New board takes the oath

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Wnter

The air at township hall fairly crackled with enthusiasm and anticipation last Friday, as seven new township officials took the oath of office.

A ceremony officiated by 35th District Court Judge James Garber marked the final bit of pomp for the new board, whose membership waltzed to victory over the incumbent cast in the August Republican primary.

Smiles and congratulations dominated Friday's event, which attracted an overflow crowd — including new state Rep. Jerry Vorva and Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter — to the township meeting room.

Those sworn into office included Supervisor Karen Baja, Clerk Sue Hillebrand, Treasurer Rick Engelland, and trustees Mark Abbo, Gini Britton, Russ Fogg, and Barbara O'Brien.

In addition to the Township Board, Deputy Clerk Eunice Switzler was sworn into office, as was township constable Edward Mroz.

The new board apparently realizes it faces a number of difficult tasks. It will get rolling with a public study session at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 3 at township hall, and officials expect to hash out a transition blueprint, including the appointments of up to 18 individuals to various township boards and commissions.

Some of the commissions have been riddled by resignations — some voluntary and some forced by the election results. Of special importance is the Zoning Board of Appeals, which lost three members, including former Chairperson Karen Baja, the newly sworn supervisor.

Baja said the board will discuss openings on the ZBA and planning, recreation, library, water and sewer, and senior citizens advisory commissions at the Dec. 3 study session. Several appointments likely will be announced at the board's Dec. 10 regular session.

The township is seeking resumes from residents interested in appointments to open slots, Baja said. Those with time, interest, and ability are invited to apply, she said.

"We're looking for people who have the time available," Baja said, adding that township commissions often stray from the once-a-month meeting routine. "There is a time commitment involved."

New board members must serve as liaisons to the boards and commissions. No positions have been announced, but residents could see new Trustee Gini Britton appointed ZBA liaison, and Trustee Russ Fogg tabbed as Planning Commission liaison.

Walking into Christmas

The annual Christmas Walks in downtown Northville and at Mill Race Historical Village over the weekend suffered somewhat from damp weather, but that couldn't stop a lot of people from welcoming the season. Above, free carriage rides were among the attractions. At left, pianist David Syme entertains shoppers at Morrison's. The holiday festivities continue this weekend with the official kickoff of "Dickens Christmas" observances slated for 6 p.m. Friday at the downtown bandshell. Santa Claus is expected to arrive in town for the ceremony, and merchants will offer treats all afternoon and evening. On Saturday Santa sets up shop to hear from the kids downtown. For more on scheduled holiday events in town, see page 16-A.

Omnicom goes for another annual fee hike

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

Like death, taxes, and the swallows' return to Capistrano, add annual cable television rate hikes to the list of inevitables.

Omnicom Cablevision, — whose coverage area includes the City of Northville and Northville Township — will bump its basic/deluxe cable rates by $1.50 come Jan. 1, said Lisa Boland, Omnicom general manager.

Additionally, the charge for additional cable hookups will climb by fifty cents. Basic cable will cost customers about $23 after the hike.

The increase represents a 6.5-percent boost for basic service customers, and about a 4-percent jump to Omnicom's average subscriber, Boland said.

About 4,800 township residents and 1,700 city residents subscribe to Omnicom.

Customers also were hit with a rate hike last year, and Boland said the trend is prompted by steadily climbing fees charged by programmers.

"Programming costs are up about 15 percent this year, and that's the single largest expense we incur," Boland said.

Omnicom attempts to keep a handle on salaries, equipment, and lease costs, Boland said, but big-name stations know they hold a powerful hand.

"Unfortunately, ESPN and some of the other larger (stations) know we're not going to drop them," she said, adding VH-1, MTV, and the Discovery Channel as the main culprits in this year's rate hike.

Boland said it is too early to know what impact federal regulation will have on the cable television industry. But she said Omnicom is "trying to keep in touch with local communities" over the ups and downs of regulation.

Omnicom has added one new channel to its basic cable package — the Sci-Fi Channel — but Boland thinks technological improvements are the real benefit to customers.

An audio response unit added this year has streamlined customer contact with administration and maintenance crews, and a backup power system has "saved several hours of outages in the Northville area" this year, Boland said.

City joins suit against state

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

It may be the investment opportunity of a lifetime.

The City of Northville has agreed to participate in a lawsuit against the state seeking reimbursement of payments to local trial courts. The city is one of 174 municipalities being offered the opportunity to join in the suit. Because it represents such a small fraction of the total potential number of claimants, Northville City's initial payment toward the estimated $200,000 legal bill will be only $91.27.

But the city stands to regain all its expense payments to Plymouth's 35th District Court since 1991. The city paid about $125,000 in such costs that year alone.

The current proposed suit stems from a 1988 class action lawsuit filed against the State of Michigan by 76 counties, 44 cities, 11 townships and one village. The municipalities claimed they were owed more than $1 billion in damages because they were never reimbursed for payments to their district, circuit and probate courts.

The judge who handled that lawsuit, Court of Claims Judge James Giddings, ruled in June that any state municipality that funds a trial

School contracts OK'd over dissent

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

School Board Member Patricia Custer believes that administrators' contracts should be written to match their job titles or job descriptions.

That's why she cast the lone dissenting vote against Monday's board motion to ratify two-year contracts for the central office administrators.

"I have a problem with ratifying a contract without an updated job description or with a generic job title," she said Tuesday morning after the board approved and adopted the seven contracts.

The contracts — which contain no pay increase — are identical to the ones that expired this year. They will carry the central office staff and three department supervisors — with the exception of new hires, who have probationary contracts — through 1993-94.

"I voted against it because I feel a responsibility to the community to define in some fashion the responsibilities that I'm voting for," she said.

The biggest beef Custer had with supporting the contracts — which should have been approved by the board when they were extended in June — was that three of the current central office administrators have outdated job descriptions (see related story, page 13-A).

"I'm uncomfortable ratifying a generic contract without a job description or a reference, i.e. a job title. Perhaps that's my own discomfort, but as a new board member I have a problem with it.

"I feel in my conscience that this board needs to tidy up business," she said.

Dispute settled at St. Lawrence

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

St. Lawrence Estates homeowners and the developers of their Seven Mile Road condominium complex have settled their dispute.

The homeowners have obtained a series of concessions from The Selective Group and SLE Development Co., while accepting a report from the company's engineering firm that found St. Lawrence roads generally in compliance with the city-approved site plan.

The city's planning comissioners approved one of the final details last week when they voted to amend their site plan to incorporate the engineering report from NTH Consultants Ltd.

"This is the last of essentially three items that we've been working with the city on," Selective attorney Dean Gould told the commission. "As a matter of technical compliance, we've been asked to seek this amendment to the site plan."

City Manager Gary Word said the agreement was good for the city because it reduces the likelihood of a lawsuit.

"The city is in the middle here," Word said. "I'm tickled pink that they've got to this point and made us less vulnerable than we were."

The road agreement was one of 22 points listed in a seven-page agreement between Selective and the St. Lawrence Estates Condominium Association. Selective also agreed to improve downspouts, install new aluminum siding on several buildings, correct roof and basement leaks, replace landscaping and edging, sealcoat all roads and driveways, and regrade several areas. Many of those improvements are already under way.

Selective also agreed to pay the condominium association $1,000 to replace exterior brass light fixtures, $5,940 for privacy plantings between decks, and $2,000 for trees "to obscure Northville Downs parking lot."

Last week's agreement follows nearly a year of disputes between the developer and St. Lawrence's 79 homeowners over a list of concerns including streets, streetlights and sidewalks. Residents complained that their roads were not built to site-plan specifications, that sidewalks shown on the site plans had not yet been installed, and that lights were not installed in the correct number or manner.

City Manager Gary Word in April ordered Selective to show that the roads, lights and sidewalks were not deficient or correct the deficiencies. Selective agreed to correct the streetlight deficiencies by installing more. The developers had delayed installing the specified number in part due to a homeowner's request to reduce electrical costs.

Sidewalks were dropped from the plan after more than two-thirds of St. Lawrence homeowners voted to forego their installation in exchange for a $17,000 payment from Selective to the homeowners' association, to be used for future repairs at the complex. That payment has since been made.

Word ordered Selective in August to bring St. Lawrence's roads into compliance with the city-approved site plan, despite an engineering study that found the existing roads superior to what was required. Structural tests performed in June showed that the roads were stronger than city specifications.

"We are taking a very strict interpretation of that (site plan) . . . We are holding them to that," Word told the commission last week.

The engineer's report did recommend repairing roads on the west side of the complex including St. Lawrence Boulevard and Covington Court that had only received one layer of asphalt, before adding the second layer. The report also recommended adding another 1-inch layer to a section of Covington Court that had already received both scheduled coats.

Those repairs are being made.

Farrell art series returns

The Northville Arts Commission will sponsor Michael Farrell in a new, three-lecture art series.

The lectures take listeners on a voyage of art and architecture around the globe. The path travels a route opposite the one Columbus took in 1492, and meets him upon his arrival in the new world.

Patrons of this series will be delighted by the wit and style of Michael Farrell, a delightful raconteur and knowledgeable art historian. This year, the ambience of Genitti's Little Theater is an added benefit.

Advance ticket sales are for season tickets only and are priced at $15 for the entire series.

Michael Farrell's Wednesday night lectures will include the topics "Sailing to Byzantium," Jan. 20; "The Pleasure Domes of Kubla Khan," Feb. 17; and "Children of the Sun," March 17. Each lecture will be at 7:30 in Genitti's Little Theater, 112 E. Main, Northville. Seating is limited to 132.

Checks may be made out to the Northville Arts Commission for $15 and will reserve your seating for the entire series. Mail checks to Joann Dayton, 42085 Banbury, Northville 48167.

Police News

Driver blacks out at wheel, runs off Taft Road

A 24-year-old Plymouth woman with diabetes blamed a Nov. 19 car accident on an insulin reaction.

Witnesses said the woman drove south on Taft Road through a red light at Eight Mile Road. Taft ends at Eight Mile. The woman continued south off the road, striking a telephone pole guy wire, driving through a wooden fence and hitting two parked cars before the car stopped. The second parked car was pushed into a third car beside it, which hit a fourth.

The woman told police she did not remember the accident, and guessed that she "blacked out" at the wheel due to the insulin reaction. She was taken to St. Mary Hospital by ambulance with bruised legs and a cut on her knee. She was not cited.

TRAFFIC STOP NETS TWO ARRESTS: A 31-year-old Detroit man was arrested on an outstanding warrant the night of Nov. 20 after city police stopped him for illegally parking on Sheldon Road at Fairbrook.

He was wanted in Hamtramck on a shoplifting charge. City police also cited the man for driving without a license. He was released to Hamtramck police after posting a $500 personal bond on the Northville charge.

The man's companion, a 30-year-old Detroit woman, was also arrested after police discovered an outstanding warrant on her. She was wanted for failing to complete a work detail stemming from a knife violation. She was turned over to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department on the warrant.

CAR BROKEN INTO: A car parked at Tree Top Apartments, 899 Novi Road, was broken into sometime between 5 p.m., Nov. 22, and 7 a.m. the next day. The driver's side window was smashed and the owner's $40 wallet containing several credit cards was taken.

CLEANERS ROBBED: An estimated $67 in cash was stolen from Novi Road Cleaners, 1069 Novi Road, the evening of Nov. 21. City police are still investigating the incident.

ATTEMPTED BREAKING AND ENTERING: A Northville Green Apartments resident reported an attempted break-in sometime between 7:30 a.m. Nov. 21 and 1 a.m. the next day. The resident returned home to find a doorwall pried partially open, but a wooden rod in the track kept it from opening fully.

FOUND PROPERTY: A customer of Anne's Crafts found a woman's gold watch in front of the 111 E. Main St. store Nov. 14. Anyone wishing to claim it is asked to call the Northville City police at 349-1234 with a more detailed description.

BREAK-INS REPORTED AT SCHOOL: The owners of a 1983 Ford Escort and a 1982 Chevrolet van told police that someone broke into the vehicles Nov. 18 while they were parked in the lot at Silver Spring Elementary, 19801 Silver Spring Drive.

The Escort owner said someone smashed the driver's side window and stole a purse containing cash and credit cards. The purse was later found in a dumpster in the Highland Lakes subdivision, police said. Missing was $42 in cash.

The van owner said someone stole a duffel bag from the vehicle at about the same time the other theft occurred. The duffel bag reportedly contained $5,351.31 in checks and $1,121 in cash. The cash and a credit card were missing when the duffle bag was located in a dumpster off Silver Spring, police said.

VEHICLE DAMAGED: A 1990 GEO parked in the street in front of a Crestview Circle residence was damaged late Nov. 19 or early Nov. 20 when someone smashed its rear window, police said. Damage was estimated at $500.

ROCKING HORSE STOLEN: A wooden rocking horse valued at $100 reportedly was stolen from a storage area on Silver Spring late Nov. 19 or early Nov. 20, township police said.

OUILS: A 32-year-old Plymouth woman was charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of liquor after her arrest early Nov. 21 on Eight Mile east of Meadowbrook. A preliminary breath test indicated the woman's blood-alcohol level was .18. Police said she refused to take a Breathalyzer test.

A 28-year-old Novi man was charged with OUIL after his arrest early Nov. 22 on Haggerty north of Six Mile, police said. Breathalyzer tests indicated the man's blood-alcohol level was .14, police said.

Citizens with information about the above incidents are urged to call Northville City Police at 349-1234 or Northville Township Police at 349-9400.

In two recent polls, St. Joseph Mercy Hospital (SJMH) was voted as having the best birthing center by readers of both Metro Times and Metro PARENT. In fact, the McAuley Family Birth Place at St. Joe's in Ann Arbor is fast becoming the name for up-to-date, family-focused maternity care, for lots of big reasons:
- One of the few birthing centers around to offer both LDR and LDRP suites
- Lots of options for pain relief, including labor epidurals and Jacuzzi bath tubs
- Tours, classes and other education to help you feel like an expert (even if it's your first baby)
- The excellent reputation of SJMH obstetricians

McAuley Family Birth Place's caring staff also strive for the best for the tiniest reason of all—your baby.

City scrutinizes shared services

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

The Northville City Council got its first look last week at this year's pared-down shared-services budgets.

While the Library and Parks & Recreation budgets were unanimously approved, a Northville Youth Assistance budget showing a 17-percent increase in city and township contributions was turned over to a blue-ribbon committee for further review.

Library Director Pat Orr noted that her budget for 1993 "is a continuation of the severe cutbacks which you all are aware the library has experienced."

The $378,696 budget includes a 2.5-percent increase in city and township contributions, to $117,000 and $189,036 respectively. Orr noted that the budget's only increased expenses are 5-percent wage and salary increases for union members and librarians. Other funds, including the book budget and training fees, have been cut.

"The library continues to be the only department in the city and township forced by circumstances to do its own cleaning," Orr added.

Northville Parks & Recreation will actually cost the city no money until June 30, 1993, said Director Traci Gottschalk. "What better news could you have than that?" she asked.

The city's full $69,000 contribution will be due July 1. The move reflects passage of a six-month budget between Jan. 1-June 30 that will bring future Parks & Rec budgets in line with the city's fiscal year, which begins July 1.

The city and township cut their contributions to the Parks & Rec budget by 5 percent for the 1992 fiscal year. The 1993 budget figures are based on a 3.3-percent increase over 1992 contributions.

Northville Youth Assistance Director Mary Ellen King faced the most questions from the council for her proposed $39,808 in expenditures in 1993. Her budget forecasts only $31,002 in revenues, continuing NYA's trend of using money from a fast-depleting fund balance to finance cost overruns.

King anticipated that the fund would run out of money in the next year.

King's proposal to increase city and township contributions to $10,859 and $17,643 respectively was questioned as well.

"Somehow we've got to get these two (revenue and expenditure budgets) to balance out, and it's not going to come just from more contributions from the city and township," said Council Member Jerry Mittman.

The township's Board of Trustees already had called for a blue ribbon commission to consider the NYA budget, so city action was not necessary. But the council did request more information on NYA's fund equity, and council members plan to reconsider the budget at their Dec. 7 meeting.

Salary negotiations end with paraprofessionals

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

The 62 members of Northville schools' union of paraprofessionals have settled on a two-year contract with a 3.5-percent raise for the first year.

The settlement, which won the School Board's approval Monday, concludes the last round of the district's negotiation talks. The wage increase reflected in this contract settlement mirrors the raise most employee groups received this year.

R. Roy Danley, director of personnel, said the paraprofessionals join the teaching assistants, bus drivers, custodians, food service and maintenance employees and the district's one occupational therapist in agreeing on a 3.5-percent raise. Base salaries for the paraprofessionals are between $17,400 and $22,328. Paraprofessionals work at Bryant and Old Village Schools as part of the Center program. Their salaries are reimbursed to the district by Wayne County.

The district's secretarial and clerical staff (which is a non-bargaining unit) is the only group that settled for less with a 3-percent raise. In lieu of the one-half-percent difference in salary improvements, Danley said the secretaries bargained for a $200 stipend to be awarded to those on staff with an associate's degree or better.

The remaining employee groups either opted for flexible benefits packages or forfeited pay increases this year.

The three district nurses, which provide services for the special education program and are funded by the county, were moved from an hourly rate to the district's teacher salary schedule. The move, administrators said, is to recognize them for their bachelor's degrees.

Prior to the switch, the district was one of few left in the state that didn't have its nurses earning comparable wages to employees with equal educational credentials.

"It's basically righting a wrong," said David Bolitho, assistant superintendent for administrative services. "We were one of the last districts to do it."

The district's 211 teachers took the highest pay increase this year. Their 5.875-percent salary increase ends the last year of a previously negotiated three-year contract. The pay increase raised eyebrows earlier this year when union leaders representing the teachers refused to take concessions even after district officials had to cut $2.6 million from their program.

Building principals, who are represented by the National Association of School Administrators, opted for a benefit option over a salary increase for the 1992-93 year. Principals were granted a benefit option of $2,350 that allows them to spend that money on tuition reimbursement, physical expenses or conference allotments. Assistant principals were given the same option with $2,100. Any excess monies not spent during the year can be converted into cash and tacked onto their base salary. That option, Danley said, is good only for this year.

In contrast, the seven central office administrators and three program supervisors took pay freezes for the 1992-93 year. Their contracts remain identical to the ones they held the year before.

Overall, Danley said he thought the employee groups were responsive to the district's financial position during bargaining sessions. Even though most asked the district to match the teachers' pay raise, they were content with the lower increase.

"I think they were understanding to the position of the district," he said. "Their salary increases are somewhat under what other districts are paying. The 3.5-percent is also somewhat lower than what other districts were paying."

His wife of 27 years, Eleanor Buzenberg Neynaber, survives her husband. Roland, best known as Stewart, lived his entire life in the area. He graduated from Northwestern University and was a member of its alumni association. He was an active member of the Trinity United Methodist Church in Detroit and was in the U.S. Army during World War II, serving in Hawaii.

He worked as a financial analyst with the Chyrsler Corp. for 25 years and retired in 1980.

Survivors are his wife, Eleanor Buzenberg Neynaber of Livonia; his son and daughter-in-law, Charles and Barbara Neynaber of Southgate; his brother-in-law and wife, Edward and Debby Buzenberg; and his grandson, Justin Neynaber.

Services were held Monday, Nov. 23, at the Ward Presbyterian Church in Livonia. The Rev. Arthur J. Hunt officated the ceremony. Burial was at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Detroit. Arrangements were made by the Ross B. Northrop Funeral home in Northville.

THEODORE POLIN

Theodore J. Polin, 57, of Escondido, Calif. died at Palomar Medical Center Nov. 18 after living with cancer for three years.

He was born May 30, 1935, in Detroit to Kathleen Bernachi. He arried his wife, Maria, in 1957.

The retired GM employee was a contact engineer for Cadillac Motor Car Division at Clark Street in Detroit. He served in the United States Army from 1960-61. He lived in Livonia for 35 years before moving to California two years ago. He was a member of Finlater-Ararat Masonic Lodge No. 457.

He is survived by his wife; his mother; and his children, Kimberly Shephard of Livonia and Tracey Polin of Northville.

A Masonic service was held Monday. The funeral was Tuesday at the Harry J. Will Funeral Home in Livonia. Rev. Brian Tweedie officiated. Interment was at Glen Eden Memorial Park chapel.

Northville in the Money

Community spotlighted in magazine article

By MIKE TYREE
Staff Writer

Little ol' Northville is about to get some national ink.

But a magazine's comparative analysis of Northville and a New England community might be a bit painful for the locals.

Money magazine, a Time Inc. publication, is tentatively slated to highlight Northville in its January tax issue. Northville — primarily the township — is stacked up against Avon, Conn., in a review of communities of similar development history, population, and affluence.

As far as getting the best bang for the tax buck, guess who comes in second? Well, "we're No. 2" could be Northville's battle cry.

It all comes down to planning and management, said John Manners, the Money reporter who crawled the streets of both communities.

Northville Township suffers a higher tax burden than Avon and does not provide the depth of service, Manners found in his review. A major reason is an unwillingness or inability to attract light industrial development here, he said.

In talking to 30-40 community leaders and residents, Manners found alternating reaction to the bedroom-vs.-mixed-use argument that has heightened in Northville because of escalating assessments and property taxes.

Avon residents seem satisfied that their tax dollars are wisely spent, and light industrial development helps pay the freight, Manners said.

But Northvilleites, with the focus primarily on residential development, are upset with the local tax structure, Manners said. He pointed to the differences in professional government management — especially in the township — as a key.

"I don't think they've made a full commitment to professional management," Manners said. "At the moment, they're in a bind because they don't have the money to pay for good management."

Avon employs a highly paid, long-term manager and staff. Northville Township has drifted in and out of management styles over the years, and has settled for managerial candidates on the lower edge of the pay scale, Manners said.

Avon also gets the word out about its positives. Manners said the community supports three publications aimed at attracting residents and developers. Northville Township has long struggled with a public relations problem.

Many in the Northville community, including civic leaders and new and old members of the Township Board, say changes in management theory and practice may be needed, Manners said.

"A lot of people say it would be a good idea to professionalize management," he said.

Manners said the new township leadership appears eager to find solutions for financial problems here. But he sees no easy way out.

"It looks to me as if the will is there among the people in positions of influence," he said. "These people have a mandate to make a change, (but) the problem is, the township's really strapped."

Goodfellow paper hawkers sought

By CHARLES KEYS
Special Writer

On Saturday, Dec. 12 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., the Northville Rotary Club will hit the streets (various city and township intersections) of our community selling Goodfellow Newspapers. The Goodfellow Newspapers are printed free by The Northville Record — all money raised through sales are donated to Northville's Civic Concern to feed, clothe and care for Northville's disadvantaged.

Last year Northville Rotary raised $5,500. Our goal this year is $10,000. Therefore, we need your help. We need volunteers — lots of volunteers of any size, shape or disposition to help raise this money through selling Goodfellow Newspapers for just two fun-filled, exciting hours.

The Northville Rotary cordially invites adult caring men and women, homeowners, community club members, church members, Chamber of Commerce members, Northville City and Township employees (come on, you former and new Township Trustees and City Council persons, police officers and fire fighters, managers and department heads, etc.), our State Senator and new State Representative, our Board of Education employees (come on, you Board members, management staff, support staff, drivers and school teachers, etc.), U.S. Postal Service employees, Northville Record employees, (come on, Phil J., Bob, Mike, Steve, Sharon, Anna, Cristina, Gina, Bryan and Hal, etc.), and finally just plain old you to come out and volunteer.

In return Northville Rotary offers these volunteers nothing but the best: cold, damp winter weather with possible snow or rain or even sleet, freezing feet and toes, freezing hands and fingers, freezing face and nose, smelly car exhaust and some (but not too many) grouchy-scrooge type people, but mostly nice, considerate giving people whould would love to donate something to the poor this Christmas season. Now comes the really good part . . . For your efforts you get . . . a great warm feeling (called the holiday spirit) . . . including a hug from everybody (including your spouse or favorite friend) who benefits from your efforts — the men, women and children who, for whatever reason, are unable to provide for themselves during these economic hard times — guaranteed to give each volunteer a fantastic Merry Christmas.

Anyone wishing to help with our annual Goodfellow Newspaper Sale, please contact Chuck Keys at 349-3348 or Sharon Whichello at 348-9067 as soon as possible. Anyone (person, business or organization) wishing to donate money can mail donations to the Northville Rotary Club, 200 East Main Street, Northville, MI 48167. If you donate time or money to the Northville Rotary Club, Santa Claus won't put coal in your stocking! Guaranteed!

Mary Ellen King sells Goodfellows papers last year.

The city's municipal buildings, for the most part, comply with the spirit of the recently enacted Americans with Disabilities Act, according to one Northville resident.

And Gary Mavian ought to know. Mavian, who has multiple sclerosis, has had to use a wheelchair for the past several years.

Mavian, 42, lost his high-profile job at a Chicago investment firm after being diagnosed with the disease, but he has refused to let that slow him down. Since moving to Northville with his wife four years ago, he has volunteered his services to the city while he looks for a full-time job.

City Manager Gary Word took Mavian up on his offer earlier this year, and authorized him to assess the city's compliance with the ADA and provide the city with a transition plan to bring it into full compliance.

"I was able to do it from a practical standpoint," Mavian noted.

After seven months of research, Mavian presented his findings to the city in September. The seven-page report details areas of non-compliance and includes cost estimates to correct the deficiencies.

Overall, Mavian said, the city's municipal buildings were well-designed when it came to the needs of the handicapped.

Northville City Hall was Mavian's first assignment, and he noted several needed revisions including two-way doors, more accessible water fountains and pay telephones, and an elevator if the Police Department and library remain in the lower level. City officials have planned to install an elevator for years, using Community Development Block Grant funds.

Mavian judged the Parks and Recreation building next door to city hall handicapped-accessible except for the lack of "grab" bars in the restrooms. The Scout Building and Allen Terrace were also judged handicapped-accessible.

Mavian said he considered practicality as well as the letter of the law when rating the city's compliance.

"You have to look at it from a practical standpoint," he said. "If we tried to do everything that the ADA indicates, it would be cost-prohibitive . . . You've just got to be realistic, and that's what I've tried to do."

Mavian cited the city's Fire Hall and Department of Public Works building as examples. "How often is a handicapped person going to use them?" he asked.

Still, Mavian notes that architectural features like narrow doors and steep sidewalks provide much greater obstacles to people with disabilities and to the able-bodied. He hopes that legislation like the ADA will give greater access to the disabled.

"We're viable individuals; we have a lot to offer," he said. "Even though our legs might not work so well, we've got the brains to back them up."

Library Friends seek help

This month you may have found a letter in your mailbox from a friend in the Friends of the Northville Public Library. In November, Friends are inviting friends to join the organization which:

- promotes awareness of the library's services.
- provides direct financial assistance to purchase equipment and books.
- funds special library programs.

The purpose of the group's fall membership campaign, "Every Member Get a Member," is to draw attention to the exciting and tense issues facing the library. One issue that excites the Friends is a possible referendum on district library status for the Northville community. Such status, the group believes, would provide a stable source of funding to the library through a dedicated millage of no more than 2 mills. An elected commission would oversee library budget and operations.

Of course, the issue which causes tension among library advocates is the library's current financial bind. The library's budget has been cut almost 25 percent in the last two years, forcing staff and service reductions. Librarians do the custodial work in the library, service hours have been reduced from 58 hours a week to 50 hours, and the book budget has been cut by $28,000 — almost 50 percent.

To accomplish their search for new members, Friends will not only send letters to friends, but post appeals for members throughout the community. Application brochures are available at the library, the Chamber of Commerce, the Recreation Center and several businesses. Or contributions may be sent to: Friends of the Northville Public Library, 215 W. Main St., Northville 48167. Membership levels include: Patron, $100; Sustaining Member, $50; Contributing Member, $30; Supporting Member, $25; or Friend — whatever you can manage. If the well-being of the community doesn't motivate a surge in membership, the Friends of the Library hope a gimmick will. All new members in November will receive a coupon for free overnight use of one video for the library's collection.

Exchange student homes needed

High school students from Brazil will arrive in January to spend five months studying in an American school. These boys and girls (ages 14-18) each need a family to welcome them.

All of the students have studied English for at least three years, have full medical insurance and have enough money to cover their personal expenses. They are sponsored by the American Institute for Foreign Studies (AIFS).

Flexible, open-minded, fun-loving families, with or without children of their own, can be wonderful host families. Most families that have hosted foreign students say that hosting is fun. In addition, AIFS rewards host families with a scholarship for foreign study and/or travel.

For information contact AIFS local representatives in Plymouth: Lynne and Gideon Levenbach at 453-8562 or 453-6851.

Novi council quashes move to close road

A request from a group of Timber Ridge Estates homeowners to close Ironside Drive, which connects their subdivision with North Hills, was denied by the Novi City Council Monday.

However, a recommendation from Fire Chief Arthur Lenaghan for a series of signs, including restrictions on through and turning traffic, stop signs at intersections, and a posted speed limit will be studied. A report is due back to the council in 30 days.

The majority of the Timber Ridge residents asked for Ironside Drive to be restricted to the use of emergency vehicles only, because they said the 100-foot route, which runs between the Cumberland Drive in North Hills and connects with Serenity Drive in Timber Ridge, was being used as an access to Novi Road and that the increased traffic endangered the safety of pedestrians, particularly children. There are no sidewalks in the 79-home subdivision, located west of Novi Road between Nine Mile and Eight Mile roads.

Health and safety reasons were cited by some council members in denying the request. Timber Ridge would be left with no secondary access if Ironside Drive were closed and an emergency arose.

Owners on six homes on Serenity Drive where it curves have had damage to their lots when drivers, some speeding, swerved off the road. Residents also fear that shopping center under construction just across Novi Road from Timber Ridge will intensify the cut-through traffic.

The council in July agreed to a review of the matter.

In a report back, Novi's traffic engineer said the traffic was within national averages and did not recommend the closure. The police and fire departments also did not support the shutdown of Ironside Drive. Blocking off the route would likely shift more traffic onto Novi Road and the nearby residential street Galway Drive, Novi Police Chief Doug Shaeffer said.

North Hills subdivision homeowners on Ironside Drive also vigorously protested the request from their Timber Ridge neighbors Monday.

In addition, City Manager Edward Kriewall said that he was contacted Monday by representatives of the Northville School District, who argue that it would be an "economic hardship" to the district if Ironside Drive is closed and Timber Ridge residents then ask for their children to be bused to Amerman elementary school.

That won't happen, a Timber Ridge spokesperson said.

A newly elected school board member's request to see job descriptions for district administrators has spurred an overhaul of personnel files and an annual review of job responsibilities.

It wasn't until Board Member Patricia Custer requested job descriptions for district administrators that the personnel department realized job listings were outdated.

Since she made her request last summer, the administrative services department has been working to update its records.

"Some of our job descriptions aren't up-to-date. It is something we are reacting to, and we are going to assure you that they will now be reviewed on an annual basis," said David Bolitho, assistant superintendent for administrative services.

Bolitho said he wasn't aware some of the job descriptions had lapsed. But said he has begun to update the records with the help of the district's director of personnel, Roy Danley. By the end of this week Bolitho and Danley hope to have gathered all the pertinent information needed to write new descriptions.

"We found out when Mrs. Custer requested the job descriptions that they were outdated," he said. "So now we are building a process or mechanism to make sure they are accurate and do reflect the job the person is doing."

Descriptions Bolitho found lacking were those for for the business manager, the assistant superintendent for instructional services, the director of instructional services and the assistant high school principals.

"It wasn't a complete disaster, but some needed to be improved and there were procedural things that needed to be cleaned up," he said.

Bolitho said he believed the central office administrators' job descriptions had grown old because so many of those staffers have been with the district in the same position for several years. In cases like those, he said, the district has historically reviewed job descriptions only when a position becomes vacant. But now that policy's been changed.

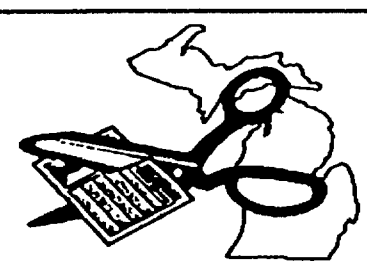

"They hadn't been done because we haven't had to replace anybody," he said. "In the past unless a position is posted the job description won't be reviewed, but now we've implemented an annual review of those descriptions," he said.

All three of the central office administrators' job descriptions that have lapsed have been occupied by the same three people for years. Business manager John Street has been with the district for 11 years while Dolly McMaster, the assistant superintendent for instructional services, has held her office for nine years. Likewise, Director of Instruction William Hamilton has been employed in his current position for the last four years.

Bolitho said descriptions of most central office administrative positions are current because there has been some turnover in front offices. Bolitho himself is only one year in his current job, as is Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski.

Bolitho intends to have the revised descriptions to central office cabinet members before Christmas. They will then get a reading at the personnel subcommittee before they go to the School Board for approval.

CUTTING DRUNK DRIVING

Army fights poverty war

The Salvation Army is aggressively seeking needy families and senior citizens to participate in the Adopt-A-Family Christmas program, and seeking organizations to collect food for the needy.

The goal of the Adopt-A-Family Program is to provide needy families with toys, gifts, clothes, health aids, and a Christmas food basket. The Salvation Army has taken the pledge of "No One Without a Christmas."

Prospective families and seniors may call The Salvation Army until Dec. 4 to set up an interview. Please do not call after that date. The number is 453-5487. Office hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1-4:30 p.m.

To be eligible the families must reside in Northville, Plymouth, or Canton, and show financial need. Proof is required.

The program is made possible by businesses, community groups, schools and churches who lovingly adopt needy families. Individuals and families may adopt as well. Interested groups may call anytime to adopt a family.

Meanwhile, the Army is looking for businesses, organizations, churches and schools to collect food for the needy.

Each year the Plymouth Salvation Army gives out thousands of food bags to needy families in Northville, Canton, and Plymouth. As the weather turns cold, the need increases even more.

If your group is willing to display a "Baskets of Love" poster and food drop box, or perhaps even sponsor a food drive, contact The Salvation Army at 453-5487. The posters and boxes will be available for pickup soon.

The Army asks that all food be delivered directly to our food pantry if possible. This will free us to serve our community better during the hectic holiday season. If you are unable to deliver the food, call in advance for a pickup date.

Flight to the White House

Local newsman picks up Clinton's campaign trail on the final stretch

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

It was a reporter's dream, and a scheduler's nightmare.

WXYZ Channel 7 reporter Mike Huckman spent the final days of the 1992 presidential campaign trying to keep up with the man who would win the White House Nov. 3.

The six-day whirlwind assignment took him from major metropolitan centers including Atlanta and Philadelphia to tiny burgs like Davenport, Iowa, whose small-town Main Street reminded Huckman of his present hometown of Northville.

"It got to the point where I could not remember the last city I was at, or where we were the day before, and I would constantly have to remind myself what city I was in that day," Huckman said.

The 30-year-old Los Angeles native had planned on covering election night in Little Rock, Ark., until WXYZ officials asked him — the Tuesday before the election — if he was willing to leave that Thursday instead to follow the campaign through to the end. He readily agreed.

The assignment turned out to be the most grueling of his nine-year career, but also the most rewarding.

Huckman and his cameraman, Milford resident and Arkansas native Hector Heath, hopped on a commercial flight to New Jersey on Thursday, Oct. 29 to cover Bill Clinton's speech that day in Jersey City. They quickly realized they had a problem. Given the furious pace of the campaign, chasing the candidate around the country on commercial flights would have been impractical.

"With Clinton, we were doing four to five states in a day, starting at around 9 in the morning and checking into hotels about 4 the next morning," he said. "We were constantly flying by the seat of our pants."

Huckman asked other press corps members how to get a seat on the press plane following Clinton's own chartered flight, but he was told the plane was full. Undaunted, he called Clinton's campaign headquarters Friday morning and gently reminded campaign officials of Michigan's role as an important swing state and WXYZ's status as the station that sponsored Clinton's Sept. 22 town meeting. He also mentioned that he planned to air four live television spots each day from the campaign trail.

The news team was on the plane that afternoon.

"It saved us," Huckman said. "It would have been impossible to cover it the way we did without being on the press plane, because [Clinton's] schedule was so frantic."

But the reporter found that getting a seat on the press plane was not the same as being welcomed aboard.

"Certainly there is a bit of an attitude that you encounter from the network people, the New York Times people . . . These people had been together for 13 months. It's a whole different world and a very close-knit group," he said. "You definitely feel like an outsider when you jump on the plane four days before the election."

The outsider status quickly dissipated as Huckman joined in the antics on the press plane. Flying with other members of the media turned out to be a good way to relieve the tension of the campaign trail, he said. "It was kind of a release . . . The press plane was our recess," he said.

The press corps even wore specially printed T-shirts that read "Camp Pain '92" in tribute to the rigors of the trail, with caricatures of Clinton and running mate Al Gore as camp counselors.

The reporter's hardest asignment "was trying to make it to our live shots," Huckman said. His closest call came at the Brendan Byrne Arena at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, New Jersey. "I was supposed to go live from the Meadowlands at 6 o'clock," Huckman said.

Unfortunately for the two-man news crew, they had skipped the press plane that day and caught a commercial flight due in at 5 p.m. Bad weather forced the flight into a holding pattern over LaGuardia Airport and it touched down a half-hour late. With no time to rent a car, Huckman and Heath flagged down a cab driver who, fortunately, lived up to the reputation of New York taxi drivers and sped them to the Meadowlands. They arrived with several minutes to spare.

Ironically, Huckman did not get nearly as close to the candidate during his six-day assignment as he did when Clinton came to WXYZ's Southfield studio for the Sept. 22 town meeting. Clinton's handlers granted interviews with the candidate to few people besides ABC reporter Ted Koppel during those final days.

"The excuse they were giving everybody else was his voice," Huckman said. "He was resting it as much as he could."

Though Huckman would not reveal who he voted for, it became obvious that he developed a measure of respect for the man he chased across the United States.

On Tuesday morning, election day, the reporter wandered the streets of Little Rock to gauge how its inhabitants felt about their famous neighbors. People living nearby said they were often invited to Christmas gatherings at the Governor's Mansion, and their children attended Haloween parties there as well.

"The impression I got was that the Clintons were real people . . . a real part of their neighborhood," Huckman said.

"I just get the feeling that these are as real a couple as we've had in the White House."

Patterson will butt heads with Detroit, SEMCOG

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

One big change L. Brooks Patterson will make as Oakland County executive is to be less chummy with Wayne County and Detroit over regional issues.

Among the issues are the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments' plan to control urban sprawl called the "Regional Development Initiative" and the future of a multi-county bus system.

"I've met with John Amberger (SEMCOG executive director)," said Patterson. "I have some real concerns about some SEMCOG programs such as RDI, the regional development initiative, which says, 'Turn the future of Oakland County to this new layer of government, and we'll take care of everything; we'll redirect investment to Detroit, we'll collect your property taxes, and we'll distribute them.'

"That's not going to happen under a Patterson Administration. I'll fight that tooth and nail. I will not turn the future of Oakland County over to some regional planners. RDI and I are not going to be in synch."

Patterson, 53, Oakland's colorful prosecutor from 1962-88, will succeed the retiring Daniel T. Murphy, who chaired SEMCOG, bought the idea of halting urban sprwal and tried to help SMART, the suburban bus system. Both are Republicans, but Patterson reflects the conservative views of county board members hostile to SEMCOG.

Meanwhile, several northern Oakland townships elected supervisors on platforms of controlled growth. And even post-World War II suburbs in mid-county are worried about a megamall destined for Auburn Hills.

"I don't envision putting an industrial belt in the north tier of Oakland County," Patterson said in a taping of WXYZ-TV's Spotlight on the News scheduled for broadcast next weekend.

"I-75 is the corridor known nationally, even internationally, as Automation Alley. There are plenty of opportunities for what I consider quality growth so we can provide the jobs we need in Oakland County," said Patterson, citing the county's expected population growth from 1.1 million to 1.4 million by the end of the decade.

"Right now we have 13 institutions of higher learning. We have 50,000 kids in those colleges. When they graduate, we don't want to export our kids. We want to export the quality products we make in Oakland County, so we've gotta have jobs to do that.

"We can create jobs without threatening the rural attributes. I live on one of Oakland's 450 lakes. I'm cognizant of that attribute. There's 87,000 acres of parkland. I think we can strike the necessary balance."

Murphy was active in SEMCOG. Coleman Young, mayor of Detroit for years, never attended a SEMCOG meeting. Would Patterson be like Murphy or Young?

"I think I'll be in between," he said, but he won't ignore the regional agency. "When you ignore it, up pop programs like RDI."

Patterson noted he had rejected one idea harmful to Detroit — putting Oakland in a separate metropolitan statistical area.

"If we were to cut Detroit out, our numbers would improve because of the unfortunate times that have hit the major city. I looked at that and found that from a national marketing standpoint Detroit would go from fifth to 16th. I said, 'Why inflict that on Detroit?' I don't see any damage under the present system."

Patterson opposes trying to rescue SMART, the suburban bus system, with a dedicated tax — a tax increase.

"My friend Ed McNamara (Wayne County executive) has called for a quarter of a percent raise in the sales tax to fund transportation programs. I wouldn't be for that. Oakland County would put in $37 million — the most — and we have only 2,600 riders. So we'd pay more and use it less," he said.

He also differs with "my friend" Dennis Archer, announced mayoral candidate in Detroit, on merging Detroit's D-DOT bus system with SMART. "You don't take two failed systems, merge them and expect anything better than a major failed system," he said.

Patterson's appointment of John Grubba as one of his chief deputies also sent a cool message on public transportation to the rest of the region. Grubba, long the managing director of the Oakland County Road Commission, considers the automobile as the best method of mass transit.

"We (he and Grubba) have already discussed starting with a community-based transportation system and building out. I don't think you can impose huge 66-passenger buses on Woodward and expect that system to succeed. John and I talked about using a sophisticated computer system to hook into the 300 private operators who move people back and forth. It's never been coordinated."

Patterson dismissed as "in-house politics" a flare-up at the Nov. 18 Republican County Convention, a one-evening event. He nominated county chair Jim Alexander for the convention chair, but Alexander was defeated by Ferndale attorney Robert Anderson from the GOP's conservative wing.

"A lot of people said afterwards we're trying to send the chairman a message not to forget us little people out there. I think Jim Alexander got the message, loud and clear," Patterson said.

More important, he said, is a Dec. 10 convention for electing the county chair for the next two years, giving Alexander "time to mend his fences."

But Patterson is unhappy with the strong influence of the evangelical wing of the party with its emphasis on "family values" and opposition to homosexual rights.

"We'll have to be concerned the party doesn't become identified locally, statewide and nationally as an image of the far right. I think the Republican Party squandered an opportunity at the national convention by making 'family values' a premier issue. It's an issue, of course, but not the premier issue when the economy was in the sewer.

"And I thought the Pat Buchanan and Pat Robertson speeches just identified our party more with that wing of the party. I think we have to do some rebuilding to put ourselves back in the center, where you have to be to win national elections. They were talking about gay rights when they should have been talking about jobs."

On other issues, Patterson:

- Committed to serving a full four years as county executive and running again in 1996 without making a U.S. Senate bid.
- Makes "no apologies" for all his white male appointments so far. After picking Grubba and deputy treasurer Doug Williams as his top deputies, Patterson said his next six appointments were "basically holdovers" from Murphy's administration. "The next nine appointments will be people that I have brought in — management and budget, health department, economic development, computer services. I'm asking the media to hold its final judgment — then examine the top."
- Wants to keep structure and deal with change by amending law rather than going to an expensive home-rule charter.
- Liked the open interviews used by the Oakland University board, of which he is a member, to screen presidential candidates. The Michigan State University and University of Michigan boards want to close interviews to the public. "I think the (open) process worked rather well at OU. There was a lot of behind-the-scenes organizing and sending out letters. It was a fascinating eight hours, and we got to know the people rather well."
- Has put a plan for an incinerator "on the back burner" until more communities show an interest or technology can be improved.

Mill Race Matters

Thanksgiving is a special time to give thanks for our many blessings. In this community, in this nation, in this era we have much to be thankful for. Most of us in this area will be able to celebrate a joyous holiday with friends and loved ones with adequate food and shelter. There are others in our community who are less fortuante. During this holiday season members of the Northville Historical Society will join other non-profit organizations in our community to collect donations for the Salvation Army. We have been assigned to the A&P store on Seven Mile Saturday, Dec. 12 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Members have been signing up to work, but we can still use a few more. If you would like to volunteer one hour of your time that Saturday, please call Diane at 349-9005. We could use your help.

On Saturday, Dec. 5 the Northville Historical Society holds its 14th annual Children's Christmas workshop. There are two sessions, morning and afternoon. The cost is $10 per child for children in first through sixth grade. Spaces are still available in both workshops. To register stop by 218 W. Dunlap or call 349-2833.

On Friday, Dec. 11 members of the Historical Society will unite for their annual Christmas party. Participants are asked to bring an appetizer to share. Beverages are provided. It's a great preholiday event. If you plan to attend, please RSVP at 348-1845 or 349-9005.

The Canton Historical Society is hosting a Christmas Craft Sale on Friday, Dec. 4 and Saturday, Dec. 5 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Canton Historical Museum, Canton Center and Proctor, south of Cherry Hill. Admission is free.

This Thanksgiving week we wish to give thanks for all the member volunteers and friends who have worked to help Mill Race Village and the Northville Historical Society over the past year. To the regular workers like our "stone gang," docents, gardeners, administrative assistant, board members, archives committee, clothing committee, house redecoration committees, Children's Workshop Committee, Quarterly staff, Fourth of July team, Victorian Festival Team, and donors of artifacts and cash donations we offer a special thank you and give you our own thanks.

The village has progressed well over the past year, and the society continues to remain solvent, enabling restoration and repair work to continue. We offer thanks for a community which supports and encourages the efforts to preserve its own history and we give thanks for the many visitors from far and near who have come to share our community's history.

City joins suit against state court's expenses is entitled to reimbursement of those funds.

The new suit is being handled by the Grand Rapids firm of Law, Weathers & Richardson, which offered city officials the chance to participate in an Oct. 6 letter.

"While nothing is certain in litigation," the firm wrote, "this opportunity would appear to offer your municipality the unique chance to participate in a highly efficient lawsuit utilizing already developed legal work, with costs spread among a multiple of municipalities and a positive and probable result readily apparent."

Northville City did not participate in the first lawsuit, which means the city has no claim to the potential $1 billion in damages. City Manager Gary Word said he was unaware why his predecessors declined to pursue the lawsuit.

"Now we've been given a second chance," Word said. "We figured it was worth the expenditure of a few dollars in legal services for a legal action that could realize a potential return of meny thousands of dollars."

The City Council apparently agreed, passing Word's recommendation without comment as part of their Nov. 16 consent agenda.

The council's agreement follows the recommendation of Plunkett & Cooney, the city's law firm. As city attorney Jim Kohl wrote, "This looks like a situation where we have a lot to gain and very little to lose."

Administrators' contracts pass without Custer's nod

At the meeting Custer requested the board hold off on validating the contracts until the three central office job descriptions were updated. She also asked that specific job titles be included in the individual contracts.

"I would just feel more comfortable signing that which I know rather than which is coming," she said.

But she won no other officials to her viewpoint Monday. After some discussion, the board voted 6-1 to approve contracts for seven central office administrators and three department supervisors.

School administrators defended their policy of using generic language in contracts because they say it gives them more flexibility in job responsibilities.

"The flexibility is ours in any contract to have it read employee," said Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski. "We would be locked in by the contract if it had a job title."

In effect Rezmierski said including a job title in the contract would limit what he could ask employees to do outside the parameters of their specific job responsibilities.

"We've always had a generic version for a multitude of years," he said. It allows us the greatest amount of flexibility based on the district's needs."

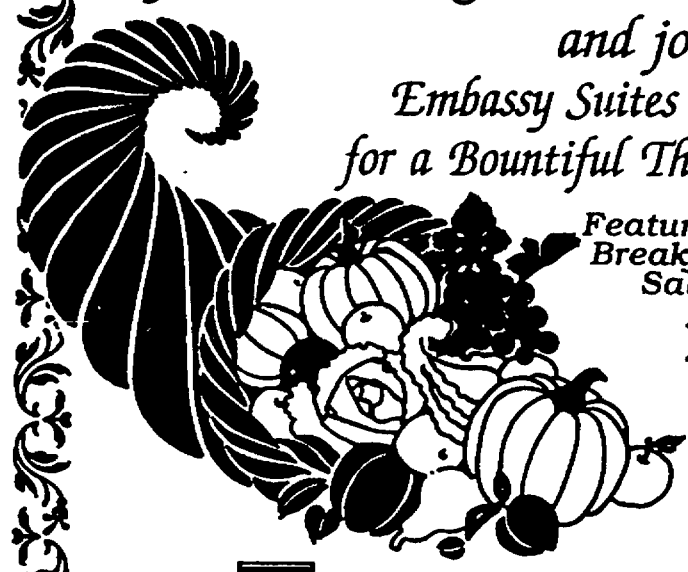

Rezmierski said he understood Custer's concerns but really felt an obligation to the central office staff to get their contracts signed and approved. He apologized to the board and to the staff for what he called an oversight in not getting the contracts approved and signed in June when they were ratified.

"Her concerns were a consideration, but the deeper consideration was the integrity between the board and the central office administrators. It's a matter of integrity and principle. That group was the first to agree and took a voluntary zero-percent increase and (was) the last to get a signed contract."

The one point board members did agree on was the dedication and commitment the central office staff has shown to their jobs.

"They are a very, very dedicated group who puts in long hours," Custer said.

Latest tax reform plan deserves a chance

Education

Amidst all the hue and cry of the recent election, something was happening in the background.

While the governor's folks were touting the wonders ahead if Michigan passed his "Cut and Cap" tax plan; while the near-constant television commercials screamed the dire consequences of such a passage; while the experts pontificated about how Proposal A showed the Legislature's failure to deal with tax reform; while the primary architect of an "alternative" plan was getting bounced out of his seat on the Detroit Board of Education — a group of 12 legislators worked.

Their product — it does not, so far, have a catchy name — is a proposal to dramatically change the entire tax structure of the State of Michigan. Its impetus is the perceived need for reforming the way we pay for public schools in this state — the same notion that spurred proposals A and C earlier this month, as well as the collection of concepts know as the Olmstead/Kearney Plan.

The basics of the latest effort: First, eliminate all property tax which goes to school operations (by far the largest share of your tax bill). Next, increase the state personal income tax and the single-business tax to make up the difference. Then, guarantee every school district in Michigan $4,700 per student in revenue.

Note well: That's significantly less than Northville now spends. The district now has roughly $5,500 per student, and that's a major drop.

A couple of other wrinkles would allow voters to decide in 1994 whether to substitute a 2-cent increase in the sales tax for some of the other taxes. And if local voters here or elsewhere wanted to rise above the state guarantee of funding, it would be done with a voter-approved residents' income tax, not property tax.

The legislators — both Republicans and Democrats, incidentally — behind this plan propose something much more far-reaching than the other plans receiving attention of late. Some apparent problems have already come to light. But let's give this thing a chance to fly before shooting it down for good.

Some early critics have identified two potential flaws: first, the tricky and ultimately wrong assumption that equal funding should provide equal education; and second, the unequal impact on businesses of a shift from property to single-business tax. In general, heavy manufacturers would benefit, while companies with high labor costs might suffer a higher overall tax burden.

We'd add one more concern: This plan would make it much easier to implement a "voucher" system to include private schools in public funding down the road, and if that's a possibility, the issue needs to be addressed.

So there are some serious questions here; obviously, any restructuring this dramatic is going to require some thought. But it does deserve that thought, and we hope the plan gets a full airing.

The reaction of state Rep. Willis Bullard, whose district includes a large chunk of the Northville School District, appears to be typical of many in state government; he has already written off the proposal. He called it "politically impossible," and criticized it for what it doesn't plan to do: "This is a revenue-neutral tax shift. We need a tax cut."

Bullard sits on the House Taxation Committee, and with all due respect, we haven't seen him come up with any better ideas. A tax cut is surely desirable; whether it's feasible is open to debate. In the meantime, this plan at least offers a way to drastically reduce the oppressive property taxes in Northville and around Michigan; that alone makes it worth a serious look.

Yes, there are some questions here, and probably some flaws. They do not necessarily mean, however, that this new plan can't be fixed. Right now it seems like the best hope going, and we think it deserves a chance.

Business not a perfect model

"They oughta run government like a business. Then we wouldn't have such a mess in the capital."

"We need business people in there running government, not a bunch of politicians."

And so it goes — inexpensive advice to voters and administrators about how business is run so well and government so poorly.

Well, as Bill Clinton gets set to run the federal executive branch, as John Engler ponders improving his show in Lansing, and as Dennis Archer prepares to take over Detroit, they will have plenty of experienced business executives to pick from. Consider:

- Ames Department Stores is shutting stores and dropping people right and left, and soon the bigwigs will fall. Ames catered to middle-American small towns like Howell and Chelsea. Its stock was going great guns until a couple of years ago when it absorbed Zayre's and a bunch of debt. It is now going through bankruptcy, and my information is that it will never emerge.
- Cable TV companies have people experienced in raising revenues. Our school districts are always running tax-increase campaigns, and some natural resources devotees want to raise the sales tax a penny for Michigan state parks. Cable people have been jacking up their rates 10 to 15 percent a year for a decade — and getting away with it. They seem to do it in February, after a January campaign to sign up subscribers.
- Ameritech companies, such as Michigan Bell and Bell South, could teach Clinton how to get along with Congress. They had lobbyists swarming over Michigan's delegates to both the Democratic and Republican national conventions. I couldn't understand how Ma Bell could afford so many slick, blue-suited guys hanging around mere convention delegates, or how Bell South could set up a hospitality lounge to feed literally hundreds of the press corps. And ask your friendly state legislator how many Bell lobbyists swarmed over him during the 1991 Telecommunications Act debate. Bell seems to need a 3-1 advantage over every other company in fielding lobbyists. Maybe government should be run like that.
- Then we have General Motors, eliminating double-digit numbers of plants, attritioning tens of thousands of blue-collar and white-collar workers, including the chairman of the board. Some of them ought to be available to help run government the way they ran GM.
- Engler might want to lure Tom Monaghan out of the pizza business to run the state parks: Display gaudy lights to attract humans and spook the deer. Dredge out that bay on Drummond Island. Great prayer breakfasts at the nature centers.

The point is that government and business are different.

Government can raise taxes through the force of law. Business isn't quite so powerful, although the cable and telecommunications companies are headed in that direction.

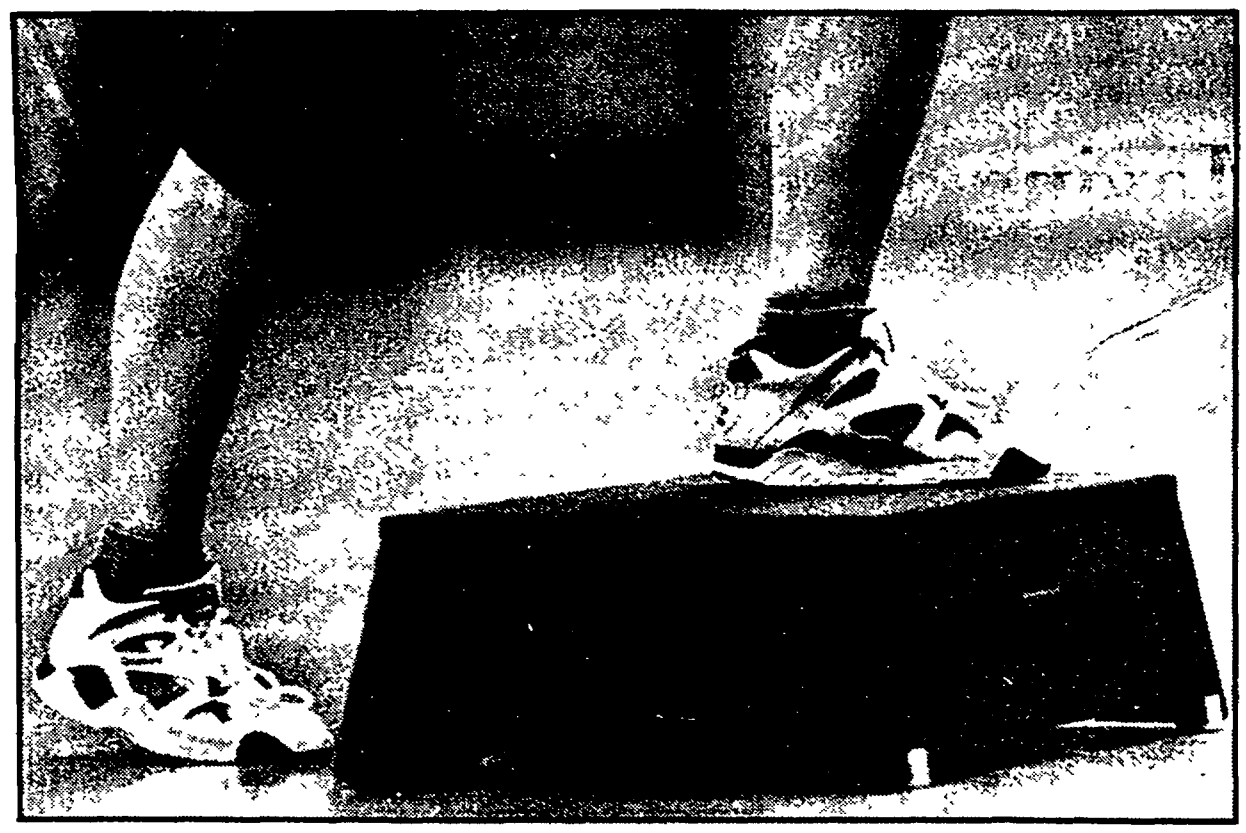

Government can't abandon entire cities and states, the way GM abandoned Pontiac and Flint and the way Shakespeare abandoned first Kalamazoo and then Arkansas to make fishing tackle in Asia.

Government doesn't do takeovers any more the way Bond Holding took over Heileman Brewing. Government learned its lesson from Hitler's and Stalin's expansions. Companies that borrowed heavily in the '80s to acquire other companies are in worse trouble than many governments.

A federal G-15 worker wouldn't have the audacity to say he should step in and run a major corporation. Why, then, do business people have the arrogance to think they can run government without a lick of training or experience?

Giving thanks in Michigan

"Dear Lord, thank You for our food, our friends and our family. . ."

This is the beginning of the grace my 10-year-old son Nathan says when it's his turn to give thanks at the beginning of a meal.

Nathan's grace keeps coming to mind this week as we celebrate that uniquely American holiday, Thanksgiving.

Lurking behind the surface artifacts — the turkey cutouts brought home from school or the ceaseless recipes for the undigestible prepared from the inedible — Thanksgiving is an American secular ceremony driven by a profoundly religious instinct.

It is a secular holiday because it requires no particular doctrine or liturgy. It can be shared equally by every member of the patchwork quilt of race and religion that make up America. Celebrating Thanksgiving is not exclusively for Christians or followers of Islam, not just for whites or blacks.

I think this is so because pausing to give thanks is a profound instinct at the core of every religion I know of.

All of us who live in Michigan have much to be thankful for.

For our food — The cherries of Traverse City. The sweet corn from around Lansing. The melons from Howell. The fresh strawberries and raspberries from the U-pick farms on the flat land of Wayne County. The trout from the streams of the Upper Peninsula.

And the deer, urban and rural, whose hunt is a special holiday of its own in Michigan, nearly as widespread as Thanksgiving.

For our friends — Michigan is a friendly place, spread out enough to provide the spice of diversity. We're not as uppity and class-conscious as the East Coast, yet not as nutty and fashion-driven as the West.

In Washington, they used to joke about "Michigan chic" when Gerry Ford was president. But I'll bet most of the country wishes deep down it was the kind of Midwestern, down home, friendly place Michigan is.

For our family — The heaviest travel period of the year is Thanksgiving. More than any other time, Thanksgiving is when spread-out families gather together to share the bounty of our land and give thanks. For most people, family is the most deeply felt value, going far, far beyond the tarnished phrase "family values."

My own mother died exactly one year ago, and her fresh memory still brings a lump to my throat. I will say a special prayer of Thanksgiving this Thursday. I suspect I will not be alone.

Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow. Praise Him, all creatures here below. . ."

Article was unfair to nurses

To the editor:

Your story "Confusion surrounds licensing" published in Nov. 19th's Northville Record angered the members of our association as well as many practicing professional nurses. It contained many half truths and inaccuracies and completely ignored the prerequisite educational base and skills that a licensed registered nurse brings to any new field he/she may enter. The article refers to also slurred the medical practice of plastic surgeons and dermatologists who also "beautify" the faces of clients without necessarily "correcting" any features.

The hasty manner in which Mr. Kellman collected and interpreted his data as well as the abrupt attitude he showed Ms. Ann Marie Carlan RN, BSN in her attempts to correct his information prior to publication are a prime example of poor investigative methods and questionable journalistic ethics. Especially in view of the fact that he received a phone call from Dr. George P. Walker M.D. associated with the Dermouflage Institute in Gadsden, Ala., who told Mr. Kellman that he had misinformation from cosmetologist Tamara Friedman regarding the issue of licensing. When Mr. Kellman received that information it was his responsibility to investigate further and wait for some clearance of the issue through the Attorney General's office before printing a story that may have caused damages to a new business person . . . a registered nurse who had just signed a three month advertising contract with your newspaper. A bit unethical on the newspaper's part, don't you think?

Our group is actively involved in the process of clarifying the various articles of legislation relating to our specific area of practice relating to micropigmentation implantation techniques. As nurses we are committed first and foremost to the safety of our clients. By the way, the person that Mr. Kellman referred to in his article as a nationally known cosmetologist is an internationally known registered nurse named Annette Walker who will be flying to Detroit Metro on Friday, Nov. 20. I am sure that you would find her commentary about this situation interesting.

Patti Wooldridge
RN, BSN, CDT
Michigan Association of Clinical Dermatechnologists

Editor's note: Information on licensing came not from Tamara Friedman, but rather from the Michigan Bureau of Licensing and Regulation and George Walker. The licensing bureau's position is based on an attorney general's opinion. Decisions on news coverage at this paper are made independent of any advertising considerations; we believe that to act otherwise would be unethical.

Where is the good service?

To the editor:

Every Monday I read with amusement the "Chef Mary Brady" free advertisements. After visiting her restaurant many times it is hard to believe I've been in the same restaurant she is talking about in her "advertisement."

The "customer service" and the friendly staff she talks about are both something I've never seen on any visit. After watching the chef walk around the restaurant completely ignoring customers and after being belittled when asking questions of the staff, I find it hard to believe this is a customer friendly atmosphere. No one I know who has eaten there has been treated any differently.

It is really a shame because the food is very good. There are so few good restaurants in the area it would be nice to have someplace that welcomed its customers and treated us as customers along with having good food.

Gary A. Vetter

Better care is truly the issue

To the editor:

I am an attorney and have represented Mr. Jeffrey Adams in the past. I have read Mr. Buckshaw's account of his trauma, but we will never see in print Mr. Adams' side of the story.

I write to share my perceptions of Mr. Adams with you. Mr. Adams has a mental illness which he is not able to manage on the limited outpatient psychiatric care available to him. He comes from a loving family but who incidentally have limited resources. I recall that Mr. Adams has no driver's license and does not know how to drive. When he is hospitalized he feels caged, fearful, misses his family and is unable to control his urge to return to his familiar setting.

Our mental health system has not been able to offer Mr. Adams care in his neighborhood which would resolve the problem of his being a walkaway.

Now I ask Mr. Buckshaw, weren't you able to choose your residence? Didn't you know Northville Regional was a psychiatric hospital when you chose your residence? Didn't you choose to leave your keys in your unattended, unlocked car? Is it good citizenship to create temptation for others? Why is your misfortune all Mr. Adams' fault?

Is Mr. Buckshaw working to get better outpatient mental health care for people like Mr. Adams so they can be managed at home and not require hospitalization? Why does Mr. Buckshaw want to use tax dollars to build higher, ugly and ineffective fences?

Building higher fences will not solve the problems. Supporting administrations and tax programs that provide for better mental health care programs and personnel will aid in resolving some of Mr. Buckshaw's concerns.

Carolyn A. Blanchard

Keep Ford plant site as industrial

To the editor:

With respect to the sale of the old Ford plant site in downtown Northville, please keep this area for light manufacturing for the following reasons. Northville schools needs manufacturing for its tax base. In a predominantly bedroom community we cannot stand to lose one more taxable cornerstone. Secondly, site cleanup for residential construction would be very costly as it generally must meet stricter guidelines.

Let's keep the library in the center of town with a parking deck underneath as a foundation; therefore, a supporting sturcture could be combined. Also, there is a greater likelihood that if this were proposed to the voters it would pass, as most people in the community would be very pleased to have a new library. A greater return to the community can be realized through this combination.

The last thing this city needs is more unoccupied office space. I vote for light manufacturing; let's raise up the tax structure. With perhaps enough manufacturing business in the community the future tax burden of homeonwers would be lessened. Let's look at what Novi has done; I think we could learn from their city planners. Besides, this country needs more manufacturing jobs, not service ones.

Moving on, but not leaving

Walking down Randolph Street on a cold Sunday evening a few weeks ago, I noticed a boy playing alone in a small front yard.

The boy, 10 or 11 years old, tossed a football into the air and ran under it, catching the ball and dodging a couple of would-be tacklers before trotting into his imaginary end zone.

I felt a little sorry for the kid, solitary, charging around the darkened yard, his breath a rhythmic cloud of steam in the chill evening air, while trees shed their last brown leaves.

The boy continued to play and as I neared, I saw he wore a triumphant grin. No melancholy there. Just the sheer joy and energy of youth, strapped not by barriers or pitfalls, lies or painful truths.

He was quite happy to be there, twisting and weaving from the pursuers to his inevitable, glorious reward.

For more than a moment, I wished to wear his shoes.

I moved to Northville a little more than three years ago and took a position with a small community newspaper. I envisioned a short stay here — just another side road in a long and oft-frustrating search for something I really couldn't define.

I'd write some stories and move on, anonymity intact. After all, I thought this town a bit pretentious, its citizenry far-removed from most economic hardship and too wrapped up in its big homes and expensive cars.

For a while, I was able to maintain a certain detachment, and cranked out hundreds of Planning Commission, Township Board, and petty-crime articles. But there was something bubbling just beneath the surface, and the closer I looked, the more I chafed.

Most evident was an alarming degree of arrogance on the part of some of the township's elected officials. That was obvious from the start — a board full of pontificating, self-righteous politicians, I thought. But as I watched them, and learned their ways, I began to realize the arrogance was but a cover for something else.

In many ways, these people didn't have a clue about what was going on. I learned their mannerisms and figured out how to read them. I could always tell when one former official was lying to me because she followed the same pattern — her eyes would glaze, she'd look away, and mumble the same nonsensical, bureaucratic line.

And their schemes were so transparent. Want someone in this job? We'll plop him or her in there, though they lack basic qualifications. Got a buddy we want to slide some government cheese to? Let's run a pseudo bid process — if any at all — and dump the taxpayers' cash in the friend's lap.

And my favorite — let's let the attorneys run the show. We don't know the answers, don't particularly care to research or poll the citizenry, so we'll just funnel the dollars to the hired hands and allow them to dictate policy.

That's how it's been in Northville Township.

The politicians here — some self-serving, others dupes — can't shoulder all the blame for the financial mess that threatens to cripple township hall. The finger of responsibility also points at you and me.

Where were you residents when three better-qualified applicants were getting the shaft at last year's supervisor interview session? You weren't at township hall making board members too uneasy to pull off that scam.

You didn't attend board budget meetings when they yanked away the palliative for your gravel roads, or spent $100,000 for a balsa wood library model. And you sure as hell weren't there when seven township officials decided to obligate millions of taxpayer dollars to a sewer project that lined the pockets of their friends and political supporters.

Too often, I've also been asleep. I should have figured out blatant conflicts much sooner and reported them as such. I should have asked follow-up questions when I wasn't satisfied with put-off answers. I should have let you know much sooner how little your government cared about your tax dollars.

But we came around, and things changed. I'll never forget, though, the viciousness, slander, and lies that so easily tumbled from the mouths of these community "leaders." My favorite saying became, "All the right people hate me," but the shame of it was that those who so wished to destroy me thought nothing of tarnishing others' reputations to achieve their goal.

All along, township officials thought this newspaper would buckle under the weight of their complaints. One board member used to brag that his rambling letters to the editor "muzzled" me. Wrong.

They trooped in, huffy and arrogant, to complain to my bosses. One didn't like the fact that a sewer story tied her campaign contributions to many of the people working on the project. When we discovered that a consultant was paying township tabs in violation of normal business standards, they howled about how we obtained some damning evidence, not about why this practice was accepted.

When we reported that politicians were taking freebies from developers, they screamed that we were biased. Upon reporting that a township official accepted a pricey golf club membership — an obvious violation of the township ethics policy — she retorted that it was okay for her to have it because Sparky Anderson also had a membership.

But management at The Northville Record stood by me. From Rich and Phil to Bob and Mike, management would field the complaints, discuss the legitimacy of such, and ask about the next story. We had a mandate to report on this government, and that's exactly what we were going to do.

In the end, faced with landslide political losses and a severing from the umbilical of public dollars, some of these fine people decided to cook up a sex scandal involving me and one of the candidates for Township Board. Never mind that it hurt the candidate, her family — including four young children — and another woman I cared deeply about; they were going to take me down.

That too failed, but it's something I'll always remember. I'm leaving Northville — on my terms — for a new job and new challenges, but the foul taste of 1992 will linger. I only hope the thoughts of the many wonderful people I've met and worked with will take root as the prevailing memory.

Thank you to everyone in Northville who extended a hand, a kind word, or a slice of constructive criticism. So many people here have been a positive influence on me that I think, just maybe, it's all been worth it.

GOLDEN MEMORIES

The most vivid memories people have of the holidays are sharing them with friends and family. It's the laughter and the love that echoes from those memories that warms the heart of the lonely and the aging around the holiday season.

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

Just ask any one of the residents at Northville's Star Manor nursing home. They'll tell you their most cherished memories of the holidays: those that bring smiles to their faces, warm fuzzies to their hearts, and comfort to their souls.

Northville's 90-year-old Eunice Campbell has fond memories of past Thanksgivings when her family gathered around the table for the festive feast.

"We didn't have turkey then," she said. "Never heard of it. We always had chicken — I don't like chicken — but we always had it, and a big crock of beans. The beans were good though; I liked those."

Campbell, a resident of Star Manor, says she doesn't celebrate the holidays much any more like she used to with lavish dinners and crowds of relatives. Instead, she's content with her health and holiday visits from her daughter.

"I won't be going home. I have a daughter here, but I don't want to go there. They are having a big crowd, and I don't want to be there with my wheelchair in the way," she said.

Campbell has two daughters, but only one lives nearby. She says Virginia comes to visit and she's grateful for that.

"I'm thankful for my family, especially on the holidays because you get to see them," she said. "I'm also thankful for my friends, because you just don't have as many when you get old."

Being healthy and having a sharp mind are now what she most thankful for.

"I'm thankful that I'm just living and that I have my health and a good strong mind and memory. I'm also thankful that I've lived so long and had a good life."

With aging, Campbell said, ideals change. Before she had taken some things for granted that she doesn't anymore.

"Thanksgiving means a lot to me because there's a lot to be thankful for. I'm thankful for food and clothes and to have a home because I don't have mine anymore."

Charlotte Petrosky knows that her desires for material possesions have gone by the wayside. Nowadays her health is more important.

"I'm just thankful that I can see and hear," she said. "And everything else; I just can't walk, that's all."

Petrosky has found memories of Thanksgivings past that comfort her today.

"When I was a kid it meant a holiday from school and a special meal at noon."

She said there was no particular Thanksgiving that stuck out among the others.

"They were all the same," she said. "We had the day off from school and we a special dinner. We always had turkey roasting in the oven with stuffing and everything."

That wasn't the case at Velma Freydl's childhood home. At her house, the family all got together for guinea hen.

"Oh, it was a sweet meat. My family all got together at my mother's house, she cooked the dinner, and we always ate at noon."

Bea Grahm is also thankful for her childhood memories and for what she has today.

For 66-year-old Grahm, family holidays have always been important, and they've all been good ones. This year will be no different, even though she'll be spending them with friends at the nursing home.

"It's hard to specify any certain one because they were all good," she recalled.

One of 11 children, Grahm has especially fond memories of a full house in the country as a child. There she and her eight sisters and two brothers grew up.

"We always had turkey. But in my childhood we had roasted goose. We didn't always all live there, but we always got together for dinner... We lived in the country. I loved it then and I still do now.

"I'm thankful for my friends and my family and having a good place to stay," Grahm said. "I'm thankful for everything I have, I guess."

Stipp helps Red Cross with local blood drives

By DOROTHY NASH
Special Writer

"We take walk-ins," said Gerry Stipp, Novi City Clerk, when talking about donors during the semiannual (March and September) blood drives which she volunteer-coordinates with Red Cross at the Novi Civic Center.

Red Cross supplies the workers, 10 or 12, however many are needed, depending on whether it's a six- or 12-hour session — and Stipp arranges lunch or dinner for them.

The important thing for Stipp, however, is "to line up people to give blood," she said. "I have a list of former donors, and I sent letters to them, following up with a phone call."

Also she notifies all of the churches, "so they can put it in their bulletins." She notifies business places in town, too.

Fifty percent of the donors come without making an appointment. They might have been in before, "but they just didn't make an appointment."

Gerry Stipp writes the notifying letters herself and has them printed at the City Hall. She admits she gets "help stuffing the letters — whoever I can latch onto."

How did she get into this volunteering? About 10 years ago, she said, before she learned how to say no, Red Cross contacted the city manager about it, and "he came in to see me."

And she's been with it ever since because, she says, "I think giving blood is important." And she gives, too.

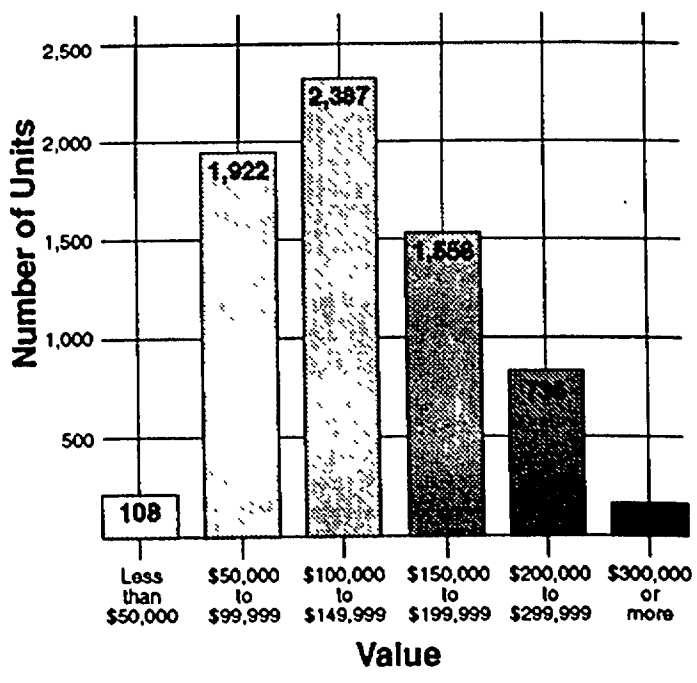

As to how the blood business is, Stipp said, in the last two drives the Red Cross drew 195 pints. The amount is down, she added.

"At first we had twice as many give blood. Now people are sometimes afraid of the AIDS scare — but there's no way you can get AIDS from giving blood."

Members of Northville High School's Class of 1962 held their 20th reunion Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Country Epicure restaurant in Novi.

Those in attendance were from all over the country — as far as California, Florida, Pennsylvania, Colorado, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois — and from all parts of Michigan. Forty-three members of the class were in attendance, along with seven teachers.

The evening began with class members locating their name tags with their senior pictures attached, and an ice-breaking session. A memory table, prepared by the reunion committee, helped bring to mind events of the past. A class picture was taken, followed by a buffet dinner. Music from the '50s and '60s was provided by a local disc jockey for dinning and dancing.

A book filled with memory sheets that told the best and the worst high school memories and what class members are doing now was handed out to each class member and teacher who attended. Also, attendees were given a composite picture of the class's 1962 reunion that was included in their books. Class representatives say everybody had a good time, and they are all looking forward to another reunion in 5 or 10 years.

Northville Woman's Club

Weldon Petz, a collector of Santa Claus lore, will speak Friday, Dec. 4, at 1:30 p.m. at the Northville Woman's Club meeting in the First Presbyterian Church.

Petz and his wife have collected more than 1,100 pieces of Santa material, which are mostly German items from the 1880-1900 period.

Using slides and figurines, Petz will talk on the evolution of Santa from the Rev. Bishop of Myra (St. Nicholas 270 A.D.) to the present-day version.

Petz is known as a historian specializing in Abraham Lincoln. He is a fourth-generation native Detroiter and was a teacher and administrator in the Detroit and Farmington public schools until his retirement in 1984.

For his master's degree in musicology, Petz combined that field with his interests in Abraham Lincoln to produce a thesis entitled "Music and Abraham Lincoln."

Christmas Luncheon

The Northville Branch of the Woman's National Farm & Garden Association is holding its annual Christmas luncheon on Dec. 10. Reservations for the luncheon must be made by Nov. 29 with Shirley Lipa at 348-2618.

Marquis brings Pinocchio to life

Northville's Marquis Theatre is in the business of making dreams come true this season. The historic theater will bring Walt Disney's classic puppet Pinocchio to life for the holiday season.

The show kicks off Nov. 28 and will run through Jan. 3. Tickets are $6.50 and can be obtained by telephone with a Visa or MasterCard at 349-8110, or at the theater's box office, 135 E. Main St.

Local artist show her works

Award-winning watercolorist Caroline Dunphy recently returned from her third painting trip to Europe this year. All three trips were in preparation for her one person show which will be held Dec. 7-19 at her gallery, the Painter's Place, 140 N. Center St.

Dunphy will be featuring watercolor impressions of her trips to Europe as well her three visits to Monet's home and gardens at Giverny, France. Her paintings include country scenes, views of people in everyday activities and many of Monet's gardens. There will also be scenes of Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and France.

Business women's group head to convention in D.C.

By CRISTINA FERRIER
Staff Writer

Five members of the Northville-Novi chapter of American Business Women's Association (ABWA) attended the organization's national convention in Washington, D.C. Oct. 28-Nov. 1.

The convention provided an opportunity for learning, networking, inspiration and just plain fun.

In fact, ABWA Chapter President Betty Booher said, one of the most exciting things about attending this convention was receiving an invitation to attend next year's convention in Indianapolis, too.

"We are definitely planning to go," Booher said.

Highlights of the Washington event included attending the convention's opening session to hear keynote speaker Helen Thomas. Thomas, who as chief of the United Press International (UPI) White House Bureau has reported on the comings and goings of seven presidents, titled her speech "Yes, Mr. President."

Booher's personal favorite of the week was Washington D.C. Mayor Sharon Pratt-Kelly's address to the convention goers.

"She gave an excellent speech," she said. "She is just such a powerful, knowledgeable woman."

Also included in the convention were a number of seminars designed to aid in the lives of women professionals.

"I went to one on procrastination," Booher said. "There were some very good suggestions. Not just the usual 'handle each paper only one time' advice, but many other ideas. Most of them were suggestions for better organization."

Of course, that seminar led to another one on avoiding and conquering clutter.

"They gave more suggestions on how to organize things," she said. "They showed us a lot of inexpensive items you can buy to use to make life more organized, both at work and at home."

A dinner Saturday night was followed by a performance by The Fifth Dimension.

"They were wonderful," Booher said. Among the songs the Grammy-winning group performed were "Up, Up and Away," "One Less Bell to Answer," "Wedding Bell Blues," "Never My Love," "MacArthur Park," and "Aquarius/Let the Sunshine In."

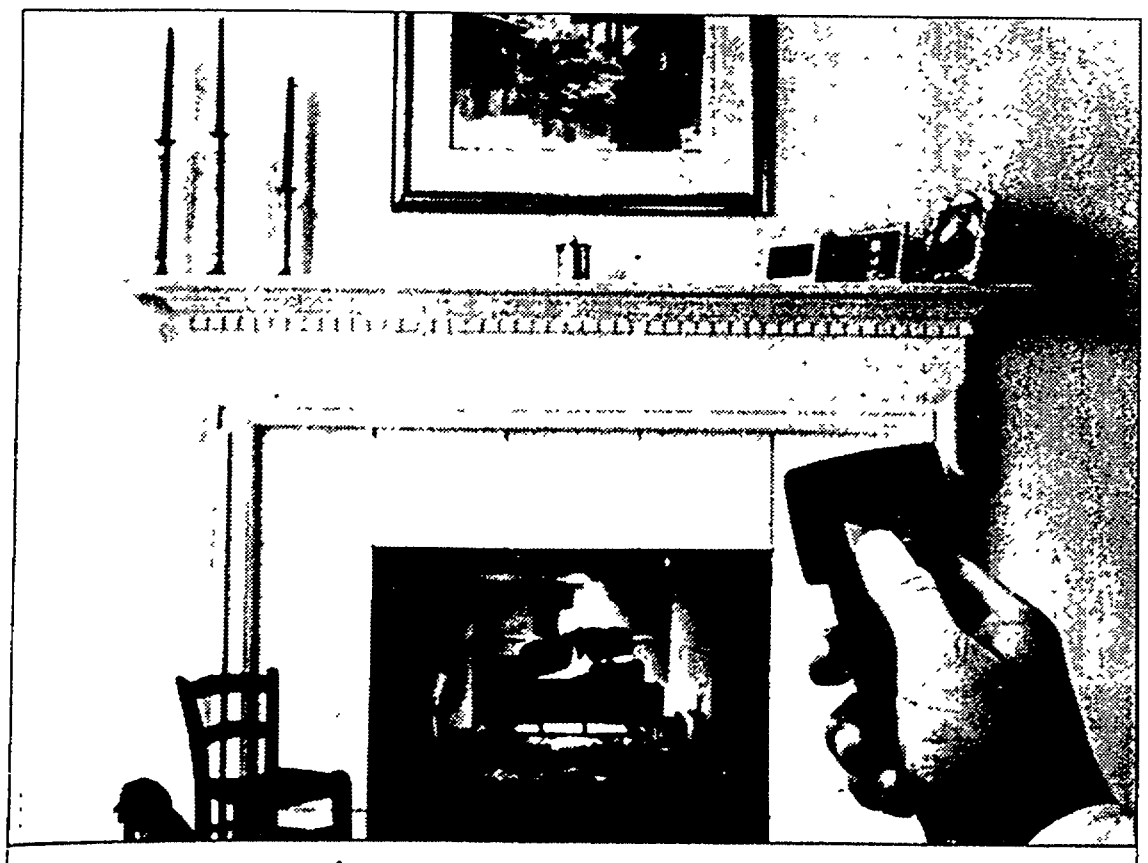

Other members of the Northville-Novi chapter who attended the seminar included 25-year-member Bettie Johnson, Chapter Woman of the Year Cynthia McKissack, Loretta Ross and Marcia Rayner-Dahlgren.

"All of the women were very friendly," Booher said. "We met people from California, Oregon, Indiana — just about everywhere."

ABWA is an organization for all working women. Anyone interested in joining the Northville-Novi chapter should contact Bettie Johnson at 478-5048.

Wedding

Michele & Alan Taylor

College sweethearts make home in Illinois

Michele Lee Cooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Cooney of East Lansing; and Alan Taylor Griffith, son of Robert and Valerie Griffith of Northville, were married on Sept. 5.

The double-ring ceremony at St. Thomas Aquinas Church in East Lansing was officiated by the Rev. Bernard Tyler. It included the lighting of the unity candle.

The bride wore a BiiJoy gown of white satin trimmed with pearls and sequins with long sleeves and a scalloped hemline. Her flowers were a white cascade bouquet with bridal white roses, stephanotis, gardenias, daises and trimmed with ivy. She carried a piece of cloth from her grandmother's bridal gown hidden in her bouquet.

Lori Babigian, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Lynn Michelsen, sister of the bride; Kathleen Perry, Kristen Ehmstrom, Bridget D'Angelo, college friends; and Anne Griffith, sister of the groom. They wore two-piece raspberry silk shantique suits by Alfred Angelo and carried slim cascade bouquets with lilies, roses and carnations trimmed with ivy.

Jay Griffith, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Michael Cooney, twin brother of the bride; James Cooney, brother of the bride; Todd Jones and Stephen Harris, college friends of the groom; and Brian Crum, scouting friend of the groom.

The reception was for 150 guests held at the Country Club of Lansing. The couple honeymooned in Florida.

The bride and groom met at Michigan State University and both graduated in 1990. She's a buyer at Motorola in Schaumburg, Ill., and he's a prime mill scheduler at Packaging Corp. in Evanston, Ill. He's a 1985 graduate of Northville High School. Their home is in Arlington Heights, Ill.

PTA News/Elementary Schools

AMERMAN ELEMENTARY

The November PTA meeting at Amerman was well attended with over 50 parents while we elected our new PTA Treasurer, Beth Troost. Congratulations, Beth, we appreciate your volunteer efforts! As you may recall, she is also our Junior Enrichment Series (JES) Chairperson.

Several disbursements were realized thanks to the Sally Foster Gift Wrap sales. These included monies given to the JES Series, teacher stipends, purchase of a National Reading Styles package and books for our parent library. Again, thank you for supporting our PTA.

Terri Tripp will oversee the "Childwatch" program formerly "Helping Hands." Information will be forthcoming soon. Please direct any questions to her at 348-5148.

Teachers were surprised to see a spider web with donut holes upon an orange tablecloth with more donuts and cider as the PTA treat for Halloween. Teacher representative Mr. Lightfoot expressed thanks from the staff.

Our November JES program was "The Monster That Ate Your Garden" by the Mask Puppet Theater. The students learned to make simple puppets and this program was especially liked by all grades.

Last Saturday, Nov. 21, was Amerman's annual Pancake Breakfast and Holiday Shop. Connie and Perry Roberts and Tom and Kim Voytal organized a delicious breakfast for quite a crowd this year. Many were lined up to join in the fun. While parents took their time, children were able to shop for the important people on their lists and even say hello to Santa Claus. A big thank-you goes to fourth- and fifth-grade Girl Scout Troop No. 2076 for wrapping gifts. And thank you, Vicky Snearly, for chairing this event. We appreciate your experience to make this event such a successful one.

Special thanks to all the many volunteers who donated so much time and effort to all these events. Much gratitude goes to eight teachers and Mr. Anderson for working the Holiday Shop. Mrs. Krictzs, Mrs. Wineman, Mrs. Frayne, Mrs. Mallette, Mrs. Oliverio, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Colligan and Mr. Lightfoot. The PTA sincerely appreciates the time they spent on Saturday morning to volunteer. This is one more reason why Amerman teachers are so special to us.

Amerman's annual Holiday Music Program orchestrateed by Mrs. Jarvi and performed by students from the classes of Mrs. Anderson, Mr. Babich, Mr. Bergin, Mrs. Thompson, and Glee Club members from Mrs. Holmberg, Mr. Lightfoot, Mr. Wickens, Mrs. Fountain and Mrs. Schmelter will be on Thursday Dec. 3 at 7 p.m.

On Wednesday, Dec. 23, Amerman students will listen to the beautiful sounds of Christmas when the Northville High School Choir goes strolling through the halls beginning at 2:45 p.m. Everyone is welcome to share in this tradition brought to us by PTA's Junior Enrichment Series for December.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving. Our children, teachers and parents have a lot to be thankful for. The PTA is very grateful for everyone's support. See you at the next PTA meeting on Dec. 1 at 9:30 a.m. in the library.

SILVER SPRINGS

It was great to see so many new faces at the Silver Spirngs November PTA meeting, the first of two evening PTA meetings.

Diane DeVincent, chairperson of the membership committee, reported that Silver Springs' PTA currently has 225 members, which is far below our goal of 361. Please, if you have not yet joined the PTA, please call Diane at 344-8950 to do so.

Principal Ken Pawlowski reported that McDonald's, our Partner in Education, is giving Silver Springs students an opportunity to eat a McDonald's lunch at school each month in addition to the Student of the Month breakfasts that McDonald's also sponsors.

Three members of Northville Public Schools 1992-93 Strategic Planning Team, Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski, Silver Springs teacher Chris Modrack, and Northville resident Peter Maise, discussed the strategies and critical issues formulated by the team at our November meeting. Anyone interested in volunteering to serve on a Strategic Action Planning Committee should contact the Northville Board of Education office.

Roni McCrumb reported that Silver Springs' Campbell's soup label goal is 30,000 this year. A chart will be posted in the school showing the weekly progress being made toward attaining our goal.

Leslie Bazini reported that this year's Morley Candy fundraiser yielded Silver Springs a profit of $9,000, down from last year. Winners of the fundraiser pizza parties are Mrs. Thomas' class for the highest amount of sales, lower elementary; Mrs. Curvin's class for the highest amount of sales, upper elementary; Mrs. Heist's class for the most participation, lower elementary; and Mrs. Wall's class for the most participation, upper elementary. Raffle winners are Heather Gillespie, fifth grade; Daniel Gladden, fourth grade; Katie Banks, third grade; Peter Ansara, second grade; Carlin Peterson, first grade; and Alison Hedke, kindergarten.

Mimi Salamat, chairperson of the Health and Science Committee reported that a workshop on nutrition is being held in the Northville High School Library on Jan. 14, 28 and Feb. 11. Anyone interested in the workshop should contact Yvonne Stephens, Northville Food Service Director at the high school. Silver Springs is interested in training and or updating its teachers on the use of CPR. More information should be forthcoming.

Silver Springs newly formed committee to revise the Holiday Shop has decided to implement the following changes. Students will leave their classrooms in groups of 8-10 to shop instead of by whole classes. Purchases will be bagged in decorated bags instead of being gift wrapped. Each child will be limited to six bags. A list of the items that will be available for purchase will be sent home with Silver Springs students on Dec. 7 and shopping will take place on Dec. 15, 16, and 17.

As part of the Junior Enrichment Series, students enjoyed a presentation fo "Mr. More's Wizard's Supermarket Science," on Wednesday, Nov. 19. Our next JES event will feature the Northville High School Choir caroling in the hallways of Silver Springs on Dec. 22 at 2:45 p.m.

All PTA committee chairpersons are urged to submit articles. "Want Ads" may now be submitted to the Spirit for a nominal fee. Call editor Peggy Quick at 348-6436 for more information.

A fun-filled time was had by all those who attended Silver Springs' Roller Skating Party on Sunday, Oct. 25. Mr. Pawlowski is seeking a parent to act as a liaison between the Student Council and the PTA. Please contact him if you can help out.

In scouting news, Roni McCrumb reported that Boy Scout Pack 712 will be creating a giant holiday greeting card with Christmas stockings for Star Manor residents. Pack 712 will meet on Nov. 24 or Dec. 22. Silver Springs' Girl Scout cluster will take place in Christmas caroling at the Northville Christmas tree lighting on Nov. 27. The Girl Scouts are planning to dress toy bears to give to children of prisoners for the holidays.

Northville will be participating in the Michigan Child Watch program which will ensure that all children will be safe walking and playing on our streets. Look for more information in the weeks to come.

Some upcoming dates to remember are: Dec. 2, which will be a half-day of school for teacher in-service; and Dec. 10, the second and fifth graders will perform in the holiday musical at 7 p.m.

Our caring students at Silver Springs collected $450 on Halloween trick-or-treating for UNICEF. Way to go!

WINCHESTER ELEMENTARY

The Winchester PTA would like to express our appreciation to those people who participated in our Sally Foster Fund Raiser. It was a great success again this year. A special thank you goes to Donna Samhat and Lori Dow for all of the work they did on this project.

Through JES, our students were able to see a wonderful program in November called Snakes Alive. In December JES will present "A Gift of Song And Joy." The Northville High School Choir wil be caroling in the halls on Monday, Dec. 21, after 2:30 p.m. You are welcome to come and listen to the wonderful music.

We have kicked off our Junior Great Books Program with students and adults visiting classrooms to inform the students about the program. We then had the interested students sign up so we could be sure that we received the books on time. We had 111 students sign up so now we are in need of more adult volunteers. The theme this year for Junior Great Books is "Follow the Road to Reading with Junior Great Books."

Our next fund raiser will be the Pancake Breakfast/Santa's Secret Store. This will be held on Saturday, Dec. 5, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The prices are $3 and $4.50 with sausage. This is all you can eat and the public is welcome.

Our next PTA meeting will be Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 9:30 a.m. in the Rondelle. Babysitting is available for $2 per child.

On Friday the Woman's Club got a few decorating pointers from Julie Pfeffer of The Final Touch. The Woman's Club is selling mugs like these to commemorate its 100th anniversary.

Commemorative mugs make great Christmas gift ideas

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

The Northville Woman's Club met last Friday to get the latest tips on wall finishes.

With the help of Julie Pfeffer from The Final Touch, club members learned about new ideas and the latest trends in interior decorating with wall coverings and finishes. Pfeffer demonstrated rag rolling, combing and sponge painting techniques.

It was a guest day for the club, so members could bring a friend or relative with them to learn the latest decorating tips.

Club members say sales of their commemorative mugs, which were designed to mark their 100th-year anniversary, are still going strong. The mugs — which display the official club flower, the pansy, on one side, and the 100-year logo on the other — make great gift-giving ideas. They are still available through club members.

Greens Mart helps spruce up downtown

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

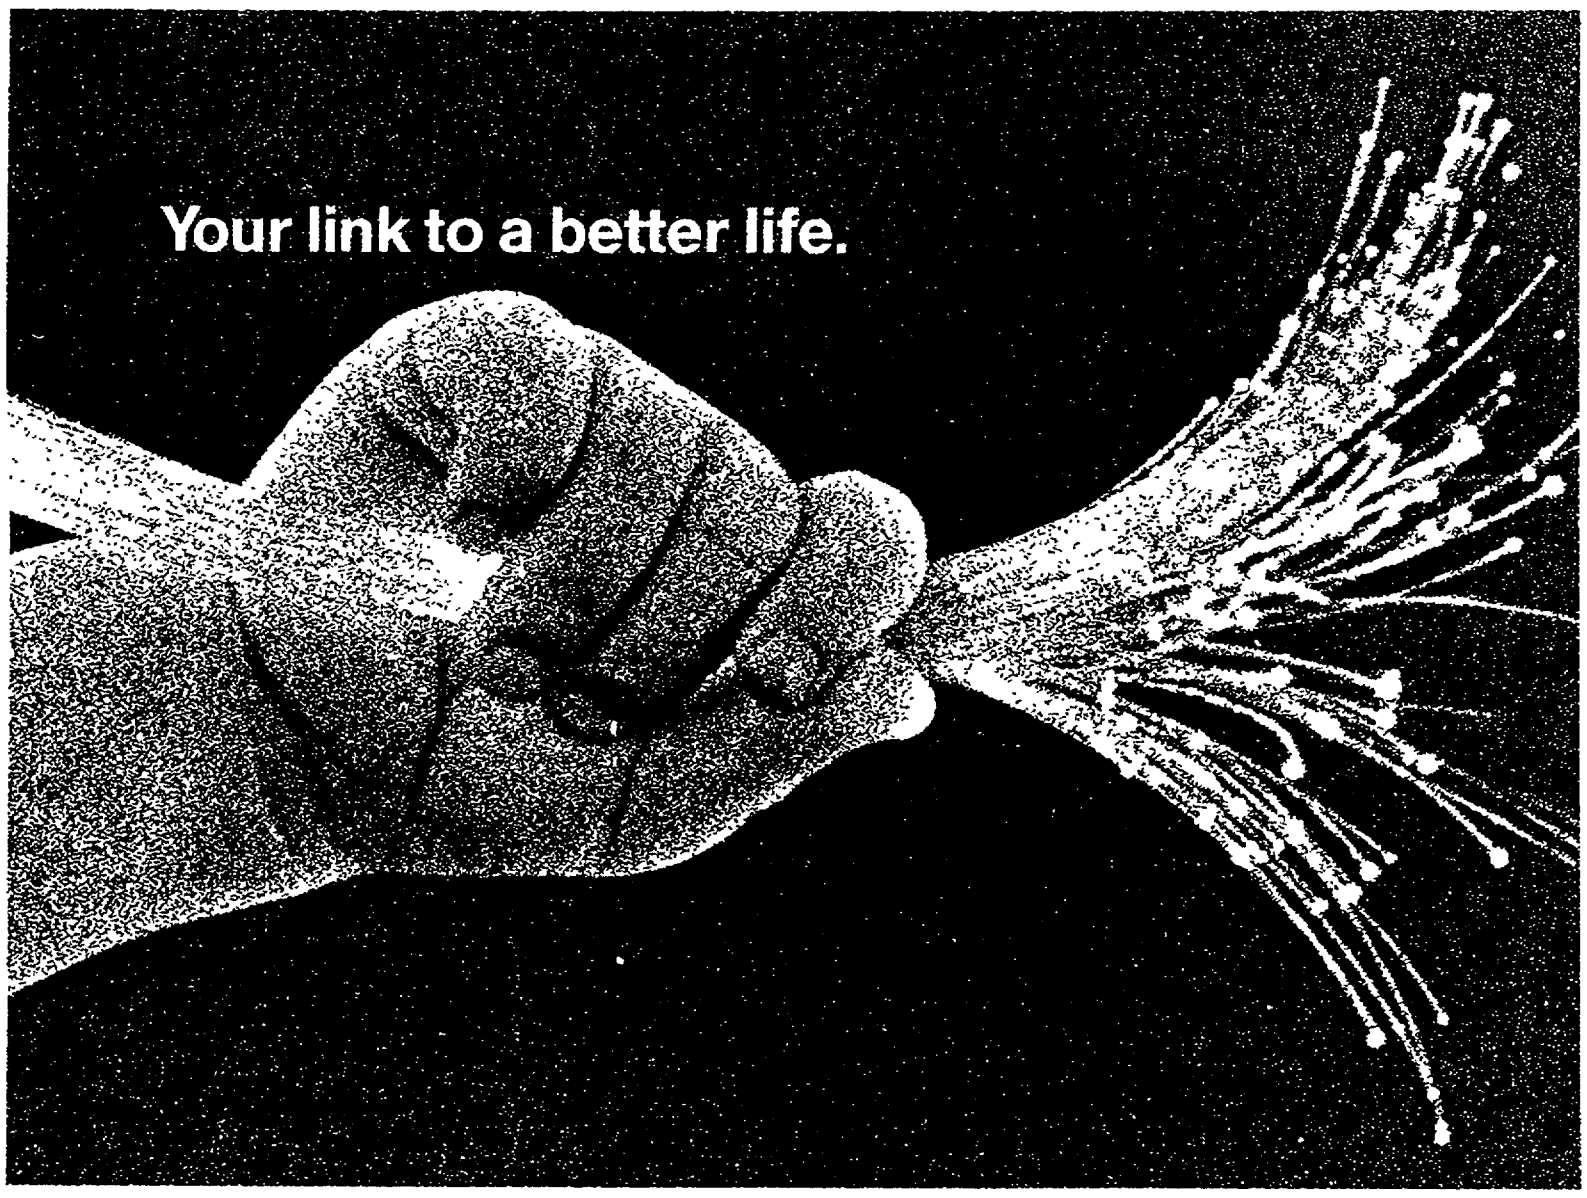

The Northville Branch of the Woman's National Farm & Garden Association was back on the streets again this year pushing its holiday greens.

Each year the garden club takes orders for the holiday wreaths and sells them at the annual Christmas Walk. Proceeds from the successful fundraiser are used to beautify Northville. In past years proceeds from the annual sale have been used to buy bulbs, trees and landscape materials to spruce up the downtown area, Mill Race Historical Village, the fountain at Allen Terrace, and to decorate school courtyards. The club has also bought park benches for Fish Hatchery Park.

Club members — who braved chilly temperatures on Sunday to sell wreaths to Christmas Walk patrons — said the biggest benefactor of their efforts is Northville Public Schools. Each year the club awards two $1,000 scholarships to students there.

Aside from the scholarships, the club annually takes care of the landscaping at the township offices. Any other projects are subject to change, members said.

"It's really just a community effort," said club member Carol Rahimi.

Looking for splendid squares?

Brussels many attractions include magnificent architecture

By ERIC SJOGREN
New York Times Travel Syndicate

In Brussels visitors and residents alike are drawn to the Grand Place, one of Europe's splendid squares.

Dominated by the Gothic town hall with its slender belfry and surrounded by Baroque guild houses adorned with gilded statuary, it is a stately backdrop for a multitude of events, including rock concerts, folklore fairs and all kinds of processions.

The sidewalk cafes overflow with people well into the fall, and now the hunting season is bringing its harvest to the many restaurants in the area: venison, hare, pheasant, partridge and wild boar from the Ardennes.

The old Brussels patois, which mixes Flemish and French and bits of Spanish, is rarely heard anymore.

But the linguistic quarrel between Belgians speaking Flemish (known as Flemings), and Belgians speaking French (known as Walloons), again in full swing elsewhere in Belgium, is less apparent in bilingual Brussels.

SIGHTS

The Grand Sablon, off the Rue de la Regence, offers a variety of attractions, including antique dealers, galleries, fashionable restaurants, popular cafes and the best pastry shop in town, Wittamer.

Sidewalk cafes flourish here too. Rain or shine, all day Saturday and Sunday morning antiquaires and second-hand booksellers open their stalls, and on the second weekend of December there is a European Christmas market in the center of the square that sells foods, ornaments and traditional Christmas gifts from the European Community.

The area around the Sablon is home to well-to-do creative types with a penchant for down-at-the-heel chic. Farther south are the lush gardens, villas and parks of the borough of Uccle. David Van Buuren, a Dutch banker and distant relative of Martin Van Buren, lived in Uccle with his wife Alice for many years in a house completed in 1928 that became a temple to Art Deco and is now a private museum.

In the museum Raoul Dufy carpets, Japp Gidding tapestry, and cushions and furniture from the Studio Dominique in Paris combine with rosewood banisters and staircases, Lalique vases and Delft china to capture the design ideals of the '20s.

The David and Alice Van Buuren Museum is at 41 Avenue Leo Errera; it is open on Monday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. (343-4851). Admission is $3.45. It is open by appointment to groups of up to 15 from Tuesday through Sunday. Admission for a group is $51.75.

The boroughs of Uccle and Anderlecht are poles apart. It was in Anderlecht, now characterized by abattoirs, light industry, a soccer club and low-cost housing, that Erasmus settled in 1521.

His house, which has been carefully restored, is one of the world's few museums devoted to an author. A number of Erasmus' works are displayed, including "The Praise of Folly," with its dedication to Sir Thomas More.

The art collection includes works by Hieronymus Bosch, Durer, Holbein the Elder and other Erasmus contemporaries. The museum, Maison d'Erasme, 31 Rue du Chapitre, is open daily except Tuesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. (521-1383). Admission: 70 cents.

WHERE TO EAT

The many restaurants ranging from fine to superb are among the city's greatest assets, but low prices are not among their virtues.

It is best to check what fixed-price menus are available, for these can reduce the cost by half. Menus are posted outside.

It is also smart to do any serious eating at lunch, when the best deals are on offer.

Sample the freshly sauteed scallops in a light curry, wild salmon and duck liver baked together in a vine leaf, or back of turbot with bread crusts and basil. Dinner for two with wine will cost about $250.

Michel Meyers works alone in the kitchen of his eponymous chocolate-box restaurant at 18 Place du Samedi (219-2616) in the lively Fish Market area. He serves fish cooked with split-second timing; the menu changes every month.

Start with warm duck liver on toasted raisin bread and follow with a choice of fish dishes such as steamed sole with a watercress and lime juice sauce, leeks and celery mousse.

The cost is about $165 for dinner for two with a modest wine. The fixed-price three-course luncheon menu, at $35 with wine, is real value.

The $24 fixed-price menu at L'Olivier, 271 Chaussee de Charleroi (537-1033), which changes every month, offers a choice of five or six different dishes for appetizer, entree and dessert.

Dishes include a gallantine of crab, avocado and chives wrapped in smoked salmon, filet of salmon in saffron-flavored, Mediterranean fish stock; the desserts are exceptional. Wines start at $6.90 for half a liter.

Down near the Grand Place, Aux Armes de Bruxelles, 13 Rue des Bouchers (514-3381), has been run by the same family for over 70 years.

This large and lively place specializes in such typically Belgian dishes as huge helpings of steaming mussels and french fries with beer or a glass of white wine. About $40 for two for mussels only; complete dinner $70.

Boccaccio, a hole-in-the-wall Italian restaurant near the Grand Place at 14 Rue du Marche-aux-Fromages (512-2929), is run by a Moroccan and his Swedish wife. Pasta predominates, and fixed-price three-course menus range from $13.80 to $24.

You can eat well for less than $17.50 a person in such places as the Front Page (45 Rue Duquesnoy; 512-7410) and Le Faste Fou (21 Rue du Grand Cerf; 511-3832). Hamburger connoisseurs maintain that the products served at Belgium's Quick chain sometimes surpass their American models: $3.50 for a burger and fries.

WHERE TO STAY

The SAS Royal, 47 Rue du Fosse-aux-Loups (219-2828), offers a different decor on each floor. Its gourmet restaurant, the Sea Grill, is one of the best in town.

For senior citizens this hotel has pioneered a new concept. It offers weekend double-room rates discounted by as many percentage points as the age of the older partner, with no charge for centenarians. The standard double rate is $375.

The Manos Stephanie, near the Avenue Louise shopping area at 28 Chaussee de Charleroi (539-0250), was completed this year. Its 55 rooms, with rust-colored carpets and green bedspreads, are all different. Doubles from $170.

Le Dixseptieme, a stone's throw from Grand Place, has just opened at 25 Rue de la Madeleine (512-3049). It consists of three 17th-century houses around a small interior courtyard. The 17 units — suites with exposed beams and antique furniture, and modern double rooms — come with well-equipped kitchens. A double starts at $160.

Budget: The Welcome/Truite d'Argent in the Fish Market area at 5 Rue du Peuplier (219-9546) has just six rooms and they are as well-equipped as many high-priced establishments. Doubles cost from $67.25 to $90.

One block away at 51 Quai au Bois-Bruler (221-1411) is the Orion, a residential hotel where there is no minimum stay. It is modern and clean and all rooms have a well-equipped kitchenette.

Guests make their own beds; linen is changed weekly. Orion is popular with theater and dance companies. Double: $90; $135 for a two-room apartment for four.

WHAT TO BUY

A block from the Grand Place is the 150-year-old Galeries St.-Hubert, also known as the Galerie de la Reine and Galerie du Roi.

From high above the canyonlike arcade light penetrates arching skylights, and the flags of many nations projecting from poles line the entire arcade.

Two of the city's best bookshops are in the gallery. Tropismes (11 Galerie des Princes) includes a paperback section with some titles in English, and Librairie des Galeries (2 Galerie du Roi) specializes in art books. The gallery also has shops selling fancy leather goods, men's and women' fashions, gloves, modern furniture and a host of other things.

In the Manufacture Belge de Dentelle (6-8 Galerie de la Reine), a lace collar costs $60 and a tablecloth in the Rosaline pattern, $200. For serious collectors there is antique lace priced at $1,725 and more.

Next to the gallery entrance at 86 Rue du Marche-aux-Herbes is Buss, which sells a good selection of crystal from Val St.-Lambert, one of Europe's leading glass makers.

A decanter costs about $245 and vases range up to about $625. Lower-cost Val St.-Lambert crystal at Buss includes ashtrays cost from $44.80, a set of six coasters, $76.20 and small animal figures from $50.

Brussels may offer the finest chocolates in Europe. It was in a candy shop in the gallery, Neuhaus, that the Belgian praline, or soft-centered chocolate, was invented; Neuhaus is still at its original location at 25 Galerie de la Reine.

Nowadays, however, most travelers pick up their chocolates in the tax-free shop at the airport, which carries Godiva, Neuhaus and other brands. At $25 to $35 for a large box, prices are only marginally cheaper than in town, but the convenience is unbeatable.

Q&A

By WILLIAM T. TOMICKI
New York Times Travel Syndicate

Q: Where can we go for a romantic wine-country weekend in California — away from the crowds at Napa and Sonoma valleys?

A: Try the Central Coast, two hours north of Santa Barbara and about a four-hour drive from Los Angeles. In Paso Robles, the Justin Winery's 72 acres of working vineyards are a lovely setting.

Travelers can stay at the Just Inn, Justin Baldwin's bed-and-breakfast inn, which is tucked into the vineyards. Each 550-square-foot suite boasts European antiques, floor-to-ceiling marble baths, 14-foot beamed ceilings, Italian and English bed linens and frescoed ceilings.

Guests enjoy a sumptuous multi-course breakfast in their rooms and a daily carafe of Justin wine. They can snuggle up to a fireplace, roam the vineyards, stroll in an English-style garden and cycle through the countryside.

For more information contact Just Inn, 11680 Chimney Rock Road, Paso Robles, Calif. 93446 or call (805) 238-6932. Information is also available from your local travel agent.

Q: Do I need a permit to be able to take a driving vacation in Canada?

A: Actually, your American driver's license is valid in Canada. No special permit is required.

But you should know that the Canadian unit of measure for gasoline is the litre, not the gallon, and one U.S. gallon equals 3.78 litres.

Traffic signs are often in imagery comprehensible in any language; many cities' word signs are posted in English as well as other languages. But road-speed limits are posted in kilometers; so are mileage signs.

Q: Are there any hotels in Mexico City that cater to business travelers?

A: The recently opened Hotel Marquis Reforma is a small luxury hotel that accommodates business travelers.

Besides Jacuzzis, all 84 executive suites have mini-bars, personal safes, electronic door locks and two telephone lines for fax or personal-computer access.

On the first and second floors — the "Diamond Floors" — guests may have personal computers and fax machines installed in their rooms at no charge. Both these floors have corporate lounges where guests are served a continental breakfast and, later on, hors d'oeuvres with complimentary beer, white wine and soft drinks.

The hotel's business center provides bilingual secretarial services. Also available are a fitness center, a beauty salon, a barber shop and fine restaurants. The building has been specifically designed to withstand an earthquake of up to 9.0 on the Richter scale.

For further information contact the hotel at (800) 235-2387 or their representatives at (800) 223-6510.

Q: We are a group of 50 art lovers going to Dallas. Where should we stay?

A: You might like the Dallas Loews Anatole Hotel, with 1,620 rooms and a soaring lobby space full of museum-quality art and antiques.

The hotel's owner, Trammell Crow, is a major real-estate developer and art collector. Some of his fine jade carvings, Picasso paintings and Oriental sculptures are located in the breezeways, atria and parks outside the hotel.

For more information contact Loews Anatole Hotel, 2201 Stemmons Freeway or call (214) 748-1200.

Does your cruise ship pass the cleanliness test?

By GENE and ADELE MALOTT
New York Times Travel Syndicate

The cruise ship in the glossy brochure is glamorous . . . but is it clean?

In 1987, responding to a wealth of consumer complaints, the U.S. Public Health Service started a program of surprise shipboard investigations.

They sent inspectors into the cruise ships to check the cleanliness of everything from kitchens to cabins to boiler rooms.

The program has led to some positive results. Cruise ships sailing from U.S. ports are cleaner today than they were when the sanitary-inspection program began.

Even so, at least one reader wrote recently to say that the sanitary reviews are only "halfway reliable" and "the borderline ships know when to expect (a visit) and they make an extra effort to be ready."

The program may not be perfect, but the changing test scores do tell a story.

In 1988 the average sanitary score for 85 ships was 83 points out of a possible 100. This was well below the "satisfactory" score of 86.

Now the average score for active cruise ships inspected is 88.2, with 121 vessels included in the study group.

Problems have ranged from dirty cabins and leaky gaskets to flies in the potato salad, fuel in the drinking-water bunkers and "fresh" vegetables stored in passageways.

The Public Health Service now issues a "green sheet" every two weeks with test scores for all ships reviewed.

In 1988 the health-service inspectors found more than one-third of the surveyed ships — 29 of 85 visited — in unsatisfactory condition. Today only 17 of 121 ships reviewed are below standard.

Moreover, a total cleanliness score of 94 was the highest rating awarded in '88 — and for several years after that. Today, four ships have received scores of 99: the Seabourne Pride, Zenith, Crystal Harmony and Song of Flower.

Health-service examiners are required to pinpoint problems in areas of water and food preparation and storage, as well as potential contamination sources and crew cleanliness.

"The purpose of these inspections is to achieve levels of sanitation that will minimize the potential for gastrointestinal disease outbreaks . . . that is, diarrhea and other stomach problems. Such outbreaks . . . may be serious when they occur," according to a Health Service spokesman.

You bet! Three years ago 66 out of 1,104 passengers on one popular cruise ship — and 10 percent of the crew — reported attacks of diarrhea shortly after the vessel earned an unsatisfactory sanitary rating of 62.

An operator whose ship has gotten an unsatisfactory score can ask for a follow-up review in 60 days.

Why have cruise ships gotten cleaner? The oversight process and adverse publicity have both convinced the steamship companies that passengers are concerned with sanitary problems.

What's more, at least two publications regularly print the survey results. One is the Consumer Reports Travel Letter (P.O. Box 53629, Boulder, Colo. 80322-3629; $37.50 per year).

The Mature Traveler newsletter (P.O. Box 50820, Reno, Nev. 89513; $24.50 per year) also publishes ships' current sanitary scores in the August issue each year.

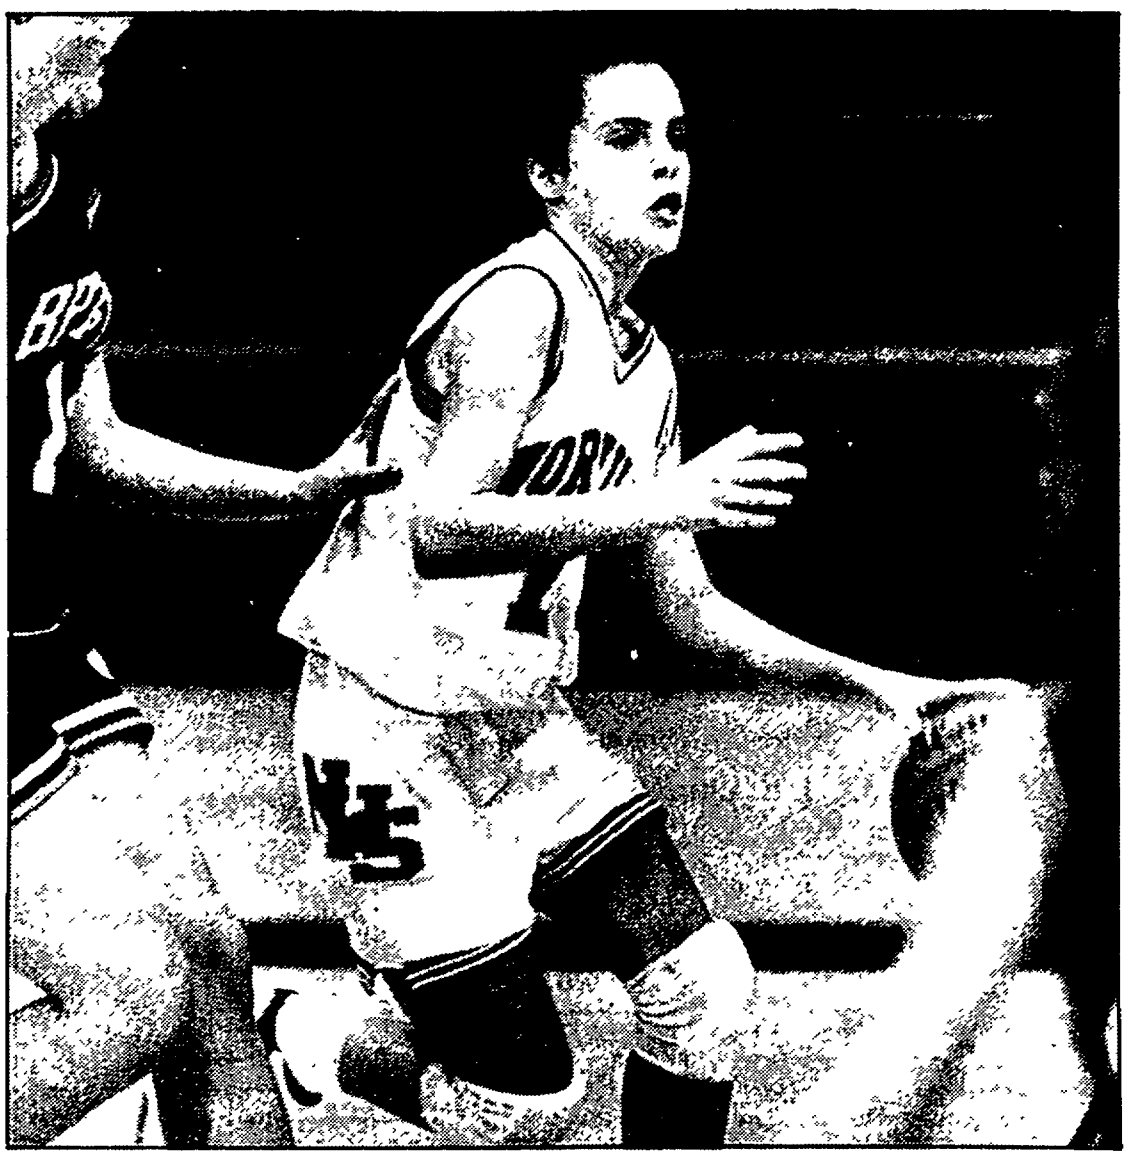

As for responsiveness, just two months after four of Princess Cruises' ships got unsatisfactory scores, they were re-inspected and passed the exams with scores well above 86.

After three years of constantly unsatisfactory scores, and two more years of marginal results, Cunard finally cleaned up its Queen Elizabeth 2 enough to achieve a near-perfect rating of 98 in a cleanliness inspection last January.

To find out whether your ship is clean ask a local travel agent for the ship's current sanitary-inspection score.

Travelers may also write for that information to Chief, Vessel Sanitation Program, Center for Environmental Health and Injury Control, 1015 North America Way, Room 107, Miami, Fla. 33132. A free detailed report of sanitary problems on specific cruise ships is also available.

Sutton, Kenny make basketball dream team

A talented blend of youth and experience, scoring and rebounding marks HomeTown Newspapers 1992 East All-Area basketball team. Two seniors, two juniors and a sophomore comprise this year's squad, which we feel would match up favorably with any area school.

Led by Player of the Year Tara Sutton, our squad can do it at both ends of the court. South Lyon's Sutton provides incredible shooting range, while Novi's Kristin Kenny is a terror around the basket. Defensively, Lakeland's Brandy Taylor provides aggressiveness and shot-blocking while Cori Sutton leads as a strong rebounder.

CHERYL SCHEIDEMAN
Milford guard

Scheideman led the Redskins to a third-place finish in the KVC, leading the team in points (9.5), rebounds (3.9) and assists (1.9). Those numbers become significant when you take into consideration the turtle pace of Milford hoops this year.

"That 9.5 points and four rebounds is somewhat impressive when you look at our game," said Milford coach Don Palmer. "We did a lot of holding the ball, so she didn't have as many chances."

An injury to guard Lisa Selter in the seventh game of the season meant Scheideman not only had to lead the offense, she had to be a defensive standout as well.

"She was assigned to the other team's best player," Palmer said. "She had to guard the Brandy Taylors (Lakeland), the Jill Kripses (Brighton), the Tara Suttons (South Lyon), and she basically won all those matchups.

"She had to lead us in scoring and guard the other team's best kid. She's a well-rounded player and had a very good senior year."

TARA SUTTON
South Lyon guard

Sutton, a senior captain, was thrust into both a leadership and a scoring role this year. After playing on a KVC championship team in 1991, Sutton had to step up and provide the bulk of the South Lyon offense.

"She had to score for us to do well," South Lyon coach Ron Shanks said. "She knew that, and everyone else did too. She still shot better than last year with all the defensive attention."

Sutton did score, averaging 12.7 points per game with a field-goal percentage of .346. Sutton's real talent lay in the long-range attack, and she led the league with 35 three-pointers this season.

The senior played point guard for much of the season, although teammate Heather Laho filled that role later in the season.

"She had less than four turnovers per game as our point guard," Shanks said. "She played good defense with less than two fouls per game and she did an all-around good job."

Sutton averaged 2.2 assists and 2.4 steals this season.

CORI SUTTON
South Lyon center

Only a sophomore, the 5-foot-11 Sutton is already giving opposing coaches nightmares about what might be in store for next year.

"She has potential as a big-time scorer," Shanks said. "She gives you a big kid inside and she knows how to use her size."

Sutton played varsity last year, although she didn't see much playing time as a freshman.

"She's come a long way from last year," Shanks said. "Right now she's on the same developmental level as some of the best post players I've had. Next year she should bump up her scoring and be a much more effective shooter."

The younger Sutton averaged 9.2 points per game this season with a .380 field goal percentage. She led the team in free-throw percentage with .610, and averaged 5.1 boards per game.

Mustangs' Hayden on second squad

This year's HomeTown Newspapers East All-Area second team actually has something our first team doesn't: more experience. Three on the second squad are seniors, while a freshman and sophomore fill out the roster.

It's a solid group which displays a pair of talented point guards in Northville star-of-the-future Nicole Hayden and Lakeland's Tracy Nepjuk. Novi's Christine Edwards and Kelley Barton add scoring, rebounding and shot blocking while Milford's Jackie LeGris is undoubtedly's our squad's hardest worker.

So without further ado, lets meet this year's second team:

NICOLE HAYDEN
Northville guard

According to coach Bob Shoemaker, the freshman point guard has the potential to be one of the best in the state. She's already tops among the Mustangs.

"Her best attribute is her emotional balance," Shoemaker said. "She's always emotionally under control, no matter what the situation on the court is."

Hayden averaged five points and three assists per game, not bad for a team that struggled to score 30 a game. Shoemaker said the freshman probably played the most minutes of any Mustang this fall.

All five Northville wins went down to the wire. Of the team's six close games, the Mustangs won five. Shoemaker said it says a lot about Hayden's leadership abilities.

"She'll only get better," he added. "With a year under her belt, I expect her to have a great sophomore season."

TRACY NEPJUK
Lakeland guard

A senior guard, Nepjuk managed to score 7.3 points per game while filling the point-guard role for Lakeland.

"Point guard is not her natural position, but she did a good job for us," said Lakeland coach Paul Gmelin. "She didn't have as much success as she would have liked this year, but she was an integral part of the team."

Nepjuk knocked home five 3-pointers on the season and pulled in 4.7 rebounds per contest. Nepjuk was erratic at times, but at her best she made Lakeland competitive.

"When she was on she was tough," Gmelin said. "She really put her heart into it. It's a tribute to her we were in our overtime game against Milford — she played a hell of a game."

JACKIE LeGRIS
Milford guard

Averaging 8.5 points per game from the guard position, LeGris was the workhorse of the Redskin squad.

"She reached her potential," said Milford coach Don Palmer. "She pushed her potential as far as it can go, I can't say enough about her."

The 5-foot-4 LeGris was not blessed with height or blazing speed, but succeeded on the courts by desire and work ethic alone.

"She overcame a lot of physical negatives," Palmer said. "She's as competitive as any kid I've ever had. She has great respect around the league."

LeGris worked the Milford offense, using intelligence and the experience gained as a three-year varsity player to control the slow-down Redskin game.

"She did the bulk of our ball handling," Palmer said. "Yet she had less than three turnovers per game, and that's with people doubling up on her because they knew she ran the offense."

CHRISTINE EDWARDS
Novi forward

With the confidence and all-around ability Edwards showed this fall, it was easy to forget that she's just a sophomore. She led the Wildcats in three-pointers and was second in scoring at 9.7 points per game.

According to coach John Hoffman, it was no mistake that Edwards had an excellent 1992 season.

"She's one of the hardest workers on our team," he said.

The coach said he changed Edwards shooting style early in the season. The sophomore spent many days after practice working on that new form.

"She has a great attitude," Hoffman said. "In the next few years she will make a big impact on our team and the teams we play against. She will be very good."

KELLEY BARTON
Novi center

Perhaps Novi's best natural athlete, Barton turned in a solid year for the Wildcats. She led Novi in blocked shots with 20 and rebounding at 7.3 per game, while contributing 7.4 points a contest.

"She definitely helped us," Hoffman said.

Golfers can practice sand shots at GGA — year-round.

Golfers' off-season eliminated by indoor training facility

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

For golfers tired of letting those putting, driving and chipping skills atrophy every winter, a new Northville business may just be what the doctor ordered.

Great Golf of America Indoor Training Center, located at 42277 W. Seven Mile Road, opened its doors last June with the idea of giving players an opportunity to work on their entire game — year-round. More than a place to hit golf balls, the center offers state-of-the-art training equipment and professional advice.

"Where else can you play out of the sand in the winter?" asks co-owner William Smiddy. "It's a needed facility. Any other sport has training facilities; golfers don't."

Smiddy, a Livonia resident, and three friends developed the idea for the center a couple of years ago. After extensive market research and testing the concept at golf trade shows, the partners decided to move ahead.

GGA's first franchise, co-owned by Smiddy and Canton Township resident Steve Reno, became a reality last summer.

"We saw the need for a facility to utilize all the training equipment available," Smiddy said.

The 39-year-old said the company chose Northville for its first franchise because of its excellent access to local highways. Smiddy added that Northville is central to other communities, such as Novi, Farmington Hills, Plymouth and Canton, where interest in golf is high.

"It's an excellent market," he said. "Northville has a lot of golf courses."

Plans are on the board for three other franchises, each at a cost of between $100,000-$130,000 for potential owners. Farmington, Dearborn and Ann Arbor are listed as prime areas.

"The way the golf industry is exploding and people are learning the game," Smiddy says, "I don't know if we could expand too fast.

"We want to be the leaders in this industry."

The Northville center boasts about 250 members at present. Memberships may be purchased for three months ($175), six months ($225), or a year ($300). Costs for each will increase by $100 Jan. 1. Senior discounts are available.

The center has three full-contact hitting stalls. Just like the hitting range, golfers can hit a bucket of balls, albeit into a net.

Each stall is equipped with a "distance caddy" that tells how far the ball would have traveled in the air. The device, which works on sonar, allows golfers to program in the exact club they are using.

A 35-foot by 20-foot carpeted putting green can be used to work out the kinks with the short stick. The true-rolling surface features nine cups to test putting skills.

The "Swing Analyzer" shows each shot's flight path and distance via computer. A sensor in the tee tells the computer the path your club went through the hitting area, the tempo of the swing and the club speed generated.

The swing analyzer, along with a videotaped hitting session, allows GGA's staff professional to work constructively with members. Smiddy said each new member is guaranteed a 45-minute session with the pro upon join the center.

Have trouble getting out of the sand? No problem. GGA has an indoor bunker for hackers to practice to their hearts content.

The center also features a plethora of other training equipment.

A "Swing Trainer," a large, circular plastic tube, teaches golfers the perfect swing. Players run their club along the tube through the backswing and follow through, thereby aiding muscle memory, according to Reno.

Baird shines at Adrian

By SCOTT DANIEL

Not only is the 1989 Northville High graduate the Bulldogs' starting point guard this season, but she's also big sister to another Mustang alumnus. Baird, a senior, is showing '92 NHS graduate Kara McNeil the ropes of college.

"I have a tendency to take hold of the freshmen and put them under my wing," Baird said of McNeil, now her teammate.

Behind Baird, Adrian posted a 20-5 record in the 1991-'92 Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association season. The Bulldogs finished second in the seven-school conference to Alma, which went on to take a national championship.

Baird switched from shooting guard, the position she played in Northville under Ed Kritch for four years, to point guard last season. Despite the move, she averaged 9.6 points and led the MIAA in assists at 5.7 per game. Baird holds the school record for three-pointers in a season with 39.

"It's a lot of responsibility," she said of her role on the team. "I have to know where everybody is on the court every possession."

Adrian, which competes in NCAA Division III, opened its season Saturday with a 102-55 win over Bethel College. Baird played a steady game with eight points and six assists.

"It was a nice win," she said. "A confidence-booster."

Baird said she feels her team has a good shot at winning the MIAA this winter.

"We aren't ranked in the nation," she commented, "but we think we should be."

Basketball hasn't been the senior's only sport at Adrian.

Baird played golf this fall and was good enough, with a 90.3, 18-hole average, to finish third individually in the MIAA. She was named first team all-league.

The former Mustang has also been a standout performer in softball. Baird, in fact, was named a regional All-American by the National Softball Coaches Association last season.

Baird, a health and physical education major, plans to coach roundball after graduation.

"I've learned a lot through everybody," she said of her coaching mentors over the years. "I'd love to give some back."

Baird credited Kritch with giving her the desire to coach.

"His enthusiasm rubbed off," she said.

Besides coaching, Baird said she would like to work as an athletic administrator at the college level. Her eventual plan is to become an athletic director.

She said she has enjoyed all three years at the southern Michigan college. Baird added that she would jump at an opportunity to work at the school after graduation.

"If something opened up," she said, "I wouldn't hesitate to take it."

Sutton named player of year

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

If it were a perfect world, South Lyon senior Tara Sutton would have played second guard all season, allowed to sit back contentedly and assault opponents with a barrage of three-point bombs.

But, alas, it isn't a perfect world, and early this season the 1992 HomeTown Newspapers East basketball Player of the Year was moved to the point guard position. Last year Sutton bombed away with 45 three-pointers, and this year the added ball-handling responsibilities "held" her to 34 treys on the season.

Despite switching roles, Sutton thought that the new position helped her grow as a player.

"It actually helped my game," Sutton said. "Last year at off guard, I didn't have to worry about much but shooting. It helped me develop my drive to the hoop. It gave me more freedom instead of just shooting."

Sutton's ball-handling responsibilities didn't get in the way of her scoring touch, as the senior averaged 12.7 points per game, leading the KVC in scoring for much of the season.

TARA SUTTON

"She had to score for us to do well," South Lyon coach Ron Shanks said. "She knew that, and everyone else did too. She still shot better than last year with all the defensive attention."

Sutton was moved back to off guard later in the season as junior Heather Laho stepped up for the point-guard role. The senior scorer kept the skills she picked up at the point and worked them into her traditional position.

"No matter what, I'm always free to dribble and shoot," Sutton said. "You can be creative at off-guard too."

This year Sutton had the opportunity to play along with sophomore sister Cori Sutton, an All-Area first team pick. While Tara passed to everyone in sight, averaging 2.2 assists per game, setting her sister up for the score was something special.

"It's not like passing to one of your friends," Tara said. "When you give an assist to your sister, it's great."

Having her 5-foot-11 sister was not only a benefit for the squad, but it also added to Tara's senior basketball experience.

"It was good having my sister on the team," Tara said. "She might not have had a chance to be on the team with me, being a sophomore, but she made the team as a freshman and earned playing time this year."

Sutton plans to attend college in the fall, hoping to major in the health field.

"I want to be in health, rehabilitation and therapy," Sutton said. "I'm not a desk-job kind of person"

Holiday arts and crafts show on tap

By CINDY STEWART
Special Writer

The second annual Holiday Arts and Crafts show sponsored by the Novi Arts Council and the Novi Jaycees returns to the Novi Civic Center on Nov. 28 and 29.

Fifty-five area crafters will bring a wide variety of handmade items for everyone. Shop now for holiday gifts or a special something for yourself.

Items at this juried show include stained glass, oil and acrylic paintings, pottery (vases and bowls with a southwestern motif), jewelry, gingerbread houses, wood crafts, clothing and stationery items. There are also many crafts with a holiday flavor that would make great Christmas gifts, including hide-a-quilts, baskets filled with non-perishable gourmet food items, and handmade music boxes.

The Novi Arts Council and the Novi Jaycees joined forces last year for their first Holiday Arts and Crafts Show. It was a fun way for the two groups to make money for their special community projects. Novi Jaycees representatives Becky Staab said, "It's a fun event for our community and the Jaycees puts its profits into the community development fund. This is used for our needy family Christmas program, Safety Town and our summer reading program at the Novi Library."

Paula Joyner-Clinard, president of the Novi Arts Council agrees that the Arts and Crafts show benefits our community.

"The Arts Council uses their share of the profits to support the arts in Novi," she said. "This varies from grants to bringing artists into the community, a youth theatre to go into the Novi elementary schools next fall, or poetry readings at the schools."

There is something for everyone at the Holiday Arts and Crafts Show. Prices for the items range from $1 to $100 with the average prices around $15-$20. The Novi Jaycees will provide the food concessions with pizza from Maria's Bakery, chips, candy, pop and coffee.

"We will also feature the world famous "Jaycees Super Chili," said Staab. "Don't miss it!"

Both groups have shared the responsibility for planning publicity, jury committee, set-up, collecting admission, handling the hourly raffle, food concessions and clean-up. It's a joint effort bringing a quality arts and crafts show to the community.

The crafters have donated items for the hourly raffle and each person attending the show has a chance to win some of the beautiful hand-made crafts. Admission is only $1 and this money is divided between the Arts Council and the Novi Jaycees. The Novi High School choir will have its Christmas tape available for sale and the Band Boosters will be holding a bake sale.

Come early, the show opens Saturday, Nov. 28, at 10 a.m. and noon on Sunday, Nov. 29. It runs until 4 p.m. both days.

Bonding improves on nature's work

Today, almost anyone can have straighter, whiter, more appealing teeth, thanks to a relatively simple cosmetic dental procedure known as bonding.

Bonding may be used to correct: fractured or chipped teeth, stained or discolored teeth, large spaces or gaps between teeth, rotated or crooked teeth, stained fillings in front of teeth, silver fillings in certain cases, malformed teeth, or tetracycline-stained teeth.

Bonding is a process in which tooth-colored materials are added to the enamel of a tooth. These materials come in many different shades to match the tooth color. This material, called composite resin, combines the elasticity and durability of plastic with the strength and appearance of ceramics used in dentistry.

The bonding procedure involves the fusion of the composite resin to natural tooth structure. To produce a strong bond, the tooth is prepared with a solution that slightly roughens its surface. Next, tooth conditioners or primers and a bonding sealant prepare the tooth for bonding material. When first applied, the composite resin is soft and putty-like. This soft material is shaped to match the contour of the tooth, then hardened by a beam of high-intensity light (bonding light). Now it is ready for final contouring and polishing.

It's nearly impossible to distinguish the bonding material from the natural tooth. Teeth look as though they have always been perfect and whole. The subtle changes made possible with bonding can result in dramatic improvements in overall facial appearance.

After bonding, little special care is needed. Regular brushing and flossing are still a must. You should avoid chewing ice or hard candies. Today's bonding materials are durable but may need periodic repairs. No one can estimate how long a particular bonding will last, but most experts now feel that bonding can be expected to last five to 10 years depending on its location and size. The newer bonding materials will even last longer.

Bonding usually costs approximately one-third of what caps or crowns cost. But bonding's major advantage is that it conserves the natural tooth structure. In addition, the procedure is painless, relatively quick and usually completed in one or two appointments.

Milford's Palmer named as all-area coach of year

By SCOTT SIGLER
Staff Writer

If a coach has a basketball team loaded with height, quickness and talent, that coach should be expected to win.

But when a coach is faced with the shortest team in the league, that is lacking quickness, and has players who are poor shooters, should that coach be expected to lose?

Losing expectations may very well have been the case for Milford coach Don Palmer, but the Redskin hoop guru turned things around for his team despite a serious deficiency in the big three — height, quickness and shooting ability.

This season Palmer, our choice for the HomeTown Newspapers East Coach of the Year, directed the Redskins to a 13-8 overall record.

"We had to realize what we couldn't do and look into the positive," Palmer said. "We played very good defense. We dictated tempo and frustrated a lot of people."

The slow-down game of Milford was more than frustrating for opponents, and that combined with solid defense gave Milford a Kensington Valley Conference-leading 34.3 points allowed per game. The end result of the 'Skins' strategy was that even against high-scoring teams like Brighton or Howell, the game was still close in the last quarter.

> DON PALMER

"If you keep it close until the last two or three minutes, you have a chance to beat anybody," Palmer said. "This group competed to win. If we'd won 2-0, the kids would have been thrilled."

Palmer didn't immediately decide on the turtle game. He tried various strategies in the beginning of the season, working toward the key to any season, the KVC schedule.

"The first six games we tried to run and play the transition game," Palmer said. "The kids enjoyed that, but the early part of our schedule is easier than the league.

"The kids got the idea that they would have to play different styles. I looked at our perspective—you have to try to get a read on what's the best thing to do.

"As a coach you have to try and figure out what's best for the club. Maybe it's enjoyable, and maybe it's not."

Milford's 10-11 record last season was the first losing record since 1981, a fact that didn't sit well with Palmer or the players.

"It bothered the kids like it bothered me," Palmer said. "It was a season of redemption for us. The kids collectively had that as a goal: What: ever happened, they wanted to win more than they lost."

of a slow start this fall to lead the league in scoring (13.5).

"She got off to a slow start," coach John Hoffman said. "But she peaked at a time when we needed her. As a whole, her season went well."

As the year went along, Kenny got better. In three district games she averaged 15 points per game, including 19 against Farmington Hills Mercy in the finals.

"She could be our most improved player," Hoffman said. "Next year, I think she'll pick up where she left off."

Kenny became a good offensive rebounder this year, he added. She averaged seven boards per game. The junior also totaled 32 steals and 29 assists.

"She's capable of averaging 20 points a game," Hoffman said.

BRANDY TAYLOR
Lakeland forward

Potential is the key word for this high-scoring junior. While enjoying a a productive year, at times she gave fans glimpses of what might be in store for her senior season.

"She does it all," said Lakeland coach Paul Gmelin. "She scores, she's quick, she's aggresive, she blocks shots and she's an excellent ball-handler."

Taylor averaged 10.1 points per game this season, along with 5.2 rebounds and 2.3 steals. A fast player, Taylor has the ability to post up, score from the outside or run and gun with the best in the conference.

As well as her offensive attributes, the 5-foot-8 Taylor is also a defensive standout.

"We match her up with the other team's best kid and she shuts them down," Gmelin said. "She plays defense better than most. She had six blocked shots against Brighton on kids that were taller than her. She even had one against (6-foot-2 Sarah) Needham. Brandy is a good leaper."

Home loans are now easier to finance

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

Recent changes in major home financing loans is making it easier for families to purchase and finance a home of their own.

For starters, a family financing a home purchase with a mortgage loan insured by the Federal Housing Administration can now include all closing costs in the loan amount. Previously, a buyer could only finance up to 57 percent of all closing costs.

This makes it possible for many families that qualify for an FHA loan but lack the needed down payment and cash for closing costs to go ahead with their home purchase.

Also, under the new law the maximum FHA loan limit has increased from $124,875 in high-cost areas to 95 percent of an area's median home price or 75 percent of the maximum loan amount allowed by Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac (major secondary buyers of mortgage loans), whichever is lower.

A new home loan, recently announced, will allow families nationwide to obtain financing with cash down payments as low as 3 percent of the purchase price and reduced closing costs. The special loan, called Fannie Neighbors, has been structured by Fannie Mae.

This mortgage plan will increase homeownership and promote revitalization in minority and low- and moderate- income urban areas, according to Fannie Mae. It is primarily designed to help families and neighborhoods that are now least likely to have access to mortgage credit.

"The lack of available mortgage credit in areas of the country that need it most is a situation that must change," said Larry Dale, Fannie Mae's executive director. "This new loan provides these

An unfinished attic over the garage offers room for expansion in the compact, two-story Northview.

Its high-peaked roof and lofty chimney, along with the oval window in the front door, lend a nostalgic Victorian air to the home, as does the parlor just inside the entryway.

But the rest of the Northview is by no means old-fashioned. Apart from the parlor, the family living spaces downstairs are spacious and comfortably informal.

The large country kitchen has a built-in dishwasher and centers around a work island. Counter and cupboard space is plentiful, and a small triangle-shape pantry provides still more storage for food and equipment. Washer and dryer are but a few steps away in the two-car garage.

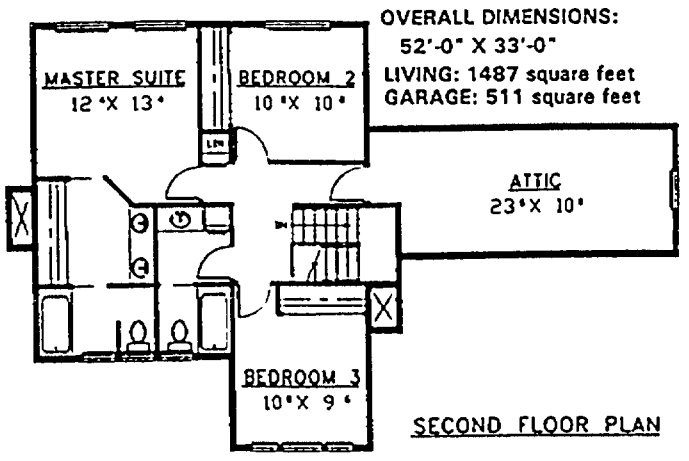

A fireplace adds charm and warmth to the richly windowed great room. This area could be furnished as a dining room and living room. Other families might prefer to use it as one large family room with an informal eating nook, rather than a formal dining area, next to the kitchen.

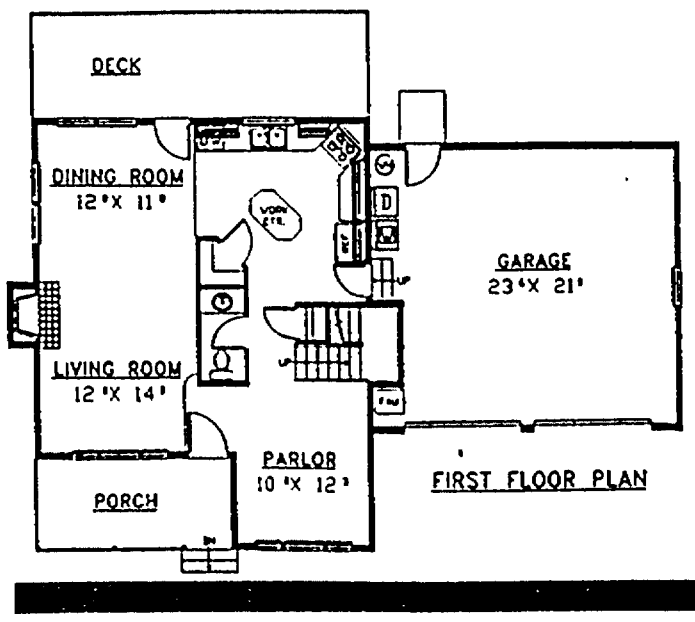

All of the bedrooms are upstairs. The master suite is divided into three sections: sleeping area, a dressing room with closet and double vanity and a water closet. Separation is provided by pocket doors.

The other two bedrooms share a bathroom that also includes a compartmentalized vanity and towel storage. Windows in the front bedroom are capped by a contemporary half-round window, giving this room a dash of class all its own.

For a study plan of the Northview (401-09), send $5 to Landmark Designs, c/o HomeTown Newspapers, 323 E. Grand River Ave., Howell, MI 48843. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

NO PLACE LIKE DOME

BY LAURA BAILEY
STAFF WRITER

The rear view of the Monks' geodesic dome in Hamburg.

It's more energy efficient, makes better use of space and is stronger than a comparably sized "traditional home."

Called a geodesic dome home, it was perfected by inventor Buckminster Fuller Jr. in 1947. Its spherical design yields energy efficiency and strength, and allows for unique, contemporary interior design options.

At least that's what owner Dianne Monks said regarding her and her husband Pat's dome home, located off Pine Bluff Road in Hamburg.

From the outside, the shape of the house is similar to an elongated igloo, but that's about as far as the resemblance goes.

Upon entering, just off to the right is a cedar-walled spa room; the five skylights make it a great greenhouse, Monks said.

Visitors will be most struck, however, with the great room. Thirty-eight feet at its highest point, it utilizes the entire height of the dome. Monks said the open spaciousness of the 2,800 square-feet home was one of the main reasons for having it built.

"This is a great place for entertaining," Monks said. "I hate being stuck in the kitchen by myself. Here you're not. I really like the open look."

The look is enhanced by two sets of atrium doors leading to a three-quarter wrap-around balcony. One set is in the great room, the other in the dining room area.

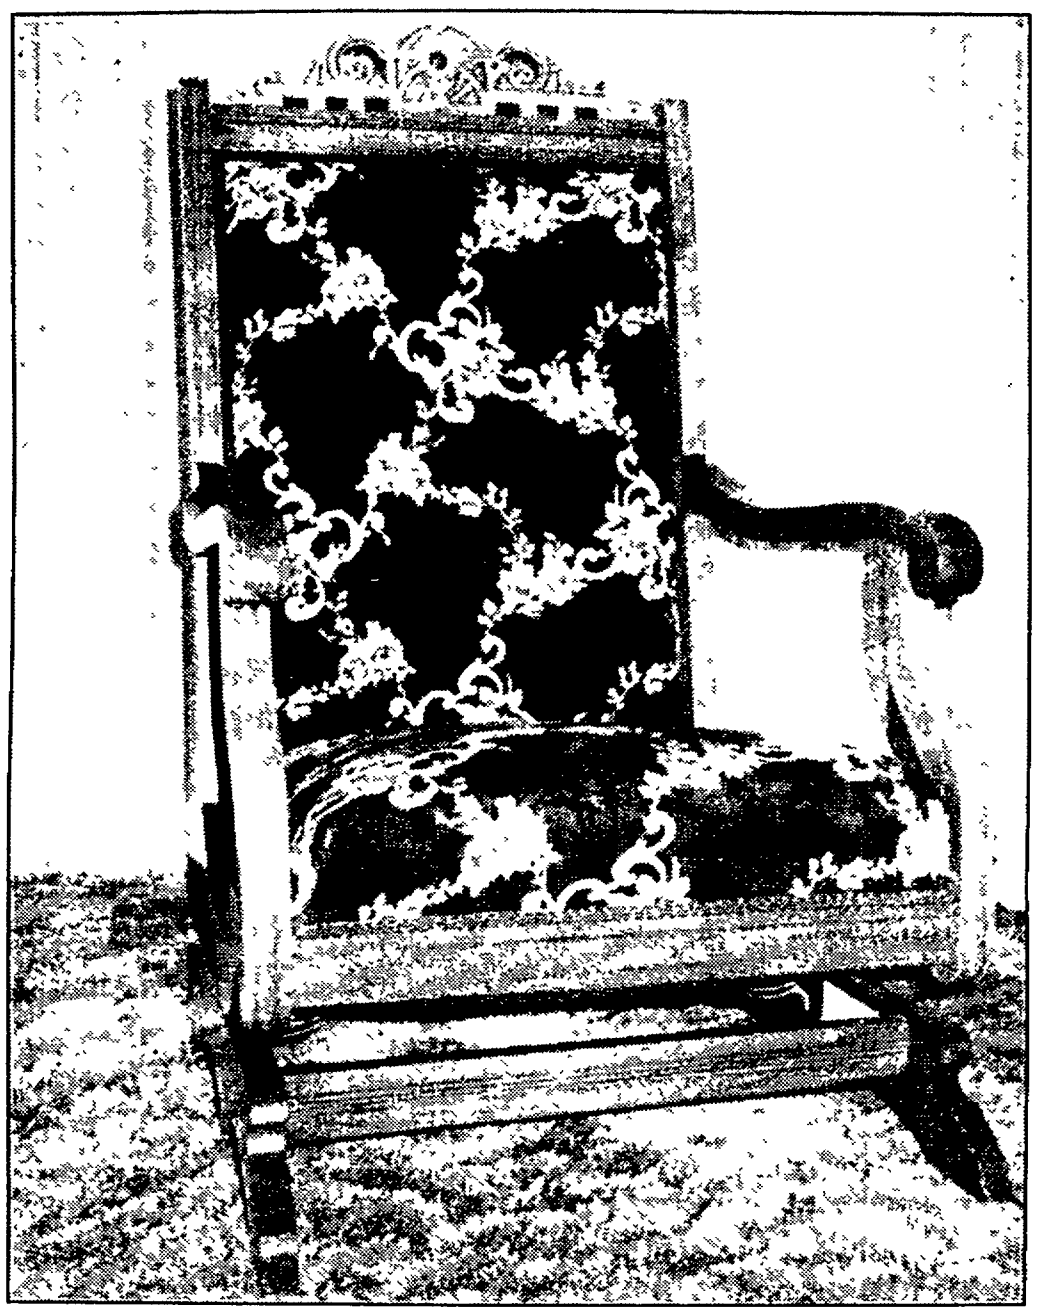

The room's centerpiece, a working driftstone fireplace, helps keep the dome warm in the winter, aided by ceiling fans that continuously push down warm air.

In here, Monk points out another unique feature—a door leading to a small privacy deck off the bathroom.

Two spiral oak staircases lead to second and third floor open lofts which hug the side of the dome. The first holds an office, the kids' bedrooms and adjoining bath.

This Platform rocker was probably made between 1876 and 1890.

An heirloom rocker

By James G. McCollam
Copley News Service

ANTIQUES

Q. I am very curious about the origin of this platform rocker. It has been passed down through our family for a long time. It has been refinished and reupholstered and is in very good condition.

I would appreciate any information you can provide.

A. The first platform rocker was made in 1876, so yours must have been made between 1876 and 1890. It would probably sell for $325 to $335.

Q. I have a box-shaped musical instrument that plays what sounds like organ music when a crank is turned, pulling a sheet of paper through the instrument. The paper is pierced like the rolls used on player pianos. It is labeled "Pla Rola Corp. of America—Patent No. 1813337. A. This is one of the many portable roller organs made from the late 1800s to the 1930s.

This was patented in 1931 and would probably sell for about $300 in good condition complete with a couple of rolls.

Q. This mark is on the bottom of a three-piece tea set consisting of a teapot, creamer and sugar bowl. Each piece is decorated with flowers and vines; the edges are trimmed in gold.

I would appreciate anything you can tell about this set.

A. Your tea set was made in the mid-20th century by the Carl Thieme Co. in Potschappel, Germany. It would probably sell for $125 to $135 in good condition.

Q. I have a round glass paperweight, which I was told was called "End of Day". Can you give me more information about it and what it would be worth today?

A. At the end of the workday, a glassblower would gather whatever different color glass was left over and make paperweights, etc.

Your paperweight would probably sell for about $65 to $75.

Q. I have five toy cars with the imprint on the underside of "Tootsietoy Classic Series—Chicago 24 USA."

A. These were made in the mid-20th century and might sell for $15 to $25 each in good condition.

Q. Enclosed is a description of two Royal Doulton figurines. I would like to know the approximate value of each because I intend to dispose of them.

They are "Grandma" HN 2052 and "The Balloon Man" HN 1954.

A. "Grandma" HN 2052 was made between 1950 and 1959; it should sell for $300 to $350.

"The Balloon Man" HN 1954 was first made in 1940 and is still in production; it is selling in the $265 to $285 range.

Monks said basically anything goes in terms of interior design.

"When you first start all you have is your basic dome," Monks said. "Then you go inside and design it whatever way you want."

One interior design challenge is working within the limits of the domes' angles, Monks said.

According to Anna Houghton, who helped build the Monks' dome, the house was constructed out of wooden triangles that were laid together and joined by steel hubs. One hub joins five triangles, to form a pentagon. The pentagons are laid together, and eventually form the dome.

"Everything has an angle," Monks said. "The hard thing about the dome is when you put in windows or anything, you have to worry about that."

The shape of the dome home offers several advantages in energy efficiency and strength. Domes are 30-60 percent cheaper to heat and cool because of the spherical shape. With less surface area, less heat or cooling is lost, and air circulates more freely.

Fewer corners boost the comfort index and all but eliminate hot and cold spots. Sloping outside walls and minimal interior obstructions allow owners to add windows and skylights to boost efficiency even more. The spherical shape also offers less wind resistance and fewer chances for leakage.

"They are very strong and very safe," Houghton said. "The only way anything would happen to mine is if a tree fell on it." She added that domes can withstand winds of up to 250 mph.

Houghton, who has helped build four domes in Michigan, said it will take people time to accept the idea of the dome home.

"Changes in homes occur about every 50-100 years," Houghton said. "It will take some time for people to get used to the idea of a round house vs. a square house."

Domes can either be purchased in kits, or built. According to Houghton, they are about the same price per square-foot as a conventional home; the savings come later in decreased heating and cooling costs.

Basic kits range from 900-3,000 square-feet. For more space, several small kits may be clustered together.

The home is for sale and is listed with Brighton Realty World-Vans. List price is $249,009. For information, call 227-3455.

Home loans are easier to obtain nowadays

The loan, made to home buyers by local lenders, require down payments as low as 5 percent, flexible qualifying requirements and less cash for closing costs than standard mortgage loans. And home buyers with a broad range of income levels are eligible for the plan.

Borrowers can earn up to 140 percent of their area's median income. And families with incomes up to 115 percent of the area median may qualify for mortgages with as little as 3 percent of their own funds for a down payment. Another 2 percent would come from gifts, grants or loans to reach the 5 percent requirement.

As for qualifications, the borrower family can have housing expenses up to 33 percent of their gross monthly income, and total expenses between 38 percent and 40 percent of gross monthly income. In some cases, family members, non-profit groups or lenders can pay for all or part of closing costs.

For detailed information on this new loan, or other currently available home financing loans, contact one or several local lenders. It pays to shop and compare. Things have been changing rapidly in the world of home financing. One lender might not yet be aware of most recent changes.

Q. Are mortgage brokers required to give their borrower clients full information about all fees they receive in connection to their loan?

A. Beginning Jan 1, mortgage brokers will be required to itemize and disclose all fees they receive related to home loans they originate and close. This federal disclosure requirement was recently announced by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"The boy who delivers the crack, he's eleven. He makes $300 a day but now he's dead. These kids are not learning nothing except how to be hopeless.

How to die. You don't need to go to no school to learn that. And that's just it. These kids aren't going. So I went to the schools to see what I could do. Me, a man who's seen his neighborhood go from bad to worse. But now I'm tired of it and I'm going to start with the kids. They're the hope. I go to the junior high and just show up in class and tell them to take pride in themselves. Pride in what they are and to have dignity. They can wake up in the morning and either go out and be mad at the world or do something to make it good for them. These kids just don't know better. And that's no good because how are our children going to have good lives if they don't stay in school? There is a reason to stay. And I'm going to tell them."

This is W.W. Johnson's real-life story. He is one of the little answers to the big problems facing every community in America. And because there are more people than problems, things will get done. All you have to do is something. Do anything. To find out how you can help in your community, call 1 (800) 677-5515.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

OVERPRICING CAN BE COSTLY

QUESTION: Several REALTORS have told me that my house is overpriced by about 20% and, in the long run, could cost me money. How can this be?

ANSWER: Because overpricing stops buyers from considering your home. No matter how much is spent on advertising, an overpriced home will not sell. Prime prospects who should have bought, have gone elsewhere to buy. When a home remains unsold too long, interest stops because buyers become wary. Eventually your house will sell, but for less than you could have realized had you priced it realistically. Use extreme caution in pricing your house more than 5 percent above its market value.

OVERPRICING A HOUSE will lose more good prospects than anything else.

Secretarial Solutions keeps companies afloat

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

If you've been drowning in a sea of paperwork, there's a company in Novi that could throw you a life preserver.

The name is Secretarial Solutions, and as the name implies, it offers business support services for small- to medium-sized companies and independent business people.

Kay Crouse founded Secretarial Solutions in 1988 with the idea of spreading her business wiles.

"I worked as a secretary for almost 30 years," says Crouse. "I have my degree in business management. I would go in and set up offices and get them running smoothly. It was mostly in the role of office manager, administrative assistant, that sort of thing. I decided that since I can do it for everybody else, why not do it for myself?"

Secretarial Solutions provides word processing, reports, presentations, photocopies, faxing, mail handling, package shipping, bookkeeping, billing, and professional, personalized telephone answering with a unique telephone answering/voice mail system.

"My employees are wonderful because they're good to our clients," Crouse says. "They take a personal interest in their business. In fact, the average employee stays here about three years.

"That gets them to know our clients and their clients. Most of the people who call our clients don't even know we're an answering service. We don't tell them unless it's absolutely necessary.

"And then when we do finally tell them, sometimes they're so shocked that they sign on."

Many of her customers, Crouse says, are independent sales representatives, private consultants, home-based businesses and other small companies.

"We become their office," Crouse says, "and we have everything they need."

Frank Hadash, owner of Residential Roofing Co. in Novi, is typical of Crouse's happy customers.

"We're a small business here in Novi," Hadash says. "Secretarial Solutions allows us to carry that professional image that I feel is so important in business today. I don't know what I'd do without Secretarial Solutions.

"I tell people that my hammer and Secretarial Solutions are two most important assets I have in my company. They're a really great service."

Recently, however, bigger clients like Walling Tool and Die in Farmington Hills have been coming to Secretarial Solutions as well.

"So many companies are downsizing; companies are getting lean and mean," says Crouse. "For a job that would overwhelm their secretarial staff, they outsource the work.

"If you have three hours of transcription, what can you do? You have to bring in a temporary for a minimum of four hours, because that's the going rate. You have to have a workspace for them, a computer for them, and you lose time training them.

"And if you're a home-based business, temporary agencies won't even send a temp into a home."

Business Briefs

THE WESTERN WAYNE OAKLAND COUNTY Association of Realtors (WWOCAR), recently held its annual election for the board of directors. Said board of directors (a total of 12 with one-third elected each year) are responsible for the 2,500 dues-paying member operations of WWOCAR.

This year, as write-in candidates, the following four were unanimously elected as this year's four directors elected to three-year terms: Gene Komarynski, Bruce Roy Realty Inc., Northville; Chuck Mills, Michigan Group, Livonia; Jim Stevens, Coldwell Banker, Plymouth; Wally Justus, Century 21 ROW, Livonia.

Those four were elected solely by write-in support from the membership. This approach is a departure from the elections of years past whereby the established board of directors, via their nominating committee, elected directors. In fact, those member-candidates supported by the board were soundly defeated.

WWOCAR members say they believe that here, as perhaps nationwide, grass-roots support and a need for change has shown dissatisfaction with the establishment, and provided for local proven real estate leaders to lead the Board.

MURRAY D. WIKOL was recently named marketing director for Trammell Crow Co.'s Office and Industrial Division. He was formerly a marketing representative for the company. Trammell Crow Co. is a commercial real estate property management company with more than 255 million square feet under fee-based management contracts.

Prior to joining Trammell Crow Co. in 1988, Wikol was international marketing manager for GMF Robotics Corp.

Wikol's new responsibilities will include landlord representation, property management, and development. He will also be responsible for marketing Trammell Crow Co.'s existing lease space.

A graduate of the University of Michigan, Wikol holds a bachelor's in economics, and a master's in industrial engineering. He continued his graduate studies at Stanford University Graduate School of Business, where he was a Sloan Fellow and earned his masters in management.

OAKLAND COUNTY school districts are learning more about communications technology from Clover/Plexus, a Novi networking education company.

In a program sponsored by Oakland Schools, the intermediate school district, specialists from each district, have gone to three two-day in-depth courses to learn about TV and video systems, local area networks and tying schools together with wide area networks. These specialists brought roughly 150 colleagues, who are involved in technology planning and implementation, to a one-day overview held recently at Oakland Schools Kiva Auditorium in Waterford.

The program, initiated and coordinated by Larry Shepanek at Oakland Schools, is designed to give the school districts the knowledge necessary to understand, acquire and maintain networks for video and data systems. The program is being presented by Clover/Plexus (C/P), a telecommunications networking education company based in Novi. C/P offers courses on a variety of communications networking topics.

The in-depth courses will be available this November for other school districts, other counties, and other interested parties. C/P's clients include the Big Three, and a variety of other businesses, governmental organizations, architectural and engineering firms.

PATRICIA A. DORMAN, a Milford resident, has joined D'Arcy Masius Benton & Bowles/Bloomfield Hills (DMB&B/BH) advertising agency as an account executive serving the Cadillac account. The announcement was made by Alex Morton, executive vice president/group account director.

Prior to joining DMB&B/BH, Dorman was an account executive at Lintas: Campbell-Ewald on the Chevrolet national advertising account.

The advertising agency is one of the world's largest full-service advertising and communications companies with 1991 billings of $4.5 billion. It has more than 100 offices worldwide and employs more than 6,000 people.

Money Management

Veterans should know their options

Many veterans are still not aware of the benefits they have earned. In honor of Veterans Day, the Michigan Association of CPAs offers the following summary of the financial benefits available to veterans.

EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS

When you return from active service with an honorable discharge, your former employer must restore your old job to you or offer you a comparable position. If you can no longer perform your former job because you became disabled while in military service, your employer must offer you another position of comparable seniority, status and pay. To qualify for reinstatement, you must contact your previous employer within 90 days after your separation from active duty.

If, for whatever reason, you decide not to return to your old job, you can receive assistance in looking for a new job. The U.S. Department of Labor is responsible for ensuring that veterans receive employment assistance through State Employment Offices throughout the country.

If you are interested in starting a business of your own, contact the Small Business Administration (SBA). Available help includes surety, bonding government procurement and fincacial and management assistance.

G.I. HOUSING LOANS

One of the most far-reaching and popular veteran's benefits is the GI Housing Loan program for the construction or purchase of hmes. This is a loan guarantee program that helps veterans finance homes at favorable interest rates, with little or no money down and long repayment periods. The Veterans Administratin (VA) does not supply the money for the loan — it guarantees the loan with a private lender. The maximum interest rate on a VA home loan may vary due to changes in market conditions, but the interest rate will remain the same for the life of the loan.

Eligible veterans must make their own loan arrangements through private lenders such as banks or mortgage loan companies. Prior to applying, a veteran should secure a Certificate of Eligibility from any VA office. There is no time limit for using your GI Home Loan benefit.

EDUCATIONAL BENEFITS

Almost every veteran is eligible for some sort of educational assistance or vocational training. Veterans who served on active duty after Jan. 31, 1955, but before Jan. 1, 1977, may be eligible for assistance under the GI Bill. Veterans who served between Jan. 1, 1977, and July 1, 1985, are covered under the Veterans Educational Assistance Program (VEAP). The time limit for using VEAP benefits is 10 years from the date of release from active duty. The Montgomery GI Bill provides educational benefits for veterans who entered military service after June 30, 1985. Those service persons who participate in the program have their basic pay reduced by $100 a month for the first 12 months of service. Eligible veterans are generally entitled to a basic benefit of $300 per month for 36 months.

PENSIONS

A monthly cash pension benefit is available to some financially needy veterans. To qualify, you must have served during wartime (but not necessarily in actual combat) and you must be age 65 or totally disabled. VA pensions are based on finacial need and how many dependents you have.

TAX BENEFITS

The Michigan Association of CPAs reminds you that most veterans' benefits are not included in gross income. Included in this category are educational allowances, disability payments, grants to seriously disabled veterans for specially equipped homes and motor vehicles, certain veterans' pensions and veterans' insurance proceeds.

Firms find solutions with support service

"They only have to pay us for the work we do," Crouse says. "They don't have to worry about paying Social Security matching taxes, lunch times, break times. They pay only for the time it takes us to do the work."

Corporate staff cuts have also brought about a number of white collar layoffs and early retirees, Crouse says. Many of these people go into business for themselves, which brings them right to her doorstep.

"They don't need to purchase all the equipment because we have it already," Crouse says. "We have all the latest updated computer systems and software. And we do desktop publishing."

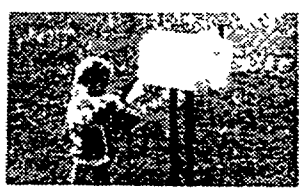

Though you can come to the office during regular business hours, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., there are Saturday hours from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. as well.

And lest you think you need to be dressed for success to walk in the door at Secretarial Solutions, Crouse deep-sixes that idea.

"We are open to the public," she says. "That's why I'm in a retail center and not an office building. We won't write resumes, but if you come to us with one, we can put it together. In fact, we've worked with a lot of people for six months to a year while they're job searching. It's a great feeling when they come to us and say, 'I got the job.' "

The Good Stuff At Great Prices

Don't look now, folks, but the holiday season is practically upon us.

And whether you're one of those people who have just about wrapped up their holiday shopping or one of those people who are just getting started, those of us here at HomeTown Newspapers have good news for you — our popular Gift Guide, filled with all kinds of clever suggestions for everyone on your shopping list.

On these pages you will find stories about all types of things associated with the holidays — stories about the latest in dolls; classic gifts for women; decorating for the holidays; what's new in games and educational toys; and clever, creative gift-wrapping suggestions.

More importantly, the pages in this Gift Guide are filled with outstanding suggestions about gifts from your HomeTown merchants. Look through these pages carefully and you'll be able to find appropriate gifts for just about everyone.

And one other thing. Again this year your HomeTown Newspaper will be publishing two Gift Guides. Gift Guide II (GGII) will be delivered with your paper the second week in December.

RETAIL SALES

Merchants who want to make sure they're included in GGII should call the following numbers to talk to a sales representative: Brighton (313 227-0171), Howell (517 548-2000), Milford (313 685-1507), Northville (313 349-1700), Novi (313 349-1700) and South Lyon (313 437-2011). Better hurry, though, advertising deadline for GGII is this Friday, Nov. 27.

For the rest of you, good luck with your holiday shopping. We think you'll find our Gift Guide a big help. Happy holidays.

ABOUT THE COVER

Graphic Designer Juanita Little decided to help mark the 100th anniversary of Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite by selecting a traditional nutcracker to highlight the cover of our Gift Guide. The computer-drawn nutcracker is superimposed on a background of snow flakes, helping, we hope, to put you in the mood for the days and weeks ahead.

Gift-wrap ideas for smart elves

By Sharon Achatz
Copley News Service

It's often said you can't judge a book by its cover, but folks can and do judge a gift by its wrapping.

After all, the biggest, brightest gift boxes are always the first opened, and who of us hasn't been enticed by a pretty present to stop and ponder at what might be inside?

Whether you wrap 'em, tie 'em, bow 'em or bag 'em, there are more fun options than ever before for creating delightful holiday gift-wrap designs.

For perfect, pretty and easy assembly, buy an ensemble of prematched paper, card and bow. Designs range from traditional to whimsical, so it's easy to find motifs keyed to the giftee's personal tastes and interests—from sleigh bells or skiers to trumpets or teddy bears.

If ensembles are too structured for your tastes, create your own custom-made mix-and-match paper. Simply select two or more contrasting or complementary designs and colors, tape them together on a box and cover the seams with broad bright or metallic ribbon.

If none of these paper options suits your fancy, substitute fabrics, wallpaper, aluminum foil, scarves, kitchen towels, lap blankets—even pages from newspapers and magazines.

Fabrics are especially handy when it comes to wrapping odd-shape presents such as plush animals, tricycles, tennis rackets and balls.

Looking for a simpler solution that's also reusable? Bag the gifts in bright bags—just drop the gift inside and add a flourish with colorful tissue and a splash of confetti. To prevent pecking, seal it with a sticker or slice a slit in the fold of a recycled holiday card and place it over the bag's handles to keep contents concealed.

Wrap master Robin Cohen, co-owner of The Paper Plum gift shop in Stockton, Calif., and star of the videotape "Wrap Magic," offers the following suggestions:

• Make the package decoration an accesso-

Projects with a real personal touch

By Lisa La Brosse
Copley News Service

One delight you can add to your holiday list is gift-making. There's a special feeling in creating or receiving a handmade gift for the holidays.

Designing your own gift can be as simple as using leftover materials from other projects or choosing materials at your local craft shop to create something special.

The basic rule in holiday craft design is, make it fun! It should be a special time for both the giftmaker and the recipient.

Start with a list of needed materials and supplies. Make it a point to stock up on craft glue, glue sticks, beads, ribbons, basic colors of fabric paint, sandpaper, glitter and other frequently used items. This way even if you're down to the wire on your gift creation, you'll be prepared.

CRAFTS FOR KIDS

A memorable gift for any child is a doll-size furniture set created with dowels, wood squares, finishing nails and wood glue. According to the editors of Sunset magazine, all that is necessary for this project is the ability to cut straight and drill a hole.

There are many other wonderful gifts to create for children. Some of these can be found in "Holiday Scrap Crafts" by Marti Michell (Meredith Press). Projects include starry-night pillows, Christmas rag dolls, bear-foot stockings and a jack-in-the-box. This book is filled with projects for all of the holidays and includes well-written directions, pictures and diagrams.

"Christmas Is Coming" by Linda Baltzell Wright (Oxmoor House Press) is filled with colorful diagrams and photos as well as simple and complete directions for creating holiday crafts for both children and adults.

Lace doily frames are gifts your child can create for the holidays. You will need poster board in assorted colors, doilies and photos.

"Wood, Favorite Toys You Can Make" by Better Homes and Gardens is perfect for the woodcrafter. The book is filled with complete directions, diagrams and photos of the finished projects. Some of the toys included are a rocking horse, an airplane, a tractor, a tugboat, a dollhouse and a zoo carousel.

KID CREATIONS

Making holiday gifts involves children in the gift-giving process. One project that any child of school age can create with a minimum of supervision is a holiday thought box or jar.

Your child will need a jar or canister to cover with material, beads, glitter, shells or stones. Inside the container, the child places folded slips of paper with sayings or positive thoughts. This is a memorable gift that allows grandparents or parents to read a thought each day of the new year at their office or home.

A good place to begin is with books of sayings or special thoughts. These can be purchased at any bookstore or checked out at the library. Browse through the books with your children and discuss the quotes. Let them choose their favorites and encourage them to create their own.

Remind them of interests the gift recipient might enjoy such as fishing, movies, poetry, camping. Let some of the sayings reflect these hobbies.

Help your children set up their work area, keeping in mind that while it's their gift project, they'll appreciate having some input. Keep the area simple and cover it with easily cleaned materials.

Start with pretty shells or stones your children have collected, and show them how to glue them on the box or canister. Depending on the container and its condition, you may want to cover it with material or wrapping paper first. When your children have finished gluing treasures on the container, help them sprinkle the entire box with a touch of glitter.

FABRIC PAINTING, STENCILING

One simple and beautiful gift technique is hand stenciling and painting. You will need a large, flat work surface and the following supplies: stencils, stencil brush, fabric paint, glitter, if desired, masking tape and cardboard.

Begin by outlining your pattern on the fabric lightly with a pencil. Pour paint onto the cardboard and dip your brush gently, being certain not to use too much fabric paint.

The leaf design is simple and will create a variety of patterns for your tablecloth. Use a gold shiny paint with your stencil to create an elegant and memorable table covering.

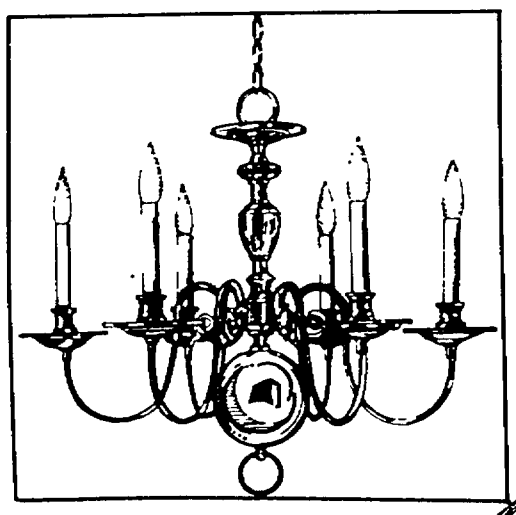

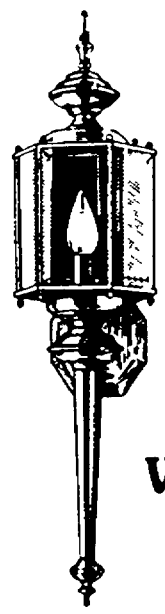

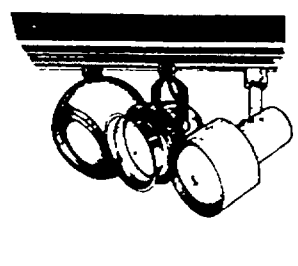

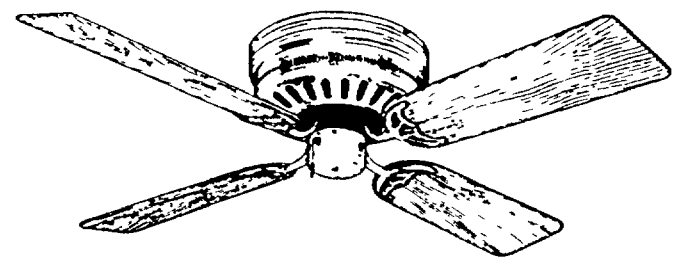

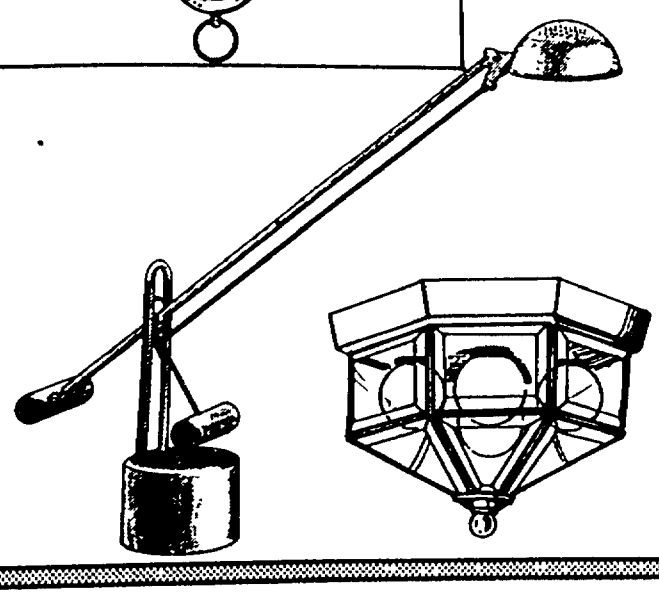

Paint your design carefully, being certain to cover all open areas of the stencil with a good coating of paint. If you don't, you will end up with fabric showing through on the finished design.

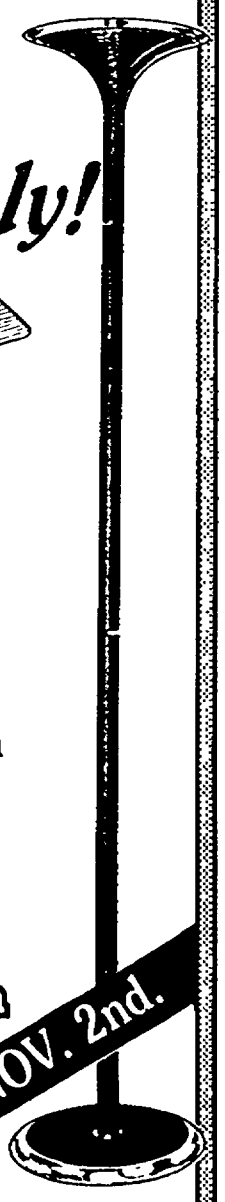

When you have completed your design, remove the stencil. Be certain the paint dries fully before moving the tablecloth. Most fabric paint manufacturers recommend a drying time of 72 hours. You can work on more than one area before it dries provided you tape all wet areas down. This ensures the cloth doesn't slide and smear your paint.

When painting a tablecloth set, it is a good idea to use the same pattern throughout, or choose a key element in the design and follow up with it in the place mats and napkins. If there is a grouping of leaves on the corner of the table cloth, for example, you might stencil one gold leaf on each of the napkins. It follows your pattern but doesn't overwhelm the proportions of the napkin.

From Cabbage Patch to Momma dolls, what's in

By Molly Woulfe
Copley News Service

Well, hello, Dolly, you're looking, uh, radiant, Dolly ...

Yipes, the birds and the bees are chic this holiday season, a development illustrated most visibly by the Mommy-To-Be Doll (Judith Corp)

The girlish, 11 1/2-inch doll flaunts a pregnant belly, which, when snapped off, reveals an anatomically correct newborn. The proud mama's name is Judith and she's available in white and ethnic versions.

Parents who credit storks with the whole business will beat hasty retreats, but Judith Corp. in Illinois, which imports the dolls from Denmark, has great expectations for Christmas.

"We got her married," president Egil Wigert said, noting that the plastic figure sports a wedding ring and the line includes a father-to-be doll named Charlie. "We thought that was important. We're promoting family unity."

Steering clear of a "Murphy Brown" uproar, however, has failed to quell criticism from Judith's belly. Some critics charge the toy is too explicit for its target audience of children ages 3 to 11, while others complain the birthing process depicted is inaccurate. Feminists fret that Judith falsely glamorizes childbirth because a flat-as-a-board belly springs into place once the baby is removed.

"We're promoting it as a toy, not an educational tool, though we have a lot of people who want it for that reason" Wigert said.

Parents expecting their second or third child are snapping the doll up like crazy, he explained, "to show kids how mom is going to look pregnant."

Traditionalists — and the squeamish — will be pleased to hear Cabbage Patch Kids still originate from the cabbage patch. They do, however, boast features to cause a pregnant pause or two.

Mattel Toys is also taking a pro-educational stance with My Bundle Baby, a toy that simulates the pleasanter aspects of pregnancy. This soft, battery-operated pouch mimicks a fetal heartbeat and kicks and is worn by a child. Open the bundle and fully clothed boy or girl doll pops out, along with a congratulatory banner, little details that may invite big confusion. One in 36 pouches bears twins.

Not to belabor the point, animals also are getting into the act, like Puppy Surprise, a plush toy dog with a Velcro clasp on its tummy (Hasbro). Reach inside and there are three, four or five removable puppies in a pouch. The number of offspring is a surprise. Cat lovers can buy Kitty Surprise.

Traditionalists — and the squeamish — will be pleased to hear Cabbage Patch Kids still originate from the cabbage patch. They do, however, boast features to cause a pregnant pause or two.

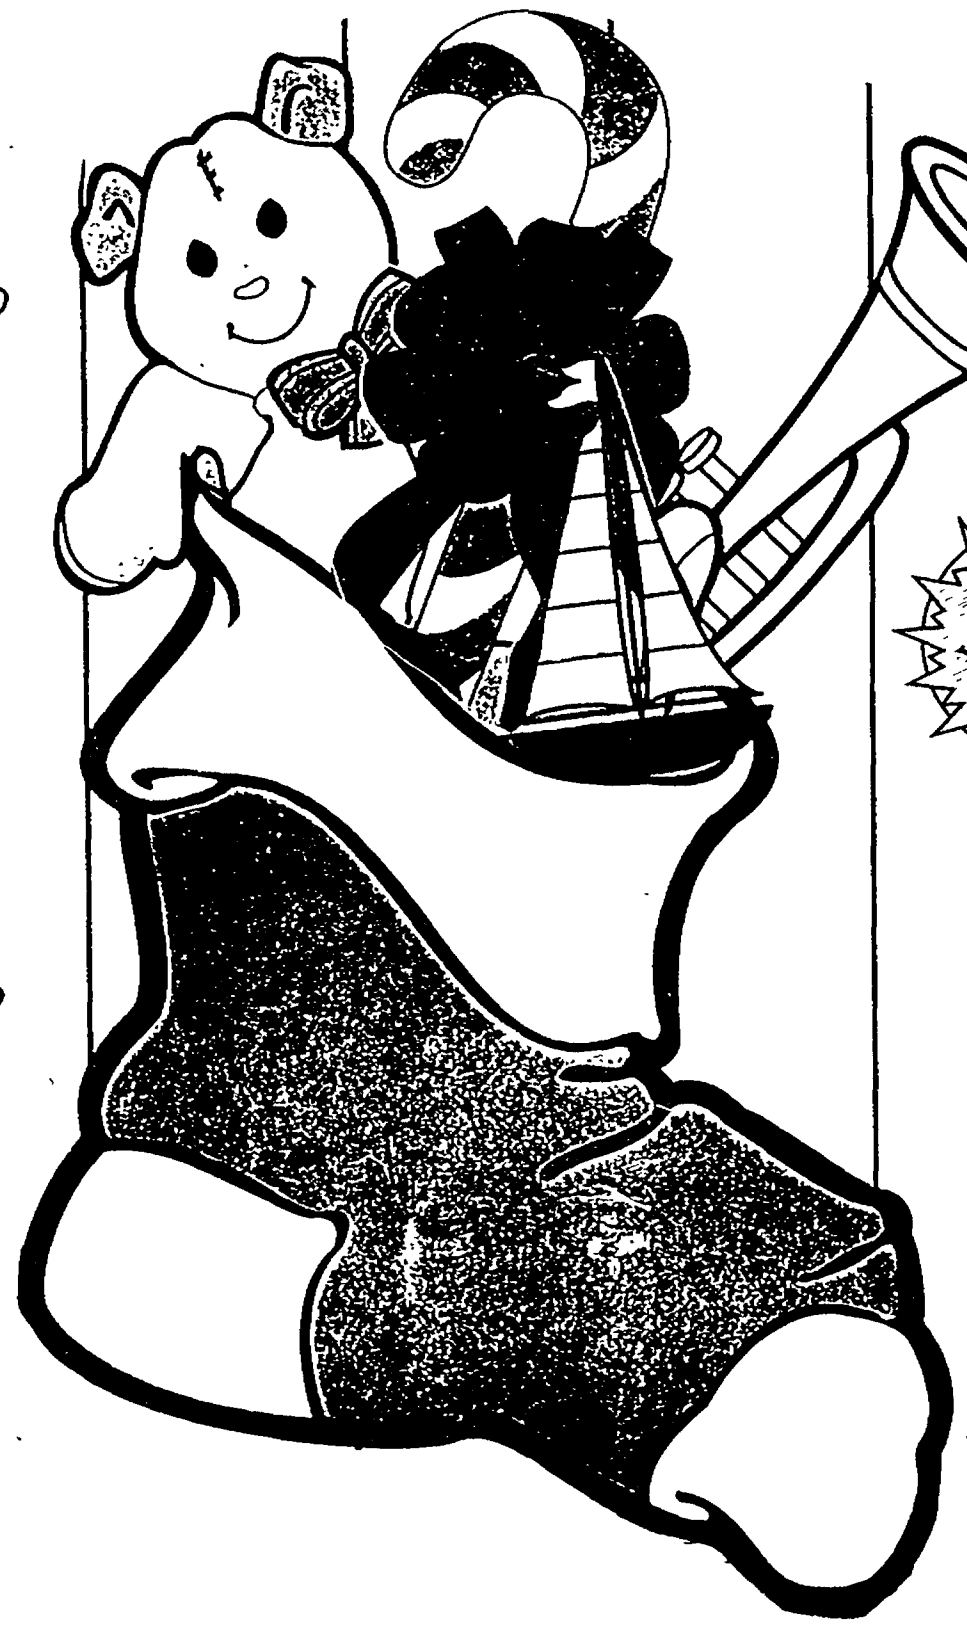

The latest Cabbage Patchers include the Splash 'N Tan Kids, waterproof dolls than children can bring into bathtubs, pools or to the beach. Exposed to sunlight, the dolls develop faint tan lines around their swimsuits. Each Kid comes with a sun-care protection tip sheet and sunglasses (Hasbro, $30).

Also new is the Cabbage Patch Newborn with Magical Monitor, a rosy-cheeked infant accompanied by a plastic nursery monitor set. When a little "parent" presses a button on the hand-held remote, the child hears a random cry, giggle or "Mama!".

Both Cabbage Patch and Kenner are offering potty-training accessories for dolls this year, a feature designed to appeal to adults eager to instill basic procedures in tots. The Cabbage Patch Potty Chair, suitable for 10- to 16-inch dolls, produces "tinkling" and flushing sounds. Three "AA" batteries are required.

Dolling -up for this Christmas

Talking Baby Alive eats, drinks from her sipper cup. says seven different phrases including 'I have to go to potty" and also comes with a training potty (Kenner).

Fear not, there are good, old-fashioned dolls amid the models ready to demonstrate birth and other biological mysteries. New Baby All Gone 'magically" drinks her bottle and can eat a jar of cherries without any mess (Kenner). Baby Alive comes with special food, disposable diapers, dish, spoon and bottle.

And what would Christmas be without Barbie? The world's bestselling doll is available in a dazzling array of outfits, and also now with Rapunzellike hair down to her ankles. Totally Hair Barbie has her own container of styling gel and is already a huge hit (Mattel $12).

Equally glamorous is Li'l Miss Magic Jewels. a doll that glitters with removable 'jewels" when touched by a special star-shaped wand (Mattel). In the sporty category are Baby Roller Blade and Roller Blade Dude, two skating action dolls (Mattel).

The original 12-inch G.I. Joe also is back after a 14-year hiatus and available in three models, along with a villain named the Cobra (Hasbro)

Once again, television and film-related dolls and action figures are jamming the shelves this Christmas. The hippest new offerings include "Batman Returns" and "Terminator 2" action figures (Kenner), and "Beverly Hills, 90210" dolls (Mattel). Prices range from $6 up. Arctic Batman is already a best-seller, and Catwoman and Penguin figures are neck-to-neck, Kenner officials said.

Last but not least, it's troll season, as those fuzzy-haired '60s relics are seeing a tremendous revival in popularity. Entire lines of the beady-eyed, bow-legged dolls are available in all shapes and sizes.

Prices range from $1 for a pencil-topper wishnik to $85 for an 18-inch, fully costumed troll. The average cost is $7 to $8 per troll (from Norfin Trolls, Russ Berrie's Troll Kidz and Ace Novelty's Treasure Trolls). Like their predecessors, they (whew) reportedly multiply one's luck, and that's all.

Smart tips for a safe holiday season

By R.J. Ignelzi
Copley News Service

The holidays are a potentially hazardous time of year. To safeguard your home and family, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, the Fire Safety Council and the National Automobile Club offer these tips.

CHILD SAFETY

Keep gift wrapping and holiday decorations away from children. Ornaments that are breakable or have detachable parts are especially hazardous. Children may be tempted to eat decorative items that look like candy or food.

Some holiday plants are poisonous if chewed or swallowed. Make sure children can't reach holly berries, mistletoe, Jerusalem cherry or amaryllis. Even fallen pine needles can be dangerous.

Inspect toys carefully before buying them. Pay attention to any manufacturers' age recommendations. Toys that come apart easily or have removable parts can present a choking hazard to children.

Keep batteries away from children. Shiny batteries can be appealing but are dangerous if swallowed. Children have been known to push them into their noses or ears.

SAFE SHOPPING

Keep a low profile when you shop. If you're carrying cash, don't flash it. It's better to carry only the credit cards you'll need. Leave other valuables. furs or expensive jewelry at home.

Don't overload yourself with packages. This puts you at risk to bump into things or slip and fall. Tired and overburdened shoppers also are vulnerable to thieves.

Pickpockets are very active during the holidays. Women should keep purses tucked firmly under their arms. Men should carry their wallets in the front or inside pockets.

Be alert when returning to your car; have your keys out and ready. Check the back seat before getting in. Lock the door after you get in.

SAFEGUARD YOUR HOME

Discourage burglars by making your home look occupied. Use automatic devices to turn on the television, radio or lamps in different areas of the house.

Don't tempt thieves. Keep items such as computers, stereos and compact disk players where they can't be seen from a window. Don't leave piles of holiday gifts in plain sight.

When you leave home, make sure all doors and windows are locked. Consider replacing easily jimmied locks with deadbolts.

If you'll be away from home for a week or more. stop mail and newspaper deliveries so they won't pile up and signal thieves you're away. Have someone check on your home every few days.

SEASONAL FIRE SAFETY

Keep the tree away from radiators, stoves, heat vents or open flames.

Carefully check tree lights. Discard any light strings that are worn or damaged. For outdoor decorations, use only lights made for that purpose.

When the tree stops absorbing water from the stand, it's time to discard it. A dry tree catches fire easily.

Never leave tree or other decorative lights on when you leave the house.

Use flame-resistant decorations around the house and on your tree.

Keep a fire extinguisher in your home and see that your family knows how to use it. Make sure smoke alarms work properly.

Gift ideas that teach and entertain children

By Jennifer Plantier
Copley News Service

This holiday season gift-givers have an almost dizzying selection of games from which to choose for their favorite children.

Rows of toy-store shelves offer everything from classic board games to newer ones based on hit movies. And, of course, electronic video and computer games haven't left the holiday scene.

It's no coincidence that the number of offerings has multiplied. Games are time-proven kid-pleasers. To succeed at game-giving takes little time but considerable thought.

It helps to know a particular child's interests. Strategy games keep thoughtful kids occupied while action games stimulate more physical ones. Younger children love colorful games and special characters.

A simple and charming board game, players twirl the spinner to journey through the Troll Valley collecting the amusing little troll figures.

The Blow Your House Down Game from Pressman Toys is an exciting action game for kids 5 and up that requires no reading. Players build houses out of colorful cards. It includes a plastic "wolf-puffer" used to destroy the dwellings of opponents when the opportunity arises.

Milton Bradley's Giggle Wiggle game is a sound-activated challenge just silly enough to thrill gamers ages 5 and up. The first player to deposit all eight marbles in the Giggle Wiggle's hands wins. Tread carefully and quietly—any sound makes him dance around and lose his marbles.

The newly renovated classic counting game, Hi Ho! Cherry-O, from Golden Games has always been a favorite with kids from 3 to Friends Around the World—A Game of World Peace, from Aristoplay, is a perfect game for kids 5 and up during the holidays and throughout the year.

It teaches cooperation and respect for other cultures by encouraging players to bring 16 world friends to the World Peace Center.

Computer games have kept older kids glued to monitors for years. Now there is plenty of software for younger gamers that combines fun and learning.

Children 3 to 8 can adjust the difficulty as they tackle Snoopy's Animated Puzzles, Charlie Brown's Picture Pairs Game and Woodstock's Look-Alikes.

The Treehouse, a multimedia software program from Broderbund, takes kids 6 to 10 to a special place full of games and learning.

Kids make friends with the "Awesome Possums" as they participate in games that promote learning about music, science, math, language and history.

Older children prefer more complicated and engrossing games. Preteens become more gender specific, with boys turning to action adventure and girls to social games that focus on pretend scenarios such as "dream dates."

The new Dragon Quest board-game, from TSR, pits warriors against monsters in the midst of a dangerous game world. Traps, monsters and dragons burden the path of gamers ages 10 and up.

RBI Baseball 4, from Tengen Games, brings unparalleled diamond action to the Sega Genesis.

Up-to-date stats and detailed, realistic stadiums bring video baseball to life and make this a sure-fire holiday hit.

Where in America's Past is Carmen Sandiego, from Broderbund, is the fifth release in the award-winning software series featuring the infamous thief.

Players ages 12 and up will throw themselves into this crime-solving endeavor for the IBM-PC and compatible computers.

Keep in mind that puzzles, card games, portable video games and game cartridges make great stocking stuffers.

Old-fashioned classics for women

By Debra Baldwin
Copley News Service

During the '80s we got in the habit of buying gifts that mostly announced we had spent money.

Now when you shop for the lady on your list, return to tradition with items designed to make her feel pampered, special and cherished.

ADORN HER

An item of classic clothing, providing you know her size, taste and color preferences, is a can't-miss gift; consider an embroidered sweater, a tweed jacket, a soft challis scarf. Combine sense and sensibility: Give her a pair of unpretentious, practical bluejeans plus a beaded jacket (from a used clothing store) or a cotton denim skirt with a luscious silk half-slip.

Speaking of lingerie, treat her to something feminine with lots of lace — perhaps a nightgown as white as snow, tied with a crimson satin ribbon. Enclose a copy of this exquisite little book: "The Love of Lace," by Cynthia Hart (Workman). New Amanda Fielding boutiques celebrate a lifestyle based on traditions of value and purity of design; they're a good source of essential, timeless items —such as cardigan sweaters.

Collectible scarves never go out of style. New ones include Hermes' Pawnee (a portrait on silk of an American Indian), Wild West themes from Perry Ellis, seasonal and holiday motifs by Vera and animal prints from Anne Klein.

Other elegant adornments: needlepoint slippers, several pairs of supersoft socks, an embroidered evening bag, an imported lace handkerchief, an Albert Nipon cosmetic case, a Liz Claiborne belt, an umbrella with an ornate handle, an assortment of beaded hair ornaments.

PAMPER HER

Scented products make perfect gifts; they're affordable yet luxurious.

Slip into a bath specialty shop and pick up a gift basket; Caswell-Massey, for example, has wrapped collections of bath grains, foaming gel, lotion and talc. Among the assortment of scents are sandalwood and blue hyacinth.

You'll also find gift sets in department stores. New this year are those adorned with reproductions of antique wrapping papers — such as Victorian Memories' wrapped soaps and body lotions.

From Reminessence comes what may be the ultimate in fancy packaging: exquisite gift sets of soaps and sachets nestled in satin-embellished boxes and tied with gold bows.

Transport her back to nature with Smith & Vandiver bath gelee, glycerin soap, bubble bath and more in Vanilla, Rain Drops, Moonbeam and other soothing aromas.

Ultrafeminine tokens are a welcome indulgence during the holidays.

Nina Ricci packages the timeless L'Air du Temps in miniature this year. La Petite Collection includes five tiny bottles nestled in an elegant gift box.

Scent her closet with wardrobe sachets (English Flowers, Lily of the Valley, Freesia) from Taylor of London. The company also offers an aroma therapy line of essential oils purported to have therapeutic properties.

How about an unusual, appealing room freshener? Room fragrances from Winds-cense, in Winter Berry, Cinnamon Orange and High Country Timber come with adorable animal figurines that contain and slowly release aromas.

Candle shops also are fragrance sources. Decorative and aromatic items include holi-

Getting your home in spirited shape

By Sharon Williams
Copley News Service

Holiday gifts and goodies aren't the only things getting the royal treatment in terms of ribbons, wrappings and other seasonal adornments.

This year, it's chic to celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah, New Year's, Twelfth Night and other winter holidays by decking out the entire house and yard with the beloved signs of the season.

Following is a rundown of tips and trends that can help you get your home in spirited shape for the holidays ahead.

TERRIFIC THEMES

An artfully chosen theme can make the difference between a tastefully decorated home and a horrid holiday hodgepodge, say decorators.

Such a theme will tie everything together—from the trimmed tree in the corner to the centerpieces on the table. The end result is a magnificent presentation that flows as easily as holiday champagne.

One of the most popular looks going centers around a back-to-nature theme.

Hand-carved animals, fish, birds and birdhouses for the tree, dried apple garlands, rustic wreaths and wall hangings made of twigs, green lights, berries and dried flowers, raffia bows and miniature trees constructed of pine cones, sticks or moss are but a few of the elements required to achieve this simple and cozy feeling.

Old World themes with Dickensian, baroque, Victorian and renaissance flavor have enjoyed popularity during Christmases past, and promise to be equally strong this Christmas present.

Books, videos, music and calendars

By Debra Baldwin
Copley News Service

The best gifts cost little, yet offer great value.

Books, videos, audio tapes, records and calendars expand the imagination, treat the senses and provide hours of enjoyment.

And this year the selection is so extensive you're certain to find something for everyone on your list. The following can be found easily, quickly—and at minimal expense—in book, music, video, gift and/or variety stores.

BOOKS

Name an interest, and there's a lavishly illustrated gift book on the subject.

Some examples: "Baseball, The Perfect Game" by Peter Richmond (photos by Danielle Weil, published by Rizzoli); "Let There Be Clothes: 40.000 Years of Fashion" by Lynn Schnurnberger (Workman); "Volkswagen: A Week at the Factory" by Peter Keetman (Chronicle).

Publishers know a gift market when they see one; they're now providing volumes in gift boxes. From Penguin are boxed sets of the works of Ken Follet, Robin Cook and Stephen King—among many others.

Animal lovers will revel in the new James Herriot book. "Every Living Thing" (St. Martin's Press), plus these two cookbooks from Berkeley: "Cat Nips! Feline Cuisine" and "Dog Bites! Canine Cuisine," both by Rick and Martha Reynolds.

For stocking stuffers, consider one of Running Press' elegant miniature editions; titles include "The Sonnets of Shakespeare," "Quotable Women," "The Wit and Wisdom of Mark Twain" and Clement C. Moore's "The Night Before Christmas."

From Lombard Marketing are mystery jigsaw puzzles packaged with matching short stories — such as "Death by Diet" and "Murder Most Artful," both by R.D. Zimmerman. Clues in the puzzles solve the mysteries.

Two must-haves for parents (or whoever hosts family gatherings): "101 Ideas for the Best-Ever Christmas" and "1001 Things to Do With Your Kids," both by Caryl Waller Krueger (Dimensions for Living).

Also for the holidays: 'Wreaths 'Round the Year Book & Kit" by Dawn Cusick (Sterling/Lark); 'My Christmas Treasury" by Norman Vincent Peale (HarperCollins) and "Gourmet's Holidays and Celebrations" by the editors of Gourmet magazine (Random House).

VIDEOS

The MGM/UA 1992 Home Video Catalog, available at many video vendors, lists more than 1,000 titles dating from 1924 to the present.

Look for boxed gift sets of series, such as the three "Godfather" movies and the five "Star Trek" adventures (both from Paramount)—and for gift sets featuring stars (Audrey Hepburn, John Wayne, Jerry Lewis, more).

For romantics: MGM/UA Home Video is honoring "Casablanca" with a special 50th anniversary edition. For the holidays, how about "It's a Wonderful Life" (Republic Pictures Home Video).

How about TV on tape? Paramount now offers "Star Trek: The Next Generation," episodes 1 through 22. And CBS Video has a clever idea: video greeting cards. This season, Television Video Cards incorporate a Christmas episode from "I Love Lucy,' 'The Honeymooners," 'The Twilight Zone" or "The Beverly Hillbillies" along with a built-in card.

Send someone on a world tour with vacation/travel guide tapes from Fodor s, Reader's Digest Video, Rand McNally, Travelogue r and Video Visits (to name a few).

For golfers. there s PGA Home Video (MPI Home Video); for birdwatchers, Bird Watching Guides (National Audubon Society); for royal-watchers, 'Tears of a Princess: The Inside Story of Princess Diana's Life and Heartbreak" (Strand Home Video).

AUDIO TAPES

Know someone who uses a portable tape player or has a tape deck in the car? Give 'em a new audiocassette or two.

You might buy some blank tapes and, using your own stereo system, create special tapes with customized selections — for example, all the gentle music (skip the ponderous, crashing pieces) from John Barry's 'Dances With Wolves." Let the recipient's tastes be your guide.

You'll find a huge selection and great deals on music tapes at record stores, but keep in mind that much more than music is on tape.

Almost any popular book title, past or present. is available; newly released audiocassettes are even rated according to demand, just like new songs and best-selling books.

Publisher s Weekly lists volumes 1 and 2 of Star Wars' ('Heir to the Empire' and Dark Force Rising," from Bantam) as top-ten hits; another fiction best seller is Tom Clancy's The Sum of All Fears" (Simon & Schuster), read by David Ogden Stiers.

Non-fiction best sellers include "Me: Stories of My Life" by Katharine Hepburn (Random House) and Gloria Steinem's "Revolution From Within" (Dove Audio). Here's a bonus: Both are read by their authors.

RECORDS

Capitol has just released a special limited edition compact disc of the Beatles' first single, "Love Me Do," with two versions of the song and flip-side hit, "P.S. I Love You."

New releases from Rhino include three additions to the popular "Disco Years" series (for a total of five); "The Very Best of Buddy Guy"; 'Bo Diddley Beats"; "The Best of Tracey Ullman" "Alice Cooper Live at the Whiskey"; and "Otis Redding: Love Man and Tell the Truth."

Rhino also recently released an Aretha Franklin "Queen of Soul" box set (four 70-minute CDs plus an illustrated, 80-page career-overview booklet).

As for holiday tunes, the new "Hallmark Christmas Album" (in Hallmark stores) features Harry Belafonte and 12 classic songs.

Totally non-traditional are Mojo Nixon's "Horny Holidays!" (Triple NiXXXon Records) and the finger-snappin', hand-clappin' 'Street Carols" doo-wop album from Street Gold Entertainment.

CALENDARS

Maria Tuthill of the Calendar Marketing Association says hot new calendars feature Garth Brooks, Cindy Crawford, Arnold Schwarzenegger and "Northern Exposure"; perennial favorites include "Far Side," Sports Illustrated swimsuit calendars and 'Star Trek: The Next Generation."

Humor also is hot; two to look for are "Farmer Johnson's Psycho-Dairy Farm" and "The Cat Made Me Buy It."

There are dozens and dozens of new calendars for 1993. Here's the CMA's A-to-Z cross section: "All Cow," 'Book Lovers Calendar." "Cars Detroit Never Built," "Dear Abby," "Elvis," 'French for Cats," "Gardens of Paris," "Hey! Diddle, Diddle...," 'Iditarod Trail," "Jay Leno's Headlines," "Kitchen Diary," "Let's Make Fun of Lawyers," 'Museums of the World," "Native American Portraits," 'Our Town Remembered," "Professional Beach Volleyball," "Quiet Places," "Radical Windsurfing," 'Scream Gems," "Tips for Planet Earth," "Unpleasant Ways to Die," "Vanishing South," "Wild America," "Extremely Weird Animals,' "Young Indiana Jones," "Zig Ziglar's 365 Secrets of Success."

Electronic and board games for fun

By Jennifer Plantier
Copley News Service

There are always those people on a holiday gift list who stump you. But before you give up and settle for that generic tie or a nut-covered cheese ball, consider one of the many adult games designed to spice up gatherings with friends or family.

Leading off the lineup of games as gifts is the original adult board game that changed the meaning of home entertainment and brought entertainment home. The special 10th anniversary edition of Parker Bros. Trivial Pursuit game celebrates 10 years of the trivia trend. This limited edition is based on the 1982 Genus edition that sold more than 19 million copies.

Also from Parker Bros. is the new Split Second game that requires both knowledge and speedy reactions. The first player to slam down a paddle with the answer to one of the game's esoteric questions wins a point.

Speedy Graffiti, a fast-paced word game from Tiger Games, pits players against each other and the ticking clock. Players rearrange cards on the table to form words. The last player to form a word before time runs out keeps the cards. The rounds continue until the entire deck has been collected among the players.

A potentially hilarious game for three to six players encourages gamers to get a few things off their chest. Likes 'n Gripes from Pressman Toys challenges competitors to match what they do and don't like about life. Categories range from TV game shows to dentists.

Tickle someone's funny bone with Pass the Pigs from Milton Bradley. Players roll two little pigs like dice and score points according to how they land. Shoot for the "double-leaning-jouler" position, but avoid the "oinker" at all costs. It takes a special sense of humor to appreciate this one.

Check with local software dealers for sophisticated computer games tailored to the individual interests of computer owners. A wide variety of complex sports simulations, realistic flight simulators and home "casinos" are available.

The holiday season seems to prompt lots of reminiscing with friends. Times to Remember from Milton Bradley inspires team players to guess the correct year in which specific events took place. Use time windows from 1950 to 1990 to place events in five categories: Headlines, Hollywood, Music, Television and This & That.

Nameburst from Golden Games is another team game designed to call up plenty of old memories. A partner gives clues prompting players to guess the names of up to 10 famous people in 60 seconds. Both players earn points for correct answers.

Make A Scene from the Games Gang will brighten up get-togethers during the holidays and all year long. Players must draw as many objects as they can into a specific scene before time runs out. However, all objects must begin with the same letter and relate to the theme at hand. This fast-paced game of "category" drawing leaves it to the players to haggle over what does and doesn't belong in a particular picture.

Even with this rich selection of interactive games behind us, we must admit there is more to life than parties, and thus more to adult gaming than party games.

Check with local software dealers for sophisticated computer games tailored to the individual interests of computer owners. A wide variety of complex sports simulations, realistic flight simulators and home "casinos" are available.

A new and unique challenge for interested and aware adults is SimLife from Maxis. An environmental simulation, it actually allows players to create and manipulate life forms and even entire ecosystems. Computer gamers will lose themselves for hours in a virtual 'genetic playground.'

Another alternative for adult computer gamers is on-line networks that feature gaming options. Radio Shack has introduced the Sierra Network for use with Tandy computers. The Constant Companion includes classics such as chess, bridge, backgammon, cribbage and hearts. Sierraland is an amusement park that houses a variety of adventure and arcade-style games.

Tips for planning a sparkling celebration

By Letitia Baldrige
Copley News Service

The holidays are a time for people to come together—to answer the human need for get-togethers of one's close family members and friends, or of people one hasn't seen for a long time.

The holidays are, therefore. not only for children, but for adults who enjoy the advent of joyous reunions. The holidays may also be the loneliest, saddest time of the whole year for those who don't have the great fortune to be a member of a loving family.

During the holidays, we should particularly reach out to those who are lonely, without a family or who have had bad news during the past year (illness, a death in the family, a job loss and the like). How I wish I could finance a vast fleet of skywriting planes to spell out a message overhead all over the country: "Entertain your friends—now."

There are numerous entertaining ideas for the holiday season, and these are but a few:

• A trim-the-tree party in your home from 3 to 6 on a Sunday afternoon for people of all ages. Coffee, tea and soft drinks would be served (in cold climates, hot chocolate for the children, too). Also popcorn. cookies, candy canes and little gingerbread men.

Everyone would be made to "work," which might consist of putting one ornament on the tree, but the tree decor would be a communal effort with, of course, guaranteed splendid results.

• A cocktail party at home for everyone in your office if there is no office Christmas party this year. You would invite everyone in your section, from the mailroom clerk to your divisional head, and have people bring their spouses or dates.

Many companies are doing without office parties this year, so you will become a big hero if you — alone or with a group of colleagues—carry on the tradition. Hold the party in the home of whoever has the most space or lives the closest to the office.

You can serve a minimum of food (just some munchies will do it) — and only eggnog or wine punch if an open bar is too expensive.

Make the hours of your party short ("from 5:30 to 7"). Make it a simple affair that is not too close to Christmas. (Later everyone becomes too busy.) If you want more lavish food than you can afford to serve, ask colleagues to pitch in and bring some hors d'oeuvres.

• A caroling party held for your friends and their children. Have them come to your home by 4 o'clock, go through a rehearsal. hand them the lyrics, give them their marching orders, and then go out to sing in a group throughout the neighborhood.

Return by 6:30 to your home for hot soup and sandwiches (cocktails for the parents), and then everyone can go home by 7:30.

• A Christmas Eve supper, for which people dress in "casual attire" (which could be anything from jeans and sweaters to warm bathrobes). Give each guest a gaily wrapped little present at his or her place at the table (anything from a tiny jar of strawberry jam to a new kind of inexpensive pen).

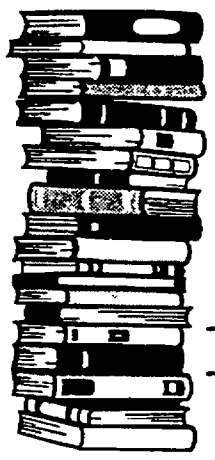

Keep the menu simple, manageable and inexpensive (a heaping bowl of hot pasta, for example. plus a big green salad. a gooey dessert, wine and coffee).

• A dress-up (black-tie) Christmas Eve dinner for people who are old enough not to have the problem of excited children at home in the care of reluctant baby sitters.

LIGHTS FANTASTIC

Something illuminating is going on in the world of holiday lights, and you're invited to plug into the latest happenings.

Now, for instance, you can find strings of lights that resemble herds of cows, schools of fish or a variety of other objects such as hearts, vegetables or red hot chili peppers.

Other lights bubble or blink, follow synchronized patterns or simply shine in a variety of sizes and colors.

And, if a lowly bulb isn't dressy enough for your holiday scheme, simply remove one from a string and attach an ornament that borrows wattage to power an illuminated or moving Christmas scene. There also are whimsical light bulb covers that can be used to dress up a standard set.

If a lowly bulb isn't dressy enough for your holiday scheme, simply remove one from a string and attach an ornament that borrows wattage to power an illuminated or moving Christmas scene

HOLIDAY HOUSE

With so many festive motifs and fabrics adorning everything from dinnerware to linens, you don't have to settle for everyday during the holiday season.

Instead, replace what you have with holiday-inspired china, glassware, mugs, aprons, towels. guest soaps, floor cloths. candlesticks, placemats. tablecloths, napkins and holders and table runners for the month of December.

In some cases. creative decorators can make what they want themselves with cloth and holiday patterns.

OUTDOOR CELEBRATION

Could Santa miss your house because of its utter lack of adornment? This year, things can be different.

Thousands of colored or white lights always make an impression.

Other ideas include synchronized lights that trace twinkling patterns on houses and in trees, and electronically-lit luminarias that glow without the mess and hazard of sand. paper bags and candles.

Larger-than-life forms of reindeer, snowmen, stars and sleighs that are lined with lights can create a shining presentation in a yard or atop a roof. And, a holiday windsock hung on the porch can cheerfully soften a bitter winter breeze.

TRADITIONAL TRIMMINGS

You can trim your home almost as easily as you trim your tree. thanks to wreaths. garlands. centerpieces, wall hangings. bows and other glad garnishments.

Dress up a banister. for instance, with a fresh or faux evergreen garland decorated with bows. ribbons. bells, ornaments or lights, or decorate a door sill with a spray of evergreen and fresh mistletoe tied with a bow.

Add a fragrant touch with scented oils, potpourris, cinnamon brooms and candles.

And, don't forget to finish your tree in terms of necessary trimmings. Once the lights and decorations are on, add ropes, ribbons, streamers, garlands, tinsel or icicles. Then, buy or make a tree skirt, and consider coordinating gift wraps for a unified look.

SIGNS OF THE SEASON

The holiday season just wouldn't be the same without its traditional symbols, statuettes and such lovingly positioned on the mantles and shelves. Depending on the celebration, must-have items include:

• A nativity: There are hundreds from which to choose. including creche sets hand-carved from wood and crafted from porcelain.

• Candles: From glowing menorahs to clusters of votives, candles bring an incandescent touch to the holidays.

• Stockings: Whether they're knitted, stitched, embroidered or store-bought, stockings are as individual as their owners. Hang them on the mantle or purchase decorative stocking hangers if yours is a home sans a fireplace.

• Topiaries: Lights. pinecones, foliage and flowers adorn these delicate faux trees that always add a touch of sophistication to a holiday scheme.

• Decorative toys: Those who believe one is never too old for toys love to position teddy bears in the rockers, toy trains under the tree and hand-crafted dolls in holiday arrangements.

You might pamper her with services as well as products. Sign her up for a year's worth of facials (or manicures or pedicures), a full-day of spa care, six blissful body massages—or perhaps a beauty make-over, complete with cosmetics.

REMIND HER

Search for unusual and lovely pieces of the past in antique stores and secondhand shops: rhinestone jewelry, cloisonne brooches, needlepoint pillows, Victorian-era mirrors, art nouveau boudoir lamps.

Give her a fancy frame that showcases a keepsake item. You ll find exquisite and unusual frames — decorated with gold filigree, porcelain rosebuds, floral fabric and lace—in gift shops and department stores.

You might encase a child's photo in a frame decorated with tiny hearts and teddy bears. In fact. according to The Great Frame Up (a franchised chain of frame stores). there are more than 100 items suitable for framing.

Among them: family crests, needlework, calligraphy. cartoons, honeymoon memorabilia, quilts, recipes, historic letters, love poems and pressed flowers.

Hatboxes also have multiple uses and make great gifts (tuck something sweet and simple inside —such as hand-knitted mittens, a potpourri pillow, seashells or silk flowers). Hold Everything stores carry hatboxes in four lovely designs: European Beechwood, Cottage Garden, Snug Harbor and Renaissance.

Who says wrapping paper has to go on the outside of a gift? Specialty shops sell stunning wraps and enclosure cards that make beautiful, practical gifts. Patterns include paisleys, marbleized stone, plaids, Florentine designs, butterflies and delicate florals.

While you're at the card shop, look for scented stationery and Language of Flowers address books and gardening journals (from Penhaligon).

Ideas from the bookstore: "The Nature Journal: A Monthly Guide to Wildlife" by Miriam Anne Bourne (Starwood Publishing); "Grandmother Remembers" songbook by Judith Levy and Judy Pelikan (Workman); "America: Then & Now," edited by David Cohen (HarperCollins); "Baking Bread: Old and New Traditions" by Beth Hensperger (Chronicle Books).

And here's an assortment of collectibles to consider: carousel horse figurines, music boxes, holiday-themed china, clocks and watches, vintage fountain pens, perfume atomizers, dollhouse furniture, rubber stamps (new ones have botanical designs), salt-and-pepper shakers, miniature vases, reproductions of antique ornaments.

Tips for planning a sparkling holiday celebration

Do something dramatic like buy some gold lame. have it made into a shimmering tablecloth. and watch how beautiful the china. silver, crystal and holiday decorations look against it.

• A Christmas Day lunch after church for family and, or friends complete with a tiny gift at each place, a festive place card. table decorations galore and a wonderful big turkey with all the fixings.

An invitation for this meal is perhaps the biggest compliment of all to a non-family member. For someone who is feeling blue. it is instant and effective therapy.

• A Saturday night cocktail party in late December for everyone in the neighborhood or in your apartment complex or whatever. There is a steep mood letdown right after Dec. 25, so a cheer-up cocktail party' soon after Christmas is great fun for everyone.

For any and all holiday parties you organize you may certainly appropriately invite your best friends to help you — perhaps to bring some food or contribute to the bar. It's the end of the year and we should all gather to celebrate the fact that next year will probably be much better than this one was.

At times like these. for people who have had a really tough time. I remember the song from Walt Disneys movie. Snow White. titled Wishing Will Make It So.

Some gift-wrapping ideas for smart Christmas elves

• Instead of gift tags, paint the recipients' names on ball tree ornaments or a bookmark—or attach small personalized articles such as toothbrushes, pencils, combs or barrettes.

• Enhance a wrapping paper motif by adding appropriate toy miniatures, for example: on paper covered with stars, add plastic foam stars painted silver or gold; on paper with fruit or flowers,tie on real or wax fruit, real or silk flowers; on music motif paper, tie on a tiny brass horn or tickets to the opera.

If you're one of those folks who hates to wrap gifts, take heart— nearly all major department stores offer wrapping services for a nominal fee, and many mailing outlets provide one-stop wrapping, packaging and shipping services.

If gifts are to be shipped, the United Parcel Service offers the following guidelines to ensure that presents are adequately packed:

• Use corrugated cartons or boxes in good, rigid condition, with all flaps intact and no punctures, tears or corner damage. Select a carton large enough to allow room for sufficient cushioning material on all sides of the contents.

• Cushion inside the box with plastic foam peanuts, crumpled newspaper or heavy brown paper. Cushioning should be stuffed several inches on all sides of the item so it cannot move easily when shaken. Double box and use extra cushioning for fragile items.

• Close the carton securely with a strong tape plastic or reinforced tape at least two inches in width. Masking or cellophane tape is not sufficient—they crack and peel and don't provide necessary strength. Don't use string or paper on packages, since they can get snagged on conveyor belts.

• Label properly. Include complete return address and ZIP code with the complete mailing address; never place the label over a seam or closure or on top of sealing tape; place clear tape over the label so ink will not smear; put an extra address label inside the box in case the outside is damaged.

You, our customers, deserve only the best; therefore, we proudly carry only top quality products from around the world. At Colasanti's you will find the best fruit and produce available as well as a full line of deli products, a meat and fish market, bulk candy, coffees, gourmet desserts and many, many more specialty grocery items.

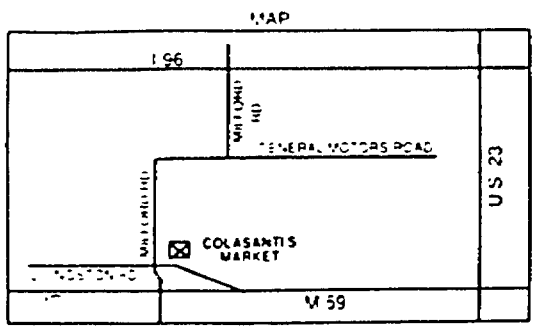

We invite you to visit us for an enjoyable shopping experience — or just to say hello to our many pets. Situated in a park-like setting, you will find many beautiful and gentle animals. At Colasanti's our animals are part of our family and each has an important role in making you feel welcome. By the water the mute swans, Australian black swans and many other kinds of waterfowl frolic in the water for your enjoyment. You will also find peacocks, rheas and over thirty different kinds of pheasant and other birds eager to make your acquaintance. Somewhat more shy, yet ever trustful, our miniature deer, "Pride" and "Joy", will walk over to say hello.

Inside our greenhouses as you wander through the silk flowers, wicker baskets and gift items, and smell the aroma of our healthy bedding and tropical plants, you may wonder who is talking to you. It could be one of our colorful, American-born parrots. They are anticipating your visit and look forward to a lively conversation. The squeals and grunts you may hear are from Winnie, our Vietnamese pot-bellied pig, demanding your attention and a pat on the back.

All of us at Colasanti's look forward to your visit. Bring the family!

At times, an advertised item may not be available because of sales exceeding anticipated demand, space limitations or other circumstances beyond our control, such as manufacturer's delivery problems. Therefore, it may become necessary to limit quantities of advertised items. If an item is unavailable at a retail store, it can often be ordered from a regional distribution warehouse, unless it is prohibited for sale by state or local law. Many items in this publication come unassembled and will only be assembled by the retail store when indicated. SINCE 1933

NORTHVILLE

GARDEN CITY

BRIGHTON

At Strellman's™, we take great pride in creating our jewelry. Our designs are works of art developed by our Design Team, which includes an artist, technical engineer, merchandising manager, retail shop manager and a consumer fashion specialist. These individuals work together to create a design which is dramatic, structurally sound, reasonably priced and comfortable to wear. After a great deal of time and effort is spent working and reworking, the final design is copyrighted and released for sale.

The majority of our designs feature unusually shaped stones. We select only premium quality gem rough in genuine or laboratory grown material. The rough is hand cut and faceted to our specifications by expert stone cutters.

A wax replica is made from the original mold, and then hand shaped to fit each individual stone, ensuring a perfect fit. After placing it on a tree of wax, it is covered with plaster and fired in a kiln. The heat burns out the wax, leaving a void in the shape of the original design. The finest 14K gold alloy is then melted and poured into the plaster mold. Great care is taken to cast our jewelry free from pits or porosity, allowing the gold to polish to a mirror finish. Finally, a skilled stone setter carefully places the gemstone in the perfectly formed setting, creating a masterpiece!

Our philosophy at Strellman's is simple. We believe that well designed, quality jewelry, is the most satisfying to wear; and ultimately, the least expensive to own. With proper care, our jewelry will give enjoyment to many generations.

Sincerely,

T. Dean Strellman, President

Far less expensive material such as Cubic Zirconia (CZ) or Austrian crystal (glass) can be used to imitate the genuine stone, but it would not stand up to the rigorous wear that jewelry receives.

Created stones also provide a cost-effective … colors and shapes … otherwise prove extreme… pensive or impossible with … emstones. For example, if we attempted to provide our Padparadschah Sapphire Lens Cut in the genuine stone, it would cost anywhere from $100,000 to $250,000.

Another special benefit of created stones is that colors rarely found in nature can be grown in a laboratory. Bright Green Sapphire, for example, is scarce in nature, but can be laboratory grown large enough to cut a medium size Lens Cut.

DESIGNER CUT GEMSTONES

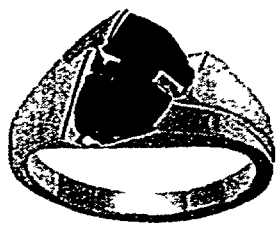

Designs featured here present quite a departure from jewelry offered by most mass merchants. As more people clamor for new designs, many manufacturers make simple modifications in the gold mounting and call it quits. Our designs go far beyond, with unique gemstone shapes as well as dramatic settings.

Designer cut gemstones often require 3 to 5 times more rough material than a traditional stone cut to achieve the same finished weight. It takes a great deal more time to cut and polish each stone, than a softer, less durable material, such as CZ, glass or other imitation gemstone. Each unique stone must be hand cut and hand faceted to exact dimensions by our highly skilled stone cutters in Brazil, Korea and Thailand.

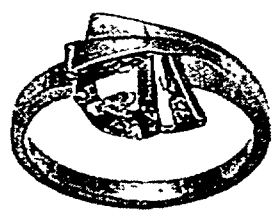

Designer cut gemstones are on the leading edge of modern jewelry technology and provide the medium necessary for creating dramatic jewelry with a completely unique look.

AMETHYST

Recognized as the birthstone for February, Amethyst is also the accepted anniversary gemstone for the sixth year of marriage, It has symbolized peace, protection and tranquility. For centuries the beauty and fire of the Amethyst has been highly prized by royalty, who often adorned themselves with the color purple. This is evidenced in the ornaments of ancient Greeks and Egyptians and in the British Crown Jewels, where Amethyst abounds.

Amethyst is durable enough to be worn every day but should be protected from scratches or severe impact.

PADPARADSCHAH

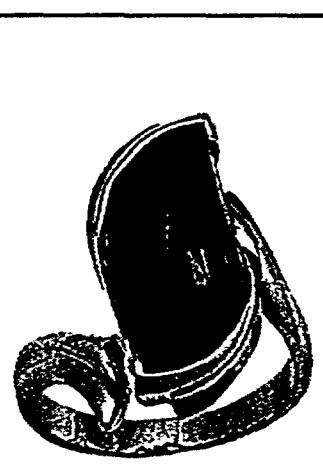

(Pahd-parahd'-schah)

TOPAZ

The name Topaz is derived from the Greek word "to shine"; it also implies "fire." It is a very hard stone and is perfect for use in jewelry. Topaz is one of the accepted birthstones for November and is the anniversary gemstone for the 4th year of marriage.

Found mainly in Brazil, Nigeria and Sri Lanka, Topaz often occurs in a colorless state. This clear gemstone, "White Topaz", has recently gained great popularity because of its strong resemblance to diamond and its affordable price.

Certain types of Topaz are irradiated and heated to produce shades of blue. The three basic shades are Sky Blue (a pastel blue), London Blue (a deep cool blue) and Swiss Blue (an intense electric blue). The jewelry collection featured here is unique because few (if any) jewelry manufacturers offer Swiss or London Blue Topaz in designer cuts. The time, effort and level of difficulty required is just to great.

HOW TO CARE FOR FINE JEWELRY

Jewelry is at its best when it is kept clean. Some gems, such as Diamonds, have a natural affinity for oils and pick them up like a magnet. Soak your ring in a small jar of ammonia at night and rinse it off with water in the morning. For the hard to reach areas and stubborn residue, scrub with a toothbrush and dental floss. Remember, never use any chlorine based cleaners.

Ultrasonic cleaners also work very well and can be used on everything featured in this catalog except the opal ring. If you plan on using an ultrasonic, check with your jeweler first to avoid damage.
