A single-engine Cessna overturned while taking off from Mettetal Airport Wednesday, July 18, but both passengers escaped unhurt. The accident is the second involving a plane from the Canton airport in three days. Three men were killed Monday when a single-engine plane that had just taken off from the airport was struck by a twin-engine aircraft. Wednesday's accident involved a Cessna 172 which flipped during take-off at 3:35 p.m. The plane apparently ran out of runway, barely clearing Joy Road before overturning just north of the road. The plane's front landing gear was broken off in the accident, and left lying between the plane and Joy Road. Canton pilot Michael Larson, 30, and Mt. Clemens resident David Larson, 33, were uninjured. "They both walked away from the crash," said Plymouth Township Police Sgt. Robert Smith. Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board officials were on the scene of Wednesday's crash within minutes. "They were investigating Monday's and they just walked across the street," Smith said.

Police chief search narrows

Three township police chief candidates were tested last week by a private consulting firm, but a short list of finalists has not been set, a township official said. The three underwent testing for leadership abilities and will face another examination, township Manager Richard Henningsen said. Four other candidates — of seven original finalists — have not been ruled out for the top police position, Henningsen said. The Bartell Group, which provided a study of the township police department in May 1988, is conducting the latest phase of testing. "These three candidates are being tested based upon an oral exam and a written exam they took," Henningsen said. "We're checking these three to see if they meet (township) qualifications." Henningsen identified one of the three in the recent round of testing as Chip Snider, Plymouth Township Deputy Chief of Police. He would not release the names of the other two candidates, saying the men had requested anonymity. Henningsen confirmed that James Petres of Northville and Richard Dimock of Birmingham had not been included in the latest battery of tests.

Petres and Dimock — along with Snider — were among the seven finalists and had agreed to the release of their names. "We have narrowed this down to three, but if they don't test well in the leadership stage, we may open it back to the others," Henningsen said. Henningsen said the township needs a new chief that ranks well in three distinct categories. "The department needs someone with good administrative skills, knows police functions and skills and has public relations capabilities," he said. "We really need someone with excellent leadership abilities."

A written exam on leadership comprised the initial round of tests conducted by Bartell. The second phase will put candidates in field situations to determine how they handle stressful police procedures, Henningsen said. "We want to see how they would respond to certain situations, to see how they perform," he said. The township spent $750 per man on phase one of the Bartell exam, Henningsen said. Cost for the second stage is $950, he said. The township is presently reviewing the results of the first test. Dates of the second test for the three candidates will be determined soon, Henningsen said.

Last week's armed robbery at Novi Drug in Peachtree Shopping Center is linked to a September 1989 theft at the Perry Drug store across the street, according to police. Class-II prescription drugs were stolen at knife-point in both incidents, and no cash was taken. "We are pretty sure it's the same guy," said Det. Ralph Fluhart. "We showed a composite of the Perry Drugs suspect to the victims at Novi Drug and they said it was the same guy." At approximately 3:30 p.m. July 23, the suspect, who matched the description of the Sept. 28 culprit, stole an undisclosed quantity of Class-II prescription (narcotic) drugs at knife-point from Novi Drug. The method of operation in both incidents were almost identical, according to police. "The guy said about the same thing in both robberies," Fluhart said. "He told the pharmacist that he was a junkie, he needed a fix, that it was probably obvious by the way he was shaking, and to give him all his Class-II prescription drugs or codeine pills." Police also suspect the same knife was used in the two crimes. Victims describe the weapon as a kitchen knife with a serrated blade.

McGrew at Nationals: Fourteen-year-old Novi tennis sensation Mark McGrew did not officially place at the Boys-14 National Clay Court Championships held July 15-21 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., but he played very well nonetheless.

Because of a paperwork snafu, McGrew entered the singles portion of the tournament as an unseeded player. As a result, he faced high-seeded Mark Warknen of New York in the first round and fell 6-4, 3-6, 1-6. However, McGrew fought his way back in the consolation round to win five straight, including three against competitors from talent-rich California and two from Florida, another district featuring very talented players.

McGrew was then ousted from the double-elimination tourney by third-seeded Chris Lopez of Florida 1-6, 6-1, 1-6. In a field of 128, McGrew wound up placing somewhere in the 17th-to-24th slot overall.

McGrew and doubles partner Brad Mendelson (Akron, Ohio) entered the tournament seeded 13th and advanced to the Round of 16 before falling to the eighth-seeded team from Puerto Rico 6-3, 6-2.

Kids give books to homeless

By MAUREEN NASZRADI
Staff Writer

One teacher's spark of compassion ignited school-wide awareness about Detroit's homeless.

A couple of years ago, Meads Mill English teacher Shirley Klokenga first visited the Coalition for Temporary Shelter (COTS) in Detroit. The 140-bed facility provides a variety of support services, as well as a bed and meals, for the growing homeless population.

More than 60 percent of shelter guests are women and children. The average stay for families is 23 days.

During their stay, the families are forced to tackle many problems — economic and housing issues, health concerns, school or child care needs, as well as high levels of fear and frustration.

Klokenga said she knew that only a few members of the homeless families she saw would benefit from the items she donated. She wanted to give the shelter a gift of lasting benefit.

The concept of a children's library — where the lifelong skill of reading could be taught — began to take shape.

Klokenga applied for and received a mini-grant from the National Middle School Association, which funded the project that she developed — researching and developing a children's library to be located at COTS.

"I think they also learned that you're not guaranteed your station in life," she continued, "that they could be homeless one day too."

Shirley Klokenga
Meads Mill English teacher

By the end of the 1989-90 school year, not only was the library in place, the 820 students at Meads Mill received some lasting benefits too.

Klokenga designed a program to develop in the students a cultural diversity awareness, particularly for homeless children in Detroit. Her grant application listed several goals: to involve students in becoming committed problem solvers, to develop a life, she continued, "that they could be homeless one day too."

Eventually the whole school became involved in the project. Klokenga said.

The students were acquainted with homelessness through a movie about a mother and her eight-year-old daughter and the ramifications of their eviction. They ended up living on the street and finally in shelters.

The seventh graders in Klokenga's area created posters, listened to guest speakers, researched and wrote about the neglected and economically deprived sector of U.S. society.

deep interest in real knowledge, and to learn how to inquire creatively into a problem.

Klokenga said the children really took the project to heart. For example, many students donated books in which they had inscribed special messages for the children who would read at them at the shelter.

"It was just beautiful how they really came out," Klokenga said, "just very, very giving."

"They became aware that everyone doesn't live like they do."

That was one of the many lessons the students learned from their exposure to the real-life plight of some of their peers.

Klokenga said the students learned not only that the problem exists, but that they can do something about it.

"They realized, 'If we don't do something about it, who will? That's our only chance,'" Klokenga said.

"I think they also learned that you're not guaranteed your station in

Throughout the school year, the homeless theme was incorporated by Klokenga and the four other teachers on her teaching team into all areas of the curriculum for their 135 students.

For example, they used the theme as an essay topic in English class and in math class they calculated the square footage for an actual layout plan for the shelter library.

It was for the project's effort at developing cultural diversity awareness that Meads Mill was featured on the WJR and WJOI radio segment called "Salute to Schools" last month.

Students Jill Walro, Aaron Troschinetz and Lindsay Bryant represented the school in recording radio spots. They talked about what they had learned about the COTS program, how they could help the homeless and the new perspective they had developed.

"I think all of us didn't know a lot about the homeless," Bryant said. "We thought that they were bums or on drugs."

"But we realized that it's not necessarily their fault."

Bryant a month earlier had been awarded for her essay, "America's Homeless," in the Wayne County Intermediate School District Writing Competition.

The efforts of Meads Mill students also have been highlighted in the COTS newsletter and other publications, such as the national magazine, Middleground.

Parental support is key to success

Q: I teach high school Social Studies. I love teaching and I work at it. Sometimes I get upset for constantly being blamed for the lack of student achievement on national standardized tests. Some of my students don't do their homework, don't bring their books to class making me feel like a babysitter at times. I believe there are other factors that impact student achievement. What are the major factors that influence student achievement? Are teachers entirely the blame?

A: To answer your question, I reviewed the research on non-instructional or non-teacher influences on high school student achievement. The major finding didn't surprise me at all: some of the other findings did.

Students who perform well in school are raised in homes by parents who are supportive of their children, yet demanding. They encourage and expect academic achievement by their children and are able to transmit this expectation in a loving, caring manner.

They have kept involved in their school one way or another. At a minimum, they, at least, attend their children's teacher/parent conferences. These parents know what's going on. Whether they like it or not is another issue.

We've all heard of the great impact of peer group influence. Well, peer influence, according to this major study, was found to be far less influential than the parent influence over the "long haul."

Indeed, the peer group influence that was observed (except for totally alienated adolescent groups) tended to encourage their friends to achieve rather than discourage or bad-mouth student achievement.

So we shouldn't lay the blame on youth as each previous generation historically has. Indeed, it seems the only time our youth are of any value is when there is a war to fight.

Most interesting is the impact of the single parent or working mother in regards to their children's achievement. Generalities are often made that "Johnny" doesn't achieve because he is a product of a working mother or single parent.

Again, it was found that if the working mother and single parent were actively involved in their children's schooling, were supportive yet demanding of their children and encouraged and expected achievement, their children were successful. This finding should alleviate some of the guilt trips I've heard from working mothers. Or establish that working is no excuse for not seeing to it their children do their homework.

Part-time employment seems to carry an academic price for many students. In general, those students who work more than 15 hours a week (especially on school days) are adversely affected in their academic performance. This was especially evident for the sophomores and juniors who then struggle as seniors to improve their grades for college entrance or just to graduate.

The Japanese, whose students score very high on international standardized achievement tests, in general do not let their adolescents work. They are students first and expected to study approximately two hours a night under the supervision of their mother.

Therefore, student achievement is a shared responsibility of teachers, parents, students, and our overall educational system. Educators are not entirely to blame but we are on the front line. And it is difficult to hide when your rear end is what everyone else is looking at.

Your biggest problem, after 25 years in education, is to not become bitter and burn out. I have to believe you have had many successes; that is, those students who have come back to visit you and, in their own way, said "Thanks." Many were probably distracted, uninterested adolescents in your class, and are now successful in ventures you couldn't envision. All educators have had these successes. So get ready for September, like Poltergeist, They're Coming Back!

Convictions earn award in Wixom

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Wixom police officer and Novi resident Alan Blashfield received a distinguished service medal for spearheading the investigation into an alcohol-related accident which led to several landmark criminal convictions.

The Wixom officer received the coveted medal last month at the annual police chiefs' conference. He was one of 18 officers from over 500 departments bestowed with the distinguished service distinction.

"Officer Blashfield did a bang-up job and we are all real proud of him," Wixom Police Chief Lawrence Holland said.

Although Blashfield is equally proud, he maintains that it is the story behind the award that is important, not the medal itself.

It was 8 a.m. Easter Morning 1988 when an intoxicated 18-year-old lost control of her vehicle and plowed into a nearby tree at 75 miles an hour.

"Arriving at the scene that serene morning was one of the strangest experiences I ever had," Blashfield commented.

To demonstrate the velocity at impact, the vehicle's engine was thrown 2 1/2 feet backward into the passenger compartment and a tire securely fastened in the trunk flew into the back seat.

"The worst thing is that the accident shouldn't have happened. It was purely alcohol induced," the officer said.

Twelve beer cans, eight of which were empty, were found inside or near the car, according to police reports.

"One of strangest things about the accident scene was that the 23-year-old, who was the only one able to walk, was found trying to throw the beer cans away from the car," Blashfield said. "He was cut up badly and bleeding, but all he knew to do was get rid of the evidence."

The 18-year-old was hospitalized for internal injuries. The 14-year-old passenger ended up in a body cast and the 23-year-old passenger suffered arm and facial lacerations from being thrown through the vehicle's windshield. All three were legally intoxicated at the time of the accident.

The trio involved in the accident, all of whom were from the Walled Lake/Wixom area, attended a Wolverine Lake party the night before the accident. Admission was charged, which is not allowable without a liquor license, and numerous minors between the ages of 14 and 20 were present.

The testimony gathered by Blashfield during the follow-up investigation resulted in felony convictions of the Wolverine Lake party-thrasher and the man who bought the party's half-barrel of beer, and knowingly sold admission tickets to minors.

The 18-year-old driver, who was without a license, was convicted of two counts of felonious driving and sentenced under the youthful training act.

A Walled Lake party store was also convicted of four liquor law violations in association with the accident. The Hop-in on Pontiac Trail sold beer to two of the individuals involved in the accident three times during the night. Based on the convictions, the store had its license suspended for six months.

The 18-year-old and 23-year-old purchased three 12-packs from the store between 12 a.m. and 6 a.m. and were visibly intoxicated at the time of each sale, according to the cashier's police statement. In addition, the final sale also took place between 2 a.m. and 12 p.m. on Sunday morning, which is prohibited by law.

On top of having its liquor license suspended, the store was fined $2,600 and forced to donate an additional $2,400 to the Walled Lake Western substance abuse counseling center—which is the first time in state history that this type of financial community service was mandated.

The store clerk was convicted of two misdemeanor charges, selling alcohol after hours and selling to visibly intoxicated persons. He was sentenced under the youthful training act.

"These convictions send a message that we are willing to go beyond just writing the accident report in alcohol-related accidents and find out who is responsible," Blashfield said.

Developers who grumble while going through Novi's planning review process might envy Tollgate 4-H Education Center.

Because the historic farm at the corner of Twelve Mile and Meadowbrook Roads is affiliated with Michigan State University, the state constitution allows facility expansion and renovation without local government approval. And plenty of plans are in the works for the complex.

"The university is not subject to local regulations of its properties. Generally speaking, the university attempts to meet the basic requirements of the community it's in. Usually we try to be sure we at least meet comparable standards," said Sally Harwood, MSU assistant general consul.

For the same reason, Tollgate does not pay city property taxes.

This summer, a garage will be renovated to provide a kitchen, a bathroom and two conference rooms to be used for a variety of educational programs, said Tollgate Director Thomas Schneider. In the future, the revamped garage might be used as a fine arts center — Tollgate will be kicking off an arts program this winter.

At present, the new conference rooms — which will hold a total of 60 people — will be used for workshops and weekend training, frequently conducted by MSU faculty members.

Also in the works this summer are a series of nature trails which will be open to the public. The trails will include interpretive stations on topics such as the environment, forestry, wildlife and land management.

In addition, the 142-year-old hay barn will be cleaned up and remodelled for use as a games and activities center. Eventually, Tollgate hopes to winterize the barn and purchase a portable stage for theater programs, Schneider said.

Next year, a $2.5 million in-door horseback riding arena and stables are planned to augment the existing equestrian program for handicapped children. This would be built at the north end of the property. About 1,000 to 1,500 children are expected to participate per year.

The third phase of construction — within five years — calls for a conference center facility which could hold up to 300 people, including overnight accommodations. Furthermore, Tollgate's master plan calls for a bi-dome, a geodesic dome in which an ecosystem would be developed to demonstrate the results of changes in earth's biosphere. The dome would include a pond for aquaculture studies.

The center also has long-range plans for a computer lab and a video production studio where educational programs would be prepared for broadcasting throughout the state by satellite.

Schneider has been keeping Novi City Manager Edward Kriewall and Community Development Director James Wahl posted about the expansion.

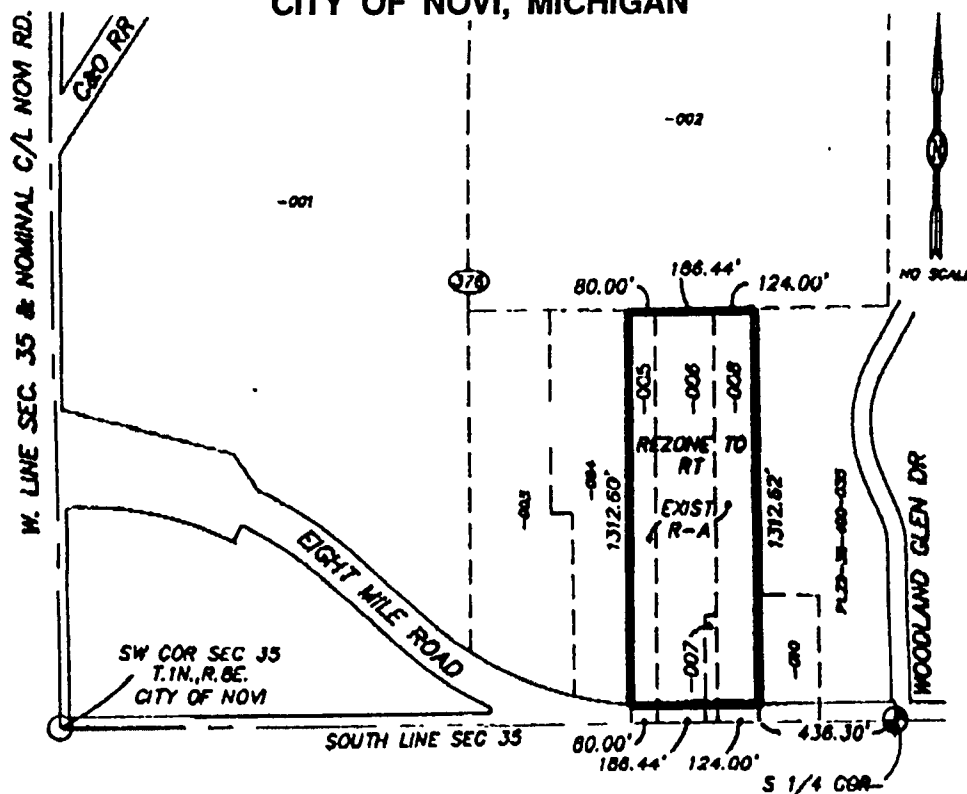

"The process we agreed on with the city manager and the planning director was that we would be very happy to share with them the information and the plans we have been doing on the site for them to comment on. We want to do that in the interest of cooperation," he explained.

The city has no complaints on that score: "They're really working closely with us," Kriewall said.

False report charges to be sought

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

A Northville man may face charges of filing a false police report after fleeing a city police officer early Tuesday morning.

The man claimed that his car, which police chased through a Northville Township neighborhood just after midnight, July 24, was stolen. However, police assert that he was the man driving the car at the time.

Northville police officer William Edgar said he chased the car after the driver cut in front of him on Eight Mile Road, turning onto Greenridge. Edgar reported the man sped away when he hit his flashers and siren, turning onto North Valley before finally stopping back on Greenridge. Edgar said the man ran from the car into the beam of his headlights before running north toward Eight Mile.

A few minutes later, Edgar drove to the Northville Wine Shoppe on Eight Mile Road where a man had called to report his car stolen. When he got there, Edgar found the man he said fled from him.

The man said his car was stolen when he left it running in front of his home late Monday night. He told police he saw a young man climb into the car and drive away. He ran after the car to the corner of Eight Mile and Taft roads a mile away, he said, before calling the police station.

The liquor store is a half-mile from where the fleeing suspects car was stopped.

When Edgar met him at the wine shop he identified the man as the person who had run from him. But the man insisted that his car had been stolen, and insisted on being escorted

He was arrested and released on $100 bond on the fleeing and eluding charge, after filing his report.

He was also issued violations for failing to stop upon a police signal and having an improper registration plate.

The charge of fleeing and eluding a police officer will be heard Aug. 21 at the 35th District Court. City police are still seeking charges against the man for filing a false report.

Skin care shop is Twelve Oaks' water wonderland

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

It's no secret that water is essential to life, and a new store in the Twelve Oaks Mall is hoping that its wares become equally essential to your life.

The store is H2O Plus, so named because every one of the 100-odd skin care and bath products sold by the store is water-based.

"The whole concept is based on a hydrogel formulation," says Jenny Easdon, manager of the Twelve Oaks store. "All the products are meant to hydrate and resoften dry skin. It holds in the moisture naturally. It's a progressive alternative to skin and beauty care."

H2O Plus is the first company to depart from the oil-based tradition of skin care. The hydrogel is a state-of-the-art formulation conceived by Cindy Melk, executive vice president and creative director for the chain of 14 stores. The hydrogels are blended with water and botanicals (herbs, flowers and plant extracts) in everything from moisturizers to cleansers to protective sun care.

"Water is nature's only form of moisturization," says Melk. "The hydrogels attract, absorb and hold moisture to your skin for up to 8-10 hours."

For the uninitiated, hydrogels are a mixture of carbohydrates that act as sponges, and almost instantly attract water. They've been in existence for some time, but this is the first time they've been used in such a broad line.

Though it took nearly two years of development and consultation with chemists to bring the products of H2O Plus to market last October, the idea was Melk's alone. She was frustrated with the veritable tidal wave of unsatisfactory skin care products she encountered when shopping.

"I was the ultimate consumer," Melk says. "If you get together with 10 women, you get the same response across the board. The bath and skin care industry is confusing, intimidating, there's a lot of marketing talk, it's extremely overpriced and they use excess packaging."

She adds that she found ingredients and benefits of the popular department-store brands either misleading or non-existent.

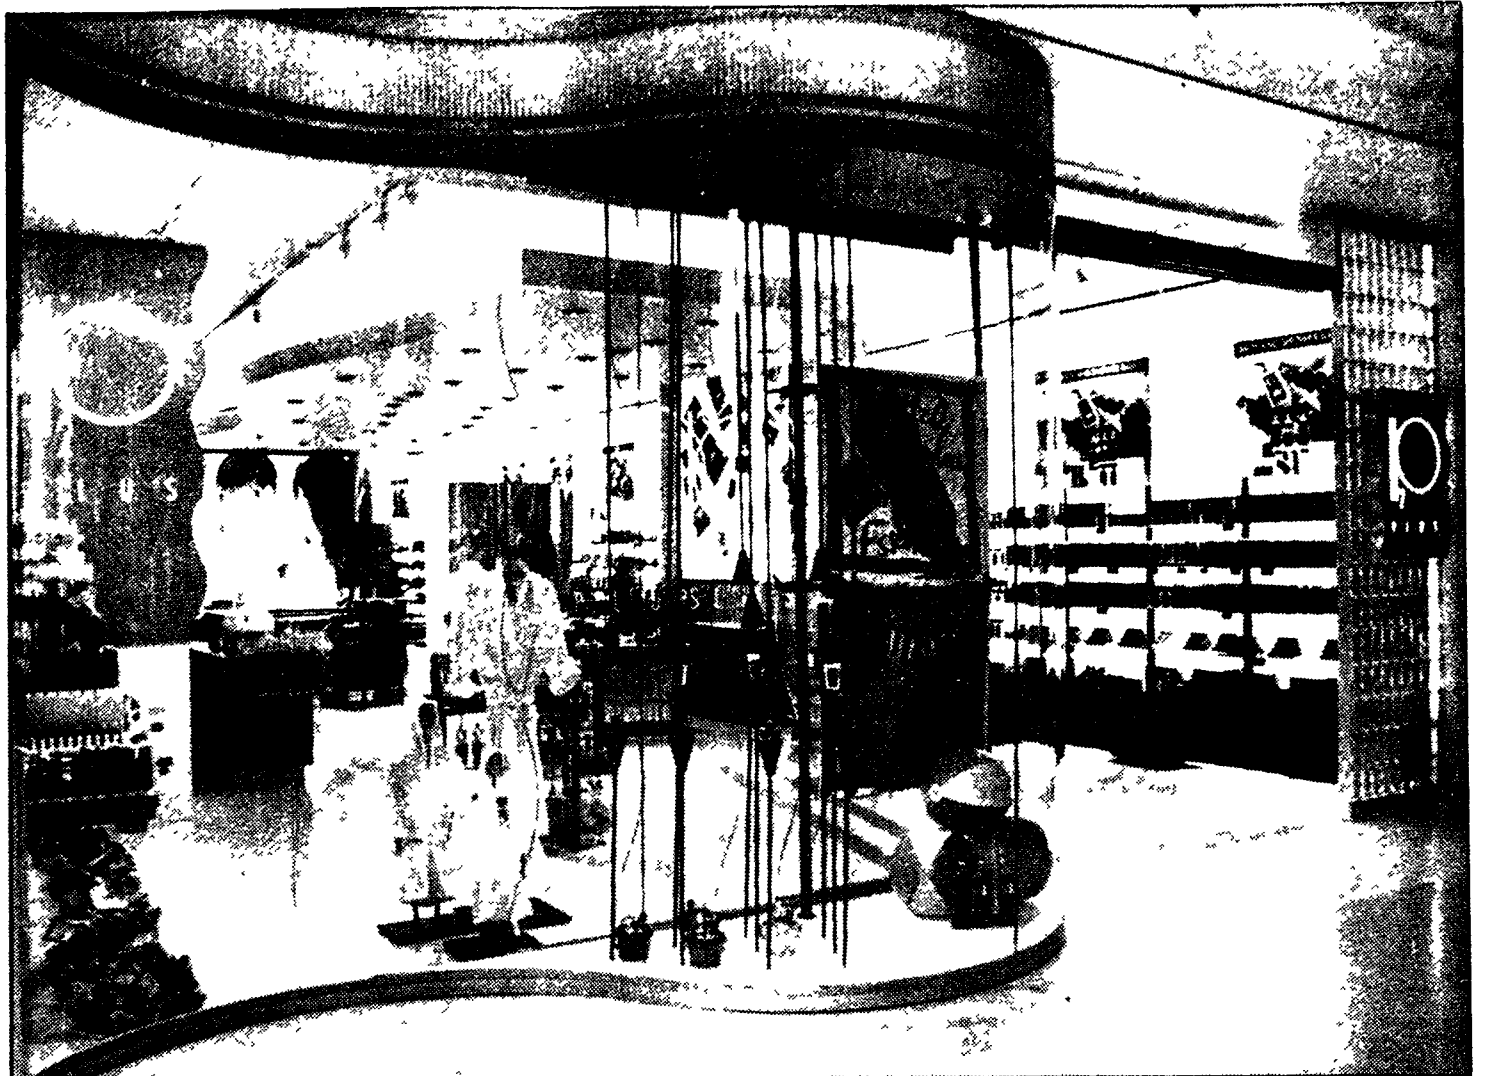

"People are reading packages now, wanting to know what they're getting," says Melk. "They're real ingredient-conscious. My company says, 'Please, read our product labels.'"

In addition, Melk boasts that her products sell for 15-20 percent less than the popular skin and bath products. She can afford to undercut the major brands on price because H2O Plus uses a minimum of packaging (making the products a little more environment-friendly, as well).

"We're taking an honest approach to what we sell," Melk says. "The packaging is clear and simple, and the product is colorful. It's a minimalist approach to skin care. The look is exciting without being excessive. I don't think you have to sacrifice one for the other. What you see is what you get."

And what you see is quite attractive. From the moment you step past the store's wave-like display window, you are deluged with pleasant colors. Yellows, greens, blues and oranges beam from the backlit shelves.

The decor itself is a metaphor for the products — clean and simple. Blacks, whites and grays meet at right angles, except where the festive blue and magenta trim mimics the wave motion of the front window.

The wavy window of H2O Plus is an attraction at Center Court in Twelve Oaks

Don't think the store is just rows of jars and tubes, though. Accessories like bath robes, shower kits and beach balls add a whimsical touch to the store. You can even purchase your own rubber ducky.

The staff is pleasant and knowledgeable. Says Easdon, "We all receive three days of product training with a trainer from H2O Plus. We all come from skin care backgrounds, and that's the kind of person we look for to recruit."

For men, there are shaving products, including a foamless shaving cream. There are skin moisturizers and therapeutic cleansers with the more masculine citrus ingredients.

Kids and babies are covered, too, but for a real treat, check out some of the H2O bath and shower luxury items. They indulge and pamper the skin, and despite the luxury moniker, not a single item costs over $15.

Bringing out the best in sales force

When a salesperson's planning or persuasive skills need improvement, his or her "natural" selling style must first be identified. This is done by evaluating a series of specific abilities that the salesperson normally demonstrates on the job.

Planning-related abilities to be analyzed include the following: product knowledge, territory or market control, pre-call or pre-selling preparation, time management, and overall planning capabilities.

Evaluation of persuasive abilities is focused in the areas of customer knowledge, the selling and buying process, communication and securing buying action and personal impact.

Based on a model developed by Finn and Staunton, there are several selling styles.

The "involve" style of selling sums up a salesperson with a low aptitude for planning and greater persuasive powers. This type of salesperson is disorganized and appears not to have his act together. He depends on charm rather than logic, important product features, and related customer benefits to win sales.

As a result, he often gives inaccurate information, with a majority of his sales either falling through, being revised or resulting in customer dissatisfaction.

A salesperson with "direct" style shows a tendency to have better planning skills. This creates problems because the salesperson is perceived by customers as being inflexible and impatient when the sales interaction does not progress as planned.

This type of salesperson is also not attuned to his customers' needs and is reluctant to explore product or service-related alternatives when appropriate. Even though he may know everything about the products and services being offered for sale, his approach toward customers is generally cold and impersonal.

The "intermediate" style represents average sales capabilities in both planning and persuasion.

While skills in these areas are developed enough to allow a salesperson to handle himself or herself adequately in most sales situations, he does not possess the qualities to produce outstanding results.

A thorough examination of the planning and persuasive skills listed earlier should indicate which specific abilities require further improvement.

The most desirable style of selling is one that represents the ultimate balance of planning and persuasive power.

A salesperson who functions in the "motivate" style is organized, analytical, well-prepared and knowledgeable, determines and understands his customer's needs, communicates well and is oriented toward end results.

When implementing the balance of power approach, sales training can be directed to each salesperson's real needs. Ultimately, it is much more likely to produce the increased sales and profit growth your business strives for.

Novi is Oakland's mobile home capital

By SHEILA PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Novi is the mobile home capital of Oakland County with a total of 1,902 sites.

The city also has the second highest number of mobile home sites in the tri-county area behind Canton Township, which has 2,580 units.

These were the "revealing" results of a recent inventory of Oakland, Macomb and Wayne County mobile home sites conducted by Novi Planning Consultant Brandon Rogers.

The study was prompted by Paragon Properties' lawsuit to force Novi's sixth mobile home park. Paragon won its case on July 17 and plans to add at least 100 units to Novi's mobile home tally at the corner of Napier and Twelve Mile. However, the city will appeal Oakland County Circuit Judge John N. O'Brien's verdict to grant the required mobile home zoning.

With the existing five mobile home parks, the city already has "more than its share" of sites, according to Rogers.

"The number of mobile home parks in Novi is very revealing but when you add the number of multiples, existing and planned, the combined total of units exceeds the number of single family housing units in the city," Rogers said.

He predicts that the ratio will swing back in favor of single family housing over the next few years because nearly all the city's multiple (R-M) zoned land is already occupied.

But Novi will still get some additional multiples under its planned urban development (PUD) option. Both Maples of Novi and Sandstone, the city's approved PUD projects, propose multiples.

Rogers said that having a large number of multiples and mobile homes is not "necessarily bad", despite the fact he recently said during the Paragon trial that three mobile home parks adjacent to each other had a "ghetto-izing effect".

"It is important that a city have a balanced mixture of housing types because everyone has different incomes and not everyone needs a four-bedroom house with 2 1/2 baths," he maintained.

Rogers could not answer whether Novi has too many mobile home parks or multiples, saying that a community's appropriate housing mix is a subjective judgement.

Areas without lower priced housing options force their senior population to move out of the area, yet over half of Oakland County's municipalities choose not to have a single mobile home site, he commented.

Communities without mobile home sites include the City of Farmington, Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham, the City of Rochester, Milford Village, Wixom and Wolverine Lake.

Architect's role should be clear

Before you approach an architect to develop plans for your dream house, think about your goals for the project, the Michigan Association of Home Builders advises.

What kind of design and materials do you envision? Does your budget match your aspirations?

While your architect will help you think your project through, you should have a general understanding of your goals and resources to help you select the architect who's best for you.

Look at parts of projects similar to yours that you especially like. What is it about them you find appealing?

Contact the owner and ask which architect they selected and why. Names and addresses of architects are available from the Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Keep in mind that some architecture firms specialize.

Interview several architects. When talking to candidates, ask to see photographs of projects they have worked on that are comparable to yours in size and type.

Ask for names of owners you can contact. Ask to meet any other members of the design team who may be involved in the project.

You should walk away from your meeting knowing how the architect expects to work with you and other members of the team. What does the architect see as the most important issues or considerations?

Is his style and approach similar to yours? Do you feel good about the architect as a person? Is the "chemistry" right?

Don't hesitate to ask questions. Think of the architect as a professional who will bring experience and specialized knowledge to your project.

Once you've found an architect you feel comfortable working with, sit down and discuss exactly what services will be needed. Some owners bring their particular expertise to the owner-architect relationship; some will need step-by-step guidance.

Basic architectural services include: schematic design, design development, construction documents (working drawing, specifications and contract), bidding and negotiation (contractor selection), and construction contract administration.

But the architect may be helpful in other ways such as providing financial feasibility studies, assisting in site selection and zoning applications, exploring energy-saving systems, providing landscape and interior design and helping you through the approval process required by many local jurisdictions.

The complexity of the project will often dictate the level of service supplied by the architect.

The formal agreement between you and your architect — the owner-architect agreement — spells out what both you and the architect expect from the professional relationship. If you've agreed to a list of services and discussed the budget, the formal agreement should follow without difficulty. Be sure to show the agreement to your lawyer before signing.

How much money an architect receives depends on how much work he does — the more complex or experimental the project, the more you should budget for architectural services.

Architects are sometimes paid a percentage of the construction cost. Other times, they charge an hourly rate and can estimate the total hours required to complete your project.

MONDAY ENTERTAINMENT

He makes music for everyone

"Music is for everybody. It belongs to everybody, and it's accessible," the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's principal flutist, Ervin Monroe, says emphatically.

"You don't have to take five years of college to be able to enjoy what you're going to hear. And when you talk down to somebody — there's no reason for it. If somebody has not had exposure to a Brahms symphony, you can talk about it. You should make it accessible to the person."

Monroe, being interviewed in the Troy house he shares with his wife, Susan, and their children, made it apparent that this belief is rooted in his childhood, his more than 25 years as a musician and teacher and his experience as past president of the National Flute Association.

With a hint of a Southern accent, he recounted the obstacles and lack of educational opportunities and accessibility to classical music he encountered growing up in Niceville, Fla., as the youngest of six. He revealed how his love for the flute helped overcome these obstacles and opened opportunities, making him one of the most successful flutists in the country.

In the great room, a fire glowed in the fireplace on a chilly spring evening as Monroe sat talking to a visitor. A tall man, Monroe is a gregarious host with an open manner.

His mother, a school teacher and "real music lover," gave him a piccolo when he was 10. However, the instrument proved defective. Though she was the family's sole supporter by then, she agreed to buy him another instrument and told him to pick one. Realizing there wasn't a flute player in the Niceville Elementary School band, he chose flute. Immediately, he "loved it, and decided that was it."

By 12 he said, "I was so serious about making this my occupation in life, I went to find out where you go to make a living playing flute. So I was told, you play in an orchestra."

Since there weren't concerts where he lived, he saved the money he earned at his job and bought a hi-fi set. "I went to a Fort Walters Beach record shop and told the guy I wanted to play in the orchestra and wanted to hear orchestral music. I had never heard orchestral music in my life."

The salesperson recommended Brahms' Second Symphony, Beethoven's Third Symphony ("Eroica") and Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony with Beethoven's Fifth on the flip side. "Still to this day I never get tired of Brahms' symphonies," he said.

"The Second Symphony I used to turn up — wide open — when I would get home from school," Monroe said. "I was the only one there and I would just blast it out into the woods. We lived in the woods. I would go out and run with my dogs. You could hear it through the woods."

Meanwhile, at that time in the mid-1950s, what Monroe could listen to on late-night radio was jazz from New Orleans and rhythm and blues, including B.B. King "long before he became popular," on a black station out of Galveston, Texas. Today, he likes playing blues.

His "first real exposure" to orchestras also came the summer he was 12, at Florida State University's Tallahassee Camp. By the seventh grade he played in a nearby high school band. In the 11th grade he was performing in the Pensacola Symphony and playing saxophone in a high school jazz band. It wasn't until he went to Oberlin College in Ohio that he studied with a private teacher.

Monroe's determination again is shown in his story of how he satisfied the requisite audition for Oberlin. Hearing the Oberlin Woodwind Ensemble was to perform in Hattiesburg, Miss., he took his flute to the performance, thinking he might be able to audition. Impressed, he went backstage to the dressing room of one of the players, "who was washing his hair in the sink," and announced, "I'd like to play for you."

He said, "So play." That particular musician turned out to be the bassoon teacher. He liked what he heard and the school accepted the "dressing room recital," since Monroe couldn't afford to travel to Ohio. His studies at Oberlin opened the opportunity to study in Salzburg, Austria, for a year, and to learn German.

As a student, Monroe said, his attitude was, "Wow, I've got this opportunity to do this. I'm going to really work hard. I'm going to do it."

For his master's degree he went to the Manhattan School of Music in New York, because that's where all the orchestras used to hold auditions. During that year, impresario Sol Hurok contracted him to play with the Ballet of London tour, the Royal Danish Ballet and Bolshoi Ballet. By 1968 he joined the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Monroe is editor-at-large for the "Flutists Quarterly," and has a music publishing company, for which he arranges and transcribes compositions for flute that he distributes internationally.

He's artistic consultant for Muramatsu Flutes U.S.A., performs with the DSO and teaches at Wayne State University, Oakland University and privately.

He said he takes teaching "very seriously, because a teacher has a role in developing students' lives."

How does he stay in shape to play? Paraphrasing his friend, flutist James Galway, he said, "Playing all the time is the best exercise. The flute is a very physical instrument. It takes more air than a trombone, because the way the sound is produced on flute you lose a certain amount of air. The sound is created by splitting the air. Part goes outside of the instrument and part goes in."

Tests show the closest comparison to the amount of air used by the flute player is that used by the tuba player.

"As a result we do have to work constantly building up our lungs, and you do that on stage. Breathing and exhaling, you're exercising your lungs like crazy."

"Part of my job is a certain amount of responsibility to the public — to teach. It's up and above what we do on stage... we have to be evangelists in a sense. We have to spread the word — it sounds corny, but it's true. We owe that to the arts. We love it and we better let someone else know about it."

He said he's learned that symphony orchestra concerts have "got to appeal to everybody. This is music... If the music doesn't appeal, you did something wrong, or you didn't perform very well." He said that if those unschooled in classical music

"go with an open mind. They should enjoy it."

"Something should fascinate or electrify them. You've got to leave them feeling good. When someone buys a concert ticket, this is their night out. They are taking their families out. I don't care whether it's Beethoven, Mahler or Eric Clapton, you go to a concert to have an experience and I would like them to go out of there with a thrilling experience."

This summer, Monroe will be prominently heard in Beethoven's "Leonora" Overture when it is performed by the DSO at Meadow Brook on July 5 and 8. During the regular 1990-91 season he is to be featured soloist with flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal.

Monroe: "You don't have to take five years of college to be able to enjoy what you're going to hear."

If development of approved Final Plats or Site Plans is not substantially completed in three (3) years after approval, further final submissions under the PUD shall cease until the part in question is completed or cause can be shown for not completing same.

8. Interpretation of Approval

Approval of a PUD under this Section shall be considered an optional method of development and improvement of property, subject to the mutual agreement of the Township and the applicant.

9. Amendments to the PUD Plan

Proposed amendments or changes to an approved PUD Plan shall be submitted to the Planning and Zoning Department. The Planning and Zoning Administrator may approve or deny the change if it is determined that the proposed modification will not necessitate modification of PUD Agreement or any exhibit attached thereto. If modification is necessary, the Planning and Zoning Department shall forward the request to the Township Board of Trustees for action. The Board of Trustees may request review by the Planning Commission. The Board of Trustees may, at its discretion and depending on the potential impact of the change, decide whether or not a public hearing is necessary.

10. Enforcement

The enforcement for this Ordinance and its requirements should be for the health, safety, morals and general welfare of the community.

11. Fees

Fees for review of PUD plans shall be established by Resolution of the Township Board of Trustees.

FAMILY FARE

A&E premieres touching factual, fictional dramas

By Donna Gooch

Two adolescent girls from extremely different socioeconomic backgrounds become unlikely friends in Old Enough, airing on Arts & Entertainment Tuesday, July 31.

Old Enough tells the story of Lonnie, an adventurous 12-year-old from an upper-middle-class family who forges a bond with 14-year-old Karen.

Karen, a street-smart girl from an immigrant household, introduces her new friend to life in her rough neighborhood.

When Karen's slightly older brother flirts with Lonnie, her first brush with independence blossoms into infatuation.

Shifting emotional alliances and the appearance of an older woman produce some lessons in adult life for the two girls, who struggle to remain friends. Old Enough stars Sarah Boyd, Rainbow Harvest and Danny Aiello.

Another A&E premiere this week is No Time To Say Goodbye, a BBC documentary airing Sunday, July 29.

In 1938, England agreed to allow 10,000 Jewish children take refuge inside the English border to escape Hitler's Germany. On Dec. 2, 1938, the first boatload of refugee children arrived on a steamer at Harwich.

No Time To Say Goodbye is the personal account of four of these refugees—professor Leslie Brent, Dora Vernon, Darola Regent and Liesl Silverstone.

The program begins in England during the 1989 reunion of the former refugees.

Each of the four adults recount their childhood experiences, some reading from diaries and from correspondence.

In a closing segment, the program documents a recent neo-Nazi meeting in Germany and speculates on the implications this has for the future. Jack Perkins hosts this unusual, revealing documentary.

Cable Comments

By LARK L. SAMOUELIAN
Executive Director,
SW Oakland Cable Comm.

For several years cocktail party conversation always included tales of cable television. Who was the first on the block to take the services; what channels did they get; and what did the salesman say? Now, with close to 60% of the households receiving cable television dialogues have changed. People are not only used to a vast spectrum of information, but they now demand it. Nowadays, gathering of folks will find an amazing amount of dialogue about the technical aspects of capturing video footage for home or television viewing. With the advent of computers for personal use and video cameras lining many a soccer field or other event, we find that we are all becoming more receptive to using technical equipment. The old feeling that one had to be technically oriented need not apply any longer.

I, for one, have never been technically oriented. Frankly, this has been very beneficial for our program development. As we planned our workshops for the public, I became the guinea pig. Our goal was to keep the lessons simple and yet building up enough momentum to keep the residents interested so that they would finish all the classes. We find that enthusiastic willingness to learn is widespread throughout the age spectrum. The cable and commission staffs of Omnicom, MetroVision and SWOCC have production teams that include a variety of ages, making them dynamic production teams full of energy. We'd like to tell you about three of the members and their equipment:

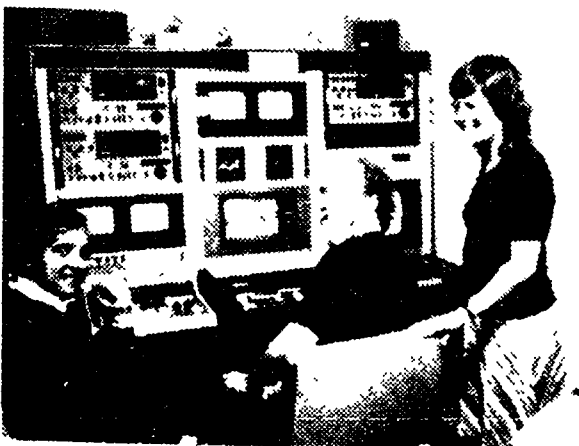

Clarence Dickerman is gearing up to man a studio camera equipped with headphones and a teleprompter. Amazingly, even with the lens option, the cameras are very simply to operate. Not all cameras are equipped with this device. Teleprompters are a luxury to enhance the viewers interest as they watch commentators deliver news or watch a host narrate or introduce a guest. The talent will not have to rely on notes or memory as they read their lines. Many are able to have 'trigger' phrases typed in to serve as backup support within a long segment.

Kevin Southers is creating an audio program which will be heard on a character generated message channel. Both MetroVision and Omnicom have sound booths. They are most frequently used for voice-overs to a video program. The booth may include such fun equipment as an audio mixer, reel to reel decks, a cart deck, a cassette deck, turntables, CD players and microphones. Technically, only one person can comfortably function in the booth, but I vote for a partner as it is such fun creating a 'Radio' show. The rapport between two people enhances the potential for humor and great conversation.

Terry Kelley, Tom Daugherty and Denise Swope share the ABRoll Editing option. Once production footage has been taped a show may be completely finished. Most of the time however, the content has been taped in anticipation of reorganizing the stock or adding to it. Editing suites also have several options depending on the post-production techniques needed. An AB Roll Editor enables multiple sources of video to be edited together. A Cuts-only Editor provides for one source to be concentrated on at a time. Auxillary equipment may be interfaced to allow for Graphic Design and a creative variety of lettering and sizes.

Cable TV offers an enjoyable experience along with a learning of state of the art technology. We all have to begin somewhere. Feel comfortable to share with us some of your home video camera footage. You will be amazed at how proficient you are already!

Roger Moore, as James Bond, and Lois Chiles star in Moonraker, airing Sunday on ABC.

Keith Carradine stars as investigating officer John Rule in Murder Ordained, Tuesday on CBS.

'Hiroshima: Out Of The Ashes: shows struggle to survive

Actors believe in film's message

By Mary Ann Townsend

There is but one message in the two-hour NBC movie "Hiroshima: Out Of The Ashes"—destruction of that magnitude must never happen again.

The drama airs Monday, Aug. 6, the 45th anniversary of the day the United States dropped an atomic bomb equivalent to 12.5 kilatons of TNT on the city of Hiroshima, Japan.

The film does not speak out either for or against America's use of the atomic bomb to end World War II, nor does it give hero stories. It simply follows the day-to-day lives of several people before the bomb, and their struggles to survive amid the chaos afterward. The drama follows the events that occur to a German Jesuit priest living in Hiroshima (Max von Sydow), two U.S. airmen who were shot down and imprisoned (Judd Nelson and Ben Wright), and several Japanese citizens (Kim Miyori, Pat Morita, Mako, Tamlyn Tomita and John Fujioka).

Several sources were used for the story, including the diary of a doctor who was in Hiroshima, as well as a book based on interviews with hundreds of survivors.

"Hiroshima: Out Of The Ashes" does not look at the city today, but rather shows the survivors discarding their prejudices to overcome the devastation.

"I think that the expression 'Out Of The Ashes' has less to do with 40 years later, what happened to these people, than it has to do with the triumph of the human spirit, the sense that in the midst of this very immediate hell, that we realize that there are no real different races, that we are all part of the same race, the human race," said Nelson.

Father Siemes, played by von Sydow, is one of the many characters who have a change of heart. At first only concerned with his Catholic parishioners, he, too, changes his priorities.

"You see he is a man who has been brought up according to the rules and lived according to the book, he has been told that this is the way the world is and this is the way it should be. But suddenly this happens and he realizes that there is another kind of reality which he has to adjust to," von Sydow said of his role. "He has to go be a human being and he has to help whoever is there, whoever needs his help, whether it's a Catholic or, say from his point of view, a heathen. It doesn't matter. It's a suffering human being and he has to help them."

For actress Kim Miyori, participating in the film was a personal statement that this should never happen again. Born and raised in America, but from Japanese descent, she felt strongly about the film's message.

"I felt it was really important that I be involved in it, regardless of what the capacity was. I think it's important for us to heal old wounds. I think this is something that we have been heretofore unable to really look at, or unwilling to take a look at. And I think until we are able to do that, we will never really be able to heal those wounds from the past."

Judd Nelson stars as a U.S. soldier imprisoned in Japan when the first atomic bomb was ever used in wartime in that city on "Hiroshima: Out Of The Ashes," airing on the 45th anniversary of the event, Monday, Aug. 6, on NBC.

SOAP TALK

Mamie Johnson role changing

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: What happened to the lady who used to play Mamie on The Young And The Restless? Did she retire? I just wondered because she was so nice, she seemed perfect for the part. —C.P., Conroe, Texas

Dear C.P.: Marguerite Ray (ex-Mamie Johnson) was replaced by Victoria Rowell. According to my sources, the powers-that-be wanted to take the character in a different direction and recast the role.

Ray has appeared in several television shows, including The Atlanta Child Murders, 227, The Women Of Brewster Place and Diff'rent Strokes.

Dear Candace: I have several questions about the people on Santa Barbara. First, I heard that Marcy Walker got married. Who did she marry and when? Second, who is the guy who plays Robert Barr on the show? He is one of the sexiest men I've ever seen. —A fan in Rapid City.

Dear Reader: Walker (Eden) was married Dec. 18, 1989, to Stephen Collins. This is the actress' third trip to the altar. Her first marriage was to Billy Warlock (Baywatch), and the second was to actor/musician Stephen Ferris. Walker and Collins have a child named Taylor Walker Collins, and they were actually married just a month before the child's first birthday.

Roscoe Borne (Robert Barr) has signed a 26-week contract with SB, so enjoy him while he's on. Borne previously portrayed Joe Novak on Ryan's Hope and Mitch Lawrence on One Life To Live.

Dear Candace: I agree with Pat Sandero's letter about the General Hospital storyline and Jane Elliot. I'm also glad to see that Frisco got a haircut. Now I would like to see Steve and Bo clean up their act on Days Of Our Lives. The writers aren't thinking very smart when they try to pawn off Kimberly's pregnancy on to Cal. After all, Shane came back for the holiday party, so that put an end to Kim's affair with Cal. This is just a little far out for me. —Sincerely, a fan of yours

What special trait did Dumbo have?

By Steven Alan McGaw

Questions:

1. What made Dumbo so special?
2. The first Neil Simon play to be made into a film was...
3. Quick! What was Vincent Price's character's name in the '50s horror classic House Of Wax?
4. Identify the type of trees with which agent Cooper is so taken in Twin Peaks.
5. Even for avid horror fans, this may require some research. This director has made a spate of "cutting edge" films that have received great critical acclaim and won a devoted cult following. One of his less auspicious, very early efforts is a mind-numbing "horror" called Barn Of The Naked Dead. Who is he and what are some of his more recent (and genuinely terrific) films?
6. Who played the title role in 1949's Christopher Columbus?
7. In On The Waterfront, Marlon Brando played...

Answers:

1. The fact that he could fly.
2. Come Blow Your Horn.
3. Professor Henry Jarrow.
4. Douglas Firs.
5. Alan Rudolph, best known for quirky, insightful films like Choose Me and Trouble In Mind.
6. Fredric March.
7. Terry Malloy.

Ted Bessell ventured into classic arts after 'That Girl'

By Polly Vonetes

Q: Whatever happened to Ted Bessell, who played the boyfriend in That Girl with Marlo Thomas? I last heard he was performing on Broadway. —J. Johnson, Gulf Breeze, Fla.

A: Bessell had a fairly active career in the 1960s and early '70s. He drifted from sight in the mid-1970s, returning in 1980 to star in the NBC (short-lived) comedy series Good Time Harry and the equally obscure ABC series Hail To The Chief in 1985. A man of many talents, he was a concert pianist at an early age, performing at Carnegie Hall by age 12. He is an accomplished painter and was invited to the Russian School of Fine Arts at Oxford. Bessell's wife also is an artist. And yes, he has appeared on Broadway.

Q: Will you please tell me when is President Bush's birthday, also Barbara's? Also, where could I write to them? I would also like to know if Vanna White and Pat Sajak are married. —Rosa Barringer, Concord, N.C.

A: President George Bush was born on June 12, 1924, in Milton, Mass. Barbara Bush was born on June 8, 1925, in Rye, N.Y. You may write to them at The White House, Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. 20501. No, Pat Sajak and Vanna White are not married to each other. Sajak married in January, '90. Vanna is not married.

Q: A number of years back, I watched a movie called Best Little Girl In The World and thought it was terrific and touching. I always hope they will play it again but so far I haven't seen it. Two of my best friends and I are all battling eating disorders and I desperately want to see that show again for hope and encouragement. I am enrolled at the University of Wisconsin and found this problem to be in alarming numbers and getting worse. Is there any way I could request a station to play it or get a copy of it? I think this movie definitely would help a lot of people in dealing with anorexia nervosa and bulimia. Any help you can give us would be greatly appreciated.

A: The movie you requested, The Best Little Girl In The World, aired as an ABC Monday Night Movie in May, 1981. Eva Marie Saint, Charles Durning and Jennifer Jason Leigh starred. The movie was produced by Aaron Spelling Productions; write to him for information on the availability of the film. Write to: Aaron Spelling Productions, Inc., Warner Hollywood Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., West Hollywood, Calif. 90046, or phone: 213-850-2413.
