Probe is still ongoing

Completion of an investigation into a fatal shooting during a failed drug bust in Northville Township has been delayed.

Michigan State Police Lt. Richard Duthler said detectives had hoped to complete the investigation late last week. But, he said Friday, background, ballistic and narcotics reports all needed to be finalized before the investigation could be completed.

"Our investigation is just about complete," Duthler said. "Realistically, we are looking at, maybe, Thursday."

Ronald J. Melnyk, 33, of Westland, died April 18 after being shot by officers from the Oakland County Narcotics Enforcement Team (NET). The incident occurred in the parking lot of the Melfer store at the corner of Haggerty and Eight Mile roads.

After the investigation is complete, Duthler said the results will go to the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office. He said that office will determine if the shooting was justified and what charges, if any, should be filed against officers.

Duthler, a detective at Northville's state police post, was assigned to head up the investigation. He said the prosecutor's office would likely make a decision on the shooting within two weeks of receiving his report.

According to NET Supervisor Dorothy McAllen, undercover NET officers bought two ounces of cocaine from Melnyk three separate times in the last two months. Charges against Melnyk would have been made for the three purchases, McAllen said. She added that warrants were authorized, but not yet signed at the time of the shooting.

McAllen said officers did execute search warrants at Melnyk's apartment and at a Dearborn Heights party store.

Arrested at the apartment was Nabeel Mashni, who is described as an "associate" of Melnyk's, McAllen said. Mashni is also the owner of the party store, she said.

A total of 38 packets, containing one-eighth of a gram of cocaine, were seized at the party store, McAllen said. She said Mashni was charged in Dearborn and is awaiting pretrial.

McAllen declined to comment if Mashni was supplying Melnyk with cocaine.

Garbage from the ground

One person's trash is another person's treasure, according to the saying. But to an Amerman Elementary School's fifth-grade class, their trash and their treasure were the same thing.

Some people say that nothing biodegrades in a landfill, but Janice Henderson's students wanted to find out for themselves. Her class conducted a scientific experiment by burying batteries, "biodegradable" plastic and other trash in a mini-landfill in the Amerman courtyard last September.

They hypothesized about what would happen to their products, weighing and testing the goods before they were buried.

To celebrate Earth Week the class went on a garbage dig last week to find out what had happened to their buried treasures during the winter stay in the ground. The goods had been marked with name tags to help the class find them.

Eric Campion buried a can of pineapple in the Amerman landfill. He opened the can before burying it in September.

When his class went on the garbage dig Thursday, Campion found the contents of his can were gone. In their place was a slimy, brown slug which he used to gross out his classmates.

"I think he's trying to create pandemonium," said Jennifer Ernst.

Katie Bondy, one of the students who was appropriately grossed out by Campion's slug, buried a pretzel. But her treasure was nowhere to be found.

Foreclosure threatens Shores site

By MIKE TYREE

A $7-million financial noose wrapped around the neck of a controversial developer threatens to strangle the proposed Shores of Northville project.

Financial backers allege Shores general partners D & T Construction and Angelo Evangelista defaulted on loan and mortgage agreements, and have initiated foreclosure proceedings against the development team.

Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance and Home Federal Service Corporation have filed a complaint in Wayne County Circuit Court seeking foreclosure, appointment of a receiver, and monetary damages against the developers of the Shores project.

Foreclosure could signal a highest-bidder auction for 400 acres of prized — but troubled — waters and land on the former Thomson Sand & Gravel site.

But Shores general partners Evangelista and Vincent DiLorenzo on Friday said the embattled developers will continue their attempt to construct the best project "that will ever be in Northville."

The Shores tract is located between Beck and Ridge roads and Six Mile and Seven Mile roads in western Northville Township.

The Shores developers, officially known as Seven Lakes of Northville Limited Partnership, defaulted on at least five clauses of a loan agreement signed on March 23, 1989, according to papers filed in circuit court.

The lenders' complaint alleges that D & T and Evangelista failed to make January, February, and March 1991 interest payments on a

Bolitho in line for promotion

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Northville High School Principal David Bolitho may become the school district's new assistant superintendent for administrative services.

Burton Knighton, who currently holds the post, plans to retire July 1. Superintendent George Bell recommends Bolitho for the job.

Bolitho, the Northville High School principal since 1983, submitted an application for the assistant superintendent position on April 23, using Bell and Assistant Superintendent for Instructional Services Dolly McMaster as references. He also listed superintendents in Grand Rapids and Mt. Clemens as references.

Tonight, the Northville Board of Education will consider Bell's recommendation that Bolitho be hired to replace Knighton.

"Mr. Bolitho's organizational skills, as well as his ability to work through problems with people, will make him an invaluable part of the Cabinet in his new role," Bell wrote in a letter to the school board.

"Mr. Bolitho has been involved in the Strategic Planning process for the entire school district and is well respected by the community as well as his fellow administrators of the Northville schools."

Before coming to Northville, Bolitho was an assistant principal at John Glenn High School in the Wayne-Westland Community School District from 1974 until 1983.

Bolitho taught American history and government at John Glenn from 1971 until 1974.

He also taught physical education at John Glenn for at-risk, alternative-education students from 1971 until 1973.

Bolitho currently lives in Novi with his wife and two children.

The assistant superintendent for administrative services position requires a master's degree as well as evidence of work beyond the master's degree.

Bolitho has a bachelor's degree in history from Eastern Michigan University with minors in English literature and language, and physical education. He received a master's degree from Eastern in 1975. He completed work in educational leadership at Wayne State University in 1981.

A minimum of five years experience as a teacher and school administrator is required for the position.

The position of high school principal will be posted for applicants if the school board approves Bolitho for the assistant superintendent position.

Bell said he expects a great deal of citizen and staff involvement in choosing a new principal.

The arts finding new friends in Northville

The Northville Arts Commission has developed a new organization for residents with a high interest in the arts.

The group is called Friends of the Arts, and is planned to be "a fun group for those interested in cultural activities such as guided tours of the Detroit Institute of Arts, theater trips, symphony concerts and art shows," said M.A. Fontaine of the commission.

Organization of the group has been under the direction of commission members Phyllis Morrow, Edward Postliff, and C. Phelps Hines. The scope of Friends of the Arts will be solely up to the members of the new group, which will be self-supporting and non-profit.

Fontaine said the Northville Arts Commission is forming the group in response to public enthusiasm for activities such as the Michael Farrell art lecture series, the summer music series in the gazebo in downtown Northville, Art Market, children's chalk art contest in conjunction with the Victorian Festival and numerous other cultural activities sponsored by the commission.

The first meeting of the Northville Friends of the Arts will take place this Thursday, May 2, at Genitt's, with snacks and a cash bar. Call 349-6104 to reserve a spot at the meeting.

Garbage out from the ground

"There weren't any bugs or worms; it was just gone," she said. Steve Traicoff remembered the controversy over biodegradable plastic bags.

Some bags were advertised as biodegradable, but environmentalists charged that the bags would be put in a landfill where they would not have the sun and air needed to break down into smaller components. The bags, although still available, are no longer advertised as biodegradable.

Traicoff wanted to test the plastic-bag theory himself. He buried a small piece of biodegradable plastic in September.

Thursday Traicoff found his small piece of biodegradable plastic in good condition despite the dirt that clung to it. "It's the same. I thought it would be half the size it was," he said.

Charles Fan buried a Panasonic Heavy Duty battery. Fan expected the battery to leak, showing how dangerous it is to throw batteries away.

But after eight months, the battery showed few effects from its stay in the earth.

"I don't see any signs of it blowing up," he said.

But after cleaning and closely examining the battery, Fan discovered a small hole in the battery that had allowed some acid to leak out.

Steve King buried mellophone rinds in September. He could not find them during the garbage dig Thursday.

But, as Henderson explained, "Science is drawing conclusions from what you see." Therefore, King could not conclude that his rinds had disintegrated — with the possibility looming that he simply could not find them.

King was expected to spend lunch Thursday finishing the garbage dig so he could prove one of his two theories true.

Kristen Winter also had trouble finding a small piece of colored cardboard she had buried in September.

"I can't find mine. I'm bummin'," she told her friends.

Moments later she found it, prompting a round of cheers from Winter and others.

Township seeks escrow cash

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

Northville Township has fired another volley in the engrossing Shores of Northville saga.

In legalese, it's a "Complaint For Declaratory Relief and Appointment of Receiver."

In plain English, the township is saying it's time to repair Sump Drain.

The declarative-relief request was filed in Wayne County Circuit Court on Friday, township attorney Ernest Essad said.

The township will ask the circuit court to allow it to use approximately $523,000 in an escrow account to repair Sump Drain, a meandering creek that has swept a flood of controversy onto and around the proposed Shores of Northville development.

The township presently manages the escrow account, which is based on funds accrued during a former property owner's sand and gravel mining operation, and was designated as insurance that the site be restored to township standards.

Named as defendant in the township's relief request is Alta Sorenson, trustee of the Thomson Trust.

The Shores of Northville site as it appeared in January, looking east

File Photo

The Thomson family sold its 400-acre parcel to the Seven Lakes of Northville Limited partnership in 1989 after completing gravel excavations. However, the Thomson family retained access to the escrow account as a condition of the sale.

That decision kept the Thomson family from walking away from problems created when the developer — among other controversial moves — diverted a tiny, on-site creek during reclamation work.

The creek, officially dubbed Sump

Drain, washed out its temporary streambed late last fall, and resulting erosion caused massive damage to the proposed Shores site and residential and commercial properties to the east and west.

The township hopes to use the escrow funds to repair Sump Drain on-site only. Township attorneys have determined funds cannot be used to repair off-site damages.

But the township's action does not guarantee immediate relief.

Attorneys for the Thomson Trust have said they will attempt to block the move.

Township Supervisor Georgina Goss said township engineers have readied a repair plan that could remedy the Sump Drain woes.

"I'm very confident that our engineers, working with the DNR, could begin resolution of that problem immediately," she said. "We're asking the court to speed up the process."

Shores backers seek foreclosure

$6.75-million loan.

Unpaid interest owed Alexander Hamilton and Home Federal — both of whom maintain limited partnerships in the Shores of Northville project — totaled almost $75,000 by February 1991, court records indicate.

By mid-March 1991, the total amount owed by the Seven Lakes group had leaped to more than $6.9 million.

But unpaid interest was not the sole cause of the foreclosure move. The lenders also say the developer failed to pay property taxes, did not complete site improvements by a specified date, damaged the property by relocating Sump Drain, and failed to "comply with all applicable laws and regulations."

Northville Township records indicate that Seven Lakes of Northville failed to pay approximately $3,500 in property taxes by March 1991. The township forwarded delinquent tax statements to Wayne County last month.

Those contentions do not seem to faze Evangelista, who blames uncooperative state and local government officials for the Shores woes.

"They don't give you a chance," Evangelista said. "We can't do things if they won't let us."

"Someway or somehow we're going to get this done."

DiLorenzo called the lenders' move "posturing" and said Evangelista has sufficient funding to continue the project.

"The general partners will reach some kind of compromise amongst themselves," he said. "They (lenders) can't distance themselves (with) whatever legal maneuvers they've dreamed up."

DiLorenzo said the fact that Alexander Hamilton and Home Federal comprise 25 percent of the Seven Lakes of Northville partnership puts their legal complaint in a strange light.

"They're foreclosing on themselves," he said. "They're trying to position themselves as the lender and not as partners."

"They're trying to get away from the problem."

And what a problem the proposed development has become.

The state Department of Natural Resources slapped a cease-and-desist order on the developer in March 1990 after it alleged D & T Construction and DiLorenzo violated the Inland Lakes and Streams Act during site reclamation work.

The developer may have violated the cease-and-desist order when it failed to obtain permits prior to relocating an on-site stream in the early summer of 1990.

The state then hauled DiLorenzo and D & T into court for Inland Lakes and Streams violations. Preliminary examinations scheduled for March and April 1991 were adjourned as prosecutors and D & T attorneys reportedly grappled with settlement figures thought to be at least in the $500,000 range.

Another pretrial is set for May 10.

Northville Township also holds a lengthy rap sheet against the developers.

The township has battled D & T for more than a year over issues including destruction of protected woodlands, unauthorized destruction of a pre-Civil War home bordering the site, unauthorized site development, and the alleged damage of neighboring properties due to the Sump Drain relocation.

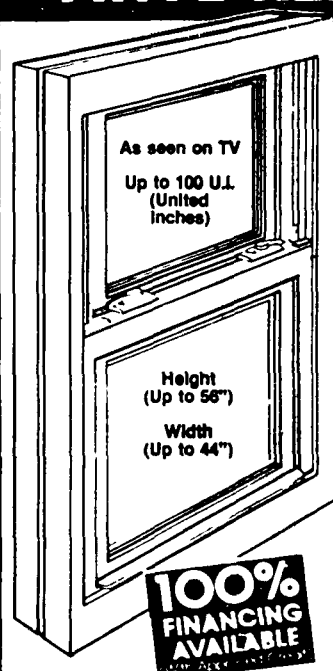

A possible foreclosure has little relevance to the township, Supervisor Georgina Goss said.

"Quite frankly, I don't care if they're in receivership or in foreclosure," she said. "Whoever owns the property will be expected to repair the problems on and off-site."

Scheduled proceedings on the lenders' complaint include a May 10 answer review (to the charge) and a June 21 status conference, according to Wayne County Circuit Court records.

Our Opinion

Get together now on trash disposal issues

The respective governing bodies of the city and township continue to discuss ideas of improving or altering their systems of trash collection. In the back of both bodies' collective mind seems to be the idea that the two will combine trash-disposal services at some point. But if that idea is to become reality — as it should — it needs to move to the front of their minds right away.

Most recently, the Northville City Council explored the idea of a per-bag charge for curbside pickup. The city, like the township, faces a serious financial crunch, and one of the constantly rising costs in the city is garbage pickup.

Charging for trash pickup by the bag makes a good deal of sense, particularly if it is accompanied by a reduction in the city's property-tax rate. The per-bag charge would not apply to recyclable trash, which is the key to the value of such an idea.

Charging per bag ensures that everyone pays their fair share of this ever-increasing cost. The more a household recycles, the less it will have to pay for trash disposal, encouraging responsible behavior which helps both the environment and the city (by reducing its overall volume of landfilled trash). As City Manager Steven Walters pointed out last week, not implementing a per-bag charge essentially subsidizes the most wasteful producers of trash; everyone contributes to disposing of their waste.

Committee report lets school district move on

A Northville school district health committee did an outstanding job evaluating concerns with the district's health model, and the committee members deserve to be congratulated.

The six-member committee reportedly spent over 332 hours in studying the 227 concerns presented by a group of parents who have voiced complaints with the district's health model. That works out to over 55 hours per committee member. The Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education is a series of lesson plans that can be used to fill a state requirement that school districts implement a health curriculum. Controversy has arisen in Northville and other school districts over the model.

Committee members Kay Raby, Scott Wilsons and Barb Flis are parents of students attending Northville schools. They all devoted a great deal of their personal time to studying every complaint submitted. Now, all this is well and good, except for one thing: The township board is not involved in the discussions. Meanwhile, the township is going after waste disposal issues in its own way, interviewing firms to select a single "preferred waste hauler." And the city council is not directly involved there.

Both bodies seem to support at least exploring the idea of combining forces for trash disposal. As we've always said in regard to recreation, library, and police dispatching services — the more cooperation the city and township achieve, the better off the residents of both will be in the long run.

Trash disposal provides a grand chance to share another service, save some money and eliminate duplication of efforts. But it's only going to work if each body is involved in the other's deliberations. If that doesn't happen, the two will probably go off in vastly different directions — so different that combining efforts down the road will become impossible.

resource teacher Betty Parker also worked on the committee. Each committee member evaluated every objection to the model. They considered breaking the objections into groups with every committee member studying only about 38 of the objections, but opted to spend the extra time to make sure every objection was carefully considered.

The Northville parents who presented the concerns also spent many hours compiling their written objections to the model. Their concerns deserved some attention, and frankly, we are somewhat surprised at the amount of attention they received. The parents who submitted the complaints claim they were misrepresented by the health committee which, they say, focused on the approximately 25 errors they made in filing objections to the model. If they admit to making 25 errors out of 227 complaints, then we have to wonder how they expected to be taken seriously in the first place. But taken seriously they were. Now perhaps the conflict will finally be laid to rest in Northville — and the district can refocus its attention on educating students.

Law confounds convention

"Why would he want to move down? Isn't it a step down to go from state representative to township supervisor?"

I heard the question two dozen times as Gerry Law departed the state House of Representatives last week to be appointed Plymouth Township supervisor.

Indeed, the House has been called "the retired supervisors club." Many members once were township supervisors. Becoming one of 110 members of the lower chamber has been the high point of many a political career.

Certainly, I have never heard of anyone leaving the House for township government, and neither had Gerry Law when we talked about it during his last day in Lansing.

But Law had many good reasons for making the move:

- State rep can be a stepping stone, but Law said, "I've never had any aspirations to run for (Congressman Carl) Pursell's or even (state Sen. Bob) Geake's seats."

- Plymouth Township is no rural, rinky-dinky operation. "Supervisor is a more responsible job. You're the top guy. It's a very organized operation — computerized. It's not keeping records in the basement of your home."

- Plymouth Township has a high-toned population of 25,000, a respectable levy of about four mills and an industrial belt.

- While Law says money wasn't a factor, the supervisor job pays nearly $20,000 a year more than the Legislature. Many lawmakers tell me their school teacher spouses make as much as they do ($45,000).

- Supervisor has a four-year term; state rep, two years. No sooner is a rep elected than he or she must start raising money for the next campaign.

- The commute to Lansing is 140 miles. "I've put on 250,000 miles in 8 1/2 years," Law said. My brother sometimes drives from Great Falls to the Montana state capital of Helena and is awestruck by the beauty of the Rockies every time. The trip to Lansing is dull, dull, dull.

- The supervisor works with hometown folks.

On vacation, Law tours capital buildings in other states, and he will miss Lansing, particularly seeing the finale of the restoration of the Capitol Building.

There is another reason why Law may have made a smart move, though he wouldn't admit it to a man with a notebook. State representative is a crummy job, except for a half-dozen leadership positions in the majority party.

The House is undemocratic. It isn't a deliberative body that works by debate. Rather, big decisions are brokered by the leadership, and everyone else is a foot soldier marching in line. For a minority Republican like Law, it's worse.

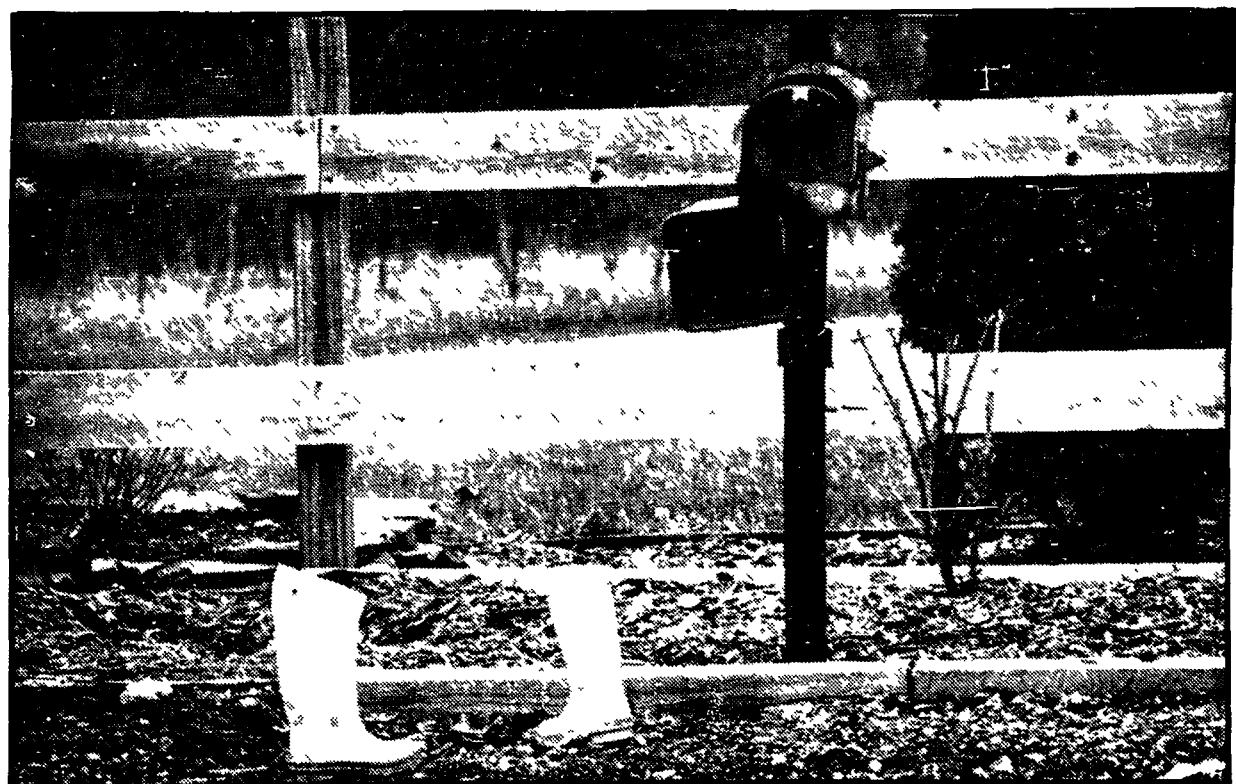

In the 1989-90 term, Law was energetic enough to introduce 51 bills of which four passed — a bit below the average of 10 percent. It wasn't due to lack of effort. His attendance and sobriety records are excellent.

What passed were bills to swap state land in Wayne County, regulate retail sales, to certify recreational taxes and to regulate "crane" games. Minor stuff for an agile mind.

But Law's more ambitious bills — requiring teens to stay in school to obtain drivers' licenses, allowing single business tax credits for research and development, giving export incentives to small business, requiring real estate agents to disclose clients, fixing the catastrophic claims mess — got nowhere.

Within feet of a Pulitzer Prize

We almost have a Pulitzer Prize-winning photographer in our midst. Let me tell you about it.

His name is Bob Carr, and he is a longtime area resident. He lived in Northville for better than 20 years and now makes his home in Novi.

Bob has been a professional journalist for more than 40 years — the last 28 of them with The Detroit News, where he has worked on the copy desk as a copy editor in addition to stints on the business and entertainment beats.

Bob retired from The News at the start of the year, and we were fortunate to have him as a guest speaker at one of our quarterly editorial seminars at the Novi Public Library last Thursday afternoon.

He talked to our editors and reporters about his career, about what a copy editor does on a major metropolitan daily and about the things we can do to improve the quality of our newspapers in general and our reporting in particular.

His talk was sprinkled with several amusing anecdotes about his own career, including a story about how he came within several feet of winning the Pulitzer Prize for photography shortly after he got started in journalism.

It was back in the 1952 when he was working as a reporter for the now-defunct Grand Rapids Herald. Because of staff shortages, Bob was pressed into duty to serve as a photographer. And one of his most memorable assignments was to take pictures of a Labor Day speech by Adlai Stevenson, who was then running against Dwight Eisenhower for the office of President of the United States.

"Now you have to remember that there were many people who felt Adlai Stevenson was the finest presidential candidate since Abraham Lincoln," said Bob, confessing that he himself was an admirer of the late U.S. Senator from Illinois.

He went on to say that he was extremely excited about the opportunity to photograph Stevenson on the campaign trail and followed him around Grand Rapids, attempting to capture on film his every facial expression and physical gesture.

After completing his tour of Grand Rapids, Stevenson went on to Hamtramck and Detroit, and eventually made his way up to Flint, where he appeared at a political function with then-Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams.

And it was while Stevenson was sitting on that podium that a photographer named William M. Gallagher with the Flint Journal took one of the most memorable photographs in the history of photojournalism.

You probably remember it. It was the picture of Stevenson sitting on the podium with his leg crossed and a big hole in the bottom of his shoe. That picture went on to win the Pulitzer Prize in photojournalism in 1952 and to this day is typically identified as "that famous photograph of Adlai Stevenson."

"He (Stevenson) had to be wearing that same pair of shoes when I was taking his picture earlier in the day," Carr told us last Thursday. "And I probably missed my big chance to win a Pulitzer Prize because all my pictures were focused above his waist."

I thought it was a terrific tale . . . sort of a sidelight to photojournalistic history.

Bob even offered his own tongue-in-cheek moral to the story. I don't remember his exact words, but it went something like this: If you set your sights too high, you may miss your chance to win the Pulitzer.

Chiarlo wines, an example of Piedmont's best

Unless you are a wine buff extraordinaire, you've probably never heard of Piedmont wines produced by Michele Chiarlo.

That's just fine, because you're in our company. We just recently discovered these wine gems from Italy's famed Piedmont region.

Until now, the wines of Michele Chiarlo have been sold in the United States under the brand name Granduca. In fact, you will still find several of these wines under this brand name. That's OK, too, because these are the wines of Michele Chiarlo.

The firm of Granduca was founded in 1956 by Chiarlo, the son of seven generations of esteemed grape growers. To celebrate 35 years of winemaking dedication, the name of the winery has been changed to Michele Chiarlo, reflecting the producer's personal pride in presenting top-quality wines.

"It has always been my philosophy and overriding passion to rigorously select grapes from the most reputable growers in the most-favored vineyard areas," Chiarlo said. "For our estate vineyards, only hillside locations with unique soils and microclimates have been chosen."

The Cerequio vineyards in Barolo have long been renowned for their exceptional wines. Here, Chiarlo owns the Antico Podere Averame, one of the finest nebbiolo vineyards for Barolo production. To ensure excellence at the time of harvest, the estate Cannubi vineyard, with its 38 to 50 percent grade, has been terraced at major capital investment. Previously, this vineyard was painstakingly farmed by hand labor.

"If there is a single finest vineyard in Barolo, and the consensus is that there is, that vineyard is Cannubi," said the Italian wine authority Sheldon Wasserman in his book Italy's Noble Red Wines.

In the vineyard, Chiarlo practices severe pruning during the winter dormant period and cluster thinning in mid-summer to limit the crop, and uses organic fertilizers.

Because Chiarlo sources grapes throughout the Piedmont region, he operates wineries in three different locations to ensure that the harvested grapes reach the processing location in the shortest time possible. Once at the winery, the grapes are crushed and pressed, in the case of white varieties. Temperature-controlled fermentation with natural yeast is used for both red and white grapes.

Italy is among the world's leaders in fashion. Producers, like Chiarlo, are designing wines that are at the cutting edge of consumers' taste preferences. The exceptional vineyard sites and extra care taken to maintain vine and wine quality are expensive. These factors are reflected in the price of wines from Italy's finest producers. Chiarlo is among them.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

The following wines of Michele Chiarlo from Italy's Piedmont are uniquely styled.

1989 Fior de Rovere Gavi ($23.50) is an artful presentation of the Cortese di Gavi grape from the tiny Rovereto di Gavi area. Produced from 35- to 40-year-old vines, it is an attractive wine with pear-like fruit impressions, lengthy finish and balanced acidity. It will complement poultry or fish dishes with rich sauces.

1985 Barolo ($25.50) is a handsome wine now but portends the aging potential of another 10 years. The lively red fruit, with cocoa and tobacco nuances, finishes smooth and velvety.

1982 Barolo Riserva ($29.25) is a rich wine deserving the designation "Riserva." It mirrors the character of the 1985 Barolo described above, but additional age has enhanced it to full maturity.

PASTA

Making it at home
is a pasta-bility

By LINDA SUSAN DUDLEY
Copley News Service

Although Giuliano Bugialli doesn't wear chef's whites or a high, white pleated toque on his head, this Italian cooking teacher is serious about his mission.

In his classes on pasta making (and other regional Italian dishes), there are no wimpy textbook explanations for him. Instead, flour covers the counter. Flour covers the floor and it even speckles Bugialli's polished black leather loafers.

He shuns fancy electric machines and instead works with his hands and hand-operated kitchen aids. He kneads with both hands, using experienced strokes. It looks like hard work, but it also looks like fun.

There is something relaxed about this sophisticated Italian, himself dusted with flour. And there is something informal about the way he cooks, yet the results are highly complex and refined.

Bugialli knows pasta can be made in a food processor — but not in his classes. He won't use an electric pasta maker, either, preferring to roll it out by hand. (In his Florence classes, students make pasta every morning — by hand.)

Bugialli also corrects a popular notion that Italians add cheese to every pasta dish they serve.

"Cheese, grated or sliced very thin, is often added to pasta before serving, but it is used much less often than people think."

"Generally, cheese is not used with fish, game or mushroom sauces (there are some exceptions), and rarely in dishes with hot red pepper."

"On many other dishes, cheese should not be sprinkled mindlessly, since they are better without it and they melt into an unappealing sameness," Bugialli continues.

Bugialli is not against Americans using commercial dried pasta. Indeed, one of his cookbooks, the lavishly illustrated "Bugialli on Pasta" (Simon & Schuster), includes recipes for a variety of regional specialties using dried pasta. (He prefers those imported from Italy.)

Bugialli has emerged as the leading exponent of Italian cooking in this country, with a handful of cookbooks to his credit. He has become a trans-Atlantic commuter, dividing his year between cooking schools in his native Florence and New York City. In New York, his classes are held in his townhouse, where he has two teaching kitchens, including one with a brick oven and fireplace for cooking. He also crisscrosses the United States giving classes.

Here are Bugialli's basic techniques for making fresh pasta. The pasta dough, he says, will go through these stages: First, it will be a thin batter, then a thick batter and, finally, a dough.

● Place flour in a mound on a pasta board or smooth surface such as Italian marble or granite.

"Whatever you do, don't use Formica," Bugialli scolds. "It doesn't breathe, so the pasta sticks."

● Use a fork to make a well in center of flour.

● Put eggs and other ingredients specified in the recipe, such as flavorings, in the well. (Bugialli uses extra-large eggs; if you don't, add an extra one.)

● With a fork, mix together the eggs and other ingredients.

● Then begin to incorporate the flour from the lower part, pushing it under the dough that is forming to keep it from sticking to the board.

Don't use your hands to mix ingredients at this point, Bugialli says. Remove pieces of the dough attached to the fork.

● Put the pieces of dough together with your hands.

● Scrape the board with a pastry scraper, gathering together all the unincorporated flour as well as the pieces of dough coated with flour.

● Place this flour with the pieces of dough in a sifter. Resting the sifter on the board and using one hand, "clean" the flour by moving the sifter back and forth.

The globules of dough will remain in the sifter screen and will not filter through. Discard them because, being already coated with flour, they will not integrate into the wet dough and will cause lumps that make holes when the dough is stretched.

● Start kneading the dough, using the palm of the hand and folding the dough over with the other hand, absorbing the leftover flour from the board. Do not

Eggs are our most misunderstood food

As a young child one of my fondest memories was spending time with my grandparents. Three out of four grandparents were excellent cooks.

My grandfather Smith didn't cook but truly enjoyed eating. When we lived in Buffalo I would often spend weekends at the Smith house. Later, after moving to Northville, school and summer vacations were the times spent with them.

The days were leisurely, reading, napping, eating. Three squares a day and then some. Breakfast was always the same. Two soft-boiled eggs, toast with butter, grapefruit, juice and cereal.

This meal had been ritual for 75 years. My grandfather's mother cooked the same breakfast when he was a youngster. The only thing that ever changed was hot versus cold cereal and the variety of toast and jams. Lunch was often a fried egg sandwich or two.

My grandfather was extremely weight conscious. Never, never did he go over the recommended weight charts. As a colonel in the army for three wars he was versed in restraint and self-control.

He died in 1977 at the age of 92 after a short illness. I remember everyone marveling at how he ate two eggs or more a day, butter, milk, cream and ice cream and that he lived to be healthy and old. Today, all we hear is to avoid eggs because of the negative effects they wrought. Could it be, maybe, that it isn't the eggs but all the other garbage we load into our systems?

Let's consider nutrient density. Nutrient density is a way of evaluating the nutritional quality of a food by comparing the amounts of nutrients it contains against the number of calories it provides.

For example, a glass of milk contains 160 calories plus significant amounts of protein, calcium, riboflavin and other nutrients. By comparison, an alcoholic drink, containing the same amount of calories is virtually devoid of any essential nutrients.

Thus, the milk is "nutrient-dense" while the alcohol is not. We each have a "calorie-budget" for each day. The food choices we make as we "spend" this budget must supply nutrients as well as fuel. The trick is to choose foods low in calories but high in nutrients before using up your allotment of calories.

This situation presents a "Catch-22" dilemma for modern people: eat more food and you risk obesity, eat less and you risk nutritional deficits! Thus the foods eaten must be more nutrient dense.

Enter the egg.

The egg is one of nature's better nutritional efforts, designed as a total life support system for the developing chick. One serving of two large eggs provides 160 calories and 9 percent of the daily requirement for protein, vitamin A, riboflavin, iron, vitamin D and phosphorus needed by the average woman. It provides this using less than 10 percent of the daily caloric requirement. Thus, eggs are a nutrient-dense food, a good nutritional bargain.

Eggs are unique in that they contain a balanced distribution of nearly every nutrient known to be essential to humans. Eggs contain all recommended dietary allowances ("RDA") except vitamin C and niacin. As a source of high quality protein eggs cannot be beat. There are eight essential amino acids — or "building blocks" of protein that cannot be manufactured by the body.

Foods that contain all eight are called complete proteins. Eggs, like other animal products, fall into this category. The pattern of essential amino acids in the egg is so ideal that it has been used for years as the standard against which other protein foods are judged.

An egg contains all of its fat (6 grams) and cholesterol (265 milligrams) in the yolk. This is where most other nutrients are found also.

Remove the yolk and you seriously alter the protein and nutrient content the egg has to offer.

There are three different types of fat in the yolk: polyunsaturated (1 g.), monounsaturated (3 g.), and saturated (2 g.). Because high blood cholesterol has been identified as a risk factor for heart disease, dietary fats and dietary cholesterol have been under intensive study to find out whether and how they influence blood cholesterol. It has been learned that saturated fats can raise blood cholesterol in some people, while dietary cholesterol does not seem to have a consistent effect on blood cholesterol.

On the other hand, there is evidence that polyunsaturated fats and perhaps monounsaturated fats may lower blood cholesterol. Research is inconclusive on the effect of cholesterol present in eggs in relation to blood cholesterol. Some people show higher blood cholesterol with a high egg diet while others show no effect and in some cases lowered blood cholesterol.

Finally, eggs are a bargain when it comes to the food budget. By government regulation, one dozen large eggs must weigh 1 1/4 pounds. Therefore it is easy to figure the cost per pound. Even at the high price of $1.20 per dozen eggs cost a mere $.90 a pound.

Next in line for protein economy is beef liver followed by peanut butter. Thus the egg is one of the least expensive of the high-quality animal proteins.

It would be difficult to design a food that compares as favorably, both in nutrients per calorie and nutrients per unit cost.

ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES

These can be your salad days

With health a major concern for so many these days, salads have become an everyday item in most people's diets. Rich in vitamins, minerals and fiber, salads are a low-fat, low-calorie health bonanza (unless, of course, they're drowned in high-fat, high-calorie dressings).

If you're not careful, though, you can get in a rut, serving the same salad day after day. After a while, even diehard salad lovers can become bored. Fortunately, with some imagination and a little experimentation, the daily salad (or two) can become a treat to look forward to.

The first thing to consider is your choice of greens — there should be more to salad than iceberg lettuce. Some other good choices: red or green leaf lettuce, spinach leaves, romaine or Boston bibb lettuce.

You also can bring a tired salad back to life with the addition of new and different ingredients. Along with the usual salad vegetables like carrots, tomatoes, cucumber and celery, try tossing in a few of these extras:

Sliced pickled beets
Slices of apple
Sliced olives (green or ripe)
Grated mozzarella
Sliced fresh zucchini
A handful of raisins
Cubes of cheddar or Swiss cheese
Alfalfa sprouts
Frozen peas, thawed and drained
Nuts (pine nuts, walnuts, pecans, toasted almonds)
Crumbled bacon
Slices of pickled hot peppers
Crumbled blue cheese
Sliced fresh zucchini
Sunflower seeds

By varying just a few ingredients, you can have a completely different salad. If you take salad greens and add crumbled feta cheese, sliced beets, red onion, pickled hot peppers, Greek olives and a Greek oil and vinegar dressing, you have a Greek salad. Take away the feta cheese and beets and add grated mozzarella, sliced pepperoni and croutons with Italian dressing, and you have an Italian antipasto salad.

Fruit salads can be substituted for the usual vegetable salad. One great, simple salad is sectioned oranges and grapefruit with their juice, with maraschino cherries and sliced banana added just before serving. There's also the classic Waldorf salad — apples, celery and walnuts in a whipped cream/mayonnaise dressing — which can be varied by adding ingredients such as green or red seedless grapes, raisins, or even cubed chicken for a heartier, main dish salad.

One of the best things you can do for any salad, though, is to make your own dressing. A lot of bottled dressings taste good, but if you look at what's in them, you will find a long list of hard-to-pronounce ingredients.

Calories and fat also can be a problem with bottled dressings. Although there are a wide variety of low-calorie and low-fat dressings you can buy, some don't taste very good, and most contain the same types of ingredients as the regular dressings.

Homemade salad dressings are very easy to make, using ingredients you already have on hand. Fresh, homemade dressings don't require preservatives. You can control what goes into them and adapt recipes to fit your needs (eliminate or reduce salt or MSG, adjust spice and herb levels, use reduced-calorie or cholesterol-free mayonnaise and use the salad oil of your choice).

You can make just the amount you want so the dressing will stay fresh. If you don't use a lot of salad dressing, you can cut the recipe to make a smaller quantity. Best of all, of course, is the taste. Bottled dressings, however good, just can't compare with the fresh taste of a homemade dressing.

Variety is, we're told, the spice of life. Variety in the salads and salad dressings you serve will indeed spice up your life and keep you eating healthy instead of reverting back to the bad habits of yesterday.

We will give you a few recipes to get you started. Then you can let your imagination take over to create your own personal favorites.

MIXED GREENS SALAD WITH RASPBERRY VINAIGRETTE

For this salad, use softer greens like red or green leaf lettuce or romaine.

Mixed greens
Pine nuts
Crumbled Blue Cheese
Thinly sliced red onion

On individual serving plates, arrange greens, nuts, blue cheese and onion. Drizzle with raspberry vinaigrette.

Raspberry Vinaigrette

1 cup fresh or frozen raspberries, thawed (blueberries can be substituted)
1/2 cup white wine vinegar
4 teaspoons sugar
1/2 salad oil

In blender combine raspberries, vinegar and sugar; puree until smooth. Put through fine sieve to remove seeds. Pour into small jar; add oil and shake well.

SPINACH SALAD WITH HOT SOY DRESSING

An oriental-type salad.

1/2 package fresh spinach, washed, well drained and torn into bite-sized pieces
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, washed, dried and sliced
Thinly sliced red onion
Toasted sesame seeds, optional

Arrange spinach in a large bowl; sprinkle with mushrooms and onion. Just before serving, pour on hot dressing and toss to combine and slightly wilt spinach.

Hot Soy Dressing
1/2 cup reduced sodium soy sauce
2 tablespoons white vinegar
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons sugar

Heat in saucepan or microwave; stir until sugar dissolves.

MANDARIN SALAD

This is a nice change-of-pace salad that combines greens and fruit.

1 bunch romaine lettuce
2 green onions, sliced
1 can mandarin oranges, drained
1/2 cup sliced almonds, toasted

Arrange romaine in a large bowl or on individual salad plates. Sprinkle with onions, and mandarin oranges. Pour on as much of the sweet and sour dressing as you like; garnish with toasted almonds.

Sweet and Sour Dressing

1/2 cup oil
3 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar

COLESLAW

WITH CREAMY DRESSING
Everybody needs a good coleslaw recipe. This one goes great with pork chops or barbecued chicken.

Add to shredded red or green cabbage (or better yet, a combination of both) any of the following ingredients, in whatever quantity suits your taste: chopped green pepper, chopped or grated carrot, chopped or grated apple, chopped onion, chopped radish. Combine with enough Creamy Dressing to moisten. Cover and chill at least 1 hour before serving. This salad will keep 4 or 5 days.

Creamy Dressing

1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons vinegar

BEET, CUCUMBER AND ORANGE SALAD

This is an unusual salad for true beet lovers.

2-3 medium beets, cooked and sliced (or better yet, canned)
1/2 medium cucumber, peeled and sliced
2 oranges, sectioned
1 tablespoon minced fresh dill or 1 teaspoon dried dill
1 tablespoon minced fresh chives

Combine in medium bowl. Stir in dressing and chill. Serve on a bed of greens. Keep several days.

Dressing

Juice of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 tablespoon honey
1/2 teaspoon horseradish
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine in small bowl.

Mackinac meal features pasta salad

This recipe is a variation of a meal served last summer at the Mission Pointe Resort Grill on Mackinac Island. Quick and easy to make, it tastes best when the pasta salad is made in advance, as the flavors of the vegetables and dressing have more time to absorb into the pasta. This recipe serves 4.

SPRING CHICKEN PASTA SALAD

4 deboned chicken breasts
12 ounces of your favorite shape of pasta
1 bottle light Italian salad dressing, 16-ounce size
3-4 carrots, diced
1 green pepper, diced
2 cups fresh or defrosted frozen peas
1 cup fresh or defrosted broccoli flowerettes Anything else you would like to add, such as chick peas, black olives, cherry tomatoes or cheese chunks

1/2 cup olive oil
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon tarragon

Combine the olive oil, lemon juice and tarragon. Brush the mixture onto the chicken breasts. Grill or broil the chicken breasts, basting with the mixture.

Combine the cooked pasta with the vegetables and any other ingredients you would like to add. Pour 1 cup of the salad dressing over the salad and add more as needed for the size of the salad. Refrigerate and allow enough time for the flavors to mix. Serve the cold pasta salad with the hot chicken breasts. Season to taste and garnish with Parmesan or Romano cheese.

GARLIC TOAST

Melt a half stick of butter or margarine in a small pan over a low flame. Watch the butter carefully so that it doesn't turn brown. Mince or use a garlic press to mash 3-4 fresh cloves of garlic. Stir them into the butter or margarine and heat on low for a minute or two, again watching carefully so that the butter doesn't brown.

Slice a loaf of French or Italian bread. Brush the butter mixture onto the slices of bread and place them on a cookie sheet. Sprinkle with a little Parmesan cheese. Place in the broiler until the cheese bubbles and the bread is lightly browned.

ORANGE WEDGES

Dessert doesn't get any easier than this. Simply cut up some oranges into wedges and place them in a pretty bowl. What a colorful and refreshing end to a tasty meal.

Loni Anderson sizzles in fact-based 'White Hot'

Film probes cover-up of starlet's death

Amy Schmidt

"She was a real party girl, I think probably because alcohol is a downer, and she was flying around so high on diet pills," tells Loni Anderson of the woman she is to portray Sunday, May 5, on NBC. "I wear so many gowns in this movie because all she did was go from one party to another, and one man to another—and several at the same time!"

No, Anderson isn't talking about Marilyn Monroe, Janis Joplin or Vivien Leigh. She's talking about the subject of her title role in "White Hot: The Mysterious Death of Thelma Todd." "Thelma who?" you might ask.

Bold, blond and beautiful, Thelma Todd was fast becoming Hollywood's queen of comedy in the early 1930s. Genuinely funny and talented, she starred opposite the Marx Brothers in "Monkey Business" and "Horse Feathers," as well as in her own comedy shorts. But the actress led a dangerously wild life, flirting with alcohol, drugs and mobsters, such as Lucky Luciano. On a chilly night in December 1935, her battered body was discovered slumped behind the wheel of her Lincoln Phaeton convertible in a garage above the restaurant that bore her name, Thelma Todd's Sidewalk Cafe. In spite of the bruises on her face and body, authorities immediately declared her death a suicide, and the case was closed—or so they thought.

For the last 14 years, author Andy Edmond has researched Todd's tragic demise. Sunday's film conclusion leans toward Edmond's conclusion—and the gossip of the day regarding one of Hollywood's greatest unsolved mysteries.

But Loni Anderson isn't giving the ending away. The former "WKRP" bombshell is so enamored of the project she's milking it for all it's worth. "This movie has been kind of a wonderful monster," she says, describing the "fabulous" gowns she wore on the set and the film sites such as Thelma Todd's Sidewalk Cafe on Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu and the famous Coconut Grove, restored to its 1930's look.

"I must say that I had to work out and work out trying not to get an ounce of fat on my body, because these gowns are very unforgiving," confesses Anderson, explaining that all of the dresses she wore were originals that had been remade to fit her. "I ate dry lettuce leaves the whole time I made the movie!" she laughs.

Even more enthralled is Anderson by Todd, herself. "She was so lovely and so funny, and playing someone with that sense of humor couldn't be more exciting. Everyone I talked to said, 'Oh she was so much fun. We just loved her.' But I think her dealings with men were her downfall."

Anderson's own life couldn't be less like her character's though. "I'm so very content," she says warmly, if not downright giddily, of her relationship with husband Burt Reynolds. "I'm married to my best friend." And of the couple's 2-year-old son, she adds affectionately, "he's quite a little hell-raiser—all boy—just like his daddy."

Emmy nominee Loni Anderson portrays a Hollywood starlet whose life on the wild side ended suddenly in 1935. The docudrama, titled "White Hot: The Mysterious Death of Thelma Todd," is said to expose the cover-up that shrouded the talented comedian's death for over 50 years.

SOAP TALK

Fans try to recall Mary Stuart's soap

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: My friend and I have tried and tried to think of the name of the soap which starred Mary Stuart for so many years. My friend thinks it might be Secret Storm, but that doesn't sound right to me. Will you help us? — M.C., Mankato, Minn.

Dear Reader: The soap you are trying to think of is Search for Tomorrow. Mary Stuart, who had been a Hollywood starlet during her teen years, was cast as the featured character, Joanne Gardner Barron, in 1951. She continued on the show until its demise.

Dear Candace: I was so disappointed that General Hospital killed Dawn Winthrop off the show. It seemed with all of the affairs, lying and cheating, she was the only bright spot in the show. She was the only one doing good instead of evil. Now that she and Mark St. James (Edge) have left the show, what are they doing with their lives? —S.W., Carlsbad, N.M.

Dear Reader: Jennifer Guthrie (Dawn) and St. James are actively pursuing their acting careers on the West Coast. It is a shame GH finally found a decent actress to portray the Winthrop character, only to have Gloria Monty toss her out.

-STAR NOTES-Is this really
the end of J.R.?

By Kate Ironside

One of the greatest publicity coups in the history of network TV was Dallas' "Who Shot J.R.?" saga. The conclusion to the cliff-hanger on the 1981 season premiere was watched by an astonishing 42 million households across the country. Little did we know J.R. wasn't going to die, but that he would recover to hang around another 10 years.

Larry Hagman was, of course, the man behind the evil Southern villain. A native Texan and the son of actress Mary Martin, Hagman began his career at Dallas' Theatre-in-the-Round. Later he moved to New York and then to England, where he was cast in his mother's big stage hit South Pacific. Eventually he moved back to New York for a series of Broadway and off-Broadway plays and his first television appearance on the daytime soap The Edge of Night.

In 1965, Hagman was launched to stardom as an amiable astronaut in the comedy series I Dream of Jeannie. His subsequent TV series following Jeannie's five-year run include The Good Life, Here We Go Again and Dallas.

With the demise of the 13-season series, Hagman said he can't imagine doing another series, but he has at least three roles waiting: a film biography of the late Texas billionaire H.L. Hunt; a good guy in the European-made film Vendetta, Inc., and a Love Letters co-starring role with Linda Gray.

Anthony Denison (Crime Story) and Sela Ward (Hello Again) co-star in Child of Darkness, Child of Light, airing on the USA Network Wednesday. A Vatican priest is assigned the chilling task of investigating the virgin pregnancies of two women.

I Love You to Death is based on a true story about a woman who hired thugs to kill her womanizing pizza-shop-owner husband. Kevin Kline plays the Cassanova in jeopardy of losing more than his sex life; Tracey Ullman is his jealous wife; William Hurt, River Phoenix and Keanu Reeves depict the hooligans hired to do the dirty deed.
