Reviewers take axe to proposed police budget

By SHARON CONDRON
Staff Writer

The Northville Township Police Department faces an uphill battle tomorrow morning before the budget review committee.

Late last week the department's proposed 1994 $2 million budget submitted by Police Chief Chip Snider was trimmed by $319,000, a week before it was set to be tackled by the five-member budget review committee.

The township's budget review committee will meet with department heads tomorrow at township hall to hear their requests to amend the proposed 1994 budget. The cuts made to the police fund last week were all preliminary cuts that Finance Director Dwayne Harrigan said could change if the police department builds a good case for additional budget allocations tomorrow.

Snider, who is doubling these days as the police chief and the new public safety director, said he was surprised to learn the severity of the cuts at a meeting with Harrigan and Lt. Gary Batzloff on Thursday.

"It was a significant amount," he said about the proposed cuts. "I didn't suspect that we were financially in this bad of shape."

Snider said Harrigan told him that the township wasn't willing to pay to fill a lieutenant's position for $44,500 and an officer's position for $27,165. The department's request for an administrative aide for $25,000 was also nixed by the committee. Holiday pay and fringe benefits were subsequently lowered because the two hires were not approved. The department's request to enhance its computer services for $67,095 was denied and a slew of equipment purchases totalling $36,294 were also slashed.

The administrative assistant's position was not budgeted for in 1993 or in the year before, but it is needed in the detective bureau and in the chief's office, he said. The need for an additional full-time clerical person could change now that the fire and police departments have merged and are sharing the administrative aide who was working at the Seven Mile fire station.

"I'm not sure how that will all shake down yet," Snider said about the need for another clerical person.

The new officer he requested was expected to fill a vacancy in the ranks from an internal promotion of a sergeant to a lieutenant sometime this year. The lieutenant's position has been a budget item since 1981, but was never filled, according to Lt.

Batzloff, who was promoted to his position in 1984.

Snider said the deletion of the additional equipment would have to be negotiated tomorrow because the request included the costs of replacing bulletproof vests for all patrol officers.

"Additional equipment was cancelled but that will have to be looked at because it included the replacement of all bulletproof vests, which is a budgeted, contractual item," he said.

The public safety director said since new contracts for patrolmen and commanders unions have yet to be settled, nobody in the department was getting the 3 percent minimum raise he requested for them this year.

The raises were omitted by the budget review committee pending the settlement of the two union contracts.

Both sides at the bargaining table say they are nowhere near settling contracts to replace the two three-year pacts that expired in April.

The absence of contracts is making budgeting for 1994 more tedious than in years past, according to Harrigan.

"This is the first time we've had to budget without the contracts in

Board eliminates pay-to-play plan

By MICHELLE HARRISON
Staff Writer

Northville Board of Education members officially blew the whistle on the pay for participation athletic and co-curricular program last week.

Members voted last Monday to eliminate the program and fully fund the non-academic programs, as well as reinstate three custodial/maintenance positions.

In July, athletes and members of fall sports and co-curricular programs were notified that practices would begin without instituting the pay to participate fees. The district had been hesitant in making any decisions until it learned of the provisions in the proposed State School Aid Act.

Since it appears the district will not be seriously harmed by the proposed act, board members gave the go ahead to proceed with business as usual.

About 1,100 students participated in athletics last year with some families writing checks for as much as $1,400 so their children could participate in sports and co-curricular activities.

The pay to participate program came in second among parents and residents, following the Student Assistance program, when the district asked for input on what items should be budget priorities. The entire pay to participate program costs $236,000 with over $62,000 of that making up the co-curricular portion.

State to cut off aid to local school district

By MICHELLE HARRISON
Staff Writer

There's good news and bad news for the Northville Public School system from the state.

If Gov. John Engler signs the proposed State School Aid Act it will mean the end of state funding for Northville schools.

That's the bad news. The good news is that with the re capture, we only received a couple hundred thousand dollars," said John Street, director of business and finance.

And now that the state will recapture 100 percent of what it allocates to school districts with high property valuations per pupil, the process is cut and dry.

Northville's estimated state equalized valuation per pupil is a little over $200,000.

The only money Northville previously received from the state was in categorical aid for transportation, special education, bilingual education and professional development programs. Essentially, the district will be picking up the full tab for those programs now.

On a brighter note, the district's initial budget projections figured in an extra $465,000 for retirement purposes. Although the district will pay for FICA expenses, the state will continue to pay for all retirement costs in both in- and out-of formula school districts.

"There were three areas we looked at," Street said, referring to the first 1993-94 general fund budget.

Those included the Legislature putting a freeze or cap on property tax assessments, the state requiring school districts to pay for retirement costs, and the state instituting a 100 percent recapture formula for categorical aid.

"Well, the two big ones did not happen," Street said, referring to the first two scenarios. "Based on our initial budget projections, we can now add money that we thought had been taken away which leaves us in pretty good condition."

Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski said he was pleased the proposed act would also repeal tax base sharing, also referred to as the Robin Hood Act. The district joined other school districts in a lawsuit two years ago, trying to stop the act which took money from richer school districts in an attempt to provide equality among all state school districts.

"A lot of parents have asked about that (lawsuit)," Rezmierski said. "They need to know we prevailed and that we are doing the right things for the school district."

The two administrators were criti-

Students gather for prayer and special fellowship session

By MICHELLE HARRISON
Staff Writer

Northville High School students united with over a million of their teen-age counterparts across the country last Wednesday.

Nearly 20 students from Northville gathered around the school's flag pole for the annual "See You at the Pole" student-initiated and student-led prayer rally. At the same time, students across the country were doing the same thing.

"We prayed for our schools, our friends, the teachers and for students," said Richard Bell, a student who participated in the event.

Bell added that schoolmates in the neighboring South Lyon, Novi, Plymouth-Canton and Livonia districts also participated in ceremonies at their respective flag poles.

The students also read Bible verses at the non-denominational event.

Amanda Cole said she was excited to share in the event because it gave her a chance to get others involved in Christ.

"It was a really good opportunity for unity as far as Christian friends go," Melissa Sparks said. "It was an awesome opportunity to witness to (others) about God."

Colleen Audet said she was grateful to learn who her Christian counterparts were at the high school.

"For me, it was a great opportunity to hand the school year over to the Lord because it is so busy and there are so many pressures," Amy Frankel said of her participation at the pole. "I can't do it alone. I really need God to help me out."

Bell said any opportunity to share his feelings about the Lord and pray for others was a welcome one.

"With that many people praying and so much togetherness, prayer really works," he said. "We prayed to help the kids. We can't change their lives, but we want to be able to tell them that God can."

Twenty Northville High School students took part in a prayer rally Wednesday.

Parks and Recreation gets small business grant

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

The Beck Road Community Park will be a greener place next year thanks to the Northville Rotary Club and the state Department of Natural Resources.

The DNR recently announced that it has awarded Northville Parks and Recreation a $6,500 grant from its Small Business Administration Natural Resource Development Program.

Parks Director Traci Johnson, informed of the grant award by a Northville Record reporter Friday, noted that the announcement came on her birthday.

"I'm thrilled," she said. "This is the best birthday present I could have had."

She noted that the grant, when combined with $2,400 in matching funds from Northville Rotary, a $600 donation from Northville Township coffers and $1,700 in the form of services provided by the parks department, will fund the planting of about 60 trees around the park.

"We're looking at approximately 59 trees, but the next process is to actually bid out the work to local landscapers," Johnson said. "We may even have it planted before the end of this growing season, but we have to wait for official notification."

Johnson said the parks department relied on the services of township grant coordinator Maureen Osiecki and township beautification chairperson Celia Larsen in preparing the successful grant request. Larsen, a botanist, drew up a tentative landscaping plan that was submitted to the DNR along with the request, while Osiecki.

The plan uses a combination of hackberry, hawthorn, redbud, red cedar, burr oak and other species to dress up the park entrance, visually separate the parking area from the fields and screen the fields from recreational facilities behind them.

The DNR program, administered by the DNR's Forest Management Division, provides matching grants to communities for tree planting on public lands. The program is designed to assist communities with their tree-planting needs while increasing economic activity in the small business sector. All purchased materials and labor must be obtained from small businesses.

"This program has been very successful, contributing to local economies and supporting urban and community forestry programs across the state," said DNR Director Roland Harmes. "It enhances environmental quality and the quality of life in our communities."

The grant is part of more than $1 million disbursed among 57 Michigan communities for tree planting projects in 1993 and 1994.

Only in the second week of school, the Student Congress is busily preparing for Homecoming 1993 festivities at Northville High School.

Student Jenny McNally, publicity chairperson for the event, said preparations are coming along very nicely for the Oct. 1 event. Here's the tentative schedule of events:

● Daily activities. Every day of homecoming week will have a theme. Monday, Sept. 27, will be pajama day and Friday, Oct. 1, will be designated as orange and black day, the school's colors. Themes for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of that week have not been selected yet.

● Pep assembly. The senior class king and queen will be announced at the 1:05 p.m. pep assembly Friday.

● Parade. Line-up begins at 6:15 p.m. behind the recreation center. Parade participants will march through town to the high school.

● Football. The Mustangs will take on the Canton Chiefs at 7:30 p.m. that Friday.

● Kings and Queens. Nominations will take place Sept. 23. Six senior kings and queens each will be nominated as well as representatives from the freshman, sophomore and junior classes. The nominees are scheduled to be announced Sept. 28.

● Floats. The floats will focus on the theme "Travel Through the Ages," McNally said classes will concentrate on how the modes of transportation have changed. Each class float will be judged. Float building will take place from 5 to 9 p.m. each night of homecoming week at the stadium.

● Class competitions. Scheduled for Sept. 28 during float building activities, competitions include tug o' war and the shoe kick between classes.

● Lunch. A number of activities pitting classes against each other will be held. At the end of the week, the class with the most points from lunchtime, float building and class competition activities wins the designation of being the most spirited.

● Dance. Homecoming festivities will conclude with a dance, scheduled from 8:30 to 11 p.m. Oct. 2 in the high school cafeteria. The court dance will be held at 10 p.m. Dress is formal.

City police investigate jewelry theft

City police are investigating the theft of an estimated $7,795 in jewelry from a Revere Court home. The items were stolen from two jewelry boxes in the master bedroom sometime between Aug. 9-30.

They included a 24 inch diamond-cut gold rope necklace and matching bracelet, 18 inch gold herringbone necklace, 14 karat gold bracelet with a solid band and scroll design along the band, 14-karat yellow gold bracelet with a solid band and smooth surface, 14-karat gold drop-type oval earrings and a diamond with one large stone and four smaller ones valued at $3,180. Also stolen were 12-15 silver dollars.

apartment dweller told city police that the door had been locked when she left, but it was unlocked when she returned. A real estate agent had been at the apartment in the mean time, but the agent told police that she also locked the door when she left.

WARRANT ARREST: A 37-year-old Northville woman stopped for speeding at Eight Mile and Novi roads was arrested after city police learned of a warrant for her arrest. The woman was wanted for failing to appear in court on a charge of operating while impaired. She was released after she posted a $150 cash bond and a court date was set.

DRIVE-THROUGH VIDEO THEFT: McDonald's management at the Six Mile and Haggerty Road store were dumbfounded on Thursday, Sept. 16, to find that somebody had stolen a video surveillance camera off the post near the drive-through line at the fast food store. According to township police, someone ripped the $2,000 camera off the pole but left the mounting hangers there. The camera was used to monitor traffic in the drive thru.

TEENAGE HARRASMENT: The mother of a 15-year-old Northville girl told township police her daughter's former boyfriend was harassing her. The mother said the 17-year-old boy was seen parked in front of the girl's home and has allegedly slapped her daughter in the face and then pushed her down while the two were in school at Northville High School. The parent said she contacted school officials who told her they couldn't do anything about it and referred her to city police. The woman called township police and asked them to contact the man.

Township police spoke with him, and he denied ever striking or touching the girl. The young man came into the station and provided police with a written statement that says the girl is an ex-girlfriend of his who is mad that he's now dating someone new. He said he and another friend were visiting a third friend who lives next to the ex-girlfriend when she and parents saw him there.

WARRANT ARREST: Michigan State Police from the Northville post jailed a 27-year-old Ionia man Friday, Sept. 10, after learning he was wanted on an outstanding child neglect warrant. The man's vehicle was stopped on westbound I-96 near Novi Road at 2:10 p.m., for an equipment violation. A computer check revealed the warrant, issued by the 30th Circuit Court in Lansing. The man could not post the $600 bond, and was lodged at the Farmington Hills Police Department.

OPEN INTOXICANTS: Two men were ticketed Sept. 10 for open intoxicants in a motor vehicle by Michigan State Police from the Northville Post. Troopers stopped their vehicle at 3:30 p.m. on westbound I-96 near Meadowbrook for a traffic infraction, and noted a smell of intoxicants when talking to the driver. A passenger admitted to an open can of beer, which was confiscated and emptied. The driver was written an appearance ticket for transporting open intoxicants, and the passenger was cited for possession.

MARIJUANA POSSESSION: A Harsen's Island man faces drug possession charges after Michigan State Police troopers from the Northville post allegedly discovered marijuana on him during a traffic stop. The man was a passenger in a Jeep driven by an Algonac man, who was clocked at 80 mph on westbound I-96 near Novi Road on Sept. 11.

As he approached the vehicle, the trooper noted the odor of open intoxicants and burned marijuana, and noticed ashes on the floor of the Jeep. When questioned, the men admitted to open beers, but denied having any marijuana. Troopers reported that the passenger was fidgety, and appeared to be concealing something in a jacket pocket. When asked to step from the vehicle, he emptied a plastic wrapper of suspected marijuana onto the ground. Both men were cited for possession of open intoxicants, and released pending further warrants. Police are seeking a warrant against the passenger for possession of marijuana.

Citizens with information about the above incidents are urged to call Northville City Police at 349-1234 or Northville Township Police at 349-9400.

UTILITY TRUCK SNAGS SIGNAL: A Detroit Edison truck heading west on Eight Mile Road at Novi Road Sept. 15 yanked over a utility pole when its bucket snagged the steel cable holding the eastbound traffic signal aloft. The falling signal struck an eastbound vehicle, but no injuries were reported.

Traffic was snarled for about an hour after the 2:15 p.m. incident as city police monitored the scene and rerouted vehicles around the fallen pole and cables. Police returned to the scene about 7 p.m. to block traffic so Detroit Edison crews could rehang the cables and reinstall the traffic signal.

APARTMENT ROBBED: An estimated $295 in electronic equipment was reported stolen from a Base Line Road apartment sometime between 9 a.m. and 8:15 p.m. Sept. 15. The place," Harrigan said. Snider requested 3 percent increases for all department staff, except himself. As director of the new public safety department, the chief requested — at the suggestion of the township administration — a $6,500 wage increase to cover his added job responsibilities of overseeing both the police and fire departments.

Twp. police budget faces possible cuts

But even that figure was hacked by the budget review committee. In its place stands a $4,946 raise, which represents 3 percent over his current $51,800 annual salary.

Snider also asked for three new cars for the coming year. Two cars needed to replace two in the patrol fleet that have met their maximum mileage limits, made it past the first budget hurdle. The third one would have replaced Snider's two-year-old Ford Taurus. His old Taurus would have been handed down to the patrol if the committee had approved a new car for $13,911, but that didn't happen.

Harrigan said the cuts made to the police budget were done so the committee could start Tuesday's public budget work session with a balanced budget. He did say there may be changes made to the proposed budget that could restore some of Snider's original requests.

"We did it so we could balance the budget," said Harrigan. "But it could all change on Tuesday."

Because the 1994 budget is in review, nothing that's being discussed now between the departments and the committee is cast in stone. Harrigan said he expects the figures tossed around now will be adjusted several times over before the township board adopts a new budget on Oct. 21.

"I'm extremely concerned with the cuts that have been suggested," Snider said. "But I'm hoping to have a clear direction from the committee on Tuesday on where the cuts will appear in the budget and in the level of services. We want some direction and we want to know in what area of service the elected officials want us to drop or reduce services."

Lt. Batzloff reviewed the numbers and the proposed cuts on Thursday and said it was too soon to tell what the fallout of the cuts would be if the committee stood steadfast on its position.

"It is really just too soon to tell what the impact on the department will be," Batzloff said. "We will just have to wait and see what will happen at the budget hearing on Tuesday."

September 20, 1993

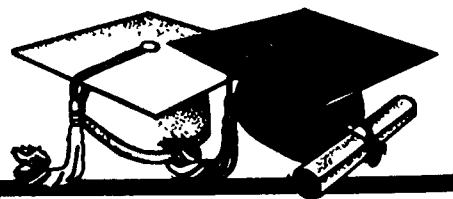

Our Opinion

Pay-to-play plan was ripe for elimination

We were relieved to learn that the Northville Board of Education had voted to eliminate the pay-to-play program that was implemented after the failed millage election of 1992.

Under the plan, parents were required to pay for the privilege of enrolling their children in athletics and co-curricular activities. Reportedly, some 1,100 students participated in athletics and co-curriculars last year, and some families were paying as much as $1,400 to sign their children up.

Elimination of the plan was made possible by passage of the millage renewal this year, and by the fact that the state School Aid Act was not too injurious to out-of-formula school districts like

Education

Northville, which receive little financial help from the state treasury.

Athletics and co-curricular programs, though removed from the classroom, make up an important part of the maturation process and, thus, an important part of education. Eliminating the payment requirement was the right thing to do.

Community well served by local activist groups

The Northville area community is indeed fortunate to play host to two civic groups that are dedicated to the high-minded goal of raising awareness of important contemporary issues.

A Community Organization Recognizing Diversity (ACORN) was formed to encourage appreciation of different ethnic and racial groups and to combat the intolerance that can result from prejudicial thinking.

Advocates for Quality Education is geared toward helping the community become informed about the often complicated issues affecting education.

Both organizations are poised to begin their second full seasons of existence.

It is difficult to speak too highly about the objectives of ACORN. In a community as homogeneous as this one, it is easy for people to get comfortable with a kind of racial and ethnic tunnel vision. In the absence of significant minority populations, the temptation to pass harsh judgments on people who look and live differently is very great.

ACORN members recognize this danger and act to resist it. The group brings in speakers from diverse socio-economic backgrounds to address local audiences and sponsors field trips designed to increase cultural awareness.

Currently, ACORN is in the process of developing a response plan for reacting to local incidents of intolerance. The plan would provide a framework for responding to individual cases of racism or prejudice.

ACORN meets at 7 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month at Northville High School, 775 N. Center St.

Advocates for Quality Education is an independent group designed to keep its members and the community as a whole up to date on the changing scene in the schools. The organization is broad-based and welcomes people with all points of view and interests.

Advocates is composed of an astonishing number of intelligent and concerned members who generate thoughtful discussions on matters of moment. The group is highly organized and conducts quality, in-depth research into a variety of issues.

Advocates grew out of a group that was formed to promote the school millage in June 1992. After that election, the organization reconstituted and broadened its scope. It now delves into municipal and statewide issues as well as millages and other school-related ballot questions.

Advocate's first meeting of the new season is set for 7:30-9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 29, in the library classroom at Northville High School.

Both ACORN and Advocates welcome new participation.

Qualified to fight city hall

Rick Byrne

My buddy Jerry LeBlanc was a little ticked off when I visited him Tuesday night. His son Marty had fixed my VCR, and I came by to pick it up.

Jerry likes to drop by the Novi City Council every now and then just to set them straight, especially on issues near and dear to his heart — like Eleven Mile Road.

The nuts and bolts of the issue are as follows. When voters approved the $18 million road bond package in 1990, among the 12 projects included in it was the paving of Eleven Mile Road from Beck to Wixom, where Jerry lives. He and his neighbors would just as soon never see Eleven Mile paved, and they mounted a fairly good campaign against the road bond just because of the inclusion of their road.

The bond issue passed anyway, so Jerry and company went before the council and urged the city to prioritize the Eleven Mile paving 12th of the 12 projects. The council agreed. Secretly, I think residents hoped that with Eleven Mile slated last, funds might run dry due to cost overruns on the rest of the package before anyone got around to it, thus cancelling the paving.

Now it appears that wish is already coming true. On Monday, it was announced at the council table that the widening of Decker Road, priority No. 3 among the 12 projects, will exceed cost estimates by over $1 million. Jerry dropped by and told the city to help itself to the money slated for the Eleven Mile paving.

"You've got X number of dollars. Money is tight," he said. "Twenty five cars a day go down Eleven Mile between Beck and Wixom and you want to pave a road. Or is that for developers?"

"Leave us alone. If you don't, Waco, Texas, is going to look like a garden party," he told the council.

Now if anyone else had said that, I'd say they were just blowing smoke (no pun intended). Not Jerry, though. He's part French-Canadian and part Indian, which makes a pretty feisty combination.

To understand why I don't take Jerry lightly, you have to know why he moved here in the first place.

Jerry bought his place on Eleven Mile Road because of race cars, which makes him one of the few people in the world who can say that race cars made him rich. (The joke is if you want to make a small fortune in racing, start with a big fortune.)

He had been living in a house in Farmington Hills in the '60s and was a fairly successful driver in stock cars, sprint cars and midgets. Unfortunately, the neighbors in his subdivision didn't take too kindly to his firing up race cars every now and then for testing.

Out of compassion for his neighbors, he decided to move to the "country." He bought a 10-acre plot on Eleven Mile, with the idea that he could fire the cars up anytime he wanted without disturbing anyone. Who knew, when he bought cheap land in the '60s, that he's be sitting on prime property 25 years later.

The point is, Jerry has banged fenders with the likes of Benny Parsons, Gordon Johncock and Joy Fair. With training like that, bumping heads with the city of Novi would be no contest.

What about taxpayer rights?

Phil Jerome

Robert McMahon has got it all wrong.

McMahon is president of the Northville Board of Education, and what he has all wrong is the notion of who he's responsible to.

Here's what happened: The school board recently reached a tentative agreement with its teachers union on a new contract. The teachers ratified the contract Sept. 2 and the board met Sept. 8 to consider the pact.

At the time of the Sept. 8 meeting, details of the tentative agreement were known only to teachers, administrators and the school board. They were not known to the general public because both sides in the negotiation process had agreed to keep the details secret.

They weren't going to let anybody except the insiders know the details until after the board had taken action... until it was too late to do anything about it.

Some residents (taxpayers) at the meeting asked questions about the proposed settlement and suggested that the board wait before ratifying the pact to give taxpayers an opportunity to examine the details.

Needless to say, the rational suggestion didn't get very far. And that's where McMahon got it all wrong. Rather than giving the public an opportunity to examine the details, McMahon said he felt the board had a responsibility to respond immediately to the Northville Education Association.

Wait just a minute, Mr. School Board President. What about the taxpayers? What about the people who pay the bills?

Don't they have a few rights in this process? When school board members and administrators start thinking that their obligation to teachers is greater than their obligation to the taxpayers/voters, something is seriously wrong.

My suspicion is that McMahon's ill-considered comment is part of the problem — school board members get sucked into becoming part of the educational cartel, forgetting that their first and foremost responsibility is to the public.

For the record, however, it appears that Northville's school board has come up with a more responsible contract than it has in the past. There is a wage freeze in the first year (1993-94) and a 3 percent hike in the second year (1994-95).

Before we get too carried away with praise, it's important to remember that teachers who are taking a pay freeze for 1993-94 are making somewhere between $48,983 and $59,403. Pretty darn affluent, even in an affluent community where the median household income is just a shade over $50,000.

But that's not the point. The point is that school boards have got to start communicating with their constituents on financial matters. The vast majority of property tax dollars go to education; 80-90 percent of a school district's budget goes to wages and fringe benefits for employees; and 80-90 percent of those wages and fringe benefits go to teachers.

What ought to happen is that school districts should be required by law to publish the details of any tentative agreement and then hold a public hearing, after a suitable period for public review and comment, before approving the pact.

That's a major departure from the way things have been done in the past, but it would be a major improvement.

It's time to stop excluding the public from the process.

ACORD continues to work for ethnic, racial tolerance

By STEVE KELLMAN
Staff Writer

Eleven year old Reggie Torrence well remembers walking into Arbor Drugs with his older brother Ricky and a few friends last month and having a clerk stare at them as they browsed the candy aisles.

Eventually, he said, the woman walked up and told them they had to buy something or leave the store. "She claimed people told her to watch us," Reggie said. "We called the manager because we wanted to know why she was staring at us like that."

Reggie's mother Connie Orr is uncertain whether the incident occurred because her sons, like her, are African-American. She's just satisfied that the manager apologized and assured them that they would not be treated that way again.

"Little things like that happen," Orr said. "We can't always have a chip on our shoulder."

As a member of A Community Organization Recognizing Diversity (ACORD), Orr is working to increase Northville's sensitivity to diversity issues, whether racial, religious, socio-economic or other, and its tolerance to a more diverse population. And as ACORD kicks off its second year in Northville, group members want to formulate a potential response to incidents that are not resolved as promptly as the run in at Arbor Drugs.

The response plan, tentatively titled the Community Incident Intervention Strategy Plan, would be a blueprint for how to react to local incidents of intolerance.

"We're being proactive because we've heard of instances in other communities," said ACORD's past chair Mary Ellen King.

She said the plan could answer questions like "how do we act, whom do we call, what do we do, and who's going to respond."

ACORD's current chair, Al Qualman, said such a blueprint would be helpful for situations like the 1991 incident in Birmingham where a physician drew a shotgun on a 14-year-old African-American boy who was standing in a parking garage while his mother shopped nearby.

Qualman noted that the Birmingham/Bloomfield Task Force on Race Relations was involved in the fallout from that incident, as the case gained regional attention and charges were brought against the physician. He said he hoped Northville's response plan would only be needed for less severe situations.

"We need to have a strategy," he said.

ACORD's goals won praise from local municipal leaders at its annual meeting last Tuesday. Township Supervisor Karen Baja noted that she was surprised by Northville's homogeneity when she moved to the township 16 years ago, and was happy to see that changing. She added that tolerance must be extended not only to people of different colors but also to other groups like the disabled.

"I hope you can make everybody see that to be different is a treat, any difference," she said.

City Council Member Jerry Mittman echoed Baja's sentiments and also applauded ACORD for its proactive stance.

"I think it's very important that we build that awareness in the community... before there's a problem," he said.

Both leaders offered the resources of their respective municipalities to ACORD's cause and suggested ways that ACORD could more effectively deliver its message to the community and encourage more residents to attend its meetings. Township Trustee Barbara O'Brien also volunteered to act as liaison between ACORD and the township's board of trustees.

ACORD meets at 7 p.m. on the second Tuesday of each month. Meetings are held at Northville High School, 775 N. Center St.

Many are eligible for student loans

Here's some good news for families who need to borrow money for college: now, students from families of all income levels are eligible for low-interest, government-sponsored student loans.

Currently, Stafford loans — the most commonly awarded student loans — are available to virtually all postsecondary education students who are attending school at least half-time. Those students who prove financial need are still eligible for the basic, subsidized Stafford loan, on which principal payments are postponed until after school and on which the government pays the interest while students are in school.

Students whose family income precludes them from the need-based loan are now eligible for an "unsubsidized" Stafford loan. This loan offers all the benefits of the basic Stafford, except that students must either pay the interest that accrues while they are in school or have it added to their loan amount after they leave school.

In the past, students from middle-income families often could not get student loans because their family income was too high, yet, with rising college costs, they were still not able to come up with all the money needed to pay for their education," says Janet Padula, academic services representative with Sallie Mae, a corporation that funds and services student loans and other education-related products. "The unsubsidized Stafford loan should offer these students more options in planning their education, including the type of school they choose."

The interest rate on both subsidized and unsubsidized Stafford loans is set once a year, based on the rate of the 91-day U.S. Treasury bill. (For students who took out Stafford loans prior to October 1992 the interest rate will remain the same as that of their previous loans.) The current Stafford rate of 6.22 percent to new borrowers will hold through June 30, 1994. On July 1, 1993, the amount undergraduates can borrow increased substantially, to $3,500 a year for sophomores and $5,500 for juniors and seniors, while freshman limits remain at $2,625. Effective Oct. 1, 1993, graduate students will be able to borrow up to $8,500 a year. All students will continue to have up to 10 years to repay their loans once they have left school.

Applications for subsidized and unsubsidized Stafford loans can be obtained through college financial aid offices and most lenders.

Sallie Mae does not make loans directly to students; it purchases loans from, and provides funds to, banks and other lenders so that they can make loans to students. When it purchases student loans, Sallie Mae services the loans and offers borrowers a variety of options that make loan repayment easier.

cal of two items they both called fallacies in the proposed State School Aid Act.

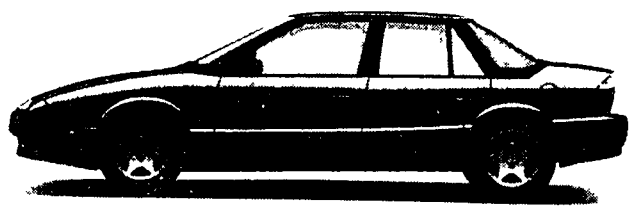

First of all, in a Legislature conference report, Northville's millage rate for the 1993-94 year is incorrectly identified at 30.7 mills when the millage rate is really 29.55 mills.

Secondly, the $28,750,882 Northville is expected to receive is money for retirement.

"We don't even see that (money)," Rezmierski said. "It looks like we're getting a windfall. We're not getting any more money."

When making midnight runs keep it healthy

One of the biggest misconceptions about midnight snacking, or snacking in the evening, is that what you eat automatically turns into unwanted pounds. That's not true — unless of course, you raid the refrigerator and eat everything in sight. A sensible, nutritious snack will leave you feeling satisfied and good about yourself.

Make your "midnight snack" part of your daily food plan. That way, you have something to look forward to.

A great way to satisfy cravings in the fall is to drink something warm and delicious like Brazilian Cocoa.

Personally, I love anything with cinnamon. Warm cinnamon toast really hits the spot. I also like to try different recipes. Now I'm hooked on Cinnamon Crisp Tortillas. They're so simple to make and they just melt in your mouth. Served with fruit slices, it's a satisfying snack. Even alone, fresh fruit is filling and refreshing.

If you like to nibble, try munching on some popcorn — minus the butter! It's sure to fill you up. Or, when I crave something sweeter, I help myself to a slice of Lightened Applesauce Loaf.

The most important thing to know is that it's okay to eat at night — just don't go overboard. Snacks should be eaten in measured amounts, not by the bag or bowl. By leaving room in your daily meal plan for a nutritious midnight snack, you'll be able to add a perfect ending to a healthier day.

BRAZILIAN COCOA

- ¼ cup granulated sugar (or equivalent sugar substitute)
- ¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
- 1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon, divided
- ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 2 cups skim milk
- 1 cup strong decaffeinated coffee

In a 1½-quart saucepan combine sugar, cocoa, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, and the nutmeg; add milk and coffee and cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until cocoa and sugar are dissolved and mixture is heated through, 4 to 5 minutes (do not boil). Divide into 4 mugs. Sprinkle each serving with ¼ of the remaining cinnamon and serve immediately. Makes 4 Servings.

Each serving provides: ¼ Milk, 75 optional calories on Weight Watchers Food Plan. Per serving: 108 calories, 1 g fat. Recipe from "Weight Watchers Quick and Easy Menu Cookbook, 1987"

CINNAMON CRISP TORTILLAS

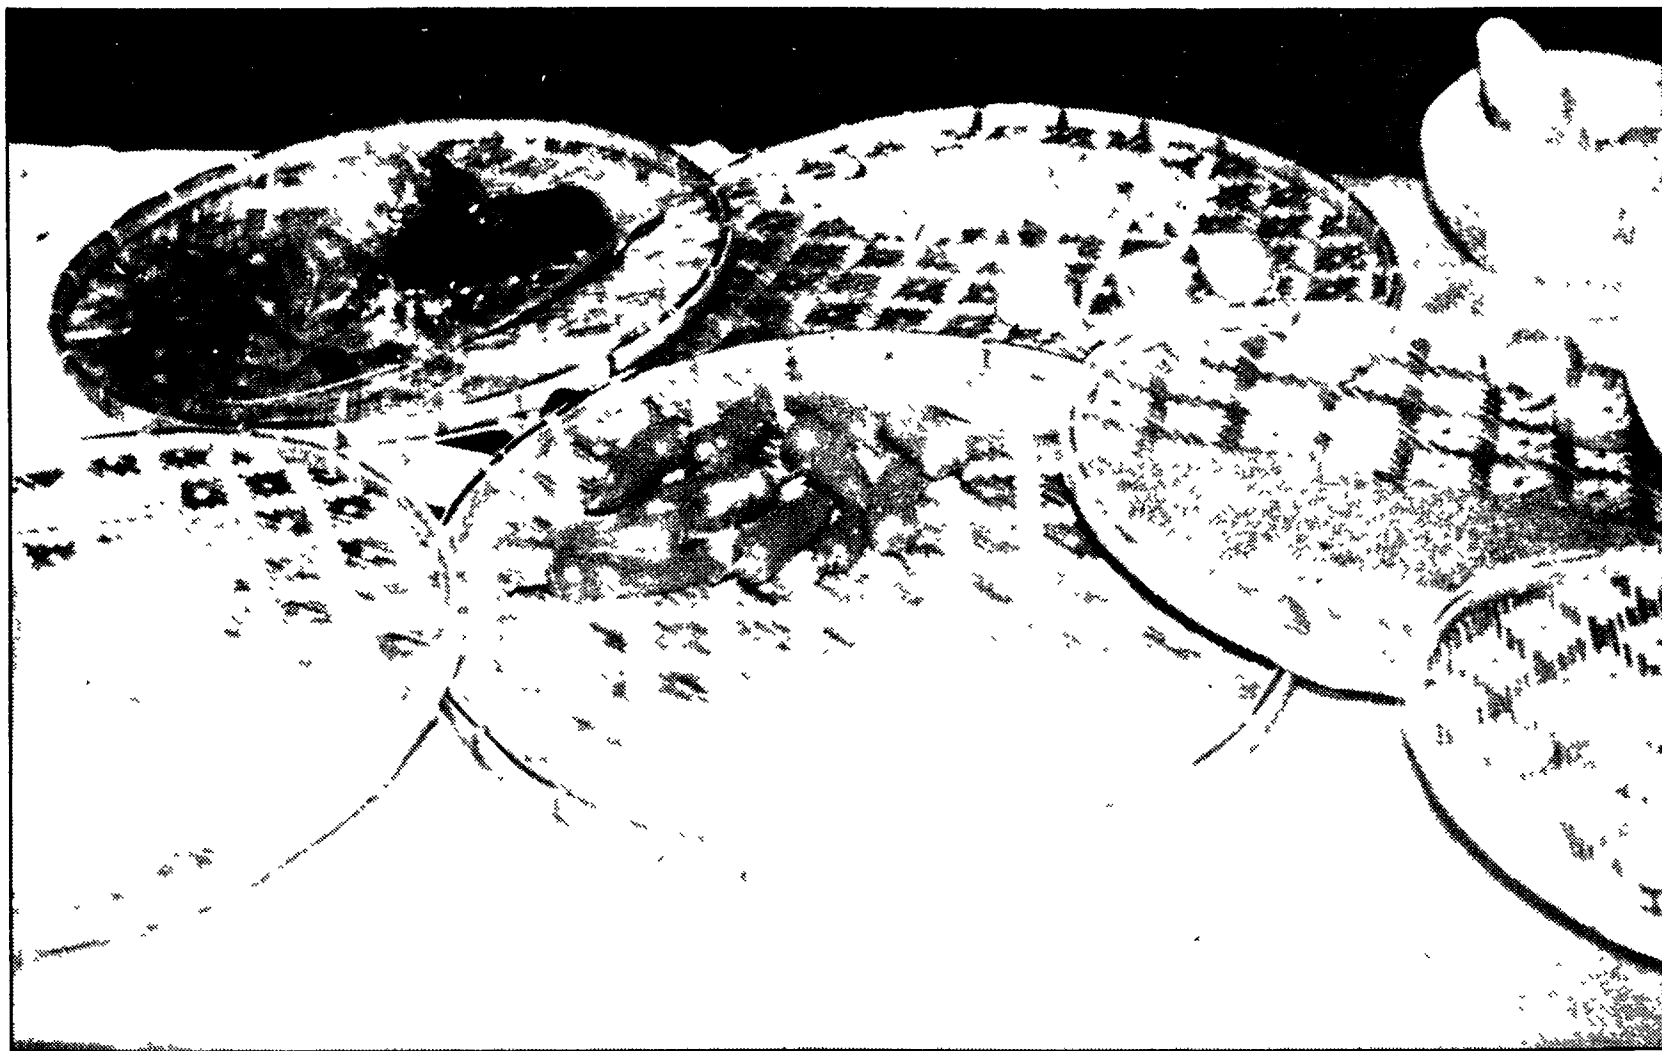

- 2 flour tortillas (6-inch diameter each)
- 2 teaspoons reduced-calorie margarine (tub), melted, divided
- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon, divided
- ¼ teaspoon granulated sugar

Preheat broiler. Arrange tortillas on nonstick baking sheet and brush each tortilla with ¼ of the margarine and sprinkle with ¼ of the cinnamon. Broil 6 inches from heat source until margarine is bubbly, 1 to 2 minutes.

Combine remaining cinnamon with the sugar. Turn tortillas over; brush each with half of the remaining margarine and then sprinkle each with half of the cinnamon-sugar mixture. Broil until cinnamon-sugar mixture caramelizes, about 1 minute. Makes 2 Servings, 1 Tortilla Each

Each serving provides: ¼ Fat, 1 Bread, 5 Optional Calories on Weight Watchers Food Plan. Per serving: 92 calories, 4 g fat. Recipe from "Weight Watchers Healthy Life-Style Cookbook, 1990"

Spices from around the world make Singapore dining an international experience.

Singapore Swings Union of cultures spices Malay cuisine

By LAURA DAILY
Copley News Service

It's the variety of aromas you notice first about Singapore cooking.

Satay crackling on the charcoal barbecue. Pungent cinnamons and corianders. Fragrant lemon grass. Sweet coconut laced with curry. Savory soy sauce and garlic wafting from a hot wok.

Diversity is the essence of dining in Singapore, a small island country at the southernmost tip of the Malay Peninsula. Local cuisines are influenced by the traditions of Sumatra, India, Java and Malaysia, plus almost a dozen Chinese regional cuisines.

Hungry hoards sampled Singapore's cooking styles and celebrated dishes at the recent Aspen Food and Wine Classic, as the Singapore Tourist Promotion Board sought to introduce discriminating palates to its country's cooking. If swarms of gastronomes elbowing for a sample of the tasty fare was any indication, the showcase hit a home run.

What made this effort unique is the fact that Singapore cuisine is actually a melange of styles distilled from early settlers. There's food that can be eaten with chopsticks, knife and fork or with your hands, off a banana leaf, fine china or out of a ceramic pot.

With Chinese making up three-quarters of Singapore's population, their cuisine remains best represented. Descendants of immigrants still prepare dishes of the regions of their forefathers — from classic Cantonese to robust Hokkien to spicy Sichuan.

The original cuisine of Singapore, Malay is best known for its Satay, barbecued skewers of chicken, beef or mutton dipped in a spice peanut sauce. In Malay cooking, rice is the main staple, served with combinations of fish, poultry, meats (except pork) and vegetables cooked with lemon grass, gingerlike galangal, coriander, chilies and shrimp paste.

Indian foods also draw from different regions of the Indian subcontinent. There's the highly seasoned, curry dishes of South India and the subtly spiced, sophisticated fare of North India often cooked in a tandoor oven.

Nonya, a cooking style unique to Singapore, evolved from the marriages of local Malay women to early Chinese traders who settled in Singapore. Dishes range from Chinese-style soups with Malay herbs and Indonesian black nuts to prawns with pineapple.

One Hainanese specialty that has particularly flourished is chicken rice, a delicious slow-cooked rice dish prepared with ginger, onions and garlic and served with a chili or garlic condiment. Several Singapore restaurants have even incorporated the dish into their names and compete with gusto for the reputation of serving the best chicken rice in town.

Richard Ong, executive chef at Singapore's Cairnhill Hotel is recognized as a chicken rice master.

"The secrets of chicken rice are passed from one generation to another," reveals Ong. "I learned to cook it from my brother-in-law and then made the recipe a specialty at Singapore's Mandarin Hotel."

Ong believes it is the ethnic mix that has made Singapore famous in the gastronomic world.

"So many cultures have come to live in Singapore that we have every kind of food you can imagine. I'm always going out to dinner to try new dishes and compare recipes."

Sherry Sim of the Singapore Tour ist Promotion Board says the trick to finding ingredients for a Singapore meal is to remember there are no "Singapore markets" in the United States. "Asian and Indian markets or ethnic specialty stores should carry most of the ingredients."

While most Singapore restaurants specialize in one type of cuisine, your home-cooked Singapore feast can include dishes drawn from several cultures.

"But be careful in mixing your dishes so that one doesn't overpower the others," cautions Sim. "For example, a lighter appetizer like Spring Rolls goes nicely with some of the more dramatic Indian curried dishes because spring rolls are almost like a Chinese salad. Then you might follow up with a light mango pudding for dessert."

The following appetizer is one example of modern, new-wave Cantonese cooking in Singapore

ROAST DUCK, MELON AND MANGO SALAD

- ¼ roasted duck OR boiled chicken
- ¼ cup honeydew melon
- ¼ cup cantaloupe melon
- 1 pear
- ¼ cucumber
- 1 mango
- ¼ cup jicama
- 3 tablespoons coarsely ground peanuts
- 2 tablespoons toasted white sesame seeds
- 1 coriander plant

Marinade
 ½ tablespoon light soy sauce
 2 teaspoons fine sugar
 1 teaspoon oyster sauce
 1 tablespoon cooked vegetable oil
 (oil should be used to fry shallots first to remove any rawness of flavor)

Sauce

- 3 tablespoons water
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 to 2 teaspoons sugar
- ¼ teaspoon sesame oil
- ¼ tablespoon ketchup
- 1 teaspoon chili sauce
- 1½ teaspoon corn flour
- 1½ teaspoon Chinese plum sauce
- OR apricot jam
- 2 teaspoons vegetable oil

Remove flesh from duck or chicken and cut into fine strips.

Cut flesh of melons, pear, cucumber, mango and jicama into fine strips, discarding skin and pulp first.

Arrange each vegetable and fruit neatly around large serving platter, varying the colors. Combine marinade ingredients and brush duck with marinade. Put duck in center of serving platter. Top with sprinkling of peanuts, sesame seeds and coriander leaves. Chill.

Mix all sauce ingredients together, except for vegetable oil and plum sauce. Heat oil in wok and add mixture, stir well until sauce thickens, add plum sauce or apricot jam and turn off heat. Cool in refrigerator.

To serve, pour sauce over duck at table. Yields 4 servings.

SINGAPORE CHICKEN RICE

- 1 (3½ pound) whole chicken
- 2½ teaspoons salt, divided use
- 6 to 8 cloves garlic, pounded lightly
- 2 thumb sized pieces ginger, pounded lightly
- 4 stalks spring onions, tied into a knot
- 4 pints water

Garnish
 2 medium cucumbers, sliced

Jaunt north of border turns up some gems onto at seven that evening. Aunt Betty is not feeling up to par and our short sojourn was pleasant. We were glad to have had the chance to spend some time with her.

In celebration of Tom's 39th birthday, we headed to Toronto for a few nights.

Early Sunday morning we packed up the car, drove the 401 to Buffalo, visited with Aunt Betty and ended up in Toronto at seven that evening. Aunt Betty is

Our original plans were to try an Italian restaurant that evening, but the driving all day pooped us out and we decided to eat in. The only place that we stay in Toronto is the Bradgate Arms (or B.A. to the regulars), a small, intimate, European hotel.

There are few places that can compare with this quiet and elegant spot. The guest's wish is their command. Many of the staff are transplants of European countries and accents abound. Service is outstanding. Politeness sincere. The rooms are spotless and cozy.

After our long day we were happy to "stay in" for the evening. In fact, I watched "60 Minutes" for the first time in months. Maybe years. Some things never change. . . . It is still twilight trash, fun to watch on occasion.

A leisurely dinner followed in the charming dining room. Once again we were pampered to the hilt. I feasted on Dover sole and Tom enjoyed veal medallions. Both proved to be great choices.

The neighborhood surrounding the B.A. is one of the prettiest and most expensive in Toronto. I look forward to my runs here. The homes are cosmopolitan and varied. Some are mansions, or what I perceive to be so. In other words, they are big. Thirty rooms and lots of wings. I don't even mind the hilly terrain because the scenery is so interesting.

After my jog, the real exercise began. A quick subway ride to downtown and the walking commenced. Tom swears we trekked 20 miles. I know it may just may have been 10. In any case we discovered several neat restaurants, shops and managed to pick up our tickets for Miss Saigon.

By three we were seated at the bar in a great little bistro, sipping wine and savoring field grown tomatoes and goat's cheese croustades and a wonderful sweet potato crusted shrimp.

The film festival was in town and this is where the celebs hang out. We didn't see any but that was okay by us. Another fleet ride uptown, an hour's rest, and back to the heart of town to check out a few more eateries and attend the play.

Miss Saigon was engaging and brought back not-so-happy memories of the tragedies of the Vietnam war. We returned to the bistro for an eleventh-hour snack and grabbed a cab home

Noon Tuesday came all too soon — time to check out and hit the highway to Detroit and back to work that evening. Toronto has to be one of my favorite cities. I wish that there was an American town to compare. Clean, safe, friendly and with the current exchange rate, fairly priced. The number of restaurants is astonishing. Most of them are very good. Ethnic is in. Anything goes. Add in a subway system that compares to the best and you have a combination that can't be beat.

One thing though; mum's the word on our little hotel. We like nice, serene ambience. Sssh!

What's in a name? A great sandwich

Ver-Monte Cristo might be a play on words, but it's a sandwich that plays well at Sweetwaters in Burlington, Vt. It has been on the menu for two years and is still a favorite with the brunch crowd.

The sandwich holds its own among the omelets and French toast that are the usual "backbone" of brunch fare. A great example of how basic ingredients come together with very special results, this sandwich is made with cinnamon-raisin bread spread with apple butter, then layered with apple slices, smoked ham and sharp Cheddar cheese. It's grilled and served with maple syrup — deliciously appealing to both the eye and palate.

Chef Rodney Rehwinkel says sharp Cheddar is a must for this sandwich; it's the "blending" ingredient that provides just the right contrast to the subtle sweetness imparted by the other ingredients.

Sweetwaters is in a converted bank building on the busiest corner in town. Winner of eight Taste of Vermont awards for culinary excellence, the restaurant always takes advantage of the superior selection of dairy products and fresh produce from surrounding farms.

When you serve brunch at home, wow the family and guests with an easy adaptation of the Ver-Monte Cristo. The convenient ingredients are as close as the supermarket. Fresh fruit and cafe au lait make perfect go-withs.

VER-MONTE CRISTO

¼ cup apple butter
4 slices cinnamon-raisin bread
4 slices (1 ounce each) sharp Cheddar cheese
8 to 10 apple slices, ¼ inch thick
4 ounces thinly sliced smoked ham
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter
Confectioners' sugar, if desired
Maple syrup, if desired

Spread half of apple butter on one side of two bread slices; top each with 1 cheese slice, half the apple slices, half the ham and remaining cheese slice. Spread remaining bread slices with remaining apple butter and close sandwiches. Beat eggs until blended; carefully dip both sides of sandwiches into eggs.

Melt butter in large non-stick skillet over medium-low to medium heat. Place sandwiches in skillet; cook each side until golden brown and sandwich is heated through. Cut into quarters. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and serve with maple syrup. Makes 2 sandwiches.

A guide to choosing the best exotic fruit

If papayas and mangoes aren't exactly staples in your diet, here's a brief guide to selecting and storing these nutritious, exotic fruits.

● Papayas: Ripe papayas should be about as soft as a ripe peach, with more yellow than green in the skin. Avoid shriveled fruit. Ripen firm papayas at room temperature in a loosely closed paper bag. Refrigerate ripe fruit in a plastic or paper bag for up to 3 days.

To prepare: Peel with a vegetable peeler and cut into slices. Scoop out the seeds and give them to the birds. Papayas are a rich source of vitamins A and C and potassium. Half a medium-size papaya is about 60 calories.

● Mangoes: Color is not a reliable indication of ripeness in mangoes, since different varieties are different colors. One of the best, Keitt, can be solid green even when ripe.

When ripe, a mango gives to gentle pressure like a ripe avocado. Mangoes are usually sold quite firm and need to be ripened further before eating.

Ripen all varieties at room temperature, uncovered, out of direct sun. Turn occasionally. Refrigerate ripe fruit in a plastic or paper bag for up to 3 days.

To slice: score skin lengthwise in 4 to 6 places; pull skin off. Cut flesh cheeks from each side of pit, and cut into chunks.

Mangoes are high in vitamins A and C. One medium-size mango has about 150 calories.

● Kiwi: When ready to eat, kiwi fruit is as soft as a ripe peach. Choose evenly firm fruit, free of soft spots. Ripen kiwi fruit at room temperature, uncovered, out of direct sun, turn occasionally. Refrigerate ripe fruit in a plastic or paper bag for up to 1 week.

To prepare: Cut in half crosswise and scoop out the flesh with a spoon, or peel and thinly slice crosswise to show off the decorative pattern of the seeds.

Kiwi fruit is high in vitamin C. A 3½-ounce portion has about 35 calories.

It's a-maizing what corn can do

Strictly speaking, not only is corn not a vegetable, it isn't even corn. "Corn" is a generic European term for grain, and the grain we call corn is really maize.

Corn (maize) was developed by Native Americans from a wild grass that grew in the southern Mexican highlands. The plant they developed (zea mays) was adaptable to many kinds of soils and conditions. Different dialects and languages gave the plant different names, but they all had the same meaning: "our life."

Native Americans learned that corn grew best when they planted four kernels in a hill, often "planting" a small fish under the hill as fertilizer. Sunflowers were interplanted among the cornstalks, which were three feet apart.

Other vegetables were grown in the same field: pumpkins and melons grew along the ground, and beans and peas used cornstalks as poles.

To appreciate the Native American's sophisticated pattern of agriculture, consider that in Europe, farmers still planted field crops by scattering the seed on the ground, hoping some of it would grow.

Native Americans developed many ways to use corn: boiled and eaten off the cob; pones, ashcakes and corn-cakes from corn meal; misickquatash (succotash), corn and lima beans cooked together; rockahominy (grits); and nasaump (samp), which served the colonists as both breakfast and supper. Many of the corn recipes in a modern cookbook are based on these early recipes with other ingredients added for flavor.

"Indian corn" (which wasn't "Indian" either) was tough, and lacked the sugar content of today's product. Sweet corn first appeared in the mid-1800s, but the major advances in its evolution have been within the past few years with the development of "sweet gene" corn hybrids. These hybrids keep their sweetness for several days unlike earlier sweet corn, whose sugar began turning to starch within minutes of picking.

Michigan produces more than 100 million ears of sweet corn each year, making it the sixth largest producer in the nation. Corn is a good source of fiber and vitamins A and B. A single ear contains 200 milligrams of potassium and about 70 calories unless you slather butter on it. Just two pats of butter add 90 calories.

In 1992, Nino Salvaggio, owner of Nino Salvaggio's Strawberry Hills in Farmington Hills, was invited to address the Michigan Corn Board to detail the kind of corn consumers prefer.

"Our customers want a full, large ear of sweet corn," Salvaggio said. "Over the past five years or so, Michigan customers have come to prefer bicolor corn, which is so sweet that it doesn't even need butter."

"There are 20 or so specialty produce stores in the area, and we've educated our customers to appreciate bicolor corn. It costs a little more because it's delicate and more difficult to harvest, and the seed costs the farmer more, but it's worth it because of its sweetness."

David Ruhlig grows 250 acres of bicolor corn on his farm in Carleton, which is on the Michigan side of the Ohio border. He switched from yellow and white corn about five years ago.

"The first bicolor corn was an accident," said Ruhlig. "White and yellow corn growing close by cross-pollinated, producing bicolor. When the hybridists took over, they took the best genes from the white and yellow, producing the ear that consumers enjoy today."

"Not too many years ago, people would buy Michigan corn on the Fourth of July, and if it was tough, they wouldn't buy Michigan corn again that season. But the sugar-enhanced hybrids have much higher sugar contents, as well as a longer shelf life, guaranteeing that yellow as well as bicolor corn is sweet and tender when it comes to market."

"The whole idea is to grow corn and sell it," said Ruhlig. "These hybrids assure that Michigan corn is sweet and tender from the first ear in July to the last ear in October."

Sample summer's crop in recipes

SOUTHWESTERN BAKED CORN

1 large onion, finely chopped
4 tbsp. melted butter
2 peeled green chilies, finely chopped
2 cups finely chopped peeled and seeded tomatoes
1 tsp. chili powder
1 tsp. salt
6 ears of corn
1 cup grated or shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Saute the onion in butter until just limp. Add the chilies and the tomatoes, and simmer 15 minutes. Add the seasonings. Cut the corn from the cobs and scrape off all the milk. Add to the tomato-onion mixture, pour into a 1½-quart greased baking dish, and bake about 45 minutes at 350 degrees. Ten minutes before it's done, add the cheese and allow it to melt and brown.

(From "James Beard's American Cookery," 1972.)

CORN PUDDING

10 ears of corn
3 well-beaten eggs
1 cup milk

¼ cup cream
1 tsp. melted butter
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
5 or 6 dashes Tabasco

Shuck, clean and scrape the corn, being certain to scrape the cobs well after removing the corn to get all of the milk. Combine with the beaten eggs, milk, cream, butter and seasonings. Pour the mixture into a 1½-quart baking dish and bake in a 350 degree oven for 45-50 minutes, or until just firm to the touch.

(From "The New James Beard," 1981.)

CORN OYSTERS

2 egg yolks
2 cups fresh corn kernels
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ cup flour
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Add the beaten egg yolks to the grated corn. Add salt and pepper. Mix in flour and fold in the well-beaten egg whites carefully. Do not stir any more than necessary to blend. Drop onto a well-greased hot skillet in globes the size of an oyster. Brown both sides and serve at once. Makes 12. A nice side dish with cold meat.

(An old Shaker recipe.)

TO MICROWAVE CORN: To microwave in the husk, peel husk back and remove silk, then replace husk to enclose kernels completely. Secure ends with string or wrap husked corn individually in plastic wrap. If microwaving only one ear, place in center of oven. Place 2 ears side by side; 3 in a triangle, 4 in a square; 5 in a line of 4 with one at the top. Microwave on high for 3-4 minutes per ear. Turn ears halfway through cooking. Let stand for 2-3 minutes. Kernels should be tender when pierced.

TOMATOES FILLED WITH CORN PUDDING

8 medium tomatoes

salt and pepper
2 eggs, room temperature
2 tbsp. flour
2 tbsp. sugar
¼ tsp. baking powder
1 cup half and half
1 cup corn kernels (about 4 medium ears)
2 tbsp. butter, melted
Minced fresh parsley

Slice tops off tomatoes and discard. Scoop out pulp and seeds. Sprinkle shells with salt and pepper and invert onto paper towels. Drain 20 minutes.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Beat eggs to blend in medium bowl. Mix in flour, sugar and baking powder. Blend in half and half. Stir in corn and butter. Season with salt and pepper. Spoon into tomatoes. Arrange in oiled muffin tin. Bake until custard is puffed, lightly browned and firm to touch, about 45 minutes. Garnish with parsley and serve immediately.

ABC retells Superman myth with 'Lois & Clark'

By MICHAEL SCOGIN

One of America's most familiar superheroes is making a return to both the small screen and the comic book pages where he was born. Superman flies back to the pages of DC Comics later this year and is back on television on Sunday in ABC's "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman."

ABC puts a new twist on the Superman saga, however, adding romance and a '90s sensibility to the more traditional action elements often associated with the Man of Steel to give the program a wider viewer appeal.

"In the comic books and the features, the main thrust is that Superman arrives in Metropolis to fight for truth, justice and the American Way and takes on a disguise as a mild-mannered reporter," says Deborah Joy Levine, the program's creator and co-executive producer. "In our version of the show, what we really have is a young man by the name of Clark Kent who really wants to live a normal life, even though he did come from another planet, who does find a disguise for himself so that when he needs to, he can help people."

Part of Clark Kent's (Dean Cain) normal life includes his attraction to Lois Lane (Teri Hatcher), the headstrong Daily Planet reporter who sees more in his alter ego, Superman, and his nemesis, Lex Luthor, than in the mild-mannered Kent.

Both actors struggled with being stuck in the Superman stereotype (like Christopher Reeve in the film versions) before deciding to accept the roles.

"At first, before I had read it, I thought, this is just not something I could do because of the stereotype attached to it," says Hatcher. "But you read so few scripts for women where the character is so broad and full, and can be smart, funny, vulnerable, sexy and goofy and have all of that happen in one character, rather than just sexy or just smart. So it's extremely challenging for me because I get to go everywhere."

"This is a whole different role than the Men of Steel in the past and the Christopher Reeve nerdy character," says Cain, who once played football with the Buffalo Bills. "There's none of that. I think it's a very broad-ranged character, so I'm not really too concerned with that."

Producers have tried to update the Superman story while keeping true to the traditional elements established in DC Comics over the years.

"We were very concerned that they (DC Comics) would perhaps be our harshest critics, but they really love the show," says Levine.

Although "Lois & Clark" will rely more on the love triangle among Lois, Clark and Superman to attract viewers, there should be enough action, including the almost prerequisite flying sequences, to keep younger watchers interested as well.

Flying, as it turns out, is not an easy thing to accomplish. Expensive for producers and often excruciating for the actors, it is a necessary evil of almost any retelling of the Superman myth.

"It can be very painful," says Cain. "It's difficult because you have wires coming out just at the hips, and you have to straighten out, and your whole body has to tense."

Hatcher, while not a fan of flying at first, grew to enjoy it more than Cain, if only because she, as Lois, does it less.

"You put on these miserable harnesses and wear them for six hours and get bruises all over your body," Hatcher says. After flying into the pressroom of the Daily Planet in Superman's arms for the first time, however, Hatcher turned to Levine and said, "That is the most romantic thing a woman could ever, ever do."

Smits heads cast of "Cisco Kid"; Crystal co-writes "Slickers" sequel Emmy winning "L.A. Law" actor Jimmy Smits plays the title role in TNT's "The Cisco Kid," now shooting in Pachuca, Mexico. Cheech Marin plays his sidekick, Pancho, in this $5 million adventure film.

Barry Morse, who played Lt. Philip Gerard in the original "The Fugitive" TV series, is in Toronto filming William Shatner's "Tek War" for the Universal Action Network syndicate.

Billy Crystal co-wrote the script for "City Slickers II: The Legend of Curly's Gold," so the blame for scenes in which Crystal finds himself chased by hundreds of wild horses and stranded atop tall cliffs rests, at least partially, on his own shoulders. The film, currently in production with a $40 million budget, will feature "City Slickers" co-stars Jack Palance and Daniel Stern.

Other sequels to big screen blockbusters currently filming include "Sister Act II," "The Mighty Ducks

2," "My Girl II," "The Neverending Story III," "Wayne's World II" and "The Naked Gun 3 1/3: The Final Insult."

"Fried Green Tomatoes" star Mary Louise Parker is in New York juggling rehearsals for John Patrick Shanley's play "Four Dogs and a Bone" and filming duties as the lead in Woody Allen's latest comedy, which has not yet been titled.

CBS has begun work on "The Waltons Thanksgiving," which will feature all surviving cast members in a holiday movie. Set in 1963, some 20 years after the time period depicted in the series, the film will dramatize the Walton family's reaction to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Dallas-based Kimberly-Clark Corp. has underwritten a substantial part of the production costs for the new season of PBS's wildly successful "Barney & Friends."

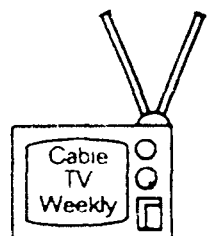

Jon Amiel ("Somerset") will direct

Jimmy Smits
stars in "The Cisco Kid"

Michelle Pfeiffer and Richard Gere in "Higgins & Beech," a film based on the true story of a romance that blossomed between reporters in the shadow of the Korean War.

SOAP WORLD

Executive producer wants 'Loving' answers

BY CANDACE HAVENS

If you have ever wondered what the ABC soap "Loving" is like, now would be a good time to tune in and see. In a recent episode, Leo showed up dressed as Elvis to romance Shana. Ava donned a blond wig and started a conga line in order to save Jeremy from Faison, and there was a great deal of laughter throughout the entire show. On another day, there was high drama when baby Tyler developed meningitis while his mother was at a sleazy hotel with her lover.

"Loving" is funny, remarkably sophisticated and worthy of attention, but the program isn't getting any. "We can't make excuses any more," says executive producer Haidee Grainger. "It is a battle, and I do not know why we are at the bottom of the ratings, because we have come up with what I think is a good, funny show."

"Loving" looks very different than it did when it debuted 10 years ago, and many of the changes have happened in the last year, after Grainger took over.

"We have a much faster pace for the show," she says. "It is a livelier looking show, we have a handsome cast and great music. The show is revitalized, but the problem is getting people to believe it. It is a terrific half hour, and you sit down to watch, and before you know it, it is over."

"We have some wonderful and exciting story lines coming up," Grainger says. "Alex Master (Randolph Mantooth) is back and is causing big trouble for Ava and Jeremy. If you remember, Alex was Ava's one true love."

"There will be an interesting turn of events around Ally and baby Tyler. Trucker will ask Angie out, and she will refuse him on the basis that she wants a black role model for her son. Viewers will be interested to see how things turn out with Dinah Lee and Curtis' marriage."

Grainger simply wants viewers to give "Loving" a chance. "I want the viewers to watch and then let me know what they do and do not like," she says. Viewers can send responses to the address below, and the letters will be forwarded to Grainger.
