Divers recover lost car

Divers Thursday recovered a red 1986 Ford Escort from a lake at Blue Heron Pointe subdivision in Northville Township.

The car was pulled from 10 feet of water approximately 50 feet from shore near the northern-most residence off Beck Road.

Sgt. John Sherman of the township police department said the vehicle had been reported stolen from Madison Heights on June 24, 1988.

The pilot of an ultra-light aircraft reportedly sighted the submerged vehicle last August. Sherman said township police were alerted to the car only within the past two weeks.

Sherman and other divers — including John Rapp, Greg Guglielmo and city Fire Inspector Bob Turner — located the vehicle Thursday afternoon.

Assistant Township Fire Chief Rick Rosselle and a wrecker from Phil's 76 in Northville pulled the car from the water at 7 p.m.

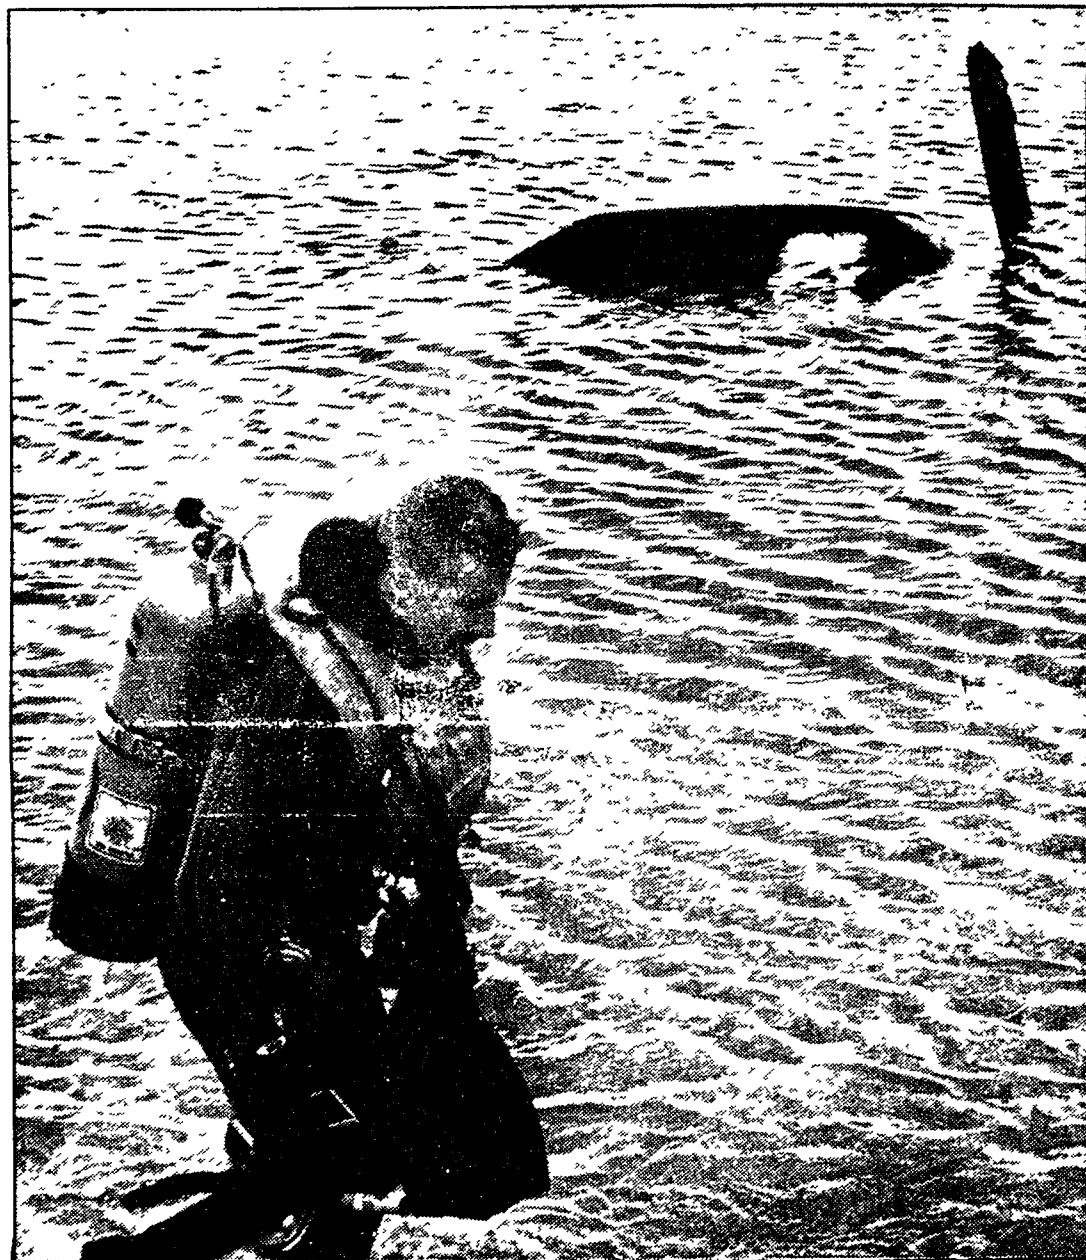

The vehicle had no license plate and police checked computer records for the identification number to determine if the car had been stolen.

Sherman said the vehicle's steering column had not been damaged. Ignition locks are frequently broken when a car is stolen.

"There was no evidence of any tampering with the ignition or steering column," Sherman said.

Hardware storage outlawed

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

The Northville City Board of Zoning Appeals (BZA) turned down hardware store owner Robert Black's request for a variance from the city's outside storage ordinance last Wednesday.

The vote leaves unresolved the matter of Black's lawsuit against the city.

Black had requested the BZA variance after filing a lawsuit over a citation against his store for outside storage of goods. At a hearing on the suit, he was ordered to seek permission from the city before returning to court.

Wednesday's BZA hearing gave several residents the chance to speak out in favor of the Blacks.

Several expressed fear that the city's ongoing legal battles with the store owners might force them to leave town.

"It isn't fair, I don't like as a citizen, as a customer, to see this type of thing happen to Blacks," said Nick Serkanian. "Allow these people to put

June Freydl added that the loss of Black's Hardware would hurt the downtown business district. "I see Northville turning into nothing but baskets and baskets and nonessential things . . . you can't live on trinkets and knick-knacks," she said. Cameras roll for township Searchlights won't sweep the Northville sky Aug. 9.

Fans won't crowd the periphery of township hall hoping to glimpse or fawn over celebrities. No red carpet will be unrolled.

But if all goes according to plan, Aug. 9 will be premiere night for the township Board of Trustees.

Omnicom Cablevision General Manager Lisa Boland last Thursday said the company would provide cameras and recording equipment to broadcast monthly board meetings.

The meetings would be taped and shown at later dates on Omnicom's community access channels.

Board members were not thrilled with the small-screen idea, but said they would not object as long as the township bore no financial responsibility.

"As long as the township is not involved in any type of liability or cost, I don't think it can hurt us," said Supervisor Georgina Goss.

Omnicom will provide a one-camera recording system at no cost. Boland said, but trained volunteers will be required to check out equipment and tape the meetings.

Township resident Jeff Hampton said he would coordinate tapings and train volunteers, according to Hampton associates Bob Bernard and Rick Engelland.

"He said he would be happy to do it," Engelland said.

Bernard later said volunteers would contact Omnicom "within the next two weeks."

"We'll possibly get it set up for next month's (Aug. 9) meeting," Bernard said.

Volunteers will have to sign-out

State IYGC Classic: Three area junior golfers are among nearly 80 players from around the state currently competing in East Lansing for the State Insurance Youth Golf Classic at Forest Akers Golf Course.

Shawn Koch, Chris Lemmon and Jason Sherman — all of Northville — qualified for the state tournament by placing in one of two IYGC local events held recently at Brae Burn Golf Club in Plymouth and Bogle Lake Golf Course in Highland.

Winners of the state finals will have the chance to be paired with a PGA touring professional during the IYGC finals set for Aug. 9-14 in Fort Worth, Tex.

More than 700 Michigan youngsters entered the 21 local tournaments around the state, according to State IYGC Chairman Tom Bingham of Goodard-Talmay in Walled Lake. Nationally, about 10,000 teens played in 800 local and state tournaments organized by Independent Insurance Agents as a community service.

Camp Oakland brightens up kids' summer

By FRANK EICHENLAUB
Staff Writer

Aaaah, summer camp! Remember those days? The hours were filled with hiking, canoeing, swimming, arts and crafts, storytelling and recycling.

Well, five out of six ain't bad. This recycling aberration hails out of Camp Oakland's Adventure Center, and is successful midway through its second session, campers report.

Recycle Woman, wearing a cape and a large R on her chest, greets the children as they arrive to camp and encourages them to conserve the environment in several ways.

By reducing the poundage of food wasted daily as well as flattening emptied cans and boxes, the children are told they can make more room for Recycle Woman to live in.

"I think it was neat," said April Grimm, 9 "but almost 10." Grimm, who lives in Novi, said she learned to smash cans and recycle paper to conserve the environment.

"It's bad enough that we already have a hole in the ozone layer," said Grimm, noting that she no longer uses pump hair spray.

After leaping from a trash can filled with empty cans and paper products, Recycle Woman tells the campers that she is crowded for space because of excessive trash surrounding her. The children also hear talks on weather, insects, wildlife and wild birds of prey from several experts.

"A lot of them have never set foot into a lake. Camp helps them in a positive way."

John Jutierrez, an 11-year-old from Novi said he liked the program "pretty good" and it taught him "to save the Earth."

Another interesting aspect of the camp is that all the children are referred by Oakland County Youth Assistance and are considered economically disadvantaged or youth at risk. There is no charge to the families.

"They come from homes where they don't get to go to camp," said John Carlson, assistant director of summer camp. "A lot of them have never set foot into a lake. Camp helps them in a positive way."

Grimm explained that she is a camping veteran with the Girl Scouts, but enjoys Camp Oakland more.

"I've had a little more fun here — except last night I couldn't get to sleep because I get scared easy," said Grimm, explaining that she was frightened by a storytelling session.

Private donations and Oakland County Youth Assistance help fund Camp Oakland, which is a private, non-profit corporation. "Basically, we're just here to meet their needs and teach them beyond that self esteem and respect for others," Carlson said. "This summer is going awesome."

This marks the second time Jutierrez has attended camp. Although he misses his Nintendo, he indicated that he would like to come to Camp Oakland again.

Grimm said the special nights — Halloween and Valentine's so far — were her favorite experiences.

But she also said, "I didn't really want to go here because my last camping experience wasn't very good. I had to run around in the pouring rain to get to the latrines."

And watch out for the water, Grimm cautioned. "When you come out of the water you might smell like dead fish. But you can wash your clothes and take showers, too."

Aaaah, summer camp!

Placement stats vital when picking a college

My son is going into his senior year in high school in the fall and not sure which college to apply to. He is interested in getting a degree in business. He has received information from several colleges and, of course, they all say good things about their business program. Is there any specific criteria he should use in selecting a college for a degree in business?

Yes. The most crucial information before enrolling into any institution is their placement record.

I am not referring to college catalog generalities such as: "We work closely with major businesses who visit our campus every spring and interview business degree graduates for positions in the business world." That means nothing.

Find out from the college or university the percent of their business graduates who find immediate employment upon graduation. All institutions should have this data.

If they don't then I question their commitment to placing students.

Placement statistics at different institutions, I would guess, could range from 30 to 95 percent.

So much depends on the reputation of the department, be it business or biology, and the energy and commitment an institution extends in placing its own students. The commitment can range from professors making personal phone calls to alumni, to posting job opportunities on a bulletin board, to handing students the want ads section.

Since your son's grade point average is 3.65 he has some good options for college selections. First, he needs to decide between a small liberal arts college or the large university setting.

Small colleges are more expensive but more personal contact is evident because of small teacher/student class-size ratio. Assistant or full professors teach the classes in smaller schools. Furthermore, in large universities, class sizes in lecture courses can have from 150 to 200 students.

The large universities often have inexperienced graduate assistants teaching in the undergraduate courses with the more experienced professors teaching in the graduate school. Personally I see our state's largest universities as graduate schools first and undergraduate schools second — by their own choice.

Two of my children went to a small private liberal arts college in Michigan and were very pleased. My daughter couldn't stand what she called the "high school setting of 1,000 students" and opted for Michigan State University. A lot depends on your son's own personality and preference.

Never take a class, even a required class, because of its unique sounding title and wonderful sounding course descriptions. Investigate who the teacher will be. Your son should talk to as many students in the business area as soon as possible by visiting the campus during his senior year and finding out who the outstanding teachers are — not the easiest, but the most competent.

Let's face it. Anyone who has gone to college knows there are outstanding professors and there are those who would be blown out of a high school classroom by some of our as-yet undisciplined young adults who are not paying college tuition, but are required to attend high school.

Most institutions have what is called early registration. Take advantage of this option and register before the general mass of students show up. You can get the better professors and have more options for developing a good weekly schedule.

Finally, have back-up applications to other colleges or universities. Your son indicated he is leaning toward the University of Michigan. Even with a 3.65 grade point average, he may or may not be accepted.

There are too many unseen factors involved, such as those alumni who make substantial donations and have a son they want enrolled.

I'll never forget the quote from an admission officer at Harvard and he was not an elitist. He said: "We can get an entire class of 4.0 students. Right now we need a tuba player and a hockey goalie who are well-rounded people and good students."

Find out the quality of the business department first. Its placement record, use the early registration to get the finest teachers and have back-up applications at second choice institutions . . . just in case.

Kids take vows along with parents

By LESLIE PEREIRA
Staff Writer

It was a wedding and the pair exchanged vows, but when they left the church they were not married. Rather, it was the husband who exchanged vows with the wife's children and the wife and husband's children who also vowed to accept each other.

In a new twist on the traditional couple-oriented wedding, more and more husbands and wives-to-be entering into second marriages are including their children in the ceremony.

"It is an understanding that some people do not come alone," said Dr. Lawrence Chamberlain, senior pastor at First Presbyterian Church in Northville.

Chamberlain said his church has offered an option for children's participation in second wedding ceremonies for several years, and recently people have begun using it more often. According to Chamberlain, 70-80 percent of the second marriages he performs accept the multi-vow ceremony.

"It is not a mandated part of the ceremony," Chamberlain said. "It is just an option that some couples find helpful."

One couple that found it helpful was Mark and Debbie Wilkewitz, who both recently married for the second time at First Presbyterian.

"The kids were real positive about it," said Debbie, who has two daughters from a previous marriage.

Debbie said she and her then-fiance Mark Wilkewitz, who has a son, approached the minister with the idea that they wanted their children involved in their wedding ceremony.

"He suggested (the vows) and we thought it sounded great," Wilkewitz said. "Being children, if I was in their shoes, I would probably be very fearful and think I was losing my mom."

Wilkewitz said part of the exchange of vows between stepparent and child was to reassure the children they would not be losing one of their parents and that the new member of the family would accept the child as their own.

"It clarifies for the children the role of their parent's new partner," Chamberlain said. He explained the vows helped to affirm the parent's new spouse not as a replacement for the child's other parent, but simply as the parent's new spouse. The child vows to uphold their marriage.

Pastor Richard Henderson of Faith Community Presbyterian Church in Novi said his church has only recently begun marriage ceremonies which included the entire family.

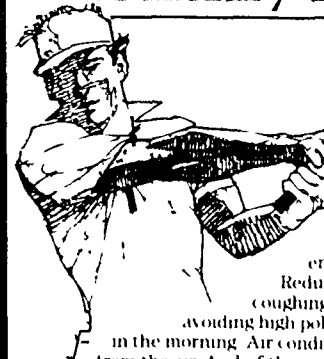

"It is really pretty new," Henderson said. He said although ceremonies are personalized, a 1986 guidebook used by the church first presented that type of ceremony, and it has really only been employed in the last couple of years.

Both Henderson and Chamberlain also believe that giving the child a participatory role in the wedding ceremony can alleviate some of the fears the children may have and provides an opportunity for the new parent to talk with the child about their relationship before the ceremony.

Teen Center career day a hit

By LESLIE PEREIRA
Staff Writer

Last Monday 11-year-old Lauren Van Every of Novi had an opportunity to do something that most people only dream about. She got to look into the future, see herself in one possible career path, and decide whether or not she liked it.

Van Every was one of 25-30 young teenagers taking part in the Novi Teen Center's Career Day. Organizers for the Teen Center program worked in conjunction with local business people to place all interested students out in the field of their choice.

Van Every was spending the morning with pharmacist George McCollum at the Novi Drug Store. So far she has learned a bit about how to locate medicines and "how to use the machines that find everything."

"My friend's mom is a pharmacist and she said it was fun," Van Every said. However, Van Every admits that work in a pharmacy was not her first choice.

"I had police down but I didn't get it," she says.

Cindy Stewart, public information officer for Novi and one of the Teen Center organizers, said that a day with the Novi Police Chief was by far one of the most popular choices. Also among the careers in demand were a physician and the manager of Twelve Oaks Mall.

However, there was no problem placing any of the other teens who wanted to spend a day out in the working world.

"We had more business people interested than kids," said Stewart.

However, since this was the first year the Teen Center held a Career Day, Stewart said the response was good. Intended to be a day of fun as well as learning, the kids were able to find out about careers they had an interest in and they went out to lunch with their business match.

Megan Barton of Novi spent her day at the barber shop watching people get their hair cut and beards trimmed.

"This was my first choice," 12-year-old Barton said. "I like doing hair."

However, while Phyllis Wagner, the owner of Phyllis Barber-Styling Shop in Novi did not think her shop was an ideal choice for this program because Barton could not actually do much without a license. But Barton didn't seem to mind as she lounged in a swiveling chair, her eyes on the shop television.

"At least she can see that it is kind of a relaxed atmosphere," said Wagner.

Classic Cobras to cruise Northville

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

The streets of Northville will be filled with the roar of classic cars Thursday evening, as members of the Shelby American Automobile Club drive through town.

Some two dozen classic Cobras, Mustangs and Panteras are expected to turn out for the event. Members will meet at Daly Drive-In restaurant, 800 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth at 6 p.m. From there, they'll drive up Main Street to Starkweather Road, and take Northville Road into downtown Northville.

Turning left on Center Street, the drivers will proceed up to Eight Mile and Novi roads. The cars will rendezvous at 7:15 p.m. at Guernsey Farms Dairy, 21300 Novi Rd.

The 175-member Dearborn club, established in 1975, is one of two clubs in the state affiliated with the national Shelby American Automobile Club. Jeff Meinicke, show director, summed up the purpose of membership in the club. "Ownership is not essential, enthusiasm is," he said. "That's the motto of the club."

Club members own a wide range of classic muscle cars, including AC Shelby Cobras, Shelby GT 350s and GT 500s, Boss Mustang 302s and 429s, and DeTomaso Panteras.

The group, which recently held a car show at Schoolcraft College, runs two car shows a year in various locations including Dearborn. The club also holds an annual vintage racing event in Waterford Hills.

The club also sponsors fundraising events with Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the American Cancer Society and the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

For more information on the Plymouth / Northville cruise or the club, call Jeff Meinicke at 427-4667.

Pet dies from lawn chemicals

Owners file suit against firm

A Troy couple who contend their dog died after eating grass treated with a poisonous herbicide is suing the Farmington Hills company which serviced their lawn for six years.

Bud and Margaret Clause say a lawsuit is the only way to warn the public about the dangers of lawn chemicals. In their suit filed last week in Oakland County Circuit Court, the Clauses said their lawn service — Custom Greenery Lawn Care Inc. of Farmington Hills — never warned them about the dangers of the chemical 2-4 D, which is one of two ingredients that make up Agent Orange.

"It can't happen to someone else," said Margaret Clause, who explained that she and her husband would never have allowed their neatly manicured lawn to be sprayed with 2-4 D had they known about the possible consequences.

"We lost our pet — our kid. He was our baby," she said of Sport, their 7½-year-old beagle/collie mix who died a slow, painful death May 12 after he ate grass recently treated by Custom Greenery.

A Custom Greenery representative was not available to comment Friday.

According to Dr. Nicholas Szuha, the Rochester Hills veterinarian who treated Sport, he died from "repeated exposure" to 2-4 D. The chemical, used to kill weeds in lawns, is also used by some farmers, he said. Szuha said the 2-4 D solution used by Custom Greenery on the Clause's lawn was "20 times" the strength of what farmers use. The lawn care company told Szuha its 2-4 D concentration was the doctor called to pinpoint the origin of Sport's illness.

Although there are no lab tests that can "prove" a certain lawn was treated with 2-4 D, Sport's specific symptoms — extreme jaundice, extensive nose bleeding and liver damage — indicate 2-4 D was the cause, said Szuha.

In fact, an antidote exists, but Sport was too far gone for it to be of help. Szuha sees pets every year — particularly in the summer — that become ill from lawn chemicals. And humans are just as much at risk, he added.

"This is definitely harmful to humans. Anyone who walks across the grass in their bare feet comes into contact with it," Szuha said. "The chemical is non-soluble, meaning it doesn't break down or wash away. Sixty-six percent of it is still on the ground surface three weeks later." A national lawn service company with an office in Rochester Hills, Chem-Lawn Services Corporation, stopped using 2-4 D three years ago because its usage was linked to cancer.

According to Chem-Lawn public relations manager Deb Strohmer, a study released by the National Cancer Institute found that Kansas Farmers who were exposed to 2-4 D more than 20 times each year have a greater chance of getting non-Hodgkins Lymphoma.

"It raised a lot of ifs, and based on that, and for the safety of our employees, we stopped using it," she said. Strohmer said she could not estimate the percentage of lawn care services which continue to use 2-4 D.

However, an environmental researcher at Wayne State University, Dr. Mary Lou Williams, says there are probably more lawn services who use 2-4 D than not. But because lawn care services aren't government-regulated, "a lot of companies won't tell you what they're using," Williams said. "The state doesn't record what they spray and where they spray it — like California, for instance."

Although lawn products containing 2-4 D can be purchased over the counter in some "restricted" fashions, Williams added, sprayers should still be wary. "Just because the EPA approved it doesn't mean it's safe. They deal in risks, and weigh those against the benefits," she said.

Williams also criticizes lawn care companies with providing inadequate, and sometimes nonexistent, warnings about their products. "The public ought to know. Everyone ought to ask their service exactly what chemicals are being used."

Bloomfield Hills attorney Daniel Devine Jr., who represents the Clauses, claims the warning provided by Custom Greenery "not to cut or water the grass for two hours," was beyond insufficient.

"That chemical stays there until the grass is cut. Then it goes into a landfill or runs off into the ground water supply," he said. "It's just lucky that no human got it — kids will put anything in their mouth."

Meanwhile, the Clauses are being tested for long-term exposure to 2-4 D.

Margaret, a Southfield middle school counselor, and Bud, a semi-retired auto broker, have always "run around barefoot, playing croquet in the yard." Up until now, that is, said Margaret. "It's scary."

"If we had only known. This little guy expected us to take care of him, but we didn't know."

Firms find seatbelts good business

Buckle up, corporate America — car accidents are costing you money.

Safety belt awareness applies to business just as much as it applies to the individual, according to Pat Harrington of the Michigan Coalition for Safety Belt Use located in Pontiac.

"Automobile accidents cost employers $1.9 billion a year," Harrington said. Employee safety belt programs are low cost and can reduce insurance premiums, work loss and retraining, and auto accident costs associated with personal injury.

Lost production from worker absenteeism, wasted supervisor time spent in rescheduling, overtime pay and decreased productivity from a hurried staff trying to make up work for absent employees is also avoided, she said.

The coalition has held seminars throughout the state, inviting small, medium and large corporations to attend. Speakers, including notables like GM chairman-elect Roger Stempel, explained the importance of corporate safety belt programs. Response to the seminars has been good, she said, but the coalition intends to continue making follow-up calls on companies through the summer.

Harrington said risk management and health consulting companies offer predesigned and customized programs for companies that need

"That would make (not wearing seatbelts) a MIOSHA violation as well as a violation of state law."

Jerry Graczyk, VP, Consolidated Risk Management Services

help setting up their own program. A list of such companies can be obtained from the coalition at 674-4661.

Jerry Graczyk, vice president for loss control at Consolidated Risk Management Services in Farmington Hills, said employee safety belt use programs have grown in popularity in recent years in large corporations, but haven't been as prevalent in medium and small companies.

Large corporations have been able to run company programs, but small and medium-size companies haven't, he said.

Changing laws in the state, he continued, will make it a necessity. The Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Administration (MIOSHA) could make seat belt use mandatory for on-job workers as early as next year.

"That would make it a MIOSHA violation as well as a violation of state law," Graczyk said. Companies and employees could be fined for such violations.

Graczyk said employee safety belt programs include four components: the commitment, education, incentive/disincentive and evaluation phases.

In the commitment phase, top management personnel commit to and set overall direction and policies for the program, he said. "Unless the top people get it involved, it's not going to work."

In the education or training phase, programs inform employees and management about the facts. Despite public awareness programs, there is still a need to dispel the numerous myths about safety belts.

"There's always someone with a second cousin that would have burned to death in a car fire," he said. The truth is, people are far safer with a safety belt than without, Graczyk said.

In the incentive phase, employees who show noticeable improvement should be rewarded. "We're not talking about one big reward for one person, but small rewards spread throughout the company."

More people would be encouraged to participate if they thought they had a good chance at a small reward, rather than a slim chance at a large award, he said. "It really does help."

Disincentives, or punishment for on-compliance, are also used. "It could be similar to punishments for other safety violations," he said.

The evaluation or follow-up phase, Graczyk said, would include a survey of program participants or even an observation by a manager in charge of the program. Harrington said. "He could stand in the parking lot before and after the sessions to gauge the results."

"You probably want to do a follow-up every three months or so after a program to see if it is effective in the long run," he said.

Employee safety belt programs haven't been around long enough to quantify results, but early results indicate that 70 percent compliance is a reasonable expectation. "I think it's very reasonable — one of the larger companies have achieved as high as 100 percent."

Area man found guilty in auto thefts

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

A Novi man, convicted on two counts auto theft-related charges in a recent jury trial, is expected to be sentenced in early August.

Ronald Bert Coon, 36, was found guilty on two counts of concealing the identity of a motor vehicle with intent to mislead June 26 in Oakland County Circuit Court after the three-and-a-half day trial. He was found not guilty of a third count.

Coon faces possible four-year jail terms on each conviction. His driver's license will also be suspended for a period of 90 days to two years. Although the date hadn't been announced by press-time, police expect Judge Robert Templin to announce sentencing the first or second week in August.

Coon was convicted of conspiracy to commit burglary in connection with a 1982 Livonia auto theft, according to police.

Coon, who lives on West Lake Drive in Novi, was arrested in April of 1989 by the Novi-based Southwest Oakland County Auto Theft Unit, which has been instrumental in shutting down several chop-house operations.

The investigation leading to Coon's arrest was spearheaded by Det. Ron Roy of the Novi Police Dept.

and assume responsibility for Omnicom equipment, Boland said. The programs would be broadcast sometime Monday through Saturday between 3-10 p.m., she said.

"This is a situation where you should walk before you run," Boland said. "We'll get it going with one cameraman and then go to two."

Trustee James Nowka voiced reservations about the plan.

"I don't know why anybody would want to watch a bunch of politicians on television," he said. "I'm not sure it serves anybody very well."

In fact, I think it will be the community poorly."

Treasurer Betty Lennox agreed with Nowka.

"I'd prefer people came out to the meetings," she said.

But Maria Holmes, Omnicom community affairs and program director said statistics indicate that local meetings are well-received by the public.

"Typically, in a township where meetings are televised, it's quite popular," she said. "These programs are of particular interest to members of the community."

Local man reports assault

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

Northville city police are seeking a warrant for the arrest of a 24-year-old Livonia man suspected of beating a Northville man.

According to city police reports, charges filed by the victim, and the reports of several witnesses, the suspect came to the Center Street house where the Northville man was staying at 7:54 p.m. June 24. The suspect was apparently looking for $350 that the Northville man owed him.

When the complainant said he didn't have the money, the suspect allegedly punched him about a dozen times, kicked him several times when he fell to his knees, and then struck him with a board until it broke.

The complainant was visibly injured after the assault, with a cut on his nose, scrapes on his elbow and a swollen finger. He also complained of extreme pain in his ribs. He added that he never hit the suspect during the assault.

He refused medical attention at the time, saying he would have the injuries checked later.

City police said the Livonia man had called them earlier that day, warning them that he was going to "get" the Northville man so police could arrest him. The suspect added that the police would be called with the complainant's location after he was "tied up."

The suspect told police there were several warrants out for the complainant's arrest.

The suspect himself faces up to 90 days in jail and a $100 fine if charged and convicted of the complainant's assault and battery is considered a misdemeanor charge.

Board denies variance for Black's people of Northville need to have services where they can go and buy goods."

City Council member Paul Folino also spoke up in the Black's defense. "I do think there should be an allowance made to have a display of this type of merchandise outside," he said.

The Downtown Merchants Association expressed their support of the Blacks in a letter to the city last week.

Opponents to the outside storage included City Council member G. Dewey Gardner, who submitted a letter to the BZA signed by eight other residents opposing granting of the variance.

John Bredell, the Blacks' lawyer, argued at Wednesday's hearing that the owners had to store materials outside because of the nature of their business. "If you are going to run a full-service hardware store, you have to necessarily sell goods that you can't keep inside," he said. "You can't keep manure inside, you can't keep bags of dirt inside."

He urged the board to grant the variance, "disregarding the form the Blacks choose to pursue, and the politics of it."

Bredell added the Blacks would be willing to agree to keeping outside storage within the shaded area behind the store, and keeping piles of goods below four feet in height.

"All they want to do is sell hardware," Bredell said. "We're more than willing to work with the city on reasonable rules to do that."

Bredell also argued against the enforcement of the ordinance for aesthetic rather than safety concerns. "Is that a reasonable exercise of police power?" Bredell asked. "I don't think so."

But BZA member Rolland Stapleton disagreed.

"Is it reasonable to say the city can tell merchants they can't display merchandise outdoors," he asked. "It's reasonable," Bredell finally admitted. "What I want you to do is grant them a variance, and allow them to do it anyway."

BZA member Roberto Lopez asked why Black didn't just go back to the city council for permission, like he did last year.

"I don't believe they were ready to make it a permanent situation," Black replied.

When it finally came to a vote, six board members voted against granting the variance. Lopez and alderman Mark Crymmon cast the only "yes" votes.

In explaining his vote, Crymmon said he considered allowing outside storage "the lesser of two evils," when faced with the prospect of losing the store. "I think we have a 50-50 chance of losing the only hardware store in town," he said.

City Manager Steven Walters noted Friday that Black can't appear before the city council for permission for outside storage. "It still be to his interest to reach a voluntary agreement with the city under some terms," Walters said.

The council had granted him permission last year to store bagged goods outside for four months, but denied his request for outside storage of wheeled equipment.

When contacted Thursday, Black said he had not decided whether to go before the city council for a variance or not. He also said he had made no decision on moving his store out of the downtown area.

Checking out independents

Great Scott! buyout may spur sales

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

Owners of independent food markets, trade associations and a consultant in the industry are split on what impact the acquisition of Great Scott! supermarkets by Kroger will have on independents.

Some speculated that a portion of Great Scott! customers, who account for an 8-percent Detroit area market share, could take a closer look at independents, especially if those stores are convenient to the home or workplace.

Others, citing the neighborhood niche carved by many independents, projected little or no gain in their customer base.

Still others suggested that as fewer big players get in the game and competition heats up, independents will have to work hard to keep the customers they now have.

"As long as independents have competitive prices and good service, they may do better," said Jerry McVety, as West Bloomfield consultant in the hospitality industry.

"Some consumers loyal to Great Scott! when the flag goes down, may go somewhere else," he said.

Ed Bullock, store manager at the Shopping Center Market store in Northville, only sees the sale helping independents if Kroger elects to close a Great Scott! store.

"If Kroger takes over those Great Scotts, they have a good name," Bullock said. "It could hurt the independents unless they close them down — unless an independent can pick up some of the Great Scott! stores."

The Northville Shopping Center Market is part of a five-store chain which includes the Food Emporium in Berkley, Bloomfield Hills and Southfield.

"In this area here, it's going to help the independents to some degree," he said. "There isn't (a Great Scott!) around here. A & P and Meijer are the only competition we have."

Bob Coleman owner of Bob's of Canton, and William Welch, an owner of five Hollywood Markets including one in Troy, believe the merger presents opportunities for their businesses.

"They (large chains) can't give the service I do," Coleman said. "Kroger is known for slow checkout. Three things I dwell on — cleanliness, friendliness, quality and price. Quality and price are one."

"The perception was Great Scott! was high (prices), Kroger, too," said Welch. "That should leave room for me."

"I would hope to think that someone left out in the dark. . . would give Hollywood Market a shot," Welch said. "That could conceivably happen."

"Some consumers loyal to Great Scott, when the flag goes down, they may go somewhere else."

—Jerry McVety
Consultant

Jerry Zajdel, owner of Your Better Market in Redford, isn't as optimistic as Coleman or Welch.

"I don't think there will be any change," he said. "They'll stay right there, unless they close the store."

Linda Goble, president of the Michigan Grocers Association, doesn't expect that independents will reap a windfall as a result of the Kroger/Great Scott! marriage.

"I'm not sure a buyout or buyout impacts on smaller stores," she said. "Most independents really create a niche for themselves. You get into different neighborhoods, and retailers are accepted and become part of the community."

Goble sees more competition among the three large remaining chains, A & P/Farmer Jack, Meijer and Kroger/Great Scott!, than between them and the independents. "The industry is very competitive . . . and operates on a 1-percent profit margin," she said.

Ryan Mathews, editor of Grocery Marketing, envisions two possible outcomes with the recent local developments.

"Kroger would absorb Great Scott! units and go through mergers and purge locations. . . if they have two stores close to each other," Mathews said. "Typically independents can do well in those situations with niche marketing."

"The worst-case scenario is Kroger has made a firm commitment to the Detroit market, will keep the majority of stores, open new units and get very aggressive marketing."

Mathews expects Kroger to come out fighting.

"Convenience is a key to independents' survival," said McVety.

Edward Deeb, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, mentioned a couple of other factors.

"Independents are a little more flexible," he said. "Smaller operators usually offer some kind of unique service you can't get at chain stores."

"Independents usually don't have buying power or cash flow. They have to find ways to compete. Usually they compete very well in fresh meats and fresh produce."

"Independents are in an excellent position to compete if they get aggressive themselves," Mathews said. "They have to become more responsive to the market, maybe more specialized merchandising. People are willing to shop if you can provide them access to unique products and services."

Business Briefs

Novi resident, DR. ROBERT W. ELLIS, provost of Lawrence Technological University, has been elected president of the 3,000-member Michigan Society of Professional Engineers (MSPE), during the group's annual meeting May 19.

MSPE is one of the largest state engineering societies in the nation and has 20 local chapters across Michigan. The group is dedicated to fostering professionalism and ethical standards in the engineering community, improving performance, and encouraging public responsibility and service.

One of Ellis' most urgent goals is to seek to reverse a U.S. shortage of engineers. He says it is crucial that more young people, particularly minorities and females, be encouraged to enter the profession.

"Recent studies all conclude that the United States will have between 200,000 and 700,000 unfilled engineering positions in the 1990s," Ellis says. "Michigan, with an economy largely based on manufacturing and technological industries, could be particularly hard hit by this shortage because engineering work precedes subsequent jobs in manufacturing, service, and sales. The shortage will create a ripple effect in the entire economy if we lose more engineering, research and development jobs overseas."

Ellis also sees the nation's aging infrastructure, and need for new transportation, waste management, and environmental solutions as fueling a national demand for more engineers, even when cutbacks in defense industries are taken into account.

Ellis was MSPE's 1987 Engineer of the Year, and he is a Fellow of the Engineering Society of Detroit. Registered as a professional engineer (PE) in Michigan, Florida, and Minnesota, he has published numerous scientific papers in his specialty of manufacturing engineering as well as on engineering education. In 1977 he received the national faculty award from the National University Extension Association.

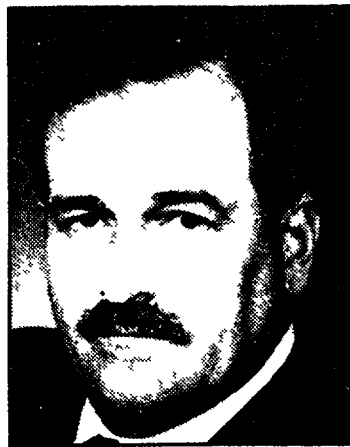

Dean of Lawrence Tech's College of Engineering from 1984 to 1989, Ellis is a former contract consultant with General Dynamics Land Systems Division, and was earlier a senior engineer with the U.S. Army Tank Command, a research fellow with NASA, and a metallurgical engineer with Litton Industries. He has also held several high ranking administrative positions within the Florida state university system and was president of Detroit Institute of Technology.

As provost and chief academic officer at 5,500-student Lawrence Tech, Ellis is responsible for the University's more than 30 undergraduate and graduate degree programs and various student service departments.

He holds three degrees, including the Ph.D., from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and also attended Harvard's Institute for Educational Management.

PBS series explores survival of world's gentlest animals

By Donna Gooch

A National Audubon Society series on PBS this summer travels from the Arctic mountains to the Pacific Ocean detailing the fight for survival of some of the world's gentlest creatures.

The one-hour specials, broadcast Sunday evenings, stress the importance of conserving our natural heritage.

"Sea Turtles: Ancient Nomads," airing Sunday, July 15, is a good prototype of the series. For more than 100 million years, the remarkably instinctual sea turtle has survived—weathering several ice ages and outliving dinosaurs.

Now the animal's existence is being challenged by progress. Through stunning wildlife, underwater and hidden-camera photography, the documentary captures the essence of their fight for survival.

The sea turtle population has a lot to fight, from egg thieves and leather and shell poachers to shrimp nets and environmental pollution. Jane Alexander hosts the program.

Another episode in the series, airing July 29, is "Arctic Refuge: A Vanishing Wilderness," hosted by Meryl Streep.

The show investigates the threat posed by the oil industry's development plans for the pristine coastal plain of Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Looking ahead, don't miss "Crane River" on Aug. 5, hosted by Leonard Nimoy. The spring arrival of the cranes to the Platte River in Nebraska is an annual event that attracts scientists and sightseers from around the world.

Nowhere else is there such a gathering of cranes. About half a million cranes stop and rest on the Platte during their long migration from the south to their nesting grounds in Canada, Alaska and even Siberia.

The program examines why both the Platte River and the cranes are in danger of disappearing.

Cable Comments

By LARK L. SAMOUELIAN
Executive Director,
SW Oakland Cable Comm.

Satisfaction for a job well done is enjoyed by many of the people in community television. Because the people producing the shows live in the communities of programs are shown in, feedback happens as they go about their daily routines. Many folks continue to volunteer their time through television because they are able to reach their entire audience quickly and effectively, and therefore develop a visual relationship. Even people who have never met the performers personally, but see them on television and in the stores shopping or walking down the street, begin to feel as though they know them. They become Community Television Celebrities.

Credibility is another characteristic which these hardworking local television celebrities can claim. Each one is involved in many facets of the show. They know the subject matter inside and out and each may play a different role from one program to another. This enlarges their experience so that each will understand all aspects of producing TV shows and be able to fill in where needed.

Ask a busy person to do a job and they will find the time. Community television participants can be found throughout the Metropolitan area enjoying and working and living each day to the fullest. Their experiences bring an energy to the shows they are in and much new food for thought as they plan additional shows.

We would like to introduce some of our television celebrities to you. If you are also helping on a show or producing one yourself, send me your picture and a list of your credits so that we may introduce you, too, to our television audience.

Chuck Cook, Robert Lichtman & wife Rita Lichtman with Betty Schelling may be seen in and out of the Farmington Hills Studio as they produce programs of social significance. Chuck is currently working on a video workshop refresher to aid fellow graduates who need to brush up a little bit on their technical television skills. Wixom resident Ray Kaczor is co-producing this project. Both the Lichtmans and Betty Schelling have well founded reputations for having dynamic crews and tons of enriching programs which will enhance the lives of all age groups. Betty Schelling and Mel Shulman are a dynamic duo known all over the state for their thoughtful productions.

Maria Holmes and John Martin work for Omnicom in Plymouth. They have covered community events in Northville, Canton and Plymouth and Plymouth Township for years. They also teach residents how to produce television shows, both remote and studio. Are you curious? Next time you see either of them, remember, 'you, too, can do,' and stop and introduce yourself and tell them of your interest.

Jim Courtney of Plymouth is a real estate entrepreneur who is also part owner of the Comedy Castle in Royal Oak. Every few months we get together and host 'Detroit Live' featuring interesting entertainers and business people who frequent the metropolitan area. Jim and I produce out of MetroVision Studios in Farmington Hills. We both are Plymouth residents and began together in Cable Television with Denny Campbell back in 1980, in Plymouth.

For those of you who are interested in television production in Plymouth, Canton & Northville please call 459-7335.

Farmington, Farmington Hills and Novi people interested in getting involved call at SWOCC 473-7266.

'Rescue 911' picked up for fall season

By AMY SCHMIDT

You probably won't ever want to dial 911, but you may want to watch it. Last fall CBS introduced the new series, "Rescue 911." It will return to the network this fall on Tuesday nights. "Rescue 911" is billed as a "reality-based" series which features actual scenes of police, paramedics, firefighters and other specialists risking their lives while making emergency responses to 911 telephone calls.

William Shatner ("Star Trek, T.J. Hooker"), host of the show, says after viewing "fascinating footage" he agreed to host the series. "It seemed like a good show to have my name attached to," he said.

He wasn't wrong. In March of this year, the series was chosen by the American viewing public to receive the People's Choice Award for Favorite New Television Dramatic Series.

"Rescue 911" is produced by the maker of the Oscar and Emmy award-winning documentary "Scared Straight," Arnold Shapiro. Like "Scared Straight," "Rescue 911" is done in a graphic, documentary-like fashion. "Rescue 911" film crews hook up with real-life paramedic, helicopter, and fire-fighting units across the country, accompany them on real emergencies and collect real footage. Footage from news services is used whenever possible. Other incidents are re-enacted. In any case, the result is dramatic. One show featured a girl dialing 911 while her father was being attacked. Another depicted a 14-year-old boy shooting an intruder.

The show has come under fire from critics who say it's too graphic for primetime and that it exploits victims a second-time around. Shapiro disagrees: "People are usually anywhere from happy to honored that somebody is coming into their lives and telling their story. We are profiling heroics. We're a life-affirming series. We're trying to show how both professionals and people who aren't professional — good Samaritans — have stepped into a dangerous situation, put their lives on the line and saved somebody else's life, or participated in a rescue."

Producers of "Rescue 911" attempt to be as sensitive as possible, says Shapiro. "We don't put the victim, if there is a victim, so called, like somebody who might have been a rape victim or a hostage victim, we don't put that person through it. We use an actor." And some subjects, such as rape, are simply off-limits.

The show's advocates also say none of the shows are done without some educational benefit to the public. Telling the stories will help other people who find themselves in similar straits, teaching them when and where they can dial 911, about such things as "med phones" for heart attack victims, and about car restraining seats for children. This isn't to say that parental discretion is not advised. "It's up to each parent to make that determination. Should a 4-year-old watch it? Probably not. Should a 12-year-old watch it? Probably so," commented Shapiro.

Shatner and Shapiro agree the good of the program by far outweighs the bad. Others may wonder if this is entertainment. Says Shatner, "There is a fine line between what is going to hold a viewer and between what is boring, and that's an aspect to a show that seeks to stay on the air."

Army vet Kevin Dobson makes trip to White House

Kevin Dobson, chairman of the Veterans Administration's National Salute to Hospitalized Vets and currently on hiatus from his role on Knots Landing, recently visited the White House with his wife and three children for a ceremony honoring congressional veterans legislation. An Army vet himself, Dobson has visited veterans hospitals across the nation. Kevin and wife Susan were at the White House earlier this year when President Bush invited them into the Oval Office after his inauguration, for which Dobson emceed the Veterans Ball.

In a rare scheduling move, PBS will air the nine-part series The Civil War in primetime on five consecutive nights in September. Painstakingly researched, the series vividly embraces the entire sweep of the war. The 10-hour series includes archival images combined with moving newsreel footage of Civil War veterans, live cinematography of now-quiet battle sites, interviews with eminent historians, and a chorus of first-person voices reading from diaries, letters, speeches and newspapers. David McCullough is the series narrator.

Anthony Perkins, who immortalized the role of the knife-wielding Norman Bates in the 1960 thriller Psycho and its two sequels, has started production at Universal Studios Florida on Psycho IV: The Beginning, a prequel to the original Hitchcock classic for Showtime. In keeping with Hitchcockian tradition, Showtime has shrouded the production with an air of mystery, as extensive measures have been taken to keep the ending a secret. All cast and production crew members have been sworn to secrecy and multiple endings may be shot in order to safeguard the true ending.

Robert Pastorelli, who plays Murphy's quirky housepainter, Eldin

Bernecky, on Murphy Brown, has just opened off-Broadway in Mere Mortals. In the drama, Pastorelli plays one of three construction workers high atop a building-in-progress. He returns to Los Angeles in August for production of the third season of Murphy Brown.

Production has been completed in New Zealand on Which Way Home, a three-hour premiere movie slated to air in November on Turner Network Television. The film, which stars Cybill Shepherd and John Waters, is an action-adventure about one woman's courageous journey with eight young orphans from Thailand to freedom in Australia after the fall of Phnom Penh.

A Palisades Park, N.J. teen-ager has won a special guest role on NBC's popular Saturday morning live-action series, Saved By the Bell. The appearance is part of a grand-prize package that also includes a trip for two to Hollywood where the series is taped. Entries for the contest were taken during a recent national promotion tour by series stars Mark-Paul Goselaar and Tiffani-Amber Thiessen.

LET'S TALK

Close call made Clint Walker take hard look at his life

By Polly Vonetes

Q: I would like to know if Clint Walker of Cheyenne is still around and if so, what is he doing now? I see Maverick in the listings but I have not seen Cheyenne yet. —Ralph Barreto, Tacoma, Wash.

A: Clint Walker was a tough customer offscreen as well as on. He walked off the set of Cheyenne in 1958 in a contract dispute with Warner Bros. In 1959 he returned to the series, but felt he was being typecast. Finally, in 1962, both the series and Clint's contract expired. He left Hollywood, but returned the following year. In 1971, he experienced what he calls his "double miracle." While skiing he fell and one of his ski poles punctured his heart. When he arrived at the hospital, he was pronounced clinically dead. During that time, he believes he had an out-of-body experience, one that has changed his perspective on life. Married since 1974, he and his wife Gigi, built a home on their ranch property in Grass Valley, Calif., where they are involved in raising horses. Recent appearances include public-service TV announcements for the care and feeding of cats.

Q: I have recently become a big fan of Michael Keaton and I would like to know more information about him. How old is he? His birthday? Is he married? Names of some of his movies? —Vivian Ryan, Ft. Myers, Fla.

A: Michael Keaton was born on Sept. 9, 1951, in Pittsburgh, Penn., the youngest of seven children. He began his acting career while at Kent State University in Ohio where he appeared in a number of plays before dropping out and returning to Pittsburgh. Back home, he worked with theater groups, but comedy was what most interested him. Writing his own material, he performed in small comedy houses. He eventually decided to go to New York. While appearing in a club for aspiring comics, David Brenner caught his act and encouraged him to continue with comedy. With this in mind, Keaton headed to Hollywood where he found fame and fortune. Recently divorced from his wife, actress Caroline McWilliams, he is the father of a son, Sean. His films include: Night Shift, Mr. Mom, Johnny Dangerously, Touch And Go, and of course, Batman.
