Parent group challenges reading of surveys

Claims report card responses are unfavorable

Frustrated.

That's how a group of Northville parents feels concerning the survey results for the district's new elementary report cards.

Back in November parents of the district's 2,071 kindergarten through fifth-grade students were sent surveys rating the new reporting system that was distributed for the first time earlier this year.

Results from the survey's 623 responses were presented as generally positive at the Dec. 12 Board of Education meeting.

Of those responding to the questions, 85 percent said they did not need further information on the cards and between 62-82 percent said the key, grading scale, language/terminology and benchmarks page were clear.

That would seem to indicate that the majority of parents are in favor of the new cards, right?

Not so, says a group of parents that has come forward to speak out against the cards and the way the survey results were presented.

"This is a cover-up of the surveys," said parent Barb Bennett, who is active in the school district and currently serves on the citizen bond committee. "This is wrong. We can't just close our eyes and say go ahead."

Several of the parents opposed to the new cards assisted the administration in compiling and recording the comments at a meeting in early December.

"When I was compiling surveys, I actually thought they had given me all the negative comments," said elementary parent Terry Gruley. "The surveys were

Planners listen to golf course proposal – again

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

The Northville Township board of trustees tonight will formally vote on a controversial subdivision plan for the Brooklane and Haller properties. A last-minute compromise proposed Tuesday night may affect the board's decision.

Farmington Hills developer Gary Sakwa is looking to develop the 271 acres that sit near the intersection of Six Mile and Sheldon Roads. Eight months ago, he made an interesting offer to the township.

He's asked officials to let him build a subdivision that would have more (and smaller) lots than township ordinance normally allows. In return, he would build a nine-hole golf course on 30 of the acres and an Olympic-sized swimming pool. Sakwa would also renovate Brooklane's existing clubhouse and then give the golf course, the pool and the clubhouse to the township.

Most of the trustees have expressed opposition to the plan, either because they object to the smaller lots or because they're skittish about the township being involved with a golf course. At Tuesday's public hearing on the plan before the township planning commission, many residents expressed objections to the plan for a variety of reasons.

Some said the course was too small to get enough business to survive without a subsidy from the

Judge could rule on Rosselle lawsuit

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

A Wayne County Circuit Court judge will decide tomorrow if part of Ricke Rosselle's lawsuit against Northville Township should be thrown out.

Rosselle resigned his job as township fire chief last May but later claimed he was forced to do so by Supervisor Karen Baja and Director of Public Safety Chip Snider. He and his wife Nancy filed suit against the township in August. The township and its officials have steadfastly denied Rosselle's charges.

Since then, the case has gone through the complex legal pipeline. The most recent move came in December when township lawyers asked Judge John Gillis Jr. to throw out parts of the suit because of governmental immunity. A hearing on the motion for partial summary disposition is scheduled for tomorrow, Jan. 13.

Meanwhile, Rosselle has recently gotten a job in Salem Township, working part-time as a firefighter.

The suit names the township, Baja and Snider as defendants and charges them with eight counts of violating Rosselle's rights. It asks for an unspecified amount of money as compensation. The minimum amount of damages that can be sought for a suit to be filed in Circuit Court, however, is $10,000.

New 35th District Court Judge Ronald Lowe realized a long-term goal in getting elected to the bench.

Career benchmark

Ron Lowe takes oath as new district court judge

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

"I'm living a dream. Unless you've lived a dream you really can't understand how much fun it can be."

Ronald Lowe
35th District Court

Ron Lowe is a man walking in tall cotton these days.

After all, not many people get to live their life's fantasy. The "I'm living a dream," new judge is doing just that, however, and he's not skittish about showing his happiness over it.

Last week was a watershed event in Lowe's life. He achieved the goal he's been working towards for 20 years, a judgeship in his hometown district court. Throw in a new baby and you can see how he's convinced that it just doesn't get much better than this.

"I'm living a dream," Lowe said Friday as he ended his third day on the bench. "Unless you've lived a dream you really can't understand how much fun it can be. I always wanted to be a judge. That's what I wanted to do – be a district court judge in the 35th District Court. I can't see how life could be (better), but I'm optimistic enough to believe that it will."

The 35th District Court's jurisdiction includes the cities of Northville and Plymouth and the townships of Northville, Plymouth and Canton. Judge James Garber announced his retirement from the bench last year, leading Lowe and a dozen other hopefuls to try for the non-partisan elected seat.

He and Plymouth resident Stephen Boak survived a crowded primary contest and then faced off in the general election in November. Lowe, 38, came out on top in the voting. Can words express the feeling he got when he knew he'd actually won?

"No, and they haven't yet," Lowe said. "All I can say is how grateful I am to the voters that supported me."

He started serving the voters last week when 35th Judge John MacDonald swore in Lowe the morning of Jan. 3. The public swearing-in was actually held the afternoon of Jan. 4, but the court's business couldn't wait.

The event brought together all the things that Lowe calls the most important in his life: his family, friends, faith and the law.

"My family and my faith in God defines who I am," Lowe said. "I've always had that. My mom and dad always put the kids first and God's always been there for me."

And the law?

"My dad was an attorney, so the idea was instilled early for me and my brother," Lowe said. "The writing was on the wall. I always wanted to practice law and to do it here in this community."

"My dad was the prosecutor for the City of Plymouth in 35th," he continued. "That gave me a real

Body of longtime renter found in her apartment

By YVONNE BEEBE

Northville City Police ruled out the possibility of foul play last Thursday in the death of a 66-year-old Northville woman after she was found in her room at the Inn on Main Street, 109-113 W. Main St.

Police found Mary Martha Dybowski dead in her room after they received a phone call from the manager of the building who was worried because the woman had not been seen recently.

Several city police cars and a Michigan State Police Crime Lab vehicle were parked outside the Inn Thursday afternoon to learn if suspicious circumstances surrounded the woman's death. Later in the day, however, personnel from the Wayne County Medical Examiners' office arrived at the scene and determined the death resulted from natural causes. No autopsy was performed.

Police believe the woman had been a Northville resident and had lived in the 71-year-old building for at least the past 10 years.

Sergeant Dave Fendelet said the woman had red blotchy marks around her neck that could have indicated foul play, so nothing was left to chance.

"There were marks on her body that left some question in my mind as to whether this was a natural death or not," Fendelet said. "We had to take all the necessary precautions."

There were no signs of forced

The story Meads Mill Middle School student Precious Shah wrote about her grandfather's life was accepted for publication in the junior high edition of The High School Writer.

Student joins ranks of the published

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

There are people who spend their whole lives dreaming of getting published. At age 13, Meads Mill student Precious Shah has gotten a head start by doing just that.

Shah's narrative of her grandfather's life entitled "Albert Lee" was recently published in the junior high edition of The High School Writer. Shah's story, created as an assignment for her creative communications class, was the result of an interview with her grandfather who escaped from China to the United States during the 1940s when Japan invaded the Asian mainland.

In October, the eighth-grader's English teacher Barbara Willoughby sent the paper in to the regional journal, which is published nine times a year and features submitted works from students from midwestern states including Wisconsin, Ohio, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas.

"This is a big honor," Willoughby said. "She's a talented writer."

Willoughby did not tell her student that she had sent in the story, so it was a surprise to Shah when she learned it had been published.

"I had no idea," she said with a smile.

In addition to her recent publishing milestone, Shah received further recognition when the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars announced last week she had won the organization's Voice of Democracy contest for her paper "My Commitment to America."

Shah will be representing Northville in the district competition this month against other area VFW winners.

Shah was also a second-place winner in the middle school essay category in the 1994 Northville Record writing contest.

Although she said she likes to write, Shah is more interested in pursuing a career in either the legal profession, acting or medicine.

Her recent notoriety has been fun and her grandfather was happy she wrote about him, she said.

"My grandpa was really excited," she said. "But he doesn't know (that it's been published) yet.

"I'm going to surprise him and send (the journal) to him."

"This is a big honor. She's a talented writer."

Morning feast to help DARE

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

Do you like eating pancakes? How about helping your community?

Well, now you can do both at the same time.

The Northville Township police department will hold a special pancake breakfast at McDonald's next week to raise money for the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program.

For just $2, you'll get all the hotcakes you can eat. The "breakfeast" takes place Saturday, Jan. 21, from 6-11 a.m. at the McDonald's on Six Mile near Haggerty Road.

Take note: you'll need a ticket to get in on the fun and they're only available at township police headquarters from Officer Matt Mayes. The headquarters is located inside Northville Township Hall on Six Mile between Winchester and Haggerty.

If you have any questions, call Mayes at 349-9400.

DARE is a 17-week program designed to teach elementary and middle school students about the dangers of drugs and how to avoid them.

This is the second year for the program in Northville. Mayes conducts the classes in private schools in the area.

Money raised from the pancake breakfast will buy DARE T-shirts and certificates for students who graduate from the program and make a commitment to stay away from drugs.

Workbooks and other supplies are also needed for the program.

Parent night offers education discussion topics

Northville school district parents will have the chance to learn about a wide variety of education-related topics at Parent Education Night Wednesday, Jan. 25.

The evening is sponsored by the Northville Council of PTAs and will feature discussions on several interesting subjects, including:

■ Gang Prevention – Let's stop it before it begins, with Mark D. Schultz, Charlie Stilec and Northville Township Detective John Werth

■ Northville High School Day, with members of the Northville High School Day Committee

The event gets under way at 6:30 p.m. and runs till 9 p.m. Parent Education Night takes place at Northville High School, Eight Mile at Center.

Man claims stranger attacked him

Northville Township police are investigating a fight and subsequent tire slashing that occurred Jan. 4.

An 18-year-old township man told police that a man he didn't know attacked him while he was playing a video game at the Player's Choice arcade on Seven Mile. The man said the attacker pulled him backwards off of a stool he was sitting on, then punched him as he tried to stand up.

He had never seen the attacker before, the man said, and had no idea what caused the incident. The man said he began to fight with the attacker. They wrestled on the floor and traded punches, he continued. When a friend of his and a friend of the attacker's tried to stop the fight, the man added, the attacker would not back off, punching him again.

The arcade manager broke up the altercation, telling the attacker, who may be a Redford resident, to leave. The township man stayed another 45 minutes at the arcade, he told township police, then drove home.

As he approached his house, he said, he saw the Redford man run out of his yard, get into the passenger's seat of a Ford Escort and then leave as the car drove off.

The man found all four tires of the 1984 Ford pickup in his driveway to be slashed. The man's sister told police she saw the Redford man damage the tires.

The damage cost is estimated at $400.

CIGARETTE SCOFFLAW: Township police arrested a 27-year-old Milford man for shoplifting at Meijer one week ago.

Store detectives said they saw the man conceal $21 worth of cigarettes in his jacket, then leave the store without trying to pay for them. They stopped him outside the store and held him until officers arrived.

The man was processed and released. He faces a Jan. 26 hearing in 35th District Court.

WALLET STOLEN: A 21-year-old Northville man reported to police that his wallet was stolen from his coat pocket while playing basketball at the Northville Community Center.

The man told Northville City Police that he had piled his coat by the stands with other coats. When he picked up his coat after playing ball his wallet was gone. Police have no leads in the case.

TOOLS TAKEN: A 24-year-old Eureka man lost $1,200 worth of work tools to a thief at Meijer on Friday.

Township police said the man parked his 1992 Chevrolet pickup in the store's parking lot, then went in to shop for about 40 minutes. When he came out, he found the window to his bed cap had been opened and the tools gone.

CAR TAMPERED WITH: A Keego Harbor woman reported to Northville City Police that her locks had been tampered with after she parked her Jaguar in the lot off Dunlap Street.

When she returned to her car, she could not get her key into the locks. A police officer arrived on the scene and opened her car with a slim jim.

Both the flaps covering the locks of the driver- and passenger-side doors had been tampered with, causing an estimated $250 in damage. There was no further evidence or leads.

PHONE FILCHED: An E. Harbour Village Drive man told township police that someone damaged his vehicle and stole a cellular phone that was inside on Friday night or Saturday morning.

The man, 52, said he locked his 1990 Ford Ranger in his driveway Friday evening. When he next saw it, at about 7:30 a.m. Saturday, the driver's side window had been broken and the phone removed.

The window damage is estimated at $150. The phone is worth $200.

WHOLE LOTTA TROUBLE: A 45-year-old New Hudson man had a very bad day at Meijer on Saturday.

Store detectives told township police they saw the man put three boxes of golf balls inside a Meijer bag, then try to leave the store without paying for them.

They stopped him just outside the store and held him until police arrived.

Police cited the man for shoplifting and he will appear in 35th District Court on Jan. 27 on that charge.

A computer check revealed a Wayne County Sheriff's Office arrest warrant for the man on a charge of possession of a switchblade knife.

He was arrested by township police on that charge. During a body search, officers found a used needle and syringe in the man's jacket pocket.

He was then cited for possession of drug paraphernalia and held at police headquarters until a sheriff's deputy picked him up.

Citizens with information on any of the above incidents are urged to call township police at 349-9400 or city police at 349-1234.

Trooper takes medals in multiple events

The trip by Sergeant Larry Bohnsack of the Michigan State Police Second District Headquarters to the 1994 International Law Enforcement Games in Birmingham, Ala., turned out to be quite worthwhile.

Sergeant Bohnsack easily accomplished his personal goal for the year – winning his first medal in the competitive games. What Sergeant Bohnsack never planned on was walking away from the games with a gold medal in every event he entered.

Bohnsack won first place in the 40 mile road race, the 10 mile time trial, and the 25 mile criterion, while competing in the 40 to 44-year-old age group. He also placed as the overall winner of all age groups in the 25 mile criterion.

Bohnsack and Detective Sergeant Peter Gokey, Southeast Criminal Investigation Division, who also won a gold medal during the competitive games, were honored during a special awards program at the Second District Headquarters in Northville. Presenting the officers with a special department recognition award was Captain Chris Hogan, Second District Commander.

A true bicycling enthusiast, Sergeant Bohnsack has been a licensed bike rider for three years, a member of the United States Cycling Federation, and an avid racer with the Ann Arbor Fellow Club, a local biking team.

Police warn against phony solicitations

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

Northville Township police are advising area senior citizens to be cautious when it comes to telephone solicitations.

The warning comes after Northville seniors lodged dozens of complaints about a spate of recent calls from a firm trying to sell nursing home insurance. While the company is legitimate, township Detective John Werth said, the event should serve as a reminder to everyone to play it safe and smart when dealing with phone solicitors.

The company, the Adult Retirement Education Association, is based out of Utica. It is a nonprofit company registered with the state.

Association representatives have been calling area seniors to interest them in educational programs, group outings and a variety of other activities, Werth said. After that, he added, the caller will try to get permission to have a company representative come to a senior's home and discuss purchasing nursing home insurance.

All that is legal, Werth said. However, apparently some of the company's solicitors "got a little over-eager and deviated from the script," he added.

Sometimes, callers would claim to represent the Northville senior citizens program or similar area groups. That is not the case, Werth said. He added that Carl Peters, who runs Northville's senior programs, has never heard of the group Northville's senior programs are funded jointly by Northville City and Township

Some seniors have also received calls where the solicitor has at first said they represent "Financial Services of America," Werth noted. Some have asked for the company's phone number, he added, only to be told there isn't one in the caller's office.

The calls have kicked up a mild ruckus, with questions pouring into township and city police and Peters' office.

"I've gotten at least 30 calls," Werth said. "My phone's been ringing off the hook. A lot of people are concerned about this."

The detective spoke with Association vice-president Lou Vondett on Tuesday. After discussing the situation, Vondett indicated that he would talk with his employees to ensure that no further problems occur.

If you've made an appointment to talk to an Association representative in your home, you can identify him or her by the red, white and blue badge he or she will be wearing, Werth said.

The whole incident, he added, shows everyone the need for caution when dealing with phone calls from someone wanting to do business with you.

"Don't give out your telephone number or address over the phone," Werth said. "If someone says they just want to confirm your number or address with you, make them read it to you. Don't tell anyone that you're home alone or what times you're gone from the house. If someone's looking to break into your house, they'll know the opportune time to try it."

If you're uncomfortable about any phone call you've received, he added, call township police at 349-9400

Water main break gives NHS students a day off

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

Students at Northville High School were treated to a mini-vacation Thursday after a water main break on school grounds prompted officials to end the day at 10 a.m.

Principal Tom Johnson estimated that the main, which left the school without any running water, broke sometime around 5 a.m Thursday.

Water was gurgling out of the ground near the bridge over Eight Mile Road, forcing students to trudge through the slushy mess on their way to school.

Johnson and other school officials stood outside and directed traffic as buses had to come in to transport students home

"There were no mishaps " Johnson said. "The kids enjoyed it. They had the day off."

City officials arrived on the scene and located the leak in the area near the tennis courts west of the school

The main was repaired in a matter of hours and school resumed the next day, business as usual.

DPW department head Ted Mapes brings a 25-year career with the city to an end this month.

Quarter century at DPW closes out

'It was a fast 25 years' – Public works head Ted Mapes

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

Snuggled in a warm bed during the wee hours of the morning as new-fallen snow is being cleared from Northville's streets, the Department of Public Works is most likely not at the forefront of anyone's mind

But it is the essential services the DPW provides to residents, like salting icy roads or repairing sewer and water mains, that keep the city in working order.

After 25 years at the helm of the DPW, working to ensure the city runs like clockwork, Director Ted Mapes will be retiring at the end of January.

The 59-year-old Mapes said this year was the right time for him to step down

"It just seemed like a good opportunity to do this," Mapes said

City Manager Gary Word said Northville will be losing a great asset once Mapes clears out his office for good.

"I hope we can find someone half as good to fill the position," Word said. "This is a terrible loss for the city. He was an exceptional director of public works. He will be missed."

Mapes, who started as assistant director in 1970 and was promoted to director eight years later, said he believes the most significant stride the city made in the past two-and-a-half decades was the Mainstreet '78 project. The project, which put a new face on the entire downtown area of Main Street, resulted in a revamped business district complete with the clock, which has become the city's signature landmark, the bandshell, brickscaping and new wiring under ground.

"I really got my feet wet fast with that one," said Mapes of his first year as director."The downtown looked like a war zone."

Mapes said he plans to do some traveling, spending more time at his cottage in northern Michigan near Mansalona. He also plans to work part-time with his son Gary, who owns a sewer cleaning company in Wixom.

The hardest part about leaving his job with the city, Mapes said, will be leaving the people he's worked with on a daily basis, including the 11 full-time employees currently in the department.

"I've got a lot of ties here," he said. " It's starting to get a little sad already. We're just like a family."

The city's foreman Paul Vertrees will be serving as acting director for the DPW until a formal job search is initiated for the position. Looking back, Mapes, who has lived in Northville his whole life, said his time with the DPW has been rewarding.

"It's been a great 25 years and a fast 25 years," he said.

Former Farmington clerk, resident dies

Josephine M. Bushey of Northville, a longtime former employee of the city of Farmington, died of a heart attack Dec. 21, 1994. She was 69.

Miss Bushey worked for 20 years as a municipal employee in Farmington, retiring as clerk of the city in 1992.

"She was very efficient and took great pride in her work," said Janice Schmidt, the Farmington deputy clerk.

"She was a hard taskmaster, but you learned under her direction."

Patsy Cantrell, who replaced Miss Bushey as clerk, said her predecessor was a "caring and kind person."

"We were shocked at her death. She was an active, energetic lady. We were quite surprised."

Miss Bushey started her career with the city of Farmington on 1972, hiring in as secretary to the city manager.

When the clerk's position opened up about 10 years later, she was selected over 34 other applicants.

At her last city council meeting in 1992, she was presented with a corsage and thanked for her many years of service by then-Mayor William Hartsock.

Miss Bushey grew up on Detroit's east side in a family of five, attending parochial schools.

She later went to Marygrove College where she earned her undergraduate degree.

"I didn't grow up with a silver spoon in my mouth," she said on the occasion of her retirement.

"I worked my way through college."

Miss Bushey is survived by a brother, Thomas Bushey, a sister, Elizabeth Lang of Northville, and two nieces and nephews.

Services took place Dec. 28 at Holy Family Catholic Church in Novi, the Rev. John Buddle officiating.

Interment was at Rural Hill Cemetery in Northville.

Memorials may be sent to Leader Dogs for the Blind, 1039 S. Rochester Road, Rochester Hills, MI 48306.

A PASSIVE APPROACH
Rehabilitation plays a critical role in the complete success of total knee replacement. The standard technique calls for patients to maintain knee mobility during scheduled sessions with a therapist. Now, a new study shows that therapy known as continuous passive motion (CPM) yields better rehabilitative results than using the standard techniques alone. Continuous passive motion therapy makes use of an exercise machine to move the knee through an ever-widening arc over a period as long as 16 hours daily. A study of 93 rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis patients who had undergone total knee replacement showed CPM to be less costly and more effective in improving their range of motion than sessions with a therapist.
Principles of physical therapy treatment integrate the skeletal system, the soft tissue system, the neurological system, and the cardiopulmonary system. Treatment is designed to meet individual needs, goals, abilities, and life styles. Individualized treatment programs are outlined for a variety of patient problems including orthopedic and sports related injuries as well as back, neck and hand problems. If you have nay questions, feel free to call our office.
P.S. Continuous passive motion therapy has also proven itself effective in decreasing swelling after total knee replacement surgery.

First district library board inaugurated

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

The gift presented to new District Library Board Chairman William Brown last Thursday at the board's inaugural meeting for 1995 was a fitting one – a hammer with a red ribbon tied around it to use as a gavel.

The brand new seven member board commemorated its first meeting and swearing-in with the community as it kicked off a year that is sure to be packed with plenty of initiatives to hammer into shape the new district library.

"This is a chance to really serve the community," said Brown of the new board. "Our objective is to make the new library into a friendly place, an open place, a place where people want to come."

The board's district status is a result of city and township voter approval of two ballot requests last May. Voters said yes to a 1-mill levy for general operating expenses, which will nearly double the library's budget, and to a $4.5 million bond issue to construct a new building. In the past, library expenses were funded jointly by the city and township.

The new building will allow the library to move out of its 6,000 square-foot quarters in the basement of City Hall and move into a new 25,000-square-foot, two-story building to be located on Cady Street south of the City Hall building.

Officials hope construction of the new building will begin sometime this spring and be completed about one year later. Director Pat Orr estimates they will hold a grand opening sometime in the fall of 1996.

The new members were sworn into their positions with a host of community members and city and township officials offering support and congratulations. After some handshaking and socializing, it was business as usual as the board set its schedule of meetings for the year and elected officers.

In addition to Brown's election as chairman, Lynn Parkllan was elected vice chairwoman of the board for the year, Anna Sarkisian was elected secretary and member Fritz Porter was voted in as treasurer. Members Wendy Gutowski, Joe Oldenburg and Barbara Glover were also present at the meeting.

The seven-member board was elected to office in the Nov. 8 election. Brown, Gutowski, Sarkisian and Parkllan, whose names appeared on the ballot, will all serve four-year terms. Since only four residents were in the running for the seven open positions, the campaign was also subject to write-in candidates.

Glover, Oldenburg and Porter merited seats from write-in votes and will serve two-year terms

The results from the 1-mill levy are already evident as the library expanded its hours last Monday The building is now open from 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and Saturday Officials also plan to open the building from 1-5 p.m. on Sundays starting in February.

Sarkisian said she is looking forward to setting the ground work for the new library over the next four years.

"It's been an honor being affiliated with this board," Sarkisian said. "I'm looking forward to four years of progress, being accountable and making this work for the people."

For Gutowski, the glitz of the inaugural was fun but the meeting was really just a continuation of the work the board has been doing for the past several years.

"It's business as usual as far as I'm concerned," Gutowski said.

The board's next meeting will be held Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the city council chambers at Northville City Hall, 215 W. Main St.

The following is a schedule of this year's meetings, all of which will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the city council meeting room.

Feb. 2, 16; March 9, 23; April 13, 27; May 11, 25; June 8, 22; July 13, 27; Aug. 10, 24; Sept. 14, 28; Oct. 12, 26; and Nov. 9.

City still looking to take care of vacant house

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

The fate of a boarded up house on Carrington Street where a woman was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning back in November remains uncertain.

"Things are still up in the air," head building inspector Mick Kruszewski said

"We are trying to let the sons work through this a while. And then if nothing happens, we'll start the procedure for condemnation."

Northville resident Sandra Myers died as a result of a carbon monoxide leak from a faulty water heater in the home. The city unofficially condemned the house for its filthy condition after more than eight dead cats, nine living cats and a large amount of animal feces were found inside.

City officials say they have received several phone calls from residents inquiring about the home.

"People want it out of there and I understand that," code enforcement officer Chuck Altman said "The house is boarded up and it is in a nice neighborhood. People are getting antsy, but these things take time."

Kruszewski said the sons have expressed an interest in selling the property and have received several offers on the home. If that does not produce results, the building department will begin formal procedures to condemn and possibly demolish the house.

If the home is sold, the new owners would be responsible for bringing it up to code, Kruszewski said. A time-line would be placed on how long the new owners have to upgrade the home, most likely by the spring, Kruszewski said.

City Manager Gary Word, who has fielded phone calls from residents asking that something be done with the house, said he hopes intervention will not be necessary because the city could be forced to absorb costly demolition and legal fees.

"I realize it does not look nice but there is no crisis," Word said. "The structure is safe."

Word said he hopes the two sons, one living in California and the other a Northville resident, will handle the matter.

"Its private property. They should take care of it," Word said.

Administration: Survey mostly positive

manipulated so it would be presented in a positive light."

The comments on the surveys offered mild to strong criticisms of the cards, which eliminated D and E grades for fourth and fifth graders and established criteria to assess academic achievement for elementary students through "not yet," "developing" and "achieving" marks. A wide range of opinions was expressed with some parents voicing ardent support and other suggesting the district trash the whole system.

The parents feel the presentation made to the board by language arts resource teacher Barb Sixt was not representative of the survey comments and was cast in a misleading light.

Assistant Superintendent for Instructional Services Dolly McMaster denies any attempt on the part of the administration to shed a more positive light on the survey results than they deserved.

"The quantifiable data was extremely positive," McMaster said. "This is not a negative report on the report cards, even with the narratives."

The vast number of comments, suggestions and criticisms from parents indicate, McMaster said, that parents trust the process established to revise the cards. Any and all criticism is welcome and will factor into the revisions when the Language Arts Committee, the group that constructed the cards, reconvenes after the third surveys are completed, she said.

November's survey was the first of three that parents will complete this year as a way of offering suggestions and feedback on the new grading system. The next survey will be distributed Jan. 30.

Thirty-percent of the 2,071 surveys distributed were returned by parents. According to McMaster, the fact that roughly 70 percent of the parents did not bother to respond shows that many agree with the features of the new card.

"The people who you don't hear from are the people who are OK with it," she said.

Despite the surveys, some parents feel the administration is giving them the cold shoulder when it comes to listening to their concerns.

"It's an issue where the administration is saying, 'We know more than you, stay in your place,'" Bennett said.

Parent Barb Modetz said she also believes parents' concerns are not being taken seriously.

"You are told to shut-up because you don't understand or they say we are just resistant to change," Modetz said.

The fact that the district has set in motion a process with three separate surveys to take comments into consideration is evidence that the district is, in fact, listening to parents, McMaster said.

"We already had three meetings with parents for just this card marking," she said. "And there will be more this year. These people are not the prevailing voice out there. We are listening to them, but we are listening to everybody. We can't let the tail wag the dog or there will be chaos in this district."

Diana Stadtmiller, a Northville parent who has sat on the Language Arts Committee for three years, said that not all parents are opposed to the cards. The surveys, Stadtmiller said, provide a unique opportunity for parents and they should be used constructively.

"It's not fair to lose sight of what we are trying to do here," said Stadtmiller, who was a secondary education teacher for the Van Buren school district for 12 years. "This (surveying parents) is an opportunity that is not characteristic of most communities. For the district to let parents test these out for a year is a radical concept. That, to me, spoke volumes."

Board of Education President Robert McMahon said he believes the administration is listening to all parents' concerns and stressed that the district is only in the beginning stages of assessing the new grading system.

"This is a very open process," he said. "No one can say this has not been open."

McMahon noted that countless hours were spent by parents on the Language Arts Committee to develop the cards.

"There are parents who have devoted a lot of time and energy to this," he said. "I don't want to second guess them. Again, this is only Phase I. There are two more surveys. I feel the end result will be an excellent report card."

One question on the survey asked parents for suggestions for questions on the next two surveys. A large number of parents wrote that the administration should ask if parents prefer the old card to the new card.

When Bennett attended the meeting to compile the comments, however, she said she was told to not tally that question because it was not an option.

"That was the most common suggestion for the surveys (do you prefer the old card to the new card), yet they are discounting that as irrelevant, that's just not going to happen," Bennett said.

Bennett said this is one example of the administration not taking parents seriously.

In a letter dated Jan. 9 that McMaster sent out to all elementary parents regarding the results of the survey, she wrote:

"After the first survey, it became apparent that a number of parents need clarification about a 'return to the old card.' It should be understood that this is a moot issue. Curriculum, instruction and assessments have changed to the point that the old card is no longer in line with these changes. Teachers needed, requested and developed a reporting system for students and parents that is tied to their curriculum, instruction and assessment."

McMaster said a question comparing the old and new cards will not appear on future surveys because a return to the old system has been ruled out.

"That is not within the realm of possibility," she said. "You don't lead people down the wrong path. That's not what leadership is all about.

"There are people who are saying, 'just go back to the old card.' But life just isn't that way, folks.

"Our teachers have been clamoring for this for a long time. But when these people don't get what they want immediately, they're not happy."

The critical parents insist they are not resistant to change but to the way the new system was implemented.

"Here we are chipping away at the Redwood Forest with a toy hatchet," Gruley said.

PARENTS' COMMENTS ON ELEMENTARY GRADING SYSYTEM

Editor's note: Below are several representative comments taken from the new report card survey forms completed by the parents of elementary school children.

"I understand the report card. I just disagree with its value as a measurement tool."

"I think this report card directly assesses the areas that are intended to be taught. That's what it is used for, so I feel it is very useful."

"The new card's a sham! It is just another education establishment idea that fudges the achievements and under-achievements of our children."

"The new report card does not differ significantly in the information given. Both the old and new cards are adequate."

"This card did not improve anything. A waste of taxpayers money."

"I don't like the report card. It seems like the district wasted a lot of time and money developing something that is lengthy, difficult for the teachers to complete and unclear."

"This is a totally miserable report card. It mainstreams my child and doesn't encourage her to work harder for a better grade."

"Down the road I should feel more comfortable with this method of report card grading. As a new concept, I'll have to experience its use several more times before I can honestly say it works or not."

"Finally, with all our knowledge on children developing at different rates, we have a card that doesn't destroy their self-esteem in the first quarter."

"What happened to a more simplified card? This thing reads like a novel."

"I believe the card will work fine after we all have time to get comfortable with it."

"I feel the report card is basically the same as before. It gives you the same information, just on four pages instead of one."

"This card is much ado about nothing – What's wrong with the standard? It certainly won't help a child's self-esteem, only the school board's."

"Please go back to the old way of report cards, they tell you a lot more and are easier to understand."

"How is a third grader to understand 'uses a variety of word identification strategies for constructing meaning?' How is an adult to understand this?"

"This report card was OK when it was accompanied by a teacher conference. I think it will be very vague when it is sent home the next time when there are no conferences."

"Why not scrap the report card and just mark the benchmark page?"

Changes involve more than lower-end grades

By YVONNE BEEBE
Staff Writer

Are the fine points of the new elementary report card eluding you? Here's a brief recap of the major changes that have been implemented.

- Children are assessed in the traditional subjects of math, social studies, reading, etc. Under each general content area (for example, knows basic math facts), students can receive either a "not yet," "developing" or "achieving" rating. These three ratings replace the former "unsatisfactory," "needs improvement," "satisfactory" or "outstanding" assessments.
- In addition to the content areas of each subject, a benchmarks page appears at the end of the card. This page lists specific skills and objectives the student should be achieving under each content area. The benchmarks page is not marked until the end of the year. Teachers only mark those areas that students have not achieved, so a blank benchmarks page at the end of the year means the student has achieved all of his/her grade-level objectives.
- D and E grades were eliminated at the fourth and fifth grade level. These below-average marks were replaced with an N.Y. rating. Thus, students can have an A-C grade, or an N.Y. rating in each of the subjects. Kindergartner through third grade students have never received grades.

Some of the changes administrators already know they will be making for next year include:

- Sections for teacher comments.
- A category beyond "achieving" that represents excellence.
- More details in math, science, technology and social studies areas.
- A simplified format. Currently the cards have a number of pages with parents having to go back-and-forth between the benchmarks page and other pages of the card.
- Greater use of the benchmarks page.

entry into the room and no signs of a struggle. Police had to break the door down to enter Dybowski's apartment. Police estimate that the woman had been deceased from one to three days before she was found.

The marks on her body, it was later learned, did not result from foul play.

Dybowski is survived by her daughter, Karen Garby of Waterford.

The Inn, a boarding house which has 24 rooms in the upper level of the building and three community bathrooms, was bought in November 1993 by Plymouth landlord Richard Kirchhoff.

Prior to the ownership change the apartment house was known as the Winner's Circle and had been cited for multiple building code violations.

township. Others feared the costs of maintenance and liability. Still others said they didn't want to see smaller home lots and worried about the potential precedent the plan might set.

A few supported it, however, arguing that the recreation advantages outweighed any minor problems the smaller lots might bring.

About 35 people attended the hearing as did five of the seven members of the board of trustees. They heard a new offer from Sakwa.

In response to a question from township Supervisor Karen Baja, Sakwa said he would be willing to preserve the acres slated for the golf course as public open space instead.

Those in attendance were asked to choose between the plan with the golf course and the plan with the preserved open space. The latter was an overwhelming favorite A second vote was then taken, pitting the preserved open space plan against a parallel proposal Sakwa offered containing fewer homes and no open space. The open space plan enjoyed significantly more support.

Whether those sentiments will help win over four of the seven trustees, however, remains to be seen.

The Haller property measures 172 acres and sits at the northeast corner of Six Mile and Sheldon. The Brooklane course land totals 99 acres and occupies the southeast corner. The parallel plan calls for 243 lots which are at least 120 feet wide and contains no open space. The plan, he added, would require extensive grading of the land, meaning more sacrifice of trees and other environmentally sensitive areas.

In contrast, the open space plan includes 280 lots of 80 and 90 feet in width. The nine holes would be scattered throughout the property, some on the north and some on the south side of Six Mile.

A bridge or tunnel would connect them. Brooklane's existing clubhouse would be renovated and the pool added nearby. Leighton said the open space plan would have less impact on environmentally sensitive areas of the site.

The extra lots don't mean a lot of extra cash in Sakwa's pocket, the designer said.

"There's not a lot of advantage to the developer in terms of economics but there's a lot of benefit to the township," Leighton said. "I've never seen a developer make this kind of an offer to the community in my 25 years in the business."

Judge could issue ruling in Rosselle lawsuit Friday

Rosselle filed his suit as a result of action taken against him on May 16 Baja at the time said she made the decision to ask him for his resignation, backed up by Snider's recommendation and a phone poll of most of the board Snider said he had made the recommendation after encountering a recurrent problem in the chief's "administrative and leadership" capabilities

Those allegations, the suit claims, are untrue and part of a deliberate effort to put Rosselle out of his job.

Snider and Baja wanted Rosselle to leave the township, the suit alleges, because they believed he either supported or was not doing enough to block an effort earlier this year to unionize the members of the fire department.

Township firefighters in July voted by a decisive margin to turn down a proposal to join the state firefighters union.

Rosselle at the time said the reasons were personal dislike and a belief that he was resisting the 1993 merger of the fire and police departments into the township's Department of Public Safety

The systematic pressure the two put on him, the suit maintains, "forced (Rosselle) under duress, to involuntarily resign his position" for fear of being fired, thus losing his pension and reputation

The lawsuit also alleges that Baja and Snider had no authority under state law, the township charter or the policies and procedures manual to seek or accept Rosselle's resignation.

In addition, members of the board of trustees – who in a telephone poll supported Baja's decision to ask Rosselle to resign – are guilty of violating the state's Open Meetings Act, the suit charges

The actions of all involved, the suit concludes, violate the Michigan and U.S. Constitutions protecting Rosselle's rights, including the right of free speech and association.

Court papers filed on behalf of the township tell a different story

"The defendants at all times acted in good faith," the township's formal response to the suit said

Snider and Baja were acting within the legitimate scope of their discretion, it added, and hence are exempt from legal action.

"Governmental officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known," the response said

Rivers feels way around Capitol

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

The fun of the holidays are over and last week's arrival meant it's time for all of us to get back to work.

The same held true for Lynn Rivers, who started her new job in the 104th United States Congress.

"It's been very chaotic, especially because of the change in majority," Northville's new Congresswoman said of her first week as a member of the House of Representatives. "On paper, there's a (transition) procedure but you really have to learn by doing."

Rivers, D-Ann Arbor, won a hotly contested race for Michigan's 13th House District in November. The district includes Northville Township and part of the City of Northville. The former state Representative beat out Republican John Schall to take the seat held by retiring Democratic powerhouse Rep. Bill Ford.

Since then, she's been getting ready for Washington. The new GOP majority has colored that task, as Rivers, 37, prepares to serve as a member of the loyal opposition.

She and her family arrived in the District of Columbia on Monday, Jan. 2, taking a day to see the sights. The next day, however, it was back to the grind: getting her office shipshape and working on learning the ropes of the job.

"Tuesday (Jan. 3) was the first day we could get into our offices," Rivers said. "It's been a little crazy. There are stacks of mail and the phones have been ringing off the hook. It's been a roller coaster ride ever since."

As each session of Congress begins so does a musical chairs game. Returning members move to better offices vacated by those who didn't come back, while freshmen hold a lottery for their digs. Then everybody fights everybody else as they all lug desks, chairs and a thousand other things around the three House Office Buildings (HOBs).

"I wasn't exactly lucky in the draw," Rivers said, explaining that the offices for her and her eight staffers are on two different floors of the Longworth HOB.

Wednesday, Jan. 4, was the first day of the 104th Congress, which began with the official swearing-in of the House membership. It's an event Rivers said she'll never forget.

"It was pretty overwhelming," she reflected. "Everything's been so crazy since the election that I guess I didn't have time to think about it. Intellectually, I knew what was going to happen but to stand there and realize that you're actually going to be member of the House of Representatives – it's a humbling event."

After the ceremonies ended, the work began. In a record-setting session, the GOP offered a series of rule changes for the House's operation in the first hours of the new Congress. Several of them won bipartisan support, passing by huge margins. Rivers said she favored a lot of the changes as well.

"I think a lot of the reforms are fine so far," she said. "I campaigned on many of them. Any institution can be reevaluated on how to do business. I was not happy about some others, though."

One such case was the House's vote to require a three-fifths majority to raise taxes.

"My problem is that the Founding Fathers rejected supra-majority voting on budget issues in the Articles of Confederation. I felt very, very uncomfortable seeing Congress throw that away," Rivers said, adding that the House needs to be "extremely cautious" when considering raising taxes.

Another reform she's likely to oppose is the much-ballyhooed balanced budget amendment.

"If Congress is willing to attach a plan to show how they will get to a balanced budget by the year 2002," Rivers said, referring to the year specified in the amendment, "and they'll let the states (ratifying the amendment) know what they're giving up, I'd consider supporting it. I don't have a problem with people making decisions if they have all the facts."

Finding her way around the hallowed halls of Congress and the even more convoluted nuances of governmental procedure has been tricky for the freshman representative.

"I'm familiar with the legislative side of things," Rivers said. "I understand the mechanics of that. It's all these other things that take time to understand. That's where my staff has really been helpful. They know who to call when a particular issue comes up, where to look."

The week also saw members receive their committee assignments. Rivers was one of two freshman members to win a spot on the powerful Budget Committee and also sits on the Technology and Competitiveness Committee.

"That's a great one for this district," she added. "It focuses on research and development and all kinds of high-tech issues, which is so much a part of the 13th."

If you want to contact Rivers, you can call her D.C. office at (202) 225-6261. The 13th District representative also has two district offices, located in the same places as Ford's offices were.

One is located n the Federal Building in the City of Wayne (313) 722-1411. The other is in Ann Arbor at 106 E. Washington (313) 741-4210.

Proposal would effect major court reform

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

The plan could be implemented in phases. This year we could see significant progress on funding the court's computerized information system very quickly.

Michigan's legal leaders are pushing a plan to replace local circuit, probate and district courts with a single trial court.

The state would provide full state funding of court operations, a regional administrator of trial courts, and a confidential system of assessing judges' performance.

The State Bar of Michigan's 150-member Representative Assembly will hold a special meeting Jan. 14 in Lansing to debate the proposal. It is being put forth by the Bar's 21st Century Courts Committee. And it's likely to be controversial.

"I think the impetus was (Gov.) John Engler and the Legislature itself," said Birmingham attorney Robert B. Webster, co-chair of the 21st Century panel.

"They told us there isn't any more money (for more trial judges). But we'd be interested in funding the streamlining (of courts)," said Webster, himself an Oakland Circuit judge from 1973-82.

The plan could be implemented in phases. This year we could see significant progress on funding the court's computerized information system very quickly. Statewide funding of court operations could occur very quickly.

You could unify the district and circuit courts without a constitutional amendment. You could set up regional administration by legislative funding and court rules.

But to unify the probate courts would take a constitutional amendment approved by voters.

Webster and Bruce W. Neckers of Grand Rapids co-chaired a panel of seven that met monthly during most of 1993. Ex-officio (non-voting) members included judges of all levels.

They expect an argument. Some small-county probate judges handle only a handful of cases a year. Some cities and counties have lost population but don't want to lose judges and court jobs. Some thoughtful specialists say there should be a separate domestic relations court, combining parts of the circuit and probate courts' work.

But there are many signs reform is coming. Engler last year vowed to veto legislative bills creating more judges, working particular hardships on Oakland County, the Farmington and Walled Lake areas. The state is battling a lawsuit over its full funding of Detroit and Wayne County courts.

Michigan's trial courts are like a series of rigid pigeonholes. Horizontally, they are split into circuit (felony cases, major civil trials, divorces), probate (estates, juvenile matters) and district (misdemeanors and ordinance cases). In addition, Detroit has a recorders court handling only criminal cases.

Vertically, they are split into geographic districts varying from several counties (circuit) to a single community (some district courts). Voters become confused and pick "name" candidates.

Here is an outline of the 21st Century Committee's plan:

1. A single trial court. Lines between circuit, probate and district courts would be erased. In large jurisdictions, there would be some room for specialization (e.g., domestic relations). Legislators and judges would work out details. All judges would be paid the same. New electoral districts would have to be developed with an eye on the federal law requiring racial and ethnic participation.

2. A regional administrative judge (RAJ). The state would be divided into eight to 12 regions (780,000 to 1.2 million population). The chief justice of the Supreme Court would appoint RAJs for a four-year term. RAJs would prepare budgets and assign judges and cases within the region, crossing geographic lines when necessary.

3. State funding. The 14-year debate over the preferential treatment given Wayne County and Detroit would end. The state would pay the salaries of judges and their staffs, training costs, transcripts, juries, witness fees, indigent counsel, interpreters and the regional administrative judges.

Local units would pay for courthouses and physical facilities, although there could be state allowances. No budget figure was even estimated. Currently, circuit and probate courts are funded as public services, but many district courts earn surpluses for their local units through fines they levy.

4. Assessment of judges. An agency or committee that is broadly based and composed of persons of independent quality drawn from the bench, the bar and non-lawyers familiar with the judicial system would evaluate all judges' performance for impartiality, "avoidance of impropriety, freedom from personal bias" and ability to decide issues based on the law and facts without regard to the identity of the parties or counsel, the popularity of the decision and without fear of criticism.

But voters and possible rival candidates would be denied a look at those evaluations because results and data would be confidential.

5. Computerized information system. A statewide, standard, uniform, coordinated, computerized judicial information system would be put in place, at state expense, over time. It would be accessible to court personnel, lawyers, law enforcement and corrections personnel, news media and the public.

Mill Race Matters

Start the new year off right and resolve to become involved in the community. One way to do this is to join the Northville Historical Society. Membership runs from January to December, so former members should renew now as well. Family membership costs $15. Call 348-1845 for a membership application or renew by writing P.O. Box 71, Northville, MI, 48167.

The Northville Historical Society operates Mill Race Village located on Griswold, north of Main, as a benefit to the community. The Village contains nine structures which recreate the community's Victorian heritage. The buildings have been moved to the site from locations throughout the community. Although buildings are open only on Sunday afternoon during the spring, summer and fall, the site can be accessed year-round from sun-up to sun-down.

The office manager, Cheryl Gazlay, is available Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Stone Gang works each Monday from 9 a.m. until noon, maintaining and repairing the buildings. This winter they are constructing birdhouses which will be sold as a fund-raiser in the spring.

The Archives Committee works from 9 a m. to 11 a.m. on Wednesday. They are organizing and processing a community archive at the Village. Both groups welcome additional volunteers. Also needing support and workers are the docents who keep the buildings open in season, and Tivoli Fair – the organization's major fund-raiser.

Social events like the upcoming progressive dinner, the Christmas party, the wine party and the annual meeting and special events such as the Victorian Festival, the Fourth of July, the Christmas Walk and the Children's Workshop use countless volunteers.

The quarterly publication, Mill Race Matters, could use additional staff or occasional submissions. Gardening help can also be used. Countless other activities need regular and/or occasional support, not to mention all those things that aren't being done. Are you interested in grant writing or planning programs, or setting up an educational program? The opportunities are endless Start the year off right – get involved.

New judge says dream became reality taste of what it was all about. Every night, my dad would tell me about things he'd run into that day. It was job training around the dinner table."

Those tables included ones in Detroit, where Lowe was born, to Plymouth, where the family moved when he was five, to Kentucky, where the Lowes spent much time with relatives.

He liked the law so much, Lowe said, that he got a job as court officer to 35th Judge Dunbar Davis while still attending Plymouth Salem High.

He graduated from Salem in 1974, then picked up his undergraduate degree in accounting in 1978 from Hillsdale College.

Then it was off to Cooley Law School in Lansing, where Lowe discovered one of his great loves: Harley-Davidson motorcycles.

"I'd been riding motorcycles before that," he said, "but the Sergeant at Arms of the state Legislature got me onto Harleys when I was working there during school. I can assure you that I was one of only a few students at Cooley to park a Harley in the parking lot."

He still has one today, and a book commemorating the American-made motorcycle sits on a special stand in his office at the court, right next to a collection of Sherlock Holmes tales, another of Lowe's hobbies. A Bible lies on his desk.

Dotting the office as well are wooden Uncle Sams, which Lowe collects. He's a storyteller as well, entertaining groups of children and adults with tales of all kinds. Lowe also carves wood – "whittling, we call it down South," he noted.

He graduated from Cooley in 1982, although not without hitting a few potholes along the way.

"I failed an exam my first semester. In law school, you take one exam and that's your whole grade, so I was upset. I even went to the dean and asked if I should stay in law school. I did stay and did very well the next semester. I even passed that class."

After that, he stepped up to the bar, joining his father Charles' law office in Plymouth. Lowe worked for the firm in return for office space, which meant that his career took off a tad slowly.

"One month, I grossed $85," Lowe said.

The years passed, though, and Lowe became a partner in the firm and practiced law in 35th District Court. After his father retired to Florida, Lowe then took over his dad's position as the Plymouth City Attorney in 1985. Through it all, he said he still kept his eyes on his dream.

"My father taught me to give back to the community. This was one way to do it," he said. "Those ideals of the 1960s are still in me: the idea that you can make the world a better place and make a difference – they're still with me."

Then came 1987 and his marriage to Jeanine, his wife of almost eight years. They have two sons now, Ronny and Robby, 17 and 3 months.

Both attended their father's formal swearing-in last Thursday. It was an emotional moment for Lowe, who had to pause during the proceeding to hold back the tears.

He recalled his father's advice: "Good law is just common sense," the rule he follows today on the bench. He spoke of his wife's having to spend 10 weeks in bed during her pregnancy with Robby while he ran for the judgeship.

The ceremony did contain a chuckle or two. Lowe's family presented him with his judge's robe, which he noted still had the price tag on it.

"I guess I'm the Minnie Pearl of the 35th District Court," he said.

The responsibility that goes along with the robe is something Lowe keeps in mind all the time.

"There's a tremendous responsibility that's been placed on my shoulders. That's what I have to remember," he said. "I have to always realize that these are real people in the court and the decisions I make will have a big impact on their lives."

"They may not agree with my decisions," he added, "but they'll know that they've had their day in court."

The 35th District Court building, named after Dunbar Davis who died just late last month, is located on Plymouth Road in Plymouth.

Schmid gets appointment

Kay Schmid must be doing something right on the Oakland County Board of Commissioners to be appointed chair of one of the four most important seats in the county

Schmid was appointed chairman of the General Government Committee for the Oakland County Board of Commissioners. In November, the Novi resident won her third consecutive term on the county board. Schmid's new job is one of the four most powerful positions on the county board, it is preceeded in power only by the chair of the entire commission.

Every action the commission takes must pass through this committee That means every resolution, law, program or project has to win approval from the committee before it gets enacted.

As the chairman, Schmid will have a great influence on what comes out of the committee. She can expedite a proposal, put her mark on it, or kill it.

Our Opinion

Take a breakfast bite out of youth drug use

An ounce of prevention, the saying goes, is worth a pound of cure. That's particularly true when it comes to keeping kids away from drugs.

Drug use plays a titanic part in many of the problems of our country. Pick a malady: crime, health problems, moral decay. Narcotics are always there. The most tragic fact of all is effect they have on our children, for the damage is often wider and deeper than anywhere else.

Halting the onslaught is everyone's job. You can join the anti-drug effort by supporting Northville's Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program. Buy a ticket to the program's breakfast fund-raiser next Saturday morning. For just $2, you can have all the pancakes you can eat at the McDonald's restaurant near Six Mile and Haggerty in Northville Township. Proceeds go to Northville DARE.

In case you're not familiar with it, DARE is a nationwide program aimed primarily at fifth and sixth graders. It's intended to be proactive. DARE tries to teach kids to stay away from drugs before they ever start. The targeted grades are the ones just about to leave elementary school and enter a new world, one with the dangers of dope and a lot of peer pressure to use it.

Local schools and police work together. Police officers are specially trained to conduct the 17 weekly lessons of the DARE program. Last year saw Northville's first DARE graduations, which took place in local private schools. To date, the Northville Public Schools system has not chosen to join the DARE program.

The system is more than telling young people to "just say no." It explains what drugs are and the consequences of their use. DARE analyzes why many young people use narcotics and discusses better, positive alternatives to deal with life's problems. Teens learn how to resist the temptation of using drugs, especially where peer pressure is concerned, through developing self-esteem in productive ways.

DARE believes that people with high self-esteem are better prepared to turn away from drugs. It teaches kids that they don't need dope to believe in themselves and their self-worth.

The program also teaches young people about the value of a support system of friends and family to turn to in times of need – instead of turning to drugs. It educates them on how to recognize stress and deal with it without the use of narcotics. It also helps young people to see how drugs are portrayed in movies, television and advertisements. It all comes full circle when students make a commitment to themselves and each other to stay away from drugs.

A side benefit of the whole thing is the chance for young people to interact with law enforcement officers in a positive way. Northville Township's Officer Matt Mayes and Northville City's Officer Jim Marks, both trained DARE officers, help break down the stereotypes many young people have about cops.

Support this valuable program. Attend the Jan. 21 pancake breakfast. It runs from 6-11 a.m. and Mayes will be on hand to answer any questions you might have.

Take note, though: you'll need a ticket and they're only available from Mayes at township police headquarters from Officer Matt Mayes. The headquarters is located inside Northville Township Hall on Six Mile between Winchester and Haggerty. If you have any questions, call 349-9400.

Promoting diversity

The Northville community has a small minority population, consisting mostly of Asian Americans and a handful of blacks. Because of that, some people are puzzled by the involvement of a group that promotes diversity education and ethnic awareness.

The fact is that A Community Organization Recognizing Diversity (ACORD) is needed in our area precisely because there is a sparsity of minority members.

The one factor contributing more than anything else to racial and ethnic misunderstanding is an absence of exposure to a variety of peoples. That's why minorities and well-meaning progressives at one time felt that integration held the best hope for eliminating the scourge of racism. The more we know about each other the more we realize we're very much alike.

ACORD is an active organization whose programs and functions help bridge the cultural gaps that stand in the way of tolerance and acceptance. To help advance the organization's goal of promoting ethnic and racial understanding and to honor the memory of a great American, ACORD will hold a candlelight walk commemorating the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. The second annual event will begin this Monday at 7 p.m. on the steps of the City Hall building, 215 W. Main St.

"This is a great opportunity for Northville, for the kids and the adults too," ACORD founder Al Qualman said. "This broadens the scope of Northville."

Participants will walk in silence with flashlights from City Hall to the First Presbyterian Church 200 E. Main St.

At the church, several people, including city Mayor Chris Johnson, Township Supervisor Karen Baja, Northville High School Principal Tom Johnson and a student, will read from King's famous "I have a dream" speech. Members of the Northville High School choir, with director Mary Kay Pryce, will sing inspirational songs.

The MLK walk will offer a unique chance for Northville community residents to hear the words of Dr. King, whose message of non-violent resistance remains an inspiration more than 25 years after his death. We'd like to urge attendance at the event and thank the ACORD people for their thoughtful organization of such a program.

Isolation from the thoughts and actions of people whose range of experience differs greatly from your own can lead to ignorance in milder cases and to bigotry in extreme manifestations. Exposure to diverse points of view, conversely, tends to broaden the outlook and deepen one's understanding of humanity. Toward that end, ACORD performs a highly valuable service in our basically homogeneous community.

Survey presentation gets N.Y.

Lee Snider

School district reporter Yvonne Beebe made what can only be described as a Herculean effort to analyze the survey responses to the new elementary report card grading system.

As you know, the school district this year made major changes in the way it gives marks to elementary students and school officials recently asked parents to assess the new format.

In an impressive show of concerned participation, more than 600 (roughly 30 percent) of elementary parents completed forms and sent them in. Of that number, 422 parents included written comments on their surveys and it was these that were relevant to Yvonne's stories.

To make sure she had an appreciation of the range and nature of the parents' remarks, Yvonne sat down with all 422 forms and didn't come up for air until she had read and categorized every one of them.

The exhaustive homework Yvonne did in dissecting the parents' responses is evident in the articles she wrote for this week's edition of The Northville Record. I hope you'll take the time to read them over carefully. First some background on how the project came about.

In mid December, members of the school administration gave a presentation to the board of education on the report card survey results. Standing in for Assistant Superintendent Dolly McMaster, language arts instructor Barb Sixt spoke glowingly of how parents had overwhelmingly endorsed the new marking system. Yvonne quoted Sixt as saying that "the majority agreed with the need for change."

Shortly after Yvonne's story appeared, a group of parents came forward to object – not to the reporter's account of what the presenter had said, but to the accuracy of the remarks themselves.

How could parents have agreed with the need for change when there was nothing on the survey asking them if they preferred the old system to the new, they asked. Moreover, why weren't the written comments summarized the way the multiple choice responses were? Asking people if they understand something is not the same as asking them if they like it. One can grasp a concept without at the same time embracing it.

In an attempt to learn if the administration had put a misleading spin on the responses as the parents claimed, Yvonne buried herself in paper. She read all the written remarks on the survey forms and devised her own classification system. Here's what she found:

- 246 respondents (58 percent) made critical suggestions, believing significant revisions were needed
- 71 (17 percent) needed more time to make up their minds
- 54 (13 percent) firmly approved of the new system
- 51 (12 percent) recommended scrapping the system completely

Now, maybe you see in those numbers a wholesale endorsement of the new grading procedure but I don't. I think it's clear that the administration's enthusiasm for the positive nature of the remarks was misplaced.

Because Yvonne's classification system is basically subjective, she and I decided she would make no mention of it in her articles. I think her break down represents the closest thing we have to a thorough analysis of the written responses, however, and I wanted to find a place for it in the paper. Enter this column space.

I think the administration exercised spin control on this issue because, as the first feedback since the new grades were put in place, officials probably felt the surveys represented a referendum on the system itself. The administration is committed to the change and has said a return to the old way is not an option, so it was doubly important that they find justification for their new grading format. While this may be understandable, it is also not entirely forthcoming and the administration must now accept a loss of credibility. And that's a shame, because the survey appeared to be a genuine attempt to hear the parents out.

I'll stop short here of criticizing the new grading procedure even as I express disappointment over the way the administration presented the survey results. My hope is that we'll get more candor after the next two surveys. My vow is that we'll watch for rosy interpretations of the outcomes.

Whisper shouts of trust violation

Randy Coble

Psst.

Hey, Connie. This is just between you and me. You and your company were wrong.

Oh, you're right that the cameras were rolling and that Newt's mom knew it. Yes, you're right that she kept her mouth shut when you asked about other things but was almost eager to reveal the new Speaker's lofty opinion of Mrs. Bill.

Got news for you, though: it doesn't matter. You and CBS News violated a trust with both Mama Gingrich and the public.

Journalists are supposed to live by some basic rules, Con. They apply whether you're a rich, New York news anchor or a po' but happy Northville Record staffer.

They dictate that you weren't out of line for asking the question. You and the Columbia Broadcasting System crossed the line, however, by putting the answer on the air. Don't think that the rules change because of the size of the stakes, either.

Contrary to conventional wisdom, "journalistic ethics" is not a contradiction in terms. There's off the record and on the record and n'er the twain shall meet. When you tell someone that it's "just between you and me," that is exactly where it should stay.

That's how it works around here, Connie. I'm about as close to perfect as Daffy Duck and I've made plenty of mistakes in my time. However, I never have nor will I ever burn people. There are two reasons why.

First, trustworthiness is a basic element of a good reporter. I have a job to do and it's one that requires hard questions and unflattering stories at times. Most of the folks I deal with understand that. There's a big difference, however, between criticizing and betraying someone.

The reality is that "off the record" is an invaluable part of journalism. Through it, people give me the skinny on all kinds of things this community needs to know about. That information would remain behind closed doors if they thought that conversations we agree will remain private were ever published.

Second, trust is a non-negotiable moral issue. It's right to keep your word when you give it and wrong to break it. You and the network, Con, allowed ethics to take a back seat to business, if only in a mild way. CBS aggressively promoted your show that would broadcast the interview.

The interview was filmed before Christmas. You and the network sat on the quote for two weeks. Then you distributed audio copies of Mama's indiscretion to other news organizations days before the show aired. It's a simple formula: build up the hype, increase the market share.

It worked – a lot of people tuned in, including me. You and the network fumbled your credibility during the play, though. The firestorm that followed showed that. What Newt supposedly said hasn't rocked the boat nearly as much as how you found out about it. Your defense isn't playing in Peoria, Connie. Most folks – even a lot of those who don't care for Gingrich and Co. – see this as big-time network honcho manipulating the Marietta, Ga., Hillbillies.

Like lawyers or Rodney Dangerfield, journalists don't get a lot of respect. We've brought a lot of that upon ourselves. This is one more little example of that principle.

1994 CROP Walk hit record high

To the Editor:

The annual Novi-Northville CROP Walk for world hunger held on Sept. 25, 1994, set a new record for this area. A check for $19,050 has been forwarded to Church World Service. This is a 17 percent increase over last year, and something our communities can be very proud of.

Three hundred and twenty-five walkers and workers participated in the 6.2 mile walk, which started at the Novi Civic Center and concluded at Our Lady of Victory Church in Northville. Walkers were given a certificate of "thanks for their efforts" and were treated with ice cream, donated by the Guernsey Dairy, at the finish line.

We would like to thank the community for the tremendous support for this worthy effort. And a special thanks to those persons on the executive committee who helped plan the event.

Also, we'd like to thank the business contributors – Longs Plumbing and Bath Shop, and Guernsey Dairy, as well as special contributions from First United Methodist church in Northville, and the Novi Methodist Church.

Twenty-five percent of the funds received will be returned to the community by the Lansing CROP office and will be forwarded to the following agencies in this area: Northville Civic Concern, Novi Emergency Food Pantry, Baldwin Food Shelter in Pontiac, C.O.T.S., and Active Faith.

The 1995 Novi-Northville crop walk has been set for Sunday, Oct. 8, 1995. A target goal has been set at 375 walkers and $22,000 to be raised for world hunger. Next year's walk will include a marching band at the start of the walk. At the kick-off meeting on Tuesday, April 25, a "bronzed shoe" will be awarded to one of the participating churches for their outstanding participation in 1994.

Any church or civic organization is invited to participate in the kick-off meeting, Tuesday, April 25, 7:30 p.m., at the First United Methodist Church in Northville.

Good luck to the new(t) Congress

To the Editor:

In William Butler Yeats' "The Second Coming," certain lines, among the 22 of his famous poem, fit well the decidedly evident hubris and obsessive ambitions of Newt Gingrich, our new Speaker of the House of Representatives –

"Surely some revelation is at hand, Surely the second coming is at hand."

Well, it remains to be seen what the monumental turn of events, wrought by the recent mid-term elections, will eventually bring us.

I wish Speaker Gingrich and all the other new leaders of our Congress well.

I hope they accomplish that which is good for our country.

Facts give the lie to welfare notions

Phil Power

Last week was a good one for Gov. John Engler.

Newly sworn in after his landslide victory last November and still glowing from his new status as proud father of triplets, Engler traveled to Washington to bask in adulation and to advise his fellow triumphant Republicans in Congress to "be bold."

In illustration, Engler pointed to his decision in 1991 to end Michigan's General Assistance welfare payments to 80,000 able-bodied single adults The $250 million saving matched almost exactly the budget deficit in that recession year The initiative was featured in Engler's re-election campaign media and, obviously, proved enormously popular with most voters.

Because I've been around too long to believe automatically in anybody's press releases trumpeting success, I kept wondering just what happened to those 80,000 folks cut off from GA. Then I read last week a study by the University of Michigan and the state Department of Social Services, and my eyes widened in surprise.

The report demolished, one by one, a series of ideological assumptions – largely shared by me, I confess – that underlay much of the popularity of the initiative

Assumption: Most Michigan able-bodied folks on welfare are young black males living in Detroit Fact: Only one in 20 people receiving GA was a young black man in Detroit. Actually, two out of five recipients were women, 40 percent were older than 40, and 15 percent were rural.

Assumption: The reason most able-bodied people receive public assistance is that they're too lazy to go get a job. Fact: "The majority of former recipients are neither healthy enough to be attractive job candidates nor disabled enough to qualify for disability benefits," with more than 58 percent of all welfare recipients reporting chronic disease

Assumption: Cutting able-bodied people off welfare will prod them to get off their duffs and get jobs. Fact: "Two years after the cutoff, the number of recipients who were off all forms of public assistance, including food stamps and Medicaid – 43 percent – was no higher than the number who had managed to get off assistance two years before the cutoff " In other words, dumping folks off the welfare rolls didn't make much difference in their likelihood of getting off GA through their own devices.

Assumption: There are lots of good jobs around; just look at the Help Wanted section in this newspaper. Fact: Fewer than 5 percent found work in all four quarters in 1992; only 40 percent got jobs at any point during their first year off welfare. And 60 percent of those who got a job were either janitors or food service workers.

The report concludes: "What former recipients need now is what they have needed all along – more investment in jobs, more jobs for minority and older workers, adequate health care and job skills training, expanded disability criteria and greater targeting of resources for community development in impoverished areas."

Sounds like the liberal mantra. And the odds of Gov. Engler (or the Republican-controlled U.S. Congress, for that matter) adopting this policy prescription are exactly zero.

Poor people are not exactly a powerful constituency these days.

So where does this leave us?

First, even when you're in total agreement with a political policy that is wildly popular, always be sure to check the facts. More often than not, you'll find the facts don't sustain the ideology.

Second, in the coming debate about welfare and the various government assistance programs, somebody needs persistently to keep coming back to facts It may be popular budget policy to push poor people off welfare, but doing so should be debated on its own terms and not in some never-never land where actual fact has no relationship to ideological assumption.

Well-meaning enablers part of problem

Charlie Stilec

"Enabling is a process whereby well meaning parents/adults unwittingly allow and even encourage irresponsible and self destructive behavior in their children by sheltering them from the consequences of their actions."

—David J. Wilmes, Parenting For Prevention

It's been an intense year as is every year up here at Northville High School. So many students facing so many challenges. Every day they need to make decisions that may affect them the rest of their lives.

Unfortunately, there are always some students who choose to get involved with nicotine, alcohol and/or illegal drugs. Many consequences usually follow and it becomes apparent that there are some key behaviors by parents that really end up hurting their kids more than helping them

These statements reflect the way some parents parent and also reflect the process of enabling

1 I often overlook my child's bad behavior with "she'll grow out of it "

2. I make it a policy not to talk about the possibility of any alcohol or drug problems in our family

3. I sometimes make excuses to school officials to keep my child out of trouble – like saying she was sick when she skipped school.

4. My spouse and I often do chores that are clearly our child's responsibility.

5 I often feel confused about what it means to be a parent.

6. Even when I strongly suspect my child may be using nicotine/alcohol/drugs, I tend to discount my fears, thinking I may be making something out of nothing.

7. I tend to think that if my child should get into serious problems, it's probably because I failed as a parent.

8 My spouse and I often seriously disagree about how to raise our child.

Parents do the best they can. If we answer yes to these questions we probably have a good reason: to keep our kids from being unhappy, to give them the benefit of the doubt, to keep peace in the family.

What we are talking about is called enabling, encouraging something that is destructive. Enabling, according to Parenting For Prevention, is an ineffective kind of parenting. Enabling actually paves the way for kids to make the wrong decisions about alcohol and drugs.

Working with students and substance abuse issues puts me in contact with parents and caregivers. In dealing with student substance abuse there is a whole continuum of parental reactions. Taking a very difficult situation and helping to insure that: 1) the student stops using, 2) logical and speedy consequences are in place, 3) the family receives needed education about substance abuse.

Enabling and community/school resources are part of the process.

If you suspect your child is using nicotine, alcohol or illegal drugs seek a professional opinion. Call me, 810-344-1825, call your doctor, call a treatment program. Please do not enable by overlooking or ignoring.

Water tank demolition subject of comment

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

If you've got anything to say about Northville Township's plans to divert federal grant money for demolition of the old water tank on Beck Road, you'd better make your voice heard soon.

The township board of trustees in November agreed to ask Wayne County and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to "reprogram" more than $50,00 in federal funds to tear down the tank and re-seed the empty land. The money comes from the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

Wayne County officials will submit the request formally to HUD on Jan. 23. If you want to send them your comments about the plan before they do so, mail remarks to County Executive Ed McNamara's office, L-13 Wayne County Building, 600 Randolph, Detroit 48226, before Jan. 20.

A legacy of the Detroit Water & Sewer department, the tank is empty and hasn't been used for quite a while. It can't be used for water storage any more and township officials say it's not good for much else. Any other possible use, such as storage, would require expensive modifications, they said.

Combined with that is the fact that the township couldn't spend all of the CDBG grant monies. Federal officials give local communities CDBG dollars to use in a variety of community improvement projects, such as loans to low-income people to fix up their homes.

The problem, township CDBG administrator Maureen Oisecki explained, is that there just aren't enough projects in the township on which to use all the grant monies.

Some of the cash has been on hold for years and county and federal officials have said the township will lose it if they don't use it. That led Oisecki and township Treasurer Rick Engelland to work on a list of alternative projects for which the money could be used.

Demolition of the water tank was their top choice, and is allowable under federal rules for "eliminating spot blight."Township officials are uncertain if the requested $55,506 reprogramming will be enough to complete the demolition, meaning that some township money may have to be kicked in. A cost estimate of the removal done two years ago said it would take $35,000-$85,000 to get rid of the tank.

Function to honor longtime entrepreneurs

The Northville Community Chamber of Commerce will honor long-time business owners Chuck and Maxine Lapham during a party for the couple at the Acropolis restaurant Jan. 17 from 5:30-7 p.m.

"We wanted to bid them a fond farewell," said Chamber executive director Laurie Marrs. "They have been Chamber of Commerce members for the past 30 years. They've been supportive of the chamber and a good friend to the community."

Chuck Lapham, who has owned and operated Lapham's Men's Shop on Main Street for the past 40 years, announced plans last November to close for good. Currently, the store is in the final stages of a liquidation sale.

A large number of devoted customers who enjoyed Lapham's personalized service were dismayed by Chuck's plans to retire from the clothing business.

Marrs said next week's party is a chance for people to come in and show their appreciation. There will be representatives from the city and township and anyone who would like to say some words is welcome, she said.

Hors d'oeuvres and refreshments will be available at the restaurant. Admission will cost $10. Marrs recommends calling the Chamber of Commerce office at 349-7640 for reservations, which are optional.

TRUST...TRUST...TRUST...

Good estate planning means never having to say probate

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

The key to choosing a personal representative or a trustee of your estate is trust, said Lee Holland, who is both a certified public accountant and a certified financial planner.

"In real estate it's location, location, location," he said. "Make sure you get someone you trust, trust, trust," to handle your estate.

Family Estate Planning for Women was the focus of Holland's speech to the Northville Woman's Club on Jan. 6.

Goals must be set before proceeding with estate planning, said Holland. Number one on Holland's list of priorities is income tax planning. The need to preserve assets and avoid probate are key items. Educational and retirement planning are other considerations when estate planning.

The three main reasons for estate planning are taking care of minor children, avoiding probate which is costly, lengthy and a headache, and avoiding federal estate taxes if your taxable estate is worth more than $600,000, said Holland.

"The milestone for beginning estate planning is when you get married," said Holland. "When you're young, everything is joint, but you want to make sure you have someone to take care of the kids should something happen to both parents. You don't want probate court to establish guardians. It may be the only reason when you're young."

Making a Will is one step in estate planning. You will need a guardian for your children and a personal representative for your money. In some cases, the person chosen as guardian may not be a financial wizard and a personal representative can be appointed to manage your financial estate.

Reasons to avoid probate are the expense, the delay and the fact that it's just a big headache.

"Even with a simplified probate it could take one year," said Holland.

When a beneficiary is named for IRA accounts, life insurance policies, personal annuities, and pensions or profit sharing plans, probate will be avoided. A spouse cannot change pension disbursements without the other spouse's signature, said Holland.

Having a living trust will also avoid probate. Contrary to what some people think, said Holland, you don't give up control of your estate.

"If you don't like the living trust, it can be revoked," said Holland. If everything is in one name only, it will go through probate regardless of whether there is a Will, said Holland.

A living trust has disadvantages though. There is the expense, the hassle and all assets must be retitled in the name of the trust. If more property is purchased, it will have to be retitled, it is not automatically included in the trust just because you have one already set up.

Trustees will administer living trusts. Single parents, widows and widowers should consider living trusts if they own real property and want to avoid probate. The living trust also includes the QTIP (Qualifying Terminal Interest Provision), also called the "bimbo" provision. "It's so the next Mrs. doesn't get it," said Holland. You can protect your half of the estate after your death. Your spouse gets the interest but not the principal.

Holland made available to the group several records necessary to aid personal representatives in the handling of an estate.

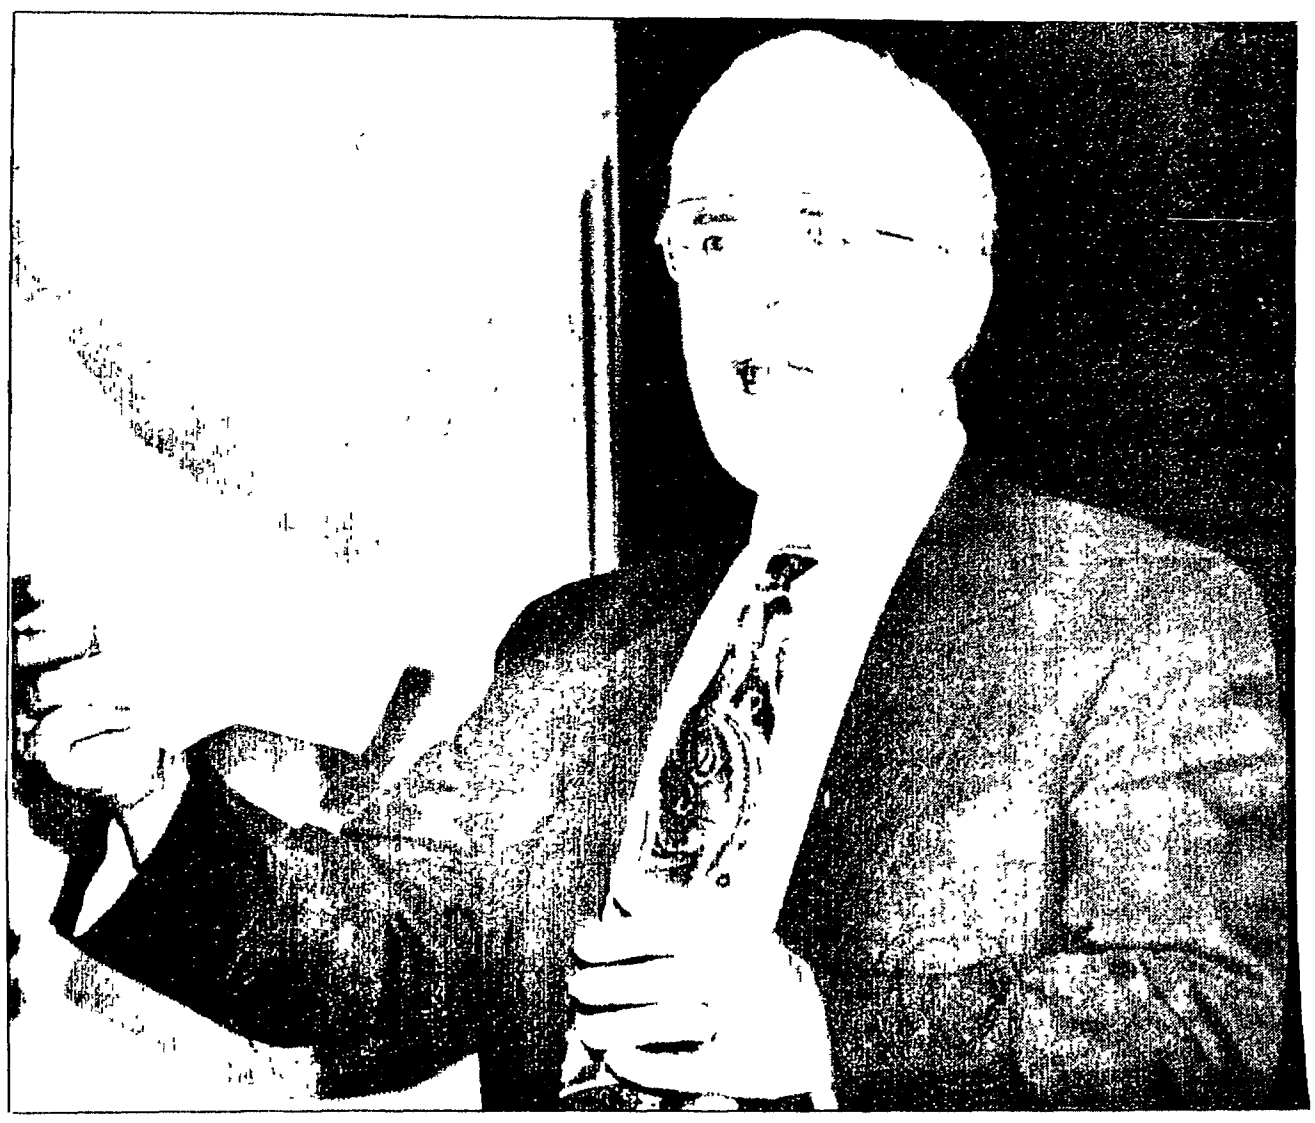

It is not enough to make sure you have a personal representative you trust. You must also supply the individual with the information necessary to carry out your wishes. That's why a Property and Data Location Record is very important. Included in this record should be the name, address and phone number of advisers such as an accountant, life insurance broker, stockbroker, banker, financial adviser and lawyer. The record should also include the location of documents such as birth certificate, marriage certificate, family tree, military service records, medical records, social security card, original of the Will and copy of the Will, real property records, life insurance policies, securities, promissory notes, bank books, to name a few. Information about the location of miscellaneous property such as jewelry and collections is also necessary. Don't forget to include the location of bank accounts, investment management accounts, safety deposit boxes, even a private safe if you have one with the location of keys or combinations. Personal data such as date of birth, place of birth, social security number, name of spouse, date and place of marriage is also necessary. Also include the addresses and phone numbers of siblings, parents and include the date of birth when listing your children. Make sure the administrator has a copy of this record.

Another important document to assist those responsible for your funeral is a document entitled My Wishes at Time of Death. This document also needs personal information such as name, address, phone number, social security number, military serial service number, parents names, include mother's maiden name, children's and siblings names.

It is also necessary to give instructions as to the disposition of your body. Information about whether your body will be used for medical education and scientific research, and whether you want organs to be donated should be included with copies of the legal documents where necessary. Burial information such as coffin, casket, price range, plot, cremation and disposal of ashes, viewing of body, and flowers or memorial gifts should be included.

Estate planning kits are available at book stores and will include this information.

Holland has been in business in Northville since 1970 and has been a resident since 1971. He is treasurer of the Detroit Chapter of the International Association for Financial Planning and past treasurer of Northville Rotary and Chamber of Commerce, and Schoolcraft College Foundation.

Stilec helps kids through recreation

By DOROTHY NASH
Special Writer

If you think that "parks and recreation" is just for fun and games, and therefore low on the priority list of community concerns, you should talk with Charlie Stilec, a member of the Northville Parks and Recreation Commission.

Professionally, Stilec is a member of the Community Commission on Drug Abuse, providing counseling and services in the surrounding area for young people and families, and his office is at Northville High School where he is Prevention Specialist.

"My interest is in helping kids," he said. "I believe that if kids are involved in sports activities it builds up their self esteem."

And it follows that "achievement in sports and recreation puts them in better shape to fight drugs and alcohol abuse."

But besides just talking and counseling since he moved to Northville from Detroit 10 years ago, Stilec has been on the scene, involved in coaching – volleyball, baseball, softball and soccer.

He's out there with his wife and their two children, ages 11 and 8 – involved in the area programs in our community.

"Programs like recreation bring people together," he said, and it "helps keep the community safe and secure."

"All I have is a dream," Stilec said, "to get kids off the streets by giving them a place to go – to play basketball, baseball, to wrestle."

"I would be a supporter," he added, "to provide intramural activities in the schools on weekends and evenings."

If you would like to listen in on a meeting of Northville Parks and Recreation on the second Wednesday of the month, at 7:30 p.m., look in the community calendar because the location alternates between Township Hall and City Hall.

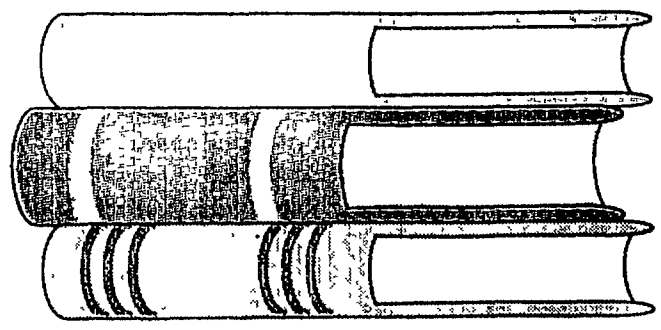

Also, you may apply to fill the next vacancy, but members don't seem to move off very often.

Talented singer performed in Toronto

Susan Bickner of Northville was one of nine Eastern Michigan University students who were invited to perform at the National Opera Association annual convention in Toronto on Nov. 10.

Bickner is a member of Opera Workshop, a nine-member student performance group directed by associate professor of music Donald C. Hartmann. The group performed "Chip and His Dog," a one-act opera composed by Carlo Menotti.

Following the performance, the group worked with internationally renowned stage director Nathaniel Merrill in a master class situation.

NHS student chosen to perform at U-M

Northville High School student Chrissy Kapusky was among the talented students who came from across the state to perform in the Michigan Youth Ensembles' fall concert on Nov. 21 at The University of Michigan.

Albion College encourages students to spend a semester off-campus studying in their field of interest.

Shoemaker is named honorary alumnus

Robert Shoemaker was approved as an honorary alumnus of the Orchard Lake Schools Alumni Association during the organization's recent convention. Shoemaker was among some 49 individuals representing six states, the District of Columbia and Poland who were approved as honorary alumni.

They were recommended on the basis of meritorious service each has rendered to SS. Cyril and Methodius Seminary, St. Mary's College and St. Mary's Preparatory, the trinity of academic institutions that comprise the Orchard Lake Schools campus near Detroit.

Two ninth graders attend science program

Tricia Lutes and Erin Taylor participated in the University of Michigan Summerscience program. The Northville residents were among 85 ninth graders from across Michigan selected to participate.

The young women explored projects in space science, physics, chemistry and engineering/optics during their two week stay on the Ann Arbor campus. They also used computers to run experiments, graph results and write scientific reports, and attended evening seminars on scientific ethics and careers.

On Campus

Alma College has recognized the academic achievements of its returning students for the fall of 1994 with scholarship awards totaling more than $4 million.

More than 60 percent of the approximately 860 upperclassmen will receive these merit-based scholarships, recognizing outstanding academic achievement. In total, Alma College gives $7.2 million in merit-based and need-based awards to its student body of about 1,300.

MELISSA LUTES, a resident of Northville and a graduate of Novi High School, received a trustee honors scholarship.

LISA TAYLOR, of Northville High School, was one of 80 high school students to attend a special fall visitation day at Albion College on Nov. 12.

The visitation provided an opportunity for prospective students and their parents to tour the campus, meet faculty and students and attend information sessions on academics, special programs, admissions, financial aid and scholarships.

If students were unable to attend visitation day, they are invited to either attend the spring visitation day on March 25, or visit the campus at any time during the year. The Admissions Office will arrange campus tours, appointments with faculty and other activities by request.

Albion College is a private, coeducational, liberal arts college located in the south central Michigan town of the same name.

Chef Rocky has put together a winter menu to coax hibernating residents out of their dens and into his dining room.

Variety of foods are at peak and on new menu

Chef Chuck Rachwitz (Rocky), owner and operator of Rocky's of Northville has a new "Winter Spectacular" from which customers can choose from Jan. 23 through March 9.

One new entree is a Venison Stew with braised venison, dried fruit and port wine served with rice pilaf and winter vegetables. "This dish is really killer," said Rocky.

Other entrees include Broiled Scallops, Mallard Duck, Bouillabaisse, Barbecued Bluefish, Shrimp and Lobster Fettucine, and Paella.

A movie based on a video game?

Streetfighter II provides inspiration for latest Van Damme action-adventure

A movie based on a video game?

Yup. Jean-Claude Van Damme's latest action-adventure thriller "Streetfighter" is based on Street Fighter II, the video game from CAPCOM.

In the Universal Pictures release, Van Damme (Hard Target, Timecop) and the late Raul Julia (Presumed Innocent, The Addams Family) wage a no-holds-barred battle of strength and skill for the fate of humanity.

Van Damme plays Colonel Guile, an Allied Nations commando who leads an unlikely band of street fighters on a covert mission to rescue relief workers from the psychotic, self-styled warlord General M. Bison (Julia).

Ming-Na Wen (The Joy Luck Club) also stars as television reporter Chun-Li Zang, who has her own hidden agenda for wanting to see Bison destroyed, while Australian singing sensation Kylie Minogue portrays Guile's lieutenant, Cammy.

Making his directing debut with "Street Fighter" is will known action-adventure writer Steven de Souza (Die Hard, Die Hard 2, 48 HRS., Commando), who also wrote the original screenplay, inspired by characters from the video game.

"Street Fighter" begins in a world on the brink of chaos, when General M. Bison's bold move in taking hostages pushes an already incendiary crisis to the brink of global conflict. Meanwhile, Guile's rescue mission remains stalled until the hostages' location can be determined — so Guile and his British intelligence officer, Cammy, must recruit two unlikely heroes in an audacious plan to locate the sadistic general's futuristic secret fortress. But their entire plan is nearly derailed at the last moment when GNT news correspondent Chun-Li Zang intervenes — and she wants more than just a story.

The action reaches fever pitch as Guile, Bison and their collective forces face off in a highly-charged climactic battle — pitting good against evil with the fate of the free world hanging in the balance.

The movie draws its inspiration from characters introduced in one of the most successful interactive games of all time. Filmmaker Edward Pressman, whose body of work includes "Wall Street," The Crow" and "Conan the Barbarian," first learned of the Street Fighter phenomenon from a business associate. The more people Pressman spoke to, the more he became aware of Street Fighter's significance and popularity.

Even so, as an experienced producer, Pressman knew that translating an electronic game into a feature-length motion picture could be especially challenging.

"I knew one of the biggest problems would be to find a story that would incorporate many of the Street Fighter characters and do so in a plausible fashion," said Pressman. "Steven de Souza was the key."

As a screenwriter, de Souza has displayed a great sense of humor, wit and flair for exciting action films. He has had 14 screenplays produced in the last 12 years, including "48 HRS.," "Die Hard" and Die Hard 2," "The Running Man," "Commando," "The Flintstones" and Pressman's forthcoming "Judge Dredd." Not only was de Souza the filmmaker's first choice to write the screenplay, Pressman wanted him to direct as well. It was high praise from a producer who has brought to the screen the work of Oliver Stone, Brian De Palma and other leading filmmakers.

And, as it turned out, de Souza was already very familiar with the game when approached by Pressman. "Between the comic book, the model kits and the arcade game, my teenage son probably put his entire allowance for the last year into Street Fighter," de Salza told Pressman. He quickly confirmed his interest in the film and within a matter of days had outlined a story incorporating the Street Fighter characters.

De Souza was warned that films based on electronic games were risky ventures, both artistically and commercially. But the writer-director sees the game as source material, providing the same kind of inspiration as a novel or news event. "There's a perception that you can't make a movie out of an electronic game, but you can make a movie out of a novel or a Broadway play," said de Souza. "Plenty of bad movies have been made out of novels, but critics don't say, 'Well, its' terribly unwise to base a movie on a novel.'

"Multimedia games are part of a relatively new entertainment medium, and just because there has been an initial struggle to translate that medium to film doesn't mean that the genre should be abandoned as source material. And when I came aboard, Street Fighter had already moved out of computers and into print and collectibles, demonstrating both its popularity and its flexibility."

In translating it to the screen, de Souza sought to create a more nostalgic and wholesome action picture, like the one he himself enjoyed as a teenager. "I especially loved films like "The Longest Day, "The Great Escape" and "The Guns of Navarone."

The story that de Souza developed is not impossible to imagine — a diabolical dictator brutalizes his people and brings the globe to the brink of armed conflict. "From Bosnia to Somalia to Haiti to Operation Desert Storm, we've seen how these regional tyrants can rock world affairs," said de Souza. "It's not much of an exaggeration to say that Street Fighter's General Bison has more than a few real-life counterparts."

Jean-Claude Van Damme has ample opportunity to demonstrate his kickboxing prowess in the action adventure 'Streetfighter.'

Spikers place 10th at Walled Lake Central tourney

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

It took the Mustang volleyball team a little while to get rolling Saturday at the Walled Lake Central Invitational.

But once Northville High found its groove, it was all uphill. The spikers finished second in the consolation bracket of the tournament after finishing last in their qualifying pool.

Coach Laura Murray said it was nice for her players to collect a medal for their efforts. But, she added, there's still plenty of room for improvement.

"We played well in the afternoon," she said. "We didn't play well in the morning."

Northville ended up 10th out of 16 schools at the tournament. Jenison, from the Lansing area, took first place while host Walled Lake Central was second.

Murray said the Mustangs are making progress.

The team had a rough start to the season before Christmas with a loss to Novi and a disappointing performance in the Gull Lake Tournament.

So the holidays came at a good time for the team. Murray said she was able to work on problem areas with the team.

"We're improved," she commented. "We had a good few days of practice. We were focused on what we needed to work on.

"I'm feeling a lot more comfortable with the team."

After pool play schools went into a "gold" or "silver" tournament. Northville, along with third and fourth place teams from the other pools, played in the silver.

Matches were formatted in the best two out of three games.

The Mustangs faced Rochester in the opening round of the consolation. Northville won in three games, 15-10, 13-15 and 15-12.

Having already played three matches, Murray said fatigue started to set in during the Rochester match.

"The role of our bench became important," she said.

Junior Courtney Todd came in to give her team a spark. While she wasn't flashy on the court, Murray said she played solid volleyball.

"She had some good hustle and didn't make any errors," she added.

Lauren Poole also had an outstanding match. In game two, for example, she had 19 hitting attempts with no errors.

"That was fantastic," said Murray.

Northville advanced to the semi-final and whipped Rochester Adams 15-6, 15-11. The two teams faced each other earlier in the day during pool play.

"We knew what they were like," Murray said. "We seemed to have more energy. Adams was tired."

Fan support helped energize the Mustangs. So did the play of Jill Holloway and Sarah Gregerson.

Holloway served for seven straight points in game one and Gregerson was a perfect four for four in kill shots.

After 10 hours of volleyball, the Mustangs closed the day with Birmingham Groves in the consolation final.

Northville dropped the first game 15-10. Gregerson continued to play well and registered five kills. Tami Taylor did a good job of setting in that game as well.

The Mustang bench was the story of a 15-10 game two win. Jenny Redden came on to score six points on her serve while Jodie Brown was solid as well.

"Both had controlled hitting and serving," Murray said.

Birmingham won the final game 15-13. Northville just ran out of gas.

"We couldn't get to every ball," said Murray. "We were tired."

The Mustangs started pool play at 9 a.m. with Rochester Adams and split a pair of games, 15-11, 8-15.

Renee Olin played well in the opener with seven serving points and two aces. Adams dominated game two with six aces.

"They served incredibly hard," said Murray.

Northville lost twice to Westland John Glenn in round two of pool play, 16-14, 15-9. Erin Hornberger and Angie Groves highlighted the match with solid serving in game one and two, respectively.

Southfield Lathrup was the Mustangs final pool opponent. The two schools split, with Southfield winning the opener 15-10 and Northville taking game two 15-5.

Groves, who was named to the all-tournament team, was the star of the win. She served for six points, including an ace, had a kill and two digs.

Grapplers fall 42-30 to Churchill

By SCOTT DANIEL

In high school wrestling, it seems, there is never a happy medium between youth and experience.

Most teams boast either a veteran or a green lineup. Northville High definitely sported the latter Thursday in falling to Livonia Churchill at home 42-30.

Out of the 13 weight divisions, the Mustangs started six freshmen and one sophomore. Just two seniors were in the lineup

While excellent wrestlers can be found in those underclassmen groups, they're the exception. So it came as no surprise to Northville co-coach Garnet Potter that his team struggled against the Chargers.

He said the Mustangs may have to take their lumps for awhile.

"It's going to be a long season," Potter said. "But hopefully we'll keep getting better."

Northville will try to get back on the winning track today at Farmington Hills Harrison (6:30 p.m.)

The Mustangs were at a disadvantage before even starting the match with Livonia Thursday. Sam Saran, a 106-pounder and one of the team's best performers, was out with an injury.

Northville started off strongly despite Saran's absence.

Josh Tarrow pinned Livonia's Ryan Palmer in 1:51. The freshman used a headlock to subdue his opponent.

"It was a pretty basic move," said Potter.

Rick Torrenz, another freshman, filled in for Saran at 106. He fell by a pin at 3:52 to Shanael Hague.

"I thought he wrestled pretty good," Potter said of Torrenz.

At 112 pounds, Nick Sriranan pinned Sadiq Hague in the last second of the match.

"He was beating him pretty good," Potter said. "He used a half-nelson to get him on his back."

James Kyle collected a void at 119 pounds. Jason Keranen lost to Josh Banks, a state qualifier from a year ago, by a pin at 1:53.

"That's the best I've seen him wrestle," said Potter. "I think it will help his confidence."

Mike Scappaticci got a pin for Northville as he stopped Churchill 142-pounder Nate Muchow in 3:28. Joe Scappaticci took a pin in 2:53 over Brian Paczyszen.

Northville, which led 30-18 at that point, was shut out the rest of the way.

Wes Marland was pinned at 160 pounds as was freshman Brian Grider at 172 and Shawn Wilber at 185. The Mustangs voided at 215 and Nick Bowersox was pinned at heavyweight by Bob Fowler in 5:50.

Cagers beat Raiders 57-45

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Never let it be said that Northville High doesn't know how to rebound from a bad loss.

After falling to Brighton by a dozen earlier in the week, the Mustangs returned to form Friday and took a 57-45 win over North Farmington on the road. Northville led by 14 at halftime and never looked back.

"We weren't real happy with that performance," coach Larry Taylor said of the Brighton game. "But the kids responded and played much better."

Northville improved to 4-2 on the season. Friday's game was the Mustangs' Western Lakes Activities Association opener.

"We're not where we need to be yet," said Taylor. "But we're heading in the right direction."

North Farmington, which plays in the conference's Lakes Division, wasn't exactly a new rival for Northville this season. The Mustangs crushed North by 25 a few weeks ago in their Christmas tournament.

In their defense, the Raiders were missing their best player, point guard John Kelly, in that game. He made a big difference Friday.

With Northville ahead 34-20 at halftime, the North Farmington star led a comeback. Kelly scored 15 of his game-high 19 in the second half, including four three-pointers.

LARRY TAYLOR

"He's a good shooter," said Taylor. "With him in the lineup they're a much better team."

The Raiders cut Northville's lead to 11 by the end of the third quarter. Neither school had much success in the frame as North Farmington scored just nine points and the Mustangs six.

Taylor said he knew his team had to assert itself going into the fourth.

"We knew we had to control the tempo," he commented.

Northville pushed the ball early and got some easy baskets. North Farmington fought back but never got closer than about 10 points, said Taylor.

JOHN GLENN PREVIEW

After a Tuesday match up with Novi this week, the Mustangs will host Westland John Glenn Friday. Regarded as the team to beat in the WLAA, the Rockets will provide Northville's biggest test of the season – literally.

Westland features 6-foot-11 Guy Rucker, a University of Iowa signee.

"He was a good player last year," said Taylor.

Across the board, he added, John Glenn will have size and strength on the Mustangs.

Gymnastics squad opens season with a win

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

For most young teams, winning isn't something that happens very often.

Older, more experienced squads often rule the roost no matter what sport you're talking about. But don't tell that to the Northville/Novi gymnastics team.

Composed mainly of freshmen, the combined squad had little trouble defeating Walled Lake 133.7 to 130.7 on Jan. 4. According to coach Barb Winn, her team has experience despite its youth.

"We have a young team because we have a lot of freshmen," she said. "But a lot of the kids have background."

It was the combined team's first meet. After years of offering the sport, Northville didn't field a team last season because of a lack of student interest. This winter marks Novi's first participation in gymnastics.

The squad, which is divided equally with athletes from both schools, is competing in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Traditionally a strong gymnastics league, Winn thinks her team will be in contention for a title.

"We'll be right up in the pack with (Salem and Canton)," she added. "It's going to be real tight."

The coach was excited about her team's first performance. Winn pointed out that Northville/Novi's score was the first step in qualifying for regionals.

"You have to score 116 points or better four times during the season for regionals," she said. "We shouldn't have a problem. Starting at 133, I can't imagine our scores going down."

Northville/Novi started last week's meet strongly.

Stacey Williamson and Gina Spinazzi each scored an 8.50 in vaulting to tie for second place. Erica Winn took third with 8.45.

On the uneven bars, Winn was Northville's high scorer with an 8.85. Spinazzi and Williamson tied for fourth place with 7.9.

"The duel meet was very close after vaulting and bars," said coach Winn.

Northville/Novi pulled away in the final two events. The first of those was the balance beam.

Williamson took second place with an 8.65 while Gina Spagnoli was third with an 8.40. Winn had a fine performance in the floor exercise to take first with an 8.85. Spinazzi was second at 8.75 and Williamson fourth with a score of 8.6.

"We're strongest in the floor exercise," said Winn.

Besides the athletes who placed in the top four, the Northville/Novi entire squad competed and helped garner the victory. It includes Katie Bucrek, Dana Ghedotte and Stephanie Manza.

The team will host Westland John Glenn at Northville High today at 7 p.m.

Mustang tankers fall 58-44 to Detroit CC; Western Lakes season opens with Livonia

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

If you're glad that the holidays are over and done with you aren't the only one.

While Northville High swim coach Mark Heiden isn't exactly a Scrooge, the festive season means a long layoff for some of his athletes. And that translates to sluggish performances such as the Mustangs delivered in a 58-44 duel meet loss to Detroit Catholic Central Thursday.

"The kids who worked out (over break) were in great shape," said Heiden. "The ones that hadn't worked out were a little rusty."

About half the team made it for workouts over the holidays. Those who showed up faced some hard work, Heiden said.

"We pounded real hard over Christmas," he added. "We went for three to four hours and did nine to 11,000 yards."

Thursday's loss was a non-conference defeat. Northville opens its WLAA season today against Livonia Stevenson on the road at 7 p.m. The Mustangs are at North Farmington Tuesday, also at 7 p.m.

> "The kids who worked out (over break) were in great shape. The ones that hadn't worked out were a little rusty."
> MARK HEIDEN
> Swimming coach

"We've got our three toughest meets to start the season," said Heiden.

Catholic Central showed how tough it would be early on Thursday. The Shamrocks won the 200-yard medley relay while Northville was second with the team of Craig and Jeff Sieving, James Elsesser and Sean Hollister in 2:00.1.

In the 200-yard freestyle, Evan Whitbeck was second in 1:57.47. Jeff Sieving won the 200 IM in 2:07.86.

Northville placed first and second in diving. Chris Anderson won with 239.97 points and Dan Basse was second with 112.75.

Jeff Sieving won his second event in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 57.90. Craig Sieving was second in 1:00.7.

In the 100-yard freestyle, Elsesser finished third with a time of 56.54. Whitbeck snagged first in the 500 freestyle with a time of 5:16.28.

The team of Jeff Sieving, Elsesser, Anderson and Whitbeck finished second in the 200-yard freestyle relay (1:38.16). Craig Sieving took second in the 100 backstroke in 1:01.89.

Hollister was a winner in the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:07.43. Justin Schlanser finished third in 1:10.63.

Northville place third in the 400-yard freestyle relay. The team of Craig Sieving, Chris Bond, Whitbeck and Hollister in 3:50.14.

Judges get a wide variety of tastes at the festival's chilli contest.

Chilly Willy Festival coming soon

By CINDY STEWART
Special Writer

Well, the holidays are over and we survived. January is here with colder temperatures, stronger winds and lots of snow. The way to enjoy it is to celebrate winter at the eighth annual Chilly Willy Winter Festival on Saturday, Jan. 21, at the Novi Civic Center.

Where else can Novi residents go for great, free, family fun and entertainment.

New this year for the Chilly Willy Festival will be ice carving. The artists will answer questions while creating beautiful sculptures. This takes place at the main entrance of the Novi Civic Center from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Sponsors include JCK and Associates, Keford Collision and Community EMS. Any area businesses which would like to sponsor an ice carving should call 347-0400.

On Saturday, Jan. 21, you can start your morning off by bringing the family for a pancake breakfast. Pancakes, sausage, juice, coffee and hot cocoa will be sold for a low price to benefit Novi Youth Assistance. With your stomach full, you'll be ready for a day of indoor and outdoor activities guaranteed to make you enjoy a winter day, regardless of the weather.

"Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow." When you think Chilly Willy, naturally you think snow, but it isn't necessary for every event. Due to safety reasons, snow is a must for the annual Sno-Ball Softball Tournament, slated to begin at the Power Park softball fields at 8 a.m. Teams are still needed, so if you're the courageous sort and like to play ball in frigid temperatures, you can still sign up.

If you're not brave enough to play Sno-Ball, come on down to the field and watch these softball fanatics or enter the snowman building contest. Take a hayride around the Civic Center and Power Park area, enter the Score-O and Super Score-O contests, go sledding, or ice skate with your friends and family (weather permitting).

After watching or playing a few innings in the snow, the winter weather will help you work up an appetite for delicious, spicy, hot chili cooked up by our area Novi restaurants at the Novi Civic Center. These restaurants come back year after year to compete in the Chilly Willy chili cook-off. This year the restaurants confirmed to date are Kosch's Tavern and Eatery, Nifty Norman's, Mr. B's Farm, Matt Brady's Food and Spirits, DaVinci's at the Novi Hilton, Red Robin, Copper Mug, Koney Island Inn. There's still plenty of time to enter.

Chili tasting will be open to the public from 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. for 25 cents per taste or the purchase of a People's Choice ticket. That ticket will allow you to taste all the entries and cast your ballot for the People's Choice Award.

Distinguished judges will also award prizes later in the day for first, second and third places for the best chili recipe, as well as for the best dressed booth.

The fun continues with "imagination stations" for kids of all ages. These will include "Wood Creations" at station No.1 and "Paint It" at station No. 2. There will also be free face painting courtesy of the Novi 4-H clown group. Card playing enthusiasts can take part in either the Bridge or Euchre tournaments. Adults who want to dress up and display the "best winter spirit" can register for the Old Man/Old Woman contest and try for that special honor.

The special family entertainment finale will be Patty Clark, storyteller, songstress and puppeteer, performing at 2 p.m. Patty's unique voice and talent will be enjoyed by people of all ages. In addition to a delightful performance, everyone will take home their own creation made during the performance.

Infancy a crucial time for good nutrition

Adequate nutrition for children is a concern shared by all parents. Everyone knows the importance of a well-balanced diet from the five basic food groups: breads and cereals, meat, dairy, fruits and vegetables. But when do children need supplementation? This article focuses on potential childhood nutritional deficiencies and how to prevent them.

Infancy is a crucial time for meeting nutritional needs. Although most formulas supply all the necessary vitamins and minerals, make sure the formula contains iron. Iron-fortified formula has significantly decreased the incidence of iron-deficiency anemia among infants in the United States. There is no evidence that iron in commercial formulas contributes to colic or constipation.

Breast-fed infants are provided with the most essential vitamins and minerals through human milk. Since Vitamin D levels in human milk may be inadequate, most pediatricians prescribe a supplement. Usually iron supplementation is necessary as long as the infant receives iron-fortified cereal by six months of age.

All infants need a source of fluoride by two weeks of age. Fluoridated drinking water has reduced the rate of cavities in children by 50 percent or more. Infants fed with powdered or concentrated formulas mixed with water do not need supplementation. Infants who are given ready-to-feed formula require fluoride supplements.

If using bottled water to prepare formula, one should confirm fluoride content levels with the company. Pediatricians also recommend supplementing fluoride in breast-fed infants.

Older children who get sufficient calories from a well-balanced diet generally do not need vitamin or mineral supplements. However, iron deficiency does occur in toddlers who consume too much whole milk – more than 24 ounces a day – instead of eating iron-rich foods. A major cause of excessive milk consumption is delayed weaning from the bottle. It is recommended that children be weaned from the bottle by 18 months of age.

The best indicator of adequate nutrition in children is their continued normal growth in weight and height. It is acceptable for children to eat one food for several days, or to eat well during a growth spurt and then not so well later on.

Ask your pediatrician to show you your child's growth chart to ensure that he or she is growing well despite inconsistent eating. If you have any concerns about your child's growth, your pediatrician may recommend a multivitamin with iron supplement.

Adolescence is a period of rapid growth with increased calorie requirements as well as iron needs. Most adolescents consume an adequate amount of iron in red meat, chicken and fish. Menstruating girls should consider taking an iron supplement to replace iron loss in menstrual fluid. Adolescents who are vegetarian or are dieting should also take an iron supplement.

Calcium intake is also important in adolescents since the skeleton is growing so rapidly. Calcium intake has been decreasing and now averages well below the recommended daily allowance for adolescents. Decreased milk consumption is linked to increased soft drink consumption. Encourage your adolescent to eat calcium-rich foods, such as milk, cheese, yogurt and leafy green vegetables. Thin, adolescent girls should also consider a calcium supplement to reduce the risk of osteoporosis in later years.

If you have any concerns about your child's nutrition, growth or supplement needs, ask your pediatrician or family practice doctor at your child's regular check-up.

Exercise three or more times each week

Barry Franklin

You are changing your living habits in favor of more physical activity. You have made the firm decision that you want to improve your heart and lung fitness and that an exercise program is for you.

You realize that an exercise program is for a lifetime, not just for 10 or 12 weeks, with residual effects that last forever.

How effective your exercise will be depends on how frequently you participate, how intense your efforts are, how long each exercise session lasts and what type of exercise you employ. Let's take those one at a time.

• Frequency: Most experts recommend exercising three to five days per week. How about daily workouts? Additional cardiorespiratory benefits appear to be minimal, and the incidence of injury increases, especially with activities that require running and jumping.

• Intensity: This relates to how vigorously you exert yourself. It is gauged by how fast the heart beats. For most persons, the exercise should be intense enough to raise the heart rate to 70 to 85 percent of the individual's maximal heart rate.

Here's how to estimate it. For persons without heart disease who are not taking cardiac medication, subtract your age from 220. For example, a 50-year-old man has an estimated maximal heart rate of 170. His training heart rate range would be 119 (70 percent) to 145 (85 percent) beats per minute.

• Duration: Sessions should include 15 to 45 minutes of continuous activity at the 70 to 85 percent intensity level. Longer sessions bring little additional improvement. The number of musculoskeletal and orthopedic complications increases disproportionately.

Intensity and duration of training are interrelated. Consequently, programs of low intensity and long duration may yield comparable results to programs of high intensity but shorter duration, provided total caloric costs are similar.

For sedentary, middle-aged adults or cardiac patients, the starting exercise program should be lower intensity and longer.

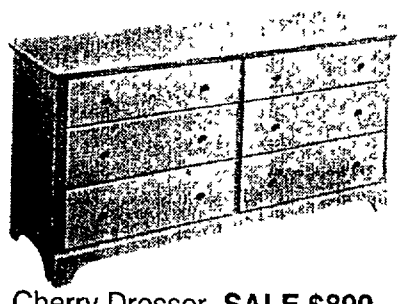

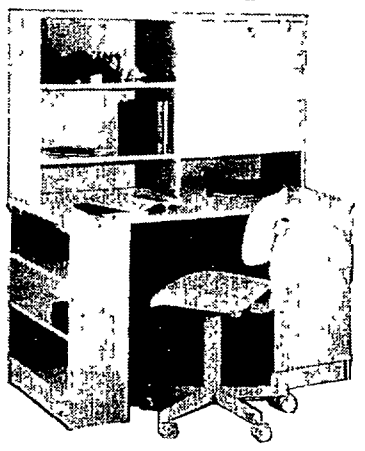

• Mode: Cardiorespiratory fitness is best enhanced by using large muscle groups, which can be maintained continuously and which are rhythmical. Such "aerobic" activities include walking, jogging, bicycling, swimming, rowing, skating, cross-country skiing and rope skipping.

Sudden stop-and-go sprinting activities (anaerobics), as well as heavy lifting and isometric exercises (muscle straining without movement), are less beneficial and more likely to place undue stress on the heart.

Important: Exercise training is specific to muscle groups. Several research studies have shown there is little or no transfer of training adaptation from one muscle group to another. You don't get stronger legs by using your arms, and vice versa. Jogging or running is not enough. Various muscle groups need to be exercised for all-around fitness.

Whatever exercise program you choose, you must continue it regularly.

Cagers beat Raiders by 12

"It will be a tough match up for us," Taylor said.

Northville lost to Westland during the regular season last year but then beat the Rockets in the first round of the league playoffs.

"Last year," said Taylor, "we had the size to match up with them."

John Glenn features a solid backcourt as well. Albert Jones and Savon Hubbard are both quick players who can score.

Taylor said Northville will use a zone defense to hide its height and quickness deficiencies.

Novi whips Hartland

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Friday's 62-41 road victory over Hartland was exactly what the doctor ordered for the Wildcat basketball team – an easy win.

After a tough battle a few days earlier, Novi High needed a game to just sail through. The Eagles obliged.

Jon Wroe, Jim Rose, and Shawn Kelly all scored in double figures in pulling Novi back to the .500 mark at 3-3. Coach Pat Schluter said it was a fine performance by his ball club.

"We took Hartland totally out of the game," he said. "We played smart and rebounded well."

About the only thing the Wildcats didn't do well was shoot free throws. The squad made just 22 of 44 from the charity stripe.

"If we had made our free throws," Schluter said, "we would've really blown them out."

Different Wildcats took turns sparking the offense Friday night.

Kelly started off by scoring eight of his 10 points in the first quarter. The senior led Novi to a 13-10 advantage by the end of the period.

Novi had control of the game by halftime with a 27-18 lead. Wroe made sure that margin got bigger in the third quarter.

The senior shooting guard nailed three three-pointers in a row as the Wildcats skated to a 44-25 bulge to start the fourth. Schluter said the large lead allowed him to play everyone.

"Everybody played and contributed," he added.

Wroe led Novi with 13 points while Rose and Kelly each added 10. Jason Fannon came off the bench to score eight points.

Novi plays at Milford tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m.

WALLED LAKE CENTRAL 72, NOVI 63

The Wildcats returned from Christmas break on Jan. 3 to play Central at home.

Novi trailed the entire game, by as much as 15 at times, but made a strong fourth quarter push.

A shorter, cheaper real estate appraisal

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

Real estate appraisals have become increasingly important in recent months. Now a new, acceptable appraisal is shorter and less expensive than traditional appraisals.

Appraisals are needed when a home is sold and the purchase is financed with a mortgage loan. It's also required when a residence is refinanced or an equity loan is secured by the property.

In many cases, the seller of a home obtains a professional appraisal of the residence at the time it's placed on the market, thus establishing more credibility in the asking price. And when a homeowner petitions a lender to remove monthly charges for private mortgage insurance (PMI) on his loan, a new appraisal is required.

All these appraisals have been expensive. But now property owners have another less expensive option. They can obtain a "limited appraisal" from a highly qualified appraiser — one who holds the prestigious MIA (Member, Appraisal Institute) professional designation.

"For years, member appraisers of the Appraisal Institute were required almost exclusively to write full scope narrative type appraisal reports for client property owners," said James Halliburton, MAI, owner of Halliburton &

Spacious contemporary home home features a family theater

By James McAlexander
Copley News Service

Slender brick columns support a dramatic gabled porch that adds to the visual appeal of the Tamarisk, a large contemporary-country home designed for construction on a good sized parcel of land. Almost all of the rooms in this plan are large. Vaulted ceilings in the entry, guest suite, living room, office and family kitchen add to the sense of spaciousness

One of the home's most interesting features is the family theater, designed to maximize the pleasures of surround sound. Built-in shelves and cabinets provide housing for a big-screen television, electronic stereo equipment, albums, disks, videotapes and the like. These shelves are accessible from the rear, through the utility room

A sunny skylit family kitchen is at the heart of the home. Its brick or tile hearth spans the entire left wall. The wood box has an exterior door and supplies the fireplace in the office as well Conveniences in the kitchen include a freezer, pantry, garden window, appliance center, and an island with vegetable sink.

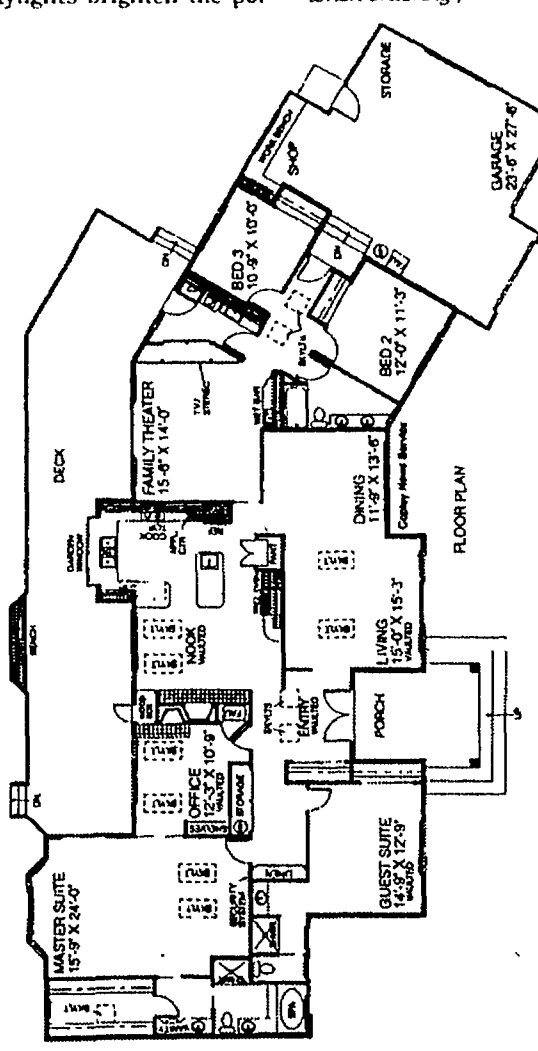

The sumptuous master suite is far more than a bedroom A bayed sitting area expands the rear wall while skylights brighten the portion of the room furthest from the windows. Another skylight, along with a small window, illuminates the deep walk-in closet.

Luxuries in the master bathroom include a spa, an oversize shower and a separately enclosed second vanity. Sliding glass doors open onto a wide deck, and pocket doors offer direct access to the skylit office. A security system is next to the door that leads to the rest of the house. Storage and linen closets make efficient use of space in the hallway.

The small guest suite could double as a second office if both husband and wife do some of their work at home

Secondary bedrooms are at the opposite end of the house. An odd-angled bathroom with twin lavs serves the bedrooms and garage. Utilities are across the hall in another odd-shaped room. The exterior door comes in handy when shoes are muddy from working in the garden.

OUT OF THE CLOSET

By Colleen Newvine
STAFF WRITER

Sipping on a cup of coffee and wiping the sleep from your eyes, it's not always easy to stare into the closet and make a decision on what to wear.

The challenge is compounded if the scene behind the closet door is a tangled mish-mash of crammed-in hanging clothes, piled-up shoes and falling-down sweaters.

It sounds like an item on Mom's spring cleaning list, but it might be time to clean out your closet.

Ron Daly, owner of Fowlerville Lumber, said people's lives are too busy to waste time rooting through a disorganized closet to find something to wear. They want something efficient that helps them focus more time on the important things.

"Closets are a big deal right now," Daly said.

Besides going through the closet and just getting rid of the outfits you can't or won't wear again, many businesses in the area can help revamp the storage system for the stuff you decide to keep.

The proclaimed king of the storage business is California Closet Company.

"We're definitely the Cadillac of the industry," said Marge Murray, office manager for the Detroit-area headquarters in West Bloomfield.

For small-scale redos, California Closet has a retail store in Novi's Twelve Oaks mall. There, those with a do-it-yourself bent will find such items as shoe racks and jewelry organizers in a variety of shapes and sizes.

But when it's going to take more than adding a storage bin, when a total overhaul is really what the doctor ordered, California Closet offers a free in-home estimate in which designers measure up the closet and offer some design suggestions, Murray said.

California Closet has established franchises across the country and around the world in its 17 years in existence, Murray said.

Several locally owned shops also offer in-home design services for the organizationally challenged.

Lisa Teasdale, office manager of South Lyon's Closet-Pro, Inc., said older homes often have very small closets, which presents a challenge for people trying to wedge in an extensive wardrobe.

When people call Closet-Pro, they're looking for new ways to free up storage space and to make their closets work for them.

"They want their closet neat, clean and organized," Teasdale said.

Reorganizing your closet means more than just making it look pretty. It means taking what might be a nonsensical array of shirts, shoes and sweaters and making it functional. If you'd like to tackle the task yourself, here are some considerations to keep in mind:

- Get your shoes at eye level. People have a tendency not to want to bend over, so even if you have a shoe rack waiting to put your footwear in orderly rows on the floor, it won't help if you don't get down to use it. Better solutions might include an over-the-door hanging rack, small shelves or stackable boxes.
- Never stack folded items more than three deep. At some point, you're going to have to get at one of those bottom items and you're going to cause an avalanche. Or you'll have to hurl or jam the top items on the stack, causing them to wrinkle up. If you don't have enough room to have short stacks, try adding another shelf.
- Put like items together. That way, if you're looking for long-sleeved shirts or dress pants, you know where to focus your attention. You might consider grouping colors together, too, to make morning coordination of outfits faster.
- If you haven't worn it in a year, get it out of your closet. Your closet should include your immediate wardrobe, which means those items you wear on a day-to-day basis. Clothes you haven't worn in 10 years should either make their way to a charity or, if you can't bear to part with them, put them someplace else for more permanent storage. This frees up more space for the more regularly owned items.

GARDENING

What's coming in spring seed catalogs, and what will be new and different at garden centers in 1995? Here is a preview of "what's new" in seeds and plants for 1995.

The varieties are listed alphabetically by class, with the seed source listed in parenthesis after the description. Also given at the end of each description is the letter designation of "R" (retail) or "W" (wholesale).

A retail seed company is one from which gardeners may purchase these new varieties directly by mail order or also in stores that carry the variety in seed packets. A wholesale seed company does not sell seed directly to gardeners, but look for these varieties next spring at seed suppliers or as bedding plants at garden centers.

The letter "S" at the end of a description means that slides are available from the National Garden Bureau, 1311 Butterfield Road, Suite 310, Downers Grove, IL 60515; (708) 963-0770.

FLOWERS

Marigold "All Season Discovery" yellow and orange are two new colors added to the series. These large-flowered African, marigolds bloom early, even under long, hot summer days, and are outstanding in the garden or containers (Bodger Seeds Ltd.) W.

Marigold "F1 Antigua Mixture" is an African marigold that features abundant blooms that cover the entire plant. This is an excellent choice for borders, color bowls and mass plantings. The warm color tones contrast attractively with brightly colored geraniums and petunias. These grow 10 to 12 inches tall and recommended planting is on 10-inch centers (Goldsmith Seeds Inc.) W (S).

Pansy F1 "Atlas" series is an all-new series that boasts a large, clear pansy flower. Both the yellow and purple feature a compact habit and extra-large clear flowers. Four additional colors may be added next spring (Bodger Seeds Ltd.) W (S).

Pansy F1 "Fama" series consists of 10 colors and a mix. Extremely uniform for bloom time and habit, it has large, rounded faces that look up (Otis S. Twilley Seed Co.) R.

Garden glossary

Gardening terms can sometimes be very confusing. Here are a few of the more commonly used.

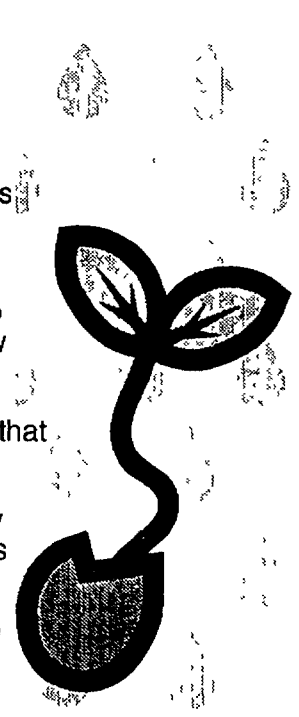

Annual - A plant that completes its life cycle in a year.

Biennial - A plant grown from seed that requires two years to produce fruits, flowers and new seeds.

Deciduous - Any plant or tree that sheds its leaves annually.

Perennial - A plant that usually has a life cycle of several years during which it produces new growth. Trees and shrubs are perennials; so are grasses and some flowers.

Hybrid - The result of crossing two species, or two strains of the same species, to get one that's genetically distinct.

Super-organizing your closet clutter carefully and cleanly

Mike Galla and Mike Teasdale, works strictly with custom-fitted ventilated wire shelving. That type of system circulates air through the clothing and is versatile in its designs, she said.

Marie Karas, office manager at the Kloset Konnection in Howell, said they also stick to the plastic-coating shelving.

She said the designers suggest different systems for a closet depending on who will use it and what the needs are.

Closet systems aren't just for the bedroom. Teasdale said they do a lot of work in laundry rooms, pantries, garages and offices.

In those areas, space can be at a premium and organization is a plus, too.

Generally, the master bedroom has a little more room to work with, and the inhabitants have a greater variety of clothes they need to accommodate, Karas said

Meanwhile, children benefit when the design is simple. Boys, for example, don't really need to hang any full-length items, so the space is better used for something else.

Kids like baskets, where they can just toss in socks and underwear, Daly said. They also like to have shelves in their closets, where they can put sweatshirts, sweaters and other folding items.

Daly doesn't just speak from experiences at Fowlerville Lumber — he has plastic closet systems in his own home. His son doesn't even have a dresser anymore. He just uses the baskets and shelves in his closet.

When figuring out what to do with a child's closet, Daly has simple advice: "If it's not convenient, they won't use it."

Then, it doesn't matter how nice the inter-connected shelves, baskets and hanging poles look — the clothes will still end up on the floor.

Daly said he used wood shelving for his closet and plastic in the kids' rooms, but if he had to do it all over again, he'd probably go with the plastic for himself, too.

He noted that it's not always necessary to pay the money to have someone else do the installation.

"I'm not real mechanical and I was able to put mine in," Daly said. "The hardest one is the first one, when you're figuring out how everything works. After that, it's a snap."

A cheaper real estate appraisal; homeowner help from congress

Co. appraiser firm in Santa Barbara, Calif. "Now there is another option that still meets the high standards of both the Appraisal Institute and the Appraisal Foundation. It's the limited appraisal."

These shorter and less expensive appraisal reports primarily resulted from political pressures to speed up the appraisal process and make them available at lower cost, Halliburton explained. The Appraisal Institute recently adopted a set of regulations for limited appraisals.

If these specific guidelines are followed, the short-form reports are acceptable. And property owners can typically save 20 percent to 30 percent off the fee charged for a full appraisal, according to Halliburton.

"Its use indicates a departure from the scope of work required to complete full appraisals under the Uniform Standards or Professional Appraisal Practice (USPAP)," he said. "Limited appraisals can now be ordered when the assignment calls for something less than, or different from, the work that would be required in performing a full appraisal."

When appraisers prepare and deliver a limited appraisal report they must clearly indicate the extent of the appraisal process performed, Halliburton noted. But in many cases, such an appraisal is adequate for its intended objective.

"To determine whether or not a limited appraisal is appropriate, it's recommended that the property owner and appraiser first discuss its objective and market conditions involved," he said. "It depends a great deal on the type of report required and the type of real estate to be appraised."

Most appraisers base their fees on the time and cost estimated to prepare for and complete the appraisal report. The savings in time and expense for a limited appraisal is significant, Halliburton said.

"When you talk to an appraiser about a possible assignment, he can give you an estimate of your savings, depending on the precise type of appraisal that is right for your project."

The regulations for a limited appraisal are contained in the Statement on Appraisal Standards Number 7, published by the Appraisal Standards Board of the Appraisal Foundation. For information, write to the Appraisal Foundation, 1029 Vermont Avenue, N.W., Suite 900, Washington, DC 20005-3517.

Halliburton has been a member of the Appraisal Institute and owned his own firm since 1966.

Q. Will the new Congress take a more helpful approach to the needs of homeowners in 1995?

A. Congressional leaders have expressed their intention to more actively address these needs. Bruce Hahn, president of the American Homeowners Foundation, recently said:

"There is substantial evidence that homeowner property rights have been significantly eroded over the last several decades by legislation and regulation, most of it environmentally oriented, at the state and local levels. By including a private property rights protection title in their economic package, the new Congress will assure that this important issue receives further investigation and public attention."

Q. Is it customary for a mortgage lender or broker to give the home buyer a complete list of closing costs before signing all the papers?

A. It's not only customary, it's required by the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. The disclosure provides the buyer with an itemized list of charges for all closing costs.

It's important to study and understand each of these cost items before signing the documents. Ask questions, even at the risk of sounding uninformed. This sometimes reveals errors in the documents' preparation. And, of course, it makes the property buyer aware of each expense item.

Questions may be used in future columns; personal responses should not be expected. Send inquiries to James M. Woodard, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190.

1995: A look ahead at the new offerings for flowers and vegetables

ette Mixed" is a mixture of light-pinks, light-lavender shades and a cream color, not found in previous mixtures. The medium-size flowers are about 2 inches across and the plants are extremely floriferous. The plant habit is dwarf and compact, and they are cold and heat resistant. These are impressive when used in mass plantings in early spring flower beds (Sakata Seed America) W (S).

The 1995 All America Selections Bedding Plant Award winner, Petunia F1 "Celebrity Chiffon Morn" is a single floribunda type and has a soft pastel-pink color with a delicate topping of cream and white in the center. The blooms are approximately 2 inches across and plants grow to about 28 inches in height. This eye-catching color blends or contrasts with just about any other color in the garden, making it ideal for bedding use or to call attention to a garden feature (Earl May Seed & Nursery L.P.) R (S).

A 1995 All America Selections Flower Award winner, Petunia F1 "Purple Wave" introduces a new class of petunias. Purple Wave grows to no more than 4 to 6 inches tall, but it spreads horizontally to 2 to 4 inches. It's the first petunia with a ground-cover habit. The deep-purple blooms are 2 inches across, and the plants are vigorous and drought tolerant. Perfectly adaptable to baskets and window boxes that tend to dry out rapidly, Purple Wave is both heat and weather tolerant (Earl May Seed & Nursery L.P.) R (S).

A 1995 All America Selections Flower Award winner, Rudbeckia hirta "Indian Summer" produces the largest blooms in its class. The single or semi-double golden-yellow blooms are 6 to 9 inches across and serve gardeners well as cuts. Plants reach 3 to 4 feet tall, but due to a basal branching habit, do not require staking. Relatively disease and pest free, Indian Summer is easy to grow and likes a full sun location (Earl May Seed & Nursery L.P., and Charles Lilly Co.) R (S).

Salvia "Sizzler Purple" is an addition to the Sizzler series, bringing the separate colors up to six. It features stately spikes of a deep-purple color, and is excellent as a medium-to-tall accent in the garden or in containers (Clause) W (S).

Schizanthus F1 "Royal Pierrot Red" is a compact and uniform Schizanthus with a good red color. One of a series, it is ideal as a potting plant. The Royal Pierrot series is the first one available in separate colors: white, violet, purple, pink and red (Royal Sluis Ornamentals) W (S).

Snapdragon "Liberty Hybrid Mixed Colors" features large, brightly colored florets on graceful spikes. Very sturdy and early, the long, shapely spikes and full color range of this formula mixture make this an outstanding semidwarf variety for garden beds (Advance Seed Co.) R.

Vinca "Passion" has deep orchid-purple flowers with contrasting yellow centers. An abundance of flowers 2 inches or larger, with overlapping petals, are produced earlier than Tropicanas. Upright and branching, it is tolerant of heat and poor, dry soil. Ideal for garden beds (Geo. W. Park Seed Co.) R.

VEGETABLES

The habanero is an extremely pungent pepper approximately 50 times hotter than regular jalapeno peppers, making it one of the world's hottest peppers. Fruits are small, about 1 by 1 inch, wrinkled and tapered to a point. Fruit color is light green to start, changing to orange at full maturity (Advance Seed Co.) R (S).

Hybrid pepper "Orobelle" is actually two bell peppers in one. When picked early, it's a green pepper; when picked later, it's a golden bell pepper. It's always superior and sweeter than standard green varieties. It continuously sets fruit for prolonged harvesting. The 3- to 4-lobed fruits have thick walls and it is resistant to TMV, Potato Virus Y and Stip, a physiological ripening disease (Rogers Seed Co.) W (S).

Hybrid squash "Enterprise" is a straight-neck squash that produces big yields of very smooth, intense-yellow fruits about 41 days after planting. It is a medium-size plant that is excellent for home gardens. It is mildew resistant, and very prolific, which allows for multiple pickings. A very dependable squash with superior quality (Rogers Seed Co.) W.

Squash "Pay Day" is a new hybrid golden zucchini type. It has a vigorous plant habit and fruit uniformity, with reduced leaf and stem spines. It is adaptable to nearly all squash-growing regions (Otis S. Twilley Seed Co.) R.

Tomato "Better Bush Improved Hybrid" is the best of the new ISI (indeterminate short-internode) tomatoes.

It is an attractive, compact, stocky plant with the appearance of a patio-type tomato, but with big, luscious 4-inch fruits that have "real tomato" flavor. Juicy and meaty with high sugar content, Better Bush Improved grows to about 48 inches with a strong central stem that needs little stalking. It is excellent in a small garden or in large containers, and has VFFN disease resistance. It matures in 68 days and produces until frost (Geo. W. Park Seed Co.) R (S).

Tomato "Yellow Brandywine" is a richly flavored yellow tomato (Johnny's Selected Seeds) R.

Tomato "Super Tasty" hybrid combines the Big Boy aroma, deep-red color inside and out, and a juicy-tender texture that is without equal. Semibushy plants are exceptionally healthy, very productive and space saving. Savory 7- to 9-ounce fruits are produced in about 70 days (W. Atlee Burpee Co.) R (S).

Tomato "Super Boy Hybrid 785" gives impressive yields of medium-large, round, firm fruits. A determinate variety, it has VFFNAS disease resistance. This tomato is excellent for making salsa (Advance Seed Co.) R.

CLOSING COSTS DEDUCTIONS

QUESTION: I signed a lot of checks during the closing of the purchase of our home. Can you tell me which closing costs are deductible from my income tax?

ANSWER: Property taxes are usually pro-rated so that both the buyer and seller each pay the taxes for the portion of the year that each owns the property. Each may deduct this amount. Another deductible item is interest charged to the seller on the mortgage up to the date of closing. Also deductible as interest is the amount charged as points.

Fire insurance, FHA mortgage insurance, and charges for rent for occupancy before closing are not deductible.

TEST YOUR DETECTOR FOR LIFE!

Your smoke detector has the power to save your life. Or does it? If you haven't tested your smoke detector lately, it may not be working. And that's a risk you can't afford to take.

Working smoke detectors give us early warning of a fire, providing extra time to escape safely. But they can't do their job if we haven't done ours - monthly testing to make sure they're working.

Test all the smoke detectors in your home. For the life of the detector and for the lives of your loved ones.

Don't gamble with your life and assume your smoke detectors are working. Test each one, every month, so you'll know they'll be ready to protect you and your family if there's a fire.

Tax Tips You Can Use

Both the Individual Income Tax rate and the Single Business Tax rate have been lowered this year by the Governor and the State Legislature. Because these changes took place on May 1, the 1994 individual income tax rate and calendar year 1994 single business tax rate will be a blended rate.

For 1994 only, the rate used to calculate your individual income tax will be 4.47%. In 1995, the rate will be reduced to 4.4%.

For single business tax payers, the 1994 calendar year blended rate is 2.3375%. If your business is on a fiscal year that does not coincide with the calendar year, please check the new SBT tax forms for the annual rate which applies to your business.

Homeowners should be aware that, because local school property taxes were lower in 1994 than in 1993, their Homestead Property Tax Credit may also be less for 1994. The credit is calculated based on the property taxes levied on your homestead in 1994 and your household income, which must be below $82,650 to qualify. Because property taxes have been cut by the provisions of Proposal A, your total property tax bill will be less in the calculation of the credit.

Homeowners will continue to qualify for the credit up to a maximum of $1,200, but officials remind those who have received the full credit in the past that the 1994 credit may be less if their property taxes were significantly less.

Renters who also qualify for the Homestead Property Tax Credit should be aware that the figure used for calculating the credit has been increased from 17% to 20% of annual rent paid, giving renters additional savings.

For more information about these topics contact your tax accountant or call (800) 487-7000

Akropolis owner undaunted by town's reputation

By SCOTT DANIEL
Staff Writer

It's hard to find anyone in the Detroit metropolitan area that doesn't love Greektown.

From the desert shops to fine restaurant's, it's one of the city's biggest attractions. While many folks may not know it, Northville has its own small slice of Greektown – namely the Akropolis Cafe

The eatery brings the best of Monroe Street to the heart of downtown Stuffed grape leaves, octopus and mousaka are just a few of the items that give Akropolis Cafe its authentic Greek style.

According to co-owner Bob Kozaitis, total customer satisfaction is the restaurant's goal.

"We're trying to make a nice atmosphere to come into," he said. "We want patrons to be totally relaxed and know that they will be taken care of."

Akropolis Cafe, which was previously known as the MainCentre Grill, opened its doors in early September Kozaitis said city residents have responded favorably to the establishment.

"Everyone that's come in likes the changes and loves the food," he added

If experience counts for anything, the restaurant should be in good hands.

Besides Kozaitis, who has worked in the food business for years, Akropolis Cafe is owned by Angelo Fanaras, Thomas Goulas and Ed Ritenour. Fanaras runs the Old Parthenon in Greektown, Goulas the Honey Tree in Farmington Hills and Ritenour owned the MainCentre Grill

"We are here to make this place work," said Kozaitis. "We want to be a part of the community."

Word about the restaurant has spread slowly. Parking was a problem early on with construction tying up spots

But those headaches are a thing of the past, according to Kozaitis

"There's no reason not to come," he said. "We have plenty of parking"

With the likes of Genitti's, McKinnon's and Little Italy, many restaurateurs 'would've been scared of the competition in town. But Kozaitis said the variety of dining venues has actually helped his business

"The nice thing about Northville is that there is so many nice restaurants," he said "If people

MESC targets long-term joblessness

The Michigan Legislature has approved a measure that requires workers who face long-term joblessness to participate in special efforts to help them find new employment

F. Robert Edwards, director of the Michigan Employment Security Commission, said recently the state legislature has approved an amendment to the state's unemployment insurance law mandating that dislocated workers participate in special re employment efforts in order to receive jobless benefits.

The measure moves on to the governor and will become effective, once he signs the legislation

In late November, the MESC began "profiling" new unemployment benefit claimants, trying to identify those who face long-term unemployment These workers are scheduled for additional re employment assistance to help them find new jobs.

Federal law requires all states to set up a profiling system and to compel claimants to take part as an eligibility requirement for unemployment benefits. Michigan had to amend its unemployment insurance law to make participation mandatory

"I view profiling as more than just another requirement for unemployment benefits. It is a serious aid for getting workers into a new job quickly," Edwards said "By identifying candidates for additional employment services early, many will be able to find work faster than they could have on their own"

Those identified as likely to use up their jobless benefits and unlikely to return to work without help will be referred to the MESC for orientation Afterwards, they will be sent to a service provider for such re employment services as employment counseling, testing, job search workshops, job clubs and resume writing assistance.

"By the time profiled claimants receive their first unemployment checks, the MESC will likely contact them about the program," Edwards said. "In fact, we expect to meet our standard – first contact by the first check – within a few months of the program's start-up."

Claimants selected for the program who refuse to participate will become ineligible for unemployment benefits They will remain ineligible until they agree to join the program

The rules for claiming dependents

Money Management

When you prepare your tax return, don't overlook valuable tax breaks you earn for supporting family and other household members.

In addition to a personal exemption for yourself and your spouse (if you file a joint return), you may be entitled to claim dependent exemptions for other people you support, reports the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants. To do so, you must pass a series of five tests that determine whether someone qualifies as your dependent.

RELATIVE, HOUSEHOLD MEMBER

To pass the test for qualifying as a member of your household, a person must be either a relative or someone who lives with you on a full-time basis.

For tax purposes, the definition of a relative includes just about everyone you would consider a relation including your natural or legally-adopted children; stepchildren; parents and grandparents; stepfathers and stepmothers; brothers and sisters; half brothers and half sisters; stepbrothers and stepsisters; aunts and uncles; nieces and nephews; and in-laws.

Cousins are the only notable exception to this relatively broad list of those who qualify as relatives.

However, don't assume that a person has to be related to you to qualify as a tax dependent.

Someone who is simply a friend can be your tax dependent as long as he or she is a full-time member of your household for the entire year and passes the other four tests for qualifying as a dependent.

GROSS INCOME

Generally, the person you are claiming as a dependent can't have gross income that is equal to or more than the amount of the personal exemption, $2,450 for 1994. For the purposes of this test, gross income means all income that is taxable. It does not include non-taxed items, such as gifts, insurance proceeds and tax-exempt municipal bonds.

There is an important exception to this test. The gross income requirement does not apply to your dependent child who, at the end of the year, is either under 19 years of age or is a full-time student under age 24.

In general, a full-time student is defined as one who attends school full-time during at least five months of the tax year.

Regardless of how much a child under age 19 or a full-time student under age 24 earns, you can claim him or her as a dependent, as long as the other dependency tests are met.

SUPPORT

Generally, to claim someone as a dependent, you must provide more than half of the dependent's total support (i.e., what it costs him or her to live during the year). Typical items of support include food, clothing, medical and dental care, school tuition, child care expenses, recreation, transportation and other similar necessities. When calculating the support you provide for someone living with you, include the fair rental value of the housing you provide. Fair value is what you could expect a stranger to pay for housing.

Sometimes, particularly in the case of adult children supporting parents, two or more persons together provide more than 50 percent of a dependent's support. The providers must agree among themselves as to which one will take the exemption for the year. The person who claims the exemption must provide more than 10 percent of the dependent's support and the multiple support agreement (Form 2120) must be filed with his or her tax return.

CITIZENSHIP

The person you claim as a dependent must be a U.S. citizen, U.S. resident, U.S. national, a resident of Canada or Mexico or, in some cases, a legally-adopted child of U.S. citizens or nationals.

JOINT RETURN

This situation generally arises when a son or daughter you've been supporting marries. If the newly-married husband and wife files a joint return, you may not claim an exemption even if all other tests are met. There is one exception to the joint return rule. If the couple is not required to file a return, but does so solely for the proposes of claiming a refund of withheld taxes, you may still claim the exemption, providing the other tests are satisfied.

Claiming dependents can be complicated If you're not sure whether someone you are supporting meets the qualifications for a dependency exemption, you may want to consult a CPA or another tax professional.

Ten steps to climbing out of debt

By MICHAEL KELLY

The 1994 holiday season saw a strange phenomenon; instead of buying everything in sight, some people actually stuck to their budgets and saved money! Although owners of retail stores may not have been happy about this, those individuals who woke up New Year's Day knowing they wouldn't be facing a pile of holidays bills feel pretty good about it.

Unfortunately, not everyone showed such restraint. Many millions of Americans did go into debt for the holidays. Many of them added their holiday debt to an already unmanageable pile of debt from earlier spending. What will the new year hold for them?

"One more chance to change their spending habits," according to Michael Kelly, Senior Director of Information for the Michigan Credit Union League (MCUL). According to Kelly, "People are beginning to realize that they can't keep spending more than they earn. In fact, there are encouraging signs that many Americans are starting to realize the urgent need to start saving for tomorrow."

But for today, says Kelly, the key is to get out of debt. The Michigan Credit Union League offers 10 concrete steps to get out of debt in 1995.

• Understand that credit is not more money. If your credit card has a $5,000 limit, you don't have $5,000. You only have the right to rent $5,000 and you'll pay a very high price for that right. Credit cards are the original "rent-to-own" scheme.

• If you're going to use a credit card, make sure it doesn't have a high interest rate. Some people are still carrying cards with interest rates of 19 percent or higher. With a little shopping around you ought to be able to find a card at 14 percent or below. Credit unions have traditionally had better rates than other programs but use the phone to compare.

• Stop using credit. People find it easier to spend when they pull that plastic out of their wallet but in the long run, it's cheaper to pay cash. If you can't control your credit card spending, cut them up and throw them away. If you feel the need to carry at least one card for emergencies, put a rubber band around it to remind you that big sales don't qualify as emergencies.

• Sit down and make a list of your debts. Include how much you owe and what rate of interest you are being charged on each debt. Pay off the one with the most expensive interest rate first, not necessarily the largest amount owed. Update the list each month and total the amount owed to make sure that it is getting smaller each month

• Establish a savings plan. You should have both short-term and long-term savings goals. The short term is for things like insurance, auto repairs, holiday gifts and other regular, predictable costs. The long-term is for house down payments, kids' college and retirement. Keep the two funds separate and set a specific amount to go into each fund out of every paycheck.

• Save first. Don't try to save out of whatever money is left over after other bills have been paid. There won't be any. Treat your savings as the first bill you pay. You have probably already been living beyond your means but credit has disguised it. Making your savings payments first forces you to see what you really have to live on.

• Carry a little notebook around with you for one month and write down everything you spend. Everything from the home mortgage payment to the 45 cent pack of gum. Small things can add up. That 79 cent cup of coffee you pick up on the way to work each day will total almost $200 over the course of the year. Even a low-cost $5 lunch each working day will cost $1,250 over a year. You can't start trimming costs until you actually know what you're spending.

• Based on your savings goals and the spending patterns you've tracked, establish a spending plan. Then follow it. The plan doesn't have to be brilliant, it just has to be followed. You don't have to be a rocket scientist to design a budget, you just need the will to follow it.

• If married, involve your family in your budget planning. A successful budget isn't imposed from above, it emerges from consensus. If everyone in the family doesn't feel their interests have been considered, they won't be motivated to make the spending plan a success.

• Compare fees and services at various financial institutions. For example, credit unions typically offer lower fees on everything from checking accounts to credit cards. Credit unions also offer higher interest rates on savings accounts.

If you don't know where to start on your budget plan, the Michigan Credit Union League has a free brochure and work sheet available. Simply send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Budget Blueprint, Michigan Credit Union League, P.O. Box 5210, Detroit, MI 48235.

Michael Kelly is the Senior Director of Information for the Michigan Credit Union League. He also serves on the boards of the Michigan Consumer Council, the Better Business Bureau and the Consumer Educators of Michigan.

Law would let banks into insurance biz

Banks, credit unions, and savings and loans will be able to enter the insurance business under legislative bills headed for Gov. John Engler's signature.

"It will level the playing field between insurance agents and banks," said the Michigan Chamber of Commerce. "Many (insurance) agents currently sell financial products."

The chamber credited lame-duck Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, chair of the Senate Corporations Committee, with bringing the sides together after insurance agents had sought laws keeping financial institutions out of their territory.

Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City, sponsored the lead bill expanding the banks' power. For Keith, it was a final touch of glory after a 22-year career in the House, during which he wrote the law allowing statewide branch banking. He was a banker himself (Manufacturers) before starting his legislative career.

Engler is expected to sign the package of bills. They will take immediate effect.

The House passed the bills on a series of 89-7 and 90-7 votes.

Holdouts against them included Democrats Justine Barns of Westland and Maxine Berman of Southfield and Republican Frank Fitzgerald of Grand Ledge.

Voting yes were lawmakers Willis Bullard, R-Milford, Dan Gustafson, R-Williamston, Tom Middleton, R-Ortonville, Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, and Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth.

Missing the vote was Alan Cropsey, R-DeWitt.

Resisting the bills were lawmakers who feared financial institutions making loans would have an unfair opportunity to require and sell home and auto insurance to borrowers.

Dillingham sought a compromise that would require lenders to keep their insurance and lending operations in separate offices of the building. The bills will prohibit discussing insurance while a loan application is pending and require separate documentation.

Akropolis comes to Northville want to go out they think of Northville."

Patrons will be sure to think of Akropolis Cafe as the place to go after stopping in for a bite. Starting with both hot and cold appetizers, the menu at Akropolis has it all.

The shout of "Opa!" can be heard with an order of flamed kasseri cheese. Loukaniko (flamed Greek sausage), fried eggplant and kalamari (fried squid tenders) highlights the selection of hot appetizers.

Sageki (a yogurt dip), octopus, hommus and stuffed grape leaves are cold appetizer favorites. Soups include creamy rice (avoglemono) and de jour.

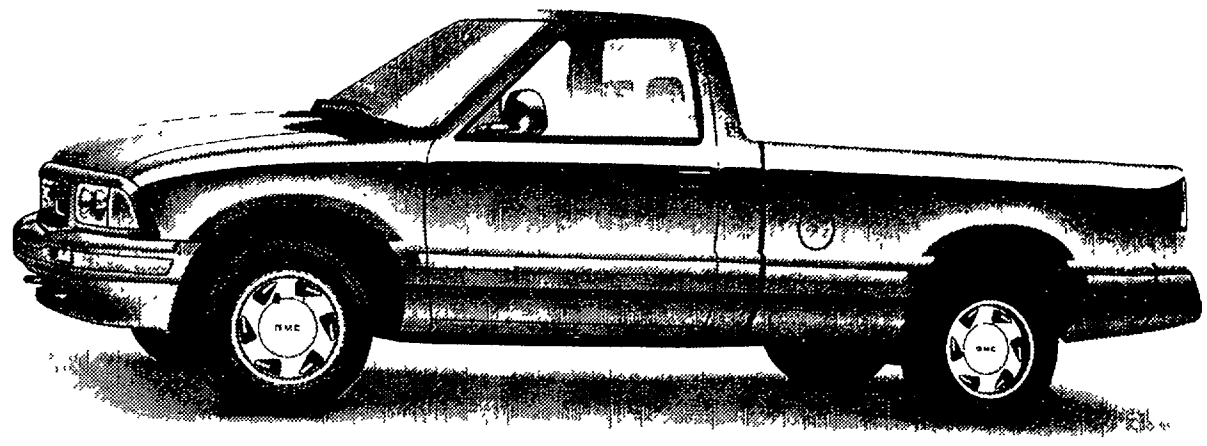

A variety of dinner entrees are available, too.

Greek, of course, is the specialty. Pastitsio, yiaprakia, roast leg of lamb and Greek meatballs are just a few of the offerings.

Seafood selections include whitefish, swordfish steak and red snapper. Greek and American-style salads please lighter appetites while a gyro and various hamburgers are perfect for lunch.

The Akropolis Cafe is located at the corner of Main and Center streets in Northville. For more information or reservations, call 380-9350.

You'd like to update an interior, but... you're uncertain as to which designs work best, what's new in the way of materials and even where to begin.

The inside solution? Futuristic Furnishings – for your new kitchen, bath, media center or custom furnishings.

With one of Michigan's most advanced computer-aided design systems, our professional designers can take your ideas and then show you "look" after "look" of traditional or contemporary designs – in your choice of wood, solid veneer or laminated finishes.

To ensure excellent "fit & finish," cabinets and countertops are custom-crafted at our own facility. And because we install all components ourselves, we take pride in providing for your complete satisfaction.

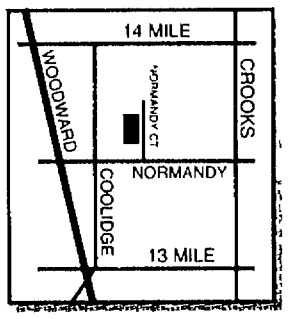

This commitment to quality has made us the choice for many of Metro Detroit's top architects and most prestigious builders. It's also a prime reason why your new interiors should be Futuristic.

Ivanhoe-Huntley

by Craig Farrand

Call it a generational kind of thing: something handed down from grandfather to father to son.

Call it a dedication to excellence: something beyond just meeting expectations, but exceeding them.

Call it finding the perfect fit: something that blends the best of man with the best of nature.

Or just call it Ivanhoe-Huntley Homes.

Homebuyers do.

"The fact is that we really don't pursue buyers and those wanting to build their own home; they pursue us."

"And I think I know why," said Steven Perlman, half of the team that comprises Ivanhoe-Huntley.

"Between my partner and I, we have combined both aspects of the building industry: development and construction.

"We're a perfect match."

Altogether, the partners — Perlman, president of Huntley Homes, and Gary Shapiro, president of the Ivanhoe Companies — have been combining such expertise for more than six years.

But their individual careers go back much further.

"I've been doing this for 14 years, and took over the business from my father," Perlman said, "but even my grandfather was in real estate, so I guess it even goes back to him."

And Shapiro, who's been in the business for 18 years, is the third generation in an unbroken family chain of home building.

The result of this generational imprinting has been the kind of hands-on approach and a unique insight into home development that has set Ivanhoe-Huntley a bit apart from the rest.

"We're always looking for that special blend of homes and the surrounding environment," Perlman said. "Something that brings out the best of both worlds."

A case in point is the duo's highly touted Chelsea Park development in West Bloomfield: Whereas any other development boasting 318 homes might conjure images of a rabbit warren gone wild, the pair have been able to pull off just the opposite.

"What we've been able to do is retain the woodland effect of the area," Perlman said. "In fact, we have almost 100 acres of protected woodlands located right inside the development."

In addition, Perlman said, great pains were taken to ensure that nearly every home will back up to either an open space or a pond within the development.

"That took a lot of effort, and many attempts," he said. "And a great deal of that credit goes to Gary who worked with top experts in the field of design — and even with DNR officials to come up with the right mix."

Also helping set the tone for the site is the adjacent portion of Halsted Road that has been proclaimed a Natural Beauty Road by the state.

So successful, in fact, were the partners' efforts, that last fall the site was named the best planned community development in Michigan by an out-of-state association.

In addition, Perlman is particularly proud of the fact that during the site's groundbreaking last fall, Gov. John Engler himself was on hand for the ceremonies.

"I think that showed how much people across the state recognized what we'd been able to accomplish," Perlman said.

Still, success inevitably is measured by how well any development does in the marketplace —

yet even here the results are impressive:

In the first two months after the groundbreaking (and working from only a trailer on the site) Ivanhoe-Huntley took 75 reservations for homes that had yet to be constructed — making it one of the most successful developments in Oakland County.

But a success story such as this is more than just a story about two men — as Perlman is quick to point out:

"A corporation is recognized by its products, not by individuals," he said. "And the success of our products is the result of the efforts of an excellent team of professionals, from the office staff to our field workers to our construction workers.

"Each of them is a part of the organization.

"Each of them is part of the family."

A family that has "generations" written all over it.

HOUSING INDUSTRY HIGHLIGHTS

An Overview of National and Local News & Trends

I look forward to sharing concerns with readers related to the building industry. As entrepreneurs in a very competitive and cost conscious industry, we are concerned as to what happens to you-the end buyer, especially when local government (as well as state and national levels) erode our attempts to not only offer affordable housing at the lower end of the market but even to the large middle class whom look forward to moving into a larger or somewhat upscale home and neighborhood so as to benefit family size, education and community amenities.

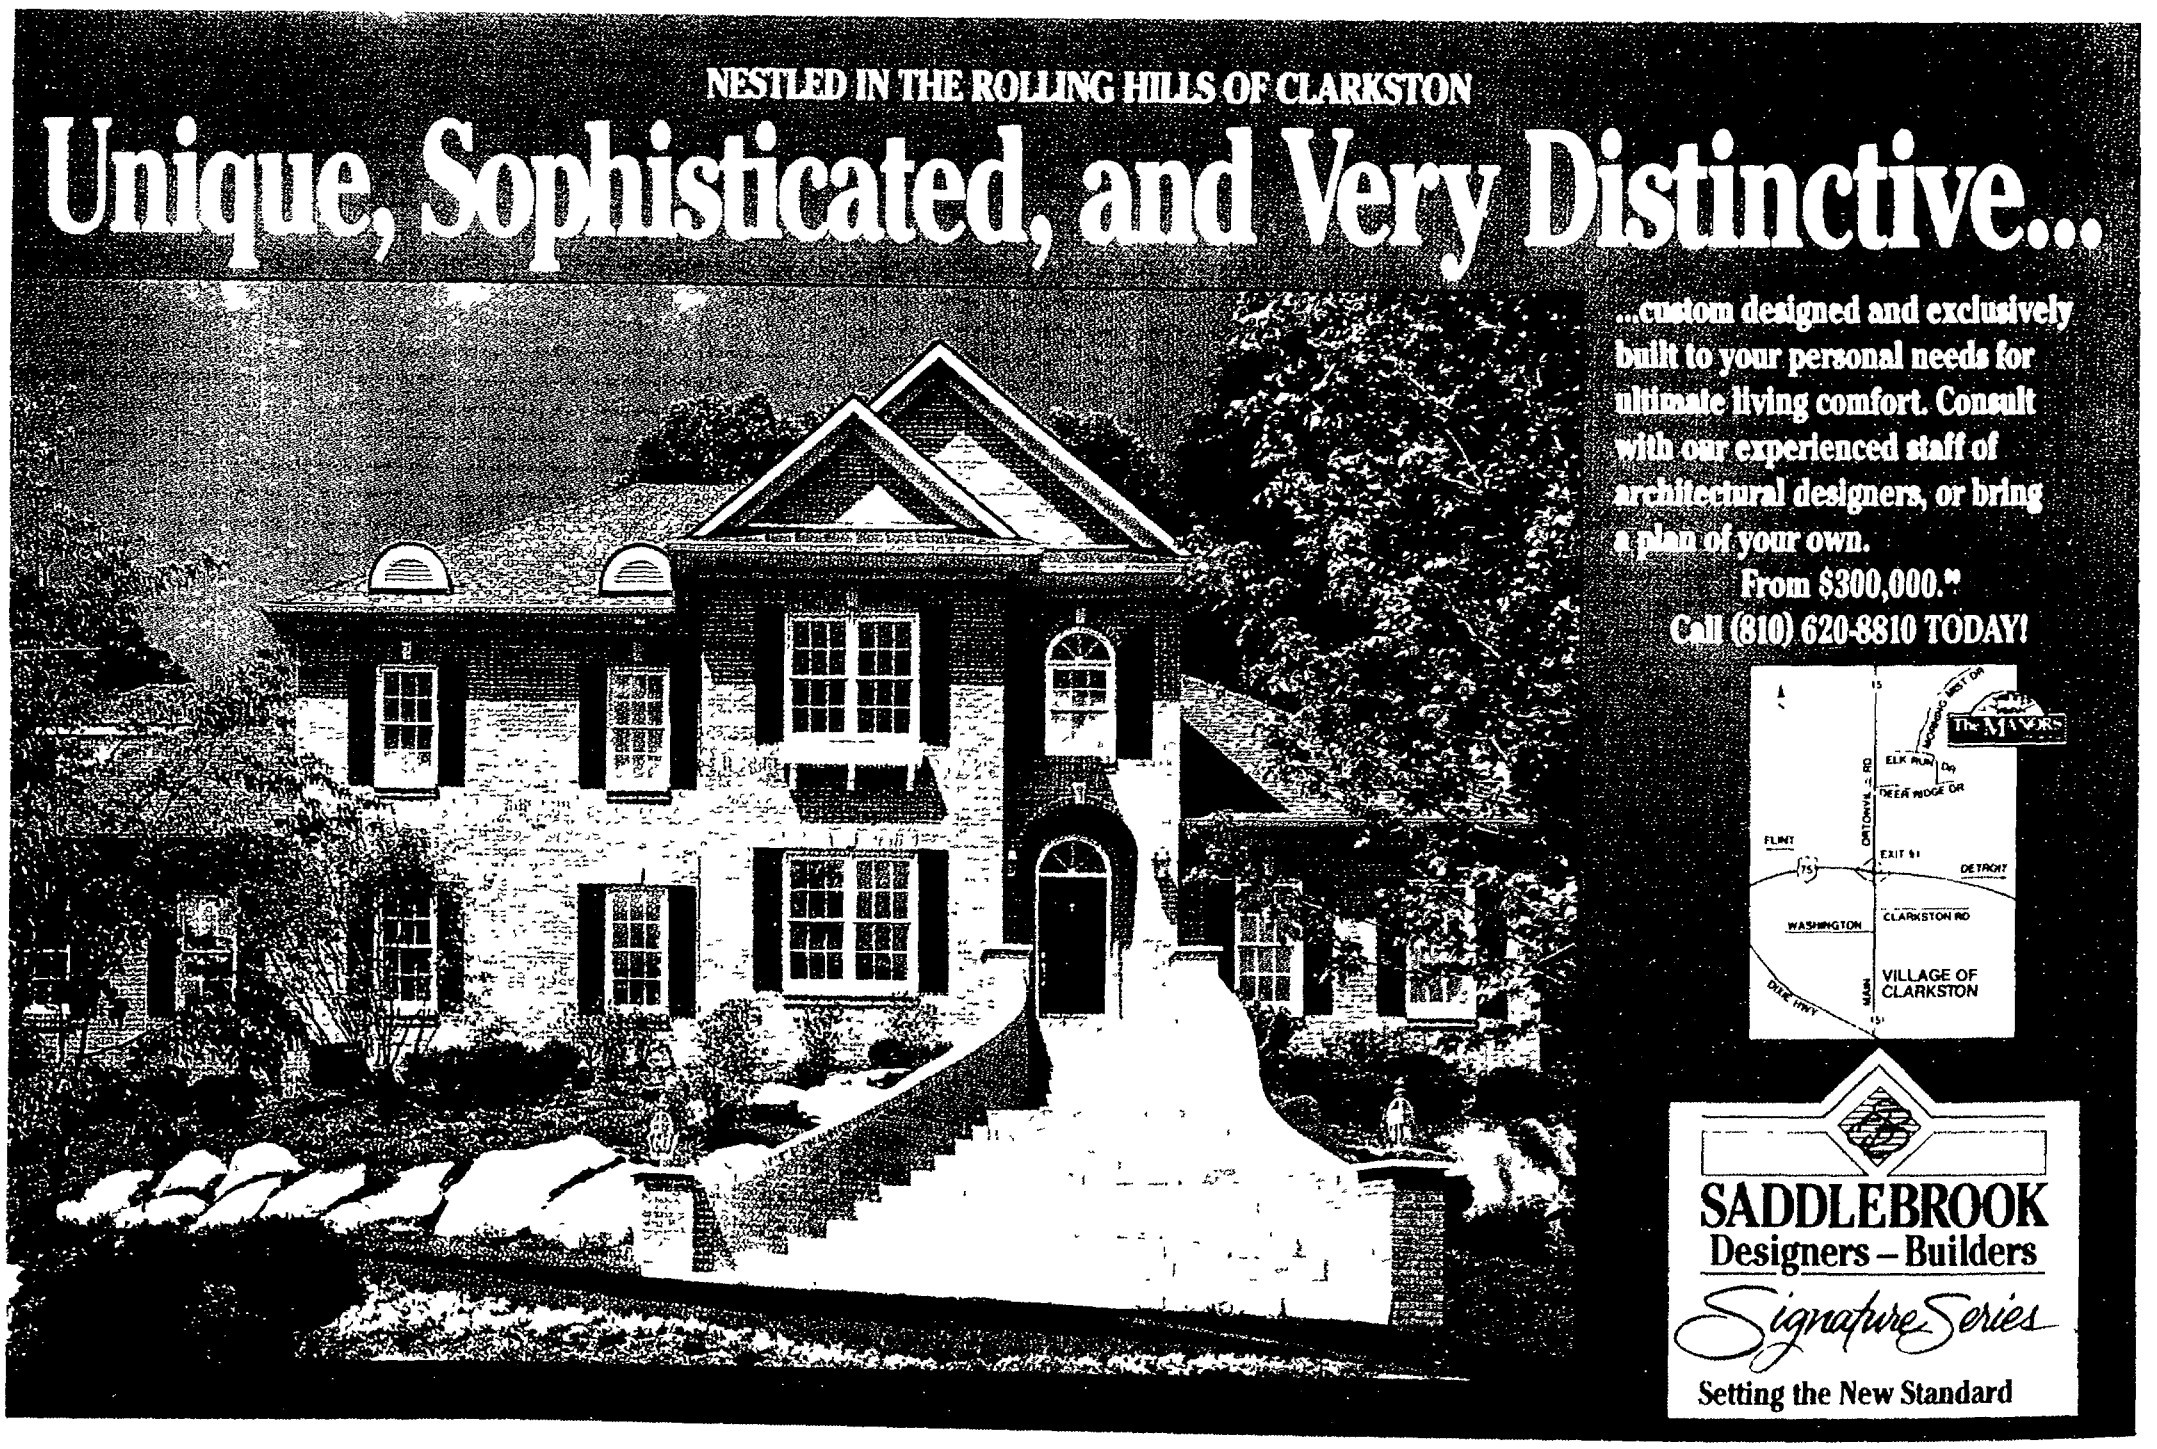

Presently there is a bill in congress (the Gramm's bill) that addresses some of these issues. The bill hopes to 'mandate just compensation be paid when government action reduces private property value'. Property rights legislation is just one piece of what Capitol Hill's new Republican majority plan to do on real estate and housing.

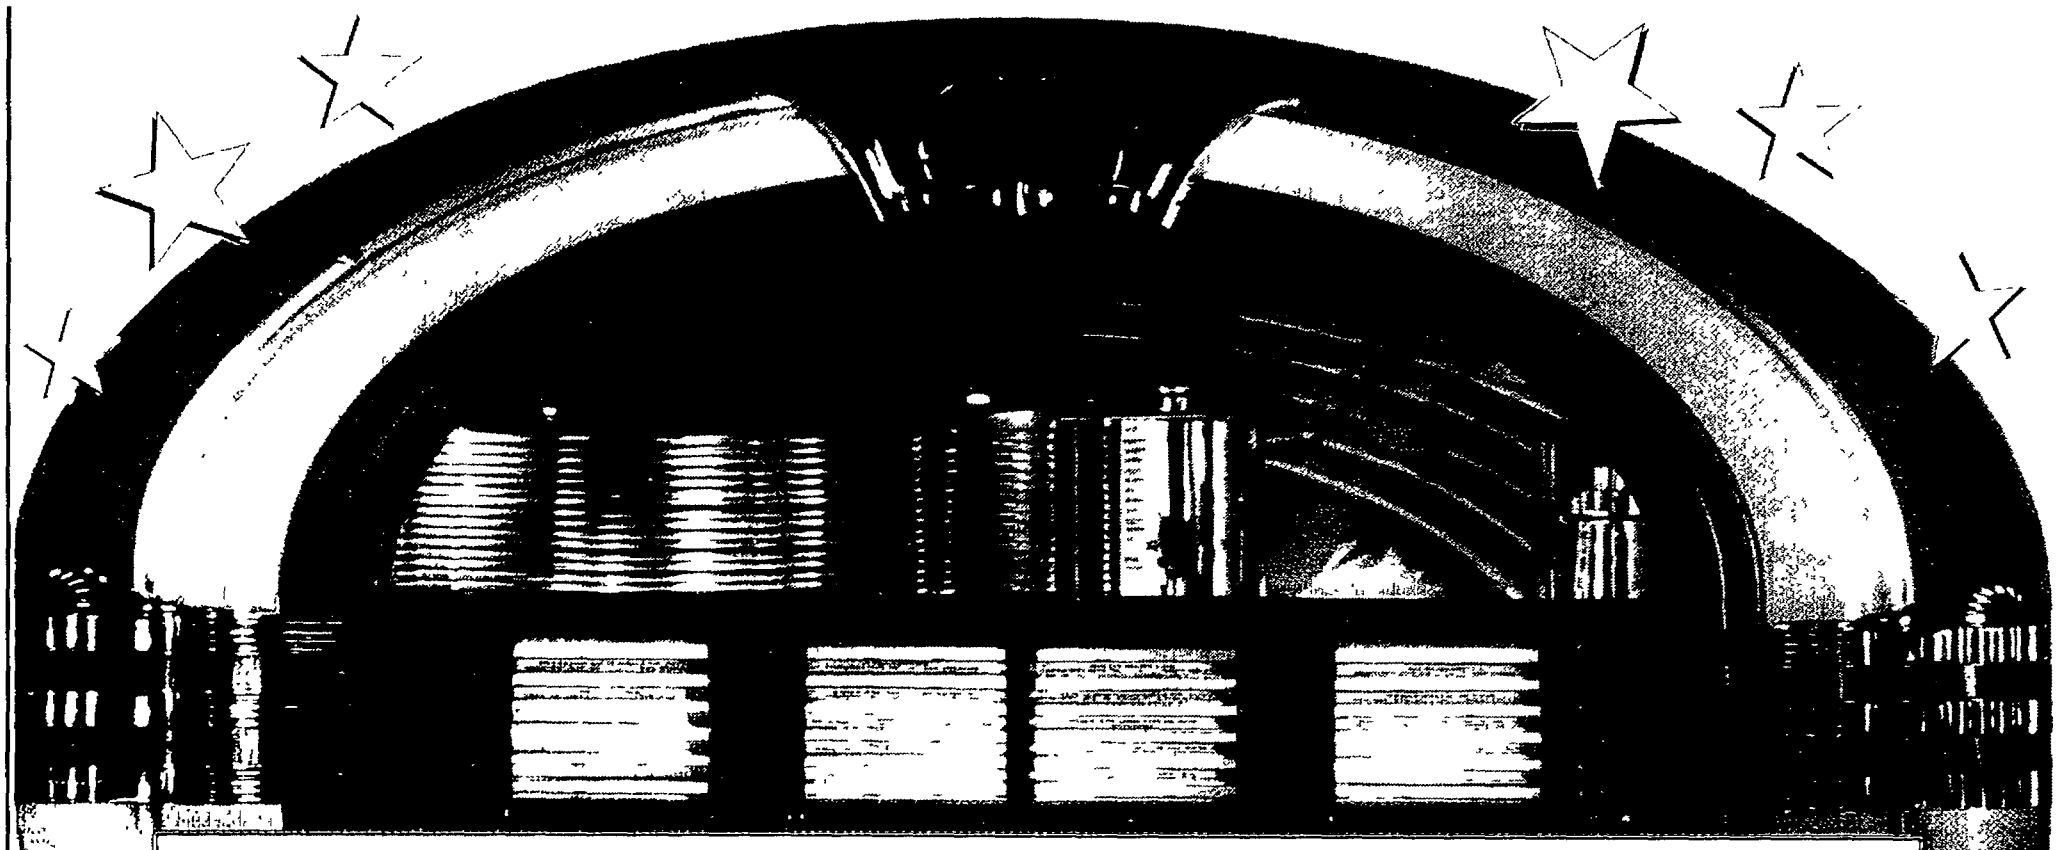

As builders, we not only care about every tree we can save, every natural pond or waterway, every change in terrain, but we plant more trees, more plants and flowers, and more grass than any other economics group. Today's builder is very environmentally conscious and the new blood in our group is as aware as any of us of what responsibility our industry has in behalf of all our neighbors.

Other issues I will cover our additional current local and national concerns.

I look forward to sharing ideas with all of you.

Security Systems: Protection Inside and Out

by Vincent Stark

When people talk about security systems, inevitably the first thought is of thwarting masked bandits creeping up to first floor windows.

But the systems of today are often much more than just burglar alarms wailing in the night.

Instead, many homeowners are now opting for systems that go beyond mere intruder alert and go to the heart of complete home and family security.

And that means installing systems that can do everything from detecting movement in the bushes, unsafe levels of carbon monoxide in the living room or even the first flames licking at bedroom doors.

In fact, in many ways the modern home security system is the ultimate 24-hour policeman, fireman and guardian angel – in the guise of a silicon chip.

But do you need all that?

Good question.

Not surprisingly, the range of features available on today's security market can make the selection of the right system as harrowing an experience as buying a car.

Do you lease or buy?

What about warranties?

Is there 24-hour service available?

Do you need every option possible or will a stripped down model do?

To answer those questions, a bit of background might be in order.

The fact is that a basic home security system focuses on intrusion, and usually includes a combination of perimeter and interior protection: a maze of door and window sensors coupled with motion detectors.

The idea is to provide an early warning system that an unidentified someone is coming close to your house.

And with this basic system comes the basic response: An earsplitting siren designed to scare away the intruder – and wake up the neighbors.

Of course, there is an option – there are always options: The system can be monitored by an outside firm (probably the same company that installed the system) that alerts local law enforcement officials of a problem at the site.

Ask the Builder

by Robert R. Jones
President, Robert R. Jones Associates

Q. We are in the process of building a new home and would like to know if there is anything we can do to eliminate unsightly nail pops. What causes nail pops and how can they be prevented?

-Mr. J. Esser, Livonia

A. Nail pops have long been a source of frustration for home builders as well as home buyers. Nail pops appear because lumber, which is still used to frame most houses, shrinks, increasing the distance between the nailhead and the framing surface. Since the steel nails do not shrink, the nailhead appears to "pop out".

Nail pops can be reduced by using the shortest fastener possible to achieve adequate holding power. While nails have been the most common type of fastener used in the past, many builders are now switching to drywall screws because of their superior holding power. One and one-quarter inch screws have proven to be very effective in eliminating nail pops. Check with your builder...some builders do charge extra for screwing in the drywall.

Q. My wife and I have just purchased a used home and the master bath does not have an exhaust fan. Should we have one installed?

-Mrs. S. Manning, Canton

A. Exhaust, or ventilating, fans are essential for keeping the humidity levels down in the bathroom. Without them, water vapor can condense on inside walls which creates mildew. This can, in turn, ruin insulation as well as stain wallpaper and paint finishes.

To install an exhaust fan, a hole is made in the wall from inside the bath to the outside. Whether duct work is required depends on the location of the fan, which also must be wired to a switch. If ducting is necessary, it should take as direct a route as possible to the outside, as opposed to being routed through your ceiling or attic (where the cold duct work could cause water to condense).

For the exhaust fan to do its job most efficiently, you may want to consider automatic controls so that you turn the bathroom light on and off. This guarantee the fan will be used. Another alternative is to hook the exhaust fan up to a humidistat which will automatically turn the fan on and off when the humidity in the room reaches preset levels.

Q. Are all hardwood floors the same?

-Mr. B. Ellis, Birmingham

A. Actually, there are differences both in the types of wood used, grading systems relating to their appearance and how the flooring is assembled.

Hardwood flooring comes in oak, birch, maple and pecan. The woods each have slightly different grading systems. Oak, for example, which is the most popular hardwood, has four basic grades: Clear (generally free of defects though it still may contain some minor natural characteristics such as burls, streaks and pinworm holes), Select (almost clear but possesses more of the natural characteristics including knots and other marks) and Common #1 and #2 (which display more markings than either of the other two grades). Many people prefer hardwood that shows such natural characteristics and imperfections.

Hardwood flooring comes in various lengths, widths and thicknesses. Unfinished strip flooring goes together tongue-and-groove at the edge (as does parquet flooring which comes in squares). Plank flooring is tongue-and-groove at the ends and is often screwed to the floor with plugs.

Security Systems from pg. 10

Similarly, system upgrades can include fire detection and even medical emergency alerts, with the monitoring company contacting the appropriate authorities for a response.

Likewise, provisions can be made for the company to contact relatives or neighbors if a problem arises while the homeowner is away.

But with each additional option comes an additional cost.

Still, a system that may have cost $5,000 about 20 years ago, may cost less than half that today, thanks to the ever-accelerating improvements in computer technology – and cost reduction.

But, do you lease such a system or buy it?

Answer: If you lease a system and it's ever removed, you're left with repairing holes in the walls. But that could be a small price to pay for getting rid of something that never lived up to expectations.

Ironically, there is a solution to the hole-in-the-wall dilemma – wireless vs. hard-wired system – but even this option raises another question: A hard-wired system, because it is a permanent part of the structure, adds value to your home; wireless does not.

In addition, a wireless system can be rattled by stray radio signals – even electromagnetic signals created by lightning. Oh, and you have to remember to change the batteries.

Still, if you've answered these questions, you're almost there. Once a homeowner has decided on the type of system, the actual price will probably vary little from company to company.

Instead, the selection of the company itself will become of paramount importance: For example, if a homeowner wants a system monitored by an outside firm, where will that monitoring take place – locally, or is the data relayed hundreds of miles to a central station?

The implications of such a question lie in the fact that distance and lack of knowledge about your hometown could create problems in getting accurate information to your police department or fire station.

The same goes for reading all the fine print before signing any longterm contracts:

What happens in the future if you're not happy with the service?

Can the system be serviced or monitored by another company?

Are there hidden surprises behind the very attractive initial installation cost – such as provisions concerning the monitoring agreement?

Are there other costs involved in hooking up to the phone lines?

And what about false alarms? (Many communities have instituted ordinances that allow for fines to be issued if an excessive amount of false alarms come from the same house.)

In the end, the effort put into buying a home security system is indirect relation to your concern about family and property safety.

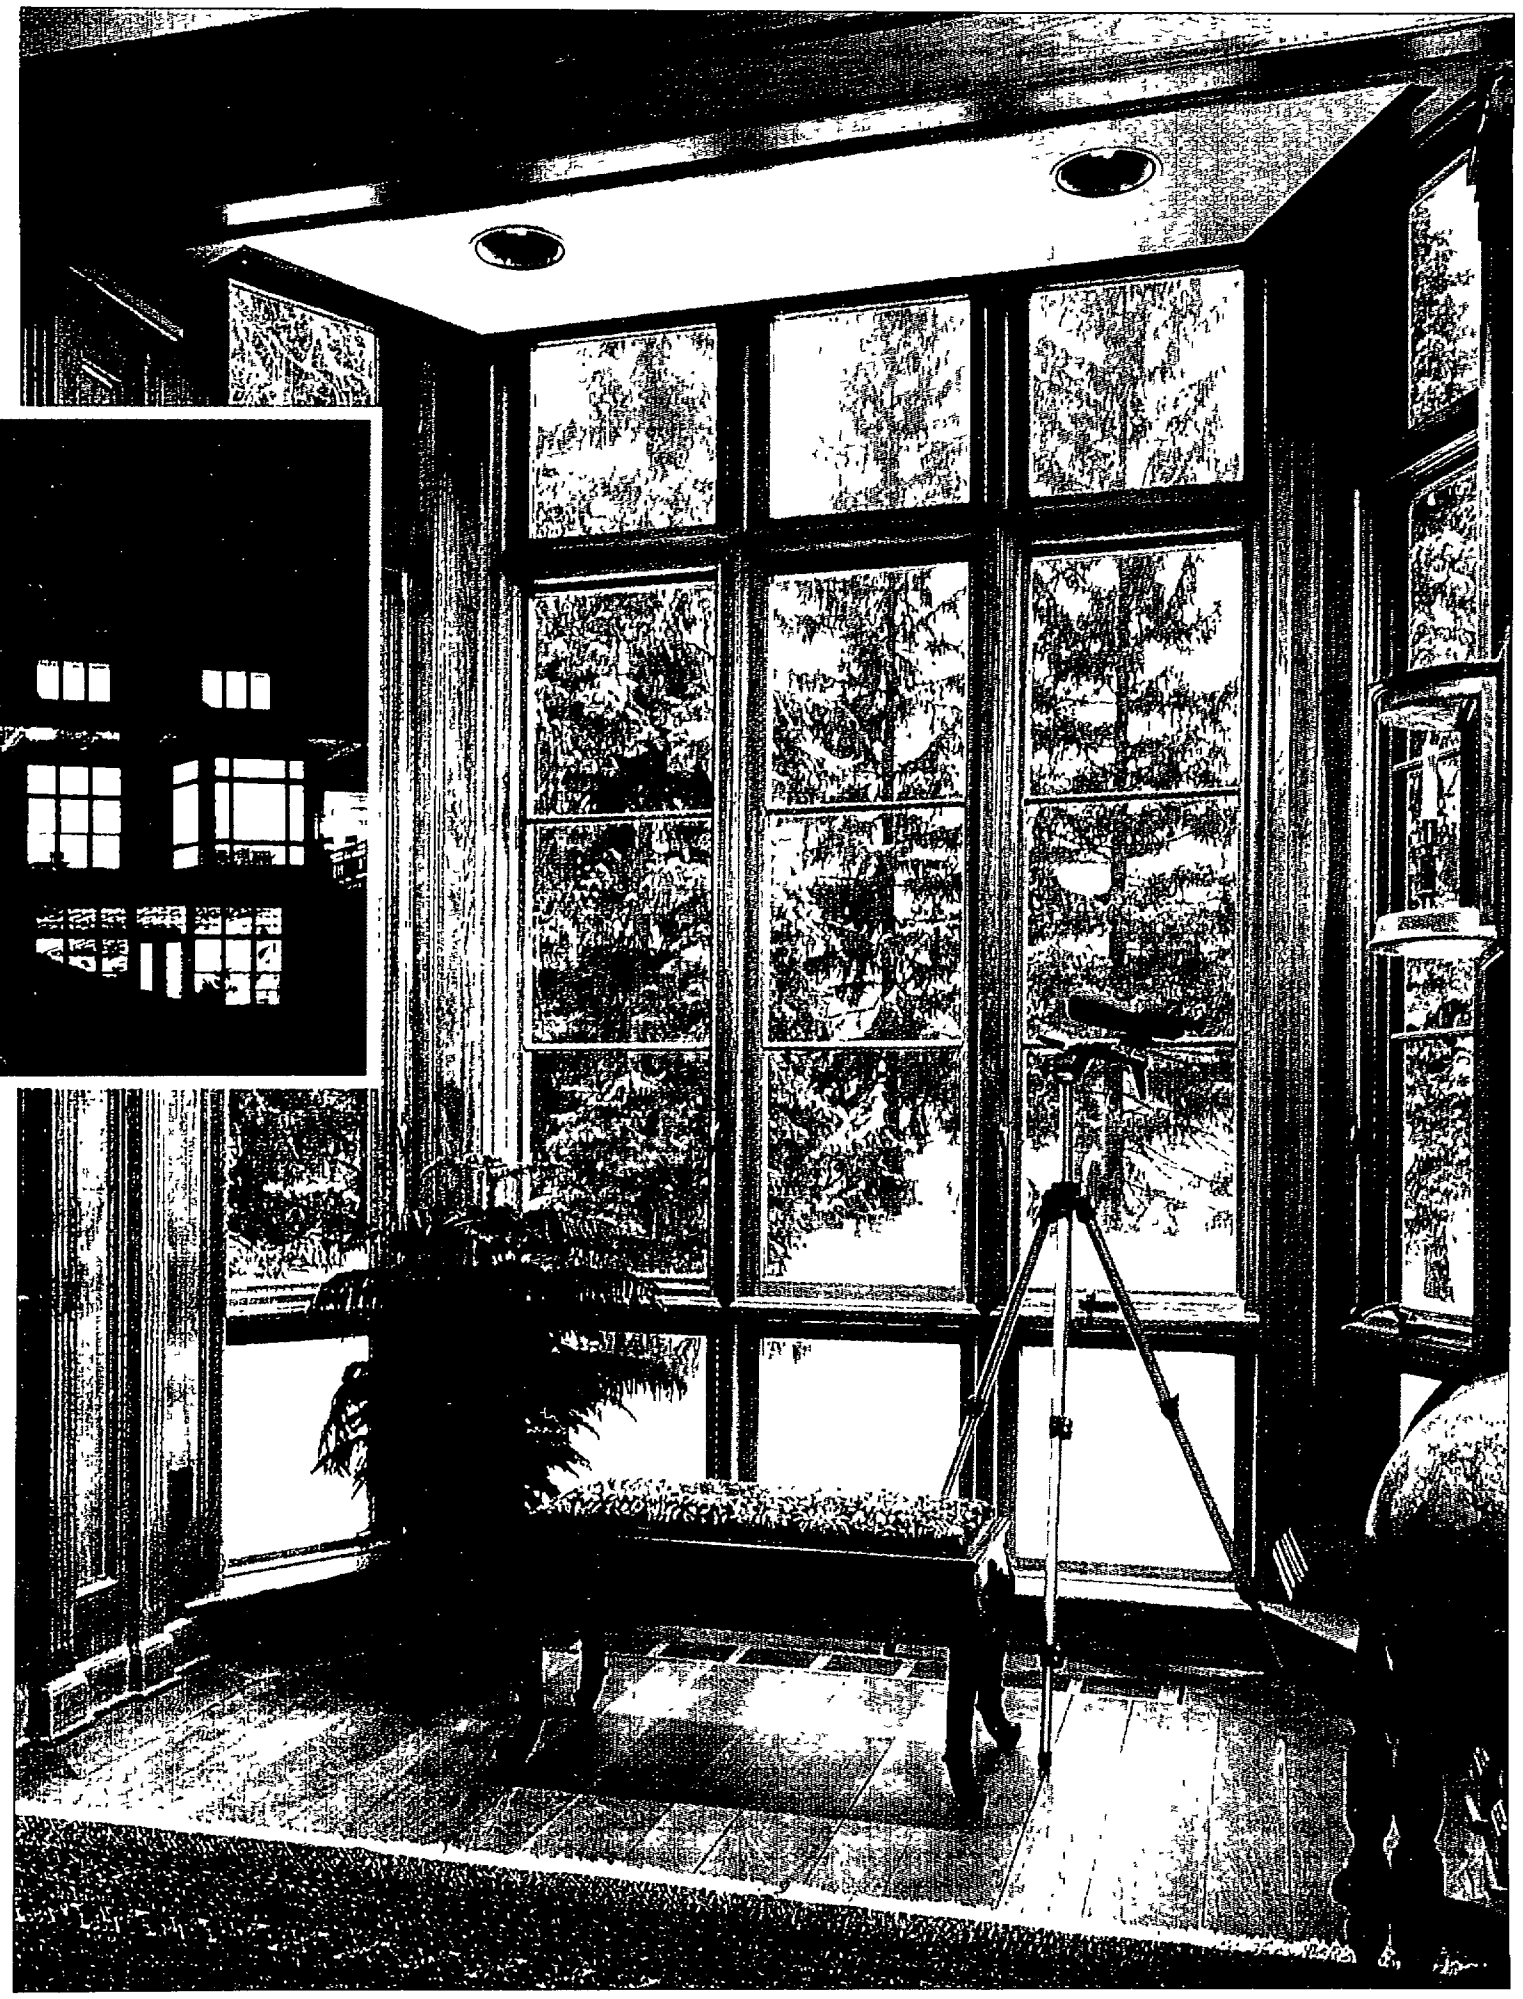

If you feel relatively secure already, a simple outdoor lighting system may do; if you have serious concerns, something more comprehensive may be required.

But in any case, become informed.

Personal safety should never be left in someone else's hands.

Trends in Windows

Americans are tired of having to shop for their dream home in a bland sea of look-alikes, according to a recent Builder Magazine focus group study.

The study showed that while different ages and occupations lead to a diverse list of requirements for homes and townhouses, several specific features made the top of the list in every group. Natural light and scenic views were two areas which the groups were not willing to compromise.

Natural light equates spaciousness and warmth while landscaped views through well-positioned windows reflect quality, according to Tom Masson, Vice President of Pella Window and Door Company.

"More homebuyers are expecting their desire for abundant light and views to be addressed at the blueprint stage," said Mr. Masson. "Even do-it-yourself remodelers are working to add those features to their homes with the warmth and beauty of wood windows and doors. In addition to aesthetics, larger or uniquely shaped windows can add the light and views that make older homes more attractive to new buyers."

"The traditional family symbols, like spacious kitchens, are still a priority. But, they are being combined more frequently with stylish, low maintenance concerns. Today's families have many time constraints, that is why they appreciate the options Pella has to offer. Such as, miniblinds that never need dusting and aluminum clad exteriors that are virtually maintenance free."

As the trend towards more windows in a home continues, it makes your window selection even more important in terms of quality, performance and durability.

How to talk cost with your architect

by Frank Carnovale

In October I attended the National Remodelers show in Atlanta. While there, I was fortunate to participate in a round table discussion of residential design building with about 20 builders from around the United States. We discussed many different approaches and philosophies for providing residential design and construction services. Some builders did their own design work in house, and some consulted with outside architects. Other companies had staff architects doing residential home design as we do. The lengthy, spirited discussion quickly focused on the age old problem of how to provide creative, quality design within a fixed budget. This seeming dilemma has been acted out between owner, architects and builders for hundreds of years. So, what is the answer? How can this be achieved? How can homeowners benefit from the talents of architects to develop quality striking, ageless design and stay within a fixed construction budget? How do you discuss construction costs with your architect? In what direction should you proceed to stay within a defined budget?

The answers to these questions are as involved and multifaceted as the size, cost, complexity and luxury of a construction project. As a project grows, more outside influences, money, time, labor, weather, material etc. will impact the cost and control of a project. Therefore, as the scale and complexity escalate, so should the amount of professional planning, scheduling, and management of the design and budget process.

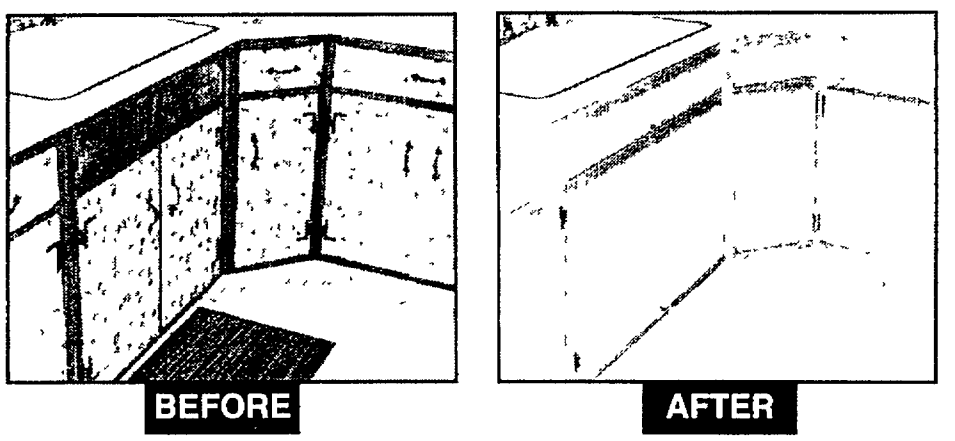

The home owner needs to define goals of the project, what is the design supposed to accomplish, the number of rooms, the sizes, the issues to resolve. They also need to establish the amount of money they are willing and able to invest in the project. What is realistic, what will add value, what is being done in the neighborhood, what is the level of detail, what is the quality of finish. Your architect will provide counseling through the romance with a plan to unite wishes and expectations to the checkbook. The design should proceed to approved preliminary drawing which address the goals and responds to the issues. Then a preliminary estimate can establish probable construction costs based on current average costs per square foot or recent similar work.

If the project is an exterior wood deck, the costs are normally easy to understand and predict because the scope and complexity of the work is easy to define. The estimate may include the demolition, clean-up, post holes, foundations, lumber and carpentry. Average square foot cost estimates are generally safe predictions when the work is simple. You may be considering 600 square foot of deck, 40 linear feet of railing and bench and one set of stairs. Based on other recent similar sized project estimates, your architect can calculate that the deck construction is $12 per square foot times 600 SF = $7,200.00, the railing and bench costs are $10.00 per linear foot times 90 feet = $100.00, and the stair costs $200.00, the total project cost would be $7,800.00. Unknowns like the location of a septic system, and the underground electrical service and variables like the type and quality of lumber to use and the design of the railing can be handled with contingencies added to the total.

As the size, complexity, and cost of a project increases much more planning, specifying, and experience needs to be employed to accurately establish a budget during the preliminary design stage. The higher the costs, the more emphasis and effort needs to be placed on the planning and estimation. Square footage costs and rules of thumb allow too much opportunity for misunderstanding and omissions. The cost of a major kitchen renovation can run between $20,000.00 and $80,000.00 depending on the type of cabinets, counter tops and appliances used. Undefined, this wide range of cost is unacceptable to proceed from preliminary drawings to final working drawings. You do not want to spend four weeks on a kitchen design and two weeks bidding the work to discover that the project is 50% more than the budget. Time and effort must be spent selecting and specifying the major components of the project to accurately budget the job. Refrigerators can cost $100.00 to $1,000.00. Cabinets can run $4,000.00 to $40,000.00.

On larger jobs, architects often invite an experienced builder to provide a conceptual estimate to check the cost with the preliminary design. The builder will account for the particulars of the job and can be very accurate with cost if the materials and finishes are established. The amount of brick, the type of roofing, the style of windows, the plumbing fixture manufacturer, the appliance manufacturer all will help focus the costs. The more information known the more accurate the number can be, avoiding a blanket cost per square foot estimate which may not reflect the intention of the owners and architect and may not accurately account for the reality of the construction site.

Light show, celebrity carving top events

The 13th annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular will feature the most popular elements of past events, including the light show, celebrity carving exhibitions, the middle school design contest, and more.

As always, the centerpiece of the five-day Spectacular will be the carving competitions in Plymouth's Kellogg Park, located at Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street in downtown Plymouth.

Hundreds of thousands of pounds of ice will be transformed into dazzling displays by culinary artists who specialize in this rare and magical art form.

At 6 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 13, the two-man professional team carvers from around the world will begin the grueling 20-hour continuous stint. Working outdoors despite the weather, each team will transform 10 400-pound blocks of ice into glittering, original works of art. Fourteen teams from around the country are expected to compete in this year's event.

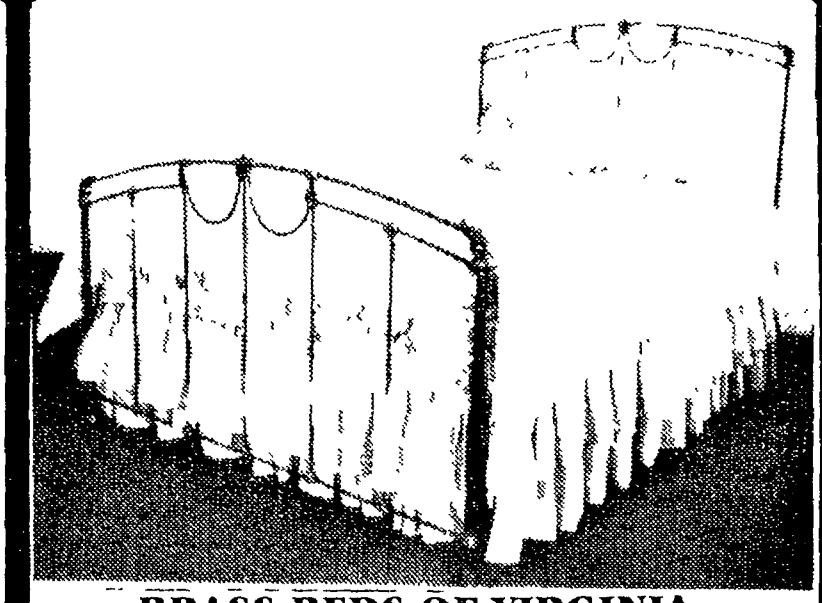

Owing to the one-year hiatus of the National Ice Carving Association championships, the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular is the largest and most prestigious ice carving competition of 1995. Judging will take place at 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 14.

Fireworks will add extra dazzle to the finished sculptures at 7 p.m. on Saturday.

The only college and high school team competitions in the United States will also take place during the Spectacular on Sunday, Jan. 15, starting at 10 a.m. Each team will receive three blocks of ice and will have five hours to carve its work of art.

Other contests this year include individual competition at the high school, college, professional and non-professional levels. All carvers will compete for more than $10,000 in prize money.

Culinary students from area colleges are carving more than 100 sidewalk sculptures that adorn the side streets and shopfronts. Middle school art students will submit their original concepts for sculptures, and the winning designs will be executed by professional carvers.

Family Emergencies.

No two emergencies are exactly alike. So all emergency care shouldn't be the same either.

That's why we designed and equipped our emergency department to handle everything from minor accidents to life-threatening injuries. If there are any questions about the seriousness of the emergency, a specially trained nurse is on hand to evaluate the situation and direct you to the appropriate level of treatment.

And whether you're a walk-in patient or require critical care, you'll receive the same quick and personalized medical attention from doctors who are specially trained in emergency medicine.

Our emergency care is backed by the resources of a full-service hospital, it's available 24 hours a day, every day, and it comes with the understanding that minor problems shouldn't result in major expenses . . . good reasons to go to St. Mary Hospital for sudden illness or injury. For more information call us at (313) 464-WELL.

Because when it comes to family emergencies, the specialized care we offer is no accident.

DPW festival heroes behind the scenes

Dozens of people contribute time and effort to the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular, but most agree that the city's public works department forms the backbone of the ice show's success.

"This event just couldn't take place without the Department of Public Works," said Mike Watts, who coordinates the event. "They go a long way toward making it possible."

Paul Sincock, assistant city manager and head of the DPW, starts planning for the spectacular in September, right after the Plymouth Fall Festival. He and about 10 other employees are responsible for a variety of behind-the-scenes logistics.

"They are really the unsung heroes of the ice spectacular," said Sincock of his employees. "It's very intricate. There are a lot of things that happen in the middle of the night that the public is not aware of.

Before the Spectacular even begins, city employees will have erected numerous crowd and traffic control barricades, all of the roping around Kellogg Park walkways, and dozens of temporary no-parking signs. For the sidewalk ice sculptures, they will set up more than 100 pedestals, each made up of 16 40-pound cinder blocks. They'll handle the 400-pound ice blocks and provide smaller tools such as shovels and water buckets to the carvers.

"Of course, at the same time we also have to provide all the routine services and maintenance," Sincock said.

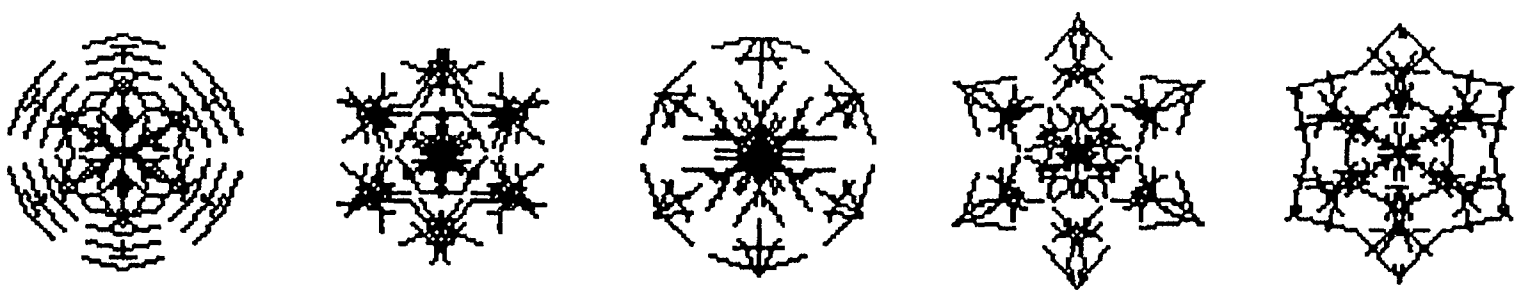

Nor can they rest once the Spectacular begins. There's rubbish from more than 200 temporary receptacles to be hauled, repairs to be made, "and if it snows, we've got the sidewalk to clear," Sincock said. He credits the cooperation of Spectacular organizers with helping things run smoothly.

And where does someone with Sincock's inside knowledge suggest visitors park their cars?

"The upper ramp of the central parking deck is best," he said. "And there's a ramp that takes you right down into the heart of everything on Main Street."

Sincock has some other strong advice. "Please leave your dogs at home," he said. "The ice-melting chemicals used on streets and sidewalks tend to burn their paws. And dogs don't appreciate the crowds."

'Teddy Bears and Trains' on display

Not all the ice festival sights are outside in the cold.

During the festival, the Plymouth Historical Museum has a special exhibit called "Teddy Bears and Trains."

More than 450 of the cuddly stuffed bears are incorporated into all of the museum's display areas, including rare specimens dating back to the turn of the century.

Even museum director Beth Stewart is surprised at the wide variety. "I didn't think there were that many different kinds of teddy bears," she said.

An equal number of vintage trains are on display, with the largest merrily circling the base of the centerpiece Christmas tree, towing a cargo of tiny bears.

Most models date back to the 1930s through the '60s, including an unusual American Flyer loaned by Plymouth-Canton School Superintendent Charles Little.

Many of the trains and accessories come from the collection of local residents Buz and Norma Ray, whom Stewart says are among the foremost Lionel train experts in the country. The Rays loaned a 1907 Lionel and filled one of the museum's shop facades with hundreds of small-scale supplies and accessories.

Stewart said that this year's theme is especially nice because of its wide appeal. "This is good for men, women, and families. There's a little something for everybody."

Children especially will enjoy playing "museum detective," hunting for 20 items on a list handed out at the door. Searching for the tiniest train made out of beads, the snowman teddy with a carrot nose, and the rare Lionel wind-up trains helps them to focus and enjoy the display, Stewart says.

The Trailwood Garden club worked for months to create a special Christmas tree that combines the teddy bear and railroad motif. Tiny bears wear hand-stitched engineers' overalls and carry minute red bandannas, train tracks circle the tree in place of garland, and all sorts of other creative ornaments deck the tree.

Historical society members and volunteers have been working for over a year to collect items that suit the theme, which was the brainchild of exhibit director Donna Keough.

Donations fuel fest

The Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular is held outdoors, open free of charge to the 500,000 visitors who attend each year.

But don't let that fool you, it takes a lot of money to stage the city's largest annual event.

A common misconception and perennial frustration to organizers is the idea that the City of Plymouth funds the Ice Spectacular. While the city does make a generous donation, the ice show is a totally nonprofit effort completely independent of the government.

About $100,000 must be collected each year to keep the Ice Spectacular going. That includes about $10,000 for prizes and awards, $10,000 for the light show and fireworks, and $10,000 for insurance, signs, and other items. Labor for the sidewalk sculptures and ice for the whole event runs upward of $30,000, and administrative costs such as printing and postage mount to almost $20,000 a year. City and police overtime labor caused by the event must be compensated for and can often exceed $10,000.

"Every year costs go up and it gets harder to raise the money," said Mike Watts. He and his wife, Sandra, run their own company, Watts-Up Inc., that among other things organizes the ice show on behalf of the Ice Spectacular volunteer board of directors.

Watts is grateful for contributions great and small. Some include Northwest Airlines, which underwrites the airfare for the Japanese expert carvers who travel to Plymouth to serve as judges. First of America bank underwrites the cost of the Fantasyland exhibits in The Gathering, and IceHouse sponsors the light show. Sunshine Honda and Acura sponsors the celebrity carving competition. Ford Motor Co., Meijer Inc., Quality Inn, and WYCD-FM are among other corporate donors.

Many local retailers and restaurants contribute a minimum of $250 to participate in the sidewalk sculpture program, as do civic groups such as Kiwanis, Rotary and the Masonic Lodge.

This year, a commemorative poster will be sold at many outlets around town for $5. The cost of producing the poster has already been underwritten by local businesses, so proceeds from all sales will directly benefit the Ice Spectacular.

"We've printed 3,000 and we're hoping to sell them all," said Watts.

And if the glitzy ice creations should move visitors to generosity, there will also be a donation box in Kellogg Park.

Ice carving club plays major role

Every fall semester at Henry Ford Community College, a group of unlikely student sculptors begins stacking, chain sawing, and chiseling 400 100-pound blocks of ice into works of art.

In just five short years, the HFCC Ice and Snow Carving Club has gained statewide recognition for its frozen artistry. The 18 club members represent a large cross-section of the student population and alumni of HFCC: Nursing, Management, Architecture, Engineering, Hospitality, and Culinary Arts students.

The sponsor, chef Richard Teeple, certified culinary arts instructor and executive chef, has been involved in ice carving for the past 15 years and is also a nationally certified ice carving competition judge.

Last year, the club designed and carved a Western saloon display, complete with visitors on horseback, for the Plymouth Ice Spectacular. Members withstood the sub-zero temperatures to complete the display.

HFCC students received fourth through seventh place (out of 11) at Plymouth in the individual competition and second place in team pairs. This year for the Plymouth Ice Spectacular, the club will sculpt a life-like work of art from the theme "The Lion King." This display will include animated characters such as Mufasa, Simba, and other main characters.

Club members, under the direction of chef Teeple, will also be carving 50 of the single-block street pedestal sculptures for the Plymouth Ice Spectacular. The project is both a learning experience for the students and a fund-raiser for the club.

The club is open to any HFCC student interested in ice carving. Each new member starts off as an assistant. The progression from assistant to carver can be rapid and depends on how often a person attends. With the proper people teaching, anyone can learn to ice carve.

Indian art works on display at fest

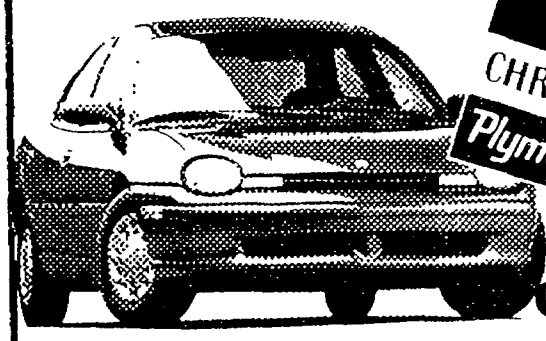

In addition to the ice carvings outdoors, visitors to the Ice Sculpture Spectacular may want to view the Native American sculpture exhibit at Native West Gallery.

"It's a very good tie-in for us," said proprietor Annette Horn. She supplemented the store's usual offerings with hundreds of additional artworks for the special exhibit, which runs through Jan. 31.

Most of the carvings displayed will be those referred to by Native Americans as fetishes, which represent the spirit of animals or the forces of nature. Usually small in size, fetishes are believed to have magical powers. Traditionally they are fashioned from turquoise, jet, shell, sandstone and alabaster. Most contemporary fetishes are made on the Zuni reservation and represent an important part of the Zuni economy.

Carving has history

The art of carving is nothing new. It began with French chefs more than 200 years ago. The first art sculptures were basic designs used as functional holders to keep food cold during service time on elaborate buffets. Russians learned the art from French chefs at the turn of the century.

The first well-documented ice palace was built as a setting for a monstrous joke. One the frozen river Neva, in the winter of 1739, a shivering bride and groom spent their wedding night in a building of ice. The palace was designed by architect Eropkin, conceived by the imperial advisor Volynski, and commissioned by the Empress Anna Ivanovna.

The ice palace was complete with ice cannons that actually fired again and again. The bedroom was complete with a vanity dresser with mirror, table and chairs, and a canopy bed, all made of ice.

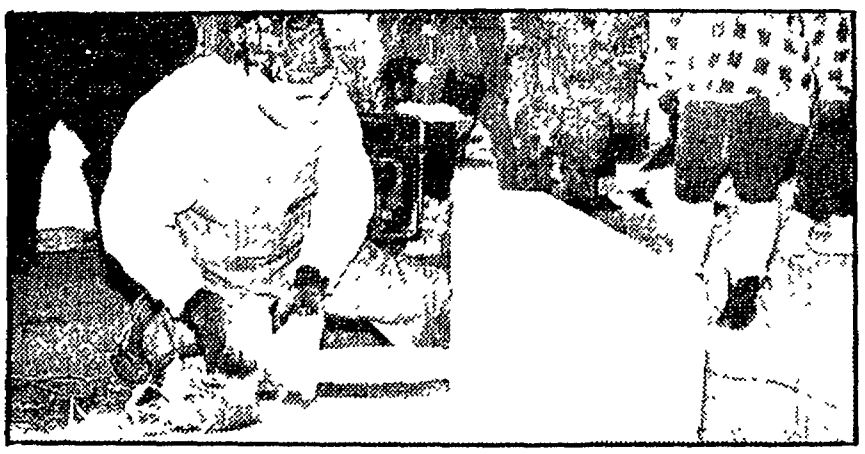

Empress Anna built the palace to show her jealousy of her old lover, who had run off with a peasant girl. Making them spend their honeymoon in an ice castle was her way of punishing the couple.

Japanese chefs picked up the art of carving ice from the French in the last 30 years. Only recently have the Japanese been considered masters of the art form.

In Japan, ice carving is a full-time profession. Sculptors carve wood in the summer and ice in the winter.

Only recently have we seen the dying art form return as part of the culinary profession in America.

Carving: The 13th Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture will debut on Wednesday in downtown Plymouth. Local and foreign ice carvers will be on hand displaying their talents. Above, Thomas Paulock of Livonia gets started on a work in the college competition.

Japanese carvers top performers

This ice sculpture concept of a mermaid and scuba diver. It will be carved by Japanese experts Hiroshi Kubota, Biji Suezawa, Humio Sakai, and Kazutomo.

Among the honored guests at this year's ice show will be four chefs from the Biwako and Royal Oak hotels near Osaka, Japan.

Hiroshi Kubota, Biji Suezawa, Humio Sakai, and Kazumoto Nakai are all specialists in French cuisine and expert ice-carvers. They will arrive in Plymouth on January 8th as guests of the Ice Spectacular, but they will not compete in the ice carving contests.

"They are probably the best carvers in the world," said ice show organizer Mike Watts. "Not that some of our carvers in the U.S. aren't comparable, but if the Japanese carvers entered they would probably win every time."

Instead, the guests from Japan will fashion several large ice sculptures for exhibition only, and serve as professional judges for some of the carving competitions.

Before they return to Japan on Jan. 16, the men will enjoy sightseeing around the metro area, including the Detroit Auto Show and the Detroit Institute of Arts. They'll tour the large commercial kitchen at Schoolcraft college and join culinary students there for lunch and cooking demonstrations.

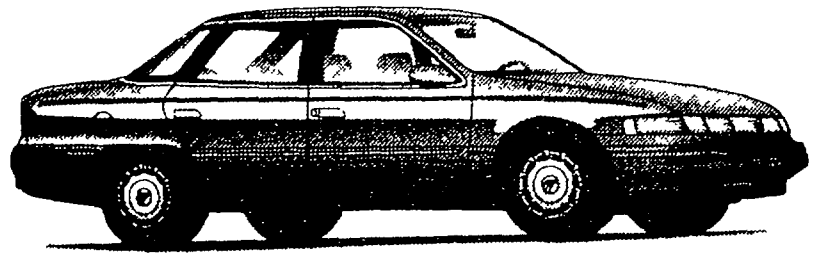

And of course, they'll save time for that favorite American pasttime, shopping. Trips to large discount and toy stores will be a must, and "they really like to shop in Plymouth,' said Watts, 'because of the variety of things available here. They also enjoy the opportunity to try all of the restaurants around town."

Gingerbread contest a top attraction

Not all the artistry on display during the Ice Sculpture Spectacular is performed outdoors in the cold.

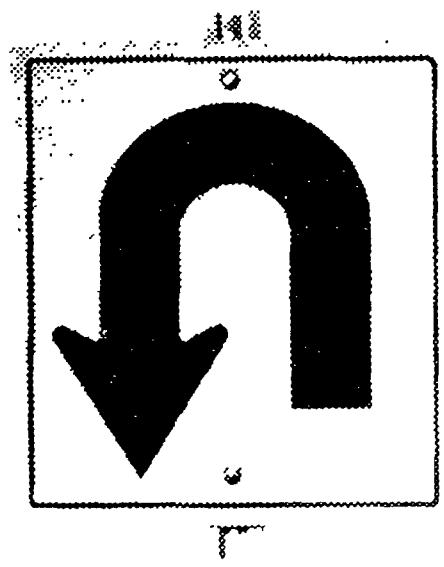

Lavishly decorated cakes and spicy gingerbread creations are also exhibited as part of two contests sponsored by the 13th Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular and the Plymouth Observer.

A $25 gift certificate from the Westchester Square Mall and the Days Gone By store will be awarded to the winner in each of the five Gingerbread House categories. These include Churches and Castles, Kids Creation for bakers age 10 and under, Bakers Delight for culinary students and professionals, and Houses, large and small.

The edible edifices will be displayed at the Days Gone By store 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. from January 11-16.

"Salute to the Sunday Funnies" is the theme for the decorated cake contest being coordinated by Mary Denning, pastry instructor at Henry Ford Community College.

Prescribed Oxygen Specialists, Inc. — Michigan's foremost Oxygen and Home Medical Equipment supplier introduces the RHINOTHERM.
A revolutionary in-home method of relieving nasal congestion, sinusitis and rhinitis for days without the use of drugs!!! RHINOTHERM delivers 100% water saturated pressurized air at a temperature of 110° directly to the nasal passages. A microprocessor controls the ultrasonic transducer which vibrates the water into droplets of approximately 4-8 microns. The heated water is then mixed with air which is administered to the nasal passages via a hand-held tube at a rate of 28 liters per minute. Relief after a RHINOTHERM treatment lasts, on average, 3 1/2 days. And treatments of between 15 and 30 minutes duration need to be taken just two or three times per week.

RHINOTHERM has been proven safe and effective in clinical trials around the world!
RHINOTHERM utilizes no drugs — just distilled water or saline solution. Adverse side effects such as dryness, drowsiness, rebound symptoms or insomnia are completely avoided.
RHINOTHERM system is available at:

Kids get a preview

Students at Smith Elementary School in Plymouth on Dec. 19 got a preview of the Ice Spectacular when they were treated to a demonstration of the art of ice carving.

Members of the ice carving club at Henry Ford Community College Ice Carving Club transformed several 300 pound blocks of ice into favorite Sunday Funnies characters to the delight of the students. Richard Teeple, executive chef instructor at the college, explained the history and evolution of ice carving as his students demonstrated the tools and processes used to create the frosty sculptures.

Teeple is one of the founders of the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular and has remained involved for 12 years. Last year, he took on a new position as Educational Coordinator for the Ice Spectacular by working closely with college, high school, and junior high school students. He is returning in the same capacity for this year's event, as well as being a competitor.

NEW HOME—CONSTRUCTION FINANCING

GO WITH CHELSEA LUMBER — THE STATE'S ONLY ONE-STOP SOURCE—FOR BOTH MONEY AND MATERIALS!

TALKING TO A BANK ABOUT CONSTRUCTION FINANCING FOR A NEW HOME CAN BE PRETTY DISCOURAGING. WHEN YOU TALK CONSTRUCTION FINANCING WITH CHELSEA LUMBER THE WHOLE PROCESS SUDDENLY SHIFTS FROM COMPLICATED TO DO-ABLE. ALL THE ESTIMATING, QUALIFYING, AND ARRANGING FOR ANY OUTSIDE CONTRACTING YOU'LL NEED IS DONE WITH YOUR PERSONAL CHELSEA LUMBER FINANCE "PARTNER" – NO HASSLES, NO RUNNING BACK AND FORTH, NO MIDDLEMAN – NO ANXIETY.

IT'S JUST YOU AND CHELSEA LUMBER MAKING A DREAM COME TRUE!

CHELSEA LUMBER HAS FINANCED MORE NEW-HOME CONSTRUCTION THAN ALL OTHER MICHIGAN BUILDING SUPPLY COMPANIES COMBINED!

OVER 2000 HOMES COMPLETED TO DATE
OVER 200 STARTED IN '94 –IN A 17-COUNTY AREA!

JOHN AND SUE WILLIAMS, LIMA TOWNSHIP, WITH THEIR DAUGHTERS ELIZABETH, 18, MELISSA, 15 AND REBECCA, 12, ARE REPRESENTATIVE OF THE HUNDREDS OF FAMILIES THAT HAVE BUILT NEW HOMES WITH CHELSEA LUMBER'S CONSTRUCTION FINANCING. THEY HAD A PLAN AND A BUILDING SITE IN MIND AND FELT THEY COULD HANDLE THE EVENTUAL MORTGAGE PAYMENTS. THE QUESTION WAS HOW TO GET FROM THAT POINT TO A FINISHED, MORTGAGEABLE HOME, THE ANSWER WAS CHELSEA LUMBER'S CONSTRUCTION FINANCING PLAN. JUST UNDER SIX MONTHS AFTER OUR FIRST "GET-TOGETHER" WITH JOHN AND SUE THEY MOVED INTO THEIR NEW HOME.

HELLO — I'M BOB DANIELS, PRESIDENT OF CHELSEA LUMBER

1995 WILL BE MY 40TH YEAR OF TRYING TO MAKE THE KINDS OF DECISIONS THAT EARN AND KEEP CUSTOMER LOYALTY. FROM THE BEGINNING MY POLICY HAS BEEN – PATIENT, CARING ATTENTION TO EACH CUSTOMER'S NEEDS AND SOLID VALUE FOR EACH BUILDING-DOLLAR SPENT. THE FOLKS WHO WORK HERE AND PUT THIS POLICY INTO EFFECT EVERY DAY ARE A SOURCE OF CONSIDERABLE PRIDE TO ME. THEY'RE KNOWLEDGEABLE, THEY'RE "SMALL-TOWN" FRIENDLY – AND I KNOW YOU'LL FIND THEM A PLEASURE TO DO BUSINESS WITH IN AN ERA OF CHAIN-STORE MERCHANDISING. CHELSEA LUMBER HAS GROWN AND PROSPERED. OUR UNIQUE CONSTRUCTION FINANCING PLAN REMAINS UNMATCHED IN TERMS OF EASY, HASSLE-FREE, ONE-STOP ACCESSIBILITY. NO PLAN THAT ATTEMPTS TO IMITATE IT COMES CLOSE! REST ASSURED, CHELSEA LUMBER WILL CONTINUE WORKING EVERY DAY TO DESERVE YOUR BUSINESS.

COME SEE US – WE'D LIKE TO BE PART OF YOUR NEXT BUILDING PROJECT!

SO HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR - BUILD THAT NEW HOME IN '95!

FOR THE PRICE OF A BLUEPRINT YOU CAN SET THE WHEELS IN MOTION FOR AN EARLY SPRING START OF YOUR NEW HOME. A MEMBER OF OUR HOME – FINANCE STAFF WILL WORK WITH YOU FOR AS LONG AS IT TAKES TO GET THE DESIGN – DETAIL AND MATERIAL CHOICES THE WAY YOU WANT THEM – SO WE CAN COME UP WITH A COST FOR THE MATERIALS.

IN THE MEANTIME, WITH OUR GUIDANCE WHENEVER YOU NEED IT, YOU CAN BE PUTTING TOGETHER THE "OUTSIDE" COSTS – HEATING, PLUMBING, WIRING, ETC. – LABOR AND MATERIALS CHELSEA LUMBER DOESN'T NORMALLY SUPPLY. WHEN THIS IS DONE WE'LL WRITE UP A FINAL WORKSHEET TO DETERMINE EXACTLY WHAT IT WILL TAKE TO BUILD YOUR HOME. IN OTHER WORDS JUST WHAT COMBINATION OF CASH, YOUR LABOR, AND POSSIBLE EXISTING EQUITY IN A BUILDING SITE IT'LL TAKE TO GET THE JOB DONE. NORMALLY THE THREE COMBINED SHOULD EQUAL ABOUT 20% OF THE FINAL VALUE OF YOUR HOME – (THE MORE LABOR BY YOU AND YOUR FRIENDS, THE LESS CASH YOU'LL NEED – AND SO ON).

UP TO THIS POINT YOUR ONLY COMMITMENT IS THE PRICE OF A BLUEPRINT – AND THE TIME YOU'LL HAVE SPENT ROUNDING UP SOME FIGURES – YOU'RE TOTALLY FREE TO DECIDE AGAINST BUILDING, TO POSTPONE THE PROJECT, OR JUST BACK OFF AND THINK IT OVER. YOU WON'T OWE CHELSEA LUMBER A PENNY! START HITCHING UP NOW – MAKE '95 A VERY SPECIAL YEAR FOR YOUR FAMILY!

NOW MEET THE FOLKS WHO CAN MAKE CHELSEA LUMBER'S CONSTRUCTION FINANCING PLAN WORK FOR YOU:

JOHN DANIELS

KEVIN KUNZELMAN

IVAN COLE

JEAN BUST

JOE EWALD

– THEY HAVE A COMBINED TOTAL OF JUST UNDER 50 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE IN GUIDING FAMILIES TO A NEW HOME OF THEIR OWN WITH OUR CONSTRUCTION FINANCING PLAN – WE'D LIKE TO GIVE ONE OF THEM THE ASSIGNMENT OF DOING THE SAME FOR YOU!
