Flag supply gets replenished

Northville's efforts at patriotism got a boost last week from the U.S. government itself.

U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell stopped in town Thursday afternoon to present the community with a donation of 25 embroidered American flags. Each flag has flown over the U.S. Capitol.

The new flags will replace some missing from around the city and will also be at some additional sites in the township.

Pursell formally made the donation of the flags to the Northville Community Chamber of Commerce, which in turn donated them to the Northville Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4012. The VFW has overseen the installation of the flags in the center of town.

Pursell also gave flag pins to VFW members in attendance at the donation. Following the flag gift, he stopped at Perrins sporting goods, where he received an Operation Desert Storm sweatshirt. He said he is very proud to be connected with Northville and its patriotic spirit.

Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Laurie Marrs said it's heartening to see other communities begin to adopt some of the ideas Northville initiated to support the service people fighting in the Persian Gulf. "The whole purpose of this campaign is of course to encourage other communities to get on the bandwagon as well," she said.

Council OKs 19-percent water rate rise

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

City residents would face a 19-percent water and sewer rate increase this year, and two years of 10-percent increases, under a plan being reviewed by the city council.

The council called a public hearing for Tuesday, Jan. 22 to gather public input on the proposal.

The drastic rate increases are needed largely to offset the cost of the North Huron Valley/Rouge Valley Sewer Project, a court-ordered sewer system upgrade instituted in many Wayne County communities including Northville, said City Manager Steven Walters.

"That was really why the large increases were recommended, not to build up any kind of fund," he said. "Any other scenario other than the one recommended really results in working capital deficits within six to eight years."

The city made a $55,000 payment to the sewer project in 1990.

Walters' comments were in response to previous suggestions by council members that the initial rate increase be kept below 19 percent, a suggestion the city manager advised against. "We had tried every which way to come up with a lower percentage," Walters said. "Even with a 17-percent rate increase the first year followed by 10 percent for the next two years, you're facing a working capital shortfall in 1998." He pointed out that the North Huron Valley project accounts for 17 percent of the increase.

Council Member Jerry Mittman criticized the administration for not proposing rate increases earlier, noting that the water and sewer fund actually showed a deficit in 1990. "The negative working capital kind of signifies that we could have done something earlier," he said.

Auditor Jim Eagan, who with the auditing firm Plante & Moran has been reviewing the water and sewer fund, agreed that rates could have been raised before given the fact that the fund has been operating on a tight budget. "It's possible that a rate increase could have been justified in previous years," he said.

But Walters said increases were not needed until last year, when work finally began on the North Huron Valley project and the cost to individual communities became known.

"If the North Huron Valley system had not been implemented in the western suburbs, we could be looking right now at a 2-3-percent increase," he said.

Water and sewer rates have not been increased since 1982.

The auditors' report assumes the need to set aside $70,000 in working capital in 1992 to provide for emergency repairs, with that amount increasing with inflation each year after that. "That number is really just

District sees high college test scores

By SUZANNE HOLLYER

Northville High School students fared better than the state average on two voluntary college entrance tests.

The Northville High School class of 1990 scored an average of 21.6, one point better than the state and national average of 20.6, on the enhanced American College Test.

Northville scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test averaged 1,005, compared with a state average of 968 and a national average of 900. Northville students scored 465 on the verbal portion of the test and 540 on the mathematics portion of the test. The highest possible score on each portion is 800.

Both the SAT and the enhanced ACT are voluntary tests of knowledge in the areas of mathematics and English. Most colleges use one or both tests for evaluating students' applications.

ACT scores are reported on a scale of 1 to 36. SAT scores are reported on a scale of 200 to 800 for each category; a perfect SAT score is 1,600.

The "enhanced" ACT is the most recent version of the standardized test. On average, scores are higher this year than they have been in the past as a result of the changes made in the ACT. The scores will remain in-

Chance meeting

Beth Young, left, has been writing letters to Loretta Thurlow-Mayer's son, Steve Thurlow, serving in the Army in Saudi Arabia. The two met for the first time, by chance, at last week's Northville City Council meeting. Young got the soldier's name through the West Side Military Family Support Group. The two shed some tears, talked and exchanged phone numbers.

MUSTANG UPDATE: In athletics, the margin between winning and losing can be quite small. At a swim meet, for example, a fraction of a second here, and another there can make a huge difference.

On Jan. 22, the host Northville tankers topped Novi 60-33, but the margin of victory was much closer than 17 points. Nevertheless, the Mustangs celebrated their first win over the Wildcats in seven years, and registered 15 lifetime-best swims, including two state cuts and a pool record.

"(Northville) won every close race, and that translated into a lot of points for them, and a lot of points taken away from us," Wildcat Coach Kevin Lane said. "If you'd give me 10 seconds and let me knock off our times in strategic places, we could have won the meet. We were out-touched in every close one."

Not surprisingly, senior standout Eric Newton paced the Mustangs with wins in the 200-yard IM (2:01.5) and the 100 backstroke (56.44). Newton's backstroke effort was a school record and state meet qualifying time.

Students split on view of war

But all want it to end quickly

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Some protest war, and some protest war protesters.

The opinions surrounding the U.S. bombing of Iraq are diverse, and it's no different at the high school level.

Local high school students were asked what they thought of the war against Iraq in a very unscientific poll. Their responses fell on and around the line separating hawks from doves.

Northville High School junior Matt Maliszewski likened Saddam Hussein to Adolph Hitler.

Novi High School senior Marc Moote also said he thinks Hussein needs to be stopped. Moote disregards claims that the war is over oil.

"A lot of people think we shouldn't be over there because it's not our oil, but it's not just about oil," Moote said.

What is the war all about? Moote said he thinks the war is about preventing Saddam Hussein from ruling a country.

"Anyone who kills his own people is not sane enough to rule," Moote said.

Northville High School senior Jason Sherman does not agree. Sherman said he thinks the war is about oil, something he is not willing to die pursuing.

"I would conscientiously object," Sherman said if the draft were reinstated.

"We have to consider the Iraqi citizens who aren't Saddam Hussein."

The U.S. was on the right track supporting economic sanctions against Iraq, Sherman said.

"I think we should have let the economic sanctions take hold," Sherman said.

"We waited only five or six months. I don't think that was long enough."

Novi High School senior Rob Fileta

Everyone has watched the war in the Persian Gulf unfold via the television screen

"A lot of people think we shouldn't be over there because it's not our oil, but it's not just about oil."

Marc Moote
Novi High student

said the war is about three things: An obligation to defend the world, money, and a fear of Arab countries uniting.

Fileta said he believes in the right to protest something like a war, but he wishes protesters would support the troops now that the U.S. is involved in a war.

"I have a friend stationed at an airbase in the south," Fileta said.

"He's just in the army for college money and (peace protesters) were throwing things at him."

Northville High School senior Amy Currie knows she could not be drafted even if the draft was reinstated, but she would consider signing up. That is, if she did not have plans to go to college.

"(Hussein) basically shoplifted Kuwait," she said. "Oil is a big economic issue, but I don't think it's totally over oil."

Novi sophomore Katie Schenkel also knows she could not be drafted, but it is the possibility of a draft that makes her nervous when she thinks about the war.

"We should have waited longer to see what would happen," Schenkel said.

But the only thing Novi sophomore John Lahti thinks we should hold back on is the use of nuclear weapons. And he thinks the use of nuclear weapons by the U.S. could be justifiable sometime in the near future.

"I think they deserve to be put off the map," Lahti said.

As for Iraqi citizens: "They have been warned," he said. "Most of the Iraqi citizens like what they're doing."

Novi senior Derek Call sees a few more shades of gray in the conflict.

"We're doing the right thing because (Hussein) is against human rights, but we're doing the wrong thing because in Russia they do the same thing, and we don't do anything about it," Call said.

He thinks the U.S. should become involved in defending against human rights violations anywhere.

Northville junior Shawn Linderman has just the opposite opinion.

"We always get involved with other people's business," Linderman said. Linderman does not think the U.S. is in Iraq to protect oil, in fact, he is not sure just what the U.S. is doing in Iraq.

Northville junior Julie Graf does not think the U.S. should be involved in the war, but her opinions regarding American troops stationed in the Middle East were the opinion shared by every student surveyed.

"We have to support the troops now, but I hope it will go quickly," she said.

Inservice may drain too much class time

My son's fourth grade teacher has been gone as much as five days a month for inservice training. Five days or one whole week in one month is too much out of the classroom and I told the principal that. Inservice is important but classroom teaching time is also important. What's going on?

Inservice or staff development is important in any institution, educational or otherwise. I know IBM bases its success on the fact that it spends about 10 percent of its budget on continual inservice. However, IBM employees are not responsible to a classroom of students every day.

Having been in charge of inservice or staff development for many years, I have observed some interesting phenomena regarding this issue.

First, all teachers supposedly come out of college trained with the skills necessary to teach. However, some teachers did not get the message. Those that did still need to be upgraded as new information or better teaching techniques become obvious.

However, the question you are really asking is when should teachers receive their inservice . . . during school hours away from their students, after school or in the summer.

I believe a reasonable number of quality staff development experiences for the entire staff during a school day are justifiable. Teachers are more alert and receptive during the day than after school. Furthermore, it demonstrates the administration and school board commitment to upgrading the quality of teaching and to upgrading the district's curriculum programs.

However, there needs to be a balance so that during the school day is not the only time given for inservice.

Teachers, being the professionals they are, should be willing to give some time for inservice experiences after school or during the summer. This assumes that the inservice program offered is one of high need, high interest and high quality.

A few poor inservice experiences will turn off not only the teachers but administrators as well. On the other hand, we have a changing instructional environment where educational research has clearly identified how children really learn.

The new knowledge we have today is growing in leaps and bounds. In order for school districts to remain current, staff development is essential. With the small turnover of teachers occurring today is most important.

Indeed, show me a district without staff development, and I'll show you a prevailing teacher attitude of "go to work, do the job, go home and forget about it."

Teachers see staff development from different perspectives. Many teachers, often high quality professionals, really do not want to be out of the classroom away from their children unless absolutely necessary. However, they accept and cooperate in the hope that the experience will be one they can use back in their classroom.

On the other hand, there are a few teachers who are God's gift to the profession and to think anyone could teach them anything is beyond reason. Conversely, there are a few teachers who will seek out every inservice experience their principal can be talked into just to get out of class.

In talking with you, your situation is one in which the school district took your son's teacher out of class for one day that month. School was closed and, a quality experience was offered.

The other four days were granted to your son's teacher by the principal. Most central offices monitor these out of class experiences very closely. This doesn't seem to be happening in your situation.

You did the right thing by talking to the building principal. Five days out of the classroom, other than for sickness, in one month is ridiculous.

Schools bar shock device on special-ed student

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

A developmentally-disabled Westland teenager attending Bryant School will not wear an electric shock device in Northville schools, the district special education director said.

Terry Phelan, a special education student with a disorder that causes him to hit himself in the head, has shown improvement in his behavior. Executive Director of Special Education Leonard Rezmierski told the Board of Education last week.

Charts gauging Phelan's behavior show his self-injurious tendencies are decreasing at the rate predicted by experts, Rezmierski said.

If researchers determine Terry has not improved satisfactorily, and his mother still wants Terry to wear the SIBIS, then Terry will have to receive his education outside of the Northville School District, Rezmierski said.

"Terry will be schooled elsewhere," he said.

Northville is under no obligation to teach Terry, his mother Susan confirmed. Wayne-Westland Community Schools has a special education program that can accommodate him, but he was originally sent to Bryant because the school specializes in behavior problems.

"It will be up to Wayne and Westland to figure out what to do with him," she said.

Predictions said Phelan's disorder, which manifests itself by causing him to hit himself in the head in excess of 100 times per minute, could be reduced by 50 percent within one month, 75-80 percent within two months, and 90-95 percent within six months.

But Susan Phelan is not sure she agrees with the charts based on Terry's behavior at home.

"It's hard to agree, and it's hard to disagree. The experts have come up with this plan and according to the scales it looks like they have reduced his self-injurious behavior by the percentage expected but what they've done is hold his hand," she said.

She means Terry's teachers literally hold his hand to prevent him from striking his head.

"It's the same as tying him in bed. They're trying to phase out holding his hands, but they've provided him with a program that only works at school," she said.

"When he comes home from school I can't hold his hand all the time. I have to go to the bathroom, I have to do the dishes," she said.

"I have to keep my sanity."

Terry has injured himself two times in the last month, she said. Both injuries occurred at home.

The conflict arose over Terry's use of a Self-Injurious Behavior Inhibiting System. The SIBIS is a headband was prescribed for Terry by a neurologist. The device administers an 85-volt shock when its wearer receives a blow to the head.

Susan Phelan sought out a doctor who prescribes the device after medications made her son have seizures, and Terry's neurologist suggested a lobotomy.

She said the device reduced her son's self-injurious behavior. She said she feels, combined with education, the SIBIS would have stopped Terry from hitting himself altogether.

"SIBIS with an education program, I feel, is the only program for Terry," she said.

But Rezmierski said the device violates a district's policy prohibiting corporal punishment.

Phelan likened the shock to a pin prick.

"They say the shock hurts, but it must hurt to hit your head," she said. "In the long run, it could save his eyesight. (Blindness) is what I'm fighting to prevent. He's getting older and stronger."

The case was taken to a Michigan Department of Education hearing officer, Lynwood Beekman. Beekman ruled the device was not illegal, but inappropriate if alternatives were available.

Northville has until the end of the school year to show alternative methods of treatment are working. Alternative methods include special treatment under the guidance of two New York specialists.

Terry is videotaped three times a week in three different curriculum areas for at least 60 minutes. In November, a paraprofessional position was added to work on the program.

Rezmierski said district charts made of Terry's behavior show he is improving as expected. The results will be verified by independent, graduate-school researchers, he said.

Legal system to have final say

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

A state hearing officer will judge whether Terry Phelan has satisfactorily curbed his self-injurious behavior, or he may be wearing a shock-inducing device to help his plight.

The outcome will depend on the evaluations of experts, and the help of Terry's teachers and mother. But one final issue remains, and the outcome will be left to the legal system.

Susan Phelan's attorney fees for the time spent filing two federal court actions, a due process hearing and the cost of seeking attorney fees in court must be paid. Phelan sought to have Northville Public Schools permit her son to wear a Self-Injurious Behavior Inhibiting System or SIBIS in school.

Phelan now is seeking $140,000 for the cost of legal fees incurred during the process.

The district's position is Phelan is not the prevailing party because a state Department of Education hearing officer did not order the use of SIBIS, and therefore not entitled to have her attorney fees paid by the district, executive director of special education Leonard Rezmierski said.

"All those hearings and meetings were of their volition," Rezmierski said.

Susan Phelan is surprised the district is opposing her effort to get attorney fees paid because, she said, it was the district that forced her to go to court when she thought she had found a method of helping her son.

"I don't see how they can oppose that. I was forced to get an attorney," she said.

She said the district's original claim that the SIBIS violated the Michigan Corporal Punishment Law was overturned by the state hearing officer. The district's policy was then the only thing standing in the way of her son wearing the SIBIS.

"We all know school guidelines can be changed," she said.

And the alternative treatment Terry is currently receiving would not have been offered by the district without the hearing and lawsuits, she said.

But the district does not plan to change its guidelines, even if that means sending Terry to another school district if the SIBIS is eventually deemed appropriate by a state hearing officer, Rezmierski said.

Legislators pass on pay raise

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

The Michigan House of Representatives is expected to reject a 16 percent two-year pay increase this coming Friday, following the Senate's rejection of the raise last Friday.

The Senate's 34-0 vote wasn't unanimous. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and two Detroit Democrats abstained. Under state law, the proposed pay raises automatically go into effect unless the legislature specifically votes to reject them.

Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, had an excused absence because he was "in California on legislative business," according to his staff.

"The pay increase was deserved and was in order," Geake told the Capitol press corps after the session. "I made it clear to my constituents."

Republicans delayed the start of session two hours as they caucused. Geake said there was discussion of whether to reject the whole package — 4 percent and 12 percent annual increases and mileage changes — or just part.

"Democrats wanted to vote yes or no on the whole package," Geake said.

Geake's abstention was a political courtesy members pay to their colleagues: If you can't vote with them, you quietly vote no or abstain, and you don't speak on the floor against their position.

With the exception of the three

"The pay increase was deserved and was in order. I made it clear to my constituents."

Sen. Robert Geake

who abstained, several GOP leaders changed their positions. Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus of Alto and assistant majority leader Fred Dillingham of Fowlerville had publicly favored the increase in earlier surveys but voted to reject as political pressure mounted last week.

Area members voting to reject were Republicans Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, Doug Cruce of Troy and Dave Honigman of West Bloomfield, and Democrats William Faust of Westland and George Z. Hart of Dearborn.

The Senate approved a resolution by Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, to reject a package of pay increases proposed by the State Employees Compensation Commission.

"I'm confident the House will follow suit," said Posthumus.

Deadline for House rejection is Jan. 31. The House must approve the identical resolution for the rejection to stick. If the House doesn't act or if its resolution differs, the pay increases take effect.

That caused a political flap over the usually routine motion to schedule the Senate's next session. Majority floor leader Phil Arthurs of Whitehall, announced the next session for Feb. 5 — five days after the deadline.

Welborn objected: "All they (House members) have to do is change one comma or one word" and the pay hike would take effect. Welborn moved to meet Jan. 31, the same day the House is scheduled to vote. His motion was rejected 21-16.

Voting for Welborn's date were Republicans Honigman and Dunaskiss. Opposed were Republicans Geake, Cruce and Dillingham, and Democrats Faust and Hart.

If the rejection holds, it will be first since the independent compensation commission was created in 1968. The panel had proposed a package that would cost $10.7 million over two years.

Legislative salaries would go from the current annual $45,540 to $47,288 on Oct. 1 and $52,800 in 1992. Expense allowances and mileage reimbursement also would rise. Automatic payment for a weekly round trip between the Capitol and the legislator's home district would have been replaced with unlimited business mileage.

Administrative salaries would rise by varying percentages — governor, up 12.9 percent from $106,690 to $120,500; lieutenant governor, up 3.5 percent from $80,300 to $83,100.

Supreme Court justices' pay would rise 12.5 percent from $106,610 to $120,000. In addition, nearly 600 appeals, circuit, probate and district judges would get equivalent raises because their salaries are a fixed percentage of the justices'.

The pay proposal brought lawmakers plenty of heat, but what made the rejection so overwhelming was the deepening budget crisis.

"It would be hypocritical to propose such large cuts in our state budget and at the same time accept pay raises for ourselves," said Cruce of Troy.

Earlier in the week, the Senate Appropriations favored — but the House Appropriations Committee killed — a package of budget cuts proposed by Gov. John Engler. That led Sen. John Kelly, D-Detroit, to propose a change in Senate rules to require the entire Senate to vote on budget cuts.

When Kelly sought an immediate vote on his rules change, senators rebuffed him, packed it off to committee, and reminded him that the process is laid out in the Michigan Constitution, not Senate rules.

War saves $450,000 for Northville

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

While millions of Americans watched the clock on Jan. 15, Iraq's deadline to withdraw from Kuwait, Northville school district officials watched the bond market.

The Jan. 16 U.S. bombing of Iraq may have been a factor in saving Northville taxpayers close to half a million dollars.

District officials targeted the week of Jan. 14 to price bonds for refinancing of a 1989 bond issue and pending bond sale to fund the construction of a new elementary school.

A decision to hold off on pricing bonds an extra week saved Northville $429,972.03.

A 20 basis-point war premium was built into interest rates before the war meaning interest rates were .20 percent higher prior to the U.S. attack on Iraq, according to an A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc.

report to the board. A.G. Edwards is the senior managing underwriter for the district's bond purchase agreement.

Lower interest rates were obtained on the district's bonds by waiting. The lower rates resulted in savings to Northville schools, and Northville taxpayers.

Optimism following initial reports of the U.S. bombing of Iraq drew new investors into the bond market lowering interest rates, according to the A.G. Edwards report.

The underwriter advised the district to price bonds on or near Jan. 22.

Other factors influencing bond pricing were:

- A large supply of tax-exempt bonds competing on the Michigan market.
- A Federal Treasury refinancing in February that could push interest rates higher to attract investors.
- The district's participation in the Michigan

School Bond Loan Fund may influence the rating on a district bond issue. The district's issue was rated A1 by Moody's Investors Service Inc. and AA by Standard & Poor's Corp. But due to budgetary difficulties on the state level, Standard & Poor's AA state rating has been placed on "credit watch" with negative implications, according to A.G. Edwards report.

A lowered rating would hurt the price of any bond issue in the School Bond Loan Fund Program.

The bonds, which are sold through brokers, are available in $5,000 denominations. The final interest rate on the district's bond sale is approximately 6.81 percent, which is variable based on the maturity rate of the bond purchased.

"The bottom line is we saved the taxpayers about $450,000," Northville Superintendent George Bell said.

State lags behind in school funding

Nationwide, legislatures are raising the proportion of school budgets paid by state funds.

"Unfortunately, Michigan has run counter to that trend," C. Philip Kearney, University of Michigan education professor, told the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

States currently pay a bit more than 50 percent of all school operating budgets, up from 45 percent in 1978-79. But Michigan has cut its contribution from 38 percent in 1978-9 to less than 32 percent in 1987-8.

Kearney is author of "A Primer on Michigan School Finance" and co-sponsor of the so-called OK (Olmstead-Kearney) principles of school finance reform.

Among those principles: State government should pick up 50 percent of school funding, reform shouldn't be linked to a tax increase, and property assessments should be capped at the Engler has committed himself to not cutting state aid, and in his campaign he said he would aim for 50 percent state funding of school costs.

Kearney said $7 billion-plus is spent statewide on public schools, but the range in local spending is $2,500 to $8,000.

He said one mill of local property tax generates $280 per Birmingham pupil and only $27 per Inkster pupil. But he stopped short of advocating tax-base sharing, a proposal tabled late of consumer price inflation.

"We're hopeful the governor (John Engler) will incorporate some of our proposals," Kearney said.

- The Oakland County Center for Open Housing's goals of "fair and open housing." Among the goals is "pro-integrative moves" toward housing practices with cooperation from the real estate business.

- Federal funding for "balanced" transportation.

- A role for regional governments in dealing with hazardous wastes and solid wastes.

Water costs up an estimate," Egan said. "It's a prudent estimate, I think... It's something that could be higher, could be lower."

Other council members agreed that the large increases are needed to provide sufficient working capital to the fund. "I think if anything's important to a community, it's the infrastructure," said Carolann Ayers. "If we don't have a cushion in the water fund and something major happens, we're going to have to pay for it from somewhere."

Council Member Paul Folino agreed, saying, "I don't think that 2 percent over 17 is a very big cushion... We just don't want to go any further into the hole."

Mittman asked about the possibility of raising the needed funds through millage, but Walters said a millage would not distribute the added costs equitably among water users.

"It's very difficult to levy millage for something like water rates and get some kind of equitable distribution," Walters said.

Custody case results in indictment

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

A 4,500-mile, seven-month tug-of-war over a tiny girl ended this week-end, when the child was reunited with her father.

The reunion came after the arrest of the girl's mother, who Northville Township police said faces extradition to Hawaii on felony kidnapping charges.

Township police Friday morning took the 9-year-old girl from class at Silver Springs Elementary and placed her in the custody of the state Department of Social Services' Protective Service division.

The child, who had been staying with relatives in Northville, was later released to her father, police said.

Township police acted on a warrant request from the Hilo, Hawaii, prosecutor's office, Capt. Philip Presnell said.

The child's mother, Song Cha Choi, 31, was indicted this month on a charge of first-degree custodial interference by a grand jury in Hilo, Presnell said.

Choi, who police believe shuttled between residences in Northville and Detroit, was arrested by township police at her relatives' home and lodged in Wayne County Jail.

She is being held without bond and faces a 10-year prison sentence if convicted.

Choi is the natural mother of the child. She was divorced from the girl's father, Byung Choi, 34, in 1986.

Byung Choi has full custody of the child, police said.

The arrest of Choi and the return of the child to her father culminated months of coordinated investigation by police and prosecutors in Hawaii, Northville, Detroit and Wayne County, Presnell said.

According to police records, Choi visited her daughter in Hawaii in June. On June 20, Byung Choi granted his ex-wife permission to return with the child to the mainland, police said.

The agreement was based on the child being returned to Byung Choi's custody prior to the start of the 1990-1991 school year.

Byung Choi reportedly told police he spoke with his daughter on Aug. 20, but had not heard from her or his ex-wife since.

Hilo police and prosecutors concentrated their search on the Detroit area and eventually tracked the child to Northville Public Schools via cross-referencing educational records, Presnell said.

Township police began their investigation in October, Presnell said, and located the child at Silver Springs.

Police action Friday went off without a hitch, Presnell said.

Presnell and Det. Michael Wildt escorted the child from school Friday morning. The incident did not upset the child, Presnell said.

"She talked about going home," he said. "She said she was excited about seeing her daddy."

Presnell said Song Cha Choi was contacted after her child was placed into protective custody. He informed her of the indictment and said Choi was arrested "without incident."

A school counselor accompanied the child to police headquarters and a Department of Social Services representative joined the group there.

Township board approves fire protection

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

The township board has moved to extinguish fears over future community fire protection by appropriating nearly a quarter-million dollars to purchase two new fire engines.

The board on Jan. 10 approved a fire department request for two Class A pumpers at a combined price of $241,062.

Class A pumpers are vehicles with a minimum of 750-gallons-per-minute pumping capacity. The pumpers carry 450 gallons of water, 1,200 feet of supply hose, 500 feet of 1.5-inch line hose, a monitor gun and two ladders, as well as miscellaneous support supplies.

The new pumpers will replace a pair of 20-year-old models and could serve the township well into the next century, Chief Robert Toms said.

"We should be good for fire engines for another 15 years," Toms said.

The new pumpers were purchased from the Pierce Co., through local outlet Halt Fire of Northville. The township can expect a 12-month wait on delivery of the vehicles while they are built to specifications, Toms said.

The township will buy the new engines with money collected from a 1986 bond sale to build and equip the township's Seven Mile Road fire station, said township Finance Director James Graham.

Resultant community fire debt from the bond will disappear from residential tax bills after September 1991, Graham said.

The township fire department currently operates with four Class A pumpers. Toms said the well-worn pumpers will hold up until the new models are received.

Old township engines will be sold, he said.

"Maintenance costs us too much on these old pumpers," Toms said. "We can sell ours off to smaller communities."

Toms estimated the township could sell the old engines for up to $25,000 apiece.

Northville School District sees good scores on college boards

flated unless the test is changed again.

With or without the newly inflated scores Northville students have traditionally scored above average on the ACT, Principal David Bolitho said.

"In the past our kids have met or exceeded the state and national scores," he said.

Local comparisons show Northville's 21.6 ACT score as lower than Novi High School's score of 22.2 and slightly higher than Farmington schools' 21.5 score.

On the SAT, Northville's 1,005 score was higher than Farmington schools' 963. Novi High School has not received its most recent SAT scores.

The scores are not intended to be used to evaluate a particular class, Bolitho said. Because the composite scores are not received by the school district until after the class taking the test has graduated, the tests mainly are used as a predictor of how well an individual student will do in college.

"We discuss the implications of the scores with our staff," he said.

"But the characteristics of each class are significantly different. You want to focus in on that particular group of kids."

With recent changes in the ACT it has become difficult to compare scores from year to year, but Bolitho said the scores traditionally have been high.

He said he is particularly happy that the scores have not dropped in Northville as more and more students have started taking the ACT. In the class of 1990, 87 percent of students took the ACT, while 29 percent took the SAT.

"We have a motivated student body. With such a large percentage of the kids taking the ACT it's really a tribute to the community that the scores have remained as high as they have," he said.

Scores have declined nationally. Part of the decline, Bolitho said, has been attributed to the fact that more students are taking the ACT than in previous years.

MONDAY FOOD

Lois Thieleke/Nutrition

Hardest part is sticking with diet

Meal skipping, food banking, overeating and stress are just a few factors leading to back-sliding when dieting.

Does the thought of one more leaf of lettuce or one more salad put you on the dieter's edge? Being on a roller coaster of gaining and losing weight is not new or different for most of the American population. Finding yourself prowling the kitchen for something, anything, to eat, may be a symptom of a larger problem.

Examine your mental image. A positive sense of psychological well-being goes a long way toward helping you deal with the ups and downs of your food and exercise behaviors. Accept your mistakes and build from them, rather than punishing yourself and developing guilty feelings. When you feel good about yourself, you can make positive decisions that will help weight management.

Pay attention to physical changes during weight loss. The scales may not always show you are making progress but your clothes might fit better. You may notice increased muscle tone and trimness. All these are positive indicators of your success.

Be certain of your support system when trying to lose weight. It's hard to lose weight on your own. The encouragement can come from an exercise partner or a support group with similar weight loss goals.

When you feel hungry between meals and you don't want to make anything, drink a glass of water, juice, skim milk, iced tea, hot tea or coffee or eat just a piece of fruit. To feel your very best and control hunger, eat regularly. If you know how many calories you are going to eat in a day, divide that into three regular meals or six small meals. It's hard to get all the required nutrients you need for a day in less than three meals. This is particularly true of fiber, iron and calcium, the last two of which are vital concerns for women.

Standing in front of the refrigerator scanning the contents for just the right thing will probably lead to disaster for your diet. Store food out of sight, get rid of tempting high-calorie foods and, most importantly, plan meals ahead of time. Even plan snacks. Random refrigerator grabbing will not work.

Low calorie, guilt-free snacks are the goal. For less than 100 calories, try:

- one-half cup of ice milk topped with one tablespoon fresh blueberries
- one and one-half cups cantaloupe
- 10 medium sized boiled shrimp with one tablespoon cocktail sauce
- one rice cake with two tablespoons of peanut butter
- one medium-sized baked apple sprinkled with cinnamon
- one slice of bread broiled with one tablespoon of Parmesan cheese
- one and one-half cups fresh strawberries and pineapple
- one-third cup unsweetened applesauce with two ginger snaps.

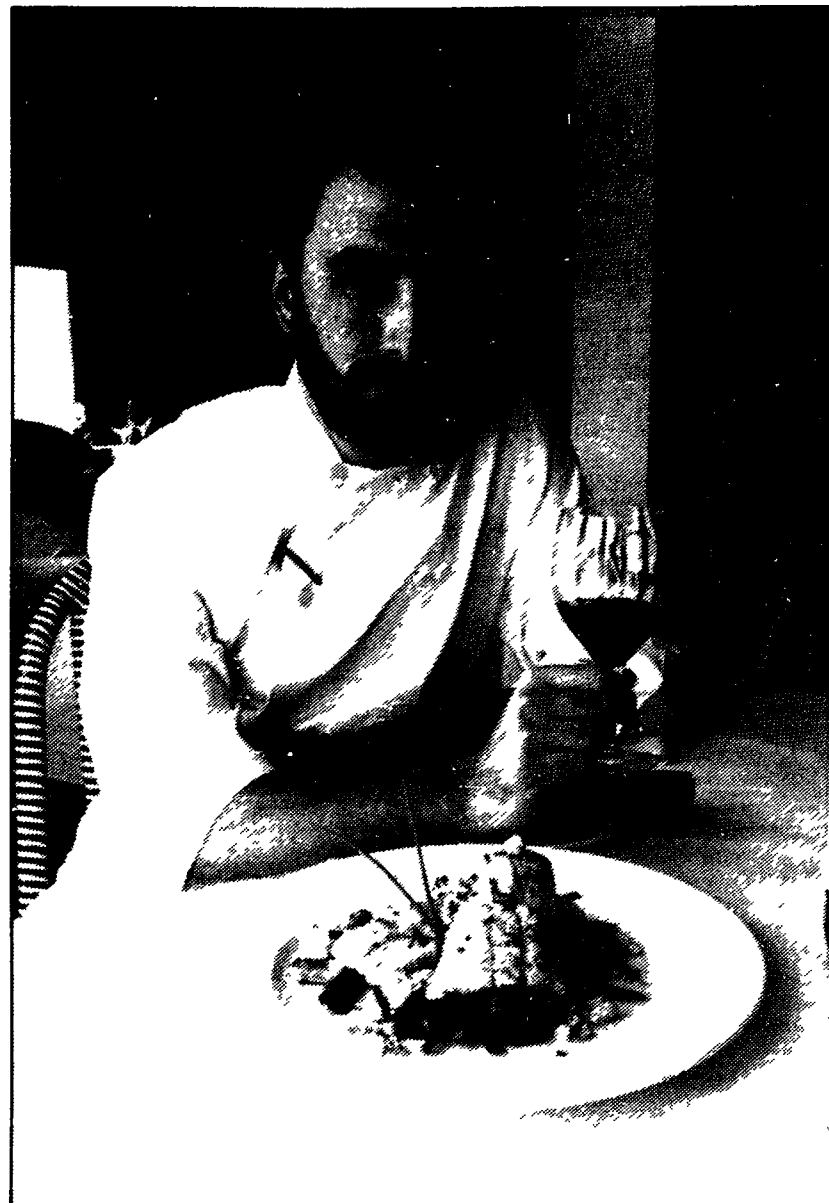

All of these nibbles are better than the calorie-loaded ones you may be choosing now.

It's difficult to alter eating habits of a lifetime, of course. You may want to ask yourself if you eat compulsively or use food to relieve stress, or eat because of social pressure. In losing weight you are probably your own worst enemy.

On the day of a big dinner party, don't skip meals so that you are starving by mid-afternoon. When you're famished, you are more likely to overeat. Eat a low-fat, high-fiber, carbohydrate-rich something for breakfast and lunch. These foods tend to make you feel full for a longer period of time. Cereal, a bagel, bread, a potato or beans are some good choices.

A growing number of restaurants, cafeterias and even fast-food chains are offering a more nutritious selection of foods: foods cooked without fat, more vegetables and fruits, sauces and salad dressings on the side, and more whole grain breads. If possible, order a la carte meals, so you can order when you want and no more. Wait until you have finished your meal before ordering dessert, and then choose a low-calorie, low-fat option. When you feel you have had enough, have the waiter take your plate away so you are not tempted to nibble "just a little more."

Depriving yourself of special treats may only make you crave them more.

Executive Chef Ed Janos of Too Chez with broiled Atlantic wolffish over grilled vegetables with lobster and herb sauce

Fine meal takes edge off war

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

When "War" was the word on everyone's lips, it took the culinary expertise of Ed Janos to wipe it away, even if only for a while.

Janos, executive chef at Too Chez restaurant in Novi, was in Italy on Jan. 16 for what was to be a rather auspicious occasion. His visit, however, was overshadowed by developments in the Middle East.

Janos was head of a five-member team that traveled to Italy to prepare a gourmet feast for the diplomatic staff and selected guests at the U.S. Embassy in Rome. This distinction came as the result of the team's victory in a culinary competition last April.

"It was an all-Michigan competition, meaning you had to prepare a menu that showcased Michigan food products," said Janos.

At the competition in Lansing, judges narrowed the field of over 100 submitted menus to just six finalists. Those six actually got to cook their meal, and Janos' team came out on top.

"First place was an expense-paid trip to Italy, and we had to produce the meal at the ambassador's residence," said Janos. "The U.S. Ambassador to Italy, Peter Secchia, is from Michigan."

When Janos and company arrived in Italy, the red carpet was definitely out for them.

"Two of us stayed in the suite that President Bush stayed in during his last trip to Italy," Janos said. "Two others were in the Ford Suite, named for President Gerald Ford (another Michigan). They supplied us with tour guides, and we visited all the sights in Rome. The chef at the embassy took us around shopping for some things we needed."

Janos was impressed with the quality of European produce markets. "I've never seen tomatoes quite like the ones they have over there," Janos said.

When traveling outside the embassy, the visitors rode in bulletproof limousines. Even before war broke out, security was tight because of the heightened tensions worldwide.

Chef Ed Janos' Award-winning Menu

Spring Chartreuse of "Pheasant View Acre Farms" Muscovy duck in herbed pheasant broth

Roast Great Lakes Pickerel with pea pods and crisped potatoes over a warm white bean and ginger vinaigrette

Warm salad of wild leek soufflé and Willow Run Farms hydroponic lettuce with morel bread croutons

Poached, malt-cured, smoked, stuffed pork loin

Apple tart with dried cherries and asparagus ice cream

White wine: Colline di Ama; Red wine: Chianti Classico

When the dinner was finally served, there were some 60 guests, among them European culinarians curious about Michigan food. There was also a former Miss Michigan, who now lives in Italy. Many diplomats had to cancel, however, for fear of terrorist acts.

The first course, Muscovy duck in herbed pheasant broth, combines soup and appetizer as one with a definite French leaning, while the fish course of pickerel with pea pods and crisped potatoes has an Oriental flair. The warm salad was a mixture of French and Italian styles, while the main course of stuffed pork loin is straight-up American. The spectacular dessert, an apple tart with dried cherries and asparagus ice cream — yes, asparagus — is Janos' personal twist ending.

Burgundy bible hits shelves

America's wine guru Robert M. Parker Jr. has just completed a massive book (more than 1,000 pages) on Burgundy, published by Simon and Schuster, $39.95.

If you are interested in Burgundy and want to learn about it in intimate detail, this is the book for you. It also will serve as a valuable reference in the future.

Parker discusses each appellation (growing region) in detail, relates his opinion on each of 640 individual producers and includes thousands of tasting notes on wines produced from 1945 to 1989.

Although this is a book of lists, it is a useful reference to keep in a personal wine library.

After the opening 60 pages, 318 pages are spent cataloging each of 640 producers; 278 pages discuss 45 Burgundy appellations from Chablis to Beaujolais; and 348 pages are used to list tasting notes on wines from 1945 to 1989, of which only those from 1985 to 1988 are useful for current wine purchases.

The concluding 20 pages are used to summarize the ratings of growers and producers discussed in the first 318 pages.

Parker's brief history of Burgundy (five pages) sheds light on the complicated (dis)organization of its vineyards in contrast to those of Bordeaux.

The most interesting part of his book is Parker's answers to "Twenty Questions about Burgundy" (25 pages).

Even though he tends to be redundant, Parker does help the reader appreciate the charm and mystique of Burgundy.

"It would appear that no matter how much time, effort and money is spent trying to understand the wines of Burgundy, to a large extent, they remain an unfathomable mystery," he said.

Parker holds out the carrot for the enophile by saying that Burgundy "at its greatest, irrefutably provides the world's most majestic, glorious and hedonistic red and white wine."

Parker does the reader a great service by explaining the importance of knowing the best producers, listing his favorites and discouraging wine purchase based on appellation or vintage.

"The argument that small estates turn out more authentic and better wines than the finest negociants is a sham," he said.

This is good advice for wine drinkers, not collectors, since large negociant firms such as Drouhin, Bouree, Faiveley, Jadot and Latour produce the region's most affordable wines.

Most Burgundies are meant to drink, not age, Parker said. We agree. These wines are to be enjoyed in the near term, not cellared for one's heirs.

Parker's rule of thumb is "drink red Burgundy within 10 years of the vintage," except in great years.

Holding out hope for the collector, he said Burgundy may well be experiencing a "golden age," as evidenced by the wines of 1985 through 1989, where the "overall quality level has never been higher."

Antiquing may be hazardous to your health

The idea these days is to use your decorative collectibles instead of just admiring them. Items like turn-of-the-century teddy bears, celluloid trays, colorful dishware and funky old radios and lamps are fun to use.

But beware. "Hazardous items show up more frequently than you might imagine," says Terry Kovel, an antiques commentator who tracks mishaps involving collectibles. An example is an early 20th century ceramic jug that contains radium. One manufacturer was Radium Ore Revigator Co.

"People were supposed to fill it with water and drink it for their health," Kovel says. "Now we know that radium is a carcinogen and these crocks shouldn't be kept, but recently I visited a house and there were two right in the dining room."

Old watches with luminous radium dials are safe so long as they are covered with a crystal, but the naked dials are being used in some modern costume jewelry and can pose a hazard if worn frequently.

Other collectibles to beware of are china and glass dishes made before 1950. Many have lead-based glazes. Used for display, they are fine. But don't serve or store food in them. Kovel advises in her new book, "Antiques & Collectibles Price List" (Crown, $11.95). The book, written with her husband, Ralph, has a section on hazards associated with collectibles.

Celluloid, an early form plastic with a shiny beige yellow color that makes it look like yellowed ivory, was used in making everything from dolls to dresser trays. It is flammable when overheated and gives off a sour, vinegar-like odor when it starts to break down. Items should be thrown away when this happens, she says, because there's no way to reverse the deterioration.

Collectibles were undoubtedly responsible for only a fraction of the 22,500 deaths and 3.4 million disabling injuries suffered in home accidents in 1989, says Robert L. O'Brien, public relations director of the National Safety Council in Chicago. Still, it pays to beware of potential dangers.

Tack small rugs to the floor or place them over a foam rubber pad to keep them from sliding. Don't store foodstuffs in old medicine bottles, even if you wash them first, and flush down the toilet any medication found in them.

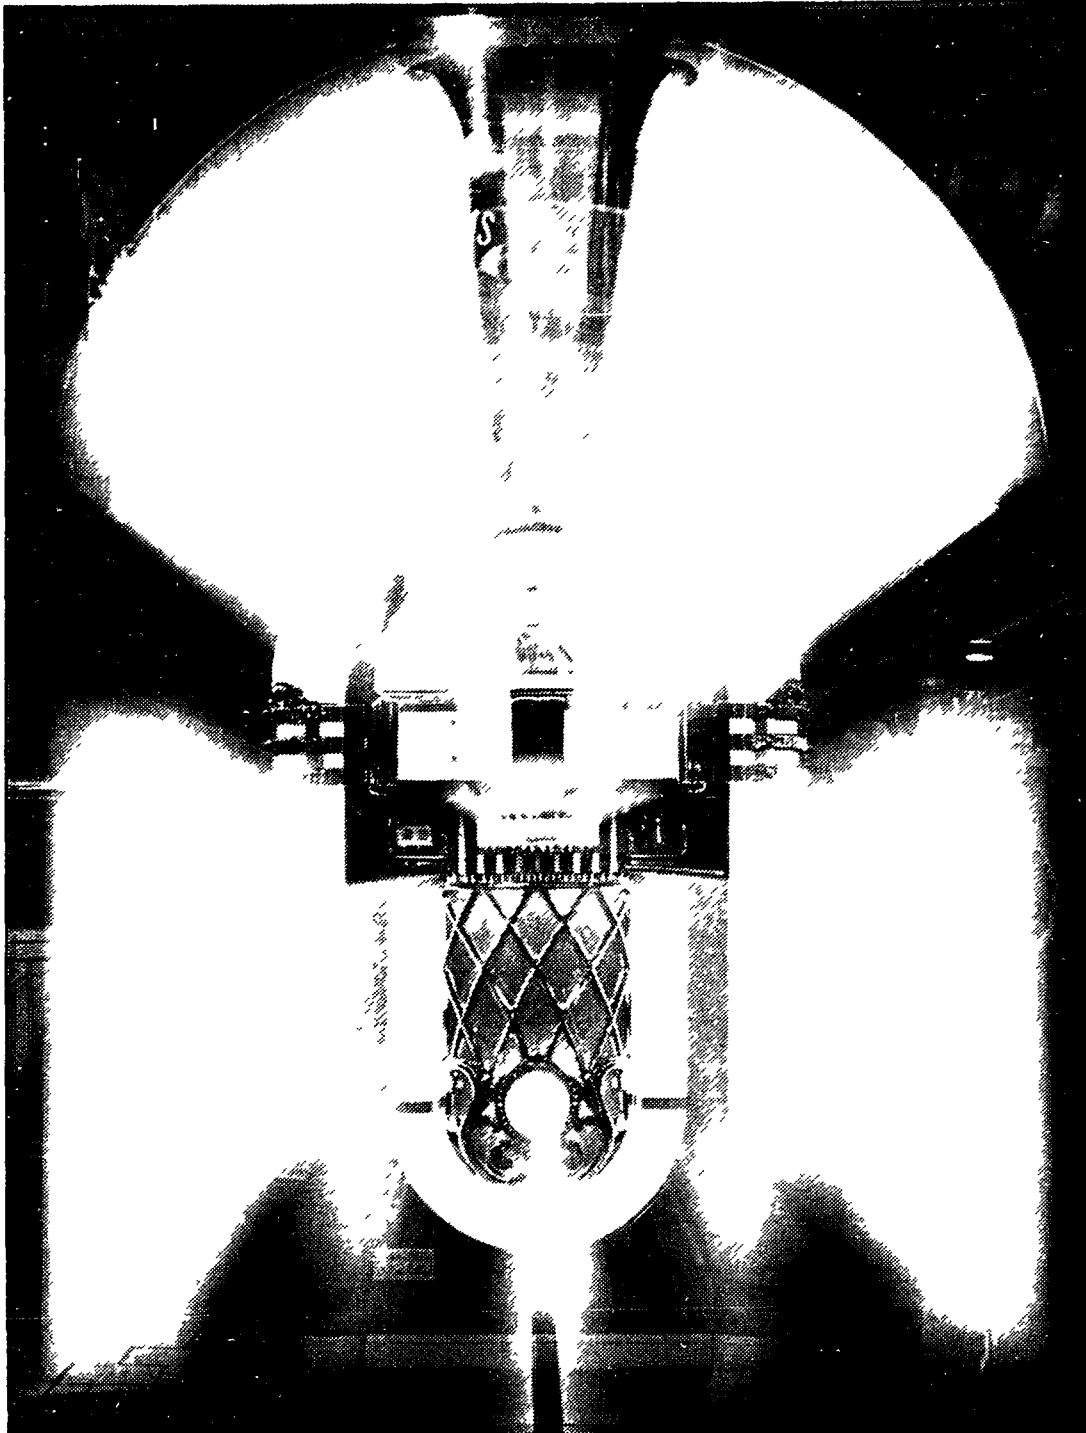

Don't use small electric appliances that are more than 30 years old. Wiring could be frayed, they could be poorly grounded and inadequately shielded, and they might contain asbestos.

If you have antique firearms, be sure they are not loaded and never allow children to play with them. Items children might play with or use are of greatest concern. Old toys with lead-based paint or sharp edges and stuffed toys with easily-removed glass eyes on metal pins which can be swallowed are hazards.

Old nursery furniture such as cribs also can pose hazards. They may have lead-based paint which can be poisonous if swallowed. Decorative cut-outs and slats can cause suffocation if they are spaced far enough apart so an infant can squeeze his head through. Make sure a mattress goes all the way to the edges of the crib, and don't allow active children to use old high chairs and cradles which are easily tipped, safety experts advise.

Use the same caution for antiques and collectibles that you would use for new items, said Dan Rumelt, acting public affairs director of the Consumer Product Safety Commission in Washington.

While collectibles have the potential to hurt you, it's more likely that you'll damage them through improper care, says Kovel.

This reproduction jukebox has modern internals; an original might contain harmful asbestos, dangerous wiring or toxic celluloid

Condo Queries

Minimum reserves required

Our complex is very small. Our annual maintenance income is only $20,000. What is the average amount that associations have in their reserve account and how much should be in a reserve? We have a major expense to refinish our parking lots and driving areas that may cost between $15,000 and $40,000, but we have only $17,000 in reserves. Our question is how much should we assess to maintain an adequate amount in reserves?

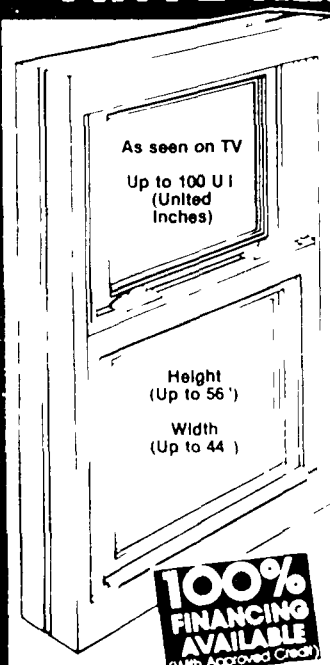

The question of adequacy of reserves is one of the most frequently asked questions of this author. The condominium statute and rules require that a condominium project, to the extent that it was established after July 1, 1978, must, at a minimum, have a reserve of 10 percent of the budget, non-cumulative, for major repairs and replacements of the common elements. Some condominium documents require greater monies to be held in reserves, and the 10 percent reserve requirement is merely a minimum requirement that does not, in any way, reflect the actual amount that should be kept in reserves.

The association should have adequate reserves to cover anticipated costs of repair and replacement of the common elements. A survey should be undertaken to determine what the useful life of the physical properties of condominium are and how much will be needed, considering inflation and interest rates on the reserve accounts to make these expected expenditures in the future. The board should then increase its monthly assessment to include monies for adequate reserves.

Cable Comments

By LARK L. SAMOUELIAN
Executive Director,
SW Oakland Cable Comm.

As the world is changing and we feel more involved, new personal pressures and expectations arise on the homefront. Without realizing it we are attuned to the moment by moment happenings as result of cable technology. Throughout the next few years we will have increased opportunities to understand and learn about people, places, philosophies and things as never before, just by turning on our t.v.

Locally and throughout the Metropolitan Area of Detroit the Cable Systems are in the process of reinforcing and enhancing the designs to insure that they are able to meet the needs that new technologies place upon them.

The Congress and Federal Communications Commission are gearing up to prepare guidelines as they pertain to Mass Communications. Such discussions are ranging from global expectations to local commitments. Local Cable Contracts will be directly affected by legislation and rules imposed. Subjects which are being discussed are: Technical Standards, definition for Effective Competition, and Standards for Rate Regulation.

Technical Standards have changed so drastically because of the new technologies that each cable company has exceeded the FCC Standards from an Engineering perspective because they need to have a clear and strong signal in order to sell cable.

Effective Competition as it pertains to a cable system currently considers 3 Broadcast Signals in the Cable Viewing Area to be sufficient competition. The new definition considerations require another independently owned multichannel video delivery system available to fifty percent of the households passed by the existing cable system; six unduplicated over-the-air broadcast television signals are available and penetration rate of the existing cable system is below 50 percent, or that the cable operator offers a basic service tier at a rate comparable to that offered in other communities where competition is readily available and certifies each year that a set of customer service standards have been satisfied." FCC has issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to encourage comments and create a definition which will accurately reflect the nature of competition.

Standards for Rate Regulation will determine under what conditions a franchising authority may regulate rates of a cable system. Some characteristics to be reviewed include, how much of the cable service may be regulated, and which cable systems must be scrutinized.

Once the FCC determines the final definitions and the Congress determines who may play, then all must be assured that the playing field is level so that the business marketplace will thrive.

The local franchise contracts will reflect such judicial changes and legislative changes so that the Consumer will be able to receive the best services at a reasonable price.

This year in the 102nd Congress all Cable Administrators and interested industry parties continue to learn more about one another. Locally, Cable Committees and Commissions are opening up their ears to be sure that they know what telecommunication options would best serve their communities.

In Farmington, Novi and Farmington Hills, Cable Advisory Committees have been active since 1983. A cooperative venture between residents, the Cable System and local governments has always prevailed. The governing body overseeing the cable franchise is the Southwestern Oakland Cable Commission. The citizen committee is appointed by the respective Mayors. Currently serving are: Chairman Mark Adler, Carol Bauer, Larry Bohner, Terry Dean, Dr. David Doidge, Pat Isham, Jeannie Liming, Jim Mitchell and Wayne Wrobel.

Plymouth has just activated their citizen committee on Cable. The City commission representatives are John Vos III and Paul Sincock. Residents newly appointed are Candace MacGillivery and myself Lark Samouelian. The Contract with Omnicom will begin its 36 month renewal process beginning in July 1991.

Canton Township has an active committee which meets weekly to review consumer complaints. The members of this committee are Board of Trustee representative Phil LaJoy, residents Jim Konberg, Hal Winter, Bill Simmerer and Dan Baldrica. They have just hired Cable Consultant, Municom of New York to review the franchise contract.

From my perspective, information gathering and conversations between all parties involved within the cable industry, government, and serviced residents are very important to establishing realistic community services via telecommunications. We have all learned that promises and wishes do not always pan out to be realistic for daily needs. Fortunately these communities are taking a progressive approach as everyone comes to the table having made the decision to be an active and not passive player in communications.

Clarification: Lenora K. Jadun, P.E., is General Manager of the Resource Recovery and Recycling Authority of Southwest Oakland County.

Custer's Last Stand dramatized

ABC reenacts Battle of Little Bighorn

By Amy Schmidt

"War Party." "Dances With Wolves." "Son of the Morning Star." The time was right for the adaptation of Evan S. Connell's best-selling novel recounting the Battle of the Little Bighorn.

After all, it's been almost a year to date since "Lonesome Dove" made its debut, and audiences are hankering for more.

"Son of the Morning Star" should appease them. The four-hour epic miniseries chronicling the Plains Indians Wars and General George A. Custer premieres on ABC Sunday, Feb. 3, and concludes Feb. 4.

"Midnight Caller's" Gary Cole stars as Custer; Rosanna Arquette ("Desperately Seeking Susan") plays his wife, Libby; Rodney A. Grant ("Dances With Wolves") portrays Crazy Horse; and Dean Stockwell ("Quantum Leap") depicts General Phil Sheridan. The screenplay was written by Melissa Mathison, Academy Award-winner for "E.T.: The Extraterrestrial" and wife of actor Harrison Ford.

"Son of the Morning Star" (which was the name given Custer by his Indian scouts) traces the general's volatile military career in the West and his crucial role in the U.S. government's brutal war of attrition against the Indians. The Sioux Indians had already been displaced by settlers moving West and had made a treaty with the government, giving them the rights to the Black Hills in South Dakota. But after gold was discovered in the Black Hills, President Ulysses S. Grant ignored the treaty, and the rush was on to get the gold and move the Indians out.

Custer, having been court-martialed, saw it as an opportunity to promote himself. An arrogant man, he insisted on his own personal regimental flag and travelling with a pack of hounds wherever he went.

On June 25, 1876, under a sweltering sky on a grassy ridge in Montana, Custer and 265 officers of the Seventh Cavalry perished swiftly at the hands of one of the largest-ever Indian gatherings, led by chiefs Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse. Custer's Indian scouts had estimated their numbers, but he had refused to believe them.

Filming "Son of the Morning Star" on location in Montana required extensive planning. A number of the people who worked on Kevin Costner's "Dances With Wolves" worked on this film as well, including Doris Leader Charge, who served as the Sioux language and cultural adviser. Leader Charge and teacher Albert White Hat translated the script of "Son of the Morning Star" into Lakota, the language of the Sioux. Costner also cast Leader Charge in his film as "Pretty Shield," a Sioux matriarch.

Cathy Smith, a 19th century Plains Indian expert and renowned Indian beading and quill artist, also worked on both films. Smith was dedicated to making "Son of the Morning Star" right. She even went so far as to locate the original manufacturers of Italian glass "trade beads" used for barter with the Indians.

Today, a small museum marked by a high-flying American flag overlooks the white crosses on the hill where Custer's men perished. At the reservation across the freeway, known as Crow Agency, Mont., it is small consolation. The economy is bad, but the movie industry is a boon. Residents can only hope more films like "War Party" and "Son of the Morning Star" soon will be "movin' to Montana."

Gary Cole stars as the flamboyant and controversial General George A. Custer in "Son of the Morning Star." The ABC epic miniseries, debuting Sunday and concluding Monday, chronicles Custer's defeat by Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse at the Battle of the Little Bighorn.

Leonard Stabb
a one-time model

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I was curious about the guy who plays Hunter on One Life to Live. He is so good looking and I'm sure I've seen him somewhere before. Where is he from and is he married? —Lola, Tenn.

Dear Reader: Leonard Stabb is the actor who plays Hunter Guthrie, the mysterious film director and actor who is determined to make an Academy Award-winning film and win back the heart of Megan Gordon.

Stabb is an international model, and it is possible you may have seen him in an ad. He enjoyed the travel and the experience the jobs offered, especially the stunts that had him traveling throughout the United States, Europe, Japan and Australia.

Stabb finally decided it was time to start acting and moved from his home in California to New York City to study with William Esper. He made his acting debut when he first appeared on OLTL last November. He has always wanted to be an actor, he said, "ever since I was 7 years old and would perform for my friends and family in our backyard."

He is an expert at hang gliding, a sport he has engaged in since the age of 15 while growing up in Northern California. Now that he lives in New York, he likes to go upstate almost every weekend to hang glide. An avid sportsman, Stabb also enjoys roller blading, football and basketball. Other hobbies include painting, carpentry and spending time with his dog, Girl. He is not married.

Dear Candace: My question is about The Young and the Restless. Nikki and Victor's children have grown by about five years in a very short amount of time, but Phillip IV (who was born before Nikki's son) is still the same age. How and why is this? —Paula Bailey, Fort Madison, La.

Dear Paula: As with most soaps, when children are involved and the storyline takes a new twist, the children are often aged. Y&R was sadly lacking in the teen department now that Cricket has grown up and married. So it is not too surprising they aged Victoria and Nicholas.

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748. © TV Listing Inc.

LET'S TALK

There's more to Ruth Warrick than Phoebe Tyler role

By Polly Vonetes

Q: On the soap opera All My Children, I have been missing one of its original stars on the past several episodes, and I'm wondering where she is these days. In real life she's the beautiful and talented Ruth Warrick. Though in her seventies, I still find her very attractive and still a treat to look at. So, where is this sexy senior now? —Mr. H.G. Garvis, Rockingham, N.C.

A: I very seldom answer questions concerning the daytime stars. I find it very difficult to keep up with their "comings and goings." However, in your case I made an exception because there are many of my readers who are in that age group, and you, with just a few words, are letting them know that there is still life after 40, 50 and 60 years of age. Warrick, as you have surmised, is a fascinating, multi-dimensional woman. Besides acting on television, she recently starred in a production of Butterflies Are Free at Montclair State College in New Jersey, and in Legends at Tiffany's Attic Dinner Playhouse in Kansas City, Mo. She has written her autobiography, The Confessions of Phoebe Tyler. Last winter she went to Moscow, where she was part of "The Global Forum" group that met with Mikhail Gorbachev about problems facing the world's environment. She is currently producing a play by Vladimir Gubaryev which tells the story of Roald Z. Sagdeyev, a Russian physicist who recently married Susan Eisenhower. If staying busy keeps you young, then Ruth Warrick is ageless.

Q: A few weeks ago I saw a television movie called Fine Things. It starred a young man called D.W. Moffett. This is the first time I have ever seen him perform. Can you please tell me something about him, his background, as well as other programs he has appeared in? —Jaunita Vasquez, Brownwood, Texas

A: Donald Warren Moffett was born in Highland Park, Ill., and was raised in Wilmette, a suburb of Chicago. As a student, D.W. would perform in school plays, although he had stopped acting by the time he graduated high school and attended Stanford University, majoring in International Relations. After graduation he went to work for a large banking concern in Chicago, handling farm loans. He found himself at 22 years of age "lending money to people who for generations had been on these farms, and telling them they could not afford to go on. I decided I had to do something else." At a friend's suggestion, he turned to acting. He joined the St. Nicholas Theatre Co. and performed in their ensemble theater company. He soon, with a friend, formed his own acting ensemble company and became its producing manager. In 1984 he accepted an offer to join an off-Broadway production of Balm in Gilead. Eventually he found himself starring on Broadway in The Boys of Winter followed by How to Say Goodbye. Guest starring roles on The Equalizer and Miami Vice led to his starring role in the TV film An Early

Ruth Warrick

Frost. In 1987 he starred as Tony Jonas in the CBS series, The Oldest Rookie. His film credits include Wheels of Terror, Lisa and The Misfit Brigade.

Q: My question for your column is: How I can send fan mail to Bette Midler? My friend and I would both like to write her. It would mean a lot to both of us. P.S. Have you ever printed a letter from North Dakota? —Karl Schwols, Devils Lake, N.D.

A: Yes, Karl, I have answered letters from North Dakota before. I love my letters from North Dakota. Now, to get to your question. Write to: Bette Midler, 9481 Readcrest Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90210.

Send your questions about the world of entertainment to: Polly Vonetes, Let's Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748. Because of the volume of mail, only questions of general interest can be answered.

FAMILY FARE

'Videosyncrasy' aims for wholesome videos

By Christy Bergslien

Terrified to let your kids watch MTV? You have an alternative. It's called Videosyncrasy, and it's on The Family Channel every Saturday night.

The cable network's introduction of the new 60-minute program in September was two-fold in purpose. The first was to attract a larger teen audience. The second was to offer a more wholesome music-video alternative.

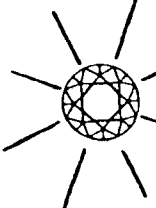

"Music is the universal language of young people. We want to turn kids on to music with values without compromising on the enjoyment," says show host Jimmy Hodson.

That means no heavy metal and no rap. Instead, the program showcases artists such as Paul McCartney, Bruce Hornsby and Wilson Phillips, along with a smattering of Christian musicians.

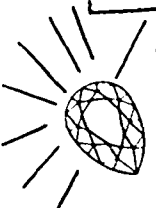

"Being that The Family Channel is trying to reach the entire family, there is definitely a fine line of something being too sexual or too provocative, like Warrant's 'Cherry Pie,' for us to show," says producer Jeanine Davis. "Plus, we want to keep kids from getting absolutely into sex and drugs that can ruin their life."

The approach seems to be working. Viewership is high, and the network, the fourth largest in the country, has agreed to pick up the show for another 52 regular episodes and three prime-time specials.
