Tree limbs, logs and other debris will be hauled from the six miles of the Middle Rouge coursing through Novi. For information, call the Department of Public Works, 347-0495.

Northville rescue: Volunteers are needed for the Northville and Northville Township components of the annual Rouge Rescue project. This year's project will be held on Saturday, June 2, from 9 a.m. to noon. Both Northville and Northville Township will work on the same project this year.

Volunteers should be at least 16 years of age or older unless accompanied by a parent. They should wear work boots, long sleeved shirts, and long pants, if possible. The clothing protects from poison ivy and scratches. Volunteers should report at 8:30 a.m. to the Northville Community Center at 303 W. Main to be transported to the site, as parking at the site is extremely limited.

Volunteers will assist in breaking up the logjams and removing them so that the flow of the river can cleanse the river by itself. Small hand tools will be available.

A lunch will be provided for the workers at the conclusion of the event. Donor restaurants are welcome again this year.

Volunteers are asked to RSVP to Northville Community Recreation (349-0203) prior to May 30 so that proper preparations for the event may be made.

Kitty Donohoe appears: To celebrate and highlight Michigan Week May 19-26, the Novi Public Library is pleased to present a folk concert featuring singer Kitty Donohoe on Thursday, May 24 at 7 p.m. at the library.

Donohoe will present a family style program of songs, stories, and folklore of Michigan and the Great Lakes region. In her music she is likely to touch upon ship wrecks, Michigan Indians, the logging industry, and other bits of Michigan history. She flavors her program with the music of the guitar, banjo, dulcimer, spoons, and the Indian mouth bow.

The program is geared to everyone, both school-age children and adults. All ages are invited to enjoy this musical program. The concert is free, but space will be limited. For further information, call the Novi Public Library at 349-0720.

Art show: J. Giordano Gallery, 426 S. Main St. in Northville, announces the presentation of a new exhibition entitled "Faces," featuring the work of award-winning Michigan artist Barbara Terry Roy. The exhibit will be displayed until June 2.

The exhibit features a variety of media including oil, oil pastel, pastel and mixed media, used to create portraits and studies of people in Roy's life. With a strong sense of color and design, the works show a remarkable ability to capture not only the likeness of the subjects, but go far to reveal the spirit of the subjects as well.

Grosse Pointe's Bellmor mansion, home of the 1990 Designer Showhouse.

Local firm struts its stuff

By LESLIE PEREIRA
Staff Writer

The owners of La Belle Provence of Northville designed a couple of rooms.

But these were not just any rooms. They were two rooms in Grosse Pointe's Bellmor mansion, the site of the 1990 Designer Showhouse which is on display for thousands to see.

"We were amazingly intimidated," said Leslie Benser Luciani about her initial bid for the chance to design the rooms. "We thought we would just go up and eat the little sandwiches, chalk it up to experience and go back to Northville."

However, to their surprise, Benser Luciani and her partner, Jennifer Tobias-Turner, received the go-ahead to bring their European country designs to life.

"We loved how they spoke in such detail of how they would do it," said the Junior League's Designer Showhouse director, Marilyn Bartley.

Of the 33 rooms in the Bellmor mansion, Bartley said the Flower Room received the most bids from designers.

"We had 12 designers wanting that room," Bartley said.

A major event in the world of interior design, this every-second-year event sponsored by the Junior League of Detroit attracts big name design firms from all over the Metro Detroit area to compete for the privilege of designing a room.

"During the last two weeks, one of us had to be there all the time," said Leslie Benser Luciani. "We were so sick of that show house we could have screamed."

Every two years the owners of the selected site agree to vacate their house for the duration of the show and all of their home furnishings are put into storage.

Currently, the owners of the mammoth Bellmor mansion, Richard and Kiki Herfert are living in a seven-room apartment over the garage.

Once the rooms are completely empty, the designers are allowed to go to work. The rules of the game permit the designers to do what they please within the structural limitations of the room. "It is quite prestigious to be chosen," said Leslie Benser Luciani, co-owner of La Belle Provence. "We don't consider ourselves designers. It was a real compliment to be listed as a design firm in the (Detroit) Free Press."

Rather, Benser Luciani and Tobias-Turner are both lawyers turned entrepreneurs, and now designers.

The multi-talented pair opened La Belle Provence, a downtown shop which specializes in European country-style furniture, pottery, fabric and other accessories imported mainly from France, last November.

Despite their initial feelings of inadequacy, the responses Benser Luciani and Tobias-Turner have received for their month of work on their service bath and flower room designs have called their designs anything but amateurish.

"They did just a beautiful job," said Junior League Director Marilyn Bartley of La Belle Provence's Service Bath. "It has really been a favorite for a lot of people."

And it seems many of the hundreds of people ambling through the 33-room mansion have had similar impressions of La Belle Provence's two small rooms.

"We have already gotten one or two really large projects out of it that have already made it worth it," Benser Luciani said of the hundreds of hours and thousands of dollars she and Tobias-Turner spent on designing and furnishing the rooms.

Their designs relied heavily on the French country themes carried in their store. More specifically, they selected the "European Water Closet" as their theme for the Service Bath. Benser Luciani and Tobias-Turner decided to make a visual pun on the term "water closet" by actually setting an Austrian scrubbed-pine armoire (standing closet) around the toilet.

The designing duo thoroughly researched the background of Bellmor's original owners, the Moran family, and discovered their daughter, Serena, held a great Debutante Ball at the home. This tidbit of history supplied them with their secondary theme for the service bath.

A trompe l'oeil (pronounced trump-loi) seemingly three-dimensional painting on the wall by Northville artist Janisse Larsson revealed Serena Moran's party accessories — her gown, gloves, a bottle of perfume, a notice of the ball — all perfectly crafted to look as if they were actually sitting on a shelf.

Another prominent feature of their Service Bath was the brightly flowered Pierre Deux fabric that covered most of the walls. Although pleased with the final effect created by the fabric, Benser Luciani said it had been an improvisation to cover one of the room's defects — green tiles.

"The tiles really threw us for a loop — I mean they were downright ugly. We wanted to cover them," said Benser Luciani. However, she explained that when designing someone else's house, the improvements had to be only temporary — you could not permanently alter the house.

"I'm not even sure I'll like my bathroom — I mean I love the fabric but I

Habitat protection up for review

Planners seek protection for wildlife, too

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

In an attempt to protect Novi wildlife habitats, a special subcommittee will look at mortgaging holes in the city's woodlands ordinance or creating a separate wildlife habitat-protection regulation.

The subcommittee will be comprised of three members of the Novi Planning Commission. The idea behind their second look is to ensure that local mandates are preserving wildlife and not just trees.

"The problem with our woodlands ordinance is that we haven't been looking at trees in terms of quality, instead we have dealt with them as if they are merchandise — like they are lumber," said planning commissioner Ernest Aruffo.

If Novi adopted a wildlife protection ordinance, it would be the first of its kind in the state. The city is only one of two communities exploring a wildlife protection ordinance, the other being West Bloomfield, according to Planning Chairperson Charles Kureth.

Kevin Clark of Wildlife Management Service said that woodland ordinances, which typically deal in numbers, help retain wildlife areas but don't ensure their continuance.

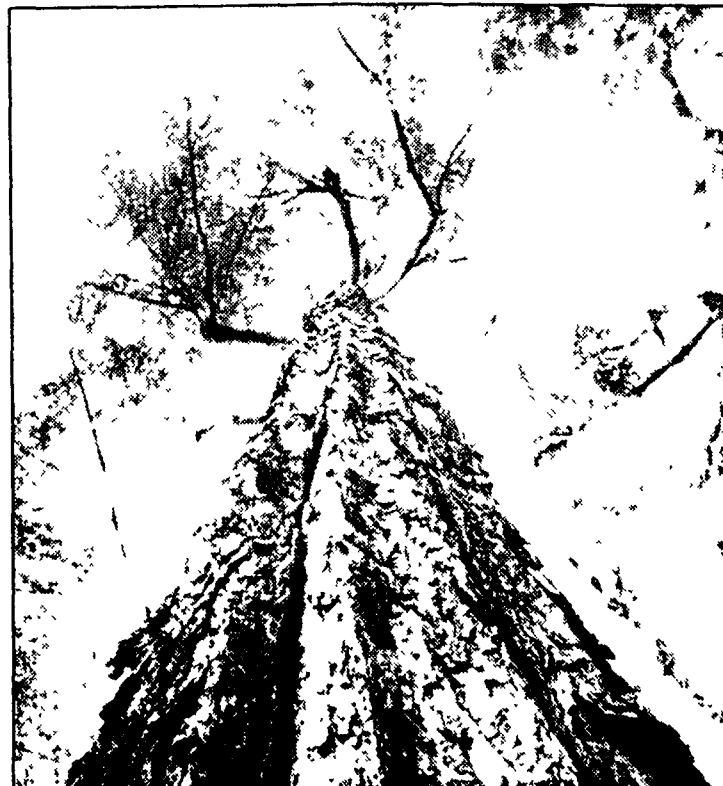

"Just because you are saving wooded areas doesn't mean you're saving wildlife," he said.

Clark said it is imperative that local woodland and wetland ordinances include some type of rating scale which vehemently protects high quality areas but allows developers to encroach somewhat on lower rated areas.

"It is possible to cut down low-quality trees or disturb polluted wetlands without disturbing wildlife," he said.

"You have people who are pro-development, you have people that are anti-development, but what people don't realize is that man-made changes don't have to be disruptive," Clark continued.

"Some protected-by-state-guidelines wetlands, for example, are so polluted that they don't support wildlife," he explained. "But other smaller areas of high quality go unprotected."

MONDAY EDUCATION

Superintendent gets straight As at school board

By MAUREEN NASZRADI
Staff Writer

A "banner" 1989-90 year in the Northville School District translated into a rave review for Superintendent George Bell.

The Board of Education awarded Bell all "excellent" ratings on his performance as chief executive of the board, as superintendent of schools and in achievement of goals for the school year.

The school board conducted the annual evaluation at a meeting Wednesday, open to the public at the superintendent's request. At their meeting tonight, board members are expected to ask the personnel subcommittee to meet with Bell about updating his three-year contract, which currently extends through 1992.

Bell, who came to the district in 1982, said Friday he was pleased with the board's consensus judgment of his performance as "excellent."

"The evaluation reflects the importance of good communication with the board," Bell said. "We have a very good communication line."

"That is the key component in the successful continuance of the kind of community support that we enjoy," he added.

The board called community relations one of Bell's strengths, adding that he is well-respected and very visible in the community.

"This has been a banner year for the schools and George and his team deserve much of the credit. I'm very proud when I talk about what we have done," said Trustee James Petrie, who submitted a written evaluation. Trustee Don Klokkenge also could not attend the meeting and submitted written remarks.

Board President Glenna Davis; Robert McMahon, vice president and chairperson of the personnel subcommittee; Carol Rahimi, secretary; Joseph Dunkerley Jr., treasurer; and Trustee Jean Hansen concurred that the 1989-90 school year has been very productive, due largely to Bell overseeing adherence to the district's Strategic Plan.

Board members cited many examples of progress under Bell's direction during the school year, including passage of the bond issue, completion of a plan to reopen Cooke as a middle school and the successful formation of committees in each building to recommend program improvements.

The board members also praised Bell for placing student safety high as a priority, for his financial responsibility and for his careful review before suggesting the hire of Barton/Malow.

Application advice for gifted students

My daughter had a dream of attending a certain major university in the state and was rejected. She was rejected because her overall grade point average was not high enough. We were told she just missed the cutoff point. She wanted to go into journalism at that university. Her high school grades in journalism, English and related courses are excellent. She didn't do as well in math. We talked to a university admission counselor by phone, but it didn't do any good.

She has been accepted at another college but it wasn't her first choice. What else could we have done? Why do colleges keep students from enrolling when they have outstanding grades in their interest area by using grades in an area they will never use for their future occupation?

The university you are referring to always has an overabundance of applications and can enroll an entire freshman class with 3.8 grade point averages or better if they so desire.

In your situation, your daughter had a 3.9 grade point average in English, journalism and social studies—the verbal comprehension courses. Her required math courses in high school showed a grade point average of 3.2. Not bad considering she took the more challenging math courses competing against future engineers and the like.

However, when we average her language arts/journalism area grade point average (3.9) with the math grade point average (3.2), it rounds out to about 3.55.

Compounding the issue were her college entrance SAT scores showing the same pattern, extremely high in the verbal comprehension area, but only very good in math.

Your daughter never is going to be an engineer, doesn't want to be a math major, yet her 3.2 in math screened her out from consideration. She wants to be a journalist, has a 3.9 GPA in journalism and related courses, has won numerous writing awards in high school and in university contests but doesn't fit the mold. Why?

It is easier to use the overall GPA and SAT results than to break these results down and review the results in relation to the student strength area and goal in life. It also is politically safer to screen out students by using an overall GPA and SAT score because of the huge number of applicants seeking admission.

Pragmatically, this particular university needs to demonstrate high entrance standards for government and private foundation grant purposes. And "changing long-standing universities' procedures is harder than moving a graveyard"—Henry Bradgon, 1917.

Your mistake is typical of parents who don't understand the system. Your daughter sent in her application without previous ground work. What she should have done and what others can learn from your experience follows.

She should have met with her high school journalism teacher and language arts department head, both of whom say your daughter is a "gifted and creative" journalism student. Then she should have set up an appointment with the powers that be in the journalism department and the school newspaper division at the university.

Hopefully, her high school journalism teacher, the department head and/or counselor would have gone to that meeting with your daughter.

Don't give up. Tell your daughter to have her best year in journalism next year. Consider this advice and then re-apply as a transfer student.

Campaigners assured open polls in future

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

A political group denied access to a township polling site May 1 has been assured by township officials that all area polls will be open to campaigning in future elections.

Township Attorney Ernest Essad determined the King's Mill Cooperative wrongly restricted members of Citizens for a Better Northville from passing out anti-Haller library fliers at their clubhouse, which serves as the township's Precinct 5 polling place.

The King's Mill polling site is located on private property at 18120 Jamestown.

In a letter to township Clerk Tom Cook, Essad wrote that the township should seek assurances from King's Mill that the polling place remain open to persons passing out campaign literature on election dates.

"As elections are taking place on the premises and persons have the right to campaign outside the polling place, we believe that King's Mill does not have the right to bar individuals who are disseminating information relative to the election so long as those individuals act within the bounds of the law," he wrote.

"... I believe that it would be appropriate for the township to seek assurances from King's Mill that people would be allowed to disseminate information, or in the alternative, move the polling place," he added.

Questions over King's Mill's ability to keep campaigners off its property arose after Citizens for a Better Northville member Robert Bernard was barred from handing out literature opposing the Haller library plan at Precinct 5.

Bernard said he had asked King's Mill officials about the possibility of passing out campaign fliers prior to the May 1 library vote. Officials there told him that no campaigning would be allowed on private property.

But Bernard discovered that election day campaigning did occur at King's Mill.

"I drove by election morning and people were soliciting for the yes vote," he said. "I went into the (King's Mill) office and a woman said 'You're Bob Bernard, aren't you? You're not supposed to be out there.'"

Bernard said he contacted federal, state, county and township elections offices for information about polls on private property. None of the officials he talked to would state that private property polling sites were open to election campaigners.

Bernard then spoke with attorneys and pressed township officials to "either open up the grounds to campaigning or move the site from King's Mill property."

Township Deputy Clerk Eunice Switzler said Bernard contacted the clerk's office days before the election to question the status of the King's Mill site.

"This issue had never come up before," she said. "I called Wayne County (elections department) and they said it was private property."

Switzler said the county had no provisions for campaigning on private property.

"The only thing at that time I could do was to support King's Mill, although the clerk's office was not confident about that position," she said.

Switzler said she notified the state elections bureau and the township attorney about the issue and asked them for opinions by the township board's May 10 meeting.

The state had not responded by May 18, Switzler said, but she said the township would adhere to Essad's decision.

"If they do not agree to open it up to election day campaigning, we will have to notify over 700 voters of a change in polling places," she said.

King's Mill Board of Directors reportedly will meet this evening (May 21) to discuss the campaigning issue. Clarice Wakefield, manager of King's Mill Cooperative Clubhouse and Office, would not comment on the matter Friday.

King's Mill voters approved the Haller library plan by a 2-1 margin. The library proposal was defeated by the same figure in the final election tally.

Bernard said Friday that the King's Mill issue was "not a personal vendetta." He said he hopes a settlement will be reached soon, a feeling echoed by Switzler.

"We hope this will be a resolved issue very early on," she said.

November campaign heats up

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

In Northville, longtime politicians face opposition from several political newcomers for the Nov. 6 elections.

R. Robert Geake (R-Northville), serving his fourth Senate term for the 6th District seat, faces a Democratic opponent in his bid for a fifth term. Geake is assistant majority floor leader, co-vice chair of the Appropriations Committee and majority vice chair of the Human Resources and Senior Citizens committees.

Running against Geake is attorney Patrick McDonald (D-Livonia). District 6 includes Northville, Plymouth, Canton, Livonia and Redford.

Gerald H. Law (R-Plymouth) faces opponents from both political parties in his quest for a fifth House term for the 36th District seat. Law is minority vice chair of the State Affairs committee and a member of the Insurance and Public Health committees.

Running against Law are attorney Dennis F. Shrewsbury (D-Plymouth) and Kathleen Keen-

McCarthy (R-Plymouth). Keen-McCarthy, who is new to politics, is associate administrator for ambulatory care at Oakwood Hospital in Canton.

District 36 includes Northville, Plymouth and part of Canton.

In an uncontested race at the 36th District Court, incumbent Judge John E. McDonald of Northville is running for a second six-year term. The court handles cases from Northville, Plymouth and Canton.

The filing deadline for candidates was Tuesday, May 15.

Political choices for Novi voters

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Voters in the Oakland county portion of Northville will have several political options at the polls Nov. 6, as numerous newcomers hope to unseat incumbents throughout the state.

One Novi Democrat, Robert E. Taub, 38, hopes to knock Rep. Willis Bullard from his 60th District throne, a seat he has held for eight years.

Taub, a Detroit bankruptcy attorney and active member of the Michigan Bar Association, says it is time for "new blood."

When asked about his chances in a Republican-dominated area, he replied, "I hope enough local homeowners are willing to put someone new in office, someone who shares their concerns."

"I think that the nature of elected offices is to get someone new every once in a while," he said. "Someone with new ideas, a new voice and new ears."

Taub, a five-year Novi resident, was actively recruited by the Democratic Party.

"The party asked me to run because I am an involved Democrat," he said. "I feel that Gov. (James) Blanchard will be re-elected and my political philosophies are in sync."

Taub holds an undergraduate and law degree from the University of Michigan.

Although a political newcomer, Taub said he feels in tune with area concerns.

"I know this is a Republican District but I am a moderate Democrat who, as a homeowner, believes in keeping property taxes down," he said.

Taub is also a self-proclaimed advocate of tighter environmental regulation and stiffer drug laws.

If elected, Taub said he would act as a political sounding board for his constituents and act on their concerns.

"I'm willing to listen to what constituents have to say... I'd be there to represent the people, not to be a czar," he commented.

The 60th District includes the cities of Northville, Novi and Milford as well as the townships of Lyon, Highland, Holly, Rose and Groveland.

Four Republican senatorial candidates will duke it out in the August primary for the chance to knock Democratic incumbent Jack Faxon out of the 15th district, which serves Novi, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Ferndale, Huntington Woods and Southfield as well as a portion of Northville city.

Twenty-seven year Northville resident Alfred W. (Bud) Smith Jr., 62, will be one of the dark horses trying to unseat the entrenched 26-year legislative veteran.

Smith is a graduate of New York University and holds two master's degrees from the University of Michigan, one in engineering and the other in business.

Although Smith's political resume may be short, he says he's not short on ideas.

"There are a number of areas I feel strongly about and that is why I decided to run," he said.

Tax relief for seniors and veterans as well as mandatory drug testing for political candidates and office holders head his list of goals.

Other ideas include having local legislators act as drug czars for their districts and spearhead anti-drug efforts and establishing a local lobbying office where local citizens can voice opinions on rotating issues.

Smith, who ran unsuccessfully in the 1970 state senate race, supports eliminating war chests for candidates stepping out of office and supports returning these political coffers to the district or political party.

He also advocates the death penalty for murderers and drug dealers as well as mandatory state-wide recycling.

Other Republican bidders include Denise Richman Alexander, a Southfield council member, and Farmington Hills council member Ben Marks and Terry Sever.

Alexander, a practicing attorney who has lived in Southfield 12½ of the last 16 years, was elected to that city's council in November after serving on its planning commission.

Pet issues include Southfield's viability, maintaining a dialogue with the schools, property tax reform, transportation issues, crime prevention, environmental regulation and funding for drug programs.

Marks, a local developer who served the past six years on the Farmington Hills City Council, is a former mayor and planning commission member. However, his political platform was unknown at presstime.

Sever, a five-year Farmington Hills council veteran and former mayor, stands for tougher controls on government spending, stiffer sentences for first- and second-time criminal offenders, and reducing the availability of alcohol to minors.

The incumbent, Faxon, is a strong pro-choice proponent and advocate of the arts. The senator, who was elected to his 15th District post in 1970, after spending six years in the house, is also vocal on property tax issues.

The race for county commissioner in the 24th District, which includes Novi, South Lyon, Lyon Township and the Oakland county portion of Northville, will also heat up this summer with South Lyon Democrat Jeffrey Potter battling the Republican primary survivor — a race in which Novi's Kay Schmid will face Lyon Township's Micheal Teagan.

Kureth, who also works as an environmental engineer agreed. "Intruding on woodlands is not necessarily bad as long as major portions remain intact and the more quality areas are preserved," he commented.

Clark stressed the idea of maintaining areas of diverse animal populations which depend on each other to survive.

"The trend should be not to look at endangered species but instead to look at the entire picture and maintain complete ecological systems," he said. "I think it is important to judge woodlands case by case and to have a master plan of critical woodland areas throughout the area.

"Obviously it is better to retain as many natural areas as possible but there has to be some give and take with developers that is why some type of rating system is important."

Several commissioners questioned the legality of rating woodlands on an individual basis. West Bloomfield currently has a rating system in place and is plagued with developer problems.

"There is always legal implications with broad concepts," commissioner

Kathleen McLallen commented. "The question is how to deal with developers who say, 'I meet the zoning requirements, so tough luck.'"

Kureth suggested working with developers by offering incentives to comply with any drafted guidelines such as tax breaks, density options or land donations.

The commission formed a three member committee of Kureth, Kathleen McLallen and Tom O'Branovic to look at the practicality of wildlife habitat protection and the best means of securing that protection.

don't know if I would want fabric three-quarters of the way up the wall in my home. It's not practical," said Benser Luciani.

And interestingly, tiles also became a bit of a nuisance in The Flower Room. But this time it was because they wanted them there.

"It took me like all day to do this," said Benser Luciani. "I had to wash every one by hand and place them. There were about 200."

The floor of the Flower Room they covered with terra cotta tiles and pieces of dried flowers strategically placed on the floor to give it an authentic freshly-used look.

Their chosen theme for the Flower

Room was "Summer Garden," and the multitude of Glimper Falcene's "Jardin d'ete" pottery filling the shelves and counters continued with that theme.

"Jennifer and I have never studied design but we know a lot about French furniture and accessories," Benser Luciani said.

But, the enthusiasm with which Benser Luciani spoke to each person who stopped by their rooms on the house-touring trail together with the intense thought behind every detail — the closet around the toilet, the fresh peonies flowers on the window sill — seemed to more than make up for any lack of designing experience she has.

Michigan lags in retail salaries

Michigan is a nice place to live, but you might not want to work in retail here.

Wages and salaries for Michigan retail employees—from the top dog in the board room to the lowliest stock boy—are generally lower than in other parts of the country, according to retail specialist Joseph Spinali of Roth Young in Southfield.

According to the Roth Young 1990 wage-and-salary review for retail placement, the state's retail merchandisers, personnel directors and advertising/sales promotion staff wages tend to fall on the low end of the scale. Corporate headquarters, store and department employee wages are also below the national average.

"I would say we fall in the low-middle to the upper end of the low salary-and-wage scale," Spinali said.

Only two segments of the retail market, according to the Roth Young study—finance/electronic data processing and human resource employees—approach the national average, he said.

Spinali said he isn't sure why treasurers, controllers and computer systems managers are better paid than their other retail counterparts. Human resource managers fare better because of the abundance of unions and strict worker safety laws in Michigan, he said.

Which isn't to say the area doesn't have benefits that outweigh pay, Spinali said. "But from a strict wage-and-salary view, this area (pays) lower than the national average."

Richard Valade, partner-in-charge of the Arthur Andersen & Co. retail practice, said lower wages and salaries are primarily driven by this area's lower cost of living.

"I would have to agree (salaries and wages) are lower than either coast, but whether it's lower than any areas in the middle I don't think can be said," Valade said.

To attract employees, retailers on the east and west coasts must pay workers enough so they can enjoy a certain standard of living, Valade said.

Samuel Skeeghan, president of the Detroit-area office of Roth Young, said the lower wages are historically supported.

Prior to the purchase of Hudson's by the Dayton Hudson Corp., southeast Michigan had a significant retail corporate center. After the sale, the higher paid corporate employees—and those being groomed for those jobs—were moved to Minneapolis.

Hudson's strong presence prior to the move, prevented other retailers from entering the southeast Michigan market, Skeeghan added.

The only remaining local corporate headquarters, the K mart Corp., has traditionally paid lower wages and salaries, Skeeghan said, with the exception being merchandise buyers who are generally well-compensated.

Skeeghan said employees in and near corporate centers such as New York, Chicago and Los Angeles tend to be higher paid than employees in other markets.

In addition to historical reasons, southeast Michigan salaries are lower because of a large work force, Spinali said. "There is a very high turnover in retail help at all levels, but there's always someone willing to take the job."

Adding to the problem of the larger work force is that for the past decade retailers have been trimming staff to do more with fewer employees, Spinali said.

Arthur Andersen's Valade, however, said the work pool is beginning to shrink. "That will undoubtedly drive wages up."

Within the past several years, employers have increased entry-level compensation above the minimum wage to attract employees, he said.

"As that goes up, it's bound to impact the jobs with higher responsibility," he said. Whether Michigan wages will rise to levels seen on the east and west coasts is uncertain, Valade added.

Roth Young's Skeeghan said several factors offset the area's lower wages. For example, the wage-and-salary surveys do not include bonuses, automobile usage or other forms of compensation.

Southeast Michigan has a comparatively low cost of living and a geography that lends itself to mobility, he said. "People don't realize how easy it is to move around in this area. You can work in a city, and drive to the country within an hour."

Coffee makers leap into new age

Say good morning with style

No longer, it seems, are people satisfied with just a decent cup of java. We're in the '90s after all. If we're going to toss down something as unhealthy as a caffeine-laden cup of coffee it had darned well better be special. Right?

So we drink espresso. Or cappuccino.

Or at the very least coffee made from freshly-ground gourmet beans. And we process this gourmet selection in high-tech coffee makers that do everything from ground the beans to brew the coffee in a ready-to-carry thermos.

That four-cup hotpot without a switch (to turn it off, you yanked the plug) or even a "dial-a-brew" control may have been good enough to get you through college. But now that you're established you're ready to move up.

The choices are myriad and the prices are, well... who's going to throw $40-per-pound Jamaican Blue Mountain blend into a $15 coffee pot, anyway?

At the Sharper Image store in Novi's Twelve Oaks Mall you can drop $169 for a combination coffee/cappuccino/espresso maker from Braun. The sleek Euro-style machine designed by Braun's Thomas Haslach comes in black or white and will brew eight cups said James Bobco, assistant manager.

The cappuccino portion of the machine includes a steamer valve to warm milk, Bobco said.

At Hudson's Oakland Mall in Troy, it's straight coffee most of the customers are after, said Joe Mariani, who works in the Marketplace department.

Just one of the new breed of high-tech coffee makers

"The cappuccino seems to be for special occasions, or for people who drink an awful lot of coffee and want something different," Mariani said.

The store's "bread and butter" coffee maker these days is a Krups

12-cup model with timer, he said. For $99.95 you get to stay in bed a few extra minutes each morning while the machine brews the stuff by itself (provided, of course, that you put the grounds and water in the night

Krups Thermal Aroma model is the one preferred by James Wertheimer, who owns the Coffee Beanery Ltd. franchise at Westland Center.

But Wertheimer said the machine—which was introduced last year and brews coffee directly into a transportable insulated carafe—hasn't been a big hit with customers. He's currently discounting it 15 percent from its $89.95 introductory price.

"What happens (with a non-insulated carafe) is that the coffee sits on the burner and begins to burn," he said. "But I guess people really like to see the coffee being brewed and you can't do that with this one."

The store also stocks a mill-and-brew machine by Melita that grinds the beans and then brews them. That one goes for $174.99.

Even the venerable and formerly low-tech Mr. Coffee has gone upscale.

The newest Mr. Coffee model, introduced in March, includes a microchip and high-powered heating element that will brew 10 cups up to 35 percent faster than previous models.

The Expert, as it's called, allows the user to constantly control the coffee temperature and features a pause-and-serve valve so you can pour a cup before the brewing cycle is complete.

The $79.99 (suggested retail price) machine also uses an environmentally friendly filter made from chlorine-free paper. The production technique requires half the number of trees to turn out the same number of filters as previous models, the maker said.

The only thing they haven't gotten rid of is Mr. Coffee himself, Joe DiMaggio. Thank goodness.

Alternative grains can make fiber fun

Are you trying to add more fiber to your diet and you're bored with bran and brown rice?

There are numerous other good grains that can take out the boredom. These grains can add taste, texture and more nutrition to meals. Besides whole grains, other good sources of fiber are fruits and vegetables.

Whole grains are not refined or only minimally processed so are nutritionally superior. They are virtually fat-free and low in calories. Whole grains retain more protein, fiber and trace minerals such as iron. By increasing your fiber, you gain a wide variety of health benefits. Fiber helps control weight, fight cancer, lower serum cholesterol, lower blood sugar and acts as a laxative. Add fiber to the diet gradually and drink plenty of fluids so the additional fiber has something to absorb.

Amaranth grains date back almost 8,000 years. Cook amaranth seeds for pilaf or hot cereal or pop them like corn for snack. They have more protein than wheat and are rich in amino acids. Use amaranth flour to make bread, biscuits, cakes and pancakes. To use for a yeast bread, combine with wheat flour because it is deficient in gluten.

Barley is another grain that has been around for thousands of years but still is unfamiliar to modern cooking. There is whole-hulled barley and pearled barley. The whole-hulled barley also can be sprouted and added to salads or ground into flour to make a Norwegian flat loaf. Pearl barley is less nutritious than whole-hulled, but still a good source of soluble fiber. Add barley to soups, salads and casseroles.

Kasha is roasted buckwheat that is dark in color with a strong nutty flavor. It can be used for stuffings, pilafs and soups as it complements meats of pork, beef, liver and lamb. The unroasted buckwheat is light and delicately flavored. Use it as a side dish for veal or fish; add to soups, soufflés or vegetable, or grind into flour. Buckwheat flour is used in traditional Russian blinis.

Millet is nutritious for you and the birds. Millet has more protein than rice, sorghum, corn or oats. Use whole-hulled millet as an alternative to rice in casseroles, ground meat dishes, salads and stuffings. Puffed millet is generally sold as a breakfast cereal but can be used to add texture and lightness to pudding and breads.

We are all familiar with old-fashioned rolled oats or the quick-cooking rolled oats, but have you tried oat groats? Oat groats are whole kernels of oats and, unlike most other grains, are not refined so they retain most of their nutrients regardless of the form. Oat groats are usually cooked as a hot cereal or as a base for salad and stuffings or used for sprouting.

Quinoa is an ancient grain that is higher in iron than any other grain. It is a small pale yellow seed with a light fluffy texture and squash-like flavor. One nice thing is that it cooks in about 15 minutes compared to a longer time for most of the other grains.

Wheat berries, cracked wheat, bulgur, couscous and wheat germ are probably more familiar sounding. Bulgur is dried wheat that has been cracked and is used to make tabbouleh. Couscous is finely cracked granules of wheat that have been steamed and dried. It is easy to prepare and substitutes for rice.

For more flavor, cook grains in wine or vegetable, meat or poultry stock, rather than water. When making some of the grains that need to cook longer, make a double batch and freeze for quick additions to soups, stews, casseroles and stuffings.

When making whole-grain yeast breads, blend buckwheat, barley, oat or triticale (which is a combination of wheat and rye) flours with all-purpose flour called for in a recipe. Keep whole grains tightly covered in a cool, dry place for up to five months. For longer storage, refrigerate or freeze.

These grains are not new. Most have been around for centuries, and are just now finding their way to the supermarket. Our interest in adding fiber to the diet, because of the health benefits, has renewed and aroused our curiosity about different kinds of grains. Try one, you may be pleasantly surprised how good it is.

Souverain proves big isn't always bad

If you've been interested in wine for a long time, the name Souverain is familiar. If you're a collector, and you have any 1973 Souverain Cabernet Sauvignon in your wine cellar, you're in for a treat when you open it.

Since 1986, however, there's a new Souverain—Chateau Souverain in Sonoma's Alexander Valley.

Let's take a moment to capsuleize some 45 years of California wine history with relation to Souverain because it is significant.

In 1943, the late Lee Stewart, an Armour & Co. executive, decided to retire to gentleman farming. After only one year at his Howell Mountain location, with its superb views of the Napa Valley, he caught the wine bug and Souverain winery was born.

In 1970, when Stewart retired a second time, he sold the winery to a group of investors who, in turn, sold a majority interest to the Pillsbury Co. (of Doughboy fame).

In 1972, the company built a larger winery near Rutherford and, in 1973, expanded to an additional facility in Sonoma County. By 1976, Pillsbury realized it was over its head in the wine biz and sold the Sonoma property to a group of North Coast grape growers, who ran it as a limited partnership until it was sold in 1986 to Wine World Inc. (Nestle's U.S. wine company which also owns Beringer Vineyards, Maison Deutz, Meridian and Napa Ridge).

Today, Stewart's original property on Howell Mountain is home to Burgess Cellars, the Rutherford Souverain project is now Rutherford Hill Winery and Sonoma Souverain is Chateau Souverain with some of the best values on the wine market currently.

If you're a wine consumer with corporate uneasiness, believing that big is bad, we'd like to introduce you to the quality, value-priced wines from Chateau Souverain.

After the purchase, Wine World Inc. pumped $2.5 million into Chateau Souverain for new equipment and hired Tom Peterson as the winemaker to use it.

Currently, the 100,000-case production comes from 108 acres of estate vineyards and 25 contracted growers. Peterson works closely with Chateau Souverain's vineyard manager seeking out the finest grapes from seven of the 11 appellations of Sonoma County to focus on production of chardonnay, sauvignon blanc, cabernet sauvignon, merlot and zinfandel.

A choice of grapes from multiple appellations offers a winemaker a palette of aroma and flavor nuances to enhance his craft. Peterson stylizes the wine using all the blending tools of his trade, but he contends, "I don't take the blacksmith approach to winemaking. I want the fruit to show in the wine. I don't attempt to pound it into something that it isn't."

Peterson's attitudes were showcased in a recent tasting of current and upcoming releases from Chateau Souverain.

The following wines are currently available. We've tasted the upcoming releases also, and they are consistent with the wines currently available. They will, naturally, taste younger (because they are) and have some slight vintage variation.

1987 Chateau Souverain, Private Reserve Chardonnay ($14) has a multitude of stylish, barrel accents over gentle, delicate fruit components in the nose and on the palate. The Carneros fruit origins show through. It's full-bodied with a lingering finish.

"Chardonnay produces wines which are more consistent across viticultural areas," Peterson says. "It excels in very cool coastal areas like Carneros, where it develops a ripe, lemony opulence. In the Alexander Valley and Chalk Hill regions of Sonoma County, chardonnay produces substantial wines of excellent fruit, acidity and structure."

The 1988 Chardonnay ($8.50) makes a good comparison between the style of a regular release and a reserve-style wine.

The 1987 Chateau Souverain Merlot ($14) showcases generous varietal fruit with a gentle herbal note, hints of roast coffee and toasty oak. The palate is well-structured with balanced fruit, acid and oak. The gentle herbal quality carries through from start to finish. The grapes for this wine come from both Alexander Valley and Knights Valley.

The 1986 Chateau Souverain Cabernet Sauvignon ($10) shows blackberry fruit, with subtle, delicate touches of vanilla and sweet oak. It's tight, lean and structured with integrated fruit, oak and tannin. A complex and generous finish bodes well for aging.

The most captivating wine to date from Chateau Souverain is the 1987 Private Reserve Cabernet Sauvignon. It's scheduled for release in January 1991 and, like a special event, deserves a spot on your advanced-planning calendar. Only 1,500 cases were produced for full U.S. distribution.

Blended with 12-percent cabernet franc, it's simultaneously structured and fleshy after only five months in the bottle. Sporting blackberry and cassis aromas and generous intense fruit, this wine is sure to win rave reviews upon release. Pricing for this wine has not been set yet, but given the pricing policy of this brand in the past, it's sure to be a bargain in relation to the quality.

Do not disturb

A local firm helped save a little bit of wildlife recently. Workers helping to build a new strip mall at the corner of Grand River Avenue and Old US-23 in Brighton discovered that someone was living on the construction site — a colorful kildeer bird. To make sure the nest wasn't disturbed, the crew erected a safe zone. Above left, Carl Sutherland — who works for Brick Faced Concrete in Novi — puts the finishing touches on the barrier. Left, the adult bird fans its feathers. At top, the eggs that all the fuss was over.

Recognize America's Living Landmarks

America's Living Landmarks.
Their preservation is every American's concern.

From the towering 275-foot Giant Sequoia in California's Sequoia National Park to the relatively diminutive 20-foot Allegheny Plum in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains, America's living landmarks are an invaluable part of our nation's natural heritage.

That's why the American Forestry Association began The National Register of Big Trees in 1940. Today, as then, we encourage citizens across the country to find and recognize the largest tree of each species. With your help and participation, we can locate and protect these champions for future generations while fostering a deeper appreciation for trees and forests everywhere.

For information on how to measure and nominate a Big Tree, write: The National Register of Big Trees, American Forestry Association, P.O. Box 2000, Dept. BT, Washington, DC 20013.

Because this is a syndicated publication prepared in advance by Cotter & Company for distribution by over 6,000 independently owned and operated retail store members, some merchandise illustrated may not be immediately available on demand. However, any item that's unavailable can be entered in full detail by the member store from a regional warehouse. Many items in this circular come unassembled. This store is not responsible for assembling merchandise unless stated. This circular must be prepared months in advance of the actual distribution period. At times, an advertised item may not be available because of sales above anticipated demand or because of circumstances beyond our control; while we try to avoid such situations, we have no control over our manufacturers' delivery problems. This store reserves the right to limit quantities, correct pricing errors and require credit office approval of time payment sales. Prevailing taxes will be added to prices. This catalog is distributed by True Value members who own their own stores and set their own retail prices.
