Some Northville residents will usher in the new year with a toast or two at a local celebration. But Catholic Central sophomores and Tim LaForest and Nick Selinsky, both of Northville, plan to spend New Year's Eve tripping the light fantastic at a London disco.

The Catholic Central High School marching band was among 12 bands from around the world invited to perform in the Sixth Annual New Year's Day parade for the Lord Mayor of Westminster.

But the high point of the trip will not be playing his tenor saxophone in the parade, Nick said.

"It got us there," he said.

His mother, Kathy, agreed: "It's your ticket over there."

Selinsky does not plan to spend the entire six days in England playing the saxophone.

Christmas shopping might be behind most people this holiday season, but Nick saved his for Oxford

Campbell sworn in to open local court

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

Patricia Campbell had her day in court Thursday, as she was sworn in as the first judge of Northville's new Probate Court.

Campbell was sworn in by Wayne County Probate Court Chief Judge Freddie G. Burton Jr. in the courtroom that she soon will preside over at Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital. The new court will actually be part of the Wayne County Probate Court, headquartered in Detroit.

Burton took the opportunity to thank the people instrumental in making the courtroom a reality, including Sallie Dimwiddle, director of the county probate court's mental division, and Steve Thomas of the state Department of Mental Health.

"We have an opportunity to show you how cooperative government works," Burton said. "In fact, I've never seen so many governmental units get together and unanimously agree that this is something that needs to be done."

The new probate court, which has been in the planning stages for more than five years, will handle mental competency hearings and alleviate the need to transport psychiatric patients into downtown Detroit for the hearings.

Outgoing DMH Director Thomas Watkins said the new court symbolizes greater sensitivity toward the needs of psychiatric patients. "This is more than just a courtroom," he said. "It's an opportunity for people to be treated with dignity and respect."

Cold, drink cause trouble

An evening frolic at a local toboggan run turned into dangerous sledding last week for a 22-year-old Livonia man apparently influenced by too much holiday cheer.

Northville Township emergency workers found the man "semi-conscious" at the top of a hill at Cass Benton Parkway approximately 9:30 p.m. Dec. 26. The man was suffering from a combination of alcohol ingestion and the effects of extreme cold weather, paramedics said.

Friends of the man told paramedics the victim passed out at the bottom of a hill approximately 100 yards east of Sheldon Road and south of Seven Mile. The man was moved to the top of the hill where he lay for almost an hour, according to reports.

Rescue workers loaded and strapped the man to a toboggan for a trip back down the hill. Rescuers then wrapped him in an environmental kit — a foil-lined rescue blanket that traps body heat — and transported him to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

The man was held for observation and released the following day, emergency workers said.

Brutal cold weather and alcohol are a dangerous mix, according to township paramedic Guy Balok.

"It was five degrees when we went out there and he had consumed a lot of alcohol," Balok said. "He was near a crisis situation."

Balok said the man was not suffering from hypothermia — a significant loss of body heat — but he was "past the shivering state."

"The potential was there for hypothermia and frostbite," he said.

Alcohol use in extremely cold weather can trick the body and open the door to serious problems, Balok said.

"Because of the alcohol consumption, he was not aware he was cold," he said. "He was already in an altered state of consciousness and that's where the body starts to shut off blood to the extremities."

The message to winter wonderland lovers is clear, Balok said.

"Dressing for the weather to go out tobogganing is one thing, but mixing in alcohol can be very dangerous," he said.

MONDAY EDUCATION

Kristen Baldwin, 10, (l) and Katy Zinn, 9, are a pair of fourth graders writing stories on Winchester's new computers

Process helps kids write right

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Northville students are publishing their writing and improving the appearance of their work thanks to a new IBM computer system in Northville schools this year.

And although student interest in writing may be declining, some Northville students may be writing better, according to a survey and California Achievement Test results taken at Winchester Elementary School at the end of the 1989-90 school year.

The $3-million telecommunications system was financed by an October 1989 bond issue.

The new computers combined with the "process writing" method of teaching writing skills have Northville students publishing work in formats as detailed as illustrated newsletters. Process writing teaches students to take specific steps or follow an established process when writing a story or essay, hence the name process writing.

"There's a whole process you have to go through, that's why it's called process writing," Winchester teacher Sue Keen said.

Winchester Elementary School students get an extra dose of process writing because school officials chose improved writing as a goal for the school under the district's Strategic Planning Initiative for district-wide improvements in education.

The goal was set in 1988. A survey

"I like writing on the computer. I'm not very good at writing by hand."

Justin Dilly

of students' achievements and attitudes in writing was taken during the 1989-90 school year along with the California Achievement Test.

The survey shows a decline in students' interest in writing, Winchester Principal Kathy Morhous said.

"We're not real happy with the test results," Morhous said. But she said she believes the test may have raised more questions than it answered, as the school's first attempt to measure an effective goal like increasing student interest in writing.

"We're real enthusiastic because we think kids are doing more writing than they have ever done before," Morhous said.

If students are writing more, then they may have become better critics of their own writing, which could account for their decreased interest in writing as shown by the survey, Morhous said.

California Achievement Test results for 1989-90 showed improvement in language expression by an average of nearly 3 percent. The test showed an average increase of 9.15 percent in language mechanics.

The "process" of writing Northville students use to complete their work begins with brainstorming ideas. Students do a rough draft or "sloppy copy." They hold "conferences" with their friends and teachers to get ideas for improving their story. The final step requires the students to type their stories into a computer.

The computers make further revisions easy because stories are saved on a disk, Morhous said. Editing requires only a few key strokes, rather than rewriting the entire story by hand.

"They're more willing to do drastic editing," Morhous said.

Students are taught to put their hands on the computer's keyboard, and do their best from there, she said.

"Some do quite well," Morhous said. "Especially if they have computers at home."

Writing on the computer is a big advantage for Winchester fourth-grader Justin Dilly, who said he likes writing class more now that some of it is done on the computers.

"I like writing on the computer," Dilly said. "I'm not very good at writing by hand."

Student Kathryn Giebel, whose longest story was four handwritten pages, does not mind writing by hand. Giebel was unable to work on the computer recently because the disk was getting full, and she was working on another long story.

"My mom says I should be a writer because I write long stories," she said.

The students put their work in a binder. The folders are available for perusal by other students in the class.

"(The binders) are the hottest thing in the reading center," Keen said. Fourth-graders Ron Policchio, Matt Ryder and Brian Thompson worked together on a folder about the holidays.

The combined effort resulted in poems and pictures about Hanukkah and Christmas, including a limerick about a reindeer.

"There once was a reindeer named Sam, who wouldn't eat anything but jam. He lost his spoon, and ran into the moon. And Santa never saw him again," the three boys wrote while waxing poetic one day.

Gavin Walsh likes to add drawings to his stories, which are usually about war and violence, he said. He does not like using the computers, Walsh said, but is glad to be learning the skill in case he ever needs it for a job.

The success or lack of success of the interaction between computers and process writing will be tested again during the next school year, Morhous said.

State may consider 200-day school year

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Michigan students might be in school 200 days a year under a proposal by the state superintendent of public instruction.

"Drill and practice do make a difference. Drill and practice do make a difference," said Donald L. Bemis, who heads the state Department of Education.

For a generation, the state has required 180 days of class a year. In earlier years, Bemis said, some districts offered 190 days or more. But the 180-days law had the effect of making that the maximum.

Bemis, in a year-end interview, billed his 200-days proposal as a method of making Michigan competitive in an international economy.

Japanese students have 243 days in a school year; South Korean, 220; Israeli, 215; Scots, 200.

Michigan ranks with Mexico and Sweden in requiring only 180 days.

"It's the way we have to go," agreed Dorothy Beardmore, a Republican member of the state Board of Education from Rochester. "It may not be 200 class days; there may be some staff development time."

A spokesperson for the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, a supporter of quality improvements in public schools, said that business group was not inclined to support the idea at this point.

A longer school year would cost more money, and Bemis has a way to finance it.

"We could do it five days at a time over four years," he said.

"We've been increasing K-12 school funding 7 percent a year. We would allow 4 percent for inflation. That leaves 3 percent. With 3 percent, we could fund five more days a year."

Under his plan, the state would provide monetary incentives to schools willing to extend the length of the school year.

Bemis' figures make two unspoken assumptions: Inflation would be held to 4 percent, and school employees would accept pay increases limited to the rate of inflation.

In recent years, the annual increase in the consumer price index has been 4 to 6-plus percent.

Bemis launched his idea in an Oct. 5 speech in Flint on the "state of education" and at first got little attention.

His 200-days proposal was added at the last minute and wasn't in the original speech text. A departmental news release buried the idea in the 13th paragraph. There has been virtually no public discussion of it since then. Neither Democratic Gov. James Blanchard nor John Engler, his successful Republican challenger, discussed it.

A former superintendent of Utica public schools, Bemis was appointed to the state post in January of 1988 with support from Blanchard.

In mid-1990 Republicans on the State Board of Education tried to give him an unsatisfactory performance evaluation. But with a 4-4 partisan split, the board was unable to dump him. Under a ruling by attorney general Frank Kelley, Bemis has 2½ years left on his contract.

Bemis plans to stay around that long. Meanwhile, Republicans have picked up a 5-3 majority on the state board.

Another major idea in Bemis' speech was to raise the mandatory school attendance age from 16 to 18 and to prohibit those under 18 from holding full-time jobs until they have reached "essential skills standards."

The student wouldn't necessarily have to be in class until age 18. He or she might engage in "job shadowing, apprenticeships, mentor kinds of things that give hands-on experience," she said.

Other Bemis proposals, some of which have been incorporated into the State Board of Education's new goals:

- Reduce school dropouts by 16 percent and achieve a 90 percent high school graduation rate by the year 2000.
- Conduct a statewide literacy assessment as part of the 1990 national adult literacy survey.
- In 1991, begin testing all new teachers to ensure competency in basic skills.

Unknown substance found in township

A 55-gallon drum filled with an unknown substance was found by Northville Township Assistant Fire Chief Rick Roselle behind the township's Fire Station Number Three at 16155 Sheldon Road Dec. 19.

The drum was leaking a clear solution from its top when found. The Wayne County Hazardous Materials team removed the barrel from the site Dec. 20. The drum was marked "Amico 1000," police said.

OUTL ACCIDENT: A 29-year-old Canton man was charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol Dec. 21, Northville Township police said. Police said the man was driving southbound on Haggerty and attempted a U-turn when he drove off the roadway and got stuck in mud. While attempting to free his vehicle, the man drove over a ditch and struck the fence surrounding Oasis Golf Course. Breathalyzer tests indicated the man's blood-alcohol level was .15 percent.

INDECENT EXPOSURE REported: A Cove Drive resident told Northville Township police that a man in a neighboring apartment exposed himself to her as she was leaving for work Dec. 21 at 5:45 a.m.

The woman said the suspect has exposed himself to her on several occasions in the past.

LARCENY FROM AUTOMOBILES: A radar detector, cassette tapes, a man's wallet and $40 cash were stolen from a 1986 Ford Escort parked at Innsbrook Apartments late Dec. 18 or early Dec. 19, Northville Township police said.

Police received a similar complaint Dec. 19. According to reports, an AM/FM cassette player, speakers, a man's leather jacket, cassettes, and a gold bracelet were stolen from a 1987 Ford Escort parked in a lot at Innsbrook Apartments. Items stolen were valued at $2060, according to reports.

MAILBOX DAMAGED: A White Haven resident told Northville Township police someone smashed a mailbox outside the residence late Dec. 15 or early Dec. 16.

Police News

VEHICLE DAMAGED: The owner of a 1987 Chevrolet Monte Carlo told Northville Township police someone kicked in the passenger side front quarter panel of the vehicle while it was parked on Northville Road south of Seven Mile Dec. 16. Damage was estimated at $250.

One, which occurred Dec. 20, involved a wallet taken from an unlocked locker. A second, which occurred the previous week, involved an undisclosed amount of cash, also stolen from a locker.

Both victims were in the gym when the thefts occurred. There are currently no suspects or witnesses.

PEDESTRIAN PICK UP: State Police arrested a 40-year-old Southfield man Dec. 16 after stopping him on eastbound I-96 at Novi Road.

The man was apparently hitchhiking when troopers stopped and advised him that it was against the law. After producing identification, troopers ran a check of the 40-year-old and discovered that he had two civil warrants pending.

According to reports, the troopers arrested the man and took him to the Northville State Police Post. He was later released.

WINDOW BREAKS: A Novi resident reported Dec. 18 that someone trying to steal his storm window had broken it in the process.

Police reports indicate that between 5:30 p.m. Dec. 17 and 8 a.m.

Dec. 18 the would-be thieves shattered the glass and left the wooden pane partially removed.

LICENSE PLATE STOLEN: A Novi resident reported Dec. 20 that someone had stolen the license plate from her 1990 Pontiac Grand Prix, which was parked in front of her home in Crosswinds Condominiums.

The license plate, number 0324MX, was entered into the police computer system as stolen. There are currently no suspects or witnesses.

SLASHED TIRE: A Timberland Court resident in Novi reported Dec. 21 that the left rear tire on his 1985 Oldsmobile was slashed.

The man told police he parked his vehicle at midnight Dec. 18 outside his apartment. At 11 a.m. Dec. 18 he said he discovered his left rear tire was slashed.

There are currently no suspects or witnesses.

Citizens with information about the above incidents are urged to call Northville City Police at 349-1234, Northville Township Police at 349-9400, or the Novi Police Tip Line at 349-6887.

County alters special ed funding

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Wayne County school districts, including Northville, can expect to see some changes in the way special education facilities are funded.

The Wayne County Regional Education Service Agency (RESA) Board of Education, which links districts in Wayne County (including Northville) to the state, voted Dec. 12 to make three changes in funding for special education facilities.

The recommendations should lead to fairer funding for special education programs, Northville Special Education Director Leonard Rezmierski said.

Rezmierski contributed to Wayne County in its decision-making process, but because he has not seen the final board-adopted funding proposals he is unsure of his position on the decisions.

"I'm waiting for the final passed documents," he said. "We know it is something in keeping with what we are concerned about.

"We want to be very prudent about those funds so that when we have a shortfall or some renovation needed the money will be there.

"We are just concerned that we are being wise with the funded money so if there is a leaky roof we can fix it. "Ask me a year from now if it's working. It's expensive. If it's not the roof, it's the heating system."

In the last 20 years, the number of programs serving special education students has increased due to state and federal mandates providing special education services for a wider range of handicapped people.

Because many districts were experiencing declining enrollment during this time, buildings were available to house the programs.

Some districts, like Northville, had to lease buildings to house special education programs. Northville administrators have been leasing Bryant School in Livonia to house a portion of Northville's special education center programs. No criteria have been established to control leasing costs.

Of 36 center programs for students with less common handicaps operated in Wayne County, 12 are operated in separate facilities. The deterioration of buildings used for center programs, and funding problems has forced Wayne County RESA to re-evaluate its facilities usage policy.

Based on recommendations by a Facility Review Committee and testimony given at a public hearing the board decided to establish a $5 million fund over the period of two years. The fund will be designated for the repair of facilities used to house special education center programs.

Establishment of the fund will result in a decrease in the amount of revenue available for local districts. Northville is estimated to lose $43,300 over two years if the recommendation is approved.

The second change in special education funding will be the result of a new program regulating rental payments to local districts housing and operating special education center programs.

Northville will receive an estimated $41,863 for providing special education facilities to 214 students, 97 percent of whom are not residents of Northville.

Programs in regular education facilities will receive $1,500 per teaching station. Programs in separate facilities will receive $2,500 per teaching station. Districts that transfer center programs from a segregated facility to regular education facilities will be paid the higher rate of $2,500 for two years. Because the increased rental payments will increase program costs, the amount of revenue available to reimburse local districts for high incidence program costs would decrease costing Northville approximately $6,469. The change would therefore give Northville an estimated $35,394 funding increase.

The third change will increase rent payments to districts that lease facilities to Wayne County RESA. Northville schools does not lease space to Wayne County, and the district's rental agreement with Livonia for Bryant School will not be impacted by this decision, said Kathryn Mathey, director of the special education center at Wayne County RESA.

Although Northville's buildings and programs are well-funded, Rezmierski said, he is concerned about students who are attending center programs in other districts.

"It's critical for us that we are supportive for all districts who have access to run a quality building because they're our kids attending school in those buildings," Rezmierski said.

"We want to make sure they're going to a quality building. From that point of view we view this as a fair program."

Ribbons adorn lockers

By SUZANNE HOLLYER

Red ribbons adorned each of Northville High School's 1,278 lockers last week.

The ribbons and an accompanying message reinforced a Students Against Driving Drunk theme of warning students to avoid situations involving consuming alcohol and driving.

About 15 of Northville High School's SADD members arrived at school before dawn to decorate the school's lockers with red ribbons Dec. 21.

The group decided it would be easier to tape red ribbons to every locker in the building than to search out the approximately 1,200 lockers used by students.

"We decided it wasn't to our advantage to walk around with a list checking off names," club President John Norman said.

Norman was surprised with the size of the crowd who got themselves into school early to participate in the red-ribbon campaign.

"A lot of these people didn't sign up; they just showed up, which is really neat," he said.

The ribbons were attached to a holiday message from SADD members to Northville High School students reminding them to avoid situations that involve consuming alcohol and driving.

Michelle Fetterman and Jessica Holdeman tape a ribbon and message to a locker

The ribbon drive cost the high school SADD chapter nothing. The message was printed on paper donated by the high school.

The school is very supportive of SADD, Norman said, because of the large student membership. The chapter has 121 members, which Norman pointed out is about 10 percent of the school's population.

Red ribbons were donated to the chapter by SADD of Michigan as part of an ongoing campaign to warn against drinking and driving.

A major SADD-sponsored red-ribbon campaign comes near the end of the school year, SADD adviser Charles Silec said.

"The big one is in March," he said.

Judge sworn in at new court

Watkins praised Campbell as well, saying, "You're going to bring to this bench competency and compassion."

"I'm so pleased, so pleased to be here," Campbell said after being sworn in and donning her new judge's robe. "Working with Sallie, we're dedicated to doing this right."

Campbell turned the ceremony into a family affair as well, inviting her husband, parents and eight children around the bench for an impromptu photo session after the ceremony.

The courtroom officially opens Jan. 2, and hearings will begin Jan. 7. The court will hear child abuse and neglect cases, and mental competency hearings for patients from the Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital, the Walter Reuther Psychiatric Hospital in Westland, and the Hawthorne Center.

Northville musicians to perform in England

Street, Oxford Street is London's version of a strip mall extending for miles through the city.

Christmas shopping is one thing Nick will do, but he has other priorities to take care of in London. On the top of his list is visiting London's Hard Rock Cafe, the original hamburger restaurant in the famed T-shirt franchise.

The 100-person Catholic Central entourage of parents, chaperones and students left for London Dec. 27. They will hold one pre-parade rehearsal, Nick said. When they are not practicing or playing for the Lord Mayor, the group plans to see the sights.

Westminster, a metropolitan borough of London located west of the city proper, has enough landmarks to keep the Michigan group entertained. Westminster is home to Buckingham Palace, the houses of Parliament and St. James Palace.

The largest park in London, Hyde Park, extends into Westminster.

Catholic Central's 52 students and 48 parents and chaperones will stay in the Plaza on Hyde Park for their six-day overseas stint.

On their itinerary is a visit to England's educational mecca in Oxford, a trip to Shakespeare's birthplace in Stratford-upon-Avon, and a trip to Queen Elizabeth II's favorite weekend retreat, the Windsor castle.

Students in Catholic Central's marching band first suspected they might bring in the new year in England last summer, Nick said. A special band practice was held to tape the songs the band had performed at the previous year's Christmas concert. The tape was used as an audition to be in the Westminster parade.

Nick, a sophomore in the jazz, symphony and marching band at Catholic Central, said with the exception of Canada he has never been to a foreign country. But on the day he was to board the plane to England, he said he was not feeling very excited.

"It hasn't hit me yet," he said. Nick left with 100 pounds in pocket, which is about $200. The poor exchange rate is one reason his mother is not joining the group. But she said she is happy her son has the chance to travel.

"I think it's a great opportunity for the kids to be able to do that," she said. "These kids have so many opportunities."

Local talent

Cable program spotlights local business

Are Oprah and Phil daily companions? Do you have breakfast with John and Marilyn each weekday? If you subscribe to cable television, add one more to your talk show circuit.

Farmington and Novi-area residents and co-hosts Patrick Harris and Stacey Winteringham are busy taping various segments of their show "P.S. — Let's Talk About It" a local, all-volunteer production taped at MetroVision studios in Farmington Hills.

Segments about the homeless and marital infidelity which feature local talk show hosts John Kelly and Marilyn Turner, Journalist Janice Brunson, 47th District Court Judge Fred Harris (Patrick's father) and others are already on tape and have been shown several times.

Last week, interviews on parenting, dog training, and humorous hairstyling stories were taped for future cablecast.

Regional celebrities including reporter Vince Wade, columnist Mitch Albom, and Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton are also being approached for interviews, Harris said.

Beginning in January, the show will air Mondays at 1:30 p.m. and Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m. on local cable access Channel 12 for MetroVision subscribers. Residents of Novi, Farmington, and Farmington Hills can tune in.

"It gives me experience — that's what I love," said Harris, a 1982 graduate of North Farmington High School and a senior communications major at Wayne State University. Ironically, Harris never became interested in television in high school. He started his college studies wanting to be an actor, but became disillusioned and switched to telecommunications.

A stint as a production intern at Kelly & Company, a live talk show which airs on Channel 7 each weekday morning, gave him the idea to start the show on cable. Winteringham, his co-host and a Farmington resident, is a college student studying environmental issues.

He plans to tape some 50 segments for the local show, and have the shows run at least through April.

Talk show host and Farmington Hills resident Patrick Harris watches as Jim and Tracy Moore prepare their 5-month-old daughter Maria for taping the local cable show "P.S. — Let's Talk About It." The Moores live in Saline; Jim grew up in Farmington.

Harris said he hopes the experience will land him a job as a talk show producer.

"I watch every talk show, every day," he said. He pays attention to dress, mannerisms and how the hosts deal with their guests. His favorite shows are Oprah Winfrey, Phil Donahue and Regis and Kathy Lee.

"I grew up watching TV," he added. "It's neat to get these topics you can really talk about."

He likes to keep the topics interesting to a general audience, saying "If we don't like it, I don't think other people will either," and researches for his own shows through books, videotapes and personal interviews. He jots questions on index cards, and has plenty in case one doesn't work well during the interview.

He has yet to become tongue-tied during taping, but "I have this fear it's going to happen," he said.

Anyone with a suggested topic or celebrity for "P.S. — Let's Talk About It" can write in care of the MetroVision offices, 37635 Enterprise Ct., Farmington Hills, 48331.

'Football widows' give book a great reception

To be or not to be a football widow. That is the question you ladies out there have to ask yourself.

You see, if you haven't noticed, it's definitely time to store the white shoes, bathing suit and suntan oil. It's the time of year you either love or hate.

It's called football "bow" season. Some 20 college games are to be played, spanning much of the Christmas season and capping off with six, count 'em six, on New Year's Day.

But before you try and steal your significant other's remote control, listen up. A real expert on the subject has some good news. As the adage goes, "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em."

Donna Poole Foehr, author of "Football for Women" ($9.95 from National Press Books) is a woman and, yes, an avid football fan.

"I love the Detroit Lions, always have," she said. "Personally, I think baseball is a more brutal sport than football."

Foehr's way of thinking?

"Monday night football. Sunday football. Professional football and college football. Ladies, face it. From late summer through mid-winter football is king of TV," she said. "But if you feel left out because the sport seems so complicated, I have something to help you."

Her book has 191 pages, including a back glossary, that explains the complicated game in simple terms so every woman, and every man for that matter, can quickly learn and understand the game.

There's the complete rules of football and what each player does, diagrams of the field and alignments, offensive and defensive fundamentals, referees, penalties, signals and much more.

Everything you'll ever need to know about the game is clearly explained. You'll learn how points are scored, how and why penalties are handed out, the difference between offensive and defensive teams, plus the roles each player has on the field and the way referees control the game.

From the unique viewpoint of a woman, football suddenly seems so easy . . . and uncomplicated. Maybe that's why Football News said Foehr "has done a remarkable job, understandable."

How and where in the world did she get this idea of writing a book to show and tell women about football?

"It's not my intention to coerce you into liking football because it's the 'in' thing to watch and talk about all fall," she said. "But I'll bet the more you learn and understand what's happening on the field, the more fun you'll have, and you'll see how the game can be addictive."

As for herself, Foehr "could sit and watch three NFL games — just ask my husband — and never be bored."

An insatiable football fan since her days at Ohio University, Foehr got hooked on the NFL when she and her husband Donald began attending Detroit Lions games, using his company's tickets. When the Lions moved to the Pontiac Silverdome, the Foehrs bought season tickets. Foehr has missed just one home game in 15 years.

"We would always take another couple with us because we had four tickets," she said. "It usually was so obvious that the other woman did not know much about the game. She was mostly people-watching or bored to death. I was having such a good time."

She later taught a football class for women at the Birmingham Community House. In addition to meeting with rousing popularity, it gave her a chance to stockpile her football knowledge.

Four years ago, she took a course on writing for publication and hit the word processor. It took her book about nine months to hit the 10,000 copies-sold mark.

"Let's face it, football is a game you're either going to love or hate," she said. "If you read the book and still feel that you don't like the game, then forget it. But at least you tried."

"Believe me, with effort, this is a sport that everyone in their right minds can learn."

So break out the munchies — and don't forget the dip — cuddle up to your significant other and watch the game(s). But, one thing. If at all possible, get control of the remote control.

Late-season releases are good to not so

The pre-Christmas rush to attract holiday dollars at the box office peaked last week with the Christmas Day debut of Francis Ford Coppola's much-heralded and over-promoted "Godfather III." Despite Mr. Coppola's hesitancy to finish films, "Godfather III" made it to the 1990 awards sweepstakes by a slender margin. Earlier, exhibitors opened this mini-season with "Almost an Angel," "Bonfire of the Vanities," "Green Card," "Kindergarten Cop" and "The Russia House" (B+, R, 120 minutes).

The latter mixes '50s Cold War angst with Hollywood romantics in a stylish rendition of John le Carre's novel starring Sean Connery as the boozy Barley Blair, a British publisher who makes a lot of sense, drunk or sober, when it comes to talking about the mess we've made of our 20th century world. Such talk by Blair at a Russian writers' conference sets off a chain of events that are sometimes difficult to follow. The film's structure has interesting convolutions as it continually bends back on itself to reveal new information while, at the same time, overlapping sequences.

The latter may very well be the way of the world of espionage. Nonetheless it is sometimes difficult to follow, particularly with the extensive performance in accented English — British and Russian-style.

The film's excellent photography by Ian Baker ("Roxanne" and "A Cry in the Dark") is a mixed blessing since there's a bit too much "local color" footage in Russia, Portugal, England and Canada. This isn't supposed to be a travelogue.

Despite such complaints, the film is as literate amplification of the nagging question lurking in every gnostic statement: Can democracy triumph over the better interests of the military and munitions manufacturers? The answer in "The Russia House" is no. That's probably realistic given the problems boiling just under the surface of our current celebration on ending 40 years of Cold War conflict.

Boozy Blair (Connery) is unwillingly plunged into just such a maelstrom by comments he makes which touch the soul of a mysterious Russian, Dante (Klaus Maria Brandauer), who uses his friend, Katya (Michelle Pfeiffer), as a conduit to the west.

Tom Stoppard wrote the very literate scenario from a le Carre novel while Connery, Brandauer and Pfeiffer deliver their lines with superb professionalism. If the premise of "The Russia House" is correct and glasnost and Gorbachov are bad for the military and the munitions merchants, then the Red Army and the KGB will soon reassert Stalinist tendencies in Russian society and "The Russia House" cynicism will prove prophetic.

No such luck in "The Godfather, Part III" (C+, R, 161 minutes) which is a disappointing film mostly because the tradition has become a formula. There's the requisite family party, a street fair, English sub-titles, the obligatory trip to Sicily and a young upstart looking to assume the mantle of power from an aging Godfather.

On its own, the film doesn't have much to say and as part of the trilogy flounders dismally with uneven scripting and acting. It's impossible to find any enjoyment without rereading Parts I and II prior to seeing Part III.

In and of itself that would not be a major flaw except that it serves to remind the audience just how much Robert Duvall is missed and that the Corleone saga was best left completed in 1974.

As in the past, this "Godfather" is beautifully photographed and richly detailed. Sofia Coppola as Mary Corleone, Michael's daughter, is not without talent. However, she is not ready for this role. Her valley-girl snarl and mannerisms along with a somewhat distant approach make her character unsympathetic.

Despite her parent's agony, her accidental death at the end of the film is somehow satisfying for the audience. Unfortunately, this is not what writer/director/producer/father, Francis Ford Coppola intended. On the other hand, Al Pacino, Andy Garcia and Talia Shire give magnificent performances.

Pacino's Michael Corleone, in falling health at 60, has developed a conscience and harbors bitter regrets about his violent life. Coppola, though, overstates his case with religious and operatic symbolism and occasionally boring pontification.

Garcia is Vincent Mancini, Sonny's illegitimate son, in a stunningly brash and boisterous performance. Shire returning as Michael's sister, Connie, is both a moralist and a feminist. Connie actually orders a hit and Michael's lieutenants carry it out.

The plot suggests a Mafia-related Vatican conspiracy was behind the death of Pope John Paul I and that the bad guys were the ones wearing the robes. It's an interesting twist but one that's lost unless the audience is already aware of these conspiracy theories. Certainly, "The Godfather, Part III" is worth seeing. Just don't judge it by the standards its predecessors set. (Reviewed by Susan Pincham)

Like "Godfather III," "Bonfire of the Vanities" (C+, R, 120 minutes) is a major production with everything in its favor. Yet the payoff is not all that satisfying.

Both films raise the question, "Do megabucks make good movies?" Certainly, in "Godfather" and "Bonfire" all that money pays off in slick-looking productions which capture and hold the eye with excellent performance, fine music, superior looking scenes — and so on down the line of film techniques.

But it still doesn't make a good movie. "Bonfire of the Vanities" probably will grab and hold audience attention but when it's all over, there's certain to be some wonder as to whether or not the two hours of over-yupified exaggerations were worth it.

Based on Tom Wolfe's novel and directed by Brian DePalma, the episodic structure of "Bonfire" revolves around a drunken reporter, Peter Fallow (Bruce Willis).

With a good deal of voice-over narration and commentary, Fallow tells the story of one Sherman McCoy (Tom Hanks), a terrifically successful broker who lives in a $6 million Park Avenue condo with his unbelievably pretentious wife Judy (Kim Cattrall). They have a little daughter, Campbell (Kristen Durst) who has more screen time than character.

Sherman McCoy also has a mistress, Maria Ruskin (Melanie Griffith), who is married to an older gentleman, Arthur Ruskin (Alan King). One night after Sherman meets Maria at the airport, he gets lost in the Bronx on the way back to Manhattan. As they struggle out of the Bronx, Maria runs down a young black man, Henry Lamb (Patrick Malone), while driving Sherman's car.

In the ensuing turmoil, the film supposedly dissects the politics of justice and the antics of media, religion, government and the monied classes as each manipulates the system for its own benefit.

The results, however, turn out to be a jumbled caricature which continually shifts from one sub-plot to another. There's Fallow's search for love, truth and the "great story," told via voice-over.

That might have been an effective technique, if used consistently, but just as viewers settle in with that, the film reverts to standard narrative mode, telling of Sherman McCoy's downfall and a variety of sub-plots: Maria's husband and other lovers, Sherman's wife and other Park Avenue yuppies and Sherman's search for himself. The last involves reconciliation with his father (Donald Moffat).

There's also Rev. Bacon (John Hancock) and District Attorney Abe Weiss (uncredited) who use and abuse the media. The last come off poorly as a shabby crowd of jackals.

The exaggerated characterizations and distorted camera angles are strangely unrealistic, particularly for a film purporting to treat with contemporary society and issues. Maybe it's all summed up in Judge White's (Morgan Freeman's) concluding monologue which reeks with the cloying sincerity popular in '50s style high school pageants.

Despite its attractive veneer, it's a shame so much has been expended for such little gain.

On a much lighter note, "Kindergarten Cop" (B-, PG-13, 105 minutes) may have a sappy and contrived plot but the kids are cute and Arnold Schwarzenegger is macho even though the art for this film suggests that Mr. Muscles has changed his venue.

But he's still a cop and goes undercover with his partner, Phoebe O'Hara (Pamela Reed), to ferret out the wife of a murderer and drug dealer, Cullen Crisp (Richard Tyson). Crisp's wife, Joyce (Penelope Ann Miller), supposedly has escaped with $3 million in drug money. Joyce has a six-year-old child.

The plot may get more complicated but it doesn't get much better. What is worthwhile is Schwarzenegger's interaction with a classroom of six-year-olds.

Ready or not, kindergarten teacher is his cover while searching for Joyce's child. Fighting off those little devils in the classroom is a clever contrast to the usual Schwarzenegger role of fighting thugs in the streets which is where "Kindergarten Cop" begins.

How much trouble can 6-year-olds be? Schwarzenegger asks. Have a few laughs as he learns the truth about what goes on behind closed kindergarten doors.

Paul Hogan should stick to "Crocodile

Dundee" because his rough outback charm doesn't make it as an ethereal romantic. But that's essentially the role he's written and produced for himself in "Almost an Angel" (C-, PG, 95 minutes).

The overly long and slow opening (15 minutes) establishes Terry Dean (Hogan) as a nice guy despite the fact that he robs banks. He's paroled and goes back to robbing banks. He's killed (sort of) while saving a kid from an oncoming auto. God, or one of his representatives who looks and sounds an awful lot like Charleton Heston, gives him a second chance as a probationary angel.

Well, you've probably heard that story before and this one has occasional moments of charm but not enough to save it from the dust bin of also-rans.

Dean gets religion and winds up in a small town where he befriends a bitter, dying cripple, Steve Garner (Elias Koteas), who, with his sister, Rose (Linda Kozlowski), run a recreation center for latch-key kids who need a place to play until they don't need their latch keys — or something like that.

It's pretty thin although Hogan and Koteas have their moments and "Almost an Angel" might have worked much better as a buddy film than it does as one about ghosts returning to help humanity.

STILL PLAYING:

"Avalon" (A+, PG, 126 minutes). Excellent film chronicles an immigrant family's successes and failures in America. "Child's Play 2" (*), R. "Chucky" returns.

"Dances With Wolves" (A, PG-13, 180 minutes).

Kevin Costner's magnificent ode to brotherhood and brutality on America's western frontier during and after the Civil War.

"Edward Scissorhands" (C, PG-13, 180 minutes).

Unusual young man with scissors instead of hands shakes up the suburbs after moving in with the Avon lady and her family.

"Ghost" (A-, PG-13, 116 minutes).

Banker's ghost (Patrick Swayze) hangs around after life to protect loved one (Demi Moore). Spiritualist (Whoopi Goldberg) helps him in this romantic-comedy-thriller.

"GoodFellas" (B+, R, 145 minutes).

Martin Scorsese's intense, compelling saga of three mobsters. Fine production techniques and excellent performances by Robert DeNiro, Joe Pesci and Ray Liotta notwithstanding, they are bad guys.

Is the under-$100,000 home a dying breed?

Building homes under $100,000 — some say that in these days of rising land, labor and material costs, restrictive zoning and building codes and slow growth/no growth pressures that that's almost impossible. The key word is "almost."

Sam Blumenstein, president of Classic Construction in West Bloomfield, said there is a tremendous market for under-$100,000 housing, but no one is filling it because of obstacles.

Affordable housing is critical for first-time home buyers, who are just entering the home buyer market and need a way to build equity, and for empty nesters, who need less space now.

The need for affordable housing is best exemplified by the sales record of under-$100,000 homes.

"We keep hearing about the economy slowing down, but we're bucking the trend like crazy. Sales are up 50 percent," Blumenstein said.

Very few builders are building for the under-$100,000 market, Blumenstein said, but not because they don't want to build affordable housing. "Unless you're a vertical company like we are, you just can't do it."

Classic Construction is able to save a great deal of money because the company not only assembles and buys the land, but rezones it, develops it and builds the homes as well.

"If you do all that, and you run a tight ship, you can still do it," he said.

Instead of someone making a profit at each step of the development process, he can sell homes at 15 to 20 percent savings because he cuts out several middlemen, Blumenstein said.

And just because it's affordable housing doesn't mean it's cheap housing, he said. A nine-hole golf course, nature and walking trails and common areas, and community centers and pools are available to the homeowners.

Classic Construction is developing the 900-unit Maples of Novi development which has several options available for under $100,000. Attached one-bedroom, one-den condominiums start at $79,900; and detached three-bedroom, 1½ baths

Existing homes still has cost advantage vs. new

A subtle reason for the lack of homes for under $100,000 is builders have a hard time competing with the existing home market.

Bill Lawson, a partner with the Michigan Home Builders Inc. in Rochester Hills, said rising costs have made it impossible to compete. "We can't build a home for the same price as an older home and give you the same thing."

Increased regulations, land costs, material costs, labor costs — all have risen in the last decade.

The main selling point of the new home is exactly that — its newness, he said.

High property taxes is another reason it is difficult to build homes for under $100,000, Lawson said.

Even though assessments have risen significantly in the high-growth areas, they have not risen as quickly as building costs, Lawson said.

Assessments on older homes of the same size and type as a newer home are generally lower for the older home because the assessment was established at the original lower sale price, he said.

Lawson said some people point toward re-urbanization as the answer to building affordable homes — the argument being that builders should construct homes in Detroit and other urban areas where land costs are relatively low.

Image problems, racism and lack of city services aside, builders are still reluctant to build in established urban areas — even though the extensive infrastructure makes property alluring, Lawson said.

Because property has either devalued or not appreciated, tax rates in urban areas are generally much higher than in less urbanized areas, he said. "So why would I want to build in Detroit?"

The tax burden on newer, high-cost housing would be huge, he said.

For example, two $100,000 homes — one in Detroit and one in Rochester Hills — would cost the same to build, but taxes would probably be more than double on the Detroit home.

True, the Detroit home would probably be larger because fewer costs were eaten up by land acquisition, but the two similarly priced homes would have extremely disparate tax bills, he said.

"Until they solve that problem, builders are not going to want to build (in the urban areas)," he said, suggesting that a system similar to the tax abatements granted to industrial and commercial properties might be an avenue to explore.

condominiums start at $99,900.

Homes adjacent to a nine-hole golf course start at $139,000.

The single greatest obstacle to building homes under $100,000, Blumenstein said, is the price of land.

"You can't buy the land cheap enough and you can't develop it cheap enough to (build homes for $100,000 or less)."

Once the price of the lot goes over

$22,000 to $25,000, the price of building materials and labor makes $100,000 an unattainable goal, he said. "That's what's really killing the under-$100,000 market."

Blumenstein added that local government restrictions on minimum lot sizes, woodlands and wetlands are the greatest factors in driving up land costs.

To make affordable housing more common, Blumenstein said communities will have to loosen their restrictions and recognize the need for lower cost housing.

Some communities, he said, are already taking a second look at their ordinances. The result? More flexible zoning ordinances that allow builders to develop projects with a higher density on part of the site in exchange for open space, woodlands or wetlands preservation on another part of the site, Blumenstein said.

Communities that insist on stricter zoning ordinances, he said, are learning the hard way that the costs of restrictive zoning ordinances are high.

In many recent lawsuits, the courts have sided with builders in saying that some of these restrictive ordinances constitute an unlawful taking of property.

Bill Lawson, a partner with the Michigan Home Builders Inc. in Rochester Hills, said land costs alone have made home construction under $100,000 virtually impossible. Lawson primarily builds custom homes and small projects.

"It's really tough," he said. "You can go out into the sticks where the land is cheap, but you're going to have a hard time anywhere else."

Lawson builds homes in the $100,000 to $150,000 range in North Oakland County where land prices have skyrocketed in recent years.

IMPROVED LOTS, depending on where they're located, can cost as much as $100,000 in desirable areas and even in less desirable areas will frequently cost more than $50,000, he said.

"If you're building in Rochester it will cost you $40,000 just for the lot — that means you would have to build (the house) for about $50,000. You can't do it," Lawson said.

James McLennan, president of Willow Development in Birmingham said there aren't any secrets to building homes for under $100,000. Builders arrive at a home's cost by adding labor and materials costs and then factoring in the profit.

"And frankly, you don't make much of a return for $99,900," McLennan said. "It's a real price, but it's also a promotional price."

Recession prompts many to renovate

OK, maybe building a home under $100,000 is becoming a thing of the past.

Rising land, labor and material costs, restrictive zoning and building codes and slow growth/no growth pressures have made new home construction a difficult albeit not insurmountable task.

So other than apartments and existing homes, where does that leave John "blue collar" Smith?

Mike Claffone, a sales manager for the Michigan Condominium Corp. said some builders will be turning to remodeling jobs of existing structures — especially in light of the slowing economy.

Remodeling can offer significant cost advantages to new construction depending on the property, he said, mainly because the building's structural frame — one of the greatest costs in building — already exists.

"The fact that we start with an existing structure reduces our costs significantly," he said.

Remodelers can also purchase existing buildings in high-price, high-growth areas at half the cost of building new, he said, because assessments — even though they've increased — have grown as fast as building from scratch.

By remodeling old apartment complexes, builders can often bring in condominium projects well below $100,000 — even as low as $59,000.

And some existing facilities, Claffone continued, offer great opportunities. The Michigan Condominium Corp. recently revamped 116 executive rental units in West Bloomfield and renamed it Moon Lake Condominiums.

The two- or three-bedroom, two-bath, detached units, which

"The fact that we start with an existing structure reduces our costs significantly."

Mike Claffone

sell for $99,990, were a rare find even for a company that specializes in finding remodeling jobs. "It's by far one of the best products, new or (remodeled), on the market."

Claffone said one thing that adds greatly to the cost of housing is people expect more in a home and are unwilling to wait for the extra bedroom or amenities.

Since remodeling cuts down on materials and labor costs, builders — with the right property — can offer more at a reduced price.

"If we built (Moon Lake condominiums) today, there's no way we couldn't do it for $99,990."

"(But) because we already had the existing structure, we were able to put more money into other things," he said.

Claffone said there are relatively few homes for under $100,000 these days, but there are still a lot of homes for under $125,000. "There's actually a lot of competition out there."

Claffone said the line between "affordable" and "luxury" housing has continued to blur over the years.

As costs continue to rise and building continues to be more difficult, first-time buyer and starter home prices will edge over the $100,000 mark, he said.

Get the right caulk for your home job

Most homeowners know that caulking cracks in the exterior of their house helps reduce heat loss in winter and makes it easier to cool in summer.

Caulk also keeps out moisture and pests. But with so many kinds of caulk available, deciding which to buy can be daunting.

Here are the facts so you can fill those cracks.

Caulking compounds are sold in bulk cans, in cartridges for use with a gun, in squeeze tubes, and in rope-like strips good for temporary seals around storm windows and air conditioners. For a homeowner, it's usually most convenient to use cartridges in guns.

There are six basic types of caulk.

■ Oil-base caulk is inexpensive and will bond to most surfaces including wood, masonry and metal. But it dries out relatively fast and is recommended only for temporary fixes.

■ Latex-base, water-thinned caulk is fast-drying and will take paint very well. It's a good all-around caulk that is easy to use and relatively long lasting.

■ Butyl rubber caulk is long-lasting and best suited for making metal-to-masonry joints.

■ Polyvinyl acetate caulk is a durable material that adheres to all surfaces, including paint.

■ Silicone caulk is long lasting and takes well to all surfaces except paint.

Because paint won't adhere to pure silicone caulk, it's usually best to choose clear caulk or a color that goes with the color of your house. Or use a silicone acrylic caulk, which is paintable and fairly durable.

■ One-part polyurethane caulk is the longest lasting of all the compounds. Applied to a properly prepared surface, it will last for up to 40 years. But it won't take paint and it comes in a very limited number of colors.

Caulking is needed wherever two materials or parts of a house are joined:

■ Where windows and doors meet siding, including under sills and above drip caps.

■ At all corners formed by siding.

■ Between the underside of eaves and gable molding.

■ Between masonry steps, porches, patios, decks and the main body of the house.

■ Around pipes, exhaust-fan outlets and clothes-dryer vents.

■ Between siding and any part protruding from the main body of the house.

Sizeable cracks in wood siding, concrete, roofing and masonry surfaces may require a permanent repair job instead of caulk. But you can fill many cracks wider than a half-inch with oakum (loosely twisted hemp or jute fiber impregnated with tar).

Before you begin, be sure to prepare the surfaces to be caulked. Scrape away any dirt, grease and old compound with a putty knife. Finish cleaning with a wire brush.

To ensure adhesion, most caulks require wiping the surface with a solvent such as mineral spirits. Check the label directions.

When dealing with a lacquered aluminum surface, first remove the lacquer with xylol, then wire brush the surface and finally apply a metal primer with a rust-inhibiting agent.

For an average-size job, use a cartridge inserted in a caulking gun. Cut the end of the nozzle diagonally at a width equal to that of most cracks, and push a long nail down the spout to puncture the inner seal.

Squeeze the trigger slowly and draw the tip along the seam you want to fill. Work at a slow, even pace. If you want to be sure a joint is filled completely, push the tube along the joint instead of pulling it.

Weather affects how caulk goes on. Caulk on a mild, dry day when it's over 50 degrees. On a hot day, refrigerate caulk for an hour or two to keep it from running. To keep unfinished tubes of caulking fresh, plug the hole in the tip with a large nail.

Leasing home can avoid tax bite

Maybe you can help me clear up some tax questions I have regarding our home. My wife and I sold our home about 11 months ago and bought a more expensive home, in part, to avoid having to pay a tax on the profit of our home. We have now found that we may want to buy a larger house. We are concerned that if we sell our new house now we will have to pay a tax on the deferred profit because we have owned our new house less than 24 months.

When you sold your first home, you correctly deferred the profit tax by purchasing a replacement principal residence of equal or greater cost within 24 months before or after the sale as is permitted under the Internal Revenue Code, Section 1034. But the code provides that you can only use this once every 24 months with one exception. There is a tax deferral on a sale in less than 24 months if the sale is because of a job location change that qualified for moving expense tax deduction. That means that your new job must be more than 35 miles further away from your old home than was the old job.

Finally, to avoid having to pay the tax, you are advised to wait to sell your current home until you have owned it at least 24 months. If you cannot do so, you may lease your current home to a tenant, perhaps with an option to buy, until after your 24 months expires or you may buy or lease a larger home so you can move now.

I am advised that several tax court decisions indicate that a temporary rental of your old home, while it is available for sale, will not convert it into a rental property and you will not lose a tax deferral of Section 1034 of the tax code, the "roll-over resident rule." You are advised to contact your tax adviser concerning these transactions.

We are interviewing management companies. Four of the five bids we received were within $1.50 per unit of the other. The fifth management company is $3.75 cheaper per unit based on specifications for the management contract that our lawyer prepared. The board, to no one's surprise, is gravitating toward the cheapest one. I am wary because I believe you get what you pay for. How do I convince the other board members of this?

There is always the school of hard knocks that will serve to teach directors that your belief is correct. Unfortunately, too many hard knocks can ruin a condominium association. Moreover, because of the frequent turnover of directors of the association, what one board learns is not always transferred to the succeeding board. Simply put, some management companies, like some lawyers and CPAs in the field, intentionally bid in at prices well below the market to get the account.

Then either the management agent does not deliver the services promised (because it realistically cannot afford to do so because of its low rate) or it raises the fee after it has gotten in the door of the condominium. The management company may even have many accounts (about which it boasts to the frugality) of many community association boards. But can it and will it be able to deliver the services? Probably not in the long run. He who charges less knows best what his services are worth.

We have an opportunity to buy a timeshare that gives us the chance to travel to Maui in Hawaii. We have heard it is a beautiful area, but I'm wondering about the liability of having a condo there. What do you think?

A timeshare in Maui, a beautiful but expensive island, as in any other place, should be reviewed carefully by you before purchase.

Check to see whether you will be able to trade the use of your timeshare for other locales in the world.

The state of Hawaii has a condominium statute regarding condos, and there are lawyers who specialize in condominiums throughout the islands.

There is a substantial condominium boom in Honolulu with the attendant condominium association problems, including multi-million dollar construction defect litigation.

Sow seeds now for spring begonias

The bright-hued flowers of tuberous begonias can be the stars of your annual garden this summer. If you want them blooming in May, Michigan State University horticulturists say you need to start tubers growing in February or sow seeds Jan. 1 for blooming plants in four to six months.

Several types of tuberous begonias are available. If you want spectacularly large flowers — up to 8 inches across — in brilliant shades of red, orange, salmon, apricot and yellow, as well as bicolored and white, plant Begonia tuberhybrida. Multiflora bear many more flowers but smaller ones, about 1 inch across. Multiflora maxima begonias produce many blossoms about 2 to 2½ inches in diameter. Pendulous types produce small but abundant blossoms on drooping stems. They're especially well suited to hanging baskets.

Tubers dug from the garden last fall or purchased this winter should be firm and free from signs of mold. Discard any that are soft or lightweight for their size — they are probably rotten. Seeds are available from a wide variety of sources.

Plant begonias tubers in February in moist peat moss, sphagnum moss or vermiculite in open trays. Place tubers with the round end down and 3 to 4 inches apart. Do not cover the tubers until the top growth is 3 to 4 inches tall.

Place the trays where they will receive a little indirect sunlight and temperatures of 65 to 70 degrees. The tubers rot easily, so water sparingly until new growth appears. Shoots should start to appear in about a week.

Within four to five weeks, tubers should be ready to transplant into 5 to 6-inch pots. Cover the tubers with a well drained potting mix high in organic matter. To promote root growth, mix 1 teaspoon of superphosphate fertilizer (0-20-0) in each gallon of soil.

Place the newly potted tubers in an east window where they will receive bright light but little direct sunlight. Fluorescent lights can be used to supplement natural light. Minimum night temperature at this stage should be 60 to 65 degrees.

If starting begonias from seed, follow the specific directions on the seed packet. Generally, seeds need constant moisture and high humidity for successful germination.

After the last spring frost, move the plants to a lightly shaded spot outside. A northern exposure or a site under shade trees is best for begonias. Avoid planting them where they will be exposed to direct afternoon sunlight. A little morning sun is good, however. Also avoid planting in deep shade — plants will become tall and leggy.

Regular watering and fertilizing keep plants growing well and flowering profusely. MSU horticulturists recommend using a complete fertilizer such as 10-10-10 at the rate of 1 teaspoon per gallon of water every two weeks. Apply this solution liberally to the soil around each plant, being careful to keep it off the foliage.

Overwatering can lead to stem rot and mildew on foliage. Crowding may also contribute to mildew.

Serious insect problems are uncommon in tuberous begonias. Severe attacks by aphids, thrips, mealybugs or whiteflies may require weekly treatments with a labeled insecticide. Ask your local garden center or Cooperative Extension Service office for recommendations.

Suburban Cable Weekly

Cable Channels!*

- Weekly Cable Listings Plus Network Programming
- Local Access Programming

Monday - Sunday
December 31 - January 6

HOROSCOPE

December 30 through January 5

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Recent events have you in turmoil. Focus on what is most important. In just a few days, the past few weeks will be a blur.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Your powers of persuasion greatly influence those around you. Spend the weekend with someone special and tell them how much you care.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
An authority figure needs your support. Stand behind them and voice your support whenever you can, but be sure your priorities are in order.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Telling someone the truth may not be the best idea. There are times when a person is more open to criticism, and this is not one of those times.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
A sense of power enables you to complete tasks you never thought possible. Those who have been indifferent to you are coming around.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Small children can bring great joy into your life. Be cautious when dealing with strangers, especially concerning money matters.

By C.C. Clark

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
The past is exactly that, the past. Get on with life, and don't worry about what might have been. Don't let others' comments bring you down.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
A casual remark could bring disaster if you are not careful. Think before you speak, and make sure you are dealing with the right person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Treat yourself to a night out on the town, or if that's not your style, curl up with a good book and let the rest of the world take care of itself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
This is a great week to sit down and make plans for the new year. Look at priorities and find out what is important in your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
If you've been thinking about changing something in your appearance, now is a good time. Those around you will be receptive to the change.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Let your mate know he or she could help around the house more. If you are single, this is a great time for meeting people.

STAR NOTES

Letterman knew radio or TV was in store

By Candace Havens

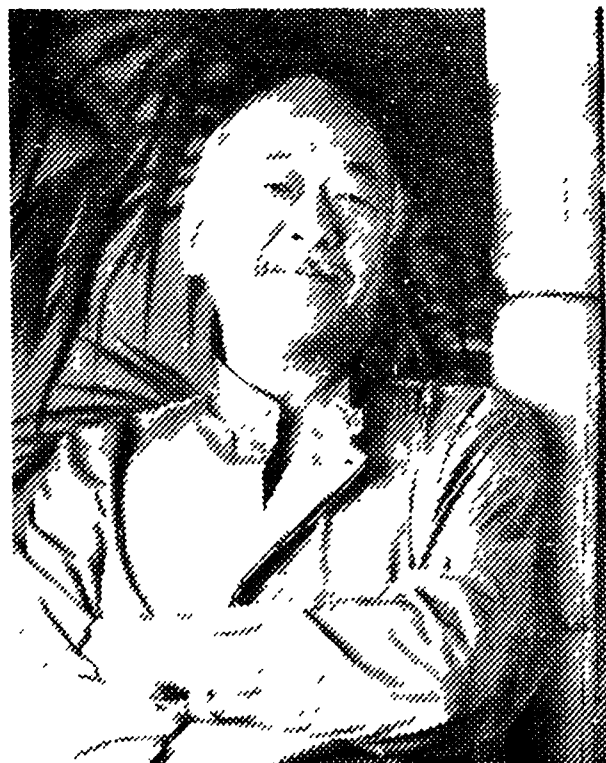

Although his show is aired an hour past most of our bedtimes, David Letterman is one of the nation's most popular entertainers. NBC's Late Night with David Letterman is a combination of sarcasm, irony and one-liners, served up by a good-natured host with a smile that would make the tooth fairy proud.

A native of Indianapolis, Ind., Letterman had wanted to be in television or radio most of his life. He majored in radio/TV at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., and after graduation he got a job at Indianapolis' WLWI-TV. At different times, he was the host of a Saturday morning children's show, a weatherman, a news anchor and a late-night movie host. In 1975, after a year of hosting a radio talk show in Indianapolis, he moved to Los Angeles to pursue a comedy career.

His first network television exposure came on the brief CBS variety series Mary, starring Mary Tyler Moore. Subsequently, he was invited to be a guest on NBC's The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson, and he made his first appearance on that show Nov. 24, 1978. He has made a total of 21 guest appearances on that show and has been guest host 50 times.

In 1980, NBC hired him to host a morning comedy/variety, The David Letterman Show. The program only ran for three months, but it became the prototype for his late-night program.

TIME OUT

Football bowls viewers over

By Steve Paschal

It happens every year. The battle lines are drawn over who is No. 1 in college football.

However, the controversy over which college football team should be anointed the finest in the land rages particularly strong in this season that has seen five different pretenders toppled from the heady heights of No. 1.

Someday in the foreseeable future, the traditional college bowls will be scrapped in favor of a playoff system. But until that time, the mythical national champion will continue to be crowned by a fickle combination of the country's coaches and sportswriters.

With bowl invitations being unofficially extended earlier and earlier each year, several of 10 bowls being aired by the three major networks ended up shooting themselves in the foot. However, at least three bowls should garner big numbers in the ratings game.

NBC has the big winner in the New Year's Day prime-time Orange Bowl game between top-ranked Colorado and Notre Dame, ranked fifth after two trips to the top of the polls. If the Irish knock off the Buffaloes, the winner of the CBS Cotton Bowl clash between No. 3 Texas and No. 4 Miami will have a legitimate claim to No. 1. A win by second-ranked Georgia Tech over Nebraska in the Citrus Bowl on ABC could further cloud the No. 1 debate.

Cable Comments

By LARK L. SAMOUELIAN
Executive Director,
SW Oakland Cable Comm.

Has the list of your New Year's resolutions finally wound itself around your feet? Now that 1991 is upon us, do you find yourself negotiating compromises with yourself on how many pounds you really play to lose (fifteen is much more realistic than 20, isn't it?) or on how you will stay at your job just a little while longer before you start to look for a new one? Well, as long as you're trying to get off to a good start, you should be applauded. Rome was not built in a day, after all.

There are lots of local cable chows this New Year's week that might help you bolster your dedication to your goals of being slimmer, smarter, better looking, successful and more tolerant of your kids, spouse and in-laws.

The exercise shows on our community channels are a testament to our collective American obsession with fitness. Whether you choose "Simply Aerobics" or "Body By You," both on Southfield Channel 35, "Body By Janis" on Channel 11, or "Southfield Body Shop" and "Southfield Body Shop Low Impact Aerobics," on Southfield Cable 8, you are bound to, if not whittle yourself down to a shadow of your former self, at least put some years on your life by pumping that old cholesterol out of those old arteries.

Young people aren't immune to the "start-over" fever the New Year inspires either, and the haunting specter of finances affect them, too, in the post-Holiday glow. This Thursday at 7:45 p.m. on "Southfield Students Ask," students find out how to make their money work for them, through smart money management. This will especially come in handy for those teens who spent $300 on designer labels this holiday (for themselves). This show is followed at 8:00 p.m. by "Explorations: Careers" which this week focuses on future careers in accounting (a career well-suited to the above-mentioned dollar-crazed kids, no doubt!). In this achievement-oriented society, it seems it's never too early for youngsters to map out their career-plan or to learn fiscal responsibility.

Southfield Cable 8 plans to get you in the right frame of mind, even before Father Time transmogrifies into the Baby New Year, with an inspirational program entitled "It's 4th Down and You Have a Lifetime To Go." The show features WXYZ Channel 7's human-interest reporter John Gross, who is perhaps best known for his "Athlete Of The Week" features. Gross brings along a group of "special" people who have beaten the odds to become winners in all aspects of life, including a young man with cerebral palsy who has bicycled cross-country, a local musician who is deemed the "best guitarist in the United States," and a roller skating grandmother who has been Ms. Senior Michigan. Gross teaches his audience that nothing is impossible with perseverance. The show plays Monday, New Year's Eve, at 8:00 p.m.

If you're looking to find out how to peacefully integrate the demands of family, work and play this year, "Contemporama" on Local Origination Channel 11 may be just your ticket to the 90's. This weekly one hour video-magazine focuses on contemporary issues and lifestyles, including education, business and how-to health care. It plays Monday at 8:00 p.m., and Thursday at 9:00 p.m.

Also on Channel 11, those of you who have no more ambitious New Year project than to get in closer touch with your cable viewing, should tune in for "Cable Highlights." This week the show will present a forecast of what HBO has to offer in 1991. "Cable Highlights" can be seen Tuesday at 6:00 p.m., Thursday at 9:00 p.m. and Saturday at 7:00 p.m.

There are lots of things we can do to make our lives better and easier this year, and you may just get some ideas from a local cable program. And the great thing is, it's never too late to try, so when you miss those self-imposed goals, take a deep breath and start over again. My New Year's resolutions, you might ask? I'm not telling. That way, when I break them, no one will know but me...

THIS WEEK'S BEST BETS:

The sports-craze on local cable rages on; and not that the weather is chilly and you can't get out and toss around the football (baseball, basketball) yourself, you can live vicariously through coverage of community sports leagues. On Channel 11's "LO-11 Sports" this week, high school sports will be in the spotlight, Wednesday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday's team names are yet to be announced. Sunday's game is basketball action between Oak Park High School at Southfield High.

What's more frightening than a six year old wielding a hockey stick? Not much that I can think of, but it also makes for some fun television, and that's why Southfield Cable 8 will bring you

"Dillinger" re-made for television

Mark Harmon and Sherilyn Fenn star

By Amy Schmidt

On the evening of July 22, 1934, John Dillinger went to the movies. He was 31 years old. He had been Public Enemy No. 1 for exactly one month. With his girlfriend, Polly, and her landlady, Anna — radiant in her red dress — he went to see Clark Gable in a gangster movie at the Biograph Theatre in Chicago. So the story went and so the story goes.

On Sunday, Jan. 6, ABC continues the Dillinger film legacy with the premiere of "Dillinger," starring Mark Harmon and screen's heir apparent Sherilyn Fenn. The first made-for-TV movie on the subject, the film is a David L. Wolper production, produced by his son Mark.

Such is the clout of Wolper Productions that ABC asked them what kind of movie they had always wanted to do. (Wolper's long history of credits includes the beginning and ending ceremonies of the Olympics, "Roots" and "North and South.") "Dillinger" was their answer.

Why would anyone want to re-make a movie that has been done twice before? The first "Dillinger" was made in 1945 and starred Lawrence Tierney. (Film buffs will spot Tierney making a cameo appearance in this film.) The second starred Warren Oates in 1973.

Mark Wolper explained that what his company sought to do was create a film that was as historically correct as possible. He believes his "Dillinger" is the most accurate of the three. For example, contrary to popular belief, Polly Hamilton, Dillinger's girlfriend, was not "the woman in red" who fingered him for the FBI that fateful night. The handmaiden of history was a woman named Anna Sage, a disreputable immigrant who set up Dillinger in a deal to avoid deportation. (Hamilton is played by Patricia Arquette and Sage by Lucy Childs for the ABC movie.)

According to Wolper, this is the story: In the summer of 1933, John Dillinger was just another ex-convict released after having served a prison term for attempted robbery. A year later he was the most wanted man in America, with a series of flamboyant bank robberies and two jail breaks to his discredit.

It was Dillinger's arrogant style that made him an FBI target. He delighted in informing the press when federal agents blew an easy chance to catch him. So brazen was he, that he took one of his preferred ladies, Billie Frechette (Fenn), for a nearly public picnic at his father's family farm, inviting the neighbors to be photographed with the outlaw. Dillinger, as Wolper would have it, was actually a likeable character with many friends and supporters.

ABC's "Dillinger" was filmed in well-preserved areas of Milwaukee, Wis., resembling Chicago. Shooting a period film from 50 years ago was no easy task. The main problem, said Wolper, was eager Milwaukeeans in modern dress appearing on roofs and windows in the street scenes. Then there was the problem of telephone lines and freeways showing up in the shots.

Even so, Wolper says his film is extremely stylish, and that he and ABC are pleased. But you can be its judge.

Young actors didn't age as quickly as characters

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I am a big fan of One Life to Live, and I've been watching it since it first began. My question is this: What happened to the real Joey, Kevin and little Victoria? Were they not getting old enough fast enough for the show's pace? I miss the old Dorian Lord (Robin Strasser), but I've gotten used to the new one. Also, when is Viki ever going to get over this stroke? Will Niki be with us from now on? Thanks. — Michael W. Carter, McMinnville, Tenn.

Dear Michael: You were absolutely correct in thinking John Paul Learn, Ryan Jarvis and twins Janelle and Tamara DeMent were not aging quickly enough. Due to Viki's stroke storyline, the writers felt the children needed to age considerably in order to deal with their mother's illness. They were replaced by Matthew Vipond, Chris McKenna and Erin Torey.

Dear Candace: A friend told me that the guy who plays Paige's boyfriend on Knots Landing is leaving the show. Is he really leaving? And I would like to know why, if he is. He's good-looking, and I'll be sorry to see him go. Thanks for the information. —Debbie T. in Tennessee

Dear Debbie: Joseph Gian (Tom Ryan, Knots) was written off the show so the writers could take Paige (Nicollette Sheridan) in another direction. It seems Paige will be a little more interested in the older man in her life — until someone better comes along.

Dear Candace: What a nice article you wrote about Peter Reckell! He is a great actor and one of my favorites on Days of Our Lives, the only soap I watch. But I am ashamed of the storyline any more. I think the writers are sick. Why can't they write a loving family story? Oh yes, they have lost a lot of super couples. It seems no one can be happy. I don't see how they can continue with all this.

On Friday, Nov. 23, 1990, the story was reminiscent of years past, which I enjoyed a lot. So, let's hope for better stories in the future. —A fan of the Super Couples, Guernsey, Ohio

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748.

LET'S TALK

Gregg Rainwater solves dispute over character's earring

By Poliy Vonetes

Q: My sister and I need you to settle a bet on The Young Riders. The Indian character, Buck, wears an earring. I say those are teeth of some kind on the earring; my sister says they are bones. Who's right? Also, the series seems to be the most historically accurate and realistic western I've ever seen on TV. Has it won any awards? —Leta Bowers, Cibolo, Texas

A: You are going to be sorry you ever asked about Gregg Rainwater's earring because, Leta, you lose. When I asked Gregg about his earrings, he chuckled and wanted to know what you had guessed they were. He then told me they are made from the vertebra of a rattlesnake. The Young Riders won an Emmy Award for its costuming, although it was nominated in several categories. The show was also honored with the American Western Heritage Award.

Q: Can you tell me how old Billy Mumy and Angela Cartwright were when they filmed Lost in Space and how old are they now? —Janet, Paterson, N.J.

A: Billy Mumy was born in 1954; he was 11 years old when he signed for the series Lost in Space. Angela Cartwright was born in 1952; she was 13 years old when the series began. The series premiered on Sept. 15, 1965, with its last telecast on Sept. 18, 1968. Their ages now are 36 and 38, respectively.

Q: Please give me the name of the actress who was with our dear Mary Martin in the late seventies in an accident in San Francisco. I shall indeed appreciate your answer. —Gladys Jackson, Atlanta, Texas

A: Janet Gaynor was the actress involved in the 1982 taxi accident with Mary Martin. Gaynor passed away in September, 1984. She had been in poor health since the accident.

Q: Can you please send me the addresses of Inside Edition and Life Goes On? Not too long ago, Inside Edition did a segment on artificial heart valves. I wasn't able to catch it all. Life Goes On holds a very special place in our family's heart. To us it is the best entertainment on TV. You see, on Sept. 13, 1989, our 6-year-old son who had Downs died. It was on Dec. 13, 1986 that an artificial heart valve was placed

Q: Can you tell me if Regis and Kathie Lee are related? —Gladys Walser, Minnesota Lake, Minn.

A: Regis (Philbin) and Kathie Lee (Gifford) were born miles apart, in more ways than one. Regis was born in New York City. He is part Irish and part Italian. He is a graduate of Notre Dame and is one of their most illustrious and vociferous alumni. Kathie Lee was born Kathie Lee Epstein in Paris, France, where her dad was serving as a naval officer. At the tender age of 12, she declared herself a Christian after viewing a Billy Graham movie.

Q: How do we get to write to Willard Scott on NBC's Today Show? I have an aunt who will be 102 years old, and I would like to contact him. —Mrs. Harlan Hintze, Eagle Lake, Minn.

A: Write to: Willard Scott, c/o The Today Show, NBC Audience Relations, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10112.

FAMILY FAIRE

Parades, specials provide good fun

By Anne Wheeler

Families can gather around to spend the first morning of the New Year watching a variety of parades on TV.

All three networks will cover the Tournament of Roses Parade from Pasadena, Calif. With this year's theme of Fun 'n' Games, comedian Bob Newhart will serve as grand marshal. Prior to coverage of that event, CBS offers the Cotton Bowl Parade from Dallas, while NBC gives viewers a slice of the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl Parade with Willard Scott and Kelly Lang.

Of course, you and your family won't want to miss the King Orange Jamboree Parade, Monday, Dec. 31.

But parades are not the only shows for families to view this week. NBC marches in with Choose Your Own Adventure: The Case of the Silk King on Sunday, Dec. 30. Pat Morita (The Karate Kid), Charles Haid (Hill Street Blues), Soleil Moon Frye (Punky Brewster) and Chad Allen (My Two Dads) star.

On PBS, watch U.S. Ice Dance Champions Susan Wynne and Joseph Druar as they salute skating pioneer Jackson Haines. From Vienna: The New Year's Celebration 1991 airs Jan. 1. Dubbed "The Father of Figure Skating," Haines was the first person to combine music and dance with skating. Although his avant-garde style was initially rejected in the U.S. and Canada, he eventually came to be known as "America's Skating King."
