School budget hinges on state funding riddle

By MICHELLE HARRISON
Staff Writer

Maybe the final budget priorities for the 1993-94 school year will be approved at the Aug. 23 Northville Board of Education meeting. Then again, maybe not.

Although the board had anticipated making final decisions on its budget priorities, that won't happen at the Aug. 9 meeting.

"We really want to be in the position (where we can say) here are our recommendations, here is the financial picture we have," Supt. Leonard Reznierski said. "I'd like to marry the priorities with the funding."

But until the state Legislature announces the provisions in the state School Aid Act, no such wedding will take place. That could be as soon as this month or as late as October.

Northville receives money from the state for categorical programs, services such as transportation, special education, food services and the gifted program.

Since the district is considered out-of-formula and receives 96 percent of its revenue from local tax collections, the district is not eligible for major funding from the state, unlike in-formula school districts.

Last year Northville received about $32,000 of its $23,941,747 budget from state sources. This year, anticipating it will have to pay added Social Security and retirement costs, the district set aside $465,000 in its preliminary $25,115,709 budget.

Reznierski said he will announce

Bargain day

Encouraged by near-perfect weather, shoppers and browsers turned out in big numbers for the Northville Sidewalk Sale Saturday. According to organizer Ronnie Cambra, merchants purchased 37 spaces along downtown sidewalk and the crowds remained heavy for most of the day-long event. In addition to great bargains, barbershop quartet music, fresh roasted almonds, and a used book sale were also featured.

Teen Task Force backs new center

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

They have a vision of what they want the Northville teen center to be. Now all they need are the people and the resources to make their dream a reality.

"Make it big, make it cool, make it a place where people will want to come," said one of the five high schoolers who volunteered to work on the project.

After listening to what a handful of Northville teenagers had in mind for the teen center at a meeting July 28, Northville township and city officials and civic and church leaders tied to the project had few objections to the teens' concept.

Opposition to the idea doesn't seem to be as big of an obstacle as financing and land acquisition for the new center. But community leaders and volunteers are committed to undertaking the ambitious project and seeing what develops.

Northville Action Council President Roxanne Casterline was enthusiastic about the progress and support the teen center was generating from the community. She said a similar project was pitched seven years ago, but failed for lack of support within the community.

"Seven years ago we presented something like this," she told the sparse crowd that met at township hall to plan for the center. "But I feel positive now because we have the township and others helping."

Township Supervisor Karen Baja was also there to lend her support and do what she could to help get the

Train strikes man crossing Griswold track

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

An 18-year-old Novi male was in fair condition Tuesday after being struck by a train Sunday night.

Derek Sugamosta was hit by a 15-car CSX Transportation train at 11 p.m. while crossing the tracks under the Griswold Street bridge. He was with four other Novi youths at the time.

Jim Rowland Jr., one of the youths present at the scene who saw Sugamosta being hit, said Tuesday that they simply misjudged the train's speed.

"We were just hanging out there and we saw the train coming but were too casual about leaving the track," Rowland said. "I looked back, saw him and he was in motion, getting off the track, but his arm was swung back and it just clipped him..."

"They say a train is moving faster than it looks from head-on, and I guess that's true."

The northbound train's speed was estimated at 40-50 mph in the 50-mph zone.

Train engineer Richard Stebner told city police that he saw several youths standing on the south side of the tracks under the bridge when Sugamosta tried to join them.

"It appeared as if the victim was attempting to cross the tracks and just didn't clear the train in time," according to the police report.

Stebner applied the emergency brakes and the 15-car train came to a stop just before the last car went under the bridge. The engineer agreed to take a preliminary breath test at the scene, and his blood alcohol level was measured at 0.00 percent.

When police and medical personnel first inspected Sugamosta, the youth was "conscious and somewhat alert" with several broken ribs, a broken left arm and lacerations on the right side of his face. Further examination revealed a collapsed lung.

The youth was taken by ambulance to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, and then flown by helicopter to the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor. He was still in the center's Trauma and Burn Intensive Care Unit as of press time Tuesday.

Twp. cops bust youth drug ring

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

It's a tale of a dangerous drug dependency — a dependency that apparently led four Northville youths to commit multiple felonies.

Northville Township Police Detective John Werth said solving the recent string of break-ins in Northville, Livonia, Salem Township and Plymouth amounted to nothing short of piecing together a jigsaw puzzle.

And, after a two-month investigation that led to three search warrants, the detective said he wasn't surprised at all to learn that the youths he suspected all along were behind at least 12 area B & E's.

Already arrested and arraigned are Redford resident Anthony Burton, 22, on three counts of receiving and concealing and one drug charge, and Plymouth residents Sandy Lewis Gardner, 20, and James Allen Nance, 19, one drug count each.

None of the four Northville residents can be identified at this time because two are minors, and the two adults have yet to be arraigned for the crimes, Werth said. A fifth Northville youth, although not charged in the case, has already been placed in a drug rehabilitation program.

WARRANTS ISSUED

For 60 days detectives hammered away at the case around the clock. In the end they put one Northville teen into a juvenile home; held a three-count warrant against another pending in juvenile court; and have five outstanding warrants against two other Northville men.

In addition, evidence obtained from the youths after their arrests led to the apprehension of two other key players. One was a 22-year-old Redford man who was allegedly receiving and concealing stolen merchandise from the youths and selling them marijuana.

The other was a third juvenile who's suspected of being a main marijuana supplier to Northville High School students, Werth said.

PLYMOUTH CONNECTION

The case unfolded with a drug raid on a home in the city of Plymouth in June. There, township police stumbled across the marijuana they had expected to find, along with drug paraphernalia and documents of drug deals.

Plymouth residents Gardner and Nance were both charged with possession with the intent to deliver in 35th District Court on Tuesday, Aug. 3. The charges stemmed from the June raid on the Plymouth home.

Both were released on $5,000 personal bonds and face an Aug. 27 court exam, Werth said. The charge carries a maximum four-year prison term.

B & E's SOLVED

Interviews with the two conducted after that raid put Werth and the township's detective bureau on the trail of the suspects detectives felt were responsible for at least five break-ins in Northville Township in May.

With each arrest, and with continued pressure from township police, the youths informed on one another, Werth said.

When it was all said and done, township police had solved 12 break-ins — five in the township, one in the city of Northville, two in Livonia, three in Salem Township and one in Lyon Township in Oakland County.

"There are more than just the 12," Werth said. "But we got confessions on those 12. These kids are involved in numerous others, but right now we know they are behind these 12."

"We got some of the suspects through that (Plymouth) case."

Werth recalled while waiting outside 17th District Court in Redford last Thursday to arraign 22-year-old Burton for his alleged part in the ring. "We arrested some of the suspects later on minor violations."

Interviews after those arrests painted an even clearer picture and led police to Burton, the Redford connection. Werth identified Burton as the man to whom Northville youths allegedly would bring their stolen merchandise to exchange for marijuana.

Burton was at the Redford court Thursday to be arraigned on three counts of receiving and concealing stolen goods and one count of possession with the intent to deliver.

Bernard drags schools back into circuit court

By MICHELLE HARRISON
Staff Writer

Round three has begun in the Robert Bernard vs. Northville Public Schools match.

The event won't take place in the ring, but rather in Wayne County Circuit Court, as Bernard has filed another complaint against the district for its alleged refusal to release information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA).

Bernard's latest court complaint stems from an FOIA request which he said was never answered. FOIA guidelines require a response to such requests within five business days beginning the day after the request is received.

"Some of the information I asked for is supposed to be available to anyone walking in off the street, but I was denied," Bernard said. "Even if you allow for the 10-day extension permitted under the FOIA, the information is long overdue."

"Unless this is just some sort of demented game being played out with the school budget and taxpayer funds, I can only conclude that if Northville Public Schools is refusing to share what is supposed to be public information, they must be trying to hide something."

Bernard said the information he requested pertained to public statements made by Supt. Leonard Reznierski regarding the cost of producing documents Bernard had requested.

a date for a board study session at Monday evening's board meeting. Members will discuss budget priorities at that study session.

At that meeting, members also will read the letters that were sent to the district and review the public comments made at the July 8 public hearing and the telephone calls received before the July 12 board meeting, Reznierski said.

At the July 8 public hearing, about 20 people addressed the board. The pay-to-participate co-curricular and athletic program and Student Assistance were most mentioned by the audience as priority programs.

The board held the hearing to garner public input on prioritizing the $1,367,131 in programs that were cut or reduced following the defeat of the 1992 millage election.

Based on a 3-percent assessment cap, the board figured it would have over $430,000 in its general fund budget to work with. However, with the provisions of the School Aid Act still unknown, that figure is a question mark for school officials.

An even larger question is what the district will do in 1994-95 when it loses its local property tax revenue. Gov. John Engler is expected to sign a bill when the Legislature reconvenes this month which slashes property taxes by two-thirds.

TO UNDERSTAND WHY WE HAD TO MOVE, PHOTOCOPY THIS 50,000 TIMES.

You've never seen 50,000 music titles in one place before. Of course, before Borders, you'd never seen 100,000 different books in one store. Now both are at the new Borders Books & Music.

At the risk of harping just think about what you'll find 14,000 classical titles, including twenty-five recordings of Beethoven's 9th 17,000 not-so-classical rock and pop titles (The Velvet Underground? Eleven albums.) Enjoy Frank Sinatra? Use moderation when you see seventy-five titles. Jazz? 9,000

Of course, another reason for moving is to improve on what you've always had at Borders. Enough space to relax and sit down with a good book—even with a cup of cappuccino at our espresso bar. We've gone so far as to put in a children's section with storytime area, music listening lounge, and a video section that includes classic films.

As for the music section, there'll be no bebop hip-hop musical irritation urging you

Motorist's windshield breaks after truck passes him on Taft

City police received a report of a man having his windshield broken while turning from southbound Taft west onto Eight Mile at 4:20 p.m. July 30.

The man told police he was being passed by a large white rental truck and a mid-size reddish car driven by a white male wearing a backwards baseball cap when the incident occurred. His car had two breaks on the windshield and damage to the hood.

Police are unsure whether the damage was caused by something that fell off the truck or was intentionally thrown from one of the vehicles. Damage was estimated at $250.

SUSPENDED LICENSE ARRESTS:

City police made two suspended license arrests in the early morning hours of Aug. 1. A 67-year-old Northville man was stopped for running a red light at Main and Griswold just before 1 a.m. when a computer check revealed that his license was suspended for failing to appear in court on Plymouth and Southfield traffic charges.

Further checking revealed that the license plate on his vehicle was registered to a different vehicle. He was arrested and released after posting a $100 bond.

A 28-year-old Dearborn woman was charged with driving on a suspended license after police stopped her for a broken headlight and tail-light about 3:30 a.m. She had failed to appear in court on a Bloomfield Hills charge and failed to comply with court judgments from charges in Inkster and Livonia.

There was also an open warrant for her arrest from Birmingham police for a license plate violation. Northville police cited her for obstruction of justice after she refused to give them booking information or submit to fingerprints. She was released after posting a $150 bond.

DRUNKEN DRIVING: A 29-year-old Westland man was charged with driving under the influence July 31 after city police stopped him for speeding south on Center Street just after 2 a.m. The man failed field sobriety tests including counting backwards and said he was too nervous to recite the alphabet.

A preliminary breath test pegged his blood alcohol level at .193 percent, nearly twice the legal limit, but he refused to submit to a Breathalyzer test at the police station. He was held until 11:35 a.m. when he had sobered up, and released after posting a $100 bond.

FENDER BENDERS: City police responded to three accidents July 31. A 17-year-old Northville man told police he had to swerve while heading south on South Main to avoid a car entering his lane from eastbound Seven Mile. In doing so, he struck another southbound driver in the next lane.

The other driver reported seeing a car speed south after the 2:15 p.m. incident but no description was given. No citations were issued.

An 18-year-old Northville woman was cited for failing to stop within an assured clear distance ahead after driving into the back of another car at 3:40 p.m. while heading north on South Main at Doherty Drive. The other car had stopped in the left-hand lane to make a left turn when the woman drove into it. No injuries were reported, and both cars were driven from the scene.

A Northville man was cited after backing out of a First Street driveway into a northbound car just after 4 p.m. No injuries were reported, and neither car was disabled.

FOUND PROPERTY: A First Street homeowner turned a boy's bike over to city police July 31. The homeowner said the yellow and blue bike was left on the front lawn for three days. Anyone wishing to claim it is asked to call the Northville City police at 349-1234.

Citizens with information about the above incidents are urged to call Northville City Police at 349-1234 or Northville Township Police at 349-9400.

Detective likens case to jigsaw puzzle

Twenty-two-year-old Anthony Burton is a suspect in an alleged local theft operation.

and members of the Western Wayne Special Operations Team were at it again at Burton's home in Redford. On July 7, Werth entered the Redford home, arrested Burton and his girlfriend, and seized a van full of stolen merchandise, some of which belonged to Northville, Livonia and Salem Township homeowners.

A reporter from The Northville Record accompanied township police on a surprise search of Burton's home that balmy Wednesday morning.

Members of the Western Wayne Special Operations Team assembled in the township board meeting room at 5 a.m. to plot their strategy. There team commander, Sgt. John Sherman, briefed officers on his plan for entering the home and told them to expect to find Burton asleep in the basement. The raid went down at 6:35 a.m., right after township police linked up with Redford officers at a flower shop near Burton's home.

Minutes after police stormed through the front and side doors, the home was secured. Its occupants were either handcuffed or restricted to the living room. As police conducted their search, Burton, his girlfriend, a brother, an aged father, and a sister and a brother-in-law along with their two children sat spell-bound in the front room.

Burton, appearing shaken by the police raid, was led out of the home and seated in the back of a Redford Township police car. He sat mute while he watched police haul the stolen goods from his home. His girlfriend, who was arrested on an outstanding drunk driving warrant, did the same in a squad car parked nearby.

As Werth, Lt. Gary Batzloff and Detective Fred Yankee catalogued the evidence, a narcotics dog from the Canton Township Police Department sniffed the basement for more drugs. The dog turned up a total of 9½ ounces of marijuana from a safe next to Burton's bed and more tucked away in the wooden cavity of a speaker.

Police also confiscated a weight scale, plastic bags with marijuana residue, $2,021 in cash along with the two $10 bills township police marked and used the day before to set Burton up. The money and drugs were allegedly used to pay off the Northville youths for the stolen goods they brought to Burton, Werth said.

Things in Burton's basement were just as several of the youths had told police they would be. There were few surprises and fewer disappointments. Many of the stolen goods were in plain view on or around a pool table in the basement. Cash and drugs were in the safe next to Burton's bed, just as the youths had described.

A search of the upstairs of the home netted police two .22-caliber rifles and a 12-gauge shotgun.

Before police left the home, they took with them Burton's safe, his PageNet beeper, jewelry, receivers, amplifiers, tuners, video cameras, microwaves, a compact disc player, speakers, a video camera, televisions, handguns, rifles and shotguns.

They also hauled away a four-wheel all-terrain vehicle, a 1987 Honda Helix motorcycle, a 1984 Chevy Camaro and a 1991 Pontiac Grand Am, all of which could be forfeited if police can prove they were purchased or used in the drug trafficking business on which Burton allegedly made his livelihood.

A video camera and recorder was returned to a Northville city resident who reported it missing after his home was broken into on May 18. A police scanner and a box of compact discs that were found at Burton's residence were returned to a township resident who reported a break-in on May 17.

Police also returned $300 and some gold jewelry to a third township resident who reported a B & E on May 25.

The ATV, which was reported stolen from Ypsilanti, was returned. Two amplifiers found at Burton's were also brought back to a Livonia homeowner.

Burton seemed more at ease last Thursday outside the courtroom than he did that morning in Redford. Seated on his left was the girlfriend police busted at the scene, and on his right, his 90-year-old attorney.

The 22-year-old told the Record he regretted getting involved in the operation and was glad police intervened when they did.

"I was glad that I got caught," he said with some relief. "I'm glad it didn't get real big. This way it kind of got down to reality."

"I'm sorry now for getting involved ... but you won't hear my name again."

Burton said he couldn't remember how the whole thing got started. He said he was working as a bus driver before he got involved in fencing stolen property and selling drugs. But shortly after his former fiancée left town with their daughter, he lost the bus driving job.

Burton said he needed money because his fiancée was charging him to see their daughter, but after she left with the child it didn't matter.

His mother's death also contributed to his trouble with the law, he said. When she died, Burton said he started to lose control and that's when a friend of his started to send "business his way," he said.

His friend, who is still unidentified, was the one who sent the Northville youths to him. Burton said he didn't know at first that the youths were stealing the merchandise, but he figured it out later. He said they would bring "the stuff" to his home and sometimes he would buy it, other times he wouldn't. Burton said when he didn't buy the merchandise, he figured the kids were selling it on the streets.

"Sometimes all they wanted in exchange was marijuana," Burton recalled.

DRIVEN BY DRUGS

Werth listened to Burton tell his side of the story outside the Redford courtroom last week. After Judge Richard Manning heard the arraignment and set Burton's exam for Aug. 17, Werth said breaking the ring was worth all the time and energy he and detective bureau had put into it.

"It was a long time coming and a lot of interviews," Werth said. "There was a lot of paper trailing but the final product paid off."

Township detectives still have outstanding warrants to collect on the case and are hoping further investigations will crack some of the remaining unsolved break-ins. While detectives are celebrating in the short-term, Werth said the whole case was a travesty and a further indication of the teenage drug problem in the community.

"All they were doing was feeding their habit and the only source they had to do it was to break into homes," Werth said.

"If this community doesn't think there's a drug problem here, they're fooling themselves," he said.

Police seek three teens seen near site of arson incident

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

A Highland Lakes resident told Northville Township Police he saw three teenagers near the clubhouse an hour before a nearby wooden storage shed exploded in flames last Friday morning.

The man, who is a security guard at Highland Lakes condominium association, gave police the descriptions of the three teens he saw walking by the clubhouse around 3 a.m. Friday.

An hour and 40 minutes later Northville Township police and firefighters were called to the Highland Lakes clubhouse to extinguish a fire that had engulfed the storage shed and destroyed all of its contents.

The three suspects are all white males between the ages of 16 and 18. The first suspect weighs between 140-160 pounds and is between 5 feet 8 inches and 5 feet 10 inches.

The second has short blonde hair, weighs between 160-180 pounds and is between 5 feet 10 inches and 6-feet tall.

The third male has long black hair and weighs between 160-180 pounds. He is also 5 feet 10 inches to 6-feet tall.

Police and fire officials have determined Friday's fire was intentionally started even though state fire marshals have yet to determine the cause of the early morning blaze. The State Arson Control division is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the arsonists who caused the $40,000 in property damage.

Police Lt. Gary Batzloff said he didn't know if the suspects were actually linked to the fire.

"We don't know if they were involved we just know they were in the area of the incident that night," he said.

Nonetheless, township police are asking for anybody with any information about the fire to call the township detective bureau at 348-5806.

Rollover accident snarls traffic on Novi highway

By RICK BYRNE
Copy Editor

A rollover accident on I-96 last Thursday afternoon injured one man, and snarled traffic in the area for hours.

Michael DeGregory, 32, of Mt. Clemens was seriously injured when the 1990 Mercedes Benz truck he was driving was sideswiped by another vehicle, causing it to tumble across the highway into the median.

The truck, owned by Continental Contracting of Mt. Clemens, was out-fitted for highway striping, and the accident left several paint splatters on the roadway.

According to Michigan State Police reports, DeGregory was eastbound on I-96 and had just passed the Wixom Road on-ramp. A 1993 Ford Probe, driven by Timothy Smith, 17, of Livonia, attempted to enter the highway from the ramp, but had to slow to avoid DeGregory's truck, which was holding the right lane.

The Probe then began tailgating the truck, and Smith pulled into the center lane to pass. As he did, according to DeGregory's statement to police, both Smith and his passenger gave angry stares to the truck driver.

Smith then cut into the truck, striking the left front wheel. Both vehicles slid across the highway, and the truck rolled over, landing in the median.

Police issued a citation to Smith for hazardous action. Neither he nor his passenger were injured.

DeGregory was transported to Huron Valley Hospital where he was treated and released that night.

Though the accident occurred at 3:55 p.m., traffic on I-96 and connecting roadways was tied up for hours afterward by clean-up and investigation. Westbound I-96 was bumper to bumper past the I-696 interchange, and south to Eight Mile Road as late as 9 p.m. At 11 p.m., bumper-to-bumper traffic was still reported on I-96 both east- and westbound.

Shop owners hope to find sense of community

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

It's been called the staff of life. But for Ray and Lorie Novelly, bread represents the beginning of a whole new livelihood in downtown Northville.

The former advertising executive and dental hygienist have decided to exchange the corporate grind for ground wheat, as owners of the new Great Harvest Bread Co. franchise at 139 E. Main.

Michigan natives, each 34 years old, the Novellys have spent the past decade moving from one job to another — from Detroit to Denver, New York City, Washington D.C., back to New York City and finally to Chicago.

"We just got tired of the corporate lifestyle," Ray said. "We realized after 12 years that there was more to life than moving from position to position."

"We lost the sense of community."

They hope to rediscover that lost sense in Northville, by teaming with a bread company that prides itself on baking the finest and freshest product in the world. Great Harvest is a Montana-based firm which has risen to prominence by selling whole wheat bread made from grain harvested on the great plains of Montana, grain praised for its high protein level and low moisture.

The flour for each day's bread is ground that day at each store from whole wheat berries, to assure that it is as fresh as possible.

"From the moment it's ground, it starts losing its freshness," Ray noted.

Ray first stumbled across Great Harvest at a store in Milwaukee, and was instantly "hooked," he said. The scents of baking bread brought back memories of neighborhood bakeries that he frequented while growing up in Detroit.

Lorie hopes their store will reflect elements of those old-fashioned bakeries. "It's the closest thing you can have to your own mom-and-pop business, but I think it's even better because you're with a bunch of people who have the same interests," she said. "It's like an extended family."

The Novellys' store will be the 60th location for Great Harvest, and the fourth in Michigan. While that seems like a lot, Ray noted that the company only grants five to eight franchises a year out of the 3,000 applications it receives.

Potential franchisees go through a rigorous screening process and are encouraged to take a hands-on approach to the business.

"They really want a team that will work on the premises and be there daily," Ray said.

"Nobody cares about your business like you do," Lorie added.

The Novellys spent months searching metropolitan Detroit for the best location for their franchise, conducting marketing and demographic studies before settling on Northville for one simple reason.

"It had the strongest sense of family," Lorie said.

The couple plans to turn their Main Street store into an ongoing demonstration of the bread-making art, with rails instead of walls between the customers and ovens and a clear view of the five-by-twelve-foot kneading table.

With that in mind, the Novellys hope to open the store up for school tours, and always plan to have samples on hand for customers.

"We decided if we were going to do this thing, it's going to be real interactive," Lorie said.

The loaves will be baked continuously from stone-milled wheat and will contain no fats, oils, eggs or preservatives. Several varieties will be offered each day, including Honey Whole Wheat, Raisin Walnut, Sunflower, Oregon Herb, Oatmeal Poppyseed and Banana Pecan.

"I think it'll be good for Northville because it's a very health-conscious community," Lorie said.

The Novellys hope to fire up their oven Sept. 1.

Ray and Lorie Novelly shunned the corporate world to open their own business and will sell several varieties of bread on Northville's Main Street.

State police drop brutality investigation

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

Michigan State Police have found no evidence to sustain a former prisoner's complaint that he was assaulted twice Feb. 18 by a trooper from the Northville post.

The department has closed its investigation into the charges.

Keith Sousa, 22, had told a Northville Record reporter in June that he was roughed up by Trooper Wayne McKalpain when Sousa and partner Chad Garrison were arrested for burglarizing a Canton home.

The two were caught in Novi following a high-speed chase north on I-275. Their burglary had been witnessed by members of a Michigan State Police surveillance team.

When the fleeing Ford EXP was finally forced to the side of Novi Road north of Twelve Mile, Garrison ran into the woods where he was apprehended about an hour later. McKalpain arrested Sousa, the driver, at the scene.

Sousa claimed that McKalpain slammed his head to the ground several times while placing him under arrest, and hit him several more times after entering his holding cell at the Northville State Police post while Sousa was handcuffed to the wall of the cell.

His allegations, outlined in a Canton Public Safety Department report written later that day, were investigated by an Internal State Police Inquiry conducted under the command of former post commander Lt. Jack Moulik. That investigation concluded that the allegations were untrue.

Current post commander Lt. David Werner reopened the investigation after being named to the post in mid-May, saying he agreed with the conclusion based on the evidence, but adding that the inquiry itself had not been thorough enough to satisfy him.

While several witnesses at the arrest scene and the state police post had been interviewed, Werner said he wanted to talk with two Canton rescue workers who transported Sousa to Annapolis Hospital in Wayne that evening at Sousa's request.

The initial investigation found no evidence of injury to Sousa, though emergency room personnel at Annapolis Hospital had found "abrasions over the right side of the face, angle and mandible of the right cheek . . . (and) diffuse tenderness over the scalp." A handwritten assessment on the medical report also noted "jaw swelling."

A blurry color Polaroid picture of Sousa taken by the Canton Public Safety Department after his arrest shows a bruise on the side of his face and several faint red marks on his cheek.

Last week, Werner announced that the reopened investigation had come to the same conclusion as the original. Though Sousa was injured, he said, the injuries were not from being attacked by McKalpain.

"There's nothing to allude to the fact that (Sousa) was punched or hit," he said. "As a matter of fact, we talked to medical staff at the hospital as well as the Canton officer that took him to the hospital."

Sousa said he was thrown to the ground by the trooper after he climbed out of his car, despite surrendering to the officer and making no attempt to resist arrest. Werner said Sousa did resist, according to McKalpain's original report, and the felon's facial injuries appeared to be a result of his opposition.

"They struggled to the ground and Trooper McKalpain handcuffed him . . . To handcuff him behind the back, he (Sousa) would have had to be lying face down," Werner said.

"The abrasions he had were more like scrapes that happened in the struggle with the trooper."

"That's his version," Sousa replied when told of the police officer's statements. "I got out with my hands up and said 'Where do you want me?' . . . There was no force involved except for him forcing me."

Sousa said the officer threw him to the ground, placed handcuffs on him and then slammed the side of his head off the pavement several times. Sousa also claimed that before McKalpain entered his cell and attacked him again, a state police official placed a piece of paper in the window of his holding cell to block the view. Werner said police interviewed the desk sergeant on duty at the time and heard no mention of that, and no mention that McKalpain ever entered the prisoner's cell.

Werner said the police investigation into Sousa's charges was stymied in part by his refusal to cooperate with their requests for information. "He refused to cooperate or talk with us," the post commander said.

But Sousa has consistently denied refusing to release information, and authorized a Record reporter in June to turn medical records over to state police. According to Sousa, the state police have requested no information from him since an interview with an internal affairs investigator shortly after the original incident.

Sousa pleaded guilty to breaking and entering an occupied dwelling March 12 in front of Recorder's Judge John P. O'Brien, and was taken to Wayne County Jail. He was sentenced April 19 to 1 1/2 - 15 years in prison and transferred to Adrian Temporary Correctional Facility.

He was released to a halfway house program July 12.

Rare cars displayed at annual auto show

By LEE SNIDER
Editor

The Northville area will be well-represented this weekend at the 15th annual Concours d'Elegance, the prestigious classic auto show at Meadow Brook Hall.

Local collectors Ed Meurer and David Marold will enter cars in the show, regarded as one of the top three classic automobile exhibitions in the world.

Meurer will display a 1947 Packard Clipper Super Deluxe Custom, while Marold will show his 1956 Packard Caribbean convertible.

Marold said his car is a true collector's item.

"It was the third of 276 made, so it's fairly unique. I bought it from a wealthy gentleman in Montgomery, Ala., 16 years ago.

"I just got it redone. That took a year-and-a-half."

The Concours d'Elegance is a benefit for Meadow Brook Hall, located on the campus of Oakland University in Rochester. The show features more than 250 classic automobiles, some of which are valued at more than $1 million.

The show will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 8.

Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children 12 and older. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Cars from the year 1932 will be highlighted at this year's event. Forty different makes of 1932 cars with approximately 50 different models will be displayed. A three-member jury of auto executives from the Big Three companies will judge the cars and award trophies.

In addition, an exhibition of automobile art will be shown in a tent on the grounds of Meadow Brook Hall, the mansion of the late Dodge family matriarch Matilda Dodge Wilson.

The Concours d'Elegance is ranked as one of the top classic car shows in the world, along with concours that are held annually at Pebble Beach, Calif. and Bagatelle, Paris.

All proceeds benefit Meadow Brook Hall, which is used as a public educational and cultural center. The hall will be open for tours during the concours hours.

School watch dog takes district to court

"I believe that Dr. Rezmierski is making these derogatory statements solely to discredit my efforts, and defame my name and reputation within the community," Bernard said. "I have basically asked him to either put up or shut up."

Rezmierski maintains he did respond to Bernard's FOIA request, asking for a 10-day extension because he was supposed to be in Washington at the time of the FOIA deadline.

Rezmierski said the district's response to Bernard was sent the evening of the July 12 board of education meeting, three days before the extended FOIA deadline.

"I know we responded," the superintendent said.

If Bernard had not received the response, why didn't he call, questioned Rezmierski.

"I was gone but my secretary could have answered that, she was the one who mailed it," Rezmierski said. "We could have put a tracer on it or something."

The superintendent also denied Bernard's claim that he is trying to defame the school activist.

"I couldn't answer that because I honestly don't know what he means," Rezmierski said.

In a copy of the district's July 12 response to Bernard's FOIA, Rezmierski wrote that there was no specific documentation of the costs incurred due to Bernard's FOIA requests. He added that the district did not have a policy which determined the costs for processing FOIA requests.

"Nevertheless, the fact remains that responding to your various FOIA requests and lawsuits have cost the school district a substantial amount of money," Rezmierski wrote.

Since last October, Bernard has made approximately 12 FOIA requests and filed three lawsuits. Last December, Bernard filed a court complaint because he claimed the district never properly answered an FOIA request regarding a school policy that didn't exist.

The district ended up paying Bernard's court costs of $85.

In April, Bernard filed a complaint against the schools, asking that the district be barred from printing any ballot information in "The School News," the district's newsletter.

He based that complaint on his contention that the district printed one-sided information about Proposals A and C in editions of the newsletter prior to the November 1992 vote.

The case was dismissed in late May after Bernard failed to appear for a show-cause hearing in Judge Michael Talbert's courtroom. At the time, Bernard blamed his failure to attend the hearing on a mix-up between his attorneys and the court docket's schedule.

In his letter to Bernard, Rezmierski said the district incurs about 75 cents in copying and clerical costs identifying and reproducing the information requested through the FOIA, assuming a cost of 15 cents per copy and $8 per hour for clerical work.

"Legal fees incurred in reviewing responses to your various FOIA requests and handling your first lawsuit total approximately $754," Rezmierski wrote. "I have not received a bill from our law firm for defending against your most recent lawsuit, but I imagine the cost is significant."

Last week Rezmierski said he felt it was foolish that the district had to spend so much time and money on such lawsuits.

"This is making mountains out of proverbial mole hills and taking precious time and money over these issues," Rezmierski said. "I don't even know what the issue is."

Mill Race Matters

Visitors to Mill Race Village often query docents about the Village's origin. Usually only limited information is available on the buildings and their furnishings. Many Northville residents are familiar with the stories from our community's past, but have forgotten or never knew of its more recent history.

During the 1950s, the village of Northville became a city. Shortly thereafter, Mayor Mike Allen's administration decided to modernize the city's downtown area. One early project was the current City Hall which replaced the historic Lapham Home which had become inadequate for the city's needs.

A second project was the development of Northville Square which was built as a shopping mall for the downtown area. Today that building houses MAGS (Michigan Association of Gift Sales).

In order to build the shopping mall a number of buildings had to be removed. One of those buildings had served the residents of the area for 72 years as a library. It has not originated as a library, however. The building was built in 1845 by a splinter group of the Presbyterian Church. It served as a church for only four years before converting to other uses.

Mary Lapham donated the building and its property to the then-Village of Northville for community use with the stipulation that the building always be available for use by the Northville Women's Club, of which Lapham was a founding member and second president.

When the city decided to use the land, residents of the community, most notably Women's Club members, grew concerned. Area residents formed the Northville Historical Society in the mid-1960s as a result. Their primary concern was finding a location for the "library."

The newly formed Historical Society also became interested in preservation of the historic landmarks in the city. As a result of their survey, Northville's Historic District was established and, thus, the Historic District Commission.

Not too long after Ford Motor Co. was persuaded to donate land which had been owned by the company in 1919 for the establishment of a historic village. At that time Ford gave the city land and the mill pond amounting to almost 12 acres. Even before the gift was finalized, two buildings were moved to the site. These two buildings are known today as Hunter House and The New School Church at Mill Race Village.

Garden Club members attend national meeting

Country Garden Club of Northville president Lillian Chagnon and secretary Patricia Zielke were on hand at the recent Spring Council and Annual Meeting of the Womens' National Farm and Garden Association held at Addison Heights Conference Center in Romeo.

Chagnon and Zielke received on behalf of the club both first place national and state awards (for their membership size) for community service and second place in the state for marketing.

The club's 23 members are engaged in many community endeavors throughout the year, including creating and maintaining gardens at Mill Race Village (Hunter House), Allen Terrace (retirement housing), and Star Manor (nursing home).

The Country Garden Club of Northville was formerly named Country Girls' Branch.

Novi land purchase will replace wetlands in area

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

Novi is exercising an option to purchase 59 acres of land on West Road to replace wetlands which will be lost to the 1990 road building program.

The city will hire a contractor to build the new wetlands to state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) standards, City Manager Edward Kriewall said. The work will likely be done in 1994, he added.

The land is on the east side of West Road and south of South Lake Drive.

The city council and the Dallas-based property owners, West Road Associates, agreed to a $650,000 purchase option for the site in April. The city council decided last week to go ahead with the deal. The option was not set to expire until September.

Plans call for the building of 5.1 acres of wetlands to replace those lost to Taft Road improvements, as well as 3.2 acres of wetlands to mitigate losses created by the upgrade of Decker Road and the Twelve Mile Road expansion.

The DNR requires 1.5 acres of wetlands to be built for each acre of wetland lost.

Oakland County put the site up for a tax sale in March, because the owners were behind over $18,000 in their property taxes.

Teen center idea needs input from target group

A group of concerned civic leaders and officials is working hard to generate community support for the idea of a teen center, a place where youths could go and socialize in a wholesome, non-threatening environment.

The purpose, of course, would be to provide local youths with an alternative to roaming the streets in search of excitement and a relief from the boredom of idle hours.

The concept certainly has merit and we applaud Northville Action Council President Roxanne Casterline and First Baptist Church Youth Pastor Rob White for their efforts in this direction.

The idea is very much in the planning stages, and basic issues such as location and financing have yet to be worked out. It hasn't even been decided if an existing facility would be used or if a new building would have to be constructed.

But while we endorse the exploratory effort to discuss the idea of a youth center, we also feel compelled to emphasize that leaders should look for a display of interest on the part of area teens before undertaking a project of this scope.

Northville Township Supervisor Karen Baja, one of the principal officials involved in the planning of the center, expressed this same sentiment at a sparsely attended public session July 28. Baja, looking around and seeing few students on hand in the township hall room where the group had gathered, noted that there is little point in proceeding with the development of a teen center if the facility is not likely to be used.

We agree. As worthwhile an idea as this is, teens themselves must become involved if the project is to work. Input from area youths is crucial, not only because it suggests sufficient interest to justify the establishment of a center, but also because teens are needed to help design the kind of club that would appeal to their age group.

We urge local teen-agers to attend the meetings of the teen center planning officials and lend their support to the project. The next meeting is tentatively set for 7 p.m. Aug. 25 in the meeting room at Northville Township hall off Six Mile Road.

Time has come to name school budget priorities

The Northville Board of Education has a tough decision to make. The board must identify portions of the budget that will have to be cut as a result of the cash crunch now facing the school district.

Adding to the problem is the uncertainty of state lawmakers, who have yet to devise a school aid package for the coming year. The Legislature's delay, to say nothing of its recent vote to eliminate school property taxes, has caused planning nightmares in districts across the state.

But, Lansing's lethargy notwithstanding, life goes on and the time has come for school trustees to decide on a list of program priorities, even if such a decision would have to be preliminary in nature. Board members originally intended to broach the subject at their voting meeting next week, but plans have changed, and it now looks like the earliest a decision will be made is Aug. 23, only a few weeks before the start of school.

The board of education did a decent job of soliciting public input on budget priorities in early July. Parents were invited to offer input at a public hearing and via the telephone during a special call-in session with trustees.

But the time to arrive at a decision is now at hand. Parents and educators need to know what program cuts are going to be forthcoming so that they can make their views known before the new school year begins. At issue is, among other things, pay-to-play, the controversial program under which students are charged a fee to participate in athletics and co-curricular activities. Many parents are quite eager to hear if the program will be extended into a second year.

We hope school officials will move expeditiously to formalize the latest round of budget reductions and allow district residents to react. This summer vacation, like all summer vacations, is moving fast.

Is media influence overrated?

Lee Snider

I don't believe in jinxes, but, watch, the next time there's an election I'll end up with egg on my face (it won't be the first time — I'm often groggy when I eat breakfast).

But, at the risk of jeopardizing a spotless record, I'll chance saying it anyway: I'm three for three!

Since becoming editor of The Northville Record the newspaper has issued three election endorsements and all of them have prevailed at the polls.

In June, we recommended a yes vote on the school millage and it passed. In the same election, the two school board candidates we endorsed won seats. And, last week, we suggested giving the nod to the bonds for the parking deck, and city voters handed the proposal a resounding victory, 356-307. Well, it was a victory, anyway.

Three for three, a perfect score. And that's not even counting the defeated Proposal A, which we panned a few days prior to the June 2 statewide balloting.

Are we on a roll or what?

But, before I get even more disgusting about how influential the paper has been under my direction, I should admit that there are two ways of interpreting this. One is that people read the Record scrupulously and meditate upon the unshakable truth of its pronouncements — that's my personal favorite.

The other is that the Record's official positions tend to reflect the thinking of the majority of voters in the community. That one's not bad, but I like the other explanation better.

Actually, though you wouldn't know it from my glibness, there's an important question underlying this point. To what extent do media contribute to setting trends and to what extent do they simply fall in line with existing patterns?

It's hard to know for sure and I suspect there might be a little of both at work — to some degree, media both lead and are led.

Generally, though, I tend to think media representatives are more reactive than pro-active, following the predominant moods of the audience they set out to reach.

If you buy into this idea as I do, you might shy away from blaming entertainment and information services — TV and the music industry as well as newspapers — for some of the nonsense that's in such abundant supply at every newstand and on the countless channels of your television at home.

Few people would dispute the notion that we're an impressionable lot and can be deeply affected by what we see and hear; but we're also capable of making up our own minds. Is it humanly possible to empathize with the guy who killed a police officer down in Texas and claims he was driven to commit the crime by rap music?

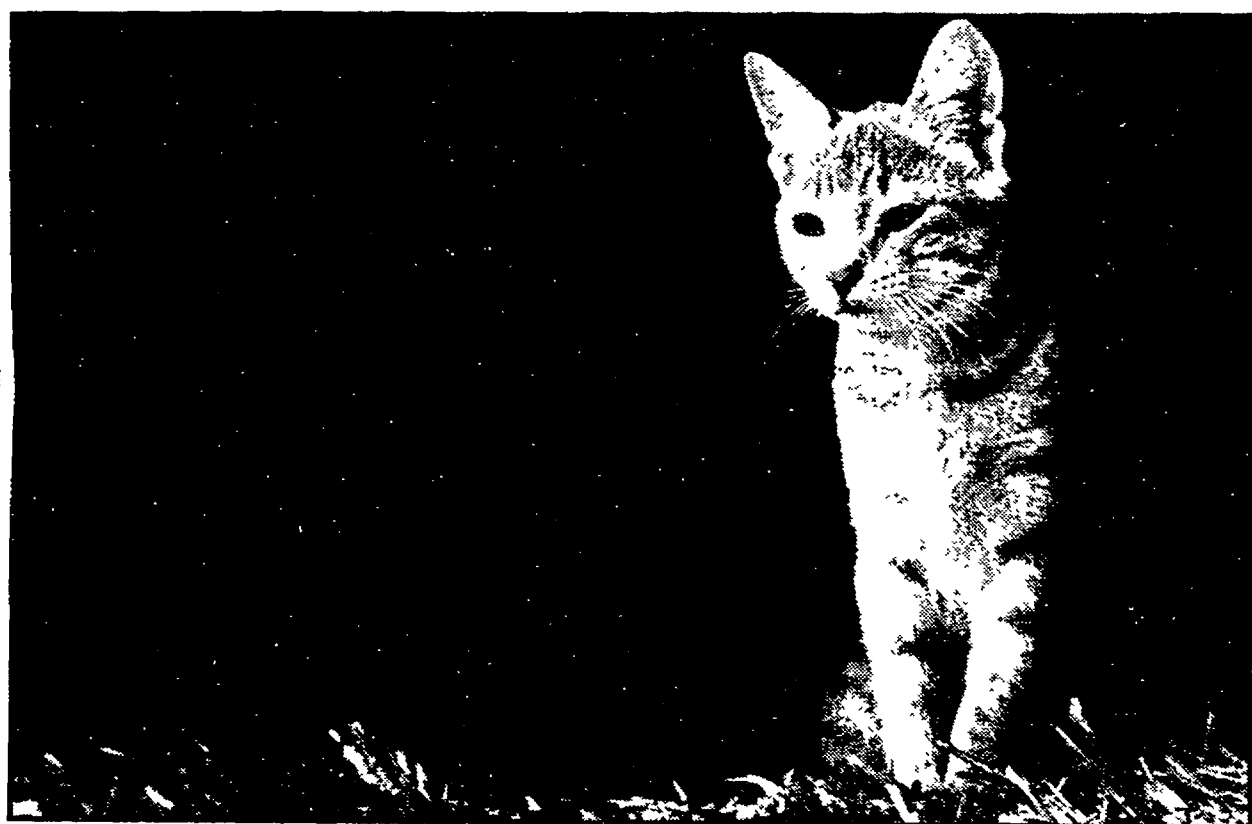

I endorse the movie rating system, music warning labels and the newly-instituted television advisory system, but I have a hard time faulting creative individuals who accurately read the public disposition and cater to it.

So, after straying far afield with this one, it's time to come back to the original point. Do I take our responsibility to make informed endorsements seriously? Yes. Do the endorsements have an appreciable impact on the outcome of elections? It's doubtful.

What do you think?

Don't be convicted of blame

Michael Malott

You've heard of the phenomenon often referred to as "blaming the victim." That's what they call it when the perpetrator of some crime, or even just a cruelty, points to the victim and tries to argue that "something you did made me do this to you."

Blaming the victim occurs so frequently that it has been the subject of numerous psychological and sociological studies. I remember reading reams of information about the phenomenon when I was in college.

But what really astounds me is that it happens so frequently that many in our society begin to believe it, that it really was the victim's fault.

There is also a phenomenon I refer to as "blaming everybody else." That seems to happen with at least equal frequency. I think it is at least worth as much study by the experts. And in the newspaper business, I hear it very often and from people who agree that the victim really was to blame. So much so I hear it that I'm beginning to question the moral fiber of our society as a whole.

Take for instance Keith Sousa, who earlier this year was caught red-handed burglarizing a home in Plymouth Township and then led state police on a high-speed chase all the way to Novi Road north of Twelve Mile. Sousa's already been convicted and spent jail time for the crime.

But Sousa also alleges a state trooper brutalized him both at the scene where he was apprehended and in the cell where he was detained.

To hear Sousa tell it, yes, he's made mistakes — burglarizing homes, fleeing police, carrying guns in other instances — but despite those flaws he'd "never lie just to get a police officer in trouble."

Reading Sousa's comments it's pretty clear he believes that regardless of what he did, what the police officer did was worse.

It is the same sort of thing that gets me so hot under the collar about the Vicki Carlesco case in Novi Schools. Vicki and her mother are suing the school district because officials did nothing to protect her from a part time swimming coach after she was sexually molested. Later, a second incident involved rape.

Now, the coach too has been convicted of the crime but the question before the courts is the lack of action by other school district employees. It is pretty reasonable for students and their parents to assume that the school district will do everything it can to protect a student when they are in the school building. And the Carlescos are in essence alleging that in not protecting Vicki, they betrayed their trust.

The school district attorneys are arguing back that they weren't responsible because she was a "willing participant."

I see this as pretty classic "blaming the victim." For one, there is no evidence she was "willing" to do anything. For another, the conviction of the coach on CSC charges means it's already been proven she was not a willing participant. Finally, at age 15 at the time, she legally could not have consented to anything.

This past week, we've received a run of angry phone calls about a story that appeared in The Northville Record about Jack Allen, accused of second degree criminal sexual conduct for allegedly molesting a juvenile female relative.

The callers, all of whom have declined to give their names, or say what their relationship to the situation is, have accused the paper of "ruining her life," referring of course to the victim.

That leaves me a tad baffled. It wasn't the alleged molestation that hurt her, these callers are arguing, but the publication of the story in the paper.

Needless to say, I think it's the perpetrators and the people who let the perpetrators get away with these things that are to blame. The rest of us — the victims, the police, the newspaper — are just trying to do what they can to correct the messes that have been made.

Society will never convince some people to take responsibility for their actions. But society also ought not let them get away with pointing blame to everyone else either.

Police, media spending too much time on Autry

To the editor:
We should consider ourselves truly fortunate to live in a community where the police consider a $1.25 lapse of judgment serious enough for the arrest of an individual, and our courts have enough time to prosecute the offense. Furthermore, the media considers it front page news ("Autry is arrested for minor offense," Northville Record July 26, 1993).

While I am not condoning what Mr. Autry did, I think the real crime is being committed on each of us through the attention and effort focused on this event. The police and the court system should have more important things to do. If not they are overstaffed and are wasting taxpayer's dollars. I'm not sure how much time the police have put into the Autry vs. Ansara case, but anything more than responding to Mr. Ansara's complaint and talking to Mr. Autry, is in my opinion too much. The lack of common sense from our township officials, on this and other matters as well, is costing each of Northville's taxpayers dearly.

Water line pressure will be watched in Novi area

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

Monday, the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department delivered a pressure recorder to Novi to monitor how water is flowing through city lines.

The end of a rather dry spell in July eased some worries about this summer's water pressure woes.

"We just had some hard rain last week. If we could just get rain every seven to 16 days, we'll probably survive. If we had a period of extreme drought and increasing high temperatures, it would cause some concern," Novi Superintendent of Public Works Bruce Jerome said.

"The demand on the Detroit water system is going to be up and we're going to suffer."

A few days in May, late June and early July the residents of the impacted areas experienced "extremely low pressures," Jerome said.

Dry weather means users of the Detroit water system are doing heavy-duty lawn sprinkling.

Typically, high elevation areas in the city have experienced low water pressures, particularly in parts of Simmons Orchards and Yorkshire Place, side-by-side subdivisions north of Ten Mile Road and west of Taft Road. Sarah Flynn Drive, Davenport Avenue and Freemont Drive are the streets experiencing the most water flow difficulties.

Residents in the new Greenwood Oaks subdivision at Ten Mile and Beck roads are now also having water problems.

Low pressure hits the impacted areas in Novi most often between 5 a.m. to 8 a.m.

Demand on the Detroit water system has increased significantly since 1990, according to a report Jerome submitted to the city council. Novi's water department gets calls from residents who say the heads of their automatic water sprinkler systems won't pop up out of the ground due to the low pressure or that their showers barely work.

Most of Novi's water comes from a line along Fourteen Mile Road, although the city can tap into several Eight Mile Road connections if the pressure slackens.

"It's not so much subdivisions as parcels within subdivisions due to the elevation. Our system works off of gravity," Jerome said.

"Some parts of the city enjoy 70 to 80 pounds of water pressure. These areas on good days have 35 pounds. If we lose 20 pounds of pressure from Detroit, it's quite noticeable there."

"If you live in one of those 20 to 30 homes, it's a pretty substantial problem."

Jerome is working on an action plan to address the issue, with the emphasis placed on public sanitation and fire protection. This includes a recommendation that Novi enforce its odd day/even day lawn sprinkling ordinance. The city is checking the valves in the water transmission system to make sure none are closed. In addition, Novi plans to restrict flushing of newly installed water mains to non-peak demand hours.

If the low pressure becomes critical, one of the first things Jerome says he'll do is stop city sales of water from its fire hydrants to swimming pool and landscaping companies. Water main flushing could be temporarily banned.

In addition, the city's existing drought emergency ordinance could be implemented. This restricts outside water usage such as lawn sprinkling, pool filling and car washing.

Religious activists seek control

Tim Richard

The letter writer, a senior citizen, expressed the question many readers have posed:

"Dear Tim: I want you to know that I always read your stuff . . . Keep up the good work. Your attitude about the religious right puzzles me. Why does their belief trouble you? Why should we pray, as you suggest, that the finding of a gene relating to Huntington's disease, will be enough to shake the R.R. out of badmouthing Darwin, etc? . . . Let them believe what they want to."

The "religious right," as the media are now calling it, isn't a single group or church. It's a movement. According to a public TV documentary, it dates back to the 1970s.

It holds that what we know as the Bible is literally true, even in its primitive notions of astronomy, chemistry and geology. The approach is called "fundamentalism."

The religious right took a terrible public relations beating in 1925 with the Tennessee trial of John Scopes for teaching evolution. According to its chroniclers, it retreated to an American subculture and was little heard from until the late 1970s.

They claim about 20 percent of American adults as members. Watch Pat Robertson on the "700 Club," and you'll hear him purport to speak for Judeo-Christian ideals. Actually, the religious right has almost no Jewish support and small numbers of Catholic adherents, though it joins with some other Christians on the abortion question. Essentially, it's a narrow white Protestant movement.

Their beliefs are their business. So what do I find objectionable about the religious right's political behavior?

First, it has advocated the teaching of "scientific creationism," a contradiction of terms, in public schools on an equal footing with standard science. There was a flap over this in the Michigan Legislature in the early 1980s. When a group seeks to have its religious view passed off as science, then mainstream Americans need to be alerted.

Second, it advocates a voucher system for financing schools. They want tax money to teach their brand of religion and, presumably, their brand of "science." Currently the Michigan Constitution, with 80 percent voter support, prohibits a voucher system.

Third, it attacks all state school curriculum legislation (except sexual abstinence), all state regulation of private schooling and the existence of the State Board of Education.

We Michiganians are proud of the fact that ours was the first state in the union to guarantee free public education as a constitutional right. We established a superintendent of public instruction in 1837 and a State Board of Education in 1909 to lead and supervise education. The Michigan Constitution contains broad protections for religion. That constitution and those institutions are under vehement political attack by one narrow group.

Fourth, the religious right is exploiting children and setting up principals in Michigan and across the nation to do what it failed to do politically — reintroduce its brand of prayer and Bible reading in public schools. Recall the Bloomington court fight over the portrait of Jesus. Note the efforts at graduation time to prompt kids to insert prayers into ceremonies.

There is no "live and let live" with the religious right. As we've seen from its savage attack on the Michigan Model, its tactic is to assert that a satanic "New Age" religion is being taught in the public schools and needs to be displaced.

This is not a humble sect wishing to be left alone to worship peacefully in its own way. The religious right seeks governmental power: control of the science curriculum, use of tax money for its religious agenda and the scrapping of Michigan's historic commitment to public education.

That's just for starters.

Keep your conversations going

Mary Ellen King

Almost every day we hear on TV and read in the newspaper that it is of the utmost importance to have positive communication with our children — but there are many parents who just don't know how.

Parents at times ask questions like "Why did you do that?" or "Why didn't you . . . ?" Often the youngster responds with "I don't know." Listed below are open-ended questions which will hopefully elicit more than a one or two word response and also keep a conversation going.

Could you tell me . . . ?
I'm wondering if . . .
Can you say more about . . . ?
Have you thought about . . . ?
Are you saying . . . ?
What does that mean to you . . . ?
What (how) is that for you . . . ?
I don't quite get what you mean, is it . . . ?
What does " . . . " mean to you . . . ?
How do you view that . . . ?
Can you expand on that . . . ?
For example . . . ?
Do you have a specific example in mind . . . ?
When do you feel that way . . . ?

Are you feeling that way now . . . ?
What sorts of things can you learn from that . . . ?

How do you mean that . . . ?
Would it be accurate to say . . . ?
Could you describe that in more detail . . . ?
The part that still isn't clear to me is . . .
I'm not clear what you mean by . . .

Teens look for center to provide safe haven project off the ground. But before the supervisor was willing to pound the pavement asking for donations, she wanted some assurance that teens would use the center.

"It is really going to take a lot of energy on your part to get your peers interested in a teen center," she told the seven teens who came to the meeting to further the project. The supervisor said the teens could build a stronger case for the center if there were more of them who turned out to support the center the next meeting on Aug. 25.

The five Northville High School students and two 1993 alumni who were at the meeting said they would get the word out to their friends about the proposed center. They all agreed to work with the adults in helping to raise funds and solicit help from the community.

Rob White, Youth Pastor at The First Baptist Church of Northville, was also there to lend a hand. He said he would do what he could to ask for help in the community by advertising in the church bulletins. White said he got involved with the project at the grass roots level because he believed in what teen centers can do for kids.

"It's a place where kids can go to hang out," he said. "It's all about having fun."

White said he hoped the center would provide a safe, drug- and alcohol-free alternative place for teens to gather.

"We care about young people and we want to help them," he said. "We have to limit the excuses so we can help them out."

Teens and adults at the meeting agreed that the biggest obstacle and temptation facing Northville youths today is the absence of a place to go. The teens at the meeting say nowadays their biggest hangouts are local fast food restaurants. But even that gets old after awhile, according to them.

They say what they want is a place to call their own. A place they can go and feel safe and be teenagers.

Sue Poster, the owner of the Crawford's Bakery, sympathized with the teens' frustration. She said when she first opened the restaurant years ago teenagers flocked there. They would sit for hours and talk because they had nowhere else to hang out, she said.

After awhile, Poster said she had to resort to throwing them back onto the streets. The baker said there really wasn't much in town for teens to do or any local shops that cater to their needs and interests.

"They would eat me out of house and home," she said. "But there is just no place in town where they could buy a record, compact disc or a magazine," she said.

There was little skepticism from group members about the need for the teen center. Instead, the issue before the teen task force is where and when the center could be built.

Baja said she believes there is ample land available in the township that could be used for the center. But keeping the costs of the project down is the key to creation of the center. She said she would do what she could to bargain with Wayne County administrators, developers and township land owners to see if anybody could or would donate property to the township for a teen center.

While some members of the group seemed divided on the need for building a new center rather than using an existing facility, Baja said she would keep an eye open for available land.

"There are possibilities in chunks of land available if that is the avenue we want to pursue," she said.

Group members encourage anyone who is interested in getting involved with the teen center project to come to the Aug. 25 meeting. The meeting is scheduled in the meeting room at township hall at 7 p.m., but interested persons are encouraged to call the township at 348-5800 before the meeting to confirm its location.

Jeremy Lane has the potential to win at the 1996 Paralympic Games in Atlanta, Ga.

His mom and dad think so. The United States Cerebral Palsy Athletic Association (USCPAA) thinks so. But most importantly, Jeremy Lane thinks so.

"I want to win," the 16-year-old said. "I do better if there's someone faster than me."

"When he's running and he knows someone's close to him, he seems to get that extra burst of energy," Jeremy's mother Darlene explained.

Jeremy is back in his Novi home following a week-long trip to Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. There, he trained with other USCPAA members in anticipation of the Paralympics, a competition styled after the Olympics for athletes who are physically disabled. He was the only athlete from Michigan selected to attend.

The training trip was not without injury, though.

"We were warming up by jogging 10 minutes," Jeremy explained. "Eight minutes into it and the ball of my foot started hurting. I stuck out the two minutes and I got a big blister on my foot."

Jeremy did learn some important techniques in preparation for the Paralympics, like the claw drill, where runners are trained to run on the ball of their foot instead of the heel.

Before his trip to Indiana, Jeremy participated in the Cerebral Palsy Association's National Olympic Track and Field event in Hartford, Conn.

He won two gold medals — one each in the 100-meter dash and the javelin competitions — and a silver medal in the long jump event. He was also given a try-out in soccer and subsequently was asked to attend week-long soccer camps to establish a national USCPAA team for the Paralympics.

Jeremy was born with cerebral palsy. His father Ken said, in essence, Jeremy had a pre-natal stroke which paralyzed his entire right side when he was born.

In the sports category, Jeremy is considered a CP7. A CP8 is someone with a very slight physical disability while a CP1 is someone confined to a wheelchair.

When he was in second grade, Jeremy joined the Tri-City Seals, a physically disabled sports team based in Westland. He stopped temporarily in 1986 to play soccer and little league baseball and rejoined the team in 1988.

Jeremy competes or has competed in soccer, track and field, air riflery, swimming and softball events. Besides the Paralympics, the Northville High School student trains for USCPAA Michigan games once a year, the USCPAA national games held every two years and the Windsor Classic Indoor Games.

"The Windsor games are interesting to go see because there are so many different (physically disabled competitors)," Darlene said. "When you see someone blind doing the running long jump or running track, it gives you goose bumps."

Jeremy said blind long jump runners usually rely on a coach who yells "run" until it's time for the athlete to jump, or get their cues by counting steps.

"That's why sometimes on the loudspeaker they'll all ask for complete silence (when a blind runner is competing)," Darlene said.

During the fall, winter and spring months, Jeremy trains with the Tri-City Seals for two hours every Saturday morning. He also practices his shooting in the basement of his family's home. The 33-foot basement has a pellet trap, Ken explained. During the winter, Jeremy also practices his shooting skills at the Multi Lakes Conservation Club.

Jeremy will be a junior this year at Northville High School. He plans to pursue a musical career following graduation, hoping to play drums in a rock 'n' roll band. Since he can't use his right hand, he would like to follow in the foot steps of the drummer for the rock group Def Leppard, who lost one of his hands in an accident.

"I've always wanted to play... but I knew I couldn't until I saw him play the drums," Jeremy said.

LET THE GAMES BEGIN

As a coach, Bryan Masi is used to pushing his athletes to be better competitors.

He doesn't have to push too hard, though, when coaching members of the Tri-City Seals, a local team made up of athletes ages 5 and up with physical disabilities.

"I really enjoy just being around the athletes because they're truly athletes," Masi said. "They're competitive and they work hard, sometimes harder than other athletes."

From September through May, the Tri-City Seals meet for two hours each Saturday to train for competitions. Team members include 30 athletes ranging in age from 7 to 46 with disabilities including muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy and spina bifida. The team is composed of athletes from 14 cities as far north as Northville and as far south as Taylor, west to Ann Arbor and east to Detroit.

In January, the team participates in the Winter Games held at Eastern Michigan University or in Grand Rapids; the Windsor (Ontario) Indoor Games are held in March; and in May a competition is held at Central Michigan University.

Athletes who have qualifying scores at those competitions advance to national and international competitions. In 1992, three athletes went to Barcelona, Spain, to compete in the Paralympics. The athletes included cyclists Chris Pyrkosz of Northville, Erika Benjamin of Garden City and Margo Maddox of Detroit. All three of the athletes have cerebral palsy.

Northville athlete Jeremy Lane just missed qualifying for the Paralympics in the air riflery competition, according to Masi.

"He has a great possibility for competing in '96 in Atlanta," Masi said. "There's a good chance he'll make the cerebral palsy soccer team and shooting team."

Masi became interested in the local disabled sports team, based in Westland, about 12 years ago. He became aware of the disability cerebral palsy through his uncle, who is afflicted with it.

DyAnn St. Clair

St. Clair's a good sport

By DOROTHY NASH
Special Writer

Can you plan a good summer vacation for yourself and still be a coach in Novi Parks and Recreation?

The answer is yes, according to DyAnn St. Clair, who is coach for a junior girls softball team, of which her daughter is a member. The team has 15 girls, ages 11 through 13. In addition, she is coach for her son's T-ball team for boys in ages 5 through 7.

The summer athletic season is from mid-June to the first week in August — after which time she and her husband and their children, packed well ahead of time, take off in a rush for a vacation.

How did St. Clair get herself into coaching? She said that as a basketball and softball player in high school, she had the interest. But it wasn't until she watched a friend coach softball a few years ago that it occurred to her, "I could do that, too."

So for three years now she has coached junior girls softball, along with two men who also have daughters on the team. Sometimes one or both of the men can't make it, she said, but it works out.

"Games are held on Monday and Wednesday evenings mostly at the schools," and they last from an hour and fifteen minutes to an hour and a half. "We arrive a half hour early to practice."

"Our team is one of the best," Coach St. Clair said, "and the kids' families come out to watch — 25 to 50 at a game," but, "I get so involved, I have little chance to look to see who's there."

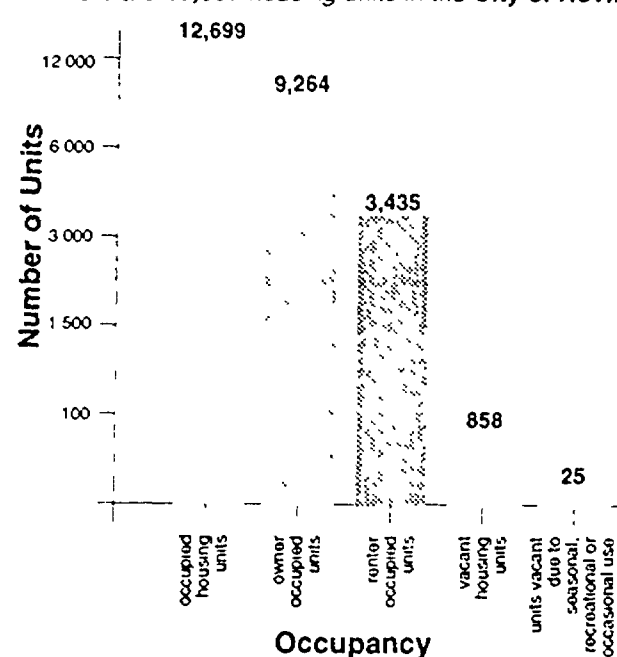

DyAnn St. Clair got into this because it's a favorite sport of hers, but, she said, she soon developed another reason. She's learned that "girls in ages 11 through 13 need to have their self-esteem built up. They need reassurance, and I hope I am making a difference."

If you would like to be one of the 140 volunteers serving 1,200 children in Novi Parks and Recreation, call the office at 347-0400.

Anniversary

When John and Betty Kohl of Blue Heron Pointe Drive, Northville, honeymooned 50 years ago at Spring Mill State park in Mitchell, Ind., they didn't dream they would return someday with 27 other people. That's exactly what their six children planned in order to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

Gathering in southern Indiana at a resort-setting state park on July 5-9 were all the children, spouses and grandchildren of the couple who met at Ohio State University in the early 1940s.

Jim and Judy Kohl of Northville and their four daughters, and Dave and Chryl Kohl and three children of Novi joined Karen Kohl Carney and husband and son from Lyman, Wyo.; Barbara Kohl Kingsland and husband and daughter from Mystic, Conn.; Marcia Kohl Ouchakof and husband and three children from Madison, Wis.; and Beverly Kohl So-bran and husband from Madison, Conn.

The celebration lasted four days and included swimming, golf, horseback riding, a hay ride, and magic show and culminated in a banquet where many of the children and spouses shared their thoughts and feelings about the occasion.

Joining the banquet festivities were Jeanne and George Millay of Upper Arlington, Ohio, dearest friends and best man of the couple when they were married March 28, 1943.

John and Betty were presented with a hand-made quilt containing squares created by each of the grandchildren and pictures of each family transferred onto fabric—a true family heirloom.

Northville student prepares for chance in 1996 Paralympic event

He has already enrolled in band and choir classes at school this year. During his travels, Jeremy has made a lot of friends. He has also met a few celebrities.

"At the '91 National games we were recognized because Vice President Dan Quayle was at the opening ceremonies," Jeremy explained. "He came down to shake everyone's hand."

"I was wearing a big pink hat that said 'Arizona' on it because I got it from my next door neighbors. Whenever they go somewhere they pick me up something. Anyway, I had on my Team Michigan shirt. When he shook my hand, he said, 'Hi, how you doing?' but he couldn't figure out where I was from."

In order to make it to the Paralympics, Jeremy, a former Northville Record/Novi News paper boy, will have to start raising money.

For more information about the Tri-City Seals Disabled Sport Team, write to 34649 Chestnut, Wayne, Mich. 48184.

Sports team coach enjoys directing the 'true' athletes of Tri-City Seals

A physical education instructor at the middle schools in Northville and health instructor for the elementaries, Masi coached the cerebral palsy bocce ball team for the 1992 Paralympic United States Disabled Sports Team.

They took applications all over the country," Masi said of the coaching position. He was selected after two interviews.

"I've been involved in U.S. teams in other events," he said, including the World Championships and a small meet held in England.

In the Paralympics, athletes with four types of disabilities (cerebral palsy, blind, amputees and paralyzed) compete in swimming, track, power-lifting, table tennis, archery, air riflery, wheelchair basketball, judo and fencing.

In 1992, over 4,000 athletes from 87 countries competed in the same stadiums as the Olympic competitors. More than 1.2 million spectators attended the events.

Monkey business wins smiles

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

Novi resident Maureen Schiffman keeps her friends and coworkers stuffed in boxes and wrapped in bags on shelves in an upstairs room.

No one complains about the accommodations. Schiffman's a professional puppeteer who is gaining national attention for her children's music.

She has a collection of 100 puppets stashed away, from an almost life-sized old lady with a transparent stomach full of small animals to a tiny "Bunky," or rabbit-eared monkey in an egg.

"I'm always collecting puppets. I'm buying puppets even if I don't know yet what I'm going to do with them," she explained.

Somehow, she'll make them fit into her repertoire of 27 different shows.

Schiffman and her lead puppet, Coco the kazoo-playing monkey, will be featured in the Novi Arts Council's Showcase Series on Aug. 16, at 7:30 p.m. at the Novi Civic Center Atrium. The series, which is free, is timed to show off the talents of local residents prior to Novi City Council meetings.

A schoolteacher by profession, Schiffman shifted over to performing in the 1980, drawing on her lifelong background in music, song and dance. Her schedule this summer is packed with over 60 appearances, most of them at children's programs in Michigan libraries.

She writes her own music, which she sings accompanied by instruments ranging from a guitar to a synthesizer.

Schiffman now has a video out, A Warm Summer's Eve With Maureen and Coco which is sold and rented by Novi Video. She's also got a cassette, Sing A Little Happy Song, available at The Learning Tree store.

Or from Schiffman's son, Corey, 7, who's been known to peddle his mom's tape — the last time, during an airplane flight.

Calls have been coming into the Schiffman's Simmons Orchard home from radio stations as far away as Arkansas, seeking copies of her tape. The music's had a lot of airtime on We Like Kids, a syndicated children's program out of Juneau, Alaska. One of her tunes will be featured on a cassette and songbook the Alaska program plans to market through B. Dalton stores.

As a teacher, Schiffman says she can't resist putting a message into her music and puppet shows, especially on issues such as self-esteem and shyness. Coco is used to get the idea across. Sometimes the monkey plays shy and Schiffman has to coax him to perform for the children.

"I say you might try sometime to join in and you'd be surprised how much fun you have," I try to get parents not to label their kids as shy because then they sit back and think they can get away with it," she explains.

"I'm big into sharing our feelings instead of hitting each other and pushing each other. I always end each show with the song 'Sharing Is Caring For Someone Else.' The kids all walk out singing."

The puppeteer has created special programs for children who are hospitalized, some with terminal illnesses. She brings along Femur the Frog, who has a leg in a cast and Ivy, a bird with an I.V.

"We talk about the realities of illness but also bring some humor into it," she said.

Whatever her topic, Schiffman tries to take a "different" approach. In one popular number, she sings "I Am Being Swallowed By A Boa Constrictor" as she disappears into the mouth of gigantic black and metallic gold snake. Or she'll show up for a performance in her pajamas.

"The big thing is I like to get the kids up on the stage. I could do the same show 1,000 times but the kids are always different," she said.

SEAN CONNERY

WESLEY SNIPES

Sean Connery and Wesley Snipes investigate a murder in the controversial new film, 'Rising Sun.'

'Rising Sun:' an intriguing action-thriller

Connor: Have you ever negotiated with the Japanese before?

Web: This is hardly a negotiation.

Connor: Oh? What is it then?

Web: What is it? It's a homicide!

Connor (ignoring that): When we arrive, you take charge of the negotiations...

In a world where everything is a negotiation... even murder... in a world where "business is war"...

In a world where whoever controls the technology controls the truth... And whoever controls the truth can win the war...

Lieutenant Web Smith (Wesley Snipes) — a liaison officer with the LAPD — is called to investigate the murder of a young woman in the boardroom of a Japanese corporation in downtown Los Angeles. A mysterious call puts him together with a strange, shadowy figure — Detective John Connor (Sean Connery), who is rumored to be under the influence of the Japanese.

Connor becomes his guide (the senpai) and leads the younger detective (the kohai) through the investigation — through futuristic technological secrets, through ancient ways and loyalties.

Nothing is what it seems. "Pay attention, kohai," Connor warns. "And never underestimate your opponent. Never take what he offers you."

And as they close in on the mystery, the mystery closes in on them. Doors slide shut. A secret world opens.

Starring Sean Connery and Wesley Snipes, "Rising Sun" is a Twentieth Century Fox Presentation of a Walrus & Associates Ltd. Production of a Philip Kaufman Film.

Based on a novel by Michael Crichton, the film also stars Harvey Keitel, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Kevin Anderson, Mako and Tia Carrere.

"What I was most interested in making was a murder mystery," said director and screenwriter Philip Kaufman, "while at the same time exploring the nuances of the business world between the United States and Japan, which is also a very important part of the story."

"As we move through the Nineties into the next century, the collaboration between these two countries is one of the most important globally, economically, politically and perhaps romantically."

Connery says the story has all the things he finds interesting in a movie — strong characters, a culture clash and a significant topic.

"There's also a lot of humor in the film, which is something I always search for in anything I do," he said. "You can reveal more through humor than through the actual telling of the story. No matter how dramatic, how bloody, how bad the circumstances, humor always gives a reassuring balance to things."

Many of the lighter elements in "Rising Sun" come as a result of the contrasting viewpoints which John Connor and Web Smith bring to the murder investigation. For Connor, this new partnership creates a dynamic which he immediately understands. The Japanese call it a senpai/kohai union, which clearly defines the roles of the senior and junior partner in any business situation.

"It's just a given that at meetings and at other types of dealings, the top person is never up front," explained Connery. "The real number one man is always observing while the junior man does the talking."

Unfortunately, this philosophy isn't taught at American police academies. Web Smith, whose nonsense approach to police work has yielded great success in the past, is resistant to being bogged down by the protocol of a society not his own. But as both men adapt to the working methods of the other, a mutual respect is formed.

"It's a high energy partnership," said Philip Kaufman, both of the characters in the film and the actors who portray them. "There was a contagious quality to an actor like Cagney — when you left one of his movies, you felt alive. Sean and Wesley bring that same quality to this film."

Oscar-winner Sean Connery was a natural for the film adaptation of Rising Sun, having been cast in the role of John Connor while the story still existed only in the mind of novelist Michael Crichton.

The pair had formed a relationship in the late Seventies when Crichton, who is also a filmmaker, directed the actor in "The Great Train Robbery." When the time came for Crichton to create an image in his mind of the serenely imposing John Connor, Sean Connery was his model.

The supporting cast of "Rising Sun" is led by Harvey Keitel, coming off a pair of acclaimed and disturbing performances in "Bad Lieutenant" and "Reservoir Dogs." It is Keitel's character, Lt. Tom Graham, who gives a face to the hostility with which some Americans respond to the growing Japanese presence in their country.

It is through this character that the phrase "Japan-bashing" packages a lot of emotion and generates an almost immediate gut reaction when it is used or portrayed. But what does Japan-bashing really mean?

The term originated in the mid-1980s as a way to describe a new group of intellectuals, government officials and business leaders who advocated a new look, a more critical analysis, of the US-Japan relationship.

After all, the war had ended four decades earlier, the Soviet Union was quickly on its way to extinction, and Japan had emerged as the world's second greatest economic force.

These individuals believed that lunacy was the only excuse not to take a fresh look at American economic policy and our traditional big brother/little brother relationship with Japan. In fact, these people felt that the only way to maintain a healthy, constructive and productive bond with Japan was to bring the relationship into a modern era. These were the original Japan-bashers.

More recently, the term has been used to describe racial slurs and violence against people of Japanese descent.

"These are certainly two different cultures, two quite different concepts of how one solves problems," said Connery, summarizing the international dynamic which gives "Rising Sun" its power. "I think there is a great deal to be learned from the Japanese, not just from their business practices but from their culture. And the Japanese can learn from America, which is something they seem to do very well."

"I think all these things are handled in this movie. But, first and foremost, this is a captivating, intriguing detective story."

'Line of Fire' well worth the money

'Coneheads' and 'Hero' also receive high grades from readers

IN THE LINE OF FIRE
By Stacy Boucher
Milford

Clint Eastwood's performance is outstanding in his latest movie, "In the Line of Fire."

Eastwood plays Frank Horrigan, a not-so-secret agent who had been guarding President Kennedy on the day he was assassinated. Horrigan holds the distinction of being the only active agent who ever lost a president.

Now there is another maniac plotting to kill the present president, and he has decided to play a game of cat-and-mouse with Horrigan.

An emotionally wounded Horrigan, still feeling like a failure for not saving President Kennedy, finds himself working with an alluring female agent, Lilley Raines (played by Rene Russo). Their verbal face-offs are full of sarcastic humor, and the sexual tension between the two characters brings warmth to Horrigan's lonely tough-guy role.

Working against the odds, Horrigan does his best to protect our leader and heal his own personal scars.

Although the plot is definitely predictable, it is still a thrill to see Eastwood get the bad guy and allow jus-

CONEHEADS
By Jay Kaminski
New Hudson

Attention all dome-skulled inhabitants of this sphere of hydrogen and oxygen gasses! Proceed to the closest place where expeditious moving pictures are presented and consume mass quantities of exploded grain and saccharine tonic!

If you don't speak Remulakian, then you probably didn't understand that. It simply means to go to your nearest movie theater and watch "Coneheads," a new comedy based upon the alien characters on "Saturday Night Live."

This is the story of when Beldar, played by Dan Aykroyd, and his wife are shot down by the United States Air Force and must adapt to Earth life while waiting for a rescue ship.

During their 14 year stay on Earth, they manage to go from living in an inner-city ghetto to the lawnmowing life of the suburbs and raise their daughter.

The special effects are great; and the heads are a lot more realistic looking than the plastic pull-on type used on "Saturday Night Live." And we also get a look at what the Coneheads' native planet, Remulak, looks like.

Unlike most comedies, "Coneheads" leaves the viewer satisfied, with no grudges or complaints. This is a must-see movie for anybody who loves a great comedy.

HERO
By Mike Kapusky
Northville

A great, Cinderella-type fairy tale! A down-and-out con man, played by Dustin Hoffman, rescues survivors from a plane crash, then disappears.

A homeless con man, played by Andy Garcia, takes credit for the rescue when Hoffman gives him one of the shoes he had at the rescue.

A rescued survivor, played by Geena Davis, tries to find the real "hero."

Great acting and simple story equals a wonderful sleeper-hit that is now on video. I am giving "Hero" four stars (based on a five-star basis with five being the best). Go rent it!

Yani Rosenberg watches one fly in Sunday's championship game against West Bloomfield.

Putty Hill wins second straight World Series

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

"Win this inning," Putty Hill third baseman Adam Nastalski said Sunday.

That was the rallying cry for the defending National Amateur Baseball Federation Sophomore World Series champions last weekend. Facing elimination, the Maryland squad won four straight games including a 6-0 triumph over West Bloomfield Sunday to retain its crown.

The title game capped an excellent four-day tournament hosted by Northville. Teams from Washington state to Florida and Ohio participated and enjoyed local hospitality.

None more so than Putty Hill. Sunday's contest with West Bloomfield was the third of the Series between the two clubs. The Bulls beat Putty Hill 4-1 Friday in the second round of the double-elimination tournament.

The game opened as a pitcher's duel between the Bulls' Kevin Thornton and Putty Hill's Justin Singleton. The two hurlers breezed through the first inning without allowing a hit.

West Bloomfield threatened in the top of the second.

Centerfielder Eric Hardin singled to start the inning. Then with two outs, Kevin Bilbia singled to put runners at the corners. Singleton, who is the son of former Major League star

Ken Singleton, worked out of trouble by getting Andy Budor on a ground out.

Thornton wasn't as fortunate in the bottom of the inning.

Putty Hill loaded the bases on a Yani Rosenberg single and two errors by West Bloomfield. The home team pushed three runs across without the aid of a hit on a pair of fielder's choice plays and another error by the Bulls.

The Maryland team got three more runs in the third. Nastalski laced a two-run homer off Thornton and Putty Hill got its final run of the game on a bunt single by Shane Rhodes.

Singleton cruised in the meantime. West Bloomfield managed just two singles from the second to the seventh innings.

The Bulls put runners on first and second on singles by Nick Gerhard and Bilbia in the seventh. Budor then lined a shot, but Rhodes snagged the ball and caught Bilbia off first for a game-ending double play.

Singleton allowed six hits in pitching the shutout for Putty Hill. He struck out seven batters.

The champions forced the Sunday contest by winning a 10-inning game Saturday. The Bulls went into the game undefeated and could have taken the Series title with a win.

Northville goes 0-2 in tournament

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Northville took a quick exit from the National Amateur Baseball Federation Sophomore World Series last weekend by losing in the first two rounds.

Renton, Wash., eliminated the host team Friday with a 7-0 shutout at Madonna University field in Livonia. Hurier David Ingram was the star of the game as he tossed a two-hitter against Northville.

Renton was later eliminated by eventual Series champion Putty Hill, Md.

Phil Kozdron started for Northville on the mound against Washington and was strong early. But, the right hander ran into trouble in the top of the third inning.

After retiring the first batter, Kozdron hit Jason Bourland and walked Jason Moran. The bases were then loaded on a Northville error.

Kozdron hit the next batter as Washington scored its first run. The visitors added five more as Doug Gill Keith Posey each knocked in two.

Northville played Renton almost even the rest of the way but simply couldn't generate any offense. The team's best chance to score actually came in the first inning.

With two out, James Glammarco singled and Kozdron was hit by a pitch. But Ingram got the third out on a grounder.

Paul Stachura got Northville's other hit.

PUTTY HILL 9, NORTHVILLE 0

Northville opened the tournament against the defending champions Thursday morning.

The contest was very similar to Friday's game with the host squad running into a hot pitcher. Mike Jenkins allowed just four Northville hits while striking out five in six innings of work.

Northville looked as if it would score its first Series run in the second inning.

After a Kozdron fly-out, Stachura singled. Putty Hill then committed a throwing error on an attempted double play. Glammarco ended up at second base. The runner was then cut down at third base on a grounder off the bat of John Rohrof and the threat was over.

Putty Hill scored twice in the bottom of the second on a Yani Rosenberg home run and an RBI single by Shane Rhodes. The Baltimore-area team added three runs in the third and fourth and one in the sixth.

Glammarco led Northville with two RBIs. Rhodes went 3-for-3 with two hits for Putty Hill.

Niners sweep Canton

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Northville's entry in the Farmington-based Incredible Softball League finished its season on a positive note July 27 by sweeping Canton.

Outstanding pitching by Karl Krupansky led the Niners to victory in both games. She went the distance in the opener and relieved in the nightcap, earning a save.

"They were both excellent games," coach Frank Friemund said. "I love beating Canton."

Northville concluded its season with an 11-4-1 record—good for second place in the league.

"I thought we did well and improved a lot," Friemund commented. "We had a good time and had a lot of positive, vocal attitudes."

The Niners let their bats do the talking in the Canton opener. Northville scored four times in the bottom of the first inning.

Sara Kemp and Melissa Petrosky singled to start the rally. Andrea Moretti then doubled both home, and Northville added two more runs on a Corder sacrifice fly.

The Niners went up 6-0 with two runs in the third inning. Petrosky and Cristin Corder knocked in runs with singles.

Krupansky struck out 11 in the five-inning game. She allowed just three hits.

Northville took the offensive early again in game two.

Down 1-0, Kemp walked, a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. The Niners added two runs on a Petrosky single.

Canton tied the game in the third with two runs. Northville then got the game-winner in the fourth inning on a Corder sacrifice fly.

Moretti started and got the win. Krupansky pitched three innings of hitless relief for the save.

Hartland Glen is picture perfect

By SCOTT SIGLER
Sports Writer

It seems new courses are popping up all over the place these days. While the attraction to golf on these, fresh, enticing courses is great, perhaps the craving for new territory can make one forget that courses get better with age.

Hartland Glen has been catering to the golf community since 1972. Close to the age of antiquity, the course proves there are dramatic advantages to being in place for two decades.

Hartland Glen is without a doubt one of the most beautiful courses in Oakland County. Many of the first nine are surrounded by towering stands of grand trees, which catch the breeze in a relaxing natural sonata.

Where the fairway ends, the trees begin. There is some room for error on most of the Glen's holes. The rough is in good shape, and there is enough of it to give you a break on slightly errant shots. Past the rough are those gorgeous trees—while this makes for stunning scenery, it also makes for tough golfing.

If you can keep things relatively straight, you should have only minor problems with the native flora. If you are a hooker or a slicer, it may not be your ideal course.

This is not to say you have to be on the verge of getting your PGA card to golf the Glen. The course is demanding, but not intimidating. All levels of golfers can find enjoyment from the course.

But watch out for the traps. If you are a spray hitter or erratic with drives and fairway shots, you're going to spend some time in the Glen's bunkers. The first three holes are splattered with bunkers that are spaced along the length of the fairway and guard the green. Holes four and five give you a break from the bunker action, but the Glen is back at it again on six through eight.

You're better off keeping things straight and conservative than blasting away, especially if you have any problems with hooks or slices.

Every course has its monster, and Hartland Glen's No. 7 is bigger than a brachiosaur. While long, the par-5, 500-yard hole has a wide fairway and is fairly straight. Make sure you know your visual distances, however.

The hole has a very slight dog-leg right just before the green. The urge to cheat to the right will be strong.

Water abounds at South Lyon's Pebble Creek

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Golfers should keep three words in mind when playing Pebble Creek Golf Course's front nine: placement, placement, placement.

Don't even think about mishitting. And if hooking and slicing are the main elements in your shot repertoire, better pull out the calculator and ball retriever.

That's not to say the South Lyon course, which is located at the corners of Ten Mile and Currie roads, has a little water. Nope, it has a LOT of water.

"It makes the course more challenging," says Pebble Creek co-owner Bonnie Edwards.

The front nine was added to the course three years ago, Edwards said she and her partners took advantage of the land's high water-table in its design.

Golfers are loyal to Pebble Creek. Edwards said folks have been coming from the metropolitan area's east side as well as West Bloomfield and Birmingham since 1979.

"We have people playing that have been coming since day one," she said.

Despite all the courses in and around South Lyon, she said her business is doing very well.

"It's going great," Edwards commented. "I don't think we could have too many courses."

Golfers get a stiff challenge at nearly every hole on Pebble Creek. Take the first hole. A 501-yard par-5 looks innocent enough, but is actually pretty treacherous.

A couple of options off the tee are available. One is to lay up in front of the creek, which cuts through the fairway about 240 yards out, or go for it.

On the day of our review, the wind was blowing hard making the choice an easy one. Second shots must be accurate. Any kind of slice will put your ball in the drink. Keep it in play at No. 1, even with heavy wind, and it becomes a very birdie-able hole.

Speaking of birdies, No. 2 cries out to be mastered. A 301-yard par-4, the hole is a severe dog-leg left.

Cutting the corner can be costly if you dub your tee shot. A big drive on the other hand can put you on the green or leave an easy chip to shoot for birdie.

Perhaps Pebble Creek's prettiest hole on the front is No. 5. A 198-yard par-3 from the gold tees, it is certainly one of the most difficult.

Instead of a fairway, No. 5 has a pond. Water stretches from the blue tees to 10-yards away from the green. If that isn't enough, woods run along the left side and in back of the hole leaving only the right side to ball out on. One suggestion: if you put your tee shot in the pond, drop a ball in front of the green and save yourself some frustration.

Water comes into play on the next hole, too. A 253-yard par-4, No. 6 is straight with water about 30 yards in front of the green. The hole is so short that teeing off with an iron is probably your best play.

Pebble Creek's fifth hole requires a precise tee-shot.

While the front nine is shorter than most courses, finishing holes eight and nine are good lengths.

The former is a 407-yard dead dogleg right. Hit a decent drive and good second shot and you should be in business.

No. 9 is the longest on the front at 534 yards. This par-5 is a straight away with a pond guarding the green's front right side.

If you can keep the ball dry on the front nine of Pebble Creek you should score well. The rough isn't tall and greens are relatively flat, except for No. 5, making good scoring possible.

These holes are in much better shape than a year ago. Grass has grown in areas that were a little bare last season and greens are smoother and roll truer.

"It gets better every year," Edwards said. "Our guys are doing a good job." Rates are: $13 and $20 for nine and 18 holes during the week, $15 and $23 on weekends and holidays. Carts are $11 for nine holes and $20 for 18. After 6:30 p.m. prices are $10 during the week and $12 on the weekend for as much golf as you can play. For more information on Pebble Creek, call 437-5411.

and if you do, watch out for sand traps. One trap caddies the fairway at about 150 yards from the tee, while another is placed strategically at around 250.

What should be a simple par-3, the 135-yard ninth hole is exaggerated by a rather large pond directly in front of the green. Behind the green is — of course — a rather large sand trap. In fact, you'd better be accurate on this hole.

The green is sandwiched by these hazards. Hit the least bit long and you're in the trap, hit a tad short and you're in the drink. All in all, it's a great way to get your hopes up (when you see it) and bring them down (when you hit it) just before heading into the clubhouse.

Hartland Glen is located at 12400 Highland Road in Hartland. The 18-hole course is 6,280 yards from the blue tees and 6,017 from the whites.

Weekday prices are $10 and $15 for walkers, $16 and $20 with a car.

Armstrong appears in Novi tonight

By CINDY STEWART
Special Writer

While heavy rains moved last week's concert indoors, it wasn't thunder that shook the ground and walls of Novi High School.

It was the energetic and exhilarating sounds of Bakra Bata, the steel drum and percussion ensemble, and The Glassmen Drum and Bugle Corps. The sun did manage to come out toward the end of Bakra Bata's fantastic concert which enabled the Glassmen to perform outside of Fuerst Auditorium to a very receptive crowd. Novi's own Holli Kendra, Russ McMartin, T.J. Weinberg and Tyler Harris deserve another round of applause!

Tonight you are also in for some special music as the 1993 Sounds of Summer Concert Series presents Howard "Louie Blume" Armstrong and Ray Kamalay performing 1930s blues and Tin Pan Alley standards. Ray Kamalay is no stranger to Novi, having performed at last year's concert series with his Red Hot Peppers. They are a small jazz trio playing the best of the '30s and '40s.

Howard "Louie Blume" Armstrong may be the music world's leading 84-year-old rapsalodist. He is a talented fiddle player and brilliant artist, who personally embodies the living tradition of rural black American culture. His extraordinary repertoire includes blues, Tin Pan Alley standards, old-country ditties from 19th-century Europe, religious hymns and country dance tunes.

Louie Blume was born into a musically talented family. By his 10th birthday, his father had taught him to play the mandolin, and had whittled a half-size fiddle for him with a jackknife. Within five more years, Armstrong had fully embarked on a career as a professional musician performing with his three younger brothers.

Howard developed an eclectic repertoire of blues and popular music playing in "string bands" — groups featuring mandolins, violins and guitars that played a mixture of popular songs, reels, waltzes, jigs and blues.

"Louie Blume," a film by Terry Zwigoff, was produced in 1975, presenting the life and music of Howard Armstrong, the fiddler/mandolinist, painter, raconteur, linguist, diarist, rogue and hardy survivor of a strong, rich culture. The film presents many captivating examples of his band's unique and infectious music — a music with country roots which was important in shaping blues, jazz, country, gospel, ragtime, western swing and rock 'n' roll.

Ray Kamalay has been performing in the Detroit area since 1974. He is very interested in old music — blues, ragtime, folk, gospel, jazz and swing tunes. Ray Kamalay and his Red Hot Peppers have been performing together for the last 10 years. Ray, a very talented guitar player, also performs periodically with Howard Armstrong throughout the year, and with Joel Mabus, folk singer and song writer.

Kamalay also writes many ragtime music tunes. Ray Kamalay and his Red Hot Peppers will be performing at this year's Montreaux Jazz Festival in Hart Plaza on Sept. 5. Ray especially looks forward to performing with Howard Armstrong tonight and periodically during the year.

"He is such a character and has contributed a lifetime of music to people around the country," Kamalay explains.

Howard Armstrong received a National Heritage Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1990 "for outstanding contributions to American Folk Art and his demonstrated commitment to our country's artistic traditions."

For his versatility, his clean musicianship, his engaging personality, and his astute observation of the musical scene of this century, Howard Armstrong is a national treasure.

Stop by the Novi Civic Center tonight and hear Howard "Louie Blume" Armstrong and Ray Kamalay perform those favorite blues and Tin Pan Alley standards. You will not be disappointed.

Don't forget that Border Cantina, Honey Tree, Leon's, Olive Garden, Red Robin, Ruby Tuesday and Salvatore Scallopini have donated "Lunches for 2" that are given away as prize drawings during each concert. There is also free lemonade, pretzels, balloons and blowing bubbles for the kids.

Why not make every Thursday evening a special night for you and your family? See you at 7! Next week is the Novi Concert Band.

Shingles can leave lasting pain developed.

Initially, chicken pox develops two weeks after infection, with the virus and the symptoms usually clear in another two weeks. However, in many people the virus remains and lies inactive in some nerve cell clusters of the body.

Shingles is a common, painful rash caused by the herpes zoster virus — the same virus that causes chicken pox. The characteristic rash helps the physician make a diagnosis quickly. The therapy for it is excellent and frequently uses one of the very few antiviral drugs

Sometimes the virus reactivates. This may occur during illness from some other condition. It may occur with old age. Sometimes it occurs for no reason. Upon reactivation, the virus usually attacks the nerve cell cluster (ganglion) and the nerve it is attached to. This causes pain, tingling or other unusual sensations in the area around the nerve. Then a red rash with bumps occurs.

The rash is characteristic of shingles because it is limited to the area around the nerve. It occurs nowhere else on the body and does not cross the center of the body. Usually the rash lasts for about one week and then starts to go away.

The biggest problem with shingles, aside from the pain and rash, is that many people, if not treated, will continue to have pain in the area after it has healed. This may be caused by scarring around the nerve. If this continued pain occurs, it can be very difficult to treat. For this reason, early treatment of shingles is important.

Although we have many medicines to fight bacteria (antibiotics), we have very few drugs that fight viruses. Fortunately a drug for shingles is available. It is called acyclovir, has few side effects and is effective against the herpes zoster virus. It is best started immediately once the diagnosis is made.

For the pain of shingles during the attack, codeine or other pain relievers can be used.

Class focuses on costume making

VICTORIAN COSTUME MAKING: "I haven't got a thing to wear!" Does this line sound familiar when you are preparing for the Northville Victorian Festival? Worry no more. Northville Parks and Recreation is offering a class on how to prepare for this annual event. Victorian costume making will consist of two nights of learning the ins and outs of Victorian-style garb.

The classes will be held on Wednesdays, Sept. 8 and 15, from 7:30-9:30 p.m. The first night will be devoted to a lecture and slide show. This will enable you to get new ideas in putting together a stylized period costume that will not cost a fortune in time or money.

The second night you will have something to take home with you. Hats and headgear to match your gown will be designed, taking a modest straw hat and turning it into a Victorian Fantasy.

The cost for material is estimated at $10 and is not included in the price of the class. This two-day class costs $20 and will be held at the Northville Community Center at 303 W. Main.

BAND CONCERT: Music Jam 1993 is here! Northville Parks and Recreation is sponsoring an alternative music band concert. On Friday, Aug. 13, Ford Field will be electrified by the cutting edge of music. Bands include Flounder Market, Wood, Kiere Grene Tyle and Baked Potato.

The concert begins at 3 p.m. and runs until 7 p.m. Admission is $3. Refreshments will be sold at the park and no containers are allowed. For more information, contact the parks and recreation department at 349-0203.

Essay winner will get a luxury home in California

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

Some creative home marketing techniques are surfacing in areas where sales are generally sluggish.

A prime example is a luxury home in the Cheviot Hills district of Los Angeles, near Beverly Hills. The home, with an estimated value of $800,000, is being marketed via an essay contest.

Entrants may submit an essay (up to 250 words), along with an entry fee of $100 and processing fee of $15.

The essays must address the question: Why do you want to win this home? When at least 6,750 entries are received, the contest becomes official. The sponsors want to see at least $776,250 before they commit to the deal.

A maximum of 8,500 essays will be accepted. That would generate a handsome $977,500 for the sponsors, with a sizable chunk invested in promotion.

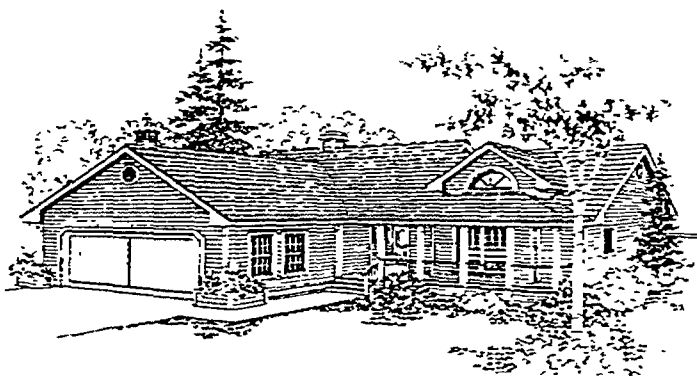

The essay contest method of marketing the house is being promoted internationally, according to Katy Meador, a real estate broker and owner of Creative Property Marketing in San Francisco, producer of the project. It's already been featured on NBC-TV's Today Show, the CBS Evening News and other national media, Meador said.

Display ads are being carried in many magazines and newspapers, and 27,000 brochures have been printed and mailed.

Economy of space and money is highlight of Monarch

By James McAlexander
Copley News Service

Compact enough to fit on a standard city lot, the Monarch is also economical to build and maintain.

At the same time, the plan includes many of the features modern homeowners want.

The kitchen has a work island and pantry, for instance. The master suite is vaulted and has a private bathroom, and the garage has a space for a workbench and freezer.

A covered porch, complete with wood dowels, posts and railings, sends a welcoming message to visitors. Planter boxes in front of the garage and an old-fashioned weather vane on the roof add to the visual interest.

Placement of the main bathroom, just inside the front door, allows children to dash in from playing without tracking up the rest of the house. Water closet and tub are separately enclosed and two basins are in the outer section. This enables three people to use the bathroom at once—a handy feature during the morning rush when everyone is getting ready to leave at once.

Family living takes place in the great room, a richly windowed space at the back of the home. The great room could be vaulted. A fireplace with a tile hearth faces into the family room.

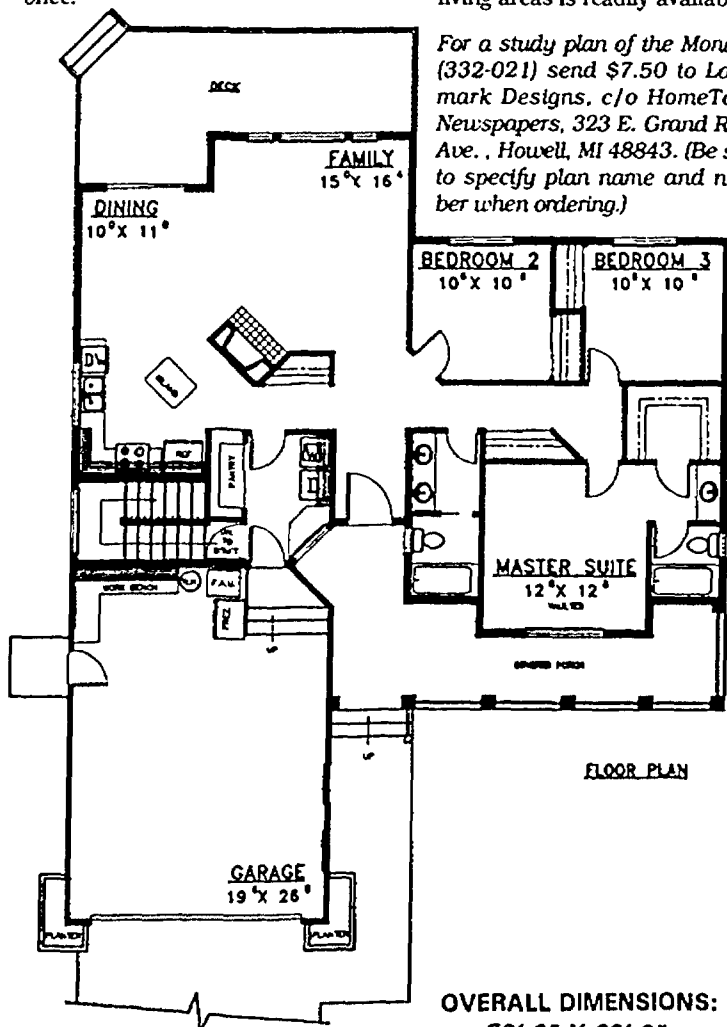

The L-shaped kitchen is open to the dining room and a small utility room is tucked into an alcove that joins the kitchen to the garage. The room is brightened by a window with a shelf, handy for folding clothes or sewing.

Building a skylight into the covered porch in front of this window would bring in even more light. This plan is well-suited to the needs of young couples or singles shopping for their first home. But it also works well as a home for older adults who no longer need the space they did when they were raising children.

And since the interior is all on one level, the plan could easily be adapted for wheelchair accessibility.

The Monarch is also exceptionally private. Only the master suite has a window that faces the street. And since it's designed for construction over a full basement, space for storage and additional living areas is readily available.

For a study plan of the Monarch (332-021) send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, c/o HomeTown Newspapers, 323 E. Grand River Ave., Howell, MI 48843. (Be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

GARDENING

Summer means gardeners are out there gardening. And that means there's no end of questions. Here are some answers from the Extension specialists at Michigan State University.

Q. What's that big moth that I keep seeing around my flowers in the evening? If I didn't look close, I'd almost think it was a hummingbird. It hovers in front of the flowers like a hummingbird. Is it sipping nectar?

A. It sounds as if you've seen the hawk or hummingbird moth, which is also called sphinx moth. Their larvae are the plump green caterpillars known as hornworms. The tomato hornworm is probably the most familiar to backyard gardeners. These voracious worms consume tomato plant foliage in midsummer. In the adult stage, these caterpillars are the graceful hawk moths that you've observed slurping nectar from your garden flowers.

Q. What's the walking stick insect look like? I don't think I've ever seen one.

A. Maybe you've never seen one because nature has done such a good job of camouflaging this insect. Unless it's moving, it does indeed look like just another twig. Walking sticks feed on trees and shrubs. Rarely, they are present in such large numbers that they consume all the foliage. The largest insect in the United States is a walking stick native to the South and Southwest that may reach 7 inches in length. Some tropical walking sticks can attain a length of about a foot. Those you see in Michigan are more likely to be in the 3- to 4-inch range.

Q. What are those powdery white spots I see on melon vines and lilac bushes in late summer?

A. Those spots are signs of powdery mildew, a fungus that grows on many plants during warm, humid weather. The first powdery white spots may enlarge and merge to cover whole leaves. Severe infections can kill leaves, leaf petioles and young stems. Raking and destroying fallen leaves and debris in the fall may help reduce powdery mildew problems by reducing the quantity of overwintering fungus. Planting susceptible plants in a sunny area with good air circulation will allow leaves to dry quickly after rain or dew-fall (moisture on the leaves is necessary for the fungus to get established). Avoid irrigation that wets the foliage late in the day or at night. In most cases, treatment with fungicides is not necessary.

Q. What's the difference between a millipede and a centipede? They're both just creepy as far as I'm concerned. A. Millipedes ("thousand-legged worms") have tubular bodies with many segments and two pairs of legs on most segments. The legs appear to ripple in waves as they move. Millipedes often curl up when disturbed. They range in length from less than 1 inch to more than 4 inches. They are usually dark colored. They feed on decaying plant debris. Centipedes ("hundred-legged worms") are also segmented, but they are flattened rather than tubular, and each body segment has one pair of legs. The centipede has a pair of poisonous jaws, which it uses to kill insects and other creatures. It will also bite to defend itself.

Q. How do I multiply my mum plants? I'm told early summer is the best time.

A. Multiply mums by dividing plants. If you don't already have mums growing in your garden, you can start with hardy mums in pots. In either case, remove the plant clumps from the soil when new growth is about 4 inches high and after the danger of frost is past. Remove shoots from the outside of the clumps, making sure that each shoot has a good portion of roots. Set the divisions in a worked-up bed with the growing tip of each division just above the ground level. Plants started from divisions of established plants should flower this fall.

Q. What are those funny bumps on my maple trees' leaves? Should I do something about them?

A. "Funny bumps" on oak, ash and maple leaves, and swollen stems on goldenrod plants are just two examples of plant galls, abnormal-growths of plant tissues caused by insect activity. Leaf galls occur on a wide range of forest and landscape trees. They range in size from pinhead to golf ball size and occur in a wide variety of shapes and colors. Though galls affect the appearance of the plant, they generally don't harm its overall health or vigor, so there's no reason to try to prevent their occurring. Even if they were damaging, spraying after the galls appear would do no good — the galls are, after all, part of the plant, and no insecticide would remove them.

Q. What care do my strawberry plants need after I harvest the berries?

A. Fertilizing and weed control are important after-harvest chores. Fertilizing before harvest results in soft berries and reduced yields. Fertilizing after harvest promotes growth to support next year's fruit production. Hoeing 2 to 3 inches deep around plants controls weeds and reduces competition for water, nutrients and sunlight. Keeping the soil loose also allows runner plants to root quickly. Water whenever natural rainfall doesn't supply 1 inch of water per week (2 inches on light, sandy soils). Wet the soil to a depth of 6 to 8 inches.

Q. What does the term "companion planting" mean?

A. It refers to the practice of interplanting two or more crops. Reasons for doing it range from saving space — by planting a quick-to-mature crop such as radishes between and around carrots, broccoli plants or hills of squash, for instance — to controlling insects to improving performance by certain crops by growing them near certain others. Research to test these last two claims has not had much success.

Q. What causes big shifts in insect numbers? One year I couldn't find a cutworm in my garden if my life depended on it. The next year, I had to replant my peppers three times because cutworms kept nipping them off. It's the same garden — why the difference in cutworms?

A. It's hard to pinpoint any one cause of an insect outbreak. Weather, the activity of predators — or the lack of them — and disease outbreaks among pests or their predators can be factors. It doesn't take much of a change in the survival rate of eggs or larvae to cause a huge increase in the pest population. For instance, two moths mate and the female lays about 500 eggs. Only one male and one female need to survive out of those 500 to maintain the population. That is, 99.6 percent of the eggs and young can fail to survive without reducing the population. Decrease the mortality rate to 95 percent — that is, 5 percent of eggs and larvae survive — and you multiply the total population by 12.5. With insects that have only one generation per year, it may take several years for an outbreak to develop. Insects such as aphids, which have multiple generations each growing season, can increase much more rapidly, reaching outbreak levels in weeks rather than years.

Q. I use old hay and straw for garden mulch, tilling it in after the growing season (or in the spring before planting) to add organic material and nutrients to the soil. Do I still have to add fertilizer to the soil?

A. Probably. Even if your mulch materials were high in plant nutrients (they aren't), it takes a while for these materials to break down to the point that the nutrients they contain are available to plants. In the meantime, the soil bacteria that do most of the work of decomposition may have most of the available nitrogen in the soil tied up, resulting in a nitrogen deficiency. Plants will grow poorly. Using a complete fertilizer before planting at the rate of 25 pounds per 1,000 square feet and boosting seedlings and transplants with nitrogen 3 to 4 weeks after planting should provide the nutrients they need for good growth.

Q. When and how do I plant peonies?

A. Late summer is the best time. Planting in mid- to late August gives plants time to get well established before winter. Plant peony tubers in well drained soil and full sun. Space them at least 3 feet apart. Place tubers in prepared soil so the uppermost "eye" — bud — is no more than 2 inches below the soil surface. Water and mulch with 1 to 2 inches of organic material (straw, ground corn-cobs, compost, etc.). Plants grown from tubers with fewer than three eyes may take three to five years to produce more than a few small flowers. Tubers with three to five eyes may flower well the second year after planting. The most common causes of failure to flower in peonies are planting too deep, insufficient sunlight and poor soil drainage (rotten tubers). Once peonies are established, they tend to be quite hardy and perform reliably for many years without dividing.

Reducing discolorations on your wallpaper

By Gene Gary
Copley News Service

Q. I am in the process of redecorating and changing some of the framed pictures that have hung for several years on wallpapered walls. When I went to remove these, I discovered that the areas behind the pictures were darker than the rest of the wall.

What causes this and is there a way to correct the problem other than repapering the walls?—C.M.

A. The cause is, mainly, a lack of air circulation in back of the pictures, plus a deposit of fine dust and the fact that the paper fades more slowly in covered areas than in areas exposed to light. Much the same thing happens when a picture hangs on a wooden wall.

Much can be done to reduce the prominence of these discolorations by going over the areas with a wallpaper cleaner. After this has been done it will be up to you to decide whether the remaining defacement warrants repapering. (On wood paneling, such as teak, the wood, if left exposed, will eventually lighten and over a period of time it will match the rest of the paneling.)

To help prevent this condition, drive two brads into the lower corners of each picture you wish to rehang. Permit the brads to project about 1/4 inch from the back of the frames. This will hold the picture away from the wall enough to allow air circulation and will minimize the collection of fine dust on the wall in back of the pictures.

Q. During a recent move, my marble table was damaged. It now has a severe crack that goes the length of the tabletop. Is there anything that can be used to fill in this separation and hold the table together without just looking "patched"?—B.J.

A. Thin slabs of marble, like tabletops, when broken, can be repaired permanently only when supported by a reinforcement. Plaster board or a strip of wood can be used, cut to fit within the frame.

Turn the marble upside down; cement the edges of the break with equal parts of litharge and powdered red lead mixed to a paste with glycerin, and press together.

Then spread a thin mixture of plaster of paris over the back of the slab and place the reinforcement in position. Allow several hours for hardening.

If the crack has not caused the marble to separate, try filling with white-lead paste prior to reinforcing with the thin coating of plaster of Paris.

These methods of repair may or may not show, depending on the type of break and the colorization and pattern of the marble.

Another method of salvaging your marble table would be to have a professional marble dealer one who cuts and polishes marble, design and insert with a contrasting marble in a free-form design. These pieces could then be cemented and reinforced professionally to create a new tabletop.

Q. Our house, which was once in a quiet neighborhood, is located on a street that has become a main thoroughfare for traffic. The noises caused by passing traffic is awful.

Short of moving, do you know of anything we can do to combat this problem?—S.H.

A. Constructing a barrier between the street and your home is the best method of noise control. Most effective would be a concrete block or brick wall that is at least 6 feet high.

If your home is a two-story building, the barrier would have to be that much higher to help protect the second-floor level. Such a wall can deflect nearly 60 percent of the street sounds.

A wooden fence can reduce noise only by about 5 percent. Landscaping is also very helpful for sound absorption. This requires some long-term patience, however, as the greenery will need time to fill in. Check with your local nursery for recommendations on evergreen trees or shrubs that would be suitable for high hedges.

You also can block noise by sealing up holes with weatherstripping and caulking to assure that windows and doors are sealed tightly so that noise does not leak in through cracks and crevices. Sealing up holes around electrical service entrances, vents and any gaps where sound can sneak in is very helpful.

Install storm windows with heavy glass and good weatherstrippling for added protection. Make sure your exterior doors are solid, tight-fitting at the threshold and weatherstripped. A solid door blocks out four times as much noise as a hollow-core door.

For dampers or flaps on bath, kitchen and laundry vents, install an extra elbow or section of bent flexible duct to create an indirect sound path. Add air conditioning, either window-mounted or a central system. This will allow you to keep windows and doors closed during warm weather and shut out the noise.

Another method of fixing noise is to fight sound with sound. You can purchase a little electronic gadget that is designed to generate an agreeable whir to mask persistent noise. However, masking the annoying noise can be a short-term solution if the masking sound becomes just as irritating as the ones you are trying to cover up.

Q. We are in the process of redecorating and have discovered that the existing wallpaper does not strip off the drywall with ease. We have tested several areas and the drywall panel is damaged when we try to remove the paper assisted by steam and a commercial stripping solution.

Do you know of any way we can remove this paper without damaging the wall board underneath? We want to get rid of wallpaper and paint the interior walls.—A.A.

A. Stripping off old wallpaper can tear the protective paper off the drywall panel at the same time, resulting in a surface that cannot be repainted. Excessive moisture from steaming to loosen wallpaper also can damage the drywall.

Another problem occurs if the drywall was not sealed before the wallpaper was hung. In this case, the drywall panel will have absorbed the wallpaper glue, and stripping the wallpaper will not only damage the drywall skin, but in many cases leave a glue residue that will prevent paint adhesion.

If the drywall paper hasn't been damaged during the stripping process, the glue can be scraped off. But you have to be very careful. Any damage to the drywall at this stage will mean that your previous tedious efforts to remove the paper will all be for naught.

Your best bet would probably be to have a drywall contractor cover the old wall with new sheets of 1/4-inch drywall. You will get a smooth wall in perfect condition for painting. The 1/4-inch panels can be glued in place using joint compound.

The only adjustment you should have to make is some longer screws to reinstall electrical box covers and switch plates. The 1/4-inch extra thickness at baseboards, window and door frames will be hardly noticeable.

This late Victorian rocker could sell for $265 to $285 in good condition.

Rocker from the last quarter of the 19th century

By Anne McCollam
Copley News Service

Q. This chair came from an aunt who spent many years in the New England states. Any information on it will be greatly appreciated.

A. Your chair is late Victorian and was made in the fourth quarter of the 19th century. It would probably sell for $265 to $285 in good condition.

Q. I have a set of china that includes service for 12 in mint condition. It was given to me by my mother, and I've had it for at least 50 years.

A. The mark on the back of every piece is a crown with the following: "R.P.M.—Germany."

What can you tell me about the value and vintage of my china?

A. According to the mark you describe, your dishes were probably made by Krisler Porcelain Manufactory, Waldenburg, Saxonia, Germany, in the early 20th century.

The value of your china would be about $800 to $900.

Q. My aunt gave me a jug, which I believe is for wine. It has a Roman figure on a blue matte background, and is 12 inches high. The enclosed mark is on the bottom.

A. I have no intention of selling it, but I am curious about its value and any information you could give me.

A. You are correct, this is a wine jug. It was made by the Amphora porcelain factory in Trnovany, Czechoslovakia, in the early 1900s.

ANTIQUES

Its worth would probably be about $185 to $195.

Q. I have in my possession two beautiful hand-painted lamps and would appreciate any information you can provide as to the value and vintage.

A. The markings are as follows: "Made in Western Germany—Bavarian Bristol—Portable Lamp."

A. Without a picture, it is hard to establish an accurate value. Objects marked "Made in Western Germany" indicate they were made after World War II.

Bristol is a type of glass made in England, and also Bavaria. These lamps are not rare and not considered valuable collectibles.

Q. I have a blue and white porcelain centerpiece. It is a bowl on a pedestal, 20 inches tall. There are raised flowers on the bowl and pedestal.

A. Also, two figures, male and female, are standing on the base. The mark on the bottom looks like two crossed swords.

I wonder if you could give me some idea of its value and tell me anything about the mark?

A. The mark you describe is similar to the mark used by Meissen.

You should take your centerpiece to a museum where it can be carefully examined for authentication.

Q. I have 12 plates that were given to me by my mother. The center of each plate is plain white or ivory; they have a purple border with flowers and they are edged in gold.

A. They are stamped with the name "John Maddock & Sons Ltd. — England—Registered 737954—Minerva."

My grandmother acquired these plates back during the Depression, and we would like to know their value, if any.

A. These plates were made in Burslem, Staffordshire, England by John Maddock & Sons Ltd.

The registry number indicates these were made around 1928. Minerva is the name of the pattern.

Your plates would be worth about $165 to $185 for the set.

Letters with picture(s) are welcome and may be answered in the column. We cannot reply personally by or return pictures. Address your letters to Anne McCollam, P.O. Box 490, Notre Dame, IN 46556.

Write an essay and win a home on the left coast project," Meador said.

"To my knowledge, we're the only company in the world marketing a residential property in this way. It's a skill-oriented program—not a lottery—and is legal in every respect. We're receiving entries from throughout the country and several foreign countries, including Russia."

Meador's company researched various ways to effectively market properties during a tight real estate market.

She was particularly impressed by a "bed and breakfast" inn in Maine that sold for about $500,000 through the receipt of 7,000 essay contest entries.

The estimated value of the subject house in California has not been appraised at $800,000. It was previously listed for $795,000 (asking price).

"It's an exceptionally fine home in a choice location. Whether the essay winner wants to live in it or sell it, the property will benefit the winner tremendously," Meador said.

Here are excerpts from some essays:

"The reason I would like to win the property is simple—to make a home for my daughter and I."

"I don't want to move into the house. I want to win, lower the price below the market, sell it, pay my taxes to the government on the capital gain and bring the money back home so my family can afford to live a modest lifestyle in peace."

Contest entries must be received before Oct. 15, Meador said. They will be judged by an independent panel—primarily university and college professors and writers.

Q. Is the interest in owning a vacation home increasing?

A. It's increasing substantially, according to a nationwide study, "The American Recreational Property Survey, 1993."

The survey was conducted by Ragatz Associates, Inc. for The American Resort Development Association. It reveals that 43.8 percent of households in America now feel they have a chance of purchasing recreational property during the next 10 years, compared to only 26.2 percent in 1990. The responses were from households nationwide.

Motivations for this increased interest include the slowly improving economy in much of the country, the decline in mortgage interest rates and the maturing of the baby-boom generation into the age bracket where recreational property purchases become more interesting.

"The recreational property industry could potentially double in the next 10 years due, in part, to the increasing emphasis on planning for long-term vacation and leisure needs," said Tom Franks, president of ARDA. "We are definitely seeing a shift in the consumers' desire to purchase vacation property as opposed to renting year after year."

The beach is the most preferred type of location for recreational property. Lake locations and mountain areas were the next preferred types.

Q. What is the American Homeowners Foundation?

A. It's a non-profit educational organization representing homeowners, prospective homeowners and home sellers in this country. It was founded in 1984.

The organization produces a variety of printed educational materials of special interest to this targeted group, including books. Its newest book is titled, "How to Sell Your Home Fast." For information, write to the Foundation at 1724 S. Quincy St., Arlington, VA 22204.

Questions may be used in future columns; personal responses should not be expected. Send inquiries to James M. Woodard, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190.

Chocolate shop satisfies Milford's cravings

By MIKE MCGINNEN
Staff Writer

Milford's numerous chocolate fanatics will no longer need to travel to distant communities to satisfy their cravings, as the Main Street Chocolate Shoppe opened recently just in time for the village's Sidewalk Sales.

Shop owner Cindy Jakey (also the owner of Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate) came up with the idea one day after observing the love of chocolate in her office.

"My husband was in here and he overheard everyone talking about chocolate. He asked me, 'Are people really that addicted to chocolate?' And they are," Jakey said.

"Thanks to everyone's addiction, we have a built-in customer base," Jakey said with a laugh.

Once Jakey had the idea for the store, she needed to find a company to provide the chocolate for the business. Since Jakey has no experience with running a retail business, this involved some research on her part.

Jakey selected Truan's candies of Detroit as the main supplier for the store.

"They were really helpful, the most helpful of anyone we contacted. Mark Truan helped us a lot. They delivered it and showed us how to set it all up in the display cases," Jakey said.

Connie Grove, manager of the Main Street Chocolate Shoppe, believes Truan's supplied customer recognition right from the start.

"The line of candy we're carrying is very well known, especially among the older people. Everyone was very pleased with the taste of it," Grove said.

In addition to Truan's candies, the store offers fudge, suckers, Wunderbeans, imported candy, clusters, truffles, cordials, creams and novelty items such as chocolate golf balls and candy dinosaurs, according to Jakey.

When the store opened, the enthusiastic response of many residents demonstrated to Grove the need for a place like this in Milford.

"The response was wonderful. Milford welcomed us with open arms. The sales were just great... people were telling us how glad they are that we're here," said Grove.

The store is relying on word-of-mouth advertising at the moment.

"We really had no exposure or advertising. A lot of people on the street were telling others to go see us. A lot of people were walking around with our bags, which is the best advertising we could have," Grove said.

The interior of the store is designed to remind you of an "old-time" candy store with its Victorian decor, said Grove.

"The owner's dream is to keep this as people remembered candy stores in the past. This is not going to be a bulk food, help-yourself place. It is a we-serve-you type of place," Grove said.

style outfits for the Milford Memories summer festival in August, which Groves anticipates will be busier than the Sidewalk Sales.

"If we can handle last weekend, we will be able to handle anything. We are looking forward to Milford Memories," said Grove.

After the busy activity on the weekend, business had slowed down drastically Sunday and Monday, Grove said.

"Yesterday and today are reality. I'm sure things will pick up on the weekend and after we are better known," said Grove.

Business Briefs

NOVI'S STEVE MYERS, recipient of a Paul Harris Fellow Award for service in Rotary, attended the inaugural meeting of the Oakland County business roundtable on June 16 at the MSU management education center in Troy. Myers was chosen from among 350 applicants to become one of 125 roundtable members, the only participant from a Novi business.

The Oakland county business roundtable is the brainchild of L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County executive. The roundtable is co-chaired by Robert Stemple, former GM chairman, and Dr. Patsy Fulton, Chancellor of Oakland Community College.

The roundtable is organized into 12 committees covering every area of business and growth in Oakland County. Myers is a member of the foreign trade and exporting committee, whose members also include Wilhelm Kast, president of the Michigan International Trade coalition, and Keith Crain, publisher of Crain's Detroit Business.

The roundtable is a coalition of business, education, and government. Oakland county is slated for growth of 16 percent in the coming decade, compared to 6 percent for the region, said Patterson.

"We want the Oakland county business roundtable to be the mechanism by which we fine-tune the economic engine of Oakland county," said Patterson before a full house at the inaugural morning meeting. Patterson called for five action-oriented suggestions from each of the 12 committees in 18 months, when the roundtable will be dissolved. "This will be our blueprint," beamed Patterson.

NANCY AMATO of Novi, was recognized recently with an award for multifamily residential management. The award was presented by Amato's employer, Cardinal Realty Service Inc. at the company's National Symposium held in Columbus, Ohio. Amato, a Cardinal district manager responsible for 11 apartment communities in southeast Michigan, was honored for a successful customer retention program which resulted in loyal customers and low turnover rates during the 12-month period from May 1992 through May 1993.

Amato has been employed as a Cardinal District Manager since 1989.

Cardinal, with corporate headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, is among the nation's top 20 multifamily management companies, according to 1993 ratings released by the National Multihousing Council. The company owns and manages apartment communities throughout the eastern United States, and provides real estate and general partner services to investors, business clients and apartment residents.

Home sales look good in second half

Moving into the second half of the year, local Realtors remain highly optimistic about continued strong sales of existing homes.

A survey of the 25 member offices of the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors, the state's largest, found three-quarters of respondents foreseeing a sales increase in 1993 of five to 10 percent above a year earlier.

Last year WWOCAR members achieved 14,227 sales in their 1,600 square mile area of coverage. Sales in 1993 are running slightly above last year's through the first five months.

Strong reason given for the expected market rise was continuation of relatively modest mortgage interest rates, currently near 20-year lows. This outweighed the next three listed factors — an improving economy, good choice of homes and more first-time buyers — by about three to one margins.

With the growth in the market, nearly the same percentage of respondents look for listings to increase by five to 10 percent with 19 percent expecting them to stay near last-year's levels and 10 percent looking for a decrease.

The median price paid for local homes, with half selling for more and half less, is seen by 69 percent of those completing the survey as ending the year five to eight percent higher than the $87,500 posted in 1992. Last year's gain was 6.7 over the 1991. The median price this year at the end of May was $90,000.

While about two-thirds of respondents anticipate mortgage rates climbing before year's end, some 30 percent think they will remain near present levels and more than five percent expect a further decline.

"The survey also noted some possible scenarios that could put a damper on the market," said William Deacon, WWOCAR president. "Most seen as negative factors in priority of listing were consumer uncertainty about the economy, tax increases, higher unemployment, a shortage of first-time buyers as a market base, and a decline in listings."

"Overall, the positives were most prevalent, so we remain extremely confident that this will be one of the better of recent years for home buyers and sellers. Conditions are expected to stay highly favorable over the next several months and we anticipate a lot of early movement to head off continuing price increases or growth in the mortgage interest rate."

Money Management

Choose a business site carefully

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, selecting the right location for your business directly affects its profitability. Here are some general guidelines you can follow to help you make the right choice.

LOCATE TO SERVE YOUR TARGET MARKET

Describe the background of your potential clients as specifically as possible, focusing on age, income level, hobbies, and other aspects of their backgrounds that may be relevant to your particular business. Then look for a location that enables you to have contact with these potential clients.

EXAMINE AREA STATISTICS

To find out whether a community is comprised of individuals who meet your target market description, contact the local census bureau. It can supply you with details about a community's population, such as the average income, predominant occupations and median age.

Besides the census bureau, other sources of background information include local government agencies, chambers of commerce, the Small Business Administration, trade associations, local newspapers and even local residents.

ACCESSIBILITY AND CURB APPEAL

Match your location to the customers you want to serve, making sure your location is near major access roads and public transportation. Be sure parking facilities are convenient and safely lit if your business will be open during evening hours.

Take as much interest in the physical appearance of the building and the location of your business, as you do in your own appearance. A store, building or office front that is well-maintained says more about your business and how you run it than any advertisement could say.

TAKE NOTE OF YOUR NEIGHBORS

When considering a location, be sure to determine the proximity of your competition. If there are already a number of established businesses similar to yours in the area, you may want to consider a different location.

Take time to think about how your business complements others already in the area. For example, if you're in the retail business, you might want a location near other retail outlets. Similarly, if you're selling professional services, you may want to position yourself near similar professionals as well as possible referral sources.

THINK ABOUT THE FUTURE

Moving a business is costly and time consuming, so it is important to consider whether the facility can accommodate future expansion.

Weigh carefully your decision to rent or buy a building. If you want to own a facility, consider the property taxes. You'll also want to find out whether there are any zoning regulations that may adversely affect your future plans or local ordinances that restrict the type of business that can exist in the building.

Before signing any rental or purchase agreement, analyze the rental history of the property you want, as well as others in the area. If there has been a lot of turnover in recent years, chances are the location is not a good one.

Think, too, about the projected growth for the community and any new plans for improving transportation to your place of business. You want to be sure that your new location can accommodate your plans for growth.

FREE HIGGINS LAKE HIDE-AWAY WEEK-END *

Courtesy Michigan Travel Bureau

Have you ever seen the commercial that portrays a crowded expressway and then quickly pans to a car and a driver that have had enough of the congestion and then exits to follow the non-beaten path? As a result this driver finds peace, harmony... and happiness. Had he not taken the less traveled road, he might never have known this serenity.

Life, like the commercial, can become quite mundane... if we let it. The nine-to-five rat race is only bearable and worthwhile if we learn to take it easy. Many have heard the expression... "Take time out to smell the roses." Howard Lang, president of Two Lakes Building, did just that over 15 years ago. After vacationing in the Higgins and Houghton Lakes area, Howard had a vision: To create an inexpensive community of vacation and retirement homes in one of Northern Michigan's best kept secrets... Higgins Lake.

Located in Roscommon County, the lake is rated the sixth most beautiful lake in the world by National Geographic. For as little as $32,990 you can purchase the vacation or retirement home of your dreams. this is not a shell, but a quality built, ready-to-live-in home on a 10,000 sq. ft. lot.

DREAMS DO COME TRUE

Chalets from only
$35,990

You might ask how this is possible. Two Lakes Building builds in excess of 65 homes per year and is able to pass along their volume discounts to their customers. Since 1977, Two Lakes Building has built close to 1,000 homes in Roscommon county. Most of their contractors have been a part of the Two Lakes Building organizations since its inception and they do include some of the finest craftsmen in Northern Michigan.

Two Lakes Building is one of AAA Magazine's oldest advertisers and takes great pride in working with each individual customer.

Two Lakes Building invites 8-15 interested couples up north every weekend and offers a complimentary night at the Holiday Inn in Houghton Lake. Viewing of homes in various stages of construction, area highlights and available homesites takes place the following morning.

There is so much to do in this area you will never tire of your investment. It offers skiing, both downhill and cross-country, and of course waterskiing, as well as snowmobiling, swimming, hunting and fishing. The Higgins Lake State Park, just a few minutes away, is one of the most beautiful in Michigan and even offers boat rentals.

As you are driving in the area you will feel as one with nature. There are deer close by, black squirrels and wild turkeys. Crystal clear creeks seem to be everywhere and the smell of pine is completely refreshing.

It is time to exit from the nine to five whirlwind. This Friday take a drive north to a lifestyle affordable to all. Higgins Lake Hideaway... where the living is easy and the lifestyle says HOME. For more information call Two Lakes Building at their Southfield office:
