The sale features both hardback and paperback books, including many children's books, cookbooks, and books on decorating, sewing, crafts, technology, politics, science, religion, art, psychology, philosophy, and fiction. Some of the sale books are classified as "antiques" or out-of-print. People may find that special holiday gift among the volumes for sale.

PARADE PARTICIPANTS: The Northville Community Chamber of Commerce is seeking participants for the annual Santa Parade scheduled for Nov. 24.

This year the parade will take on a Victorian theme, with Santa arriving in a horse and carriage. Groups, businesses or individuals are encouraged to participate in any way in keeping with the theme — no motorized vehicles allowed. Costumes, walkers, horseback riders are all possibilities; the chamber welcomes other, creative ideas.

Anyone interested is asked to call the chamber office as soon as possible at 349-7640.

Kleckner leaving Schoolcraft

By SUZANNE HOLLYER
Staff Writer

Both Northville and Schoolcraft College have changed since 1964. Just ask Luther Kleckner. Kleckner will soon retire from Schoolcraft and leave his hometown of 27 years.

When he began working at Schoolcraft, the school was so small he knew everyone from maintenance workers to administrators.

"Now if I go to a barbecue, I don't know more people than I know," he said.

Northville also has changed, Kleckner said. He knows fewer and fewer of the local residents.

"Northville is not the same small town it was, and for my wife and I, it's not the comfortable, small town it was," he said.

So, this year will be a year of changes for Kleckner.

He retires from Schoolcraft this winter, and he plans to move soon after, he said.

He thinks Ann Arbor or some other college town would be a nice place to call home.

The political science professor was in the first group of professors hired when the Schoolcraft opened in 1964.

The turbulence found on college campuses in the 1960s spilled over somewhat onto the Schoolcraft campus. An occasional teach-in was held.

"We had some controversy, but as far as the student body, it wasn't an active, protesting group," Kleckner said.

Community college students are different from university students, Kleckner said. They are not an organized group because they don't all live in the same area.

Like the atmosphere in Northville and on the Schoolcraft campus, community college students have changed since the 1960s, Kleckner said. Teachers cannot make the demands on students they once made.

"Today you get a group of people in a class, and it takes some convincing. Today you can't make demands," he said.

Kleckner plans to spend his retirement years pursuing his hobby of working with wood to build furniture and toys. He has three grown children and four grandchildren to visit, and he likes to read.

"I don't think I'll be bored," he said. The Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees recognized Kleckner at a Sept. 25 meeting. The board passed a resolution of congratulations on Kleckner's retirement.

RECORD OPINION

Our Opinion

Wortman has proven abilities as consultant

The Northville City Council may decide at its meeting tonight which of four finalist firms will act as the city's planning consultant for the foreseeable future.

The WBDC Group; McKenna Associates; Carlisle Associates; and Ayres, Lewis, Norris, and May pleaded their cases before the council in hourlong interviews last Monday and Tuesday. Consulting duties in the city are up for grabs because of a job switch earlier this year by Don Wortman, who had been serving as the city's primary planning consultant for a few years as an employee of ALNM. When he left that company for a post with Carlisle Associates, that presented the city with the question of whether it should continue its contract with ALNM, move to Carlisle with Wortman, or go elsewhere.

During the interviews, all four firms mounted reasonable arguments for the city to hire them. In fact, the overall impression was that any of the four would do a better-than-adequate job meeting the city's planning-consulting needs.

WBDC offers the advantage of serving as planning consultants to Northville Township; that presents the attractive notion of closer cooperation between the two local governments. McKenna Associates is known to the city; it came in second when the council first hired Ayres, Lewis, and it's headquartered close by. ALNM is, of course, the current contractor. And Carlisle can boast that the city's primary consultant, Wortman, would be a major player in the firm; it also points to a specialization in just this type of work. All four therefore have a particular advantage, and all four boast good reputations.

If the companies are roughly equal — and they are — then the individual consultants themselves loom as the important question. And while any of the people proposed by the four firms would probably prove capable, there's no reason to leave — and good reason to stay with — Don Wortman.

First and most obvious is his familiarity with the community, with the planning commission, and with the city's ordinances and organization. Wortman knows Northville relatively well; he developed (with the planning commission) the community survey of a couple of years ago, and the commission relied on him a great deal in writing and revising the recently adopted master plan. He has been instrumental in working through various site plans and ordinance revisions in his time here.

This experience does not come easy. It takes time for a planner to get up to speed in a new municipality, and Wortman is there. Hiring any new planner, no matter how competent, will require a breaking-in period. For a time, the city would be playing catch-up. There's simply no reason to do that.

ALNM argues that Wortman is just one member of a team which has been serving Northville. Well, maybe. But he's certainly the leader of the team and the one who has guided the work. He's also the one who has sat through all the meetings. Occasionally the firm's Glenn Bowles has filled in, but he wouldn't be the primary contact if the city was to continue with Ayres, Lewis.

When Wortman announced his move to Carlisle Associates earlier this year, the planning commission itself asked the city council that he be maintained as planning consultant. The commission deserves its wishes, assuming Wortman does a capable job.

And that's beyond question. Wortman has demonstrated abilities to handle all the various planning concerns the city has faced during his tenure. The planning commission is comfortable with him. It's a good relationship which deserves to be maintained.

Thank heaven for neighbor Al

Thank heaven for Al. Al Stephens, that is. You're probably thinking that Al is a guy. She's not. Al is one of my neighbors out on Westview Drive just off Eight Mile. Ed and Al Stephens.

I'm not sure what her first name really is. It might be Alice or Allison or Alma, but it really doesn't make any difference because everybody just calls her "Al."

At any rate, I could have given my neighbor a great big kiss last week. What happened is that I had just walked into my community education exercise class at Novi High School.

"I thought you weren't coming tonight," said Al, who's also in the class. "I thought you had to go out and hear your wife make a speech at Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital."

I told Al that it was my plan to do both. Exercise, zoom home, shower, then zoom out to the hospital just in time to hear my wife deliver her little speech to a packed audience of spellbound concerned citizens.

Al understood. But everybody else in the class just sort of sat around scratching their heads. Finally, Georgeann asked the question a couple of them were wondering.

"How did you know that, Al?"
"It was in his column," Al said.
"What column?" asked Georgeann.
"Aaaargghhh," I said.
"It's in The Northville Record every week," said Al. "Don't you get The Northville Record?"
"Sure I get it, but I don't remember seeing his column."
"It's in every week, Georgeann," I said, a little disturbed.
"How come you don't read my column?"

Jeanne, the teacher, could see I was getting upset and tried to settle me down.

"His column's in The Record," she told Georgeann. "I used to read it all the time."

"Waddaya mean you 'used to' read it?" I asked Jeanne, who suddenly realized that what she said had not come out the way she wanted it to.

"Well, if you want to know the truth, it used to be a lot funnier when you were younger. Besides, you haven't written anything about me or this class in a long time. How come you don't write about my class anymore?"

"Well, maybe it's because you never say anything funny," Jeanne, I replied. "Did you ever think about that? When was the last time you said anything funny? Huh? C'mon, phrase your answer in the form of a question. When was the last time you said something funny? Can't remember, can you?"

"Well, did you ever stop to consider that you never say anything funny? That just about everything funny that happens in this class comes from me or Richard? Richard's funny, I'm funny. But you're not funny. All you ever want to talk about is your stupid old marathons."

I was getting warmed up, so I just let the words continue to roll.

"Anybody can run a marathon. Richard and I could run a stupid old marathon if we wanted. But we don't want to. We'd rather be funny. We'd rather say funny things. All you ever say is dumb things. Like, 'Do your sit-ups, Jerome.' Like, 'You're falling behind, Jerome.' Like, 'Get off the floor, Jerome.'"

"And I'll tell you and Georgeann something else," I shouted, getting madder by the minute. "You'd better start reading my column every day from now on 'cause I'm gonna get ya. And I'm gonna get you good."

Gez, I love the power of the press.

Michigan Bell wants ever more Money, money, money. Michigan Bell, which used to be the telephone company, has money coming in from every direction these days. And it wants even more.

The state's population has been stagnant for a decade, but Bell hasn't heard the bad news. In four years, its number of customer lines has increased 2, 2.5, 2.6 and 2.2 percent. Has anyone else's customer base grown 9.7 percent in land's state-owned telecommunications company. Money, money, money from the far corners of the globe.

It's all in the Bell's IRS report, a difficult document to obtain if you look in the Ameritech directory.

With so much money coming in and so many workers going out during such bad times, you'd think Bell would be low in fear of a backlash.

Bell is more aggressive than ever, launching a vehement attack on the state's "nearly 80 years old" telecommunications law. Bell wants to invade even more industries — cable TV, fiber optics, two-way video, services for the hearing impaired, and so on.

Like the beat-beat-beat of a tom-tom, Bell's fleet of lobbyists chants "competition, competition, competition."

Why? Don't we have several giant cable TV companies? Don't we have plenty of competition in all the fields?

The real danger is that Bell, as a near monopoly, might misuse its current protected position. It could use phone workers to install other telecommunications equipment, then hide the latter costs in the telephone end of the business, undercutting the competition.

The bill's sponsor, state Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, assures us the bill would "strictly prohibit cross-subsidization."

And who's going to regulate Bell to make sure it doesn't cook its books to compete unfairly against the little guys? Michigan has record welfare and education spending, but is constricting its regulatory budget.

We shouldn't trust Bell. And we can't trust the state to regulate Bell's cost accountants.

Money, money, money — and more of it for Bell.

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional news.

Trustee questions business

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

When it comes to family fun, Players Choice doesn't bring out the laughs and jolly times in at least one township board member.

In fact, Players Choice, a video arcade and sometimes pizza joint nestled in the Highland Lakes Shopping Center, attracts a highly questionable crowd, said township Trustee Thomas Handyside.

"I had the opportunity (recently) to go into Players Choice," Handyside said at the board's Oct. 12 meeting. "I was really appalled at that place."

"That place is questionable," he said. "We've got kids, people, hanging around Players Choice that I would question their integrity."

Players Choice co-owner Rose Haddad on Friday disputed Handyside's claims.

"We have the best people here," she said. "If patrons smoke and drink, we kick them out."

Players Choice caters to young and old alike, said Haddad, who called her clients "well-behaved."

"It's like a church; everybody says what a nice place it is for kids," she said.

Not everyone agrees. Township police are well in tune with complaints about Players Choice. Police regularly cruise the mall area, breaking up gatherings of youths and responding to occasional reports of vandalism and other usually petty criminal acts.

But police Lt. Gary Batzloff said Handyside is not a major cause of concern in Northville Township. He said the department has responded to 25 complaints at the 43003 Seven Mile Road site in 1991, nine of which were requests for assistance from people locked out of their vehicles.

A smattering of criminal activity — including a larceny complaint, two assault and battery reports, a malicious destruction of property report, three disorderly person investigations, and four loitering complaints — warrants a close look, but Batzloff said red flags unfurling before police.

"Eleven reports in 10 months of possible criminal activity; well, I'd have a hard time saying that's a problem," Batzloff said. "But I'm not recommending (to parents) that it's a good place to send their kids."

Police regularly inspect the business to check serial numbers on machines and video games, Batzloff said. And officers cruise the area to disband loitering groups of youths, he said.

"We patrol as often as possible to deter any criminal problems," Batzloff said.

Handyside wondered aloud if the township should call the county health department about the fare served at Players Choice.

The business' menu usually includes pizza and sandwiches, but Haddad said a kitchen remodeling program temporarily has taken the food off the table.

But Haddad says her customers hope remodeling chores are completed soon.

"We have the best pizza in town," she said. "People are crying for our pizza. We get 10 calls asking for our pizza every day."

Haddad, whose relatives also operate similar establishments in Lansing and Mt. Pleasant, said she did not know if the county health department had ordered kitchen remodeling in Players Choice. But she reiterated her stance that the business was a plus to the Northville community.

"Everything is fine; everything is good," she said.

Wayne County Department of Health officials did not return a reporter's request for information on Players Choice by deadline Friday.

High school singer among 45 selected for Blue Lake

Angie Putman always hoped her singing ability would take her somewhere, but she never expected it to take her all the way to western Europe.

Putman, a 16-year-old Northville High School student, was among 130 singers who auditioned for the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp International Choir while at music camp this summer. She became one of 45 singers chosen for the choir.

She will join the other singers on a tour of Western Europe beginning next June. Until then, the group will prepare by practicing one weekend a month. They will also have an intensive practice in early June.

Putman, who works part-time at Parmenter's Northville Cider Mill and at the T.J. Maxx Store in Novi, needs help in funding the $2,400 trip. She is asking local businesses and community groups to sponsor her expenses.

Putman is in the school drama club, she is involved in school plays and musicals and in competitive choir groups. She is considering a career in music or music education and lists Central Michigan and Michigan State universities as possible college choices.

Anyone interested in sponsoring Putman on her trip may call her at 348-5328.

Township detectives seek quarters in trailer

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

Northville Township, trailer park in Mecca?

"Things haven't reached that point, but the township board has okayed a plan to site a construction-type trailer at township hall."

"A 10' by 50' office trailer is scheduled to be placed at township hall by the first of the year. The space will house the township police department's two-person detective bureau."

meant's two-person detective bureau.

The trailer is to be located on the south side of township hall in a less-than-conspicuous area, according to township board direction.

Police Chief Chip Snider asked the board to approve the trailer as a replacement for costly office space currently leased by the township.

The township has rented office space on Six Mile Road just down the hill from township hall since early 1990. The office houses police Capt.

Philip Presnell and Det. Michael Wildt, and serves as the department's investigations bureau.

Office rent is $2,094 monthly. With utilities and other incidentals added, the township paid $26,412 yearly.

The trailer will cost the township $150 in set-up fees and the township a month rent. Snider said the total cost for the temporary structure would total $1,200 for six months. The change is simply due to financial considerations, Snider said.

cial considerations, Snider said.

"Economically, I can't do anything better than this," he said. "Aesthetically, it's probably not what (the township) had in mind, but it's the (best they) can do."

Snider said the use of trailers to house staffers is "not a new idea" and said governments in Novi, Canton, and Dearborn Heights have used trailers.

"Financially, it makes a lot of sense," Trustee Richard Allen said.

Flint native find success in Napa Valley

Charles Shaw was born in Flint, graduated from Davison High School in 1961, graduated from West Point in 1965, and in 1978 founded Charles F. Shaw Winery and Winery in California's Napa Valley.

Shaw's interest in wine began during a two-year stint in France, where he worked as an investment banker. While in France, with his wife Lucy, Shaw had the opportunity to visit the French wine regions and was enchanted by the wines of Burgundy, especially Beaujolais.

In Napa Valley, Shaw specializes in making wines styled after the French Beaujolais he came to love. Since the origins of the California grape varieties, Napa Gamay and Gamay Beaujolais, are in doubt, Shaw devised an elegantly simple solution to his problem of using the genuine varietal. In 1981, he succeeded in procuring vine cuttings from Beaujolais and thus imported to California the first vines that are unquestionably the true grape of Beaujolais, namely gamay noir a jus blanc.

Shaw's winemaking technique duplicates the methode beaujolaise to achieve the characteristic fresh-fruit quality of true Beaujolais wine. In this method, also called carbonic maceration, whole grape bunches are put into a deep, stainless steel fermentation tank and blanketed with carbon dioxide gas. The same gas produced during fermentation.

Crushed by the weight above, 20 percent of the grapes at the bottom of the tank release their juice, which begins to ferment. The remaining 80 percent of the grapes begin carbonic maceration, or fermentation within the whole, uncrushed berries.

The carbonic maceration technique preserves the full, fresh, fruitiness; spicy, peppery nuances; ripe berry aroma, and bright garnet color of the wine. Brief aging in large oak tanks imparts the structure and backbone necessary for increased longevity. "Don't believe the myths that nouveau wines won't age for more than six months," Shaw says. You can test this by trying the 1990 Harvest Wine Gamay Beaujolais Nouveau.

In France, the wine-growing region known as Beaujolais is at the southern end of Burgundy. Several styles of Beaujolais include: light and fruity nouveau, released the week before Thanksgiving, always the first wine of the harvest; Beaujolais Villages, released about one year later, richer with greater depth; Cru Beaujolais, the most serious and ageable wine of Beaujolais, with one of 10 village names on the label. The 10 "cru" villages are Fleurie, Regnie, St. Amour, Chiroubles, Morgon, Moulin-A-Vent, Brouilly, Cote de Brouilly, Julienas and Chenas.

Charles F. Shaw Winery offers three levels of California Beaujolais — a nouveau-style released in mid-October, a Villages-style regular bottling and a super-premium estate bottling in the style of a Fleurie.

Not to be known as "Johnny One Note," Shaw also produces estate-bottled Napa Valley sauvignon blanc and chardonnay. The 1988 Sauvignon Blanc ($11) is a delicately soft sipper that highlights citrus, melon and a touch of hay. The 1988 Chardonnay ($12) is a tasty, well-priced wine that exhibits fresh fruit with a balanced touch of oak.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

1990 Charles Shaw Harvest Wine Gamay Beaujolais Nouveau ($6) boasts beautiful fresh raspberry aromas with exuberant flavors of raspberries and cherries. This is the most French-like nouveau from California.

1988 Charles Shaw Gamay Beaujolais, Napa Valley ($8.50) shows characteristics of raspberries, cherries and strawberries with the depth of a Beaujolais Villages. While most red wines are served at cellar temperature (65 degrees F), we recommend serving these wines slightly chilled.

Game birds offer wide variety

Ready, Aim. Clean out your freezer! It's time to make room for the special delicacy of the season — wild game. Whether you're a hunter or not, you can still enjoy the flavor of a well-cooked pheasant, the buttery taste of quail or even plain holiday goose.

As well as having a special flavor, wild game birds are healthier than farm-raised birds. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that wild duck has only five grams of fat per serving, compared with 25 grams for domestic duck. Pheasant and quail are similar in fat content to chicken.

The lower fat content also means that you should cook wild game birds either in a liquid or fat covering, such as bacon, or use a cooking bag to keep the meat moist.

Robert Baure, manager of propagation at the Illinois Department of Conservation, reminds hunters that, for safety's sake, the birds should be field-dressed right away, cutting open the stomach cavity to remove the entrails.

"Most hunters stuff the body cavity with dry grass to cool the body temperature," Bauer said. Grass can also be used to clean out the bird.

"If a bird does not act normal and has a lackluster appearance, I would not take it home to eat. That bird is probably diseased or injured," Bauer said. "Look for a bird that flushes well, and has bright eyes and a good appearance."

Baure estimated that 75 percent of all the game birds harvested each year are young. The age of a wild bird is important: A younger bird will be tender enough to broil or saute, while an older bird will need to be stewed.

A good way to estimate the age of a bird is to grab the rear tip of the breastbone (not the backbone). If it is flexible, the bird is young. If it is brittle, plan to stew the bird. On pheasant and quail, you can also tell the age of the bird by the length of its spurs.

Buck and Mike started hunting with their fathers and grandfathers when they were kids, and have continued to include hunting as a family event. "We take our dads and enjoy ourselves."

Mike said the flavor of wild game birds is so special he tries not to add much seasoning. "I like the basic salt and pepper, maybe some paprika or garlic powder. Game birds just don't need much seasoning. I wouldn't want to cover up the flavor of the bird."

Diners should watch out for lead shot left in the birds. "My kids think it is a big thing to get shot," Mike said, "so when we sit down to eat the kids just start looking for it."

What's the difference between farm-raised and wild? "It's hard to describe, but there is a definite difference," said Mike. "For example, the meat is very rich and lean. Unlike farm-raised birds, the meat on wild duck or goose is all dark meat. That makes a big difference when you start cooking them. You have to keep in mind that they are pretty dry to start out with. You have to add moisture when you cook them, or they will be inedible."

Because it is illegal for restaurants in some states to buy wild game from hunters, restaurants often purchase both wild game imported from other countries such as Scotland and farm-raised game birds.

Pheasants from the wild have a flavor reminiscent of chicken, but with something more. If the birds are wild, you may marinate them in liquor overnight to eliminate the heavy gamey flavor.

A popular dish is pheasant served with a brandy-orange sauce and chestnut dressing. This sauce is a reduction of brandy, with a base of orange juice and pheasant stock (made from the bones/caracass). If necessary, the pheasant stock could be replaced with chicken stock. The sauce could also be used over other wild game birds.

Brandy-Orange Sauce

1 cup brandy
1 cup orange juice
1 cup stock
Salt, pepper, Worcestershire and Tabasco, to taste
1 tablespoon arrowroot or cornstarch
1/2 cup heavy cream or half-and-half
1/2 pound butter, room temperature, cut into tablespoon-size servings.
Yields 4 servings.

Reduce the brandy over heat down to a tablespoon or so. Add orange juice and stock and season with salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce and Tabasco. Stir in arrowroot or cornstarch to thicken.

Cream the sauce by stirring in the cream. Continue stirring until thickened. Once the sauce has returned to a low simmer, remove from heat. Add butter, one tablespoon at a time, and stir. Serve over pheasant.

The next glaze, like the brandy-orange sauce, uses a cordial for added flavor. You'll be surprised by the taste of Kahlua combined with the strong flavor of wild game birds.

Kahlua Glaze

1/3 cup apricot jam

Game birds offer many opportunities for a different type of entree.

1/3 cup Kahlua (or other coffee-flavored liquor)
Yields enough for two large geese or four smaller birds.
Strain jam through a sieve or smooth it in a food blender. Add Kahlua and mix well. Use it as your baste throughout. Make gravy as usual. Can be used for any game bird or turkey.

This is the type of dish that is easy to make, yet has an elegant touch. The sauce has a light, lemony flavor that works well with the heartier flavor of wild pheasant. One pheasant often retains a few small feathers. These should be removed by hand, and if the flesh has any visible hairs, carefully pass the bird over a low flame and brush the singed hairs away.

Pheasant in Onion Sauce

1 cleaned, ready-to-cook pheasant, about 2 1/2 pounds.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 sprigs fresh thyme or 1/4 teaspoon dry thyme
1 small bay leaf
1/4 cup dry white wine
3/4 cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice
Yields 1 to 2 servings
Preheat oven to 425 F. Sprinkle cavity of pheasant with salt and pepper. Rub pheasant with oil. Sprinkle outside with salt and pepper. Put thyme and bay leaf inside and truss bird well.

Place pheasant in a roasting pan and roast in oven for 15 minutes on each side. Turn breast side up, scatter onion around it, and cook for another 15 minutes.

Remove pheasant from pan and keep it warm. Deglaze roasting pan with wine and reduce over medium-high heat by half. Remove bay leaf and thyme from inside pheasant and add them to sauce while reducing.

Add cream to sauce and reduce over medium heat. Add lemon juice and reduce sauce to 3/4 cup. Strain. Adjust seasoning and pour over pheasant.

From Pierre Franey and Bryan Miller's "Cuisine Rapide" (Times Books).

If you do have an older goose, don't despair. Before the introduction of the turkey into Europe, goose was the bird always used for festive occasions. Add a little extra to your holiday celebrations with a centerpiece of cherries and goose. The alcohol in the brandy will cook out, leaving a marvelous mix of cherries and brandy flavor.

Branded Goose

1 large old goose, cut into pieces
2 tablespoons brandy
Flour
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons cooking oil
3 cups chicken bouillon (low salt is preferred)
2 tablespoons steak sauce
3 tablespoons dry sherry
1/8 teaspoon marjoram
Salt and pepper to taste
2 bay leaves
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 pound can sweet cherries (pitted)
Yields 6 to 8 servings
Marinate goose overnight in brandy to tenderize and eliminate gamey flavor.

Cut goose into pieces. Roll pieces of goose in flour and brown in butter and oil in a Dutch oven. Brown just a few pieces at a time. Add bouillon, steak sauce, sherry, marjoram, salt, pepper and bay leaves to pan. Heat.

Return goose to pan, cover and place in 325 F oven for 2 1/2 hours, or until tender. Remove goose piece from pan. Mix cornstarch with cherries and add to pan juices with brandy. Stir and heat over low flame until sauce is slightly thickened. Return meat and baste with sauce. Simmer for 15 minutes, basting several times.

Place goose on a heated platter and spoon a little sauce over each piece. Serve rest of sauce in a gravy boat to be ladled over hot goose.

Either cook the birds in liquid or cover them in sour cream, which gets crunchy. For this kind of meal, you want to roll up your sleeves, eat, and maybe watch a football game. It is perfect around 3 p.m. on a Sunday afternoon, after you get back from hunting.

Several factors become important when buying fish

Soon after writing my article last week I received a call from the Foley's salesman in Boston. I believe I mentioned that our fish is flown in fresh several times a week. At first this seemed extravagant to me. It is not reasonable to ship fish packed in ice. I questioned my judgment. Was it worth it? Would our guests be able to tell the difference?

There are several factors that are extremely important when purchasing fish. A basic rule of thumb is to buy from a reputable house. Foley's has been in business since 1906. Not a small accomplishment these days. Fish is, and has been, their only concern for the last 80 years.

The process starts with the buying of fish. Buyers are positioned at all the key New England ports so that the highest quality for the fairest prices can be obtained. All fish must pass the "eye, smell, and touch" tests.

They look for fish with a natural shine. Yellowing or browning is an indication of age. Many fishermen engage in the practice of soaking fish in a brine to mask off odors, add weight and induce a fake shine.

The saying "the nose knows" could not be more true than when procuring fish. Fresh fish does not smell. Any fish with uncharacteristic odors are rejected. Fishy, sour or ammonia odors are not natural.

The touch test indicates whether fish have been brine-soaked. Brined fish are tacky and sticky. Bringing hides imperfections.

After purchase, the fish is transported to the plant in refrigerated trucks, where it is iced in special 12-degree flaked ice. The plant itself is kept at 50 degrees year-round.

The importance of temperature cannot be overemphasized. Fish should be stored at a minimum of 32 degrees. One day of shelf life (and thus flavor) is lost with every two degrees above 32 in which you store fish during a 24-hour period. With the best fish there is about a five-day maximum.

The fish we receive is layered in metal, versus plastic, containers and packed in ice. Metal is a much better conductor of cold than is plastic, so the fish has a better chance from the start.

All fish is processed by hand. This ensures workmanship, since the employees share in the profits. There are no ragged edges or blood spots in the filets. Foley's employs a bacteriologist to monitor bacteria counts and to ensure the effectiveness of the bacteria retardation system.

Unlike the meat industry, which is regulated by the USDA, the fish industry is not government-supervised. As a result, handling practices, and consequently quality, vary tremendously among boat owners and fish processors who are free to set their own standards. This is scary. It also brings us back to the first rule: Buy from someone you trust.

Getting back to the phone call from the Foley's salesman, he was calling not for an order, but to say he would be in town the following week and would like to visit our restaurant. Mike Moloney stopped in twice. Was everything up to standards? Was I happy with the product? Could he help in any way? All the way from Boston to check on something that could have been handled over the phone. This is service. This is caring about your customers. We share a common philosophy.

To answer my own question . . . Yes, it is worth the extra effort and expense to buy from Boston. The quality difference is outstanding. Speaking as a cook, the fish is beautiful. It tastes like candy. Sweet and mild. Mike dined at Brady's Wednesday. Guess what he ate?

Dreyfuss plays one of history's imperfect heroes

Actor's fascination began in childhood

By Suzanne Gill

What's in a name can shape a lifetime's quest. Take, for example, actor-producer Richard Dreyfuss, who long believed himself related to French army captain Alfred Dreyfus, the central character in a 19th-century political scandal that shaped the Zionist movement and led to the separation of church and state in France.

Thanks to the Paul Muni film "The Life of Emile Zola," Dreyfuss (whose family name is Dreyfus) became fascinated with the Dreyfus Affair while still a child. Although he has since learned he has no blood ties to Alfred Dreyfus, the actor has clearly been drawn in spirit to pursue the questions of honor and justice the story raises.

Alfred Dreyfus' Jewish heritage and unbending personality made him a target for fellow officers conspiring to frame him in 1894 as a traitor to the government. Convicted and banished to Devil's Island, Dreyfus became a symbol in France of the movement against corruption in the military, the government and even the church.

In 1898, novelist and social philosopher Emile Zola ("Therese Raquin," "Nana") became obsessed with clearing Dreyfus' name and wrote a tract, "J'accuse," which stirred public sentiment. Meanwhile, Col. George Picquart, the newly appointed head of army counterintelligence, discovered Dreyfus had been framed for crimes committed by another officer. Despite his anti-Semitic sentiments, which were typical of the times, and a personal dislike of Dreyfus, Picquart chose to pursue the truth.

In his own film on the Dreyfus Affair, "Prisoner of Honor," debuting Saturday, Nov. 2, on HBO, actor Dreyfuss plays Picquart, an "imperfect hero," because Picquart stepped out "of narrow, blinkered provincialism, to something greater"—honor.

"What really does fascinate me...with his character...is that nothing is simple. We each have a tendency to compartmentalize everybody. These are the good guys, and those are bad guys. I find myself drawn, in the films that I develop and in the stories that I want to produce, to people who are a bit more complicated than that.

"It pleases me to irritate those people who say, 'How can you make an anti-Semite a hero?' I like to take that opportunity as much as I can."

Dreyfuss, a political activist and conscientious objector during the Vietnam War, warms to his subject as few actors do. Addressing a room full of reporters, he leaves his seat to pace the small stage as he answers questions. Like a dedicated professor among freshmen, he is fully engaged in the issue at hand, and his enthusiasm carries the hour.

So well does Dreyfuss understand his subject that he was not afraid to introduce other strong influences to the film, not only with repeated screenings of "Emile Zola" and "I Accuse," a 1958 Jose Ferrer film, but in the distinctive style and "camera vision" of director Ken Russell as well.

"I hoped that we would find someone who would bring something eccentric and particular to the film," says Dreyfuss. "And my first thought was Ken. ...That was the reason for picking him."

The supporting cast is similarly strong, with Oliver Reed and Brian Blessed as French generals and Peter Firth as Major Henri. Kenneth

'Days' viewer dazed by dull script

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I've been watching Days of Our Lives for 10 years and have been a devoted fan, but I'm about to switch networks and try a new soap. I suggest Days try new writers and ship the present ones, along with Jack and Jennifer, on a slow boat to China. The whole thing is very tiring and boring. If they gave Victor Kiriakis the chance, I bet he could unload them! —A fan in Meridian, Miss.

Dear Reader: I agree Days could use some energy in its story lines, but Jack and Jennifer are extremely popular with most fans, which is surprising because their dialogue is so incredibly dull. Molly and Tanner are much more fun and exciting. It would be great if the writers would power up the story lines for Molly, Tanner and Brian.

Dear Candace: I really like The Young and the Restless. It's the only soap I watch, but I can't stand the character Leanna. She was supposed to have run away from a mental institution, so how can she be as obnoxious as she is? Why don't they get rid of her? I'm also sick of David. How can he get away with all he does and not get caught? I would like Scott and his ex-wife (Lauren) to get back together and expose Sheila. Thanks for listening. — A fan in Idaho.

Dear Reader: Several other viewers share your sentiments concerning Leanna, David and Lauren. By the time this article is published, David Kimble will more than likely have had the tables turned on him. Leanna will probably be married. As for Lauren, I don't think she should go back to Scott, and she should stay away from Paul. She needs a dynamic man, someone new to sweep her off her feet.

Dear Candace: We miss the girl who used to play Vicky on Another World. My sister and I think she was wonderful in the two characters she played. Could you tell us if she will be back on Another World? We are anxious to know. Thank you so much. We enjoy your column. —Sincerely, Frances Bergin, Providence, R.I.

Dear Reader: Anne Hecht is now pursuing movies and other acting interests. It is doubtful she will return to Another World, but in the soap world, you never say never.

Colley ("The Empire Strikes Back") plays Capt. Dreyfuss.

For Dreyfuss, making the film was like time travel. There were moments, he says, when "I felt like I had taken a trip back to my own ancestral root." The issues, he notes, remain alive as well, in modern scandals—Watergate, Iran/Contra.

"Anti-Semitism is our eternal comrade," Dreyfuss says thoughtfully. "So, yes, of course, there is relevance because history is always repeating itself. If you open up any newspaper in America, any day in the last ten years or more, you will see events that were born in 1894 in the French army."
