Council seeks full review of finance system

By STEVE KELLMAN Staff Writer

The city's finance department could benefit from an outside review. according to a report by city auditors Plante & Moran.

City council members came to a similar conclusion last Monday. Their comments came during a presentation to the council by FInance Director Beverly Morrison, as she explained how she and City Manager Steven Walters planned to address several recommendations made by Plante & Moran in their annual audit of the city's finances.

The first recommendation the auditors had made was in response to the city's complex computerized financial system. "We recommend that a review be performed to ensure the internal audit procedures are coordinated and deemed adequate in light of the increased computer system utilization," the report said.

The report also recommended appointing a "qualified individual to supplement the city manager and finance director," due to the increasing complexity of accounting, budgeting. data processing and other computer

Developer woos township board

A representative of the proposed Huntington Falls development wooed and wowed members of the township board Nov. 8 with his vision of Northville Township's future southern gateway.

Board members watched a slideshow presentation courtesy of the R.A. DeMattia Co., principal partner in the sprawling residential and industrial development proposed for 930 acres of former county land north of Five Mile Road.

DeMattia architect Gary Roberts approached the board for the first of what promises to be numerous visits in a lengthy process to gain zoning

IN THE FINAL FOUR Hard-fought victories take Mustangs to semifinals

A determined Northville football squad advanced to the MHSAA Class A semifinals the hard way: with a pair of tough road wins against favored opponents.

On Nov. 2 it was Wyandotte Roosevelt, and last Saturday (Nov. 10) it was Dearborn who fell victim to the Mustangs 23-18. Northville will now take on tradition-rich Birmingham Brother Rice this Saturday (Nov. 17) at 11:30 a.m. at Flint's Atwood Stadium for the right to play in the state title game on Nov. 23 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Dubbed by the Detroit News as the surprise of Class A," the Mustangs are now only one of two teams in the entire 32-team semifinal round with three losses. The other is Class D Ashley, who also sports an identical 8-3 mark.

The announcement that local developer Robert DeMattia had purchased 930 acres of county land in Northville Township has been warmly received on virtually all fronts.

The local school district lovingly eyes plans for 300 acres of smokeless industry on the site as a key to continued financial solvency.

Township officals are anxious to add development millions to property tax rolls.

And potential business and home owners reportedly are chomping at the bit to secure a portion of the development dubbed Huntington Falls. But a few clouds are sure to appear, even over a landscape as sunny as this.

Township officials last month were notified that all buildings and facilities used on the DeMattia parcels must be vacated by May next year. That troubling word came down

Northville won the Region IV title last weekend with a stingy, swarming defense and an offense that was versatile enough to take what the opponent was willing to give. Dearborn slanted its defense to stop the Mustangs' run-and-shoot passing attack, so Northville employed a more conventional running game and racked up a season-high 235 yards on the ground.

Police believe a fire which burned a car parked on West Street the morning of Nov. 2 was caused by leaves ignited by the car's exhaust system. The car sustained an estimated $1,800-$2,000 in damage. and had to be towed from the scene after the fire melted one if its tires.

PARKING PERMIT RENEWALS: Northville city residents who park overnight on city streets or in city parking lots must renew their overnight parking permits before Jan. 1, 1991. Auctions draw local support

It may not be Sotheby's yet, but the Downtown Merchants Association hopes to make its first annual Silent Holiday and Grab Bag Auctions a venerable tradition.

The auctions have already drawn widespread interest, said Merchants Association member Toni Genitti.

So far, more than 60 Northville businesses have donated items to the project. "It's unbelievable, the list goes on and on and on," Genitti said. The items will be auctioned off Nov. 25 in conjunction with Santa Parade festivities.

The donated items include wreaths, winter clothing, Christmas ornaments and decorations, and music boxes. just to name a few. The Michigan Association of Gift Salesmen alone gave more than 300 gifts to the cause, making possible the Grab Bag Auction. Genitti said the community support has far outstripped response to similar projects in the past. "I've been doing this for 20 years and have never gotten the response I have this year," she said.

The proceeds will benefit the Northville Kiwanis Club and promotional programs by the Merchants Association.

Bridge design approved again

By AILEEN WINGBLAD Special Writer

While admittedly "leery" and "gun shy" toward the proposed MainCentre parking deck/bridge project, members of the Northville Historic District Commission last Thursday evening approved the plan's concept and preliminary design.

This decision gave Singh Development officials and architect Gregory Presley the go-ahead to map out more complete details for the project following last week's approval by city council.

Historic District Commissioners have been apprehensive about the development scheme, expressing concerns over preserving Northville's Victorian-era style and questioning the "appropriateness" of the bridge for the downtown area.

Yet Presley maintains that the proposed iron-frame, box-girder bridge does indeed capture the town's late-1800s theme and com-concept of a bridge doesn't match Northville.

"I have this vision of the 21st century out of a 1947 Popular Mechanics magazine. Of course, we will have the 21st century, but the main reason people came out here is because they thought we wouldn't become the 21st century," Gazlay said.

Gazlay added that concepts and renderings don't always evolve as planned and that he fears economic factors could come into play and interfere with approved plans.

"I'm wondering if what I'm finally going to see is what I see in these drawings," he said. Other commission members, while complimenting Presley on his revised bridge design, shared Gazlay's concern over the possibility of money matters "stripping down" the proposed plans.

"While I, too, am concerned whether the bridge is appropriate for downtown Northville, it is an excellent design from hard work and has been well-researched," said Commissioner Walter Coponen. "It could be appropriate if done well. My only fear is that we'll get % of the way and not quite make it all the way. That would be an architectural heartbreak for all of us.

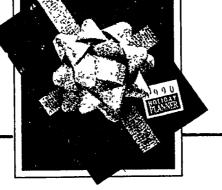

Commenting on the HDC's approval. Presley said he "tried not to anticipate anything . . . but was glad they voted for it," adding that he appreciates the commission's charge of preserving the historical heritage of the town's Victorian flavor. It will be at least "a month or two" before more detailed plans of the bridge project will be ready for the commission, he said.

Assault victim refuses to charge her husband

Township police said an assault and battery victim refused to press charges against her husband after she was injured during an argument outside an Innsbrook Apartments unit Nov. 6.

Police said a 38-year-old Northville man pushed his 36-year-old wife during an argument at 10:38 p.m. Nov. 6. The woman apparently lost her balance and fell, striking a step outside their apartment. The woman was bleeding from her mouth and nose and suffered a deep cut on her upper lip and the right side of her face and nose were swollen when police arrived.

The woman refused medical treatment at the scene and refused to be transported to a hospital by emergency medical workers.

The woman told police and medi-cal workers she would only go to the hospital if her husband took her.

DRUNK DRIVING ACCIDENT: City police arrested an 18-year-old Northville man for operating under the influence Nov. 11 after finding his car in a stand of trees off Eight Mile near Randolph. Police arrived at the scene about 5:05 a.m. in response to a reported accident, and found the man trying to drive the car away. But two flat tires and the fact that the car was buried in the mud prevented him from leaving.

Police News

The man apparently had been driving east on Eight Mile when he drifted right onto Randolph and jumped the curb. His car was found facing west 148 feet east of the curb, where it had been stopped by several trees. The driver had to exit through the passenger door because the driver's door was held shut by vegetation.

Police arrested the man after he failed field sobriety tests. He also was cited for not having a driver's license in his posession at the time. His blood alcohol level was measured at .21 percent, more than twice the legal limit.

He was released on $100 bond after he sobered up.

OUIL: Township police arrested a 37-year-old Garden City woman Nov. 4 and charged her with operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol.

Police said they received a call about a disturbance at Mobil Gas on Six Mile west of Haggerty. Upon their arrival, they found a woman engaged in an argument with a gas station attendent. The woman reportedly thought the gas station was full-service and wanted someone to change her vehicle's flat tire.

Police said the woman appeared to be intoxicated. A computer check of the woman revealed that she was wanted by Southgate police for driv-ing with a suspended license.

Police told the woman not to drive the vehicle, but a man changed the woman's tire and she drove away south on Haggerty, they said.

Police then stopped the woman and charged her with driving under the influence.

OUIL: A 25-year-old Plymouth man was arrested and charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol at 2:18 a.m. Nov. 6, township police said. Police said they spotted a vehicle traveling 72 m.p.h. around a curve on Six Mile near the Waterford bend. They pulled the car over near Winchester and asked the driver to take mechanical sobriety tests.

Police said the man failed the tests and a preliminary breath test. A computer check revealed that the man was convicted of drunk driving in 1984 and 1987.

Police said the man threatened an arresting officer before he was jailed.

HIT AND RUN AT MELJER: A Novi woman told township police that an unknown vehicle hit her car while she was parked in the lot at Meijer. 20401 Haggerty, Nov. 5 at approximately 7:30 p.m. Police have no suspects in the incident.

LARCENY FROM A VEHICLE:

Township police responded to a report that a cellular telephone was stolen from a car parked at Tanger Elementary School, 40260 Five Mile Road. The phone was taken between Oct. 13-15 from a 1989 Chevrolet Corvette, the complainant said.

LARCENY FROM MEIJER: A 25-year-old Orchard Lake woman was arrested and charged with larceny at Meijer Nov. 6. Police said the woman attempted to conceal a rectal thermometer and baby shoes in her purse and also tried to hide a boy's sweater in her jacket.

CAR PHONE STOLEN: The owner of a 1989 Oldsmobile 98 told township police someone stole a car phone from his vehicle while it was parked at Meadowbrook Country Club, 40941 Eight Mile Road Nov. 7 between 7:30-10:15 p.m. The owner told police the vehicle was unlocked

Michigan Model opponents skip board meeting

By SUZANNE HOLLYER Staff Writer

Much to the surprise of the Northville School Board, parents opposed to the use of the Michigan health-"education model were not present at the Monday board meeting.

Expecting a crowd of parents, or at least one, to attend the meeting to voice opposition to the Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education, the board prepared a statement.

"We had heard that people were coming," board President Jim Petrie -said. "I'm surprised."

The Michigan Model is a state ж capproved health curriculum, and is one option available to fill a state requirement that schools teach health education. Parents have publicly voiced opposition to portions of the model at recent meetings held by local parents and in letters to the editor.

Until Monday, the board had not responded publicly, although letters written to President Jim Petrie or the administration have been answered. he said. But board members as individuals cannot speak for the board unless in session.

We're always interested in hearing from people," he said.

Although no parents attended the meeting with concerns about the Michigan model. Petrie read a board statement on the health model.

"A committee of staff, parents and specialists spent nearly three years studying the program," he said.

*Both the board and I strongly believe that the program meets the needs of the vast majority of our students.

"I want you to know that the board and I are solidly in support of our involvement in the Michigan Model for Comprehensive Health Education."

The board provides a procedure for addressing objections to instruc-tional materials that requires parents to provide a written statement of their objections to the district's Health Advisory Committee, Petrie said.

The committee is made up of local parents, staff and county specialists. "No one has chosen to submit written opposition in a format applicable to the policy." Petrie said.

"When parents have requested information regarding the process they have received a response."

Board members and administrators chose not to attend a Nov. 1 meeting held by "parents against (the) Michigan model," according to at least one flyer, because they felt the board meetings could provide a better opportunity for concerned parents to address the group, Petrie "We thought this was a good forum to address concerns," he said.

The board, and specifically Petrie, were criticized in a Nov. 8 letter to the editor in The Northville Record.

"Will we ever know what Mr. Petrie thinks on any issues?" wrote Northville residents Ed and Cindi Brazen in the letter. "Mr. Petrie, come out from behind Dolly (McMaster, assistant superintendent for instruction)'s shadow and face your public who elected you to do a job."

The couple had planned to attend Monday's meeting but could not because of personal commitments, Ed Brazen said.

Cindi Brazen said she plans to attend the next meeting, and she thought the Monday meeting was intended to address internal board business and not parental concerns.

Parents are expected to attend the next board meeting with their concerns. The next meeting will be held Nov. 26 at Winchester Elementary School at 7:30 p.m.

"We're going to be there on the 26th," said Karen Montgomery Herndon, a parent who has written letters to the editor opposing the health model.

What's their plan for the meeting? "You'll have to be there," Herndon said.

Drunken driving charged

By MIKE TYREE and STEVE KELLMAN Staff Writers

A funeral home director transporting a human corpse to Northville was arrested and charged with drunken driving Sept. 28 in Bloomfield

Township. Bloomfield Township police said Ray Casterline, 43, operator of Casterline Funeral Home, 122 W. Dunlap, was arrested and charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol at 2:30 a.m. Sept.

Breathalyzer results reportedly measured Casterline's blood-alcohol level at .22 and .21 percent - more than twice the legal state intoxication limit.

Police said they noticed "what appeared to be a human corpse in a body bag in the rear of Casterline's

Casterline posted $100 bond and he and the body were released to an associate, police said.

Police charged Casterline with unlawful blood-alcohol level and refusing a preliminary breath test, in addition to the OUIL charge.

Casterline waived an Oct. 10 arraignment at 48th District Court. A pretrial date has yet to be set.

"I made a mistake and I am very sorry that it happened," Casterline said. "I am in a recovery program right now to correct the problem and the disease I have."

The incident may violate Michigan statutes governing licensed funeral homes, said Department of Licensing and Registration officials.

Regulation Agent Supervisor Royce Wills of the department's enforcement division also was uncertain whether the case might constitute a violation.

"It doesn't sound right, but there may be extenuating circumstances," he said. "We'd really have to look into it to see exactly what the circumstances were."

The department officials said they will not investigate the incident unless a formal complaint is filed. As of Wednesday, no such complaint had been filed. No complaints have been recorded against the funeral home in the past 10 years, which is as long as

Police 'tie one on' for safety

The City of Northville and North-ville Township police departments have announced that they have joined Michigan's 660 law enforcement agencies in showing their support of efforts to reduce drunk and drugged driving in Michigan. City and township police will dis-play red ribbons on the left door handle, left outside mirror or an-tenna of each of their patrol cars, signifying to other motorists that the holidays should be filled with warm, happy memories, not the nightmare of losing a loved one.

The red ribbon campaign was initiated by Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) several years ago as a traffic safety effort over the Thanksgiving-Christmas-New Year's holiday season. The ribbons will be displayed from Nov. 19 until the new year.

Ribbons are available to the public at no cost, and may be picked up at township police headquarters at 41600 Six Mile Road, or city hall, 215 W. Main St.

Township Police Chief Chip Snider said the red ribbon campaign serves as an important reminder to the community. No new administrative fees on future tax bills

By MIKE TYREE Staff Wnter

Members of the township board last week made a quick test of the political waters to see if an administrative fee on property tax bills would float.

It didn't. In fact, the plan sunk like a rock.

Treasurer Betty Lennox suggested that the board consider returning the recently abandoned fee to tax bills as a hedge against potential 1992 revenue shortfalls.

Lennox said a half-percent fee on winter tax bills could help produce revenue expected to be lost by faltering construction starts in the township.

"I'm afraid in 1992, revenues will not meet expenditures," she said. "I'm (also) worried about the 1991 budget because we have more expenditures than revenues."

But Lennox's suggestion was met with little enthusiasm. "It's a tax . . . call it whatever you want," said Trustee Thomas Handyside.

Supervisor Georgina Goss agreed with Handyside and said residents should not be blindsided with an ad- cent administrative fee. In 1989, the ditional tax - especially in the days following approval of a .33-mill fire department millage.

"I feel voters gave us a vote of confidence," she said. "We owe it to them (not to establish another tax)."

Township Finance Director James Graham told the board that placing a half-percent tax on winter bills alone could net the township $62,000. A one-percent tax year-round could raise approximately $200,000, he said.

Lennox said 1988 township winter and summer tax bills carried a 1-pertax was reduced to a half-percent on both collections.

In 1990, the township did not collect a fee on summer tax bills. "Since we were collecting for the school district and for Schoolcraft College and were charging them a fee, we decided not to (implement the administrative fee)," she said. Now the fee has been removed from all tax bills.

"Keep in mind that if auditors do this, efficiency will not be their ultimate goal," he said. The council directed Walters to ask Plante & Moran to outline a potential organizational review of the finance department, and include the cost of such a review.

City adopts plan to reduce deficit Police seek clues

By STEVE KELLMAN Staff Writer

The city council adopted a deficit reduction plan last Monday to address deficits in several city funds.

The plan is a routine response to state requirements regarding municipal funds, said City Manager Steven Walters. "We're required to submit a plan based on deficits existing." he said.

City voters solved a major share of the deficit with their approval of a street improvement bond Nov. 6. The approval of the $1.6-million bond will largely cover the $1.755,872 June 30 deficit in the capital projects fund. City officials believe that the bond and increased operating transfers from other city funds will eliminate the deficit.

"The bond election is obviously the key component of the capital projects fund," Walters said before voters approved it Tuesday.

The city incurred the deficit during its ongoing four-year street improvement program, when more repairs were made to city streets than originally planned under the $3 million in bonds approved in 1986.

The Downtown Development Fund also showed a June 30 deficit of $77,275. But that amount has been steadily shrinking since the establishment of the Downtown Development District in 1978, as captured taxes are received and a voter-approved bond issue is paid off. Surplus captured taxes are expected to pay off the entire deficit in the next year, while continuing to pay the debt retirement costs on the bond. The Allen Terrace Operating Fund also showed a June 30 retained earnings deficit of $22,895 as far as the state is concerned, but the debt means nothing, according to city officials. "In terms of Allen Terrace," Walters explained, the deficit is due to "the fact that we're not attempting to build up a fund to replace the building."

When city officials set up the Allen Terrace Operating Fund in 1978, their intent was solely to cover the debt retirement through rent payments, not to fund an eventual replacement of the building. Rents now pay for operating and debt retirement expenses, and repair and maintenance costs.

The city's parking fund also showed a June 30 deficit of $32,615. But the city predicts receiving about $87,400 in parking space assessments.

Township police are seeking clues to break-ins at a pair of Ridge Road homes Oct. 27, and they think the public can lend a hand.

Police believe two men driving a black Chevrolet Suburban or Chevrolet Blazer may be involved in the thefts. The men reportedly were seen using walkd-talkies near the crime scene at Ridge Road and Ridge Court around 11 a.m. Oct. 27, said police Det. Fred Yankee.

"We're looking for information and are asking anyone who saw that vehicle to give us a call." Yankee said.

Citizens can call the township police detective bureau at 348-5811, or the police department main line at 349-9400, he said.

More than $10,000 in guns, jewelry, electronic equipment, tools and cash was taken from the two homes, according to police records.

Eight rifles were stolen from one of the homes, while jewelry, including thousands of dollars worth of necklaces, rings, watches and bracelets were stolen from the other.

Contract terminated in seminary site sale

A contract to sell a portion of the St. John Provincial Seminary site on Five Mile to a Maryland firm has been terminated, said a Catholic church spokesperson.

But John Erickson, president of Retirement and Health Services Corp. in Maryland, said his firm still plans to locate a 1,000-unit retirement community on the site. He said the church's action "is at least a breach of reasonable civil ethics."

Erickson said, "I personally am quite optimistic" that the firm will eventually locate a retirement community at the former seminary.

"The conditional contract is now void," said Jay Berman, spokesperson for the Archdiocese of Detroit, which owns the 175-acre parcel at Sheldon and Five Mile roads.

There is another party that has entered into a conditional contract," Berman said, for the entire 175-acre site. He declined to identify that party.

"They're not going to be able to do that," Erickson said, adding his firm has spent "half a million dollars on architectural planning and design work" related to the project. "I don't think they can terminate the contract," Erickson said, adding he's seeking a conference with the archdiocese, which notified his firm of the contract termination by mail.

Erickson said his company has hired a Detroit law firm to represent their interests in the project.

"The conditional contract is now void . . . There is another party that has entered into a conditional contract."

> JAY BERMAN Spokesperson Archdiocese of Detroit

As to why the earlier contract was terminated, "We don't speak of fault, but there are reasons why it hasn't come to fruition," Berman said, but declined to state the reasons.

Erickson said in October that his firm hoped to close on a 35-acre piece of the property in the spring.

In 1988, the church listed all 175 acres at the site, including a golf course, for $20 million. The seminary buildings and 35 acres, excluding the course, were listed at $7.5 million. The church signed the conditional purchase agreement earlier this year for the smaller parcel, for a reported $6 million. Plymouth Township Supervisor

Maurice Breen, who with Municipal Services Director James Anulewicz visited Retirement and Health Services Corp. operations last summer in Maryland, said he didn't know who the new buyer was.

They haven't told me anything," he said, referring to the archdiocese. The 40-year-old seminary was closed by the Catholic Bishops of Michigan in June 1988 because of declining enrollment and rising costs.

The land is zoned residential, with lots at least one acre in size. Township officials said a buyer could seek another use for the property, as the property isn't likely to go to a house builder.

Since the purchase agreement was signed with Health Services Corp., about 1,000 acres of land across Five Mile Road in Northville Township were sold to Wayne County developer Robert DeMattia for a golf course, office complex and residential community.

Plymouth Township officials assess the seminary site including buildings at about $3 million. Because the land is church-owned and tax-exempt, sale to a private owner could translate to about $170,000 in potential new tax revenue for the township, according to the township assessor's office.

Heather Wadowski is no stranger to winning contests.

Three years ago she won a bicycle in a Builders Square contest, a few weeks ago she won a coloring contest at Meijer and most recently she won tickets for herself and her classmates to the Moscow Circus.

Heather entered a Perry Drug Store contest. The grand prize was 1,000 tickets to the Moscow Circus. She won the first prize of 60 tickets to the circus.

To heighten the excitement of winning, the announcement was sent via telegram.

But when it arrived, Heather did not even remember having entered the contest.

"I forgot all about it," she said. But win she did, and when Heather won, her whole class won. "We made instant friends," said Beverly Wadowski, Heather's mom. "You know how that goes."

Her new-found friends remembered their manners, and Heather remained the hero all the way through the circus intermission when they all greeted her and thanked her for the tickets.

Heather's teacher, Janet Rigney, could not go to the circus because of parent conferences, but most of her fifth-grade class at Silver Springs Elementary School made it to the circus.

The circus was fun, Heather said, but nothing like an American circus. The big question for Heather was if Africa is more than just the second largest continent to Northville teacher Barbara LeBoeuf, especially after she attended the first of a fivepart symposium on Africa and African-American heritage and was awarded a $300 grant by the program's sponsors.

LeBoeuf sees Africa as a home to beautiful art, wildlife and land, and she sees it often.

Soon to embark on her third journey to Africa, LeBoeuf will visit Senegal on the west coast for the first time in February. Last summer, she took a group of Northville High School students on a trip to Kenya. The trip was not her first, having visited the country in 1988

At Northville, LeBoeuf teaches global studies and government. She incorporates African studies into her classes when possible, but she would not mind teaching entire classes on Aírica.

"I could teach the whole year on just Africa," she said. "It's one of the areas that kids seem to be lacking."

She will be able to incorporate more African studies material into her classes in the future. LeBoeuf applied and was selected to participate in the ROADS program, or the Renaissance Outreach Alilance for the Detroit area schools program on African and African-American heritage. The nice thing is they really supply a lot of materials," LeBocuf said

(11-15-90 NR, NN)

The five-part symposia will focus on images of Africa in the media, art and literature.

The program is sponsored by the Michigan Ethnic Heritage Studies Center and the Michigan Council for the Humanities. The African Studies Center of Michigan State University cosponsored the program which meets once a month until February. The program was begun last year with a grant, said LuAnn Kern coordinator for the ROADS program.

A second symposia is under consideration for January through May, Kerns said. The second program would discuss Middle Eastern culture.

Part of the program includes awarding grants to help teachers in-corporate Africa and African American heritage into their school's curriculum.

LeBoeuf was one of about 40 participants who applied for and received the $300 grant.

At the first symposium, Ray Silverman discussed the misconceptions about African art in America.

Silverman, an African Art History professor from Michigan State University, said African art is often not portrayed as whole works, but only parts of a work.

For example, a piece of clothing may be displayed on its own in a museum, making little sense to the American visiting the display. Displayed with the entire costume, the individual article makes more sense. "He was really quite good," Le-Boeuf said.

Speakers also discussed images of Africa and the apartheid system of governing in South Africa in the American media.

At the next symposia, speakers will discuss the portrayal of Africa in literature and children's literature, black women and the impact of churches on black Americans.

LeBoeuf enjoyed the scheduled program last month, but she said the lunch break was especially enjoyable because it offered the participating teachers a chance to meet each other.

The Northville Record

Our Opinions Bridge plan points to city code refinements

The recent release of a new set of MainCentre pedestrian bridge plans by Singh Development raises the spectre of conflicting interests in city government.

The potential conflict is between architect Greg Presley's role as a member of the Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and as a paid architect for the company seeking approval of an already controversial plan.

City officials argue convincingly that Presley's dual role is not unethical, because the DDA does not have the power to approve or reject the plan. But Presley also retains a voice on at least one other board, as the DDA liaison to the Planning Commission. And that commission will have a say on the new parking deck layout which he has proposed.

As far as the work itself is concerned, Presley's iron and glass bridge designs are a notable improvement over Singh's original concept of a brick pedestrian bridge, and much more closely match the Victorian character of the city. The plan has already been approved by the city council and historic district commission, and has received a much more favorable review from commission members than previous bridge proposals.

This may be the thing that most irritates people opposed to both the concept of a pedestrian bridge and Presley's collaboration with Singh: the fact that his collaboration is so effective.

But whether or not complaints about Presleys role are motivated by opposition to the pedestrian bridge itself, the fact remains that the architect's involvement has raised questions about the city's code of ethics.

Several sections of the code call his employment by the firm into question, including the following three:

"A City officer shall not solicit or accept a gift or loan of money, goods, services, or other thing of value for the bene-

Government

"A City officer or employee shall not engage in a business transaction in which the public officer or employee may profit from his or her official position or authority."

"A City officer or employee shall not engage in or accept employment or render services for a private or public interest when that employment or service is incompatible or in conflict with the discharge of the officer's or employee's official duties or when that employment may tend to impair his or her independence of judgement or action in the performance of official duties."

True, Presley did not solicit the work in the first place. He has also made no secret of his involvement with Singh, notifying city officials when Singh first offered him the job. And one can argue what sort of profit the architect is making off his "official position or authority" if the DDA will not vote on the bridge.

One can also argue at length about the meaning of a phrase like "employment (which) may tend to impair . . . independence of judgement or action in the performance of official duties."

And maybe that's the problem.

Perhaps more than anything else, the whole affair calls into question the effectiveness of the code of ethics itself. If potential conflicts like this are so unclear, the ethics code itself should be cleared up to erase such ambiguities.

Perhaps the code should address the responsibilities of specific commissions, boards and liaisons, and define what would constitute a conflict of interest in each case. The code should also spell out more specifically what words like "profit," "benefit" and "conflict" actually mean.

Suzanne Hollyer Remember students' interests

Just the thought of becoming tongue tied can send my mouth into a frenzy of "ums," and "uhs" and reduce me to a red-faced, stuttering misfit. I never imagined that getting my point across verbally could become so difficult until I actually felt my own good ideas and logical arguments become trapped behind a foot-filled mouth completely lacking in rhetorical grace. I was saved from near emotional devastation in the sixth grade by a teacher who taught me to use creative visualization to calm my tangled tongue. This story is one of potential fear and humiliation that today still serves as a reminder that forces within me are constantly prepared to jump at the opportunity to change a brilliant soliloquy on U.S. intervention in the Third World into babbling baby talk.

My love/hate (mostly hate) relationship with my brainmouth link began in the sixth grade when I was on the debate team at Kenbrook Elementary School in Farmington Hills. I remember one particularly forgettable occasion when I tried to convince my listeners that America had been a traditionally nice country (a variation on George Bush's "kinder, gentler nation") and therefore we should continue to send money to the poor and starving in Ethiopia. "Remember the Boston tea party," I asked as my face began to redden on my way down an already doomed line of reasoning.

Things only got worse from there. I continued the rambling in strings of incoherent combinations of words that were nothing like the sentences traditionally used by humans to communicate complete thoughts to one another. I said something like: "Ah the you know, the thing I was talking about, I mean, well you know what I mean."

Fearing a future armed attack from my mouth on my brain was in the process of doing what we sixth-graders called "losing it" in preparation for a debate in front of the WHOLE school. My debate coach led me to a classroom where she had me think about the color blue, which was the favorite in color in the sixth grade. I specifically remember thinking the idea was weird, but I was a relatively good sixth-grader and I did what my teacher told me to do. I didn't just pretend; I actually concentrated on blue for about five minutes. Much to my surprise, I relaxed and went on to debate the 1989 U.S. foreign exchange policy without a glitch.

Today, not too far from my old elementary school, some Northville residents are upset by schools using creative visualization. One mother told me she was upset when her son was told in school to concentrate on a color to help him relax. He should concentrate on God, she said. I admit, I thought it was weird too, but it worked. All else aside, using creative visualization helped me solve what could have become a major dilemma. Maybe that's part of the reason I think the Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education, which teaches creative visualization among other things, has some really good ideas.

Even people who would disagree with me about creative visualization would have to agree that the model has some good things to offer. President of the Michigan Alliance of Families, Bettye Lewis, said the health model has some wonderful models of human body parts like the lungs and teeth. She would like to see them left in, and problem solving and visualization activities removed.

The parents opposed to the Michigan Model have their children's best interests in mind; so does the Board of Education and so do parents in favor of the Michigan Model. And for that matter so did Mrs. Frank, my debate coach who told me to think blue. No one wants something that's bad for kids in the schools. I just hope that if the Michigan Model debate heats up in the next few months everyone will work together. sharing their own life experiences and beliefs, without forgetting the end goal is finding what's best for Northville students.

fit of a person or organization, other than the city, which tends to influence the manner in which the public officer or employee or another public officer or employee performs official duties."

Otherwise, what's the point of having an ethics code at all?

Police consolidation makes good sense

After years of kicking the idea around and around but never appearing to consider it an actual possibility, the township and city governments suddenly seem on the verge of combining police dispatching services. And some say this may be just the first step in a phased consolidation of the full police departments.

This step would mean tremendous changes in both local governments. Even the joined dispatch, assuming it goes through, will constitute a major shift. Change can be difficult, and the impact of any consolidation on both police staff and the community at large should be carefully reviewed before the consolidation is made. But moves along these lines will almost certainly benefit the community.

Dispatch is a vital sector of police operations, as important as all the other sectors When you dial 911 dispatcher picks up the phone and coordinates the response from the appropriate police and/or fire personnel. Dispatchers also do research work to support the field officers - things like looking up the record of a driver who's been pulled over. Other administrative duties are also part of this important operation, including record keeping and monitoring ui pnsoners

When two communities operate as closely as Northville Township and the City of Northville, merging dispatch operations makes sense. Both municipalities already use the same 911 emergency number, and both are part of the Oakland County "enhanced 911" system which instantly tells the dispatcher where the call originated, even if the caller doesn't. This means that responding to a call should not be complicated by a merger. Best of all, shared staff, shared space and shared equipment will save costs on both sides. With careful implementation, layoffs may be limited to attrition - and in any case to part-time employees.

Further combining of departments may offer similar benefits; with just a surface look that certainly seems likely. Township and city officials are taking a one-step-at-a-time approach, establishing one phase before moving on. This is obviously the sensible way to approach this kind of undertaking; it ensures that the many unanswered questions get addressed as needed.

Taking this road, however far it leads, will almost certainly result in cost savings, increased efficiency and closer ties between the city and the township. We're anxious to see the progress.

How to read an editorial

Don't hesitate to take sides against an outside threat."

This advice to journalists comes from University of Nebraska professor Michael Stricklin, who recently completed a study on small newspapers and the communities they serve.

I was taken aback because I've never heard this philosophy held up as an example of good journalism. Even in J school, I was told that the purpose of an editorial page was to help formulate opinion within the community and help give the community direction To do that you do indeed have to "take sides" at times.

And the line about taking a strong stand against outside threats seemed odd to me, too. These are the easiest stands to take, after all, because they are likely to be very popular opinions within the community.

As I put the two statements together, it sounded to me like a wimp-out. "Take a strong stand on popular opinions, but don't get involved in issues, regardless of how important i wonder if some people, like Stricklin, haven't simply forgotten what the purpose of an editorial page is. I get the feeling - especially from some people who call to complain about what they have read on the editorial page - that they look at an editorial on a given topic and see it as some kind of final judgment on that issue. They see it as some kind of a final determination on what the public policy should be. If that were true, I could certainly agree with some of the umbrage they take.

But the way I view it, an editorial page isn't the final say on an issue, it is only a beginning . . . the beginning of the formulation of public opinion.

So, you see, an editorial page isn't supposed to be popular. And you aren't supposed to necessarily agree with what you read on it. Sometimes you will, one would hope. But if you agree with an editorial page all the time, then somebody isn't doing their job. Either the editorial writer isn't doing the job of challenging your thinking, or you aren't doing your job as a reader and thinking about those ideas deeply enough.

Michigan Model is worthwhile

To the editor:

The Michigan Model is a positive. award-winning program and deserves community support.

The State of Michigan has mandated that public schools incorporate a health program in their curri-culum and thus developed the Michigan Health Model. The Model uses many components of health, nutrition, anatomy, infectious disease, etc., that have been taught for years. This is the first time, however, that the curriculum has been organized at each grade level to build on knowledge obtained the previous year.

Components of the Michigan Model also teach students techniques to solve everyday conflicts with peers and others. During this process students must make some value judgements. Schools have al-ways reflected the values of the community they serve. Support of those values is an important ingredient in education. While it is primarily our responsibility as parents to impart values to our children, how can anyone object when the school reinforces such universal values as honesty. cooperation, kindness and selfcontrol?

Like it or not, we are not raising robots, but human beings. Our children make health choices every day and they need all the information they can get to make the right choices. The Michigan Health Model along with parents can help our children lead healthy, productive lives.

Conference leaves questions without answers

To the editor:

Judy Cavell, the instructor of RESA, let her professionalism slip a bit in her comments to The Northville Record. The purpose of the Michigan Model conference was to educate parents and yet she felt free to make the comment about some of those parents: "When they spoke out in class they kind of hung themselves." I as-sume that "they" did this by revealing certain "preconceived notions" that were different from the preconceived notions of Cavell and her associates. I attended the conference. I sat through one seminar where an educator flipped transparencies on and off an overhead projector so quickly that the audience couldn't possibly copy pertinent information. In the second seminar we were condes-cendingly led through a long PSP (Problem Solving with People) example. I admit I am concerned about some elements of the Michigan Model. Unfortunately, attending the conference only served to increase my concern.

One final point: There are people on both sides of this debate who are taking their position on the basis of concern for children. A good many of these people are concerned for their won children. Concern and a desire to protect children are honorable traits in any person. Therefore, the people on both sides of this debate deserve to be treated with respect.

School efforts help

To the editor: A heartfelt "Thank you" goes to Silver Springs Elementary School for a very successful "Trick-or-Treat for UNICEF" campaign. Silver Springs students raised over $500 for UN-ICEF on Halloween night, far supassing the $175 average amount expected for a school's first year of participation in the campaign. This wonderful success is owed to the help and support of Silver Springs principal Ken Pawlowski, an enthusiastic Silver Springs staff, supportive parents, generous friends, relatives and neighbors, and, most of all, dedicated trick-or-treaters. Thank you also to Detroit Savings Bank for so generously donating the time of its employees to count those precious pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters.

We, as a community, should all be proud of our children at Silver Springs who took time out of their Halloween fun to help needy children around the world. They are truly an inspiration!

and Economic Development, the governmental body that engineered the $31.75-million deal. The Charter Township of Northville . . . must vacate any and all facilities on Wayne County property bounded by Six Mile Road on the north, Five Mile Road on the south, Beck Road on the west, and Hines Park on the east," he wrote in a letter to township Supervisor Georgina Goss. "Possession of any and all township facilities must be surrendered no later than May 2, 1991."

County land is home to numerous township services, including the recycling collection center and Fire Station Three on Sheldon just north of Five Mile.

Soccer fields and a baseball field utilized by the Northville Community Recreation Department - are also located on county land, as is a vegetable garden operated by a Northville senior citizens group.

Loss of the county land will have a major impact, local officials say.

Recreation space, specifically in the form of soccer fields, is at a premium in the community. The Northville Recreation Commission last week said lack of fields is a critical ---and growing - problem.

Township Manager Richard Henningsen is preparing to move the recycling center to a community park site on Beck Road. Recycling bins will sit alongside planned soccer and baseball fields.

Fire Station Three is unmanned, but houses fire trucks and pumpers that provide service to the southern portion of the township.

Supervisor Georgina Goss recenthy sent a letter to DeMattia and asked him to consider the township's plight.

"With appropriate approvals this plan (to relocate the recycling center) more complex.

We would appreciate receiving your approval to maintain the fire station as long as your plans permit us to use the building," she wrote.

Goss said soccer field construction at the Beck Road community park may not be complete until 1992. She made an appeal to keeps the fields active for as long as possible.

"... We are requesting that the sport fields currently in use at your site by the joint recreation organization remain in use until construction warrants their removal," she wrote. Indications are that DeMattia may honor some of the township's requests.

DeMattia architect Gary Roberts told the township board last week that the developer is anxious to work with the township under guidelines of planned unit development (PUD)

The project is nearly 1,000 acres . I think we can arrive at an (acceptable solution)," Roberts said. "We can accomplish that (soccer fields). I don't see it as insurmountable."

and development plan approval. Roberts' initial step was to gain planned unit development (PUD) qualification approval from the board. PUD qualification was a formality, as several facets of the De-Mattia project fall within PUD boundaries.

The PUD, approved by the township planning commission this year. is a large-tract land-use ordinance that is supposed to encourage flexibility for the township and developers.

Roberts relished the chance to start the project talks. This is the opportunity to take the first formal step . . . a monumental step for us because we've been at it so long," he said. DeMattia's quest for the county land, which formally began more than two years ago, ended earlier this fall when the local developer signed a contract with Wayne County. The purchase agreement called for the developer to pay the county a $300,000 non-refundable fee for land encompassing the former child development center.

Falls include development of a light industrial corridor along Five Mile and north on Beck Foad. Light industrial business areas will account for approximately 30 percent of the development, Roberts said.

An 18-hole championship golf course will also receive early attention, according to plans. The golf course will be nestled through the mid-portion of land west of Sheldon and north of Five Mile, Roberts said.

He said the course will serve a trans-

DeMattia has seven months to secure zoning for the land. After a May deadline, the developer must pay the balance of the $31.75-million purchase price. Roberts said Huntington Falls will be designed with a "welcome to Northville Township approach." He said white picket fences in a "Kentucky, rural Lexington" style will line Sheldon Road north of Five Mile. Crumbling, decayed brick buildings now dominate the county land sile.

Once zoning and environmental investigations are accomplished, the developer will move ahead with early stages of the project, Roberts said.

"We have a very heavy emphasis on children's books," says Berclay Ruschak, owner of Bookstall on the Main in Northville. "I sell a lot of wonderful children's books."

Ruschak, a Northville resident for 21 years and member of the American Booksellers Association, has owned Bookstall on the Main for the past five years. During that time she has given the store her own unique flavor

"In order to be successful in a small business, particularly in the book business, you have to find a niche. Mine seems to be the children's books."

Despite the emphasis on the many Caldicott and Newberry awardwinning books for children, Bookstall is not limited to one genre. There are also best sellers, and The New York Times best-selling hardcovers are offered at a 20-percent discount. She also carries paperbacks, coffee table books, and three or four books focusing on local history. According to Ruschak, the local history books are all done for and by the Northville Historical Society to which the bookstore gives all of the proceeds.

As another way of supporting the community, she sells tickets for plays or other community functions. Right now, I'm doing it for the symphony. I've done it for a number of different things . . . with all the pro-ceeds going to the organizations." Ruschak says despite Bookstall's small size, she is very pleased with her present location. She admits, however, that being able to expand would have advantages. "Size does not hinder me. Sometimes we have to order."

Some of these advantages would include expanding the children's books selections and adding magazines and newspapers. Despite the store's small size, she does manage to carry a wide variety of stock. Not only does she carry fiction books in a wide variety of genres, but also reference books, calendars, rubber stamps, bookmarks and wrapping paper. There are also books on tape, Cliff's Notes and a few puzzles. Space considerations keep her from having everything on the shelves simultaneously.

"I have computer books," she says. to illustrate that point. "And I'm not sure that it has reached people's attention vet.

Bookstall on the Main may be a small store, but it hasn't gone unnoticed. Mitch Albom made a booksigning appearance last week; and Kathleen Ripley Leo, author of a book on Northville history, was in for a signing last year. Coming next spring a children's book author will be making an appearance. Ruschak hopes to have more book-signings and admits that she would love to have Martin Kundford, author of the "Waldo" series of children's books, make an appearance.

Ruschak is currently using information on microfiche to put in orders for books, but is planning to replace it with a "books in print" computer program. "Every book in print will be on that computer," she says. She will receive a hard disk four times a year, and updated floppy disks every week.

When ordering books, Ruschak works a great deal with distributors. There is one specific distributor which is excellent. I usually get my books in a week to 10 days.

Unlike some large book chains, Bookstall will not automatically obligate people who order a book to buy it even if it doesn't turn out to be what they were expecting. Special discount books and others that cannot be returned would, however, be an exception. Ruschak reports that very few books people ordered were not liked, but suggests that people try to get hold of a copy at a library to see if it meets their needs. Sometimes she's even gone to other stores to do research for customers herself.

Ruschak is actively involved with school business and has a lost of customers are teachers. "I offer the teachers a 10-percent discount, and with schools with a large order, I can offer more."

Ruschak has twice supplied the books for the Northville Library's annual fund-raising dinner. Both Albom and mystery writer William X. Kienzle have been guest speakers at that event.

Bookstall on the Main is located at 116 E. Main in Northville. The hours are 106 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. 10-8 on Thursday; and starting Nov. 18, will be open Sundays through Christmas.

These hours are not etched in stone, however. "If we're busy and someone comes in the store, I never say it's time to leave," Ruschak says. "I don't believe in doing that. If someone's looking, I'll let them look . . . Personal, friendly service is what we go by.

"I consider this a quality store, and whatever I have in here I want it to be quality merchandise."

How is it that some people are so tremendously successful and others, like me, seem to struggle along, barely getting done what I need to, much less accomplishing "great things?"

There is, of course, no one specific answer to your question because it takes many factors to produce success. These include aptitude, intelligence, education, charisma, willingness to take risks, etc.

Let me touch on just two important factors: attitude and delegation. First is attitude. Little thinkers spend an inordinate amount of time worrying about little details, while big thinkers devote their time to making big things happen. These people are global thinkers who can see the "Big Picture."

Global thinkers understand which actions pay back the greatest return. They learn early on how to delegate. even when there are no official subordinates. They identify appropriate times to hire out work, bring in consultants and even learn subtle ways of delegating upwardly (to an immediate supervisor or higher).

About 20 years ago I knew a young married man who started a savings plan of $5 per month (a tiny amount even then). That same man now lives in a fabulous penthouse and earns close to $1 million a year. His success did not come from savings but rather an ability to delegate and a philosophy that he take off an hour a day, a day a week, and a month a year for personal time.

He is not only financially successful but is also in great physical shape because he takes time to exercise daily. Happily, he also still takes time to maintain contacts with longtime friends. This man could only accomplish what he has in one way - by working smart.

When interviewed on Larry King's show recently, Donald Trump admitted that he "couldn't possibly get everything done through hard work and long hours." Instead, he said he "surrounds himself with good people." This, I believe, is what separates Wixom-based NLB CORP., a world-leading manufacturer of high pressure water-jetting systems, for the automotive and other industries, has begun construction of an addition to its headquarters complex.

Schonsheck Inc., also of Wixom, has been selected to design and build the addition of approximately 30,000 square feet to NLB's existing facilities, which will total over 100,000 square feet when construction is finished. NLB management estimates the construction of additional offices and manufacturing space in Wixom will make room for approximately 50 new employees.

A groundbreaking ceremony was held in September to kick off the construction. NLB president, Forrest Shook said, "This expansion will give us more operating room both in office space and for manufacturing. This is especially necessary to meet our projected growth and handle additional product lines."

The Wixom location is home to NLB corporate headquarters, engineering and manufacturing, research and development, customer service, and central parts warehouse. Additionally, NLB operates regional sales and service offices in Houston; Mickleton, N.J.; Atlanta; and Los Angeles.

Established in 1971, NLB is the largest manufacturer in North America of high pressure waterjetting systems and accessories used for heavy-duty industrial cleaning and plant maintenance operations. Under the program, student interns were chosen from more than 50 construction technology and civil engineering applicants from Michigan colleges and universities. The students spent at least 12 weeks with an MRBA contractor, gaining on-site experience in the field of road construction.

Nagle applied for the internship because he wanted a summer position that would enable him to deal with people as well as to apply the business concepts he had learned in college.

Among his assignments with Cadillac, Nagle did takeoffs, measured coordinates and monitored company projects.

Cut your losses through taxes

Here's a chilling thought: you return from vacation to discover your basement is filled with four inches of water. The collectibles you had recently moved into the basement are completely ruined. You run for your insurance policy but find out it doesn't cover flood damage. Is there any way you can recover some of your losses?

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, you can get some relief by deducting a portion of your loss on your federal income tax return. Although you probably weren't thinking about taxes when you surveyed your flood damage, ignoring certain lax consequences can make a bad situation worse.

WHAT IS A CASUALTY?

You've experienced a casuality loss, but does the tax law see it that wav? To be considered a casualty, a loss must be sudden, unexpected or unusual. If termites gnaw away at your home for years, the damage they inflict is gradual and will not qualify for a deduction. If an old rotting tree finally gives way after years and crashes into your porch roof, tax law may not accept your claim that the loss was unexpected.

Some typical casualities, as defined by tax law, are fires, hurricanes, earthquakes, floods, tornadoes, storms, car accidents, vandalism and even loss of deposits in a bankrupt financial institution.

Money Management

FIGURING YOUR LOSS

If you determine that the damages you suffer would qualify as a casuality, your next step is to figure the amount of your loss. A common mistake is to assume the damages are equal to the replacement value of the lost property. This isn't the case.

As a rule, the amount of a loss is equal to the decrease in the property's fair market value, or its adjusted basis prior to the incident. whichever is less. The adjusted basis is what you paid for the property. minus depreciation and plus any increase in value as a result of improvements.

For example, a woman catches her diamond ring in a car door. When she tries to free her finger, the diamond pops out of the setting and falls into a drain in the street. The ring was purchased for $2,000 20 years ago. This is the ring's adjusted basis. Its fair market value before the accident was $12,000. The decrease in value as a result of the casualty is also $12,000 since the ring is irretrievably lost. According to tax law, she must figure her loss as the lesser of the two figures, or $2,000.

HOW MUCH CAN YOU DEDUCT?

To determine the deductible amount of a casualty loss, first reduce the amount of each separate casualty loss experienced during the year by the amount of insurance reimbursement you can reasonably expect to receive. If your insurance covers you for your full loss, you are not eligible for deduction - even if you choose not to file a claim.

If your loss exceeds the insurance coverage, the noncovered loss may be deductible. Regardless of whether you've received insurance funds. or even submitted a claim, you must still reduce your loss by the amount of the insurance coverage. Next, subtract $100 from each loss. This $100 limit applies separately to each individual personal property loss, so that if you suffer five casualty losses during the year, a $100 deduction will be applied for each loss. Next, add up your total casualty and theft losses for the year. Any amount that exceeds 10 percent of your adjusted gross income is deductible.

TIMING IS EVERYTHING

When it comes to filing for a casualty loss, timing is very important. In one case, a taxpayer waited two years to claim a loss for damage his house suffered in a drought. However, he was denied the right to deduct any of the money he spent on repairs because the Tax Court viewed the damage as progressive deterioration, which is not a deductible loss under tax law.

If your home is damaged by a storm or other natural disaster, be sure to save any news clippings that can prove your claim. If your home is burglarized, report the crime immediately and ask the police to give you a copy of their report of the incident.

SUBSTANTIATING YOUR LOSSES

To substantiate the value of your lost or damaged property, gather any photographs or videotapes you may have that show your property before it was damaged, as well as after the casualty. Locate any purchase re-ceipts you may still have for the lost or damaged items. Make a list of every item for which you don't have receipts as soon as possible.

If your home or landscape was damaged or destroyed, ask a professional appraiser to assess your losses. Choose an appraiser who knows the property values of homes in your neighborhood, or someone who has worked on your home in the past. The appraiser's fee is a miscellaneous expense, deductible to the extent that it exceeds 2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

If the IRS decides to audit your claim, have insurance reports and any repair bills on hand to help prove your casualty loss.

You may not be able to predict when disaster will strike, but you can be more financially prepared by buying enough insurance, keeping adequate records, taking a room-byroom inventory of your house and knowing how to maximize casualty loss deductions.

ARBY'S INC. recently named Northville resident Tom Price and Ann Arbor resident Bob Ressler winners of its "Franchisee of the Month^{*} award.

In winning the award, Price and Ressler were commended for their quality of operations, outstanding sales and commitment to the Arby's system by President and Chief Operating Officer Frank Belatti.

"Arby's success is dependent on its business partners' ability to share a common pursuit of excellence," Belatti said. "Tom and Bob's efforts to incorporate these principles of excellence into their operation is both a cause and effect for our continued growth."

Prior to becoming Arby's franchisees in 1987, Price practiced law in Boca Raton, Fla., and Ressler was in operations management for a commercial carrier in Boca Raton. The two partners now own Wolverine Food Systems Inc., which operates three Arby's in Brighton, Owosso, and Livonia and employs more than 100 people. The company plans to build an Arby's in Romulus this year.

Headquarted in Atlanta, Arby's is a leading international fastfood chain, with more than 2,300 restaurants in the United States, Canada, Asia, the Middle East and the Carribbean. In 1989, the company reached a record $1.3 billion in sales, a 13 percent increase over the previous year, and opened a record 239 restaurants. Ninety percent of Arby's restaurants are franchise-owned and operated by independent entrepeneurs. Arby's is ranked as an industry leader in areas such as technology, product marketing, nutritional and consumer information, and community service.

In 1986, drug abuse officially became America's number one concern.

In that same year, the Partnership for a Drug-Free America was organized by the American Association of Advertising Agencies (AAAA). Its mission: to decrease drug use in this country by changing attitudes.

Many of the country's top persuaders-members of the AAAA-were enlisted by the Partnership. Some 200 ads created for all major media have been donated by the agencies. The messages have been run by the media on a pro bono basis at an estimated weight of $310 million since the program began in April 1987. Massive consumer surveys have tracked the results. Some highlights:

From 1987 to 1989, children who think "it's easy to get hooked" rose 5 percentage points. Those who are "scared of drugs" rose 4.

Teenagers who "don't want to hang around drug users" increased 6 points. And those who think "doing cocaine occasionally is risky" went up 4.

Most significant: Changes in attitudes and consumption were greatest in markets where the advertising appeared the most: Among Adults Low Media High Media Basic Attitudes +5.2% +9.7%Fear of Drugs -1.0% +3.7%Act Against Use -1.7% +4.5%Two independent studies confirm declining usage. One, from the University of Michigan, found drug use among high school seniors to be down. Marijuana usage dropped from 21.0 percent in 1987 to 16.7 percent in 1989. Cocaine use fell from 4.3 percent to 2.8 percent in the same period.

The second was conducted by The National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA). It found that, between 1985 and 1988, trial of marijuana and cocaine among people 18 to 25 declined at a significant rate.

Releasing this data, NIDA's director, Dr. Charles R. Schuster, said, "...a significant decrease in trial and occasional use of illicit drugs is a result of major changes in social attitudes. In my opinion, the Partnership's messages have had a direct impact on these attitudes and usage declines."

At a special White House conference, Gordon S. Black, Ph.D., president of the firm that conducted the Partnership research, concluded, "If these were the results of a tracking study for one of your own advertising campaigns, I think your advertising director would be rather pleased, to say the least."

To get a booklet that summarizes the findings, please write to The Committee on the Value of Advertising, Department B, American Association of Advertising Agencies, 666 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10017.

These studies confirm the power of advertising. It can change attitudes. It can cause action. Or, in this case, inaction.

Creative Living REAL ESTATE SECTION

The Dream One Contemporary exterior meets energy-savings interior

By James McAlexander

Dream One's exterior features a natural wood, which enhances its contemporary nature, yet is reminiscent of an old English cottage with clipped gable roof and exposed exterior beams.

A recessed entry and three alcoves, two on the front and one on the right side, are exterior special features.

The formal entry, with a closet to the left, leads into a sunken living room. Designed with enough wall space for bookshelves, pictures and easy fumiture placement, the living room also features a corner fireplace.

Half-walls or railings separate the dining room from the living room and entrance hall. A double skylight in the dining room occurs at the ridge of the roof so that an interesting cathedral effect is created.

Dream One comes complete with a medium-size, U-shaped kitchen. The efficiency connects with dining room, the family room and the patio, through a service window. Just off the kitchen is a breakfast nook, with windows on three sides. Adjacent to the nook is a deep, shelved closet for the home's washer and drver.

The left portion of Dream One is the bedroom area. The hallway leading to the bedrooms holds the forced air unit closet, water heater closet and a large linen closet. At the end of the hallway, a double-door entry leads into the master suite. The dressing area features a double vanity, walk-in closet and private bath.

Located across from the master suite are two bedrooms. Both bedrooms fea-

IASH Homeowners try to thwart mailbox vandals

By Jim Wood

Driving the roads these mornings, you see them: mailboxes on the ground or smashed and leaning crazily on their posts like bodies after a wreck. Their little bent flags will stop no letter carriers this morning.

Night-riding box-bashers have struck again. Out from the house comes the owner with a letter to mail, and stops as he catches sight of the disaster. He studies it a moment in relative calm. Then there is a visible sigh, then the anger, the fist raised to the heavens, which drops as he turns away in defeat.

This scenario-which is commonplace year round in these parts-was especially prevalent last week, when young hoodlums took to the streets for Devil's Night. Along with the usual assortment of window soapings, the vandals were also responsible for quite a few mailbox bashings. So what can you do?

Arrest the rascals? Very difficult, but it's happened. The law says you have to see them do it-and catch them. You must actually see their faces. Otherwise, they just say friends borrowed their car. So just getting the license number will not suffice.

No, when it comes to mailbox bashing, prevention is the best medicine. If you live on a road where bashings take place with regularity, it might be best to head off an attack by fortifying your mailbox.

Quite a few residents in Livingston County and the surrounding area have already taken this step, making their mailboxes bash-proof in a number of ways.

Vengeful, and imaginative, bashees dream of mailboxes that blow up in a cloud of red pepper and marking paint when dealt a high level of violence, or erupt like a bazooka loaded with mace.

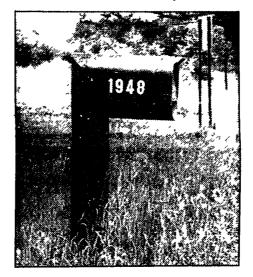

Short of that, you can resort to armor. Some citizens have constructed attractive brick porticos over their boxes, showing just the door. People put barrels around their boxes, too, while others bolt together constructions of steel plate and heavy pipe. These often work quite a while. Until some basher takes it as a challenge.

One unlikely person (a man of the cloth) suggested an inflated mailbox weighted on the bottom like those toys kids punch that bounce back up again.

The weapons of the basher are as conjectural as his personality (if any), but a study of impact marks point to axes, baseball bats and possibly sledges, police authorities say. The vehicle of choice is probably a pickup truck because of room needed to swing the bat or axe without decapitating the driver.

Owners of this mailbox on Byron Road have given into vandals and now use a Post Office box.

The Milford Times, The South Lyon Herald, The Northville Record and The Novi News nights: fetch it to the basement and back out in the morning.

The fact is, bashing mailboxes is not only against the law, it's a rotten thing to do.

Consider: an elderly person cannot dig up and replace a post that has been broken off and damaged beyond repair. Especially in frozen ground. Nor can they mix and pour cement. And a new box can further test a marginal budget. According to Delores Maidlow, Howell postmaster, there are alternatives: the post office will hold mail for people, or they can rent a post office box. Or make a temporary mailbox by putting a post into a sand-filled coffee can or concrete blocks. But these are temporary solutions, she said, and the kind of thing "that messes up the system." The Post Office is designed to deliver the great majority of mail to homes and businesses.

And the problem with holding mail is that senior citizens and those without transportation cannot get to the post office.

ture ample closet space and are just a step away from the main bathroom. Featuring a planter area at the end of the tub, the main bathroom comes complete with shower, a window and a recess for privacy. There is also space for a mirror wall if desired.

Dream One plans call for energysaving features. Air and water heaters inside the house, as well as insulation in walls, ceilings and floors, make the Dream One an economical home. Since the Dream One is only 50 feet wide, it will fit most any city lot.

For a study plan of the Dream One 108-06, send $5 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307 CN, Eugene, OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

One thought on identifying these sneaks-police and postal authorities are agreed they're almost always young people that have been drinking.

And then, of course, you can cop out. It saves your box but it's a lot of work. You can do what you do with your battery on below-zero

The other day, she said, the Michigan State Police stopped in on behalf of a senior "who had just had it" with the mail vandals and called the police.

"We try to work with them (residents) and accommodate them," she said.

But it would be a lot easier for people and their post office if the bashers bought themselves a punching bag and laid their bats in the corner.

Equity sharing enables families to buy home

By James M. Woodard

Most families find that buying a home in today's market is increasingly difficult. The key problem is usually accumulating enough cash for the required down payment.

However, one technique is working with notable success. It's the use of an equitysharing arrangement. And new variations on that concept are now emerging,

Equity sharing is a plan in which a thirdparty investor provides all or part of the cash down payment for a home purchaser. In return for the use of his money, the investor is given part ownerhip in the property and a share in the equity buildup. And he often receives modest interest (or rent) payments from the buyer-occupant.

Even though home sales and median prices have recently been declining in some particularly high-priced areas, existing prices and down-payment requirements are too much for most families to handle on their own.

Generally, home prices have been appreciating (rising) at a greater rate than the average person can save for a down payment. Thus, the situation calls for assistance by an outside investor.

Contractual agreements by equitysharing participants vary widely. Normally, they are individually structured to meet the specific needs of buyer-occupant and investor.

As the popularity of this concept grows, more real estate brokerage firms are launching "special programs" to facilitate equitysharing transactions. While the firms' advertising often make it appear their program is very unique, most of them are not.

The programs often consist of one or more individuals who have studied the equity-sharing concept and know how to prepare a contract. The advertising is primarily used to promote new listings and in some cases to encourage contracts by prospective buyers with minimal downpayment funds.

However, there are now several new firms that handle equity-sharing transactions exclusively. They are responding to the growing consumer demand.

At least one firm has come up with a unique variation on the equity-sharing concept. A firm launched last year, California Funding, offers a program in which the home seller is the outside investor.

In this arrangement, the seller typically carries back 20 percent of the purchase price. The primary mortgage lender finances 80 percent of the price, leaving the buyer-occupant with no cash down payment requirement.

California Funding sets up the equitysharing (joint venture) agreement. The firm then monitors and manages the entire transaction and even gaurantees full payment to the investor-seller.

In this arrangement, the seller receives 50 percent ownership in the property. He receives a small interest on his investment, payable when the house is sold or other settlement is made in five years. And he receives half of the value appreciation.

At the end of the five-year term, the buyer-occupant will either sell the house, refinance it, or buy out the investor.

For their work and guarantee, the firm charges the buyer a fee of 4 percent of the sale price.

"Most of our buyer-occupant clients are either first-time home buyers or recently divorced persons," said Carolyn Obrecht, coowner.

The firms's primary source of business is real estate brokers.

Q. Why did actor Dennis Weaver build his new home with such unconventional materials as old auto tires and beer cans?

A. Weaver is not only one of our finest and most diversified actors, he is also a very concerned and active environmentalist. He is quick to demonstrate his commitment to this cause, in actions as well as words. A prime example is the planning and construction of his new, 9,000-square-foot residence on the western slope of the Colorado Rockies, near Ridgway. This unique, fully solar house is the ultimate environment-friendly home. It does indeed include such building materials as old auto tires (packed with durt) and beer cans.

The selected materials and energy sources are readily available without generating a negative impact on Earth's resources and environment.

"It's vitally important that we live and work in harmony with nature," Weaver stressed in a recent talk delivered to a group of professional communicators in West Lake Village, Calif.

"If we don't solve environmental problems now, nothing else matters. We must actively cooperate in this pursuit. We cannot continue to destroy our natural lifesupport systems."

Incidential'y, Weaver is also a cofounder and current president of a nonprofit organization called LIFE (Love Is Feeding Everyone). This is a food recovery and distribution program, providing food for needy individuals and families throughout the Los Angeles area.

Inquiries are invited and may be answered in this column. Write James M. Woodard, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Dicgo, CA 92112-0190.

Chrysanthemums are November's flower

BY PATRICK DENTON The flower of the month for November is the chrysanthemum, national flower of Japan and longstanding symbol of a life of case and joviality in China.

There are actually many different types of chrysanthemum, but the best-known and top favorite among home gardeners is the florists' chrysanthemum, C. morifolium.

Florists' chrysanthemums are commonly available as rooted cuttings in the spring or potted plants to enjoy just about year round. They come in every color except blue and range in flower shape from neat pompons and anemonelike flowers to big double blooms with curled, spidery, quilled and spoonshaped petals. To be at their best, these plants need bright light, lots of water and a fertile, well-drained soil.

Though florists' chrysanthemums are traditionally prized for autumn color when grown in the garden, their time of bloom depends largely on what we do with them. Left to their own devices, most will flower during the summer. But for stocky, bushy plants that are full of flowers from mid-September onward, the secret is to nip off the growing tips on each shoot every two or three weeks until early July. Then let the stems grow and develop flower buds.

Florists' chrysanthemums plants grown in pots sunk in the garden offer the option of bringing a plant or two indoors, or onto the patio or deck, to enjoy in bloom during the autumn. This is a way in which home gardeners in short-season, cold-winter areas can enjoy these mums.

Special care is needed, however, to ensure the soil does not dry out and that the plants are fertilized every two weeks until the buds show color. To renew chrysanthemum plants, or to increase their numbers, use the first spring shoots from garden plants (or potted plants wintered frost-free) as cuttings. Or slice small, young pieces from the outer edges of older plants.

Another popular perennial chrysanthemum is C. maximum, the shasta daisy. These are the familiar leathery-leaved plants with white daisy flowers in summer. Commonly available as plants, shasta daisies are also easy to grow from seed.

Single, double and shaggyflowered forms are available, in plant sizes from regular two- to three-foot-tall to dwarf types such as Little Miss Muffet and Snow Lady.

shasta daisy is Esther Read, valued for its long period of bloom.

Chrysanthemum frutescens is a short-lived perennial that we grow as an annual in the flower garden and large planters. This is the wellknown marguerite, or Paris daisy, a multibranched, tireless producer of daisy-like flowers in white, yellow or pink. Marguerites bloom all summer and stay most shapely when they are pruned lightly once or twice. Keep these plants going from cuttings taken in late summer, or buy new ones in the spring.

Chrysanthemum coccineum is the painted daisy, or pyrethrum, a bushy, heat-loving perennial with longstemmed single or double daisylike flowers in red, pink, white and cream. The plants combine nicely in the garden with bearded irises, excellent cut flowers.

Usually listed in catalogs as matricaria, Chrysanthemum parthenium (feverfew) is a shortlived perennial that is easy to grow from seed and enjoy as an annual. Several varieties are available in plants 6 to 24 inches tall, with small white or yellow flowers. The taller types are good for cutting, while the smaller plants are excellent for edgingbeds and growing pots.

A new variety called Santana forms low mounds with small, double buttonlike white flowers. It blooms fast and lasts long in flower.

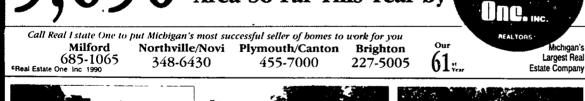

Chrvsanthemum balsamita is a sweet-scented perennial herb that is commonly called Bible leaf, or costmary. The leaves on this plant are very decorative-gray-green, oval, delicately scalloped and freshly

A longstanding popular fully double lupins and delphiniums, and provide fragrant. I use them as aromatic book marks.

Chrysanthemum carinatum is the annual summer or tricolor chrysanthemum, a delightful oldfashioned flower that often shows up in mixtures. The blooms are distinctive for their showy single, purple, bronze, rust, pink, crimson, bright yellow and white colors ; arranged in contrasting bands around a dark center.

Another easily grown annual chrysanthemum is C. coronarium, the garland chrysanthemum found : listed in catalogs with the Chinese vegetables as shungiku, or chop suey greens. This is a wonderful plant, quickly producing superb, sweet-tart young greens for salads and stirfries. I always leave a few plants to 1 flower and enjoy the bright single yellow daisy blooms.

Game-bird china is big with collectors

All china with pictures of game birds is collectable.

BY JAMES G. MCCOLLAM Q. Enclosed is a picture of a shallow bowl; it is 11 inches in diameter. On the bottom is 'Coronet—Limoges, France." Does this have any value?

A. All china with pictures of game birds is collectible. Your bowl was imported by George Borgfeldt & Co. in New York about 1900. It would probably sell for about $125 to $135.

Q. I am familiar with most Limoges china, but the enclosed mark has me stumped. Can you identify the maker and give me some idea what a 45-plece service for eight would be worth?

A. This mark was used by LeGrand & Co. The company was established in Limoges, France, in 1924 and was still in business a few

A 45-piece service for eight would probably sell for $365 to $385 complete. Q. I have a cookie iar that features a black mammy and is decorated in orange, blue and green. It has a wicker handle. Can you tell me when this was made and if it has any value? A. This is classified as black memorabilia and was made during the bigotry of the early 1900s. It is collected as a part of black history and the struggle for equality. Your cookie jar would probably sell for $300 to $400.

Q. You have written about old calendar plates being valuable. What about just plain calendars. I have a 1904 calendar with 12 pictures of beautiful young women painted by Charles Dana Gibson

A. Any early art by Charles Dana Gibson is collectible. A calendar such as you describe would probably sell for about $300 in really good condition.

Q. Can you tell me something about the vintage and value of a hen-cover milk glass dish marked "Westm or eland"? It is diamond basket weave and is 8 inches long and 5 inches wide.

A. The Westmoreland Glass Co. was founded in Grapeville, Pa., in 1899. They are famous for their milk glass.

Your dish was probably made in the 1920s and might sell in the $50 to $75 range

Like our commitment to outstanding community newspapers for example.

It was only a couple of weeks ago that we changed our name from Sliger/ Livingston Publications to HomeTown Newspapers. But you've probably noticed that nothing else has changed. We're still bringing you the same excellent community newspapers that you've learned to depend on for everything you need to know to live in your home town.

The Michigan Press Association (MPA) hasn't noticed much difference since we changed our name either. In fact, the MPA acknowledged our continued commitment to excellence by awarding us a total of 21 awards in the recent Better Newspapers Contest. That makes HomeTown Newspapers the most honored newspaper chain in the state. Here's a look at how we did.

Traffic on Novi Rd. between Twelve Oaks Mall and West Oaks

Novi Rd. at I-96

Ernie Aruffo is a happy man. After months of work on Novi's recently passed road bond proposal, he's looking forward to smoother driving in the area.

"I want to think positively," he said, offering a list of the changes to come that will improve the difficult driving areas.

Aruffo listed many changes he looks forward to, including the Haggarty Connector ('a blessing') which he said will ease the congestion between Haggerty and Novi roads and Eight Mile and Ten Mile roads.

He spoke of projects that will provide new Haggerty-to-Novi, Eight Mile-to-Ten Mile area Aruffo described is still, at this time, challenging to the mind and spirit.

challenging to the mind and spirit. Deputy Chief Richard Faulkner of the Novi Police Department, as well as Aruffo, credits the work of the North Central Novi Traffic Planning Committee for ironing out many traffic problems in the area over recent years. The group, led by Novi Police Chief Lee BeGole, is comprised of police officers, merchants, planning commission members and many other community representatives.

"Over the past couple years (the committee) has resolved many of the traffic problems," Faulkner said. "That's almost an "When you're tied up in traffic the minutes seem like hours, but it's really not that bad," Faulkner said. "Basically if you just bide your time and listen to WJR, it's not that bad."

Are we there yet?

He takes the short cuts so he doesn't have to stop.

"We go out of our way in a sense, but I like to keep moving," he explained. "People in this neck of the woods are so used to getting where they're going without having to stop for traffic."

Last Sunday afternoon, Faulkner said, he saved some time by taking one of his shortcuts — he said it saved 15 minutes and almost all of it was on paved roads. To get to M-59 and Crescent Lake Road, he said, he:

"All will be future blessings," Aruffo said. But even though the road bond in Novi is expected to lead to smoother sailing on area streets, it's hard to predict the exact length of time before these changes are all in effect and operating smoothly.

In spite of recent road improvements on Novi Road near Twelve Oaks Mall, driving in the area can still be difficult, and the impossibility but a lot of little things have made a lot of difference." The committee, for example, was responsible for the widening of Novi Road in front of Twelve Oaks Mall.

Faulkner said he also has his own tricks for getting around the area.

"When you live out in this neck of the woods you learn to take shortcuts," he said.

As much as he hates to get on dirt roads, he said, he and his wife use them if it means getting somewhere without the hassle of traffic jams. "Took Meadowbrook to Thirteen Mile; Thirteen Mile to Decker; Decker to Pontiac Trail; Pontiac Trail to Welch Rd; Welch Rd. to Oakley Park; Oakley Park to Martin; Martin to Richardson Lake; Richardson Lake to Union Lake; Union Lake to Williams Lake; Williams Lake to M-59; M-59 to Crescent Lake Rd."

Volunteers

Skodack helps with more than horses

By LESLIE PERIERA Special Writer

Linda Skodack has always had a thing about horses.

But after getting rid of the horses she owned together with her daughters for seven years, Skodack had no choice but to focus her energy and love of the animals into something else.

Luckily, about six months ago, she happened upon Novi's Tollgate 4-H Educational Center, which was desperately searching out some volunteers to help start up their new handicapped riding program for "exceptional equestrians."

"Basically, I do whatever they need me to do," says Skodack.

And what the organizers of the farm have needed from her has ranged from helping with mailings in the office to shoveling manure out in the barn.

Skodack's favorite part of her volunteer work, however, is the work she gets to do with the handicapped horseback riders, in a special program sponsored by the 4-H Association.

"It is so rewarding if you can just get a smile out of one of them." says Skodack.

The riders who participate in Tollgate's Exceptional Equestrian programs all have physical or emotional disabilities ranging from minor to severe. The riding program allows these children to get up on horse with a maximum amount of supervision so they can experience the thrill of riding on a horse. Program sponsors hope that through the horsback riding lessons, both the participants' self-esteem and motor coordination will increase.

"To see how some of these children progress along is really wonderful," says Skodack.

Skodack usually serves as a sidewalker for a handicapped child when the riding classes are in session.

Tracie Surdu, daughter of Greg and Margaret Surdu, has been named to the Universal Advisory Board of the Universal Cheerleaders Association. Tracle was one of the 40 young women selected from over 70,000 who attended UCA camps last summer.

Members were selected on the basis of community involvement, academic honors and achievements, and extracurricular activities. Tracie is a cheerleader at Northville High School and is being considered as a UCA instructor for the summer of 1991.

"These young women will assist us in many areas. We formed the advisory board to get their opinions and ideas on cheerleading and in order to make our educational program even better," said Becky Reginelli of the Universal Cheerleaders Association. "We will also ask them about trends: music, clothes, social issues - anything that interests teen-agers today.

These towns live only in memories

Throughout Wayne and Oakland Counties there once existed a number of thriving towns, filled with growth and promise, but destined to ultimately wither up and vanish forever.

Springwells Township, now represeanted only by Springwells Street in Detroit, was one of these towns. Once forming Detroit's southwest boundary between Dearborn and the river, the township held a place of infamy during the War of 1812, as the site of Detroit's degrading surrender to the British.

Greenfield Township near today's Creenfield Road - created the northern outskirts of Detroit in the early 1800s. Located just east of Redford. this township flourished mainly as of these once thriving towns. The the location of the D.M. Ferry Seed name Meads Mill is known today Company farm.

By the 1870s, both of these townships had been absorbed by the encroaching City of Detroit, thus disappearing permanently.

Today the name Kensington in Oakland County evokes images of rolling hills and beautiful lakes. For a short while, during the 1830s, the area boasted a small but active community. Developers were confident that the area would expand to rival Detroit as a business center.

Its downfall came about with the national Panic of 1837, which hit Michigan about two years later. The Kensington Bank was a "wildcat" bank, one that was unable to pay cash on its bank notes.

When the bank failed, the city soon followed. In less than 10 years the village went from a boom town to a ghost town. A century later the area known as Kensington once again began to emerge, but this time as a nature center and metropolitan park. All remnants of city life, however, are long gone.

Northville is the site of yet another mainly as the middle school off of Six Mile near Northville Road. Mead's Mill - also called Waterford - was actually the name of a town once located in that area.

In 1837, two brothers named Ramsdell established the land bounded by Sheldon and Haggerty Roads, Five and Six Mile as a village and called it Waterford.

A few years earlier, however, another set of brothers named Meads also settled in the same area and built a large flour mill. They called the place Mead's Mills, making it official with a post office in that name. The two names co-existed peacefully for many years.

The town -- whatever it chose to be called — had high hopes and a prom-ising future. The Mead brothers' mill produced hundreds of barrels of flour a day, while other related industries were equally successful.

By the early 19th century, Waterford - or Mead's Mills - was a bustling, prosperous community. The mill became a stop on the "Underground Railroad," helping slaves escape to Canada from the South. Then, in 1850, the town was hit by disaster. The mill caught fire and burned to the ground.

Undaunted, the Meads quickly rebuilt. Their new mill was, reportedly, five stories high and the largest of its kind in the state.

Businesses boomed for several more years in the mill and in the town. Unfortunately, prosperity was not to last. In the early 1870s another inferno destroyed the mill, and with its fall went the entire town. As bu-sinesses and factories expanded in nearby Plymouth and Northville, poor floundering Waterford didn't stand a chance. It, like its ashes, was gone forever.

Today, all that remains is a sign along Hines Drive indicating "Meads Mill," the site of the long-ago mill. High up on Franklin Street, east of Northville Road near Six Mile, is the Waterford Cemetery, a small, wooded patch of ground that was dedicated in 1836. Here again the Mead and Ramsdell families are reunited, buried side by side in the town they began so long ago.

The towns of Mead's Mills. or Waterford, Springwells, Greenfield and Kensington have all faded even from memory. Just the names are left behind to remind us that these oncepromising communities did exist.

She carried white and cranberry rubiums to match her dress. Caryl MacKinley, another, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, attired the same as Brady.

Flower girls included Rachel and Lauren MacKinley, nieces of the bride, who wore print dresses of cranberry, white and green complimenting the bridesmaids' dresses. They carried nosegays of blue cornflowers and pink carnations.

Serving as best man was Richard Bossar, a friend of the groom. Ushers were Gary MacKinley, brother of the bride, and Dennis Brady, the bride's brother-in-law.

A reception for 100 guests from the local area, California, Sault Ste. Marie, Hilton Head, S.C., Chicago and Texas was held immediately following the ceremony.

The bride is a 1978 University of Michigan graduate with a degree in pharmacy. She is currently a district manager in the pharmaceutical industry.

Local kids take on Operation Can Do

By CRISTINA FERRIER Staff Writer

Did you receive a white bag last weekend?

If so, it's probably from local scouts involved in Operation Can Do. Last Saturday, local troops distributed the bags around the area for the program, and this Saturday they will return to pick up the bags which residents are asked to fill with canned goods.

Operation Can Do, which is spon-sored by WXYZ-TV and Big Boy restaurants, is a program to benefit needy people all over the metropolitan Detroit area.

The program encourages area re-sidents to donate canned food, providing meals to the area's hungry people throughout the year - not just through the holiday season.

Bonnie Pilarz, who represents local Cub Scout and Webelo Pack 755 and Boy Scout Troop 903, said she hopes people participate in the effort.

"It goes to help needy people," she said. "It's Thanksgiving and we should all be thankful and share with others."

Pilarz explained that the scouts won't receive a badge for their efforts. Operation Can Do is a service project and the reward is simply knowing that they have helped others.

Pack 755 is also involved in Toys for Tots. At tonight's meeting each scout will donate an unwrapped gift to the program. Several U.S. Marines, who are organizing the Toys for Tots collection, will be at the meeting to collect the gifts and do an authentic uniform inspection.

This year's Operation Can Do program will be organized slightly differently from last year's, according to Jim Edmonds of Northville Troop

This year the scouts, in uniform will ring doorbells and ask residents to leave their contributions on the porch within the hour. The den will then transport the food to the Our Lady of Victory parking lot and on to the Big Boy restaurant at Six Mile and Newburg Rds for Operation Can Do.

According to the Detroit Area Council of Boy Scouts of America, an estimated 673,000 people in the tricounty area are hungry for a significant period of time in any given month.

Last year the Scouts collected 120 tons of food through this program. The Southeast Michigan Hunger Ac-tion Coalition will distribute the food to hungry people.

Needy families in Novi will have a merrier Christmas again this year thanks to the Novi Newcomers annual auction.

The auction, which will be held this Thursday, Nov. 15 at the Novi Civic Center, is an annual event open to the public. Items are donated and auctioned off. All proceeds go to help needy families.

We auction off things like piano tuning, lunch at someone's home, Christmas crafts, baked goods . . . a lot of different things," said Theresa Schaefer, organizer of the event.

After the auction is over, the Newcomers get a list of items from Holy Family Church that several needy Willowi request for Christmas, peop and the group shops for the items and gives them to the church. The recipients remain anonymous.

This is something to me that is very important," said Schaefer, who has organized the event for the past two years. "I used to go to the auction because it was a great way to get Christmas presents.

But when I saw where the money said.

Yosemite faces problems on 100th birthday

Doris Scarfenburg recently at-tended an environmental conference in Yosemite National Park. She and her fellow conferees met with a Sierra Club representative, the Yosemite Fund Chairmen and executives of the Curry Company, which runs the Yosemite concessions. Here is her report on what she found in the Yosemite Valley during a single day: Yosemite's 100th birthday.

By Doris Scharfenberg

7 a.m., October 1, Yosemite Valley: I was stepping out into a perfection of mornings. Crisp air, towering pines, glimpses of wonder. The sun, coming from behind Half Dome, sent tides of light across the soaring cliff face of El Capitan, and there was even a pale Ansel Adams moon hanging over a high ridge.

The valley, core and soul of the yast Yosemite National Park, is the Sistine Chapel of the American outdoors. Today would be a special day. By 7:30 a.m., you could feel the bustle. Campers and cars were deep into their ritual search and maneuver for parking spaces. Tour buses were loading at Yosemite Lodge and Ahwahnee Hotel. Cafeterias were full.

On that morning, workers in Senlinel Meadow gathered to put up a speaker's platform and press bleach-ers. Centennial celebration ceremonies would begin at noon, remember-ing 100 years of Yosemite's status as a national park. "100 Years" is a puny handle to place on a splendor left by glaciers and too timeless to grasp. This occasion was really going to be a tribute to the piece of legislation that established the park a century ago. Yosemite had been a California state park since the 1860s, set aside when the U.S. population was about 60 million. In the early days, visitors needed wills of iron and stamina; it took a steamer, stage coach, pack mults and half the summer to get here.

The first car showed up in 1913. Now a million cars and coaches, airconditioned and foam-padded, make the one-hour (or so) drive to the valley from park entrances every year.

I had to wait several minutes for the traffic to clear before I was able to cross the road and get to breakfast. In the chattery cafeteria, not everyone was thinking about going to the ceremonies. Day packs hungover the backs of chairs, maps were on the tables. There was shopping talk. On my walk to Sentinel Meadow, I headed in the wrong direction. Not too much of a mistake, since you can't go far astray in a valley only a mile wide and 11 miles long. The trail I took edged other meadows, curved under canopies of oak, cedar, ponderosa, past tall yellow grasses of In dian paint brush along the Merced River, but never went beyond the sound of cars.

The barely-moving stream was a flawless mirror, doubling the images of grandeur. I stopped to photograph and picked up beer cans and a pie tin held by tree roots along the bank. Out of 18,000 visitors a day, some will have no concept of a sacred place. hallowed and special. These few raise maintenance costs considerably.

Up on one of the cliffs, I could see a bright red speck. Scores of climbers have gone up the sheer wall of El Capitan, and there are problems there, too. Along with the growing number of drill holes for their pitons, some-times glistening hardware is left in high crevices." dant part

Not all are conscientious about carrying out wastes; the foot of the cliff, they told me, is beginning to reek

Finally turned around, I followed the road, hopping off the slim shoulder as cars came by. That's how I spotted disposable diapers shoved into a culvert.

It's easy to get mad about all this. The ceremony in the meadow was predictable, but there were memor-able moments. The 6th U.S. Army Band played, there were speeches and tributes you've heard before. Iwant-to-thank phrases tumbled across the heads of several hundred persons sitting in folding chairs and on the grass.

Speakers recounted the past; it was gratifying to hear about progress made. The meadow once held a store, dance pavilion and two saloons. It had been planted with bluegrass and timothy to feed horses, now stabled elsewhere, but volunteers would replant the meadow with natural grasses as soon as the ceremonies were over.

Neither polystyrene nor netcaught tuna are used in park concessions. Freon 12, common to car and bus air conditioners, are recycled. Big horn sheep have been successfully reintroduced to eastern Yosemite, and peregrine falcons are making progress in the park.

The audience payed polite attention, but it was a man in a shapeless felt hat and old boots atop a broad stump who captured every ear and camera. There was a ring of scripture to the pleading of John Muir to love and care for the wilderness . Muir, portrayed by actor Lee Stet-son, is the recognized patron saint of wilderness preservation, a visionary naturalist who foresaw, in the middle of the last century, the future's need for open spaces.

"Go all your life . . "Nature's resources will never fail

After "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "America the Beautiful," the crowd went back to Yosemite Village. to the Ahwahnee Hotel, the tent encampments, cabins, or off on any one of a dozen programs, tours, or nature classes offered.

Or perhaps they stopped for a pizza, ice cream, a new jacket, a piece of jewelry. a poster, climbing gear. Many acted as if they were at a con-vention or had come to the park for a wedding.

The Tuolumme Meadows, sequoia groves. Glacier Point and other areas of stunning beauty are also under pressure, but every traveler who comes to the park comes to Yosemite Valley. To come to Yosemite and not see the valley is too much for most visitors to bear. So many come that it is now too much for the valley to bear. The park service's job is to protect.

preserve and keep things open for public enjoyment, but the number of visitors is overwhelming. Some 18,000 visitors a day need food, plumbing and a chance to walk around.

There is always talk about closing some of the area to private vehicles, but that would leave these wonders for only a hiking/biking elite. The dilemma is that facilities are used for functions that could take place elsewhere and that may stop future families from getting in at all.

This was never more evident than on Yosemite's 100th birthday.

If you would like more information about the park, its splendors and its problems, write to the Information Center, Yosemite National Park, Calir fornia 95389./30/c

Doris Scharfenberg, a Farmington Hills resident, was part of a small conference of travel writers with Curry Company (Yosemite concest sions) executives, a Sierra Club representative, and Yosemite Fund Chairman on the Park's problems, possible solutions, and the role of the ress in keeping the public informed

"Go to Yosemite Valley, you'll have wonderful time" is less than responsible travel journalism. There are problems that touch all states with popular parks, eco-systems to protect, and quantum leaps in public use and expectations. Go, be scrutpulous about obeying rules, seek areas off the beaten path, and expect delays. There is still a tremendous amount to enjoy.

These problems are closer to MI-

Roland Jacques (pronounced Jakes) was on a ladder, getting his beam and plaster house ready for painting, when we carried our suitcases out of Hill House. This house has stood on this hill since the 17th century, but it always needs painting.

Mrs Jacques, whose name is Youyou, was in the house, fetching the old Bible. I had just learned that her grandfather, Jules Mussche, was born in the Detroit area in 1869.

I often find unexpected connections like that while exploring the world. What surprised me about this encounter is that Mrs. Jacques once traveled from Europe to America tion when we do geneology.

We found Hill House bed-andbreakfast in a guidebook. For people who love people, the bed-andbreakfast route is more personal and less expensive than a roadside hotel. I called for reservations from the dock at Harwich, on England's east coast. when our ferry from the Netherlands landed in a light evening rain.

I'm glad that I didn't have to find the address: Hill House, The Maltings, Ramsey, Harwich, Essex. It was about five miles and a $5 taxi ride from the boat harbor but the taxi driver knew exactly where to find it. He drove out of town and turned uphill through spring crops to the the hill with a swimming pool to one side and some out buildings behind. The area is called The Maltings because there used to be a brewery on that hill.

Mr. Jacques led us through the fine old house and upstairs to one of several rooms available to travelers. Ours had three single beds, a full bathroom two steps down the hall, and cost 10 pounds sterling per person, which is about $38 for the night and included a full breakfast.

Roland Jacques looks like a sea captain, strong face, square-cut beard. In fact, he was in the merchant navy, met his Belgian wife Youyou while sailing around Africa through the estuary and into the mouth of the Thames River.

He is retired now and spends his time with his stamp and postcard collection, and looking after Hill House, where the Jacques have lived for 19 years. Ask to see the "green book" and you will see the house marked on a 1777 road map-that's one year after the start of the American Revolution.

The house actually goes back to 1635. The Hendon family lived in it for 300 years and was out of town on the day in 1911 when their maid came in to light some of the 13 fireplaces, to warm their return, and nearly burned the house down. Roland Jacques found that maid what the house used to look like.

He loves family history, and so does his wife Youyou, who came to Detroit once looking for the grave of her great-grandfather. He was a Belgian brickmaker when he migrated to Detroit in the late 19th century.

Her grandfather, Jule Mussche, was born in Detroit on Oct. 3, 1869, moved with his family to Toledo and returned to Belgium when he was 12 years old.

Michigan

Unfortunately Youyou didn't find

chigan and Ohio but couldn't find any trace of him. I empathize with that because I was on my way to search my ancestors in Northern Ireiand, and I couldn't find any trace of them either.

Our night in Hill House was only one small experience in a lifetime of travel, but it is the kind of experience that you paste in your mental scrapbook for future browsing. One small unexpected connection made while exploring the world out there.

'Tis the season for craft shopping

It's not even Thanksgiving yet, but don't tell that to retailers. Store owners are already gearing up for the money-making Christmas season.

Christmas displays are going up in the stores, and Santa will soon be arriving at the mall. Novi Road near Twelve Oaks Mall will become the territory of Christmas shoppers.

There's no denying it, the Christmas season is nearly upon us, and to come up with creative gifts for everyone a little ingenuity may be necessary.

Craft shows offer an alternative to store shopping, and from now until Christmas they will be popping up all over.

Handmade clothing, wall hangings and toys make personal presents and can be found at nearby craft shows.

Personalized items and special orders make the craft show items especially attractive for Christmas shoppers looking for just the right gift, said craft show planner Kim Leugers.

And the risk of giving an item that someone already has is diminished when the gift is handmade.

Christmas "just like they flock to the malls," Leugers said.

Mustangs advance to Class A semifina

Gridders eliminate Dearborn

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN Staff Writer

Whether at home, on the road, at a neutral site, on grass or on artificial turf, the Northville football squad never stops battling.

And even though it may come as a surprise to many across the state, the Mustangs have proven in the last few weeks that they do indeed belong in the MHSAA Class A Playoffs. Just ask Dearborn Coach Chuck Baughman.

After an impressive 23-18 road win over Baughman's team last Saturday (Nov. 10) in the Region IV championship game, Northville has advanced to the Class A semifinals and are now — amazingly — just two victories away from a state title.

The Mustangs will have to get past tradition-rich Birmingham Brother Rice on Nov. 17 (see related story) in order to qualify for the title game at the Pontiac Silverdome on Nov. 23.

We are now playing very well as a team," Northville Coach Darrel Schumacher said. "Our character is coming to the forefront, but we've also been very fortunate. Things just seem to be going our way."

The Mustangs had a lot going their way last weekend, but a trio of turnovers helped keep the host Pioneers in the game. Northville had the clear advantage in key statistical areas like first downs (20-7) and total yardage (301-199), but it was Dearborn who held a narrow 12-10 lead after three quarters of play.

But the Mustangs scored awo touchdowns in the fourth --- including an electrifying 41-yard intercep-tion return by Bill Kelley — to complete the comeback.

"I thought we played very well, but the turnovers were costly," Schumacher said. "The first one took a touchdown away from us and the other two led to (Dearborn's) only two touchdowns. Dearborn is an opportunistic team and they've been doing that all season.

With their best athletes in the defensive backfield, the Pioneers effectively shut down Northville's control passing game, so Schumacher counered with a more conventional running attack. The move worked as the Mustangs rushed for 235 yards in 49 both season-high efforts.

Powerful Br. Rice is next opponent

In this corner, Birmingham Brother Rice. Winners of three state football championships in 1977, 1980 and 1983. Coached by the legendary Al Fracassa. A private school with loads of playoff experience and a tradition-rich football program of national proportion.

And in this corner, Northville. The clear underdog, but a team that's rel-ished that role throughout the playoffs. The Mustangs have never quali-fied for the MHSAA playoffs and entered this fall without a winning season since 1985.

So the stage is set for one of the biggest games in Northville football history. The Mustangs, winners of the Class A Region IV title, will take on the Warriors, winners of the Region III crown, this Saturday (Nov. 17) at 11:30 a.m. at Flint Atwood Stadium.

The winner will advance to the Class A title game on Nov. 23 at the Pontiac Silverdome against the winner of the Midland-Grandville semifinal clash.

"We are just taking each game as they come," Mustang receiver/ defensive back Bill Kelley said, "A lot of people are surprised we made it this far, but we knew we could do it. We are just trying to rise to the occa-sion and play better with every game.

It will take a supreme effort to, knock off Brother Rice. For the first time in the playoffs, Northville will not be the visiting team because Atwood is a neutral site, but Brother. Rice will have the advantage in the playoff experience and strength-ofschedule departments.

"We're playing tradition this weekend, but we need to convince the kids that this is not a vintage Rice ; team." Mustang Coach Darrel Schumacher said. "We have to make them believe they can win, and then of inville proved the point on the t possession of the game. The locals drove nearly 80 yards - mostly on the ground - but quarterback Ryan Huzjak was striped of the ball while running the option inside the Dearborn 5.

After holding the Pioneers to three plays and a punt, the Mustangs marched 42 yards for a touchdown at the 3:13 mark. Kelley carried it in from a yard out on fourth down, but it was a pair of brilliant 13-yard runs by Huzjak that kept the drive alive.

The Northville defense completely shut down Dearborn in the first quarter, allowing no first downs and just six offensive plays. But the Pioneers got the break they needed midway through the second when Richard Tlusty picked off a Huzjak pass that was tipped first by Jamie Miller and returned it to the Mustang 31.

After several tough inside runs by Jay Jakubowski moved the ball inside the 5, quarterback Mohammed Abdrabboh scored on a sweep from three yards out. Northville retained the lead 7-6, however, when lineman Rick Pierman got a hand on the extrapoint attempt.

With time running out in the half. Huzjak guided the Mustangs 52 yards in less than three minutes. which set up a Brandon Hayes 32-yard field goal with the wind at his back. The kick made it 10-6 at halftime and the key play in the drive was a 13-yard screen pass to Kelley.

"(Hayes) has an excellent leg and we knew if we got it inside the 20, he could hit from that distance," Schumacher said.

Dearborn took its only lead of the game following a pair of disastrous back-to-back plays midway through the third. It started when a screen pass to Kelley fell incomplete, was ruled a lateral, and was recovered by Community support for the Northville football squad has been impressive, even though both Mustang playoff battles have been on the road. At Dearborn last Saturday, there were more Northville supporters than visitor-side stands, and Mustang Coach Darrel Schumacher wants everyone to know how much his team appreciates the support. "We have had a lot of fans at our games, and it makes a difference." he said. "I don't know it this is true or not, but it seemed to me like we had more supporters than Dearborn did last Saturday. Now that is great community involvement."

Anyone wanting to cheer the Mustangs on before their semifinal clash with Birmingham Brother Rice will get the chance tonight (Nov. 15) at what Northville High School is billing as "The Night of Champions."

The hour-long community pep assembly will start at 6 p.m. at the downtown bandshell. In addition to honoring the football squad, all Northville fall sports champions will be introduced.

QUOTE-UNQUOTE: Dearborn Coach Chuch Baughman on Northville's potent offense: "They really didn't do anything that surprised us. But when you have as much talent as they do, it's tough to stop."

WIRES CROSSED: The Mustangs took a 7-0 lead after the first quarter last Saturday, but Schumacher didn't get much help from his assistants in the press box. It seems the frequency used by Northville for headphone communication was the same as the frequency used by the local security force. The problem was rectified later in the first half

WHERE ARE YOU SUBBY ?: Leading rusher Rob Subotich aggravated a knee problem on the first play from scrimage against Dearborn. The 5-10, 160-pound sophomore promptly left the game and didn't return for the rest of the first half. Subby was questionable to begin

But after some attention at halftime by team doctor Robert Mandell and trainer Melissa Martis, Subotich was back on the field in the second half and rushed for 43 yards.

"When Rob came back in, it lifted us up," Schumacher said. "He has a lot of speed and he finds the holes."

TROPHY PRESENTATION: The Northville team was awarded the MHSAA Class A Region IV title trophy at midfield following the game. Dearborn Mayor Michael Guido made the presentation to Schumacher with hundreds of players and spectators on hand to celebrate.

PIONEER WOES: Only once since 1919 had a Dearborn football team won nine games in a season — until the sfall But the Pioneers, who've had just two losing seasons since 1974, were confident heading into the Northville clash.

Not to sound overconfident but our main goal now is to win our last game," head coach Chuck Baughman said prior to the game.

The Mustangs made sure that won't happen.

Despite a knee injury, Rob Subotich rushed for 43 yards

"We need to respect our opponent, but not be in awe of them."

Although Northville plays in the always-tough WLAA, the Warriors play one of the toughest schedules in the state. Rice's only losses have been to powerful Ypsilanti (16-7) and Class AA semifinalist Detroit, Catholic Central (32-0). The big victories have been against twice-beaten Dearborn Divine Child, Detroit-power Henry Ford and playoff opponents Royal Oak Dondero and , Bloomfield Hills Lahser.

Every team we face gets tougher and tougher," Schumacher said. Nobody expected us to get this far. except the kids. We are pleased to be in the final four but the ultimate goal is to play in the 'Dome."

The Detroit News calls Rice "an , overwelming pick to get to the finals." but the so-called experts are 0-2 so far picking the Mustangs in the playoffs.

But to complete a third straight " upset. Northville will have to deal * with the Warriors' potent offense and 11 fine stable of running backs. Sean Johnson missed five games due to an , injury but returned for the start of the playoffs and has given the Rice offense a boost. Junior quarterback Steve Merchant has thrown for more than 1.000 yards and eight touchdowns.

The swarming Warrior defense d has allowed just 12 points per game g and is spearheaded by 6-foot-2, 217-pound linebacker Kevin Kalc- 13 zynski. The secondary, led by Dean Polce, will be tested by Northville's al four-receiver offense and junior signalcaller Ryan Huzjak (121-for-207. ". 1,485 yards and 13 touchdowns).

*Fracassa's been a great coach 1 forever and I know they have a big defensive group," Schumacher said. 14

They also have some young, quick backs on offense and their quarterback is something special. This will m be our hardest game of the playoffs, 'I'd just as soon be the underdogs because the pressure is on them."

Great comeback not enough, Salem ousts cagers

That Plymouth Salem would need a late-game rally to win its WLAA semifinal game on Nov. 6 was inconceivable at halftime - except to the Mustangs

But the Rocks, on the verge of a blowout victory in the first half, needed exactly that to overcome host Northville 45-37 and reach the final round of the Western Lakes Activities Association girls basketball tournament.

The Rocks (16-3) ran up an 18-1 score in the first quarter, extended it to 24-4 early in the second and led 24-8 at halftime.

Everybody except the Mustangs thought the game was over, but Northville outscored Salem 29-9 to take a 37-33 lead midway in the fourth quarter.

But an extraordinary game featuring a remarkable turnabout for both teams had one more twist. The Rocks regrouped, scored the last 12 points and won the game by eight. "When you're ahead of a team 18-1, you fully expect you're going to win that game, and you never expect to be playing from behind," Salem coach Fred Thomann said. "That was one of the biggest comebacks I've ever been involved with in girls basketball.

"It was really a game of streaks. We made a run, they made one and we made the last one. Fortunately, we were ahead when the clock ran out." Salem's winning rally began with Christy Parmucha's free throws with 3½ minutes to play, making the score 37-35. The Rocks made nine consecutive free throws in the last quarter in which they were 9-of-10. Northville committed back-toback turnovers, and Salem converted each time. Yolanda Jackson scored the tying basket, and Sarah Ruete sank the go-ahead layup with 2¼ minutes left.

After a Northville miss, the Rocks went to a delay and scored the last six points on free throws - Betsy McAllister, Parmucha and Ruete hitting two apiece.

The Mustangs outscored Salem 33-9 from the time Darcie Miller gave the Rocks a 20-point lead with four minutes left in the first half only to see the effort lose steam down the stretch.

We got to the point that we had done this unbelievable thing and now we thought, 'We we can't lose this,' ' Northville coach Ed Kritch said. When you get into a can't-lose-it mode, bad things happen. We started to lose the aggressiveness we had. We made two soft passes and had two turnovers."

Miller scored 10 of her game-high 12 points in the first quarter. She dominated around the basket, and the Rocks shot 53 percent (9-of-17) in that period. Miller scored her last field goal to make it 24-4 and was held scoreless the rest of the night. The Mustangs were paced by Holstein's 15 points.

"(Northville) did a better job of sagging down inside," Thomann said. They really worked hard to take (Miller) out of the game after the first Mustangs continued their charge in quarter. That opened up some perimeter shots, and we didn't make any for a long time." lead 37-33. Holstein sank a triple to get Northville within a point (33-32). for a long time."

That was Northville's problem in the first half. The Mustangs were 0-for-9 in the first quarter and 4:03 remaining. 2-of-26 for the half. Northville went "I felt at that time we did every-

the first 9:40 without a field goal until Kara McNeil sank a three-pointer. "In the first half, we watched them play," Kritch said. "We probably couldn't even be their practice team in the first quarter. "We didn't score and they did. As the lead expanded, our shot selection became quicker, and the quicker it became the longer it became. We had to chip away at it, and that's what we did in the second half."

The outside shooting of Karen Pump, with scoring support from Holstein, McNeil and Stacey Nyland, allowed the Mustangs to cut Salem's lead to 26-22 with 11/2 minutes to play in the third period. Northville was 6-of-8 to start the quarter and 6-of-13 overall.

"At halftime, we said, 'Do we have pride, or are we going to pout?" " Kritch said. "All of a sudden we look quick, we look energized.

To do what we did tonight is unbelievable. At halftime, there was not a person in the gym who thought we had a shot, but we did. Obviously, we saw two different games." The Rocks saw their shooting dip to 3-of-15 in the third quarter. They missed their first seven attempts in the last period, too, before Jackson and Ruete scored their late baskets.

A pair of McAllister baskets, one being a triple, kept Salem in front (32-23) after three quarters. But the the finale, outscoring Salem 14-1 to and her three-point play finally put the Mustangs in front (35-33) with thing we had to do, but then we kinda froze up," Kritch said. "Instead of playing to win we started to play not to lose.

PLYMOUTH CANTON 38, NORTHVILLE 30: In the WLAA consolation game on Nov. 10, the Chiefs held off another Mustang comeback to grab third place in the 12-team conference playoffs.

"Canton's man-to-man defense really took us out of the game early," Kritch said.

Northville scored just 14 points in the first half and trailed by six heading into the second half. The margin didn't increase until the Chiefs scored five straight points in the final 30 seconds of the third quarter.

"That made it 31-18 and we were in big trouble," Kritch admitted.

The Mustangs did cut into the lead, but never got it lower than seven. Kritch was forced to go without Holstein in the final 11 minutes of the game after she suffered an ankle injury.

MHSAA DISTRICTS: The Mustangs (12-8 overall) hosted Livonia Ladywood in the predistrict game on Nov. 12 (after Record deadline) with the winner taking on Livonia Stevenson (15-5) on Nov. 14 in the semifinals.

The other two teams involved in the district are Plymouth Salem (17-3) and Plymouth Canton (13-7). The district final will be played on Nov. 16 at 7 p.m. at Northville.

Our district has five quality teams," Kritch said. "I don't think any other district can match the overall strength of this one."

☐ Northville tankers 3rd in WLAA

By NEIL GEOGHEGAN Staff Writer

Depth has always been a strength of Northville swimming, but at the Western Lakes League Swimming Championships last week (Nov. 7-9) sheer numbers went against the Mustangs.

Mustangs. The Northville girls performed very well in the 12-team season-ending event, but lost out on a second-place finish to host Plymouth Salem because the Rocks have a larger team. North Farmington won the title as expected with 501 points, Salem was second (449) and Northville third (401).

The Mustangs sent qualifiers to the finals in 11 of 12 events, and registered 14 top-six finishes. In addition, Northville boasted seven runner-up efforts, but failed to grab a single first.

Northville's second-place finish in the 200-yard medley relay (1:54.85) would have been a winning time in the 1989 WLAA Meet. The team of Jodi Wesley, Teri Juhasz, Pam Holdridge and Megan Holmberg dropped two seconds off their previous best of the season. The 400 freestyle relay combo — featuring Holmberg, Claire Cryderman, Holdridge and Wesley also placed second (3:50.26). The highlight of the individual sec-

The highlight of the individual seconds was Beth Frayne's schoolrecord effort in diving. In 11 dives, Frayne had a point total of 395.6, which was just over three points out of first place. Holdridge provided another exciting moment in the battle for first in the 100 butterfly, but came up just short. Her time of 1:00.3 was a fraction of a second behind fellow All-Stater Kerry Doran of North Farmington.

The other seconds came from Wesley in the 200 IM (2:19.52), Cryderman in the 500 freestyle (5:24.65) and Holmberg in the 100 backstroke (1:03.59).

The rest of the top-six finishes included Juhasz in the 100 breast stroke (fourth place, 1:11.85) and the 200 IM (fifth place, 2:19.52), Wesley in the 500 freestyle (third place, 5:26.09), Northville's 200 freestyle relay team (fourth place, 1:46.52), Holmberg in the 100 freestyle (fifth place, 56.72), Cryderman in the 200 freestyle (2:03.92) and Holdridge in the 100 backstroke (sixth place, 1:06.52).

The Mustangs also added 11 more top-18 point-scoring finishes. They were Brenda Newton in the 50 freestyle (eighth, 26.7) and the 100 freestyle (10th, 58.61), Shella Osborne in the 50 freestyle (13th, 26.7) and the 100 freestyle (15th, 59.82), Allison Sleving in the 500 freestyle (15th, 5:51.2) and the 200 freestyle (16th, 2:11.6), Kathy Lang in the 50 freestyle (15th, 27.76) and the 100 butifying times than any other conference in Michigan. So it should come as no surprise that Northville has qualified swimmers in nine of 12 events for the 19th annual Lower Peninsula Girls Swimming and Diving Finals on Nov. 16-17 at Michigan State University.

The team's 10-person state meet contingent is believed to be the largest Northville's sported in many years. Here is a closer look at the qualifiers:

200 Medley Relay — Northville's team. which will probably include Wesley, Juhasz, Holdridge and Holmberg, have a good chance to place (top-12). The team's best time of 1:54.85 was well below the cutoff time (1:59.09).

200 IM — Both Wesley and Juhasz have qualified, and both have previous state meet experience. Wesley's best time of 2:16.73 easily made the cutoff (2:19.99), while Juhasz's 2:19.19 barely made it.

Diving — Frayne is expected to place in the top-12 at the Diving Regional on Nov. 13 (after the Record's deadline) in order to earn a spot at the state meet.

100 Butterfly — By virtue of her ninth-place finish a year ago. Holdridge is a returning All-Stater in this event and should be able to duplicate the feat this year. Holdridge qualified with a 1:00.3, more than two seconds under the cutoff.

500 Freestyle — Cryderman will be looking to improve upon her 10thplace finish in this event in '89. Her best time (5:22.0) was nearly three seconds under the qualifying cutoff.

100 Backstroke — Holmberg has now qualified in this event twice in the last three seasons. Her time of 1:03.59 was well under the 1:05.29standard.

100 Breaststroke — The WLAA is very strong in this event and Juhasz is one of the local qualifiers. She slipped under the 1:12.89 cutoff with a 1:11.85 this season.

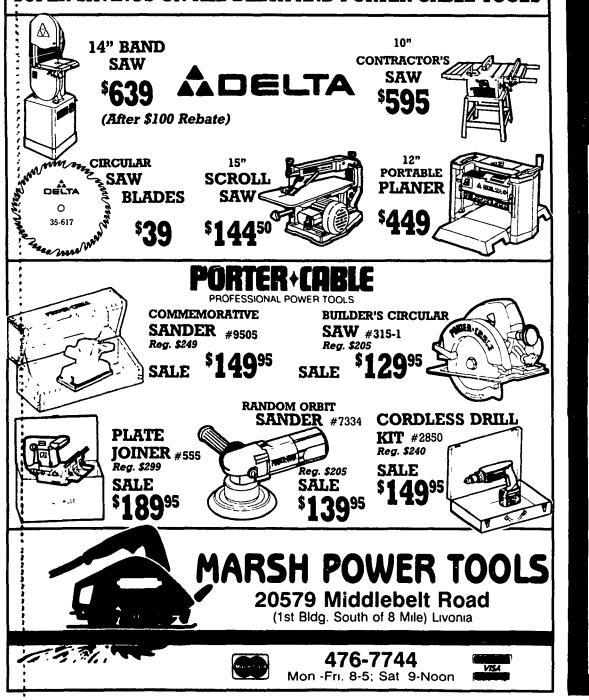

200 and 400 Freestyle Relay — The Mustangs have qualified in both freestyle relay events and will use the following seven swimmers to fill out the eight spots: Newton, Osborne, Wesley, Juhasz, Holmberg, Holdridge and Cryderman. Obviously, somebody on the list will participate in both events.

The swimming preliminaries on Nov. 16 will begin at 2 p.m. and tickets cost $3. The finals will start at 2 p.m. the next day, with a $4 admission fee.

Mustang footballers top Dearborn 23-18

Pioneer linebacker Chris McPhall. On the very next play. Brad Lezotte went 28 yards for the touchdown on a well-executed misdirection run. Dearborn's two-point conversion failed when Ryan Kilner batted away the pass in the end zone.

We knew it was a bad call (on the lateral), but we never should have let with a 55-yard scoring drive in the it affect us," Schumacher said. "We let down mentally and they took advantage of it."

Northville moved into Dearborn territory two more times in the quarter but failed to score (including a missed a 31-yard field goal try). But with time becoming a factor, the Mustangs put together a 63-yard scoring march to regain the lead 16-12. Huzjak scrambled for 30 yards on a quarterback draw which set up Kilner's three-yard TD run with just over six minutes remaining. Hayes' kick failed.

Kelley then sealed the victory with the interception return off an attempted halfback option pass. After picking off the pass, Kelley got key blocks from Brian Scholz, Jeff Todd and Kilner on his way down the sidelines toward the end zone. Hayes' kick made it 23-12.

"(Dearborn) was running the out patterns a lot and I was close (to making interceptions) on a couple earlier ones," Kelley explained. "I read it, picked it off, got a couple nice blocks and just kept running."

۱,

It was Kelley's second score of the game, and his second huge scoring play of the playoffs. Against Wyandotte, the senior returned a kickoff 97 yards.

"Bill had the pass measured all the way, and to see our players switch from defense to offense so decisively was impressive," Schumacher said.

The Pioneers made it interesting waning minutes, but it wasn't enough. Jakubowski scored Dearborn's final touchdown from a yard out at the 4:10 mark, but Mark Hilfinger picked off an Abdrabboh pass with 40 seconds remaining to dash any comeback hopes.

We felt our defense had to take charge in this game and I think we did," Schumacher said. "And our offense did a nice job of controlling the ball, and that made us happy. Your opponent can't score when we have the ball."

Dearborn wraps up a 9-2 season. (Kelley's) interception was a big play, but the big difference was that Northville had too mnay offensive weapons," Baughman said. "(Kelley) is a big-play threat and (Huzjak) has very quick feet and a good arm. We have a real good defense, and for them to move the ball on us like that was the key to the game."

Huzjak was 9-for-21 through the air for 77 yards and added 81 yards rushing in 13 carries. The defense was led by Kilner (nine solo tackles, one assist) and Bob Holloway (four solos, eight assists).

Hot trends for home fitness buffs

Are you tired of trudging down to the local health club only to stand in line at your favorite Stair Master machine?

Or seeking to maintain your figure for next year's fashion season? Or embarrassed at the thought of putting that expanding waistline on public display?

Fitness buffs can now choose from a variety of pieces of exercise equipment to pump themselves up - or keep themselves trim - in the privacy of their own homes. "People aren't usually looking to improve their fitness in the fall," said Corey Disler of the Fitness Source in Novi. "They just don't want to lose it. People just don't want to pack on five pounds.

Hot trends in home fitness include dual-action exercise bikes, recumbent bikes, stair climbers and treadmills, Disler said.

Disler said that dual-action exercise bikes, the ones with moving handlebars for upper-body exercise, are the machine of the moment. They range in price from a $190 model by DP to models in the $700 range by Schwinn and Ross. More expensive models offer a "free-wheeling" feature that allows the use of the handlebars alone for an upper-body workout.

The dual-action machine is not intended to build muscle mass, but it will help home exercisers stay toned. "It's really an aerobic piece, more for cardiovascular workout," Disler said.

Another recent introduction to the exercise bike market is the recumbent bike, which supports the back and provides a more efficient workout than traditional exercise bikes. Users sit lower in the machine than on a traditional exercise bicycle, with their legs nearly level to keep the feet more closely in line with the heart to improve circulation. An added benefit is that the more efficient exercise position results in more calories being burned in the same period — up to 25 percent more.

As far as the traditional upright exercise bikes are concerned, Disler said, "Those are dead; you can't give those things away." The problem, he said, is that after short periods of use. upright bikes can cause a real pain in the . . . back.

For those who like to walk or run their way to fitness, treadmills are an people are talking, and the room is alternative. But Disler warned consumers to shop extensively before they purchase one. "They're very mechanical," he said, "and it's an area you cannot skimp in

"People should spend hours researching them. We suggest people come in with tennis shoes and spend 15 to 20 minutes on them."

One feature to listen for in a treadmill is quiet operation. A machine that sounds quiet in a fitness equipment store can seem very obtrusive in the privacy of one's home. "What people always forget when they go into stores is that there's a radio on, huge," Disler said.

Öther features to look for are solid construction and a large electric motor.

We scare a lot of people away from treadmills," Disler said. "We've got a treadmill that we will not sell, we just have it on the floor to show people what not to buy." The machine sits in a corner of the store, and the electric motor nearly bogs down under the weight of a human body. It's an effective example of an underpowered machine.

As a general rule, he said, buyers should not settle for less than a 1.5-horsepower DC electric motor.

Also, he said, "avoid AC motors in treadmills unless commercialquality treadmills are being considered." How to tell a commercial treadmill from a non-commercial model? Easy -- look for a lot of numbers on the price tag. They run about $4,000 apiece.

"The problem with treadmills is that the market is flooded with underpowered units, with life expectancies less than a year." Disler said. "We fix units that are less than three months old with weld breaks, frame breaks . . .

He warned that a person who buys a $700 treadmill will likely replace its electric motor several times, and "it'll turn into a $2,000 treadmill in five years.

Disler recommended spending at least $1,700 on a quality treadmill.

Even if you buy a quality treadmill, be prepared to pay for occasional re-pairs, Disler warned. "Treadmills break down all the time. Humidity wreaks havoc on them." he said Components that are most affected by humidity are electronics and drive systems.

"It's a high-maintenance piece," he said.

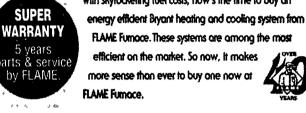

Which brings us to another of the latest crazes in home exercise equipment. Like many trends, the stair climber craze originated in the health clubs, with the introduction of the Stair Master. Now, several companies compete for the market created by Stair Master.

"Stair climbers are selling like hotcakes," Disler said. The machines account for 65-70 percent of the Fitness Source's sales. They can range anywhere from $350 for a gas-charged model to $3,000 for a top-of-the-line electric machine. Gas-charged models use shock absorber-type cylinders to provide resistence, and moving one foot pedal moves the other. The pricier electric machines, in contrast, more closely mimic the action of climbing a staircase, and many can be programmed to provide a varied workout, much like higher-priced treadmills.

The Climb Max, for example, is a top-of-the-line model complete with an exciting digital display panel priced at a steep $2,900. But according to Disler, the machine is well worth the climb.

Smoking in U.S. decreasing since 1986

By SHARON SHELDON Soecial Writer

Fitness Tips

The U.S. surgeon general Antonia C. Novello recently issued an update on the progress made toward the goal of a smoke-free society by the 21st century. The report certainly con-tains the good news that the total number of smokers in the United States has decreased considerably since 1986. This is attributable to the intense public health effort directed at reducing smoking in both the public and private sector.

Research on the health effects of smoking continues, however, and causes lung cancer and contributes significantly to increased incidence of heart disease in the American public.

Secondhand smoke causes nearly 4,000 lung cancer deaths in the United States every year, as stated in a recent EPA report based on 24 epidemiological studies. This report also includes a new "Guide to Workplace Smoking Policies" recommending that smoking areas in the workplace and in restaurants be completely segregated from non-smokers and have separate ventilation systems.

Further research in the area of has produced clear evidence that heart disease and smoking indicates both active and passive smoking that heart disease increases by 30 percent in non-smokers who live with smokers. The study by Dr. Stanton Glantz, a San Francisco heart researcher, suggests that "passive smoking causes 10 times as much heart disease as lung disease, making it the third leading cause of preventable death. The only bigger killers are active smoking and alcohol abuse.'

The U.S. surgeon general's report indicates that smoking has not deceased considerably among teenagers and women. Cigarette manufactures continue to target marketing efforts toward these segements of the smoking population. It is estimated that by the year 2000 the number of women smokers in this country will equal or slightly exceed the number of male smokers. Young women must become a major focus of prevention activities, especially during childhood and adolesence, if we are able to achieve the public health goal of a smoking free society by the 21st century.

The Northville Record is working with medical authorities at the University of Michigan Medical Center (M-Care) in Northville to provide up-todate information on a variety of health-related topics. The series is coordinated by Peg Campbell of the M-Care staff.
