicap or a league average that can be verified.

Two 18-hole qualifying rounds are scheduled, with the top players earning a spot on the tour — which consists of 10 weekend tournaments between June 2 and Oct. 6. The events will be held at various courses in southeastern Michigan.

"There's nothing like it around here as far as I know," said Rob Naudi, a Green Oak Township resident who helped organize the GLAT and will serve as one of its directors.

"There are some amateur tournaments, but they're generally for the more skilled players. The nice thing about (the GLAT) is we have divisions depending on a player's handicap. It gives everyone a chance to compete."

The tour will be broken up into four handicap divisions — 0-5, 6-9, 10-13 and 14-over. Players will compete in scratch medal play within their division.

As of late March, approximately 300

golfers had registered for the qualifying rounds, leaving room for only 200 more. The qualifying rounds enable GLAT officials to cut the field to 260 players (65 in each of the four divisions).

From there, the top 50 players from each group will compete in the first tournament, slated for June 2 at Dunham Hills Golf & Country Club in Hartland. The remaining 15 players in each division will serve as alternates in case any of the 50 qualifiers cannot participate.

Each week, the top 35 players in each division qualify for the next tournament. The bottom 15 players then become the new alternates, with the previous week's reserves being added to the field. This prevents players from sitting out more than one tournament at a time.

"It's inexpensive, it's on the weekends and it's a way for players with high handicaps to play in a competitive environment," Naudi said.

Joining Naudi in the development of the program are his brother, Dean Naudi of Whitmore Lake, and Roy Gaddey of Milford.

Dean Naudi is the former manager of Pro Golf Discount in Ann Arbor and now sells golf equipment for an area manufacturer. As for Gaddey, a former teacher-coach in the South Lyon school district, he owns Sportsmark Inc. in Bloomfield Hills.

"All three of us are equal partners, but the tour is run through Sportsmark," Rob Naudi said.

Naudi then explained how the idea for an amateur tour formulated.

"It took about a year," he said. "Basically, Roy and Dean were getting approached on their daily jobs by frustrated guys who couldn't find tournaments to play in. So the three of us just got together and came up with some ideas."

"It started out a lot bigger than this, but we condensed it down. We wanted to make sure we did it right the first year."

"Of course, if things go well, you could see it grow next year. You might see a seniors tour, or even more sections with a state playoff at the end of the year. There are a lot of possibilities."

Sportsmark has marketed and managed such golf events as the AAA Michigan Open, The Ameritech Senior Open and the Northwest Airlines PARS Cup. That experience allowed Gaddey to land three large sponsors — Spalding, Foot-Joy and the Grand Traverse Resort.

In return, the sponsors will gain from a gift-certificate prize format.

The top 10 golfers from each division will receive gift certificates, ranging from $150 to $20 in value. The certificates can be accumulated throughout the year and used to purchase the sponsors' products.

For more information on the Great Lakes Amateur Tour, call Dean Naudi at (313) 449-4100. All applications must be received by May 2.

Nicklaus course planned for Livingston County

By DENNIS KEENON

Livingston County's first "designer" golf course will definitely be par excellence, if a proposed development in Hartland and Brighton townships becomes reality.

The "designer" will be none other than the legendary Jack Nicklaus, who at age 50 has won more major golf championships than anyone in the history of the game.

A "Jack Nicklaus golf community," to include a private 18-hole course designed by Nicklaus and a luxury residential development, featuring homes in the $200,000 to $1 million range, has been proposed for 1,050 acres on the south side of Bergin Road, adjacent to Hacker Road.

Hartland Township officials have said the Nicklaus/Sierra company could seek approval to build up to 1,000 residences on the site.

Most of the land rests in Hartland Township, with about 150 acres in Brighton Township.

Michael Sierra, vice president of the Nicklaus/Sierra Development Co., Tampa, Fla., said he has had informal meetings with Hartland Township officials about the project and is encouraged about the prospect of locating a Nicklaus community in Livingston County.

"We felt there was a lack of a nice, exclusive golf course community in the Detroit area," Sierra said. His company has been looking for a site in southeastern Michigan since 1988, he said. After checking out locations in Clarkston, Rochester and Novi over the last two years, "we came across Brighton and have patched this site together from seven property owners," he said.

While emphasizing that "we're really just getting started on this," Sierra said tentative plans call for the first phase of residential and golf course construction to begin in the spring of 1991. "We have the property under contract, and we intend to close on it in the first quarter of 1991," Sierra said.

The first phase of residential could be completed by fall of 1991 with the golf course ready for play in the spring of 1992.

Following that schedule, Nicklaus would be visiting the site from two to five times this summer and fall to design the course, Sierra said. On the golf course alone, Nicklaus/Sierra would allocate between $15 million and $20 million, he said.

A typical Nicklaus community, Sierra said, has limited access with walls or fences surrounding it, a guard gate and 24-hour security. Strict architectural controls are another hallmark of a Nicklaus/Sierra development, he said.

"We'll have an architectural review committee and strict guidelines will have to be followed," Sierra said. The development will have a "good mix" of dwellings, he said, and "no two single-family homes will be alike."

Nicklaus/Sierra will work exclusively with home builders with proven track records, Sierra said.

Community buildings in the development, such as the gatehouse and clubhouse for the golf course, will carry a similar architectural theme. Common areas, such as parks, will be landscaped, he said.

Other Nicklaus communities around the country have included park areas, soccer fields, swimming pools and tennis courts, Sierra said.

Sierra said he is not concerned about Livingston County being too far from the Detroit area for the development to succeed. "The hot corridor for business development is up I-696 in Southfield and Farmington Hills, and that's only 25 minutes away from our site," he said. The Nicklaus/Sierra property is about one mile from the M-59/U.S. 23 interchange.

He said he's also encouraged by the success of the exclusive Oak Pointe and Pine Creek developments in Genoa Township as a reason to proceed with the Nicklaus/Sierra project.

Take cover when the clouds darken

Lightning and golf don't mix. Just ask Denise Daddino, her husband, Tom, and two playing companions, who had a close call with lightning on the golf course last year while playing at Tyrone Hills in Livingston County.

National Center for Health statistics show that lightning kills about 125 Americans every year and injures more than 500. Not surprisingly, a good many victims are outdoor enthusiasts, including golfers.

Fortunately, Denise Daddino and her playing partners didn't add to those National Center for Health statistics.

But they came close—so close, in fact, they now have a healthy respect for the dangers of lightning strikes.

"If we see a storm coming, we're leaving (the course)," Daddino said.

Daddino explained last year's near tragedy: "We were playing in a mixed couples league at Tryone Hills, and it looked like it was going to storm, but it wasn't raining.

"Coming up the eighth fairway, we saw some lightning in the distance but kind of ignored it. The men had teed off, and then we had hit from the women's tee when we heard this big crack."

A large tree to the left of the women's tee had been hit by lightning. "The bark slid down the length of the tee, and you could see the smoke from the burning," Daddino said.

The other woman in the group was knocked to the ground. She still had a club in her hand. Daddino's husband, who wears a hearing aid, jumped out of his golf cart, and grabbed his head. He was apparently feeling the reverberations of the lightning strike through the hearing device, Daddino said.

Neither player suffered injuries, although the woman complained of a headache later that night at dinner.

"That's as close as we ever want to be to lightning," Daddino said. They paced off a distance of about 50 feet from the tee to the hit tree.

Here are some common-sense safety tips offered by AAA Michigan that could save your life:

Never golf when a storm threatens. If caught on the course, put clubs down and head for shelter. If none is available, find a low-lying area. Don't stand under a tree or hold metal clubs. Do not walk down the middle of fairways where underground metal irrigation pipes might convey lightning.

The U.S. Golf Association also recommends staying off golf carts and points out that "raising golf clubs or umbrellas above the head adds to the element of personal hazard during electrical storms."

It's also recommended that golfers remove their shoes. Some lightning discharges from the ground upward, and metal spikes are a point of attraction.

Golfers should avoid isolated trees, hilltops and high places, and unprotected buildings and shelters in high areas.

Is your game ready for the summer?

Area golf pros offer up some early season pointers

Jim Dewling

Name: Jim Dewling
Course: Oak Pointe Golf Club, Brighton

Background: Assistant Pro, Edgewood Country Club, Union Lake; Assistant Pro, Birmingham Country Club, Birmingham; Head Pro, Great Oaks Country Club, Rochester; Head Pro, Oak Pointe Golf Club; President, Michigan Section PGA, 1980-81; Earned Master Professional status, 1988.

Early Season Tip: "Before the leagues or Sunday matches commence, the best way to begin the season is to start fresh and new. Go back and relearn the basics of grip, aim and stance.

"Take time to make sure these steps of the pre-swing routine are strong. These steps can be reviewed without taking a swing. Also, check your equipment. Now is the time for club repair and maintenance—not in July, when the clubs are needed.

"Get out to the driving range or see your local professional to get the kinks worked out and to get the feel of hitting the golf ball again."

Bob Percey

Name: Bob Percey
Course: Chemung Hills Country Club, Howell

Background: Central Michigan University golf team, four-year letterwinner; Assistant Pro, Wabek Country Club, Bloomfield Hills, 1977-80; Head Pro, Chemung Hills, 1981-present.

Early Season Tip: "You have to work your game back gradually every year. This is the worst time of year for many people, because they get one nice day and they want to go out there and play 18 holes.

"You should start by stretching, riding the stationary bike and swinging a weighted club during the winter—that helps keep your hands in golf shape.

"When you go out to the practice range, start by swinging a wedge or a sand wedge. Never pull your driver out first thing. If I haven't played in a while, I won't hit anything more than a 7 or 8 iron. A shorter swing is something you can control easier."

Denis Husse

Name: Denis Husse
Course: Tyrone Hills Golf Course, Fenton

Background: Assistant Pro, Sylvania Country Club, Sylvania, Ohio; Assistant Pro, Washtenaw Country Club, Ypsilanti; Head Pro, Tyrone Hills, 1976-present.

Early Season Tip: "Don't neglect your putting early in the season. Always make sure you show up at the course early so that you can get some putting practice in. The putting green is a good indicator of how the greens will be out on the course. They cut them all the same length.

"Start out by practicing with some short putts, then gradually go back further. Don't start out trying to make a 30-footer. I usually practice with three balls, and by the time I go to the tee, I want to make sure I can hit a three-foot putt every time."

Bob Floyd

Name: Bob Floyd
Course: Dunham Hills Golf and Country Club, Hartland

Background: Head Pro, Pine Valley Golf Club, Romeo, 1981-81; Teaching Pro, Sunnybrook Golf Course, Sterling Heights, 1983; Assistant Pro, Hillcrest Country Club, Mt. Clemens, 1984-85; Assistant Pro, Western Golf and Country Club, Redford, 1986; Head Pro, Valley View Golf Club, Shepherd, 1987-88; Head Pro, Dunham Hills, 1989-present.

Early Season Tip: "To help you get ready for the summer, make sure you do some walking during the spring. Most people aren't prepared to walk 18 holes at the beginning of the season.

"You should also do some club-swinging at home before you go out. Golf is a muscle memory game, and your muscles have forgotten a lot over the winter. We run out there that first nice day each spring expecting to be in mid-season form, and it doesn't work that way."

Take care to prevent injuries on the golf course

Golf may not seem like a physically taxing activity, but almost 20,000 players nationwide suffered golf-related injuries in 1988, according to AAA Michigan. Among those were an estimated 1,100 Michigan golfers.

AAA Michigan recommends that players engage in regular year-round physical exercise such as walking, stretching and swimming to get ready for Michigan's golf season, traditionally from April into November.

Golfers are advised to do 10 minutes of stretching exercises before each round to keep muscles limber and prevent stress to the back, neck and shoulders.

To protect themselves and others once on the course, golfers should remember:

- Never walk ahead of a player lining up a shot. Stand far enough behind to avoid being struck by the club as the player swings.

- Wait until the group ahead leaves the putting green before hitting a ball in that direction.

- Always shout "fore" as a warning if your ball goes toward other people.

- Never throw a golf club.
- Never drive golf carts at maximum speeds. Stay on cart paths and drive slowly down steep grades, at an angle where possible.

- In warm weather, drink plenty of water before and while golfing. Dress in pastel colors that deflect heat. Wear a hat and apply lotion with a sun protection factor of 15 on exposed body areas.

- Players with serious medical conditions should have a physical examination and doctor's clearance.

Golfers should note they can be legally liable if their negligent behavior on the golf course results in injury to another person, AAA Michigan says.

Observing the rules of safe golf will make any round more enjoyable

Course: Lakelands Country Club, Pinckney

Background: PGA member for 32 years; Assistant Pro, Dearborn Country Club, 1953-63; Head Pro, Lakelands, 1964-present.

Early Season Tip: "For senior golfers, doing plenty of stretching before going out is vital. You should always do your stretching exercises this time of year. If you pull a muscle because you didn't stretch out, you could be finished for the season."

"If it's 90 degrees outside, your muscles are a lot looser than if it's 45."

"When you go to the driving range, start with a wedge or a 9-iron. Never hit a driver first, especially in the cold weather. You never want to rush things."

Name: John Koch.

Course: Brooklane Golf Club, Northville.

Background: Attended Allegheny College; Course professional, New Castle Country Club in New Castle, Pennsylvania, 1965-68; Course professional, Brooklane Golf Club, 1969-present.

Early Season Tip: "Try to take a new attitude into the early season concerning tempo. Most people's tempo with their golf swing is too fast. Make it as simple as possible, and you can do that by slowing down. At this time of year, most people get out there on the course and swing too hard. What you need to do is get into a rhythm, keep the tempo slower, but also maintain a smooth stroke. I always say that you can not have the backswing slow enough. Nancy Lopez is a prime example of a very deliberate backstroke."

Name: Andy Soley.

Course: Meadowbrook Country Club, Northville.

Background: Graduate, Ball State University; Qualified for the Buick Open in 1986; Club professional, Meadowbrook Country Club, 1986-present.

Early Season Tip: You should make sure to check with your golf professional and see if you have the proper equipment. Having clubs checked for proper loft and lie is very important. Also, checks on the grip condition is important because you shouldn't use clubs in which the grips are badly worn.

"The whole process is like getting your car ready for a long trip. People don't realize the impact and vibration of hitting a golf ball over a period of time can alter the lie and loft of the club. They should be checked once a year. A 7-iron, for example, over the years may now have the loft of an 8 or 9-iron. The bottom line is that people overlook their equipment too much."

Name: Jim Grant.

Course: Salem Hills Golf Club, Northville.

Background: Attended Michigan State University; earned PGA CARD in 1982; won the Michigan PGA Scramble Tournament in 1986 with three other professionals; Course pro, Godwin Glen Country Club, 1983-87; Salem Hill course pro, 1987-present.

Early Season Tip: "I think a good way to prepare for the coming season is to do stretching exercises: grab a club and start swinging. Serious golfers have a place in their garage or their basement where they can do this. It helps your legs, hips and shoulders to get exposure to that kind of movement before you actually start hitting a ball. It loosens up those areas and it can help you develop the proper swing. A good thing to do is practice your swings in front of a mirror. That way, you can visualize yourself executing it properly."

Course: Walnut Creek Country Club, South Lyon.

Background: All-State at Dearborn Divine Child High School, 1969; four-year letterwinner, All-NAIA and NCAA All-American at Eastern Michigan University, 1969-73; head boys' golf coach at Dearborn Divine Child, 1973-78; Assistant Pro at Western Golf & Country Club in Redford, 1977; Assistant Pro at Oakland University's Katke-Cousins Golf Course, 1978; Assistant Pro at Farmington Country Club, 1979-84; Head Pro at FCC/Walnut Creek, 1985-present.

Early Season Tip: "You catch a lot of wind play out here. When dealing with a cross wind, your strategy is pretty basic.

You either line up left or right depending on the direction of it. You just have to determine the strength of the wind and adjust as you go on.

"A down wind may be the most difficult, or at least people make it the most difficult. The biggest problem is they try to hit the ball harder than normal. I discourage this. A lot of times they defeat their purpose because they end up over-swinging and making poor contact. Just take your normal swing and let the wind help you. Don't force things.

"As for hitting into the wind, I recommend playing the ball back in your stance. This delays the release of your hands. . .it's almost like hitting a punch shot. This way, you're able to keep the ball lower."

THINK SPRING

It's time to start thinking about bird houses and hummingbird feeders. Many birds will be looking for nesting sites in the upcoming months. You can increase your success in enticing birds to nest in your yard if you are prepared. Houses that have had some time to weather are more likely to be utilized, and those available at the beginning of the season may be used for more than one brood.

We carry a wide variety of houses for many different species, including bluebirds, wood ducks, squirrels and bats. In addition we have nesting kits with materials birds love, and we carry predator guards to prevent nest raids.

There are a number of books that can help you build your own nest boxes or better utilize those you may already have at home.

COMING SOON

In the next few weeks the ruby throated hummingbird will be on its way back to the area (they usually arrive around the first of April). These delightful little birds can be attracted to your yard with artificial feeders and by planting the flowers from which they naturally feed. We stock a number of feeder styles, hummingbird food, and a mix of cultivated flower seeds specifically designed to attract these beautiful birds.

NESTING TIMES FOR SOME COMMON SPECIES

- Purple Martin - will begin arriving at the end of April, nesting soon after.
- Eastern Bluebird - begin nesting in mid-March thru most of breeding range, possibly a little later in this area.
- Wood Duck - returns and nests in February.
- Flicker - beginning to middle of March.
- House Wren - beginning of April thru the middle of July.
- Starling - last week of March to first of July
- Robin - beginning of April thru first of July.

WILDLIFE HABITAT PLANS

Critter Country is now offering landscape design and habitat enhancement for the backyard wildlife enthusiast. Stop in and see our "Wildlife Management Services" staff for details on:

- * LANDCADD (computer aided yard designs)
- * GARDENING WITH WILDLIFE KITS
- * LANDSCAPING FOR WILDLIFE

Our professional staff of wildlife biologists can make your yard a small paradise for wildlife with computer aided landscape graphics.

We carry the National Wildlife Federation's "GARDENING WITH WILDLIFE" kit, with which you can have your yard registered as an official "backyard wildlife habitat."

The Landscaping for Wildlife handbook is a comprehensive reference and "how to" guide for property owners in the midwest who want to manage their property to benefit wildlife.

DID YOU KNOW?

- That during the nesting season many birds require extra calcium? Some species (such as Jays and Crows) may rob other bird's nests to fulfill this need. Mixing crushed chicken eggshells with suet or grease may help curb this habit. Purple Martins will accept plain eggshells - just leave them near their house.
- That some birds have been known to tap on the windows of a house to get the attention of the home-owner to refill empty bird feeders?
- That some species of birds participate in an activity known as "anting," where the birds pick up ants with their bills and rub them over their feathers, or allow ants to swarm over them? It is thought that the formic acid from the ant may help keep the bird pest free.
- That male House Wrens may build up to a dozen nests which he will then show to prospective mates? When the female chooses a nest they form a mating bond. Oftentimes the female tears the chosen nest apart and builds her own nest on the same site.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

"PROJECT FEEDER WATCH"

You can take part in the bird feeder watch survey sponsored by Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology. The idea is to count the kinds and numbers of birds at your feeder one or two days a week between November and April. Observations are recorded on a computerized form, and the data is analyzed by Cornell. Information on feeding patterns, effects of weather and other data are assembled. Participants receive Feeder Watch News, with survey results and information on feeding birds. For more information write:

Project Feeder Watch
Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology
159 Sapsucker Woods Road
Ithica, NY 14850

"BREEDING BIRD SURVEY"

For the serious birder the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service sponsors the Breeding Bird Survey each June. Surveyors are handpicked by regional coordinators and must be familiar with all bird songs in their area. Survey routes are twenty-five miles long and take about five hours to complete. Data is used to determine population trends of North American Birds. For information write to:
