810 to go the way of 313 in another year

By JAN JEFFRES

Real estate broker Ginger Barrons with her pager, her cellular phone, her two lines at home and six at work admits she's "a culprit" when it comes to the rapid proliferation of the local communi cations system

Still she s also feeling a bit like a victim of fast-paced growth as she faces the fact that sometime next year she ll need to redo her company s business cards sta tionary postcards key chains and refrig erator magnets

A citizens advisory committee working with Ameritech announced last week that the 810 area code local residents have just gotten used to will be replaced in the spring of 1997 with a new code for all of Oakland County and portions of Washte naw and Wayne counties including Northville

I just wish they had the foresight to see this when they made the original change A lot of people say you can use up your stationary but in my business you're handing out cards to people out-of-state" said Barrons who is a broker for Reliable Real Estate

I really think they were short-sighted last time I hope they have really, really looked into the future and projected far enough in advance I don't want to be in this position again It's so frustrating "

She calculates that in 1994, the last time the area code changed, her business was out-of-pocket by $1,000

The new three digits have yet to be assigned but will be determined by Bell-Core in New Jersey, which administers the North American Numbering Plan

One of things most people like about Northville is that our bustling burb in many ways is still just an old-fashioned small town

Customs remind us of that from familiar favorites like the water wheel to newer kids on the block like the Main Street clock

One of Northville s oldest tradi tions is the annual celebration of Independence Day From parades to pyrotechnics, we ve commemo rated America's birth in style every year for more than a century now

You can help continue that tra dition by offering some of your time and money to make this year's Fourth of July festivities another smash

Celebrate Northville a not-for profit volunteer group has begun work on a slew of fun and exciting events for the 1996 July Fourth gala Many of last year s most pop ular to-dos are expected back this year, chairperson Karen Woodside said.

"We want to make sure that our traditions keep going on Part of that this year is the theme of the day – celebrating 100 years of the automobile," she explained

The highlight of that will come with a classic car show planned

Wind swept

Part of downtown Northville was closed off for about an hour this week when gale-force winds tore off part of the roof of the Masonic Temple building at Main near Center. Wind speeds reached up to 60 mph, peeling off some of the roofing at about 12:30 p.m. According to police Sergeant Dave Fendelet, the city building inspector noticed debris falling off of the roof and alerted the building's owner, who called a repair crew. Until the inspector decided the crew had made the roof safe, police and fire officials blocked off Center Street from Dunlap to Cady. No injuries or damage was reported. The repair work continued on Tuesday.

1 in, 1 out in board race

With the filing date for nominating petitions for candidates interested in seeking election to the Northville Board of Education less than two weeks away, only one petition has been pulled so far

Board incumbent Joan Wadsworth has announced that she will seek reelection in the June 10 election Wadsworth has served on the school board for three years She was elected in 1993, and is the only candidate to pull nomi nating petitions to date

Wadsworth s announcement was expected by most district insiders who were surprised how ever, when board member Barbara Bennett announced she would not seek reelection for another term on the board

Bennett captured a one year seat in last year s election to fill the unexpired term of for mer school board member Pat Custer Bennett said serving on the board has been rewarding, but she is needed more at home

"When they get a bit older I d like to run for a board position but for now my time needs to be spent with my children

Bennett added that she d like to see someone with children in the school system run for the vacant position "If you have kids in the system then you feel a bit more connected to it and I feel that s important " she said

According to district Business and Finance Director John Street candidates must obtain a minimum of 20 signatures on their nominating

Wadsworth: In

petitions Those petitions must be turned into the district administrative office no later than 4 p m April 5 The last day a candidate can remove his or her name from the ballot is 4 p m April 11 Street added that the district offices will be closed on Good Friday April 5

Pair to stand trial on multiple charges

Two suspects could get life

By RANDY COBLE

Two men accused of robbing the Sunoco gas station at Five Mile and Haggerty roads with a hand gun two weeks ago have been bound over for trial

Brian Jeffrey Whitehead 45, and Albert Leon Dubenko, 41 could go to prison for the rest of their lives if convicted of even one of the dozen armed robberies they re charged with all over the Metro area

The two were arrested March 12 near Dubenko s home in Detroit According to police, they've hit gas stations in Northville Canton Northfield and Lyon townships as well as Westland, Livonia Novi and Scio Township in Washtenaw County

Their last heist allegedly took place at the Sunoco station Northville Township police say, on the evening of March 11 White head allegedly displayed a hand gun to the clerk and demanded all the money in the cash drawer, about $170 He then left in a car Dubenko was driving, police said

Preliminary exams for White head a Plymouth resident, and Dubenko were held Friday at 35th District Court in Plymouth Town ship

Judge John MacDonald ordered each man's case to be sent to the Wayne County Circuit Court for adjudication

The two will face their next hear ing in Detroit Recorders Court on Friday, April 5 MacDonald ordered bond for Whitehead and Dubenko to remain $50,000 cash apiece

To date both men, unable to post the bond amount, remain in the Wayne County Jail

Old-fashioned craft revived by downtown artisans

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

Enough with the hooker jokes They've heard them all ad nause-am.

These are two friends who've taken their passion for a revived early American art form and made it a business In November, Beth Sekerka and Beth Bacon of Novi opened Hooked On Rugs II in downtown Northville as a place to purchase anything you'd ever need to make handmade, primitive hooked rugs.

The handsome finished products are the kind of stuff you'd see in Good Housekeeping Magazine, in fact they are the stuff you see in Good Housekeeping Magazine if you picked up the February issue or plan to purchase the April one. Each features kits by Hooked on Rugs., located at 107 E. Main.

"Rugs seem to fit so nicely into so many different decors, not just primitive but contemporary as well. I love the texture of the rugs A lot of people who are artists and interested in design love the look of them," Bacon said.

Forget those latched rug kits you see at mainstream craft storms, with bright synthetic "wools." These replicate the more muted look of vintage folk art pieces, which sell for big bucks in antique stores and art galleries.

While some controversy exists as to whether the craft originated in North America or Great Britain, it's generally believed that primi tive rug hooking began in Canada and worked its way down to New England sometime prior to the Civil War.

Thrifty farm women would rip old wool clothing and use a hook to pull tufts of the strips along the lines of a pattern, typically drawn by hand on burlap with a charcoal stick from the fireplace

'A lot of patterns would be very primitive. You would have a bird larger than a house or a person

New Dual-Acting Product Relieves The Pain Of Arthritis

Arthritis refers to more than 100 different diseases that can affect the joints as well as other parts of the body, causing pain, swelling, redness and loss of motion in the affected area. These symptoms may make it difficult or painful to move around or accomplish daily tasks. At this point, there is no known cure for most forms of arthritis, but there are a variety of ways to manage arthritis pain including medications, physical therapy, exercise, hot and cold treatments, joint protection methods and external analgesics.

Two proven external pain relievers

External analgesics - creams and gels that are rubbed on at the site of arthritis pain - are pain relievers known for their ability to provide quick relief that may not always last long Menthacin™ is a new external analgesic that helps to overcome this problem It has a dual-acting formula that combines two proven external pain relievers - menthol and capsaicin. Menthol, derived from a type of mint plant, is a common ingredient found in many popular external analgesics which works fast to relieve pain.

Capsaicin is derived from a type of pepper plant and its pain-relieving properties have been known for hundreds of years. It is thought that capsaicin stimulates the depletion of a powerful neurotransmitter known as Substance P. Substance P helps "communicate" the sensation of pain from its site to the brain. By depleting Substance P, the pain message is diffused and the sensation of pain is lessened or eliminated.

Medical research indicates that capsaicin is most effective with continued use and usually requires repeated application in a regular regimen to reach peak effectiveness. The result is long lasting pain relief.

Fast acting, long lasting pain relief

There are other products on the market that contain capsaicin or capsaicin oleoresin. Pain relief with these products may not be immediate. Menthacin's dual acting formula - with menthol and capsaicin - offers you both immediate and long lasting arthritis pain relief

If you are among the millions searching for a way to manage arthritis pain consider the newest breakthrough to effective relief...Menthacin™.

Grocery workers run down suspect in cigarette caper

He may wear a perpetual smile, but his employees made something clear to a would-be shoplifter recently: don't mess with Farmer Jack.

Three workers at the Seven Mile Road supermarket chased after, caught up with and subdued a South Lyon man for allegedly trying to steal $222 worth of cigarettes on the afternoon of March 15.

The workers told Northville Township police that they saw the man, 20, load up a shopping basket with 10 cartons of cigarettes and a $3 box of cereal, then walk past the checkout aisle to the exit door. When questioned, he allegedly dropped the basket and took off running.

The three employees pursued him, tackling the man near the Big Lots store. A large pane glass window was broken during the struggle, but the man was brought back to Farmer Jack. Police arrived to find the man sitting on a bench near the front of the store, surrounded by a large group of workers.

The man allegedly admitted to taking the cigarettes because a friend told him it would be easy to do and that he knew someone who would buy them from him

A computer check revealed a felony arrest warrant out for the man for retail fraud in a case arising in Northfield Township. The man was booked and then held at police headquarters until an officer from that community picked him up.

DRUNK DRIVERS ARRESTED: Township police arrested three men for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol last week. All were taken to police headquarters, booked and held until they sobered up.

• The first bust came on March 18, at about 12:45 a.m. An officer near the intersection of Northville Road and Seven Mile said he saw a 1984 Ford Tempo make a wide left turn from Seven onto southbound Northville Road and cross traffic lines twice.

The driver, a 19-year-old Canton resident, allegedly admitted to drinking "three beers an hour ago" but failed field sobriety tests. A breath test at police headquarters later found him to be in violation, the officer said.

• It was the turn of a Chandler, Ariz., man on March 22. A township officer driving behind the man's 1992 Plymouth Sundance on Seven Mile just before 2 a.m. said he saw it driving well below the speed limit and crossing traffic lines

The man, 20, would admit to consuming only one beer but breath testing later showed him to have a blood alcohol level of .11 percent, over the legal limit of .10 percent.

APARTMENT BURGLARIZED: Someone broke into a Northville Place Drive man's home during the night of March 12-13, stealing thousands of dollars worth of property.

The thieves kicked in the door, according to police, and took a video game system, cash, a television, a camera and the man's computer.

The goods are valued at $2,620.

NEGLECTFUL MOTHER: A 41-year-old Farmington Hills woman may face child neglect charges after she apparently left her 2-year-old daughter in an unlocked vehicle while shopping in downtown Northville March 21.

According to a police report, officers were dispatched to the rear parking lot of Comerica Bank after a passerby reported spotting an infant unattended in a silver Toyota.

When police arrived they found a small female child sleeping in a car seat, wearing only a winter coat, pants and shoes. Officers also reported that the infant was clutching a small plastic sandwich bag in her hand.

The doors to the vehicle were unlocked, and as officers were preparing to transport the child, the mother arrived. The woman told police she had gone into Anne's Crafts and didn't bring the child inside the shop because the baby had been sleeping and the woman didn't want to disturb her.

The police report also stated that the car interior was quite cool, and that the outside temperature was about 20 degrees.

The child was placed back into the custody of the mother. Northville Police have referred the case to the Department of Social Services.

UNDERAGED BUYER: A 19-year-old Northville man was cited for attempting to purchase alcohol March 22.

According to a police report, the man attempted to use fake identification to purchase beer from Hamlet's, 1051 Novi Road. The store owner didn't fall for the ruse and promptly phoned police, who in turn, took the man into custody.

Citizens with information about any of these incidents are asked to call Northville City police at 349-1234 or Northville Township police at 349-9400.

For drug-related offenses, leave an anonymous message with the Western Wayne Narcotics Enforcement Team on its 24-hour, toll-free tipline, 1-800-769-0172.

The cold weather season just doesn't seem to want to let go. Last week's spring snowstorm forced Northville resident Archie MacDougall to do a little work clearing off his van. This week strong winds pounded the area, bringing temperatures to unseasonable lows overnight Tuesday/Wednesday.

Marks lives out lifelong dream

City officer right where he wants to be on job

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

Northville Police Officer Jim Marks knows the streets of this city like the back of his hand

For close to 20 years he has put thousands of miles on his patrol car, driving the 2 3 square miles that contains Northville, but his knowledge of the community comes from more than his experiences as a police officer – he has also been a Northville resident his entire life

"I remember wanting to be a police officer in this community when I was attending Northville High School," he said "I always had this dream that I'd be a Northville policeman "

Marks served as a police cadet in 1976, but before that he served in the police auxiliary.

"All I did then was strictly traffic control and things of that nature, but it was my first real chance to begin living my dream of being an officer," he said "Turning 18-years-old was a big deal for me because then I was able to ride along in the patrol car as a second officer "

A few years later Marks received the official designation of patrolman Now a police sergeant, he still spends most of his time on the road which makes the job he explained, much more enjoyable

He is also the city s DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer, teaching school children about the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

"The DARE program has gone real well, and I've received plenty of support from the department, the schools and most of all the parents " he explained "The most enjoyable aspect is, of course, doing something positive for the kids, and that s rewarding

"I know there are plenty of people who wouldn t want to do my job everyday " he added "There are some routine aspects to it, I'll admit but for the most part there are quite a few different aspects that make the job enjoyable."

Sergeant Jim Marks has patrolled the roads and neighborhoods of Northville for 21 years.

He has also spent more than his fair share of working the midnight shift, something he doesn't mind doing "The advantages and disadvantages balance out," he added "I've worked midnights the past seven months, and it doesn't bother me."

Marks will be eligible to retire in five years, and although he's looking forward to the day when he can relax on his property in Gladwin, Mich., Marks doesn't mind the wait

"Northville has treated me real well. I grew up here and will have spent my working career here," he said "I've gotten to know quite a few people along the way, and I haven't regretted one moment

"I have to say that not too many people get a chance to live their dream," Marks concluded. "When I was a kid growing up in this community all I wanted to do is exactly what I'm doing right now, patrolling the streets that I grew up on It doesn't really get any better than that "

Lecture to focus on power of flower

The Northville Arts Commission will present a lecture entitled "The Power of the Flower with Detroit Institute of Arts docent Judy Knowles on Tuesday, April 23, at the Northville High School Forum

Crossing cultures of time periods, this slide presentation shows the influence of flowers on artists and explores how and why they use them in their art Also included are views of the exciting Art and Flowers Week" at the Detroit Institute of Arts

"Creating enthusiasm for the Detroit Institute of Arts is what is most important to me,' Knowles said of her 18 years as a DIA volunteer. As a docent, she conducts student and adult tours through the museum collections and special exhibits Recently, she completed a two-year stint as chairperson of the DIA Speakers Bureau

Tickets for the lecture are $5 if purchased in advance Call Joann Dayton at (810) 347-9664 Tickets may also be purchased at the door for $5.50

Northville High School is located at 775 N Center St The lecture starts at 7 30 p m

Changes could clarify township development picture

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

A sage once noted that it's better to have and not need than to need and not have.

Northville Township officials began putting that principle into practice this week, moving to modify community ordinance standards governing planned unit developments (PUDs).

The modifications will tighten up and better define what the township wants to see in large mixed-use development projects. The only one on tap right now is the biggest in community history: the Wayne County-owned land on the south side of town.

County officials are scheduled to meet with the township board of trustees tonight, March 28, to discuss their ideas about how to develop the 800-odd acres they control between Five and Six Mile and Beck Road and Hines Drive.

Among the different uses they've proposed for discussion are residential areas, some industrial/R&D space and even an 18-hole golf course.

The PUD ordinance is an option that allows a tradeoff of sorts. The township can choose to allow a property owner to develop a parcel that normal zoning wouldn't allow. For example, the Ward Church land is being designed using a PUD; the property is zoned for office and residential use but the deal allows the church and a shopping center to be built.

On Tuesday, the township planning commission held a public hearing on and recommended board approval of a comprehensive revision of the PUD ordinance.

Generally, the changes put new requirements on a PUD plan in order to win approval. The requirements are intended to make a development conform to the vision of Northville Township that's expressed by the master plan.

The modifications will tighten up and better define what the township wants to see in large mixed-use development projects.

The proposed changes call for:

- Reserving much of the total site for residential uses. The tentative PUD modifications demand a minimum figure of 40 percent, 30 percent of that to be single family residential. The ordinance includes "an emphasis on single family homes."
- Setting aside at least 20 percent of a site for open space common to the residents who will be living there. The open space area, the PUD says, should be as contiguous as possible.
- Carving out a minimum of 5 percent for public facilities or public recreation space, not to include any golf course land. If a developer wants to include golf course acreage as open space, only 50 percent of the total would count.

The idea township officials have in mind is to ensure that public open space land is accessible by the public at any time. Board members have said they think a golf course wouldn't qualify.

Five percent of the county property would amount to about 45 acres, which the board would like to see come as a park along Beck Road across from the existing Beck Road Park.

- Preserving woodlands and natural features that would be lost with a conventional development plan and imposing "high quality" architecture and landscaping standards on any site plan.
- Allowing a maximum of 25 percent of a site to be used for an industrial park or R&D-type development. Part of the county property is expected to be sold to Optical Imaging Systems for a new, second manufacturing plant next to its existing one on Five Mile.

If that second plant is built, the trustees have said they want to see it go up along Five Mile to the east of OIS, not to the north along Beck as has been discussed.

Education Notes

Beginning golfers, ages 7 to 14, can learn to play golf this spring at Schoolcraft College. Topics in the Youth Golf class include the pre-swing routine, the full swing, rules and etiquette.

Lessons will be held on the college's driving range and minicourse. Equipment will be provided or students can bring their own. The six-week course begins Sunday, April 14. Classes for beginners will be held from 10:30-11:50 a.m. Advanced beginners will meet from 9 to 10:20 a.m.

To register or for more information, contact Schoolcraft College's Continuing Education Services office at (313) 462-4413. Schoolcraft College is on Haggerty Road between Six and Seven Mile roads.

• Schoolcraft College is offering a four-week course in beginning rollerblading. A certified instructor will teach students to start, stride and stop. The class is open to persons of all ages, but those 18 years old or younger must have parent or guardian permission.

Rentals are available for skates and protective gear and students can use the equipment outside of class. The class begins Monday, April 15, from 6 to 8 p.m.

To register or for more information, contact Schoolcraft College's Continuing Education Services office at (313) 462-4413.

• The Children's Center at Schoolcraft College will hold its annual kindergarten roundup Tuesday, April 16, from 7-8 p.m. Parents may register their children for the program during this time for the 1996-97 school year.

The Schoolcraft kindergarten features instruction from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in a new, state-of-the-art facility. Students will be instructed using a language-based curriculum that incorporates language into every aspect of their learning to promote literacy. They will begin to use computers and receive instruction in music and movement one day each week. Parents may take advantage of daycare services from 7-9 a.m. and after school from 3 to 6 p.m.

Before- and after-care programs are included in the basic fee, along with lunch.

Tuition for the program is $125 a week. To register at the roundup, a $50, nonrefundable deposit check is required. The Children's Center is located on the south side of the south parking lot on the Livonia campus.

College registration continues for spring

Madonna University's on-campus registration, spring/summer term, for new and returning students continues through Friday, March 29. The registrar's office will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. today and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. tomorrow.

Late registration will be held from Monday, April 1, to Friday, May 3. During late registration, office hours will remain the same with the exception of: April 12 when the office will open at 9 a.m.; and April 29 and May 2, when the office will close at 5 p.m. Classes begin the week of May 6.

Non-admitted students must obtain a permit to register from the Admissions office. Students may enroll in day, evening and weekend classes.

Madonna offers associate's and bachelor's over 50 professional and career-oriented majors and master's degrees in business, education, health services administration, hospice and nursing

The university is located at I-96 and Levan Road in Livonia For information, call (313) 432-5339.

Local alum club wins honors for scholarship efforts

San Diego, Greater Boston – and Northville? Those were the three outstanding alumni clubs honored by the University of Michigan Alumni Association for 1995

Since San Diego has approximately 500 members and Greater Boston 600 to 650, and the U of M Alumni Club of Northville has about 125 members, the Northville Club must be doing something right.

Coming in third this year the U of M Club of Northville was presented the Silver Award at last fall's Go Blue Brunch

Michigan Alumnus magazine, a national magazine published by the U of M Alumni Association, identifies the Northville club as one of the fastest growing alumni clubs in the country

It has contributed $17 000 in scholarships to 27 Northville students since it began six years ago

In addition to the local scholarships, the club members assist the U of M undergraduate admissions office in recruiting area students and in areas not represented by a local alumni club

Sundays in Ann Arbor, featuring cultural performances, social events, the popular U of M/MSU pregame football bash and other sports activities are the hallmarks of the club

"It's great that a club of this size can promote the level of interest and create the programs that this club has " said Jeff Schoenherr regional alumni relations coordinator of the U of M Alumni Association in Ann Arbor

The club will hold its annual meeting at a brunch at Meadow Brook Country Club on Sunday April 21 at noon

The guest speaker will be Steve Grafton, executive director of the U of M Alumni Association

Tickets are $18 and can be reserved by calling Mary Ellen King treasurer (at 810) 344-2027

Membership is not limited to alumni Friends of U of M can join the club by calling Richard Potchynok club president at (810) 348 7693 or membership chair, Lou LaChance at (810) 305-9990 or 348-9077

Author to speak at library event

Editor's note. Author Nicholas Delbanco is the featured speaker at the HomeTown-Observer Newspapers and Libraries Book and Author Luncheon April 18. The newspapers and Friends of the Library for Northville, Novi, Canton and Plymouth have joined together to bring authors to the local communities.

Author Nicholas Delbanco said a newspaper article about him should more properly focus on his latest book.

"The story really resides in that novel rather than the guy at this desk," said Delbanco, about whom John Updike once wrote. He wrestles with the abundance of his gifts as a novelist the way other men wrestle with their deficiencies."

Delbanco's latest novel, In the Name of Mercy, is a medical thriller that explores the intricacies of euthanasia in today's medicine.

Since writing his first novel, The Martlet's Tale, as a 1960s Columbia University graduate student, Delbanco, 53, has penned 15 more books.

At present, Delbanco presides over the University of Michigan's master of fine arts program and the Hopwood awards program.

Born in London during World War II, Delbanco criss-crossed the ocean with his pond-hopping parents, Kurt and Barbara, so many times that he didn't quite know where he belonged.

"My family took some time to decide what side of the Atlantic we lived on," he said. "To a degree, I still think of parts of Europe as home, but there's not much question Michigan is my home now."

Although Delbanco published his first book at 24, he never expected to be an author. "Like most other people of that generation, I wanted to be either a poet, a rock musician or a movie star," he said. "It didn't occur to me that I'd be able to make a living as a writer, but when I had a book contract when I graduated, it began to look possible.

"So I was able to tell my parents that I had a job. I could say, 'Look, I'm a writer,' which in some degree I've been pretending ever since."

FACT BOX

- What: Author luncheon sponsored by HomeTown and Observer Newspapers and area libraries.
- When: Thursday, April 18.
- Who: Novelist Nicholas Delbanco.
- Where: Fox Hills Country Club, Salem Township.
- Tickets: $18, at Northville District Library. Reserve by April 5.

Still, Delbanco's books didn't sell well enough that he could contemplate writing full time. "There are not many writers in America who make a fully-living wage just from their writing," he said. "The academy has become the mother of us all in some sense. I have a wife and two children, and I would feel a little risky about not holding down a steady job."

Delbanco taught at Bennington College in Vermont for 19 years before coming to U-M in 1985.

His master of fine arts program is so popular that more than 300 applicants competed for fewer than 20 places in the fall 1996 program.

Andrea Beauchamp Delbanco's assistant had already read Running in Place three times before Delbanco came to U-M, so she was understandably thrilled at the prospect.

"One person said when they heard that he was coming here, 'The Delbancos will improve your social life 100 percent,' and it's true. There's an art to being a good host, and he's got it. He always tries to bring out the best in his guests and make everyone feel like they're contributing."

Delbanco is "really a workaholic, so he gets more done than any five people you know," Beauchamp said. And his connections with other authors are invaluable. He knows all these writers, so he can tap into them on their book tours and get them to come by and talk to the writing students."

By the time students reach Delbanco's classroom, they are already quite good, but lack polish.

"No one has ever created a genius out of a writer who doesn't have any talent," Delbanco said. "But you can certainly help people along. A writer needs the advice of senior professionals in order to improve."

Presently, Delbanco is working on three books at once.

Tickets for the luncheon at Fox Hills Country Club in Salem Township are $18 and are available at the Northville District Library, 215 W. Main Street; Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road; the Plymouth Public Library, 223 S. Main Street, Plymouth; and the Novi Public Library, 45245 W. Ten Mile Road, Novi.

Reservations must be made by April 5. In the Name of Mercy will be available at the luncheon.

Writer and U-M Professor Nicholas Delbanco will discuss his books at an author's luncheon April 18

Library Lines

LIBRARY HOURS: Regular hours of the Northville District Library are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Sunday, 1-5 p.m.

SPRING STORYTIME SESSIONS: Join us for stories and much more. Registration for both spring sessions began Thursday, March 7, for children ages 3 and a half to 5 years and not yet in kindergarten. Enrollment is limited.

Session I is on Tuesdays from now until April 2, at 11 a.m. or 2 p.m. Session II will be on Wednesdays, April 17-May 1, also at 11 a.m. or 2 p.m.

FROM THE FRIENDS ... Janine Bauchat was unanimously reelected president of the Friends of the Northville District Library at the group's recent annual meeting.

During the 1996-97 business year, which is expected to see the opening of the new library in October, she will be assisted by Karla Scobie and Debbie Malinowski, vice presidents, Arlynne Rawson, treasurer, Michele Fecht, recording secretary, and Patsy Johnson, corresponding secretary.

Four directors were also elected to the board, Marcy Hershoren, Bette Cahill, Ann Vickers and Geraldine Mills.

Cahill will continue as chair of the gift book program while Hershoren, with Cindy Smith, will be in charge of the welcome baby program.

Other committee chairs are Mernie Hines and Dee Prom, indexing project, Pat Allen, membership, Betty Griffin, newsletter plus book and author luncheon, Lois Winters, staff appreciation, and Edith Dunbar, public relations.

Kudos went to Caroljean Stockhausen, who until recently headed the welcome baby program she organized in 1988.

Families with new babies receive packets which encourage reading and the use of the library. Included in each packet is the baby's first library card.

Friends are busy selling tickets for this year's Observer/HomeTown Newspapers and Libraries Book and Author Luncheon planned for Thursday, April 18, at the Fox Hills Country Club in Plymouth.

The keynote speaker will be Nicholas Delbanco, the author of My Name is Mercy.

Tickets are available at the circulation desk for $18 each.

Mothers' Club holds successful fund-raiser

Move over Victorian Festival, another historical era is about to achieve celebrity status.

The Mothers' Club Jukebox Saturday Night fund-raiser March 9 was so successful, organizers plan to stage it again in 1997.

"Tell everyone to start shopping at the thrift shops for '60s clothes," club member Debi Lopez said. "We're going to do it next year."

According to Lopez, some 280 people attended the event at Fox Hills Country Club, dressed like flower children and disco dudes from the 1960s and '70s.

The fund-raiser, which featured a silent auction and dancing, raised over $9,000.

"We're very grateful to everyone who contributed to the auction," Lopez said. "It was wonderful, especially since this was the first time we've ever done it."

Eighty-five items were up for bid during the silent auction, including signed sports memorabilia from the Detroit Pistons and Red Wings.

Twenty-one door prizes were also given away.

The Mothers' Club raises funds to provide supplemental materials for Northville school children. Individual cases of hardship and special needs are also considered for funding.

TV debut put on hold when interview is cut

By LEE SNIDER
Editor

Nick Simkins has never been one to mince words and when the cameras roll he isn't about to change that approach.

Simkins, a Northville lawyer, was scheduled to appear on last Friday's broadcast of the ABC news magazine show 20/20 but some of the statements he made were apparently too forceful to get included in the program.

As a result, the interview was deleted from the final product.

"They wanted something a little more neutral, a little more bland," Simkins said. "I'm disappointed but at least the word got out."

Simkins was interviewed by a 20/20 crew last January as part of story on alleged defects in Daisy BB guns. He is representing an Upper Peninsula family in a lawsuit against the company.

Family and friends expected to see Simkins on national television when the show aired last Friday and The Northville Record ran a front-page story March 21 about the much-anticipated broadcast.

But the program producer called at 2:30 p.m the day the show was to run and let Simkins know that his interview footage ended up on the cutting room floor.

"I told them (during the taping) that if you were Davy Crockett or Doc Holiday himself you couldn't tell if those rifles were loaded," Simkins said. "The main thing is the word got out and maybe some kid will get his injury prevented."

The 20/20 story focused on the case of Tony Washburn, a Marquette youth who was partially paralyzed by an errant discharge from a BB gun. Simkins is co-counsel for the family and is claiming the Daisy air rifles contain BBs even when the chambers appear empty.

According to Simkins, company representatives tried to obstruct the 20/20 investigation and threatened legal action against the television network. The heat they received apparently convinced producers to tone down their segment.

Simkins is a known expert on the subject of traumatic head injury. His legal firm, Simkins & Simkins P.C., has an office in the Northville Executive Center, 200 N. Center.

The case against Daisy remains in litigation.

Volunteer families needed for foreign exchange program

It's not a "what," it's a "where." Have you ever wished you and your family knew more about the ever-changing world around you? Many people have the desire to learn more about the diverse cultures of the world, but don't have the time to dust off the world atlas to quench their curiosity. Do you know how to throw an Australian boomerang? Can you say, "hello" in Japanese?

Volunteering to host a high school foreign exchange student can be a fun and exciting way to learn more about the different cultures of the world, while opening a young person's eyes to the excitement of American life

The American Intercultural Student Exchange is currently seeking host families in your area for the upcoming school year. Host families provide exchange students with meals, a bed, and a supportive, family atmosphere. Local representatives remain in contact with students from the day they arrive in August, until their departure the following June. AISE students attend local high schools, and have their own medical insurance and spending money.

Call the toll free number to learn more about hosting, or to read some of the many student autobiographies on file.

Call AISE at 1-800-SIBLING for more information.

Mill Race Matters

Many thank yous are in order this week as the Northville Historical Society makes many additions to the Northville Community Archives located at Mill Race Village.

Thanks once again to Dave and Nancy Schoultz for loaning their valuable photograph albums for copying. Thank you to Mernie and Phelps Hines for the contribution of several years accumulation of Our Town Directories and of Northville Mother's Club Telephone Directories.

Thank you to city officials who have turned over numerous records from the community's history including minutes of the village commission and early city council, assessment roles, ordinances and an early village charter. Thanks also to Marlene Shoebridge for the addition of a photograph and tintype of the Northville concert band.

The Historical Society also wishes to thank the 14th Tennessee Infantry Regiment for its cash donation.

Other area historical societies have requested that the following information be provided to interested members of the community. On April 18 at 6:30 p.m. the Plymouth Historical Museum plans to feature "The History of Baseball" with speaker David Martin. On April 30 they plan to host a Dumouchelle antique appraisal clinic. June 1 is the date for their annual yard and treasure sale. Contact (313) 455-8940 for details on all of these events.

Kempf House Center in Ann Arbor holds Wednesday brown bag lunches from noon to 1 p.m. Upcoming lunches include "The Irish Settlers in Northfield Township," on April 10; "Finding Information in the County Registrar of Deeds Records," April 17; "A German Family in Ann Arbor," on April 24; "Food for the Underground Railroad," on May 1; "A Study of the Hamlets of Cherry Hill and Dundee, Mich.," on May 8, and "Historic Paint Colors and Schemes," on May 15. Call (313) 994-4898 for more information.

On Sunday, March 31, Mid-Michigan Antiquarian Book Dealers Association sponsors its Genealogy and History Book Fair at the Lansing Center in Lansing, Mich., from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Contact (517) 332-0123 for information.

Even farther away the Quebec heritage seminar will be held June 22 at the Family History Center in Traverse City. For reservation data contact Pat Suuter, 4151 Sutter Road, Kewadin, MI 49648.

Also the Michigan Festivals and Events Association will sponsor a seminar on the latest information for festival planners, fund-raisers, community volunteers and tourism leaders on April 19-20 at Shanty Creek resort in Bellaire. Call (517) 845-5074 for more information.

As March comes to a conclusion this column takes the opportunity to remind all that March serves as Women's History Month. This community can be proud to recognize a number of outstanding and memorable ladies from throughout its history.

Included in that number are individuals like Dr. Mary Lapham who pioneered work in the treatment of tuberculosis in the first decades of this century, and Elizabeth Yerkes who served as first teacher in this community. Also included are: Lucy Lockwood Stout Dowd who worked for woman's suffrage founding the Northville Woman's Club in 1893, and Sarah Cochrane for whom the area branch of the Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter is named.

Sarah Bradley is the first Northville woman known to have published a periodic journal in the area while Lucy Stout wrote for many regional and national publications.

In more recent times Ruth Knapp worked as a Red Cross nurse and helped found the Northville Historical Society while Mary Alexander kept an eye on community government. Carolann Ayers served as the city's first female council member and Dorothy Flattery had a wing of the Novi Library named for her.

Suzie Heintz and Georgina Goss have represented us admirably in state, county and regional government.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Jaycees, the American Association of University Women and others have taken time over the years to acknowledge many outstanding women from this community.

With only a few days remaining to celebrate Women's history, let us celebrate all of them.

–Diane Rockall

Golf card benefits enthusiasts, ALAM

Just when you thought you've run out of gift ideas for Easter, Mother's Day, Graduation, Father's Day or birthdays – the American Lung Association of Michigan (ALAM) has the perfect present for any golfer you know. The 1996 Golf Privilege Card can turn the blues of winter into the greens of spring and summer.

The perfect gift for all occasions, the golf card comes to the rescue and offers free greens fees to your golfer. For $35, your gift can be used at more than 150 of Michigan's finest golf courses The Golf Privilege Card is valid from April 1 through Oct. 31

While your golfer spends time on the courses trying to find a cure for a bad slice, the American Lung Association of Michigan will be spending time in laboratories, researching to find a cure for lung disease. You can feel good about your gift when you know that research, education and community programs are funded, in part, by your purchase of the Golf Privilege Card. ALAM's aim is to fight lung disease – your aim is for a hole-in-one

Purchase your Golf Privilege Card for any of the upcoming 1996 holidays, birthdays or graduations in your life. They also make a great just because surprise for the golfer you love. Stop by your local lung association office or call, 800 LUNG-USA

Battle shaping up over state transportation funds

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

SEMCOG and Gov. John Engler are going eyeball to eyeball over splitting up road money. The construction season is almost here, and both sides are drawing their weapons.

Well, either solve the problem or renegotiate, said a hopeful John Amberger, executive director of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, a seven-county planning agency. But SEMCOG delegates loaded their weapon by authorizing him to hire a lawyer and sue for a larger share of federal aid. The vote was 26-15.

Engler is using his weapons, too. "He has threatened aid to Detroit Metro Airport (run by Wayne County)," said Michael Duggan, deputy county executive "He has threatened the deal in Oakland County on Clinton Valley Center land. Mayor (Dennis) Archer has been threatened on state aid to Tiger Stadium.

"I've listened to Brooks Patterson (Republican Oakland County executive), say I'm getting pressured statewide – my career is threatened Brooks is putting roads ahead of party Courage is contagious," said Duggan at the March 21 SEMCOG executive committee meeting.

To understand the duel, think of a two-house legislature. Engler is one; SEMCOG the other. Both must agree on identical versions of a bill for it to become law. The Federal Highway Administration has set an April 1 deadline for a deal Contractors are sending out form letters warning SEMCOG officials to reconsider their political posturing

The bill in this case is called TIP, for Transportation Improvement Program. It's a three-year plan for splitting either $1 8 billion or $2.1 billion in federal and state money The total size depends on whether Engler and the Legislature can agree on $350 million in new fuel taxes.

SEMCOG's version gives the Michigan Department of Transportation an 86-14 percent advantage in the first year and the time-honored 75-25 advantage in the second and third years The state ought to look long and hard at it, said SEMCOG's Amberger It's a workable solution

MDOT spokesman Louis Lambert disagreed He said SEMCOG's version leaves nothing for state bridges and safety projects in the two outer years Supporting Engler, some Republican lawmakers from Macomb, Livingston and western Wayne counties accuse SEMCOG of vetoing Engler's plan

Not so, said John Grubba, Patterson's deputy county executive and former chief of the Oakland Road Commission. Under federal law, the governor and the metropolitan planning organization (SEMCOG) must agree. ISTEA (the federal transportation act) says a plan must be fiscally constrained – no projects to be guessed at, said Grubba, blistering MDOT's Lambert for failing to list the bridge and safety projects it wants.

Grubba said the latest SEMCOG TIP knocks out state bike paths, roadside parks and restroom improvements in the two outer years. "Our roads are going to hell. "I'll go for better local roads over toilets," he said, declaring the Engler-MDOT plan "ridiculous, bizarre; it will be sent back by the feds."

HOW THEY VOTED

Supporting the SEMCOG position with its authorization to sue were all of the Wayne County and Detroit delegations, a majority from Livingston County, all of Washtenaw County, all of Detroit and half of Oakland County. Supporting the Engler-MDOT plan were all of Macomb County, half of Oakland and MDOT's Lambert.

All eight delegates from Wayne County voted yes, including County Executive Ed McNamara, Duggan, the executive staff and suburban officials such as Livonia Councilmember Mike McGee.

BACKWARD GLANCE ... at Northville's past
by Randy Coble

Any of you who are regular readers of the stuff I write in this column and elsewhere can probably guess that ol' Randy has an ongoing love affair with democracy. I suppose it's because I read too many history books in college.

Every time I think about our country, with all its imperfections, I'm amazed that we've enjoyed some freedoms for so long that we take them for granted. That's why I think holidays like the Fourth of July are important. I especially like the Fourth the way we do it here in Northville: small town style, complete with parades and fireworks.

Believe me, that's not a pleasure everyone's lucky enough to experience. In the age where we have mega-corporations paying millions to have their own college bowl games, I wouldn't be surprised if Taco Bell managed to slap its logo on the Liberty Bell.

Celebrating – and commemorating – the Fourth of July is a longstanding tradition Flipping back through old copies of The Northville Record makes that abundantly clear. I think the 1776 Bicentennial took the cake, though.

America's 200th birthday party was celebrated with a bang in Northville. That spirit of remembrance set the tone for the day with an interdenominational prayer service held at Mill Race Village. More than 500 people attended, singing hymns and thanking God.

The theme of Independence Day that year was "Famous Events of 200 years," and it truly inspired some of our citizens. They put together no less than 25 historic floats, stretching the parade over two miles. The winner of a float judging contest was one built by seven families remembering the Boston Tea Party.

Bells rung at noon that day and the crowds cheered as the Union Jack was ceremoniously lowered and the Stars and Stripes run up the Mill Race flagpole in its stead.

All of this, by the way, is an attempt to explain why I'm giving my support to Celebrate Northville, the volunteer group that's planning this year's Independence Day celebration. We all enjoyed the parade and fireworks and many other fun things that Northville had to offer last Fourth of July, but the bottom line is that those things require money and time from people just like you.

Get involved in your community. Give Karen Woodside, chair of Celebrate Northville, a call at 349-1919 and offer to help, either with your cash or your effort. They can use all they can get.

Randy Coble is always interested in your Northville memories. Give him a call anytime at 349-1700.

Science class stretches minds

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

What can you do with a couple of hundred marbles, some cardboard, masking tape, rubber bands, and a three-foot-long wood rod?

That's the challenge placed before 20 sixth grade Meads Mill Middle School students in Kathy Stutterheim's science class. The students, along with four representatives from the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE), are taking part in the SAE sponsored program entitled "A World in Motion."

According to Stutterheim, engineers have been coming to Meads Mill classrooms for several years to share their enthusiasm for engineering with students.

"The goal is to reach middle school kids with the message that the field of engineering is a viable option for many," she said.

Stutterheim and engineers Sena Cooper, James Oshanski, Keith Paterson and Steve Kozak are helping Meads Mill students develop an engineering design project that would give students a real taste of the process engineers actually go through to develop a marketable product

"The emphasis was on teamwork and the idea of design, modify, test and retest until the product is the best that it can be," Stutterheim explained.

The product the students were asked to design was a tote bar for a fictional company.

The students job as designers was to develop the concept into a prototype within specified guidelines, improve the prototype with a final design, and then demonstrate the success of the redesign through testing.

The students were only allowed to use two, 108 square inch pieces of cardboard, one newspaper page, a 12-inch length of aluminum foil, a 12-inch length of plastic wrap, four craft sticks, four squares of paper towel, a 24-inch length of string, masking tape, Elmer's glue, rubberbands, toothpicks, and one wooden rod three feet in length and five-sixteenths of an inch in diameter

"One of the greatest challenges for the kids was calculating the volume of their designs and arriving at an idea of what 50 cubic inches might look like," Stutterheim said.

"It was fun to hear the students arrive at the conclusion that (50 cubic inches) wasn't as large as they thought it would be."

Once the tote was constructed, the product went through initial testing. Stutterheim said that each tote was required to carry at least 200 grams of weight.

Marbles were selected to be used "So the students had to place 200 grams of marbles in their totes, and then with each student holding the end of the wood rod, they had to carry the marbles 30 feet in under 10 seconds," she explained.

"If the tote broke because of the weight, or if marbles spilled out, the students had to go back to their design and correct the problems."

A minimum score of 100 for design, analysis, redesign, aesthetic, speed, suspended length, static weight held, and volume, were awarded to each project, with extra points given in the speed, length, static weight held, and volume categories.

"They had to make decisions in weighing the scoring options," Stutterheim said. "They had to decide whether they should build larger than the minimum or go for an increased score by being able to carry more weight or to move more quickly "

Stutterheim added that the project would not be as successful were it not for the visiting engineers in the classroom.

"This effort is very important to kids and teachers," she concluded "These engineers bring a different perspective to the classroom and the kids are excited to have this interest shown in them. They really feel like they are doing something important "

Meads Mill Middle School sixth grader Joe Santieu weighs marbles that will be carried in his prototype tote bar as part of an engineering project in Kathy Stutterheim's science class. The students were required to develop a product concept into a prototype within specified guidelines, improve the prototype with a final design, then demonstrate the success of the redesign through testing. The tote bars have to carry marbles weighing at least 200 grams.

High schoolers join Rotary in outreach

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

> "Hopefully, we can show that students can make a positive impact on communities other than our own."
> –Andrew Song
> Northville High School senior

Twenty-one Northville High School students will be spreading their goodwill across the Atlantic Ocean to Africa, as they begin a two month project to help students in Ghana.

The students are members of the Northville Rotary Interact Club, and will be kicking off a school supply drive in April. According to club president Andrew Song, the project recognizes the value of learning not only for Northville students but for students in less fortunate countries.

"Hopefully, we can show that students can make a positive impact on communities other than our own," he said.

The project concept came after the Northville Rotary Club funded the construction of a K-12 school in Ghana to promote international relations and education. Song said that even though the school has been constructed, it lacks many basic supplies. "The Interact Club would like to help furnish the Ghana school with supplies in order that it can better provide its students with a quality education," he said.

The club recently got the OK from the Northville Board of Education to donate old textbooks, and the group will place drop boxes in each classroom at Northville High School for students and teachers to donate various school materials, as well as old fiction and non-fiction books.

"We have received plenty of support from teachers and school administration," Song said. "We're hoping to collect plenty of materials to ship to Ghana."

According to club member Katie Amatangelo, the effort will reach out to the other Northville schools and the community.

"We're definitely looking for community involvement," she said. "This is a really nice project to get the community involved and working together."

Although the logistics have not been finalized – the club is meeting to finalize plans later this week – the project will be up and running by the beginning of April. Song said the materials will be shipped to Ghana in June.

"We're waiting to see if Rep. Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor, will be able to provide us with some assistance in getting the materials over there," he explained.

At the very least, he added, Dr. Godfrey Bacheyie, a Northville Rotarian, will be able to transport some of the donated materials when he visits Ghana sometime during the summer.

The club is also planning a similar project for next year, according to club member Elizabeth Ortowski. The club will begin accepting donations of orthopedic equipment sometime in the fall. The equipment will also be sent to needy children.

"That project is still in the planning phase," she said. "Our efforts are currently going towards the books and school material project."

Youth has court date over alleged teacher assault

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL
Staff Writer

A Novi student who allegedly held a pocket knife to his teacher's throat last week to settle a bet was arrested and taken to Children's Village to await a pretrial examination in Probate Court set for today, March 28.

Police said the 13-year-old student of Hickory Woods Elementary was in the sixth grade classroom after school working on schoolwork when he asked the teacher, Lynn Morse, if she liked gifts.

He told her he wanted to give her a necklace and asked her to close her eyes

Morse pretended to have her eyes shut while she noticed the boy "fiddling" with what looked like a shoelace. He told her to close her eyes again and moved behind where she was seated at her desk. He told her he had a surprise for her.

According to the report, the boy then placed a knife against her throat, touching her skin and told her not to move.

Morse grabbed his left hand and disarmed the boy who backed off and told her not to tell anyone. She then buzzed the office for help.

Morse said she asked the boy for his motive. She said he told her he owed his cousin $100 for losing a bet but would be let off the hook if he hurt someone.

Then he changed his story to say he owed "some guy" across the street $100 and had to hurt someone. As proof he had to show a knife with blood on it and leave it in a special place.

The boy said the man told him if he didn't, the "guy" would burn his house down.

At that time another teacher arrived on the scene and found the boy hunched in the corner, shaking and crying.

Thomas Weddel said he asked the boy why he held the knife to Morse's neck. The boy told him he had gone to the Kid's Kingdom in Westland with his uncle. He said he played air hockey with an unknown person and lost. He said the person told him he had to pay him $100 or provide a knife with blood on it, or the unknown person would burn his house down.

Police arrived on the scene and the child's mother was called to take him home. Officers then visited the boy's home and spoke with his parents. The boy reiterated the last version of story to the officer.

The officer arrested the boy for felonious assault, transported him to the Novi police station for processing. Then he was taken to Children's Village and was ordered at a preliminary hearing to undergo physiological testing.

Detective David Molloy said Children's Protective Services was contacted due to allegations of child abuse.

According to Molloy, police have not been able to substantiate the boy's claims of threats by an unknown man.

If found guilty of felonious assault, the boy could be incarcerated until age 21, but would likely spend a shorter period of time at Children's Village.

Engler agrees to help finance OCC campus renovation

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Gov. John Engler wants to chip in $5 million toward $10 million worth of renovations at Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus.

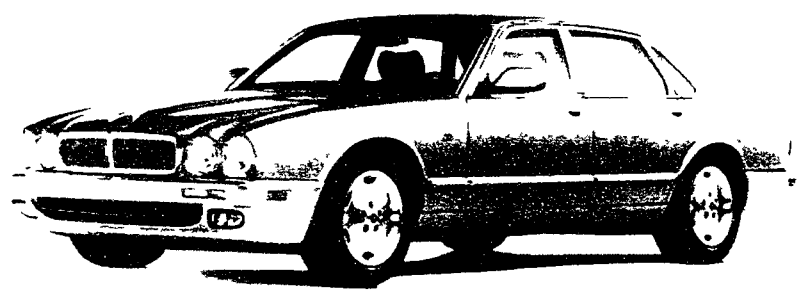

"That's a savings of $5 million from the governor for Orchard Ridge. We've applied every year," interim Chancellor Anthony Jarson told trustees," but this is the first time we've received something. Many colleges just quit applying."

The Orchard Ridge Campus, overlooking I-696 in Farmington Hills, was built 30 years ago and needs extensive renovation. The college won voter approval last June for a 0.8 mill, seven-year hike in the property tax that will go chiefly toward renovations and equipment in the early years.

"Everything needs re-working," Jarson said.

He said Engler's proposed budget for fiscal 1997 also recommended a 3.47 percent increase in general state aid to OCC – somewhat more than the rate of inflation for the first time in years.

Cut Taxes Here.

It's that time again. Time to fill out your tax return. Time to face that nagging doubt that perhaps you haven't done all you could to minimize taxes and maximize the amount of assets you keep.

While you're cutting taxes, you should also think about building wealth. And that's where Merrill Lynch can help. Because we do more than merely help you look at your tax situation. All your assets work together, and that's why we offer you a financial plan that can help you limit your tax burden and grow your assets at the same time.

To find out how you can start to plan to cut taxes today and increase the amount of assets you keep for tomorrow, call or write to reserve your free seat at our Tax Minimization Strategies Seminar. We may be able to help you cut that tax burden down to a size your family or business can be happy with.

The difference is Merrill Lynch.

Northville to go with Oakland when 810 area code gets split have an optional dialing period. After fall 1997, the recorded message saying that they've selected the wrong area code will begin to play.

Ameritech spokeswoman Sara Snyder said the exact date for the new area code to be assigned remains undetermined.

"I think it's a win-win situation for everybody. It's good for the company and also good for the residents of southeastern Michigan. The results of the survey showed that determination would be the easiest to remember," Snyder said.

A survey by the citizens committee found that 58 percent of the customers preferred the single area code plan for Oakland County, as it would be easy to recognize and would split the fewest communities. Officials from Detroit and Oakland, Wayne and Macomb counties, Ameritech and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) sat on the committee.

The rest of the current 810 area code region will remain unchanged, including Macomb, St. Clair, Sanilac, Lapeer and Genesee counties, as well as portions of Livingston County.

In 1994, the original division of area code 810 from the 313 code was expected to provide enough additional phone lines to last 15 years. Now, the 313 code will split again in 1998, with the new boundary lines expected to be announced within the next few weeks.

Factors such as the explosion of interest in the Internet are cited by Ameritech as the reason for the impending numbers shortage. Oakland County alone now has 895,000 phone lines in use. Each new area code has 7.9 million telephone numbers available within it.

Ameritech anticipates that the new area codes will be sufficient for the next seven to 10 years.

Another issue local Realtors are chatting about is whether the new area code for Oakland County will become a status code. Barrons says about half the sales people in her office say it will. The others disagree.

"I personally don't think so. Our cities are status enough, anyway," she said.

For information about the new area code, call 1-800-831-8989.

Township News Briefs

BOARD MEETS: The Northville Township Board of Trustees will meet tonight, March 28.

The board will hold a non-public session to discuss ongoing litigation against the township, a session expected to last less than a half hour.

Following the closed session, the board will hold a public meeting to review a development proposal for the 900 acres of land which Wayne County owns between Five and Six Mile and Beck Road and Hines Drive.

County officials will be on hand to outline their plan and receive board input.

The public is welcome to attend. The meeting will be held at Northville Township Hall, located on Six Mile between Winchester and Haggerty roads.

KID PRINT A SUCCESS: A few dozen children are a little safer now following last week's efforts by Big Lots, Young Country radio (99.5 FM) and the Northville Township police department.

Kid Print is a free service to parents. Police will take fingerprints of your child and make a video of him or her. You get to keep both, to be used in the event the child would be abducted.

Detective Michael Wildt said he processed about 35 children on Friday during a special session held at Big Lots, located on Seven Mile in the Northville Plaza mall. Broadcasting live as part of the event was Young Country DJ Brian Hackett

Organizers sought for seasonal event

Community resident Ron Bodnar enjoys going to the Howell Festival of Lights event each Christmas season.

He likes the activity so much, in fact, he figures why not do something similar here.

Bodnar is seeking volunteers to help organize a Festival of Lights parade for Northville.

"We'd like to hold it probably a week or two before Thanksgiving when it's not so cold," he said. "It could kick off the Christmas season."

The Howell event is an elaborate affair in which horses, fire engines, antique cars and other vehicles are decorated with pinpoint lights.

"It's an extra, added attraction to the season," Bodnar continued. "We've been batting around the idea for some time."

Those interested in participating in organizing the event can call Bodnar at 349-3730.

Artisans written up in national magazine

larger than a tree. That was the charm of the rugs," Sekerka said.

In the Victorian era, the craft became more refined, the designs more precise and pre-printed burlap was available. Today's sophisticated crafter often seeks to recreate the naive charm of her rural ancestors

The clue to one way this is done can be discovered at the edges of Sekerka's fingernails, where traces of dye linger At home, she washes countless pounds of wool, soaks the material, then hand dyes the fabric for 45 minutes in scalding water

Another wash follows. This produces an irregular absorption of the color, creating the subdued shading in the rugs which leaves each piece looking like it's been weathering in Grandmother's attic for 100 years or so

Then the dyed wool is torn into smaller pieces, which are placed in the cutter to create strips. Sekerka, by way of understatement, says the process is "very labor intensive "

In 13 years, she has established herself as an expert in the craft. For the 1992 publication The Rughook Book, edited by Thom Boswell, she authored the section on primitive rugs. Hooked On Rugs has also been featured in several American magazines and in one in Japan.

The Northville shop is an additional venture for Sekerka, who continues to run Hooked On Rugs I, a catalog business she started in her home in 1988 Today, from the Northville shop the two women sell to over 200 stores in the United States, Japan, Canada and England – 2,000 were shipped out last year alone.

Everything began in 1983, when Sekerka took classes in the craft while living in Wisconsin.

"It was one thing I could do. I don't do other forms of needlework," she explained.

On her move to Novi, she began teaching. Bacon then got involved, finding the simplicity of the process enticing.

"I like to cross stitch. There's no tying and you don't have to count anything. It's something you can do while watching TV or you can even talk to someone. All you have to do is follow the design," Bacon said.

Kits sold by the store range in price from $25 to $200 and include the wool, the burlap and the hooking tool. Sixty original patterns are offered, including a crow with sunflowers, a log cabin (seen in Good Housekeeping) and a terrier dog. Custom designs may also be ordered.

Rugs ranging from a small wall hanging to a large floor covering can create what Bacon predicts will be the heirlooms of the future: "The grandchildren will fight over these."

Today, interest in the hobby is surging. When Sekerka started out, nobody knew what the rugs were.

"Now, you can hardly pick up a decorating magazine like Country Living that doesn't have some. What's old is new again," she said.

Hooked on Rugs II is located on the second floor of its downtown Northville building. The shop hours are Tuesday to Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday by chance.

Celebrate Northville preps for Fourth of July activity off. Needed are financial sponsors to cover the costs of the day's events. Last year's Fourth cost a total of $16,000 Donations from citizens, businesses and community groups of all kinds will be cheerfully accepted

But that's not the only way to get involved You can give some of your time, too. Celebrate Northville is on the lookout for parade participants and volunteers, as well as helpers for the car show, Mill Race and other functions. They could even use a hand in coming up with a slogan for this year's auto-centered celebration

"We are definitely in need of anyone's and everyone's help," Woodside said.

If you're interested in helping out in any way, give Woodside a call at 349-1919 and leave a message.

Like last year, Celebrate Northville is trying to arrange for Schoolcraft College's wind ensemble to give a concert at Beck Road Park and a fireworks show is scheduled on the BFI property just over the border in Salem Township.

Last year's show, the first in Northville in three years, drew an estimated 40,000 people. Northville City officials reluctantly decided to ban the fireworks from its usual spot next to Northville High School after problems in 1992. Police and medical personnel had trouble getting to a couple of people attending the show who accidentally were struck by embers and other waste materials, Woodside said

"The city felt that the public safety issues and liability issues presented a problem," she said, "and there is no other spot in the city where we can do it."

That's because of federal regulations which mandate that fireworks shows be kept at a safe distance from residential areas. Then, in 1995, BFI, which owns property in both Salem and Northville townships on either side of Napier Road, stepped in.

"It was very gracious of them," Woodside said. "We're very lucky to have them on board."

1995 was great, the chairperson summed up, but its backers are pulling for July Fourth 1996 to hit even higher heights.

"We were really shocked, pleasantly shocked, by the crowds last year," Woodside said. "We hope this year will be even better," Woodside said.

ADD support group to focus on social skills

CHADD of Northwest Wayne County meets the first Thursday of each month at the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile road, three blocks east of the Farmington Road.

The next meeting will be held April 4 beginning at 7:30 p.m. and will feature a video entitled "Last One Picked ... First One Picked On." A presentation on social skills and how parents can help children succeed.

Registration starts at 7 p.m.

CHADD is a nonprofit, parent-based organization formed to better the lives of individuals with attention disorders and those who care for them. The CHADD information line is (313) 432-2394.

Chronic Pain Association will hold session in township

The American Chronic Pain Association will hold a support group meeting on the first and third Thursday of every month from 10 a.m. to noon in Northville Township Hall.

The hall is located at 41600 Six Mile Road.

For more information call Agnes at 349-0791.

Salon takes over Clipper's old spot

NORTHVILLE BUSINESSSCENE

Infinity Too, a new beauty salon in Northville, is in the market for both clients and workers.

"We're looking for two stylists and a nail technician," said Lindy Unger, the manager of the business at Cady and Center streets.

According to Unger, Infinity Too is a sister salon of the Infinity establishment located on Grand River in Farmington. He said owned owner Denne Johnson took over the former Yankee Clipper Salon in mid January and opened the Northville business last month.

In addition to acting as manager, Unger also serves as a stylist in the shop. A second hair dresser, Cara Gray, also works in the business at 201 C. Center. Unger and Gray formerly worked at Charisma in Livonia.

Unger said stylists rent booth space in Infinity Too and act as independent contractors. The hair styling business is moving in that direction, he added.

"It's advantageous for everybody because the stylists make more money and there are less headaches for the owners."

Though walk-in business is welcome, customers are advised to call ahead for appointments. The number is 449-1966, and the hours of operation are 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Optical Imaging Systems Inc. (OIS) has disclosed its unaudited financial results for the quarter that ended December 31, 1995. Revenues totaled $2.06 million, compared to $1.57 million from the same quarter of the previous fiscal year.

The company's net loss was $6.35 million (seven cents per share), compared to $3.72 million in the second quarter of the preceding fiscal year.

OIS stock sells on the NASDAQ over-the-counter board.

The firm makes flat panel computers for aviation and other industries.

The OIS plant is on Five Mile in Northville Township. A second manufacturing facility is envisioned for the same vicinity.

Automobile Protection Corp. says that its warranty and vehicle service contract programs developed specifically for the CarChoice used car super stores group are performing better than expected at the first CarChoice store that opened earlier this year in Dallas.

The programs provide a comprehensive 12 month/12,000 mile limited warranty with a zero deductible on every vehicle sold by CarChoice. They also offer the option to extend coverage for up to 7 years or 70,000 miles.

John Jameson, the president of Dealer Resources in Northville and the APCO representative who developed the program with CarChoice, said, "The response to the warranty program has been exceptional with nearly 50% of the customers electing to upgrade the warranty to a longer extended service contract, which compares to a national industry average of 26%. The high penetration is attributable to the comprehensive nature of the product.

"This product offers customer warranty coverage that is almost as comprehensive as today's new warranties and then allows the customer to extend that protection."

Our Opinion

Volunteering provides chance to give back

Question: how do you show you care about something?

Answer: by giving something of yourself to it.

A lot of our citizens are doing that and then some these days. The Northville community should swell with pride that so many of its people are putting their time, money and sweat into projects that make the community the special place it is. They deserve our support.

First things first: the Friends of Northville Parks and Recreation dinner/auction, coming up on April 27. It's held at Schoolcraft College and tickets are $40 a person or $300 for a table of eight. That buys you a fabulous meal crafted by local gourmet specialists and the chance to bid on all kinds of neat merchandise at the auction.

Just a few of the items on the block include: Vipers hockey tickets, including booth seats with all the refreshments included; main floor Piston tickets; an airplane ride over your home; a kayak complete with accessory equipment and lessons; autographed sports memorabilia; the services of a lawn care firm for a full summer season; an aerobic health rider; a rollerblade package; his and hers mountain bikes; computers; U-M and MSU sports tickets; car lube and oil change certificates; and car washes once a week for a year.

Besides all that, you can buy tickets for a special raffle without attending the dinner/auction. They cost $10 per ticket, six for $50 or 13 for $100. The grand prize is a five-day, four-night, all-expense paid trip for four to Disney World in Florida. For ticket information, call Mark King at 349-4373 or 349-3860.

Money raised from the event will be used by the Friends to support Northville recreation programs. So far the group has announced that it will earmark $10,000 of the proceeds for a donation towards construction of the proposed playscape.

The playscape itself is another enterprise we should all get behind. It's a unique concept: a New York-based company that helps local communities design, raise money for and build their own first-class playgrounds.

The Northville volunteers who are working on this could use your help. Call Tanya Bartello at 420-3047 or Cindy Buckley at 347-0605 for more information.

Finally, we can't say enough about Celebrate Northville, the volunteer group whose hard work last year gave Northville its best Fourth of July in years, particularly because they managed to bring the fireworks back to town.

They want to make it all happen again this July 4th. The theme this year will be, besides America's birthday, the celebration of 100 years of the automobile.

Celebrate Northville is trying to put together a slew of different events and activities.

There's the parade, of course, and a classic car show, as well as a farm breakfast, classical concert, the fireworks and a bunch of fun planned for Mill Race Village.

Like the Friends dinner/auction and the playscape, though, it all takes the help of the community. Celebrate Northville needs financial sponsors to help pay for the costs of the events and volunteers to do a million and one things on the Fourth itself. If you want to get involved, call Karen Woodside at 349-1919.

A community's greatness comes from people's willingness to give a part of themselves.

Messy special elections are costly, wasteful

It ought not come as any surprise that politicians are spending taxpayers' dollars for political reasons, but this latest example is infuriating.

After the resignation of Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, the governor set up a special election that could cause a series of special elections, domino style.

Were Reps. Willis Bullard, R-Milford, or Barbara Dobb, R-Commerce, to win that election – and it seems highly doubtful anybody else can win it – there could be a second election to fill the post they vacate.

Take the scenario in which County Commissioner Kay Schmid, R-Novi, or Novi City Council member Bob Schmid run for the representative's post and win. Then there could yet be another election.

And mind you, all this with primaries and generals already scheduled for this August and November.

Honigman represented Oakland County Northville in the state Senate. Bullard represents the same area in the House, while Schmid serves as Oakland County Commissioner to the roughly 65 percent of the Northville population that resides north of Baseline Road.

The expense is not a small one. Officials put the cost in the six-figure range, and there are 12 municipalities in the 15th Senate district.

Some believe the point is to make sure that Bullard and Dobb retain a place in the state Legislature. Even Bullard admitted that the goal on the part of the governor was probably to maintain the GOP's clear majority in Lansing.

Neither is a goal we think city taxpayers would be willing part with their money for.

Some cities are asking for reimbursement of the costs, but the state has never done that and officials queried this week in Lansing indicated it is not likely to start now.

Nonetheless, community officials are going to try to make their case to the state soon, formally protesting this wasteful process.

Novi Clerk Tonni Bartholomew has pointed out that there is really little point to filling the post in a special election. The balloting would not take place until June, about the same time the Legislature takes off for summer break. So even with all the expenditure, the communities of the 15th Senate district won't get much representation in Lansing until the fall, anyway. As the clerk put it, the expense, in effect, only succeeds in giving someone the title for the summer.

We're glad to see that local officials are stepping up to tell the state and the governor what they think. We'd urge others to get in on the protest and add their voices.

It is easy for the folks in Lansing to start to think that politics in the Capital is all consuming and all important.

In reality, in this case, it is just a waste of time and money.

Best laid plans for a front page

Lee Snider

Ooops.

I thought the story about Northville lawyer Nick Simkins' appearance on the ABC news show 20/20 was so cool it deserved to run on the front page of last week's paper.

Oh, well, you win some, you lose some.

Simkins was interviewed by a 20/20 team last January concerning his involvement in a lawsuit against the Daisy air rifle manufacturing firm. Problem was, the interview didn't get included in the segment that aired on national television March 22.

As Emily Latila was wont to say, "Never mind."

Sorry 'bout that folks. In our attempt to present a grown up version of a local-boy-makes-good story I guess we got a little overzealous.

I should have known there was a chance the Simkins interview might not make the final cut. Not everything you gather during the research process gets included in the end product.

If I had it to do over again, I'd certainly tell the story. I just wouldn't display it so prominently on page one. I would also include a disclaimer about the possibility of a last-minute change of plans.

Still, as goofs go I suppose it's better than a front page headline typo. At least this way I'm safe from the grammar police.

THE JOKES ARE ON US

It's April Fool's time again, and never let it be said that The Northville Record staff ever passed up a chance to fabricate the news.

(Wait a minute, that didn't come out right.).

As you can tell by checking out today's B-section, we had a little fun taking on some of the hallowed institutions that make up this great community.

We put out an April Fool's edition each year, then cross our fingers and hope that people have a sense of humor about the whole thing.

Most readers, I'm sure, will enjoy today's spoof, but there's always a chance a few people will get offended when they read that Novi has staged a military takeover of Northville or that the high school had to drop its nickname due to pressure from animal rights activists.

For my contribution this year, I decided to write about the fictitious discovery of unpublished chapters of Jack Hoffman's local history book. It's a sacred subject, I know, but I think the late author would have had no objections to the parody.

Unfortunately, I never got the chance to meet Hoffman. I had planned to introduce myself to him at an anniversary party for our sister publication, The Livingston County Press, in October 1993. Sadly, Hoffman died unexpectedly that very weekend

Though I didn't know him, I admire Hoffman tremendously, holding him up as proof that first-rate journalists can be found at the community level.

Many people think that weekly newspaper reporters aren't good enough to cut it in the fast-paced world of the big-city dailies.

We like to think differently, of course, emphasizing the rewards that come from writing about neighborhoods, schools and churches

Community journalists can be expert professionals – even if they like to indulge their silly side once a year.

Randy Coble

This week, it's a roundup of Randyom thoughts:

It wouldn't be an election year if we didn't debate what to do about crime. The next time it comes up, however, think about how career criminals fit into the equation.

Two alleged examples of the principle are Brian Whitehead and Albert Dubenko. As reported in last week's Northville Record, they're accused of holding up at a least dozen gas stations recently, including one in Northville Township.

I kid you not, at their arraignment these two looked downright bored, like they'd been through the procedure more times than they could remember. Even the judge telling them that armed robbery could get them life in prison didn't faze them.

You see, our problem isn't a couple million people each committing one violent offense apiece. It's more like a couple hundred thousand people who beat or rob or rape 10 or 20 or 50 times before they're stopped.

They don't do it by accident – it's a way of life that they've chosen. We can't combat crime, especially violent crime, without understanding that.

MAKES FRIENDS, SUPPORT THE CAUSE

Get your tickets now for the Friends of Northville Parks & Rec's dinner/auction, set for April 27 at Schoolcraft College. Your $40 ticket will help raise money to benefit rec programs right here in our town.

Besides that, it buys you a first-class gourmet meal and the chance to bid for all kinds of interesting auction items: everything from courtside Pistons seats to a fully outfitted kayak and much more

If you can't make the dinner/auction, you can help out by buying tickets to a special Friends' raffle. They're $10 apiece and the grand prize is a five-day, four-night, all expenses paid trip to Disney World.

For ticket info, give Mark King a call at 349-4373 or 349-3860.

FUN FOR THE FOURTH

Celebrate Northville, the not-for-profit group putting this year's Fourth of July festivities together, is looking for financial sponsors and volunteers There's a whole slate of holiday fun planned but it takes money and effort. If you're willing to help, give chairperson Karen Woodside a ring at 349-1919.

PAT THE SPOILER?

The results of last Tuesday's presidential primary were quite interesting. Bob Dole won Michigan handily, of course, but the real story was the performance of Pat Buchanan.

Statewide, Crossfire's favorite son picked up about 35 percent of the vote. In Northville, though, Buchanan pulled only about 23 percent. He picked up the rest from Reagan Democrats. For example, his trade policies won more than a few hearts and minds in places like Taylor, home to many union rank and file.

The point: Buchanan, if he actually does form a third party to run against Clinton and Dole this fall, could sap enough strength from both to throw this election into the House of Representatives.

That doesn't even count Ross Perot, of course, who will eventually jump into this thing.

Someone has to keep supervisor honest

Taking about 10 minutes out of a four-hour meeting to discuss the supervisor's spending habits wasn't that big a deal.

Furthermore, it was strictly Karen Baja's call. She got advice and suggestions before the meeting and she certainly had other options, but she also had the right to bring the dispute before the full board.

Karen doesn't/shouldn't have carte blanche, and discussions involving taxpayers' money belong in the open. Every committee experience demonstrates that time and priority seldom enjoy a proper relationship.

Same meeting. The board spent almost a half-hour with our residents discussing the "distinctive" lighting on the new state police tower. You even wrote a nice article about the incident. The board has absolutely no authority over state affairs yet none of us considered that a waste of time. It didn't "take" time away from anything else on the agenda.

The board's not on the clock. Meetings customarily run late because we must "make" the extra time available when requested.

Election workers were top notch

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to let the citizens of Northville Township know what great election workers we had tending the polls on March 19.

This was our first election with our new equipment and, on top of that, our first election since realigning and expanding our precincts from 10 to 16. All of the township election workers went through about five hours of in-depth training on this brand new computerized election equipment. Everyone learned new assignments and mastered them expertly.

It was a great pleasure and I feel extremely fortunate to have such fine, dedicated residents willing to work the long hours it takes to conduct these elections.

My sincere "thank you" for a superb job. I hope to see you all again for the August primaries.

Grads ahead of classmates

To the Editor:

Several former Northville High School students, who now attend Albion College, noticed the letter last month praising the humanities class. We also want to add our support for the class.

We graduated in '93 and found that there was no course that better prepared us for the liberal arts requirements here at Albion than our senior humanities class. A lot of the books and topics that we are assigned now were covered with Mr. Dent and Mrs. Hall three years ago. This goes to show that the humanities are essential to a well-rounded education.

Technology is very important as well. Humanities, however, are the foundation of our thoughts and ideas. At Albion College we have found that this base gives us the tools we need to utilize the rest of our education.

We would also like to thank Mr. Dent and Mrs. Hall for their skill and enthusiasm which is rarely matched on the college level. Because of their dedication and excellent teaching skills, we have found that we are miles ahead of many of our peers.

Press accurate about white collar greed

Tim Richard

An old friend told this story during intermission at last weekend's Plymouth Symphony concert in Novi High's auditorium

In a rowing competition, the Japanese team had eight men at the oars and one coxswain to steer The American team had one man at the oars and eight managers The Americans lost by a mile The managers fired the man at the oars and were duly accorded bonuses for analyzing the problem correctly

Businessmen like Robert Eaton, the chairman of Chrysler Corp , don't like such stories Eaton spoke to the Economic Club of Detroit last week about the bashing in the media that managers get.

"People like me and others who run companies like to think of ourselves as builders," he said "And in spite of what the public hears and reads, we do care about protecting jobs

One gets a different impression from the 1995 annual report of Black & Decker, the international maker of home and commercial tools

Business has been good. Revenues were $4 77 billion, up 50 percent from 1989 Earnings were $216.5 million, up 620 percent from 1989. But jobs? If you check pages 46-47 of the fine print, you find jobs had dropped more or less steadily since 1989 from 38,600 to 29,300 last year – a 24 percent loss That's 9,300 people out of work.

Alonzo G Decker Jr , former chairman of the board, is staying active At age 88, he "is employed as a part-time employee/consultant at an annual rate of $150,000," says the fine type in the proxy statement That sum could pay several workers with families to support

The directors each get a retainer of $30,000 a year They also get $1,000 for each board and committee meeting There were five board meetings and most committees met four or five times, so they can take home $39,000 to $40,000 apiece – not bad for 10 meetings Oh, and committee chairs get another $3,000 on top of that

But there s more B&D provides each director $100,000 of term life insurance and $200,000 of accident insurance. A non-employee director who serves five years gets half the retainer amount, $15,000, as a retirement benefit How long do you have to work to get retirement benefits like that?

The chairman, president and CEO of this deal is Nolan D Archibald, a man who is so good, apparently that the free market system awarded him a salary of $839,000 and a bonus of $810,000 That's just the money payout. Archibald has perks and other personal benefits of $57,000, including $31,000 for personal use of the company plane Some workers in the U.S. economy are supporting a family on his aircraft perk alone.

There are nifty stock options, too, but space is running out.

Is this just one horrible example, sensationalized by the media, of how American corporations are run? Two Associated Press stories of March 5 put some numbers on the anecdotes

- Personal incomes in 1995 grew 6 1 percent
- The average compensation for chief executives of large companies jumped 23 percent in 1995

Black & Decker shareholders were asked to approve a new Executive Annual Incentive Plan to be administered by a committee of the board Says the proxy statement: "The committee does not anticipate that it will disclose the specific goal or goals for any fiscal year, because the committee believes that this information is confidential business information "

Upon confronting such arrogance, at least one stockholder voted a resounding "No "

McCotter walks out of address to protest 'political' speechifying

Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter walked out on Democrat Ricardo Solomon's address.

Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter walked out of last week's state of the county address by commission chairman Ricardo Solomon, calling the speech political posturing

Solomon's speech included a summary of Wayne County's progress over the past year from a legislative perspective

The commission s reforms, which included reducing the number of departments and reducing the commission s budget, were among the accomplishments Solomon listed

An approved $27 million bond issue to build a new youth home was also cited among the accomplishments.

The commission's goals include strengthening the auditor general's office, a 10-year capital improvement plan, a debt policy and a refocused economic development plan, said Solomon, a Democrat from Detroit.

"The Pollyanna speech constituted political posturing that bore no relation to the real problems confronting our community Thus, my only option was to leave. I could not tacitly condone the speech by enduring it," McCotter said in a statement issued after the meeting

McCotter is a Republican from Livonia His district also includes Northville Township and Wayne County Northville

Commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, said she thought the speech accurately reflected what the commission is doing

Solomon down played the incident

"I think Commissioner McCotter is a very good commissioner," Solomon said.

McCotter said in his statement that the address was a surprise, but Solomon said all the commissioners should have known the speech was forthcoming.

As part of the speech, Solomon introduced each commissioner and listed their accomplishments.

McCotter was omitted from the introductions

Solomon said he omitted McCotter because he wanted the commissioners to be present as he introduced them.

"I didn't know why he left I wanted to introduce him when he came back," Solomon said.

As the meeting was adjourning, commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton Township, said a minority response from Republicans should have been included

There are three Republicans on the 15-member commission.

Solomon said he hadn't yet come to a conclusion about whether to include a minority response. "I don't know how we're going to deal with that," he said.

A "1995-1996 Legislative Agenda" was presented during the meeting, which McCotter also criticized.

"I repeatedly requested that my name be removed from this document, which is not representative of the needs of our community," McCotter said in a statement.

"This Democratic agenda amounts to nothing more than euphemisms for old enthusiasms – more taxes, more spending, more government.

"I am not, and will not, be a party to it," he said in the statement.

None of the three Republicans were pictured in the "Legislative Agenda."

Solomon said he is aware of the criticism.

Hopefuls get in line for Honigman's former seat

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

Five Republicans – including one who originally enlisted as a protest – will face off in the controversial special May 13 primary to fill the vacant 15h District state senate seat.

For the Democratic primary, the race will be easier. There's only one candidate.

As expected, Honigman's anointed successor, State Rep. Willis Bullard, R-Milford, is running. So is State Rep. Barbara Dobb, R-Commerce Township, who has expressed her interest from the beginning.

In addition, leaping into the GOP race are Farmington Hills City Council Member Terry Sever, Northville resident Ed Cox and West Bloomfield resident Robert Perkins.

"I was very annoyed with the good old boy process of trying to control the election and hand picking the successors. I jumped in to protest," Sever said, adding that he now plans to run to win.

Unopposed in the Democratic primary is Barry Brickner of Farmington Hills who, hence, is his party's nominee.

Bullard, who represents Oakland County Northville, won Honigman's endorsement last week. The ex-state senator sent out 1,000 letters to area officials and supporters to announce his backing of the Milford Republican, calling Bullard "a strong, consistent leader."

Sever has been on the Farmington Hills city council for 10 years and served as mayor in 1989. The owner of a printing business, in the past he's been a Republican precinct delegate and the president of the Farmington Area Republican Club.

Both Cox and Perkins are new to the political scene. Neither has held elective office or been active in the Republican Party.

Cox is retired and is busy with the Plymouth Theater Guild. Perkins is a CPA who runs an investment and financial counseling business out of his home.

Both say they now have the free time to get involved in state politics.

"I became acquainted with the possibility and could perhaps represent the area in a way that they haven't been," Cox explained.

Perkins said he's "been a fairly successful businessman in Michigan for a number of years: "I now have time available and have the opportunity to return that."

Brickner, the Democratic candidate, is a Democratic precinct delegate, chairs the Farmington/Farmington Hills Democratic Club and is active with the Oakland County Democrats. A lawyer, in 1990 he lost out to Republican Jan Dolan for that district's state representative seat. He's also on the Farmington Hills planning commission.

He acknowledges the 15th District is heavily Republican.

"I'm one of the known Farmington Democrats," Brickner said and laughed.

The filing deadline for the primary was Monday. The winner will fill the remainder of the term vacated by recently retired State Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

Some eight communities within the 15th District have protested the special primary and the special June 4 election set up by Gov. John Engler. The two additional elections are expected to cost the entire district some $500,000.

Court reform back on agenda in Legislature

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Two suburban district judges are hailing the revival of legislative efforts at "court reform" – the simplifying of Michigan's multi-tiered justice system.

The plan, scheduled to be unveiled in the House, won't require a voter-approved constitutional amendment to eliminate county probate courts. But in two years it could result in the elimination of Detroit Recorder's Court.

"District judges across our state already act as circuit and probate judges," said Southfield District Judge Stephen C. Cooper.

"The arguments against court reform appear to come from those who are afraid of any change," said Wayne District Judge Carolyn A. Archbold. Circuit judges have argued against such change.

In its simplest form, "court reform" means a single trial court instead of the current system of circuit, probate, district and Detroit Recorder's Court, with all having the same pay and same jurisdiction. Because probate courts are established by the constitution, it would take a constitutional amendment to consolidate circuit and probate courts.

In Lansing, Rep. Michael Nye, R-Litchfield, will bring up a new substitute for House bill 5158 in the Judiciary Committee. Rather than eliminate courts, it will expand the powers of probate and district judges. Key elements:

- Probate judges would have concurrent jurisdiction, with circuit judges, over domestic relations cases. Probate courts could be called "family courts."
- All trial courts could handle equity cases.
- All matters involving the same family could be heard by the first judge to be assigned to the case. Reformers argue that under the current system, a family could find itself in probate court for a delinquency case, district court for the first step of a domestic violence case, and circuit court for divorce proceedings.
- Detroit Recorder's Court, which handles criminal cases in both Detroit and out-Wayne County, could be abolished by Jan. 1, 1998, unless the city agrees by Oct. 1, 1997, to be responsible for funding it. Recorder's judges would be "grandfathered" as Wayne County circuit judges. Detroit is the only city in Michigan where countywide circuit judges don't try major criminal cases.

The latter step is similar to a separate bill sponsored by Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton. The Whyman bill would abolish Recorder's Court and grandfather its judges as circuit judges, but without the option of staying in business if Detroit pays for it.

Whyman's bill is vehemently opposed by Detroit politicos, who say her motives are racial, as well as by Supreme Court Chief Justice James Brickley.

State government pays for a portion of all courts, but it pays the entire cost of Detroit Recorder's and Detroit District courts.

Plymouth District Judge Ronald Lowe insists reform is fair because district judges already are doing the work of circuit and probate judges. "Under emergency or special orders or as experimental 'pilot projects,' the Supreme Court and the state court administrator have already authorized full or partial trial court unifications," Lowe wrote in a February Michigan Bar Journal article.

One major change sought by Gov. John Engler and former Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, wouldn't be made. Under Nye's revised bill, Ingham Circuit Court would remain as the Court of Claims, handling prisoners' suits and claims against the state. Engler insists the Ingham judges are too liberal and pro-plaintiff. He wants such suits filed in the local jurisdiction.

In its simplest form, "court reform" means a single trial court instead of the current system of circuit, probate, district and Detroit Recorder's Court.

Judge plans to run again

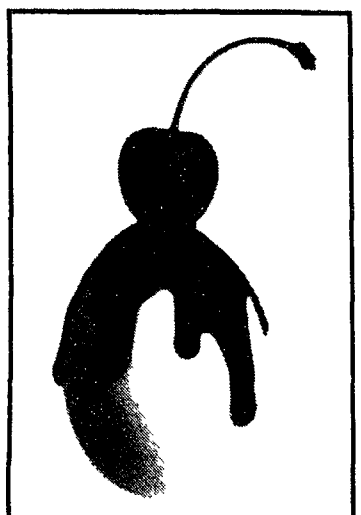

Wayne County Probate Judge David J. Szymanski has filed to run for reelection to the bench.

Szymanski, 42, was first elected to the court in 1990. He attended the University of Notre Dame.

Szymanski worked as a factory laborer, a high school teacher, a court clerk and a practicing lawyer before his election. he taught and coached at Detroit Northeastern High School. He has two children.

Szymanski campaigns for a second term on the probate court. He also is serving as chairman of the Michigan Probate Judges Association's Bicentennial Commission.

In 1796, the first probate judge was appointed in Michigan in Wayne County. The Michigan Probate Judges Association will formally celebrate 200 years of service at their summer banquet to be held at the Grand Traverse Resort this summer.

Hospice group honors Rep. Gerry Law

Earlier this month, some 200 hospice advocates filled a Lansing conference room to honor Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, with the Michigan Hospice Organization's Legislator of the Year award. The Michigan Hospice Organization represents 110 independent hospice programs statewide.

Tracy Muscat, co-chair of the Michigan Hospice Organization Legislative Committee, said in her comments that Law has been a champion of hospice both in his district and in his work with legislators in Lansing.

Specifically, Muscat made reference to Law's efforts and sponsorship of proposed legislation which would set up a separate licensing process for hospice residences

Lawmakers and hospice advocates want home-like settings where the dying who live alone can go to spend the final weeks of their lives

In his acceptance comments, Law stated, "Not all hospice patients are able to remain in their home. Many people who suffer from incurable illnesses are dying with no one able to care for them or nowhere to go. This legislation would help to change that."

Sister Mary Giovanni, president of local Angela Hospice which opened Michigan s first hospice residential facility of its kind in Livonia, feels that the legislation is crucial to the future of hospice care.

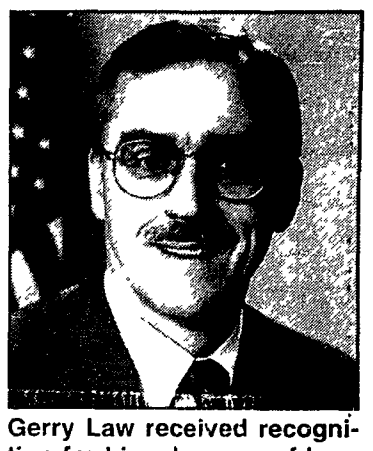

"We hear almost every day from dying individuals who are alone and asking us for help We are reaching out to take care of as many of them as we can in alternative settings such as our Care Center or unit at Plymouth Court, but there has to be more and Rep Law has been a leader in helping to find the solution "

Law served District 20 from 1983-91, and was elected to the House again in 1994, defeating incumbent Jerry Vorva in the primary

He has been honored for his work in the past by the Michigan Association of Marriage and Family Therapy as well as the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association

Law, his wife and two daughters live in Plymouth

The 20th State House District includes Northville Township and Wayne County Northville

Gerry Law received recognition for his advocacy of hospice-related legislation.

O'Hair gets new powers to pursue polluters

Wayne County prosecutor John D O'Hair has announced that the Wayne County Commission has given his office new authority to crack down on individuals and firms which use county-owned property for the dumping of auto parts, construction refuse and other solid waste materials

The commission's new ordinance allows O'Hair to prosecute violators in any of the county's 24 district courts and to recommend the payment by the county of rewards of up to $500 to citizens reporting and helping bring about convictions

Specifically the ordinance prohibits the dumping of solid waste on county owned or drain district property or rights of way without a permit from the department of public services

O Hair said he welcomed the new ordinance

"I am urging all law enforcement agencies in the county to be aggressive in putting a stop to the epidemic of treating county lands as if they were refuse-dumps " he said "The good people of Wayne County are rightly upset about these abuses and now they can earn a reward for reporting and helping convict bad citizens who are so contemptuous of the rights of the rest of us "

Art contest open to Northville students

U S Rep Lynn Rivers has launched an art competition for high school students in the 13th Congressional District, which includes Northville

The winning entry will be displayed this coming summer, along with artworks from districts across the country, in a corridor of the U S Capitol – an area dedicated to the artistic skills of today s young artists

According to Rep Rivers, the contest is part of An Artistic Discovery, the 15th annual competition implemented by members of the U S House of Representatives to recognize the creative talents of young Americans

Between now and May 31 members will conduct local competitions for high school students in order to select artwork to be displayed in the national exhibition The contest is being coordinated by the Plymouth Community Arts Council (PCAC).

The competition is open to any high school student in the 13th District Artwork must be an original concept (not reproduced from any existing photo, painting or other work), two dimensional and no larger than 32 inches by 32 inches (framed)

Eligible categories are paintings, drawings, collages, and prints. The deadline for submitting entries for exhibition is April 19.

For further information, contact competition coordinator Joanne Hulce at the Plymouth Community Arts Council (313) 416-4278.

Novi police under orders from Novi City Council, assert control of Northville, soon to be renamed Noville.

Hostile takeover complete

Just a matter of time before two cities become Noville

By Jack Boots
Staff Writer

A cordon of Novi police in riot gear was still stationed at the Northville City Hall Wednesday following last week's lightening strike invasion by the neighbors to the north.

On March 22 Novi commandos in green uniforms concealed in armored Department of Public Works trucks stormed into the City of Northville, quickly took over the police department and issued news releases announcing that the two cities will merge under the name of Noville. Novi's government will control the new municipality. The former Northville remains under martial law.

"We thought about raiding Novi Township but we knew they'd put up too much of a fight. Besides, we wanted a real Main Street, a cutesy poo downtown for Novi. This was the quickest way to get it," explained Novi and now Noville Mayor Kathleen McLallen.

"Our citizens need lebensraum. Going through an annexation election would have taken too long."

Former Northville government officials remain interned in the basement of Genitti's where they've been held incommunicado since the military takeover six days ago.

"I don't think it was very nice the way Novi's being so hostile about the whole thing. Besides I'm getting tired of pasta family style dining and stand-up comedy when I'm trying to eat," said former Northville Mayor Chris Johnson.

McLallen said she's pleased with the outcome of Novi's first military operation. "We came, we saw, we kicked butt."

Residents of the former Northville have been ordered to keep to their homes. Noville Police Commandant Douglas Shaeffer will issue passes to exit the police barricade encircling town - but only for those who need to do some emergency shopping at Twelve Oaks Mall or use the Novi library.

Voters in what used to be Novi will be holding a special election next month to determine if they want to keep the Victorian image of down-

Activists win, Mustangs lose

Score another victory for political correctness.

Animal rights activists won a legal battle of attrition today with the Northville Community School District over the use of "Mustangs" as the high school nickname.

In a stunning majority decision, the Michigan Supreme court upheld Battered Animals, Mammals, Birds and Insects' (BAMBI) contention that the use of Mustangs promoted insensitivity towards horses.

Here's an excerpt from the high court's decision:

"For generations, professional sports teams, clubs and schools have used animal names to represent their organizations.

Why, in our own backyard we've had to put up with Tigers, Lions, and Wolverines. Did any of these organizations ever consult a Tiger or Wolverine to find out if it was OK to borrow their name ? Just how many royalty checks have been paid to Mr. John Q. Lion?

We find the use of these names capricious. We ask you, are any of these animals indigenous to Michigan? When is the last time you saw a Tiger strolling down Michi-

History Northville never knew before

By D. MENTED SKAHLER
Revisionist Historian

Work crews clearing a vacant third floor storage room above the office of The Northville Record stumbled across a genuine hidden treasure – two previously unpublished chapters of Jack Hoffman's local history Northville The first hundred years.

The documents – 16 pages of double-spaced type – were discovered by workmen who were preparing a long-vacant room for renovation.

"The papers are in good shape and look like they could have been ready for publication," Record Editor Lee Snider said. "It's a mystery as to why they didn't make it into the book."

The late Hoffman, who served a long stint as editor of The Northville Record, published his book in 1976. It provides an extensive account of the early history of the community from roughly 1827-1927 and has become an invaluable reference tool for those interested in the development of the area.

But, for some reason, what appear to be portions of the completed manuscript didn't get included in the volume.

Among the unpublished anecdotes:

• On Dec. 31, 1899, a rowdy crowd gathered at Howell Cobb's Main Street Saloon to ring in the new century. As the final moments of the 19-hundreds were fading into history, First Church of the Apocalypse Pastor Stewart McGrudder, riding atop his horse, burst through the swinging doors of the saloon.

McGrudder and his steed ran roughshod through the establish-

Bob Dole, get ready to sweat.

You might think that this would be a time for the Republican party's nominee-elect to rest the horses before this autumn's cavalry charge against Bill Clinton. Instead, the Senate majority leader faces his toughest challenge yet, a new contender for the GOP crown: Phil Jerome.

The Executive Editor of The Northville Record announced Monday that his strong showing in Michigan's recent presidential primary has prompted him to make a run for the Republican nomination. Jerome, a Northville Township resident, received one write-in vote.

"There is, quite simply, a tidal wave out there," Jerome said. "The public is clamoring for me to jump into this thing. I feel like Colin Powell."

Not quite, though, because Jerome's surprise entry has apparently given the ex-Joint Chiefs chairman a sudden case of nerves. Powell, widely rumored as a vice-presidential candidate, called a press conference two hours after Jerome's announcement to "categorically declare" that he will not seek or accept public office in 1996.

"I, uh . . uh . . I just feel that Phil brings more to the table than I do," Powell said, his voice shaking slightly.

The editor's move also caused fellow journalist Pat Buchanan to announce that he was calling it quits.

"There is a war going on for the soul of America and Phil is our side's hydrogen bomb," Buchanan said. "I say PJ ALL THE WAY!"

Outlining his agenda as president will be the subject of his acceptance speech at the Republican convention this summer, Jerome said. Up first is the job of wrestling delegates away from Dole.

"What am I going to do? First, I'm gonna kick the heck outta Pineapple Boy!," Jerome bellowed to reporters at a news conference. "Whadda you media morons want me to do, draw you a flowchart?"

Sen. Pineap ... uh, I mean Dole was quick to deny the conventional wisdom now spreading like wildfire over the political landscape. The pundits are saying that Jerome's campaigning skills – eloquence and a focus on the issues at hand – could derail Dole's express train to San Diego.

"Bob Dole's not sweating over Phil Jerome," the senator said. "He's just perspiring. Big difference. He's got perspiration oozing down his face because of those hot TV lights you liberal media types use. Bob Dole doesn't even believe that's a real TV light. Probably one of those heat lamps they use at McDonald's that you just painted to look like a TV light."

Jerome campaign flunky Leonard Rezmierski revealed Wednesday that the candidate is already shopping around for a second banana to fill out the

School announces dress code

By Poly Ester
Fashion Editor

Tardiness at both Northville and Novi high schools is at an all time high. With 50 percent of the girls and 30 percent of the boys arriving one half hour to one hour late for first and second hour classes, teachers were forced to establish a special committee to uncover the reason for the lack of punctuality.

A committee of volunteers studied the problem and recommended to the school boards that a dress code be adopted beginning with the fall 1996 school year.

The recommendation was based on responses to surveys sent home to students and parents asking a variety of questions concerning the reasons for the tardiness.

The responses to surveys pointed toward the need for students to spent a minimum of one half hour to select their designer clothes. The coordinating of these outfits generally did not begin until the student heard the school bus barreling down the street.

Latest production a sellout for college

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

Loyal followers of the Schoolcraft College Theatre Department were not disappointed with its current production, Neil Simon's Plaza Suite, on opening night, March 22

Artistic and Technical Director Prof James R Hartman, associate professor of theater, captivated his audience with the very funny, often unbelievable antics of three couples who checked into Suite 719 at the Plaza Hotel during 1968.

Two area actresses in the cast are Nicole Ebert, a Northville High School graduate, and Jennifer Allie, a Novi High School graduate Ebert is playing the role of Jean McCormack, the "other women" in the first act, while Allie is seen in act three in the role of Mimsey Hubley, the nervous bride

Simon's three couples – Karen and Sam Nash, and Norma and Roy Hubley, played by Beth Anderson and Brian Taylor, and Jesse Kiplinger and Muriel Tate, played by Jim McKendrick and Amy MacFarland – each have a predicament they need to face and overcome while at the hotel.

This production is Ebert's stage debut with Schoolcraft Her other credits include A Rented Christmas with the Northville Players, and West Side Story at Northville High School. Ebert has also appeared in The Sound of Music at Northville High School, Otterbein College, where she also played Clara in Heidi, and Country Dinner Playhouse

Allie began her acting career at Novi Performance Plus where she appeared in Look Homeward Angel, The Crucible and Alice in Wonderland Her other theater credits include roles in Kismet Meet Me in St. Louis, and Li'l Abner at Novi High School

The dinner theater performances begin with dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the Waterman Center followed by the show at 8 p m in the Liberal Arts Theatre The show, which is sold out, continues through April 6

LET IT SLIDE

The physical benefits of a workout on the slideboard may well extend beyond the therapeutic effect that this lateral exercise has upon the legs, ankles, and feet Lateral training on a slideboard consists of slipping booties over a patients regular athletic foot wear and having him or her move from side to side across the slideboard According to research presented at the annual meeting of the American College of Sports Medicine, working out on a slideboard burns twice as many calories as equivalent distances traveled on a treadmill A 155-pound person walking 2 m p h on a treadmill burns about four calories a minute, while a slideboard workout accounts for more than eight calories burned off each minute Thus, the slideboard benefits the cardiovascular system as well as the legs

At Northville Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Inc , our staff of well educated, experienced and highly motivated professionals specialize in all phases of rehabilitation care We work closely with referring physicians and provide timely initial evaluations and routine progress correspondence For more information, or to schedule a consultation, call us at 349-3816, or see us at 332 E Main Street, Suite A We specialize in orthopedic and sports injuries, neck and back rehabilitation, and pain management Our staff now includes three physical therapists, and we have early and late business hours including weekends Insurance is welcome

P.S. Research indicates that sliding on a slideboard is equivalent to bicycling in terms of an aerobic workout.

Talented dancers in Swan Lake

Dancing principle roles in Swan Lake on March 30 are (from right) Jennifer De Hate of Novi, Antoinette Mazzoni of Northville, Marlene Strang and Sara McKinney.

Two area ballernas will be dancing in Eric Johnston's Detroit Ballet production of Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake, March 30 at 7.30 p m at the Farmington Hills Activity Center.

Swan Lake is set in medieval times where Odette, the White Swan, and her prince proclaim their love against the evils of a deceiving sorcerer.

It highlights the Four Swans dance, the lovely White Swan pas de deux, the Black Swan pas de deux and a full corps de ballet.

Dancing the principal roles of two of the Four Swans are Novi resident Jennifer DeHate and Northville resident Antoinette Mazzoni.

Antoinette is the daughter of Orin and Tina Mazzoni of Northville and is an eighth grade student at Our Lady of Sorrows in Farmington. The 14-year-old began ballet lessons at age four and has danced in the Nutcracker in the Waltz of the Flowers and as the Snow Queen. Previous roles in Swan Lake include one of the lead princesses and the corps de ballet

Jennifer, who besides being one of the Four Swans is also in the corps de ballet, is the daughter of Cathy Oleszek and has been dancing for 13 years. The 19-year-old Eastern Michigan University sophomore is majoring in early childhood education.

Jennifer, a 1994 graduate of Novi High School, has been a parent, soldier, snowflake, flower, flute and Spanish girl in the Nutcracker and in past years has been one of the Four Swans and a princess in Swan Lake.

Swan Lake includes both professional as well as developmental dancers. Johnston, director-choreographer of the Detroit Ballet, is one of the principal dancers.

'The staging of this ballet was intended for the outdoor setting in the woods at the Longacre House amphitheater but transcends beautifully to the theater at the Farmington Activities Center," said Johnston. "The two-hour version is geared to introduce the art to the ballet novices of our community."

Complementing the traditional yet contemporary production of Swan Lake is the Detroit Ballet Orchestra, with Christopher Keen conducting.

The Detroit Ballet Orchestra has the depth of a full philharmonic and the clarity of a chamber ensemble Christopher Keen conducts the professional musicians as first chair artists augmented by 20th century computer technology

"This orchestra is on the cutting edge of innovation," said Keen "I m thrilled to be involved with its coming of age

"The addition of the orchestra is essential to the enjoyment of the ballet and beautifully enhances Swan Lake," he said. "The great ballets should never be seen without live music."

The Detroit Ballet's second event of the spring season is Peter and the Wolf on Sunday, March 31, at 2:30 p.m.

A story for children of all ages, Peter is actually played by principal dancer Sally Wood Charles Herbert Solos as the Wolf.

Tickets for both productions are available at Farmington Hills Parks and Recreation. Prices are $10 for adults and $5 for children and seniors Group rates are available For information, call (810) 473-9570 or 474-3174 ment, kicking over drinking tables and promising a fiery fate for "sinners on the day of atonement."

But saloon patrons weren't in a repentant mood They quickly toppled McGrudder from his horse and subdued him.

An hour later, the preacher was seen stumbling, drenched and disoriented, from a nearby outhouse, leading to the belief that he received the first swirly in recorded history

• Another famous dousing took place Nov 12, 1843, when Dunlap Street resident Josiah Bartlett attempted to contact the spirit of his departed mother through the use of a medium Instead of communicating with his relative, Bartlett heard what he thought was a vague warning about "one if by land, two if by sea "

Convinced the hated Brits were at it again, Bartlett commenced a rampage through the town, pounding on doors and bellowing cavalry charges at the top of his voice.

The disturbance was finally silenced when all 11 members of the Lewis family leaned out the second floor windows of their home and, timing their actions, dumped gallons of used bath water on the delirious man.

The next day Bartlett was phlebotomized "to drain the distempered humors from his troubled person," Dr. Seth Heade was known to have said.

• Another unusual incident took place during the raising of Sinclair Tibbits' log cabin on Fountain Street in 1831.

As Hoffman relates it, while a large community of people was working at the construction site, a sharp streak of white light was seen darting across the pre-dusk sky. Several members of the work team spotted it and, not knowing about comets or other natural phenomena, flew into a panic about the prospects for a visit by creatures from an unknown world.

For weeks afterward the townsfolk were buzzing about the strange occurrence and one imaginative local writer began penning a series of stories he called Star Trek – The Buckaroo Generation.

The Record is considering running excerpts of the chapters in upcoming editions of the newspaper

"Stay tuned," Snider said.

New dress code to eliminate tardiness

Committee members were surprised with the number of responses they received, 55 percent, more than the number of people who voted at Tuesday's election.

To alleviate the tardiness, it was unanimously decided that the high school would adopt a dress code beginning in the fall of 1996

The committee wasted no time in selecting suitable attire for the students

Boys will wear the very durable and tailored gray wool blazers with matching pants designed by Rolf Loreen

For the girls, long sleeved calf-length cotton dresses by Lora Ashlie in gray or black to coordinate with the boys suits have been selected gan Avenue in downtown Detroit"?

Off to School We Go, a new store to open at Twelve Oaks Mall, will carry only merchandise that conforms to the new dress code.

More than capricious, we find the use of such names desensitizing and leading to acts of cruelty BAMBI's independently commissioned studies leave no doubt as to this conclusion

It is therefore the decision of this court that Northville Community Schools nor any other district in this state, may use an animal bird or insect, for that matter to name their teams "

School officials were shocked by the decision

"It's appalling," Northville School Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski said "The use of Mustang has done nothing to tarnish or bring scorn to our friends, the horses We've always viewed it as a proactive approach in glorifying the animal and our teams fighting spirit "

Student reaction at the high school was split

"Once a Mustang, always a Mustang," an unidentified teenager said

For others students, it was an act of liberation.

"Be free beautiful stallion," said senior Amber Peacenick

Still others saw it as a chance to knock school administrators down a peg

"All in all, there just another brick in the wall," said sophomore Pink E Floyd

A May wedding is planned

Christ is revealed in Passover program

St. Paul's Lutheran Church is hosting a Rock of Israel Passover program on Maundy Thursday, April 4.

Doug Carmel, a speaker for Rock of Israel, will present a look at the traditional Jewish Passover meal from the vantage point of being able to see "Christ in the Passover" The program will begin at 6 p m and last about an hour

"It is really exciting to see how Jesus is revealed in the Passover meal," said Mark Faerber, the Director of Outreach and Discipleship for the church. "The sad thing for Christians is that many do not know much about this meal and how rich it is in symbolism, in history, and in tradition

"This is the 'last supper' that Jesus was celebrating with His disciples just prior to his arrest, trial and crucifixion," Faerber said "Christians celebrate communion (which began at this meal on this night) and knowing more about the Passover meal enriches one's understanding of this special meal.

"The church is inviting the community to this event, hoping to let you see 'Christ in the Passover' We hope that Christians, Jews who are curious, and others will come to hear this wonderful message," Faerber said "Doug Carmel, the speaker for the program, is able to present an interesting point of view as he is a Messianic Jew"

A worship service, which follows the program, begins at 7:30 p m. Passover program attendees are welcome to join in this worship service

St. Paul's is located at 201 Elm Street in Northville, one block west of Center Street Market

For more information, call the church at (810) 349-3140

Speaker discusses care at meeting

Michael Connors, Program Director for Citizens for Better Care (CBC), will be the guest speaker at the Monday, April 1, Older Women's League (OLW) meeting at 7 p m at the Farmington Library

Born in Detroit, a political science alumnus of Michigan State University Connors has been with CBC for 10 years He previously worked for USC's Gerontology Center in Los Angeles and the Shepherd's Center in New Orleans

CBC was founded in Detroit in 1969 after news reports of abuse, neglect, and exploitation of nursing home residents While it began with a small group of volunteers and staff members, today it is a statewide consumer advocacy organization, concerned with improving the quality of long-term care facilities and services and with protecting the rights of older persons and others requiring long-term care services.

CBC also works with industry, government and other groups to promote policies, laws and regulations beneficial to consumers

OWL invites the public to attend

The Farmington Library is located at 23500 Liberty, one block south of Grand River and one block west of Farmington Road.

Tale of wiseman brought to life

The Creative Arts Ministry of Northville Christian Assembly presents a musical drama, The Fourth Wiseman, on March 29 through 31 The musical is loosely based on the book The Other Magi, by Henry VanDyke a story which was later released as a movie starring Martin Sheen as Artaban, the fourth wiseman

The four performances, which will be held on Friday and Saturday at 7 30 p m and Sunday at 4 and 7 30 p m , are open to the public

This has been quite an ambitious endeavor ' said the church's Minister of Creative Arts, Carlton Quattlebaum, who is the producer and also portrays the part of Jesus Christ 'The technical challenges of adapting a book to a musical drama which could be performed in our church sanctuary have caused us to find, learn and develop new techniques.

"We have been passionate in creating a truly inspiring, excellent theatrical experience. Our hope is that our efforts will do justice to what we consider to be a remarkable poignant, human story."

A production team has been responsible for writing the script, designing the set, and programming music which serve the message of the drama.

"While everyone involved finds fulfillment in creating an event like this, our real motive is one of just giving to the community around us, one that says there's hope and there is a real meaning to live," Quattlebaum said.

BROKEN ARROW
NORTHVILLE

John Travolta is a draw for those of us that have felt a kinship with him throughout his career And we feel sorry for him when he makes a poor movie choice like this one In "Broken Arrow" he plays a military lifer that keeps being overlooked for promotions In retaliation he becomes involved in a plot to make millions and to double cross the government The objects of his master plan are nuclear weapons However his plans are foiled by his copilot, who is played exceptionally well by Christian Slater Travolta assumes that Slater does not have the courage or intelligence to be a wor thy opponent or any real threat to his plans But he is mistaken

The plot is weak and predictable The surround stereo sound is intense and appears to be attempting to copy "Top Gun" but without the substance Sound alone cannot make a movie The other primary element in this film is the continuous explosions of planes, cars, trains you-name it This movie may appeal to those who like intense action and noise but do not care about a realistic or interesting plot. It is not an entertaining movie and the only draw is seeing both Travolta and Slater.

BROKEN ARROW

Take the quirky hit man from "Pulp Fiction" and the intelligent criminal in "Get Shorty" and a sharp minded, black humored, ruthless scoundrel in the form of a slim John Travolta emerges from the shadows to cause the havoc in "Broken Arrow."

"Broken Arrow" begins with two Stealth bomber pilots, Christian Slater and Travolta, performing a regular military drill involving two thermonuclear weapons. A power-hungry Travolta ignites the inferno of thrills to follow when he steals the two weapons to hold them ransom so he and his goons can get a nice retirement pay. Slater is betrayed not only by his commander, but also a good friend and he must use his knowledge of Travolta with a little help from a local park ranger to save the Midwest.

"Broken Arrow" delivers blood curdling stunts, bizarre methods of death, and one immense explosion and scatters it all over the big screen The close calls with helicopters, the train chase, the black humor of a vicious Travolta, and the competition between two ex-friends mold a movie unique to the everyday sculpture of action.

"Broken Arrow" wields explosive, hyper-driven amusement that deserves an honorable three and one half stars (based on five with five best) There "ain't" no flashing dance floor in this flick, just pure, brutal violence with a dash of quirky music for one insanely humorous villain One to see!

You can give a 4x4 a CD player and heated seats But you're still stuck with a rough-riding truck that's tough to get in and out of Now take the Audi A6 quattro . With all the luxuries of a fine European sedan, it outclasses all the spruced-up 4x4s - while its road-gripping traction leaves them in the dust. Adding security — the A6 received the highest ratings in U.S Government crash tests.† See your Audi dealer for a test drive.

Sander, Szostek make All-Area first team in '96

In years' past HomeTown Newspapers East All-Area Basketball first team has been led by star players such as Jason Walker and Bob Kofahl

In all honesty our 1996 club doesn't have that one dominant player But what we do have is five excellent players with an assortment of talents

Start with the Northville connection of Mark Sander and Ben Szostek A shooting guard and small forward the duo averaged 38 points between them and led the Mustangs to a district final appearance

Novi's Chad Dicken makes his first appearance on the All Area team The senior forward led the Wildcats in numerous categories and brings respectability to a team in transition

Lakeland's Dave Wilkins and Milford's Chad Chwalek were among the league leaders in scoring, rebounding and steals among others

So, while there are no Michael Jordans out there we're sure you'll agree that HomeTown Newspapers' East All-Area 1996 Basketball first team is one worthy of recognition

Let's take a closer look at the dream team as selected by the sports editors of The Novi News Northville Record South Lyon Herald and Milford Times

MARK SANDER
Northville, senior guard

Sander blossomed into one of the area's most prolific scorers in his senior year

He averaged 19.5 points per game and had a high of 44 against

Kersey named to second squad

So who needs a dominant inside guy?

Well, most basketball teams do need a big player in the middle in order to be successful but the HomeTown Newspapers' East All-Area second team would do just fine with its collection of superior guards and forward talent, thank you.

With aggressive rebounders and scorers like Lakeland's Eric Hardin and South Lyon's Steve White occupying space in the paint the second team would have no problem holding its own against a bigger lineup.

Guards Sean Kramer of Novi and Aneil Kersey of Northville bring strong defense and court savvy to the all-area unit and hot-shooting Nick Demeester of Milford rounds out a well-balanced starting five

Yes, when it comes to hoops, size is definitely a prize but this team proves that bigger doesn't always mean better

SEAN KRAMER
Novi, senior guard

Every coach knows that statistics can be misleading

A player can average 20 points a game but be less valuable than someone who has a better all-around approach That's where Sean Kramer comes in

The senior didn't average 20 points, or lead the league in any category for that matter. But the simple fact is Novi was a much better team with him in the lineup

Kramer brought defensive intensity to the court and a never-say-die attitude He played over injuries much of the year and still managed to average 8.9 points, 4.9 assists and 3.5 steals

Gregerson on top area v-ball squad

One word best describes HomeTown Newspapers East All Area 1996 Volleyball first team – powerful

This year's squad is stocked full of tremendous hitters From Novi's Ursula Place to Lakeland's Erin Zwinck our team can flat out put the volleyball on the floor

That's not to say our team doesn't possess finesse and skill too

The Wildcats Michelle Mott had nearly 2,000 successful sets and served with an incredible accuracy of better than 90 percent Then there's Northville's Saran Gregerson who blocked everything in sight

Speaking of defense Milford's Carrie Williams definitely earned the title of Miss Dig this year She led the entire area in digs which means she was hitting the court often to keep the ball in play with nearly 300

Here's a closer look at all of HomeTown Newspapers East All-Area volleyball first team selections made by the sports editors of The Novi News Northville Record Milford Times and South Lyon Herald

SARAH GREGERSON
Northville, senior

A two year starter for the Mustangs Gregerson was one of the area's better middle blockers Coach Laura Murray said Gregerson's athletic abilities led to her success

"She plays high above the net" Murray said "She's very quick and agile for a big girl"

Gregerson had 143 kills and an efficiency rate of .325

"In every game she played" Murray said "she averaged 2.6 kills"

Gregerson proved she wasn't a one dimensional player too She notched 11 serving aces and had 40 digs on defense

Gregerson was named to the WLAA's All Western Division team

ERIN ZWINCK
Lakeland, senior

Zwinck established herself as one of the top hitters and servers in the area after moving from her middle blocker position this season

"We moved her to the outside to give us a little more power and she did a real good job for us" Lakeland coach Dave Montgomery said

Zwinck was the Eagles MVP this season and her numbers showed it She was second on the club with 195 kills and was the top server in the area blistering home 83 aces on the season

One of the top athletes at LHS Zwinck was an all KVC first-team selection this winter

URSULA PLACE
Novi, senior

At the start of the season Place was hailed as one of the Kensington Valley Conference's best players She lived up to her billing

She was one of the area's top hitters with 229 kills She also returned 89 percent of all the balls that came her way Place made just 70 errors in 617 hitting attempts

"She's an outstanding volleyball player," coach Julie Fisette said

Place was named to the All-KVC first team

"She's got great court leadership," Fisette added "She's very dominant"

MICHELLE MOTT
Novi, senior

Mott did her job to near perfection this season

"For the third year in a row," said Fisette "I never had to worry about my setter She always made

Mustangs' Ossola named to 2nd unit

This season HomeTown Newspapers East All-Area second-team is a second unit in name only

How can this squad take a back seat to anyone with such a superb collection of talent and leadership? Only some extraordinary efforts from the members of our all-area first team prevented the second teamers from reaching a higher level of recognition

But when it came down to clutch play this season these all-area performers were just as reliable as their first-team counterparts

And the second squad also covered the intangibles Court awareness, toughness and a desire to win were trademarks shared by all six members of our second team.

Let's take a closer look at the members of the 1996 second-team spikers who can hold their own with best players in any area:

ASHLEY OSSOLA
Northville, sophomore

If the area has a rising star, it's Ossola. The youngster proved invaluable in Northville's improved fortunes this winter with an excellent all around game

Ossola's extensive background in the sport might be a big reason for her success Coach Laura Murray said the sophomore has played on top AAU teams for the past several years

'She's used to winning," she added

Ossola led Northville with 35 aces and was accurate on 95 percent of her serves She was second on the team in kills and averaged about three digs per game

"She's a great all-around athlete,' Murray said

Ossola dominated a match against Farmington Hills Harrison during the season. In a five game match, she totaled 30 digs and five kills.

"She's not afraid to hit the floor," Murray said

RENEE SUENKONIS
Novi, senior

Suenkonis is one of the reasons Novi was so dangerous this season

Gymnasts receive numerous awards

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

"It comes down to consistency."

BARB WINN
Gymnastics coach

For most college and high school teams having an All-American is really an accomplishment

To show just what kind of year it was for the Northville-Novi gymnastics squad no fewer than six Mustangs made All-American The combined team is represented in each of the four events as well as all-around

'It comes down to consistency," coach Barb Winn said

Each gymnast must attain a certain point level in each event five times during the season to make All-American Two of those performances must come at high level competition such as the conference and state meets

Erica Winn heads the list of All-Americans She earned the required marks, which range from 8.4 to 8.7, in the vault, balance beam, uneven bars and floor exercise Winn also made the all-around standard of 33.6

"Erica was the only one in each event," said the coach.

Freshman Nicole Pelletier made All-American in three categories vault, floor and all-around Stacey Williamson was honored in the vault, beam, floor and all-around

Gina Spinazze made All-American in bars, floor and all-around Mary Essary was honored in the floor exercise, bars and all-around while freshman Danean Pazdan was an All-American on the uneven bars

The combined team earned honors throughout the year

Williamson, Pelletier and Winn made the All-Regional team on the vault Winn, Essary and Spinazze made it on the uneven bars, Pazdan, Williamson and Winn on the beam, Pelletier, Spinazze and Winn on the floor; Williamson, Spinazze and Winn were all-around All-Region.

Spinazze made All-State on in the floor exercise.

GYMNASTICS

Over 460 gymnasts representing 29 gyms from five states attended the 7th annual Wolverine Classic at the Cliff Keen Arena The meet was hosted by Ann Arbor's Gym America early in March Representing Oakland Gymnastic Training Center of Walled Lake were the teams 25 level eight, nine, and 10 competitors

The juniors and seniors of level eight had an outstanding meet In the junior division, Katie Braine of Northville placed eighth all around (32 65), 3rd/vault (8 70), and 9th/floor (8.55)

In the senior division Kristen Levin of Novi placed 3rd on vault (8 70) and beam (8 625) also 7th on floor (8.45). In 3rd place all around with a 33 975 was Kristina Kennedy of Novi. Kennedy's 8 90 vault earned 1st place, beam 5th/8 25, bars 6th (8275) and floor an 8.55 good for 7th place

SCHOLARSHIPS

Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all state to qualify. Much of this money goes unused

.A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student athletes It takes them step-by-step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship and includes college and conference listings.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a self addressed, stamped business size envelope to the National Sports Foundation, P.O Box 940, Oakhurst, NJ 07755.

COACHES NEEDED

Our Lady of Victory Church is seeking coaches for both its girls softball and boys baseball teams. Teams compete in the CYO league and are composed of sixth, seventh and eighth grade students If interested, please contact Dennis Blake at (313) 453-5352.

the correct choices "

Mott had nearly 2,000 successful sets She was also the Cal Ripken of her team, playing every minute of every game.

"She never gave less than 110 percent," said Fisette. "She's a tough kid."

JANIE AGEMY
South Lyon, senior

Agemy and her strong right arm were well known around the KVC courts this year.

Her rocket shots from her middle blocker position kept everyone on her toes. Agemy almost singlehandedly gave the best blocking team in the league – Brighton – fits this year with her above-the-net play

"Janie is just a great jumper," SL coach Ed Baldwin said. "She's only about 5-foot-9 but she played about 6-foot-3 or 6-foot-4. That really made her a dominant blocker."

An all-KVC first-team choice for the second straight year, Agemy led the Lions in both kills and blocks this year and was a good server as well

CARRIE WILLIAMS
Milford, senior

Williams brought a deadly combination of skill and intelligence to the table for the Redskins this season

As Milford's top setter Williams led the area with 256 digs but was also strong on attacks, recording nearly 90 kills for the year

"She was our quarterback out there," Milford coach Kelly Kollar said. "The team relied on her in a lot of ways Of course as our setter she did a great job but she was a consistent server and a good outside hitter too."

Williams, who was selected as an all-KVC first-team player for the second straight season, just seemed to have a sense of where the ball needed to go.

"She would look at the defense and place the ball where they weren't," Kollar said. "She had a great court sense ""

Pompon team wins state title

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

A year's worth of hard work paid off for the Northville High Pompon team recently

The Mustangs won the Division II state championship on March 10 by outdistancing a field of 10 According to coach Patti Paciocco, the team began practicing last May

"We were together a long time," she said "We all seemed to pull together "

Northville scored 334 5 points out of a possible 360 to win the championship, which was held at Saginaw Valley State University Canton was the Mustangs nearest competitor and scored 320 5 points

Paciocco believed her team had a good shot at winning.

"I walked in there knowing we were among the top teams, she said, "so it wasn t a big shock that we took first

The road to the championship was a long one for Northville

Paciocco, a first year coach, began practice last May in order to give her team plenty of time to get familiar with each other That s critical in pompon

> "I walked in there knowing we were among the top teams so it wasn't a big shock that we took first."
> PATTI PACIOCCO
> Northville Pompon coach

Movements are choreographed and teams must make them as one In order to achieve that synchronization, Northville practiced two hours per day since last spring

That's not to mention summer camp and numerous performances at football and basketball games Competitions started last fall

Northville took third place in the state dance competition last November Then at regional competition in February the Mustangs finished high enough to earn a Division II berth to the state finals

Teams had to score at least 80 percent of all points at the regional to make the cut Northville notched 84 percent with 152 points out of 180

The Mustangs blew away the state finals field Northville was nearly perfect in all 14 judging categories for its four minute routine which was done to the music of "I m Free " by Kenny Loggins

Brighton. An excellent three-point shooter, Sander had the ability to drive to the basket as well.

"Mark could create his own shot," said Northville coach Tim Turner. "He always found a way to slide into gaps in the defense."

Most often, those were high quality shots. Sander, who was named to the All-Western Lakes Activities Association first team, shot 55 percent from the floor. He also shot better than 40 percent from three-point land and 80 percent from the free throw line.

His excellent offense didn't subtract from his defense. To play Turner's pressure defense, Sander had to be able to pull his weight. He did.

"He was more than adequate defensively," said Turner.

DAVE WILKINS
Lakeland, senior guard

Playing perhaps the most important position on the floor and being the coach's son might have gotten to some people but Wilkins handled the pressure well this year.

A three-year varsity starter at point guard, Wilkins continued to develop his overall game this season and emerged as possibly the top point man in the KVC.

Wilkins earned all-KVC first-team honors scoring over 11 points per game and leading the area in assists per game, dishing out nearly seven feeds every time out on the court. This year also saw Wilkins break Lakeland team records for career assists and steals.

His coach and father Randy Wilkins said his son really developed into a complete player over the past two seasons.

"He wasn't just a big part of our offense but most of the time he was guarding the other team's best player," coach Wilkins said. "He did a lot for us."

BEN SZOSTEK
Northville, senior forward

If Sander was Northville's first option on offense, Szostek was option 1-A.

He mirrored his teammate in terms of production and leadership on the Mustangs. Szostek averaged 19 points per game and shot 58 percent from the field.

Give the senior credit. He went from playing the perimeter to working down low near the basket. Szostek's quick jumping ability and know-how around the basket led to many easy hoops for the senior.

Turner said two factors made Szostek an excellent player this season: toughness and intelligence. The senior took good shots and despite his slender build wasn't afraid to knock heads with the league's big men.

Szostek made the WLAA's All-Western Division team.

CHAD DICKEN
Novi, senior forward

After a slow start, Dicken came on strong in the second half of the season.

Noted for his great jumping ability, the senior averaged 13.5 points for the Wildcats. He also grabbed six rebounds per game from his small forward slot. Dicken made 46 percent of his shots from the floor and 40 percent from the three-point line.

Dicken, who was named to the All-Kensington Valley Conference team, often drew double teams from opponents. When other squads guarded him with one player the last three games of the year, he averaged 20 points per game.

"He really came on at the end," coach Pat Schluter said. "He had a good year."

Point guard Kersey named to All-Area basketball 2nd squad

"He was one of our main leaders," Novi coach Pat Schluter said.

He was enough of an offensive threat to take scoring pressure off of teammate Chad Dicken. Kramer was strong at taking it to the basket

"He shot 48 percent from the field," Schluter noted.

NICK DEMEESTER
Milford, junior guard

Demeester had a lot of things going against him in this, his second year as a varsity starter but he responded with a solid season.

After averaging more than nine points a game as a sophomore point guard last year Demeester found a lot more attention awaiting his switch to shooting guard this season

"He really had a pretty good year as a sophomore but because of our personnel he was able to roam a bit," Milford High School coach Don Palmer said "This year he was really the focal point of the team and defenses paid a lot more attention to him "

Demeester responded by upping his scoring average to 10.6 points per game and he was still second on the team dishing out 2 6 assists per contest

ANEIL KERSEY
Northville, senior guard

Known primarily for his exploits on the football field, Kersey distinguished himself on the hardwood this winter

He led the Mustangs to a 16-7 year from his point guard position Kersey averaged better than five assists per game

"Aneil gave us the ability to run our offense and run the fast break," said coach Tim Turner

Kersey's great vision allowed him to make tough passes look easy Turner said he was a big reason why teammates Mark Sander and Ben Szostek had good years

"He's a great athlete," Turner said, "and a winner "

ERIC HARDIN
Lakeland, junior forward

Exactly how many players averaged a "double-double" this season in the KVC?

The answer is one, and he wore number 21 for the Lakeland Eagles Hardin, a 6-foot-3 physical power forward, led Lakeland High School in scoring posting better than 12 points per game and grabbing over 11 rebounds per contest as well

"He was probably our top offensive threat this year," said coach Randy Wilkins. "He's not only good down low but he can also shoot from outside and he can handle the ball as well."

Hardin also canned 17 three-pointers on the year and forced 3.5 steals per game. An all-KVC second teamer this season, Wilkins said he plans on using the versatile Hardin in even more ways next year.

"We're actually toying with the idea of putting him at point guard," Wilkins said.

STEVE WHITE
South Lyon, junior forward

The Lions needed White to come into his own this season and the 6-foot-4 junior did not disappoint.

Without a dominant scorer South Lyon coach Ron Shanks knew he had to turn to White, his hardest summer camp worker, to pick up some of the slack. White was ready, easing into his role as the team's go-to guy.

White led the Lions, scoring 11 points per game, and he was their top rebounder grabbing nearly seven boards a night. He also developed a great touch from the outside bombing home 22 triples, also tops on the squad.

"He's a kid who's still really coming into his maturity," Shanks said. "He improved a lot during the year and I think he'll step it up even more next year."

White earned all-second team all-KVC honors this winter.

Ossola on v-ball second team

If teammate Ursula Place wasn't smashing the ball back at opponents, Suenkonis was. She had 184 kills and posted a 90 percent efficiency rate.

Suenkonis played well in all facets of the game. Coach Julie Fisette said she showed particular improvement in the back row.

"She really came through in the back row," she added.

SARAH DIGSBY
Lakeland, senior

Offense has never been a problem for Digsby but this year she was determined to add to her all-around game.

"It was a main goal to improve her defense this year," Lakeland coach Dave Montgomery said. "She really matured and turned into a good defensive player."

Kids can learn to manage asthma

By KAREN THOMAS
Special Writer

The bad news: Nearly 4 million children nationwide have asthma, the leading cause of pediatric hospitalization. The good news: Even children as young as four can learn to manage their asthma and keep symptoms like coughing and wheezing at bay.

"The key thing that parents and children should know is that asthma can be controlled," said Randall Brown, M.D., assistant professor of pediatrics and communicable diseases at the University of Michigan Medical Center.

"Outstanding Olympians and professional athletes, including Jackie Joyner-Kersee and basketball All-Star Juwan Howard, have succeeded in spite of their asthma. Asthmatic children should be able to exercise, to learn, to play actively and to control their symptoms – so they don't miss school days, don't have to make periodic visits to the emergency room and don't have to be hospitalized."

While parents may need to take simple environmental steps like regularly changing furnace filters, covering mattresses or moving dust-collecting stuffed animals away from the child's bed, children also can learn to prevent asthma attacks by heeding the following advice:

• Learn what triggers the condition and how to monitor it.

Individual triggers vary, ranging from exercise and cold air to dust, animal dander and exposure to tobacco smoke.

As children begin to identify their individual triggers, they also can learn to monitor their lung function with a small plastic cylinder called a peak-flow device. Blowing into it propels a small ball into a graduated series of zones that measure lung capacity. Children can learn to translate the numbers into the familiar traffic-light system of "go ahead," "caution" and "danger."

"I've treated 4-year-olds who manage their peak-flow tests beautifully," Brown said. "The advantage is that this device often shows changes in pulmonary function before clinical symptoms like wheezing appear, so a child can start medication well before he or she actually experiences breathing problems."

• Use "spacer" devices to ensure proper administration of inhaled medications. "The plume that most inhalers generate shoots out at least a foot – and lands on the back of a child's throat instead of in the lungs," Brown notes. Improper administration of inhaled medications can lead to sore throats, while doing nothing to check the asthma. The spacers, designed for children of different ages and coordination levels, catch the errant plume and properly direct it into the airway.

• Avoid over-the-counter inhaled medications.

"Essentially, they're inhaled adrenaline or epinephrine, very dangerous drugs," Brown warns. "Frequent users become tolerant of these medications and find they need more and more to obtain relief. At the same time, what little relief they do obtain alleviates only symptoms and not the underlying airway inflammation. My emergency room colleagues tell me they often see asthmatics come in gasping for air, having used an entire container of medication without much effect. Even though they're widely advertised, I tell patients absolutely not to use these over-the-counter remedies."

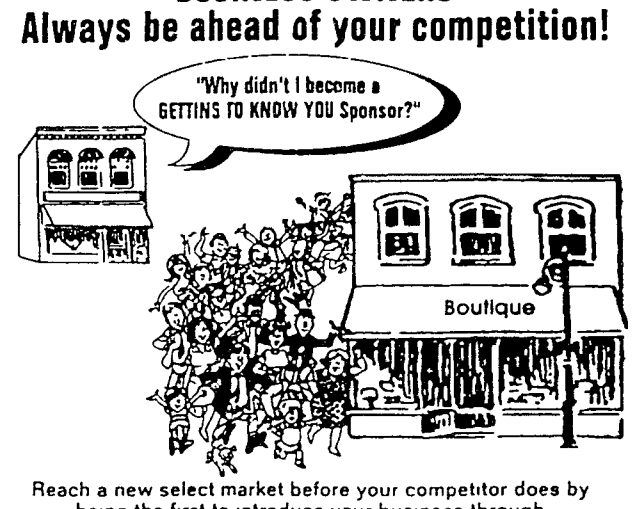

For many youngsters, asthma is a temporary condition. Fifty percent of afflicted children will outgrow it after age six.

"Children who don't have a strong family history of allergies, eczema or asthma are more likely to be in that fortunate group," Brown notes. In addition, parents should be aware that every child who wheezes does not have asthma.

"In the first few years of life, approximately 20 percent of children have what we call wheezing lower-respiratory illnesses," Brown says. "For many, once such an illness is over, so are the asthma-like symptoms."

Education is still the key to proper care, however, whether asthma becomes a faint childhood memory or a permanent part of adult life. "Once they understand it, most children can control their asthma – and go on to enjoy normal lives," Brown says.

When in doubt, call your ophthalmologist

By SUSAN THOMS
Special Writer

Patients sometimes apologize for "bothering" me with an eye condition that they assume is trivial. Or they call my office to describe eye pain or an injury and ask whether it is "serious enough" for me to look at.

My advice is always "When in doubt, call." I would rather offer reassurance to 10 patients who do not have a serious problem than miss one with a vision-threatening condition.

Here are some guidelines to help determine when to call an ophthalmologist.

Sudden change in vision, pain or sensitivity to light. Sudden onset of these symptoms could be a sign of a serious problem. Notify your ophthalmologist promptly.

Floaters and flashes. If small specks appear in your vision or if you see flashing streaks of light, your ophthalmologist will need to examine your eyes. Floaters and flashes are very common.

They may be merely annoying or they may be serious. Your ophthalmologist will be able to tell whether they are being caused by a torn or detached retina.

Redness. A red eye can be caused by an infection, allergy, ocular ulcer or inflammation. Your ophthalmologist should be notified of any eye redness and your symptoms to determine urgency.

There is no need to be alarmed by the appearance of a red spot in the white of your eye. This is a subconjunctival hemorrhage and can be caused by sneezing, coughing or minor injury or may appear for no reason at all.

These broken blood vessels will disappear on their own. If you find these occurring with any regularity, or if they persist, call your ophthalmologist.

A red eye in a contact lens wearer may be serious and should be brought to the attention of your ophthalmologist.

Trauma to the eye. Foreign material in the eye is common and usually washes away by tearing, blinking or flushing the eyes with cool water. If you get something in your eye that does not come out on its own, call your ophthalmologist.

If wood, metal, plastic or other material becomes embedded, you should be seen by an ophthalmologist both to remove it and to inspect the eye. You may need medicine to avoid an infection.

A chemical injury can be serious, depending on the chemical. If a solution splashes into your eye, flush the eye immediately with cool water and call your ophthalmologist. Soap and shampoo can be mildly irritating for a few hours but may not require treatment.

However, chemicals such as bleach, drain cleaner or gasoline can cause a serious burn. Help from your ophthalmologist or emergency room should be south immediately.

A hit in the eye may cause only minor bruising. However, if you experience blurred or double vision, severe pain, bleeding, severe lid swelling or sensitivity to light, you should see your ophthalmologist.

Susan Thoms, M.D., is an assistant clinical professor in the department of ophthalmology at the University of Michigan Center for Specialty Care, Livonia.

ST. MARY HOSPITAL

The following classes are coming up at St. Mary:

• Childbirth Class

Learning what to expect during pregnancy, labor and delivery can make the entire experience more rewarding. The Marian Women's Center at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia offers a Childbirth Preparation Class based on the Lamaze method that increases expectant parents' knowledge of the birth experience.

A six-week class from 7 to 9 p.m. at a cost of $50 is offered on an ongoing basis. A one-day class held on Saturdays at a cost of $75 is also offered. For more information about class dates and times or to register, please call (313) 655-3314 or toll free at 800-494-1615.

• Cancer Support Group

"Focus on Living," a self-help group for cancer patients and their families, meets the first Wednesday of each month at St. Mary. The next meeting will be on Wednesday, April 3, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the hospital auditorium.

The ability to "Focus on Living" is a unique challenge for individuals confronting the illness of cancer. To enjoy life's experiences while attempting to maintain as normal a lifestyle as possible can be a difficult yet attainable goal for the cancer patient and those who share in his or her life.

Co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society, "Focus on Living" is a self-help group that gives participants an opportunity to discuss their concerns, obtain answers and gain support from others who share the same experiences.

Registration is not necessary, and there is no charge to attend the meeting. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call (313) 655-8542 or toll free 1-800-494-1653.

• Breathers' Club

St. Mary offers a free Breathers' Club support group meeting each month on the third Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m. This educational program is for people with chronic lung disease. A guest speaker gives a presentation each month.

The next meeting will be on Thursday, April 18, in the hospital auditorium near the Five Mile entrance. This meeting will include a presentation by Janice Wheeker, R.N., on stress and relaxation techniques.

No registration is required. For more information, call (313) 655-2924.

• Diabetes

St. Mary will hold a diabetes support group meeting on Wednesday, April 10, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the hospital auditorium near the Five Mile entrance.

Guest speaker Kamal Gupta, M.D., ophthalmologist, will discuss, "Diabetes and Your Eyes." There is no charge to attend the meeting and registration is not required.

For more information, call St. Mary at (313) 655-2922 or toll free at 1-800-494-1650.

• Menopause Support Group

The Marian Women's Center menopause support group will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday, April 3, in the Marian Pavilion Conference Room B located next to St. Mary Hospital. Please use the Levan Road west entrance. Enter through the gray awning.

Debra Madonna, certified occupational therapist and certified childbirth educator, will discuss exercise and fitness and demonstrate various relaxation techniques. The Marian Women's Center menopause support group provides in-depth information, education and emotional support to help women lead fuller lives during their mid-life years.

There is no charge to attend the meeting and no registration is required. For more information, call the Marian Women's Center at (313) 655-3314.

• Alzheimer's Disease

St. Mary Hospital will offer a free lecture on "Facing the Challenge of Alzheimer's Disease" at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 23, in the hospital auditorium. The guest speaker will be Kelley Fulkerson, director of education and training, Alzheimer's Association, Detroit Area Chapter.

The program, presented by the St. Mary Hospital department of social work, will present an overview of Alzheimer's disease, how the family can decrease difficult behaviors, how to prepare for future needs and available resources.

Refreshments will be served, and registration is requested as seating is limited. To register, call (313) 655-3333.

• St. Mary will hold its second annual Women's Health Day from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 20, at the Holiday Inn in Livonia. Women's Health Day will include a keynote speaker, a variety of one-hour workshops on health topics of interest to women, continental breakfast, lunch, a fashion show by Jacobson's and exhibits from local merchants.

The keynote address for the event will be "Walk-on-Water Women" presented by Melodie Chenevert, R.N., of Gaithersburg, Md.

Workshop topics include "Stress and You," "Abuse and Domestic Violence," "Creativity and Innovation," "Coping with the Loss of a Relationship," "Mid-Life Changes," "Building Self-Esteem," "Fabrics of Friendship," and "Women's Cancer Issues for the '90s."

The event, co-sponsored by the Marian Women's Center and St. Mary Hospital, is also supported by Project SMILE.

The Holiday Inn-Livonia is located at 17123 Laurel Park Dr. at I-275 and Six Mile road. Advance registration is required by Thursday, April 11. Cost is $25 in advance or $30 at the door. The cost includes workshops, continental breakfast and lunch.

For more information or to register, call the Marian Women's Center at (313) 655-2882 or toll free at (1-800) 494-1617.

hap Senior Plus

Introducing... HAP Senior Plus

Here's how HAP Senior Plus works.

Through a special agreement with the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), Health Alliance Plan is paid a set amount to manage your health care. In return, HAP Senior Plus agrees to provide for all of your health care needs. That includes hospitalizations, physician's services, outpatient care, home health care...and more. HAP Senior Plus even covers preventive care, immunizations and routine physical exams.

As an HMO for people with Medicare — HAP Senior Plus covers most services 100%. There are no deductibles or coinsurance bills to pay.

HAP Senior Plus gives you coverage options.

Select the Zero Premium Option and for some services, like doctor's office visits, all you have to pay is a modest office visit charge of $10. But that's all you pay. Everything else is covered in full. And there's no monthly premium — ever.

Or if you want, you can select the Rx Option and add important prescription drug benefits and reduce your office visit charge to $5.

Here's what HAP Senior Plus covers.

HAP Senior Plus gives you all the coverage you have now with your Medicare and Medicare supplement plans. But it goes even further and covers preventive care, immunizations and even yearly physical exams. Here's a partial list of the services covered for in-network care:

- Hospitalization, including:
  Semiprivate room,
  Regular nursing services
  Inpatient physician and surgical services
  Outpatient hospital services
  Inpatient drugs and medication
  Radiology and lab services
  Rehabilitation services
- Skilled Nursing Facility Services
- Emergency Services
- Physician Services
- Ambulance Services
- Preventive Medical Care
- Vision Care
- Home Health Care

...and more.

* You must continue to pay your Part B premium.

Here's all you have to do to get started.

To get the facts about HAP Senior Plus, simply complete and mail the coupon above. Or call the toll-free number shown below. We'll rush you an information package with all the details you need to make your final decision. This package includes your application for enrollment and a full listing of the plan's benefits, features and services. Disaster coverage is difficult to come by

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

It's difficult to obtain a new homeowners insurance policy in states prone to natural disasters particularly coverage for earthquake or hurricane damage

In California for example about 90 percent of all insurance firms refuse to write any new homeowners policies If they do the law requires them to offer earthquake coverage And that scares off most companies

The few companies that do offer homeowners policies charge super high premiums maybe three times what would be considered a normal premium fee

But the situation may soon change

Federal legislation to create a private natural disaster program including earthquake insurance coverage is in the works and is supported by several key real estate groups, including the National Association of Realtors

The National Disaster Protection Partnership Act (H R 1856 and S 1043) would allow primary disaster insurance to be sold through participating private insurance companies to homeowners The legislation also would allow selling re-insurance to companies and state insurance pools could sell policies covering commercial properties

The primary insurance would be available for one- to four-unit residential properties Coverage would include earthquakes, hurricanes and seismic events

Special programs are being proposed and implemented in individual disaster prone states For example in California a plan may help people obtain earthquake coverage before the federal legislation kicks in

Oelke is a lot of home for the building dollar

By James McAlexander
Copley News Service

Because of its simple and classic design The Oelke could be "at home" in a variety of environments It provides a lot of house for the building dollar by taking advantage of efficient building techniques without wasting any square footage

This house plan offers many benefits for a family with small children The sleeping quarters are located at the rear of the house allowing parents a certain amount of privacy while still being near enough to keep tabs on the kids

The long hallway has two nearly identical bedrooms on one side Each is roomy and has plenty of closet space

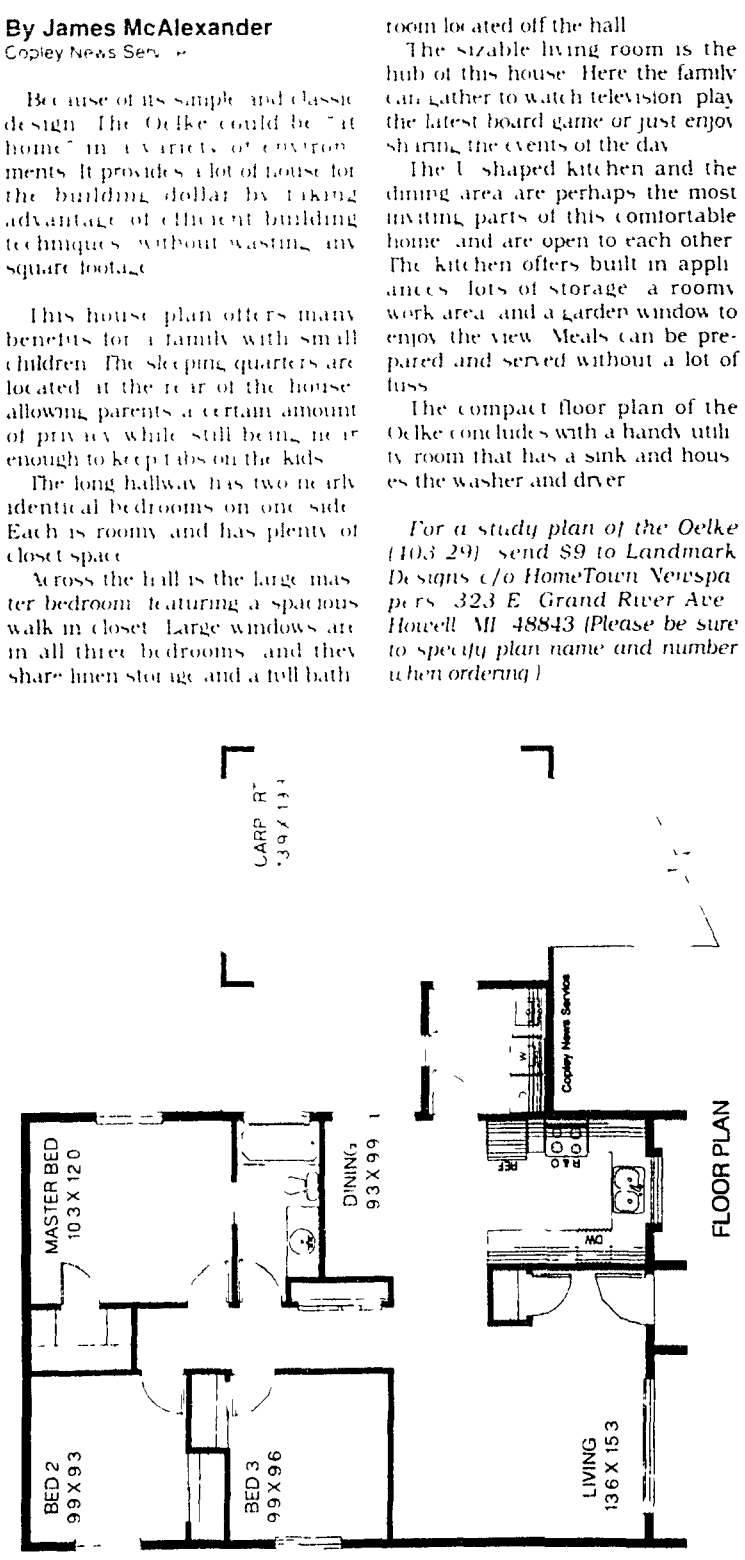

Across the hall is the large master bedroom featuring a spacious walk in closet Large windows are in all three bedrooms and they share linen storage and a full bath room located off the hall

The sizable living room is the hub of this house Here the family can gather to watch television play the latest board game or just enjoy sharing the events of the day

The L shaped kitchen and the dining area are perhaps the most inviting parts of this comfortable home and are open to each other The kitchen offers built in appliances lots of storage a roomy work area and a garden window to enjoy the view Meals can be prepared and served without a lot of fuss

The compact floor plan of the Oelke concludes with a handy utility room that has a sink and houses the washer and dryer

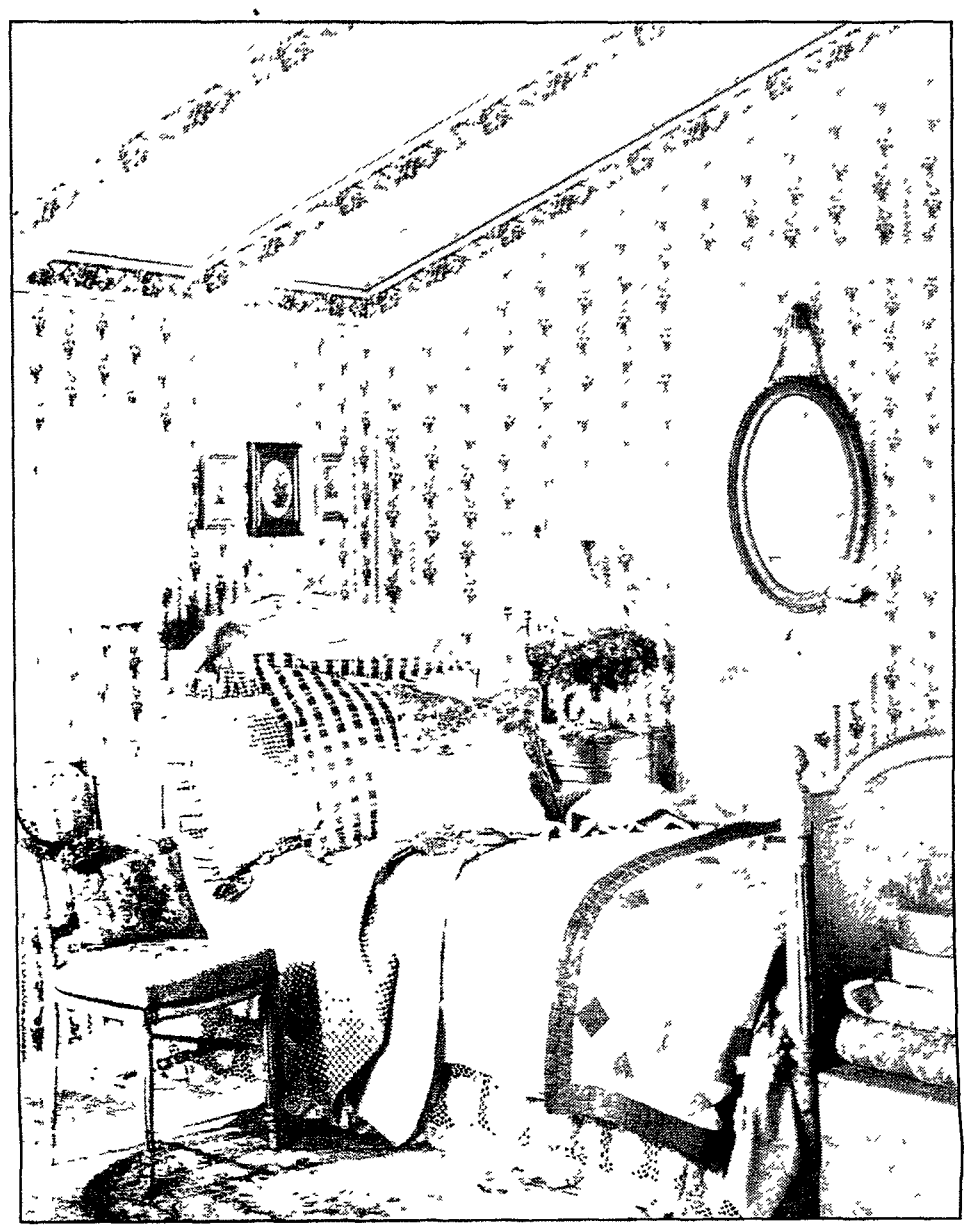

For a study plan of the Oelke (103 29) send $9 to Landmark Designs c/o HomeTown Newspapers 323 E Grand River Ave Howell MI 48843 (Please be sure to specify plan name and number when ordering.)

When creating a room for the granddaughters the sky's the limit

By Rose Bennett Gilbert
Copley News Service

Q. We have three granddaughters (ages 13, 9 and 5) who live in other towns but come to stay on school holidays and long weekends. Our retirement home is small. We use one of the two bedrooms for an office but there is a small attic we're thinking of finishing off as the permanent "granddaughters'" room, to be used on a revolving basis.

I'm writing for ideas.

A There are a handful in the spruced up attic room we show here First notice the divider wall that divvies up the space to make room for a tiny private bath a good idea that will just get better as your girls grow into teens Adding such a wall is no big deal neither is plumbing if you can position the new bath near the pipes that already serve a bath downstairs

On second thought, I take that back The wall really has become a "big deal" thanks to the floral stripe wallcovering (from Sanitas) that manages to brighten the almost-windowless space

The nice surprise comes from the coordinating borders These wallflowers leap onto the ceiling beams to cheer up the overhead outlook as well

The rest of the room is fresh and feminine, from the old painted bed, with its crocheted tablecloth-turned-dust-ruffle, to the happy gathering of ginghams, denim checks and lace

Q. We have begun shopping for new kitchen cabinets for the remodeling project we have in mind, and already we are baffled. What is the real difference between "framed" and "frameless" cabinets? I can see that one has no frame around the opening, but what does that mean in terms of size and strength?

A It doesn't mean anything, according to the experts I have

Annuals that are easy to grow

By C.Z. Guest
Copley News Service

GARDENING

Of all the major groups of plants, annuals have as much to offer as any — if not more Annuals add color texture, fragrance beauty and form to the garden, asking little in return

From the fuzzy foliage of "Dusty Miller" to the French marigold variety "Aurora Red" and rich jewel hues of coleus, annuals offer many diverse colors and qualities A gardener bringing home containers of bedding plants can create a fabulous landscape in much the same manner as an artist with an assortment of paints.

With loving care, annuals are effective in borders, beds, window boxes, along walls, trellises and fences They can also edge a walkway, blend beautifully with perennial plantings, brighten a shady nook, shield spent bulbs or add zest to a vegetable patch.

There are a few guidelines for setting out tender bedding plants. Before you bring them home, plan what to put where and then prepare the soil. Limit plantings to four to six species with no more than three basic colors Put the taller plants in back, lower growers in the middle and at the edge

If you have some strong colors that don't blend, simply plant white flowers between them in large groups to serve as a neutralizer Delicate pastel shades are best in the foreground, while deeper and stronger colors such as purple and red are perfect for shaded or distant places

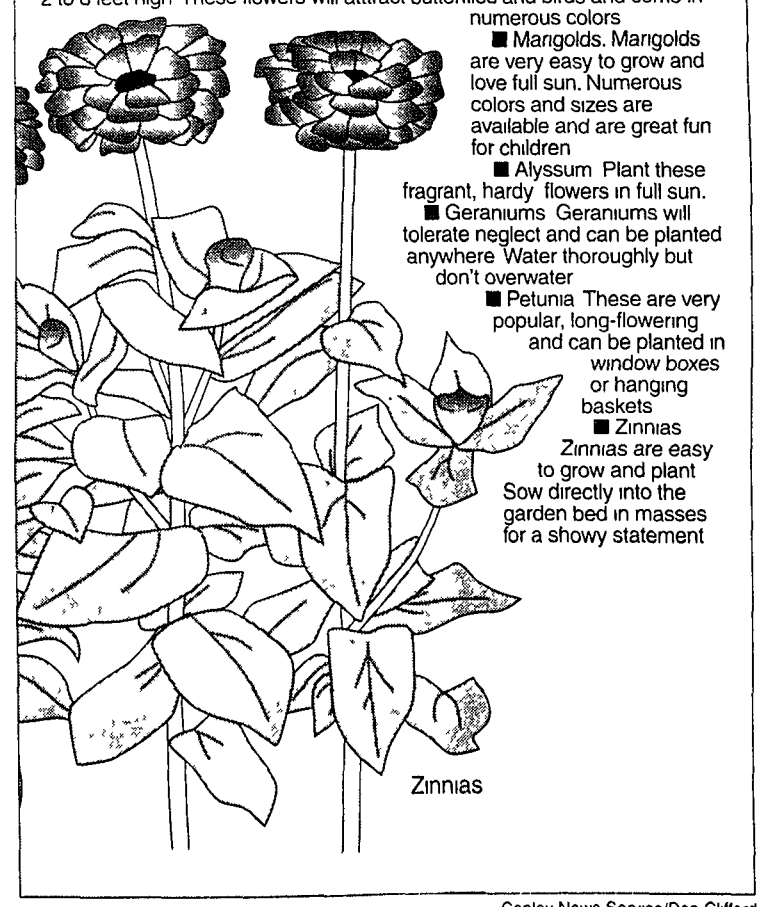

Impatiens — The most popular bedding plant Versatile with single or double blooms and thrives in shade Use as a ground cover, in a bed, in a tub or in a hanging basket Wide range of colors, such as white, pink, red, orange or multicolor The New Guinea impatiens are taller with fewer but larger blooms and variegated foliage These beauties require more sun than the standard impatiens Good choices: "Tango and "Spectral"

Cosmos — Showy, long-

Some easy annuals

- Impatiens These flowers do well in shade Use as ground cover or plant in tubs and baskets There is a wide range of colors
- Cosmos Cosmos does well in full sun and poor soil and grows 2 to 8 feet high These flowers will atttract butterfiles and birds and come in numerous colors
- Marigolds. Marigolds are very easy to grow and love full sun. Numerous colors and sizes are available and are great fun for children
- Alyssum Plant these fragrant, hardy flowers in full sun.
- Geraniums Geraniums will tolerate neglect and can be planted anywhere Water thoroughly but don't overwater
- Petunia These are very popular, long-flowering and can be planted in window boxes or hanging baskets
- Zinnias Zinnias are easy to grow and plant Sow directly into the garden bed in masses for a showy statement

Tea poys are worth thousands

By Anne McCollam
Copley News Service

ANTIQUES

Q. Enclosed is a photo of a tea poy that we inherited. It was made in England and is quite old. The height is 29 inches. Inside there are two openings to hold tea pots and two oval compartments with lids. The feet have castors.

We will be very grateful if you could give us an approximate idea of its value.

A. Tea poys or caddies were small, well-designed tables that were used to serve afternoon tea The castors allowed them to be moved with ease. The decorative beading, pedestal base and lappet carved feet with casters characterize late Sheraton period of furniture.

Your tea poy was made in the early 1800s. Its value would probably be $2,000 to $3,500

Q. My wife and I are curious about a framed picture that has been in our family for 35 years. It is "Daybreak" by Maxfield Parrish and measures 34 by 22 inches. His name is on the lower right side of the picture. On the left are the words "The House of Art N.Y."

Is this an original or a print and does it have any value?

A. You have an early 1900s print. It is a reproduction of an original Maxfield Parrish (1870-1966) painting.

"The House of Art, New York," was the publisher of this print. Parrish was an American painter and illustrator. His work appeared on calendars, magazines, posters and advertising. "Daybreak" was his most famous painting.

Prints of this painting are eagerly sought by collectors. Your framed print would probably be worth $250 to $275.

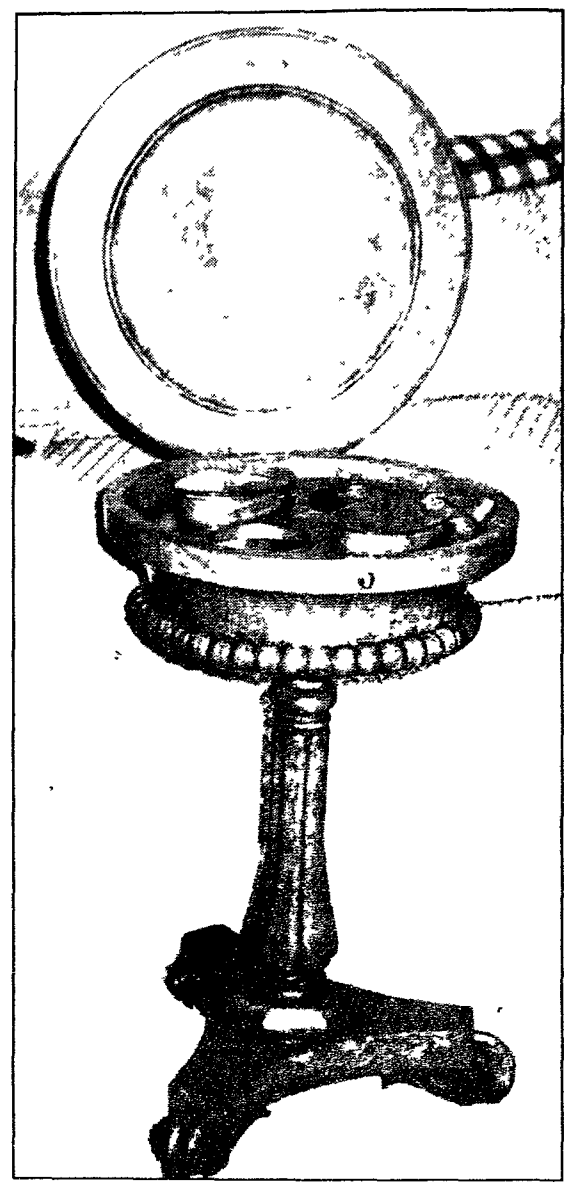

Q. We have an E.S. Curtis photo of Sitting Bear that was purchased in the early 1930s. It was in a roll and tucked away in an old antique shop near St. Louis. The photo is marked "Copyright Photograph 1908 — Photgravure John Andrew and Son." A friend told me any photo of an American Indian by Curtis was worth a great deal.

Could this be true?

A. An original photo by American photographer Curtis can be worth several thousands of dollars. Yours is not an original. The tip off is the word "Copyright," showing yours was produced in large quantities.

The value of your photograph would probably be $25 to $45.

Address your questions to Anne McCollam, P.O. Box 490, Notre Dame, IN 46556. For a personal response, include picture(s), a detailed description, a stamped, self-addressed envelope and $5 per item (one item at a time).

This tea caddy was made in the early 1800s and is worth about $2,000 to $3,500.

Home decorating questions and answers

it on good authority that both framed and frameless cabinets are equally sturdy, but that framed cabinets — those with a vertical (stile) and horizontal (rail) frame inside the door — can be made larger than frameless. Larger means up to 48 inches wide, compared to 36 inches maximum for a frameless cabinet.

Other than that, it's a matter of taste; although frameless cabinets look more sleek when the door is opened and may be a tiny bit easier to reach into.

If you want to know a lot more about choosing well-made cabinets, get in touch with the Kitchen Cabinet Manufacturers Association, the people who developed the first national construction and performance standards for kitchen and vanity cabinets in 1965. They're located at 1899 Preston White Dr., Reston, VA 22091-4326; Phone number is (703) 264-1690

Q. When we built a house on Fox Den Dr., little did we suspect we'd find ourselves inundated with foxes. Every house gift, every hostess present has something to do with a fox!

We have figurines, engravings, cachepots, etc. The final straw was the stuffed fox a friend found in an antique store and presented us with last Christmas.

Please, we like the little creatures well enough, but just don't know how to show them off — or hide them without hurting our friends' feelings.

A. Be, ahem, foxy yourself. Since you've acquired an impressive collection, albeit against your will, group all your foxes together where they will make what designers call a "statement."

Fill a bookcase, tabletop, wallshelves or wherever they'll look important enough to please your benefactors. And when they stop to admire, point out that your collection is now so perfect, even one more would be too many.

Of course, you could always move and outfox your friends. Is there a Sterling Drive, say, or Moneypenny Lane in your town?

New federal legislation for disaster coverage

The California Earthquake Authority (CEA), being pushed by state Insurance Commissioner Chuck Quackenbush, would shield insurance companies, effectively reopening the opportunity to purchase new homeowners policies and earthquake coverage at reasonable cost.

If things go as expected, the CEA plan could be implemented very soon.

The issue of property protection affects all the United States and is not isolated to a few areas perceived as particularly disaster-prone, said David DeSantis, of the Natural Disaster Coalition, when discussing the pending federal legislation.

"There are 39 states that are particularly prone to earthquakes, and at least 20 are prone to hurricane damage," DeSantis said. "But this is not just a California or Florida problem. A lot of states are one disaster away from major insurance problems.

"Without insurance coverage, lenders will not issue mortgages, effectively shutting down the real estate business."

He also noted that a disaster in one area of the country has an indirect impact on markets outside the area directly affected. The new bill would bring together the insurance industry, Realtors and homeowner groups to establish a "better sharing of responsibility."

Under the legislation, homeowners in disaster-prone states who obtain federally related mortgages would have to buy insurance from the national insurance corporation or private disaster insurance offering the same coverage.

Those who failed to do so would be ineligible for long-term federal disaster assistance if their annual income exceeds $60,000.

Questions may be used in future columns; personal responses should not be expected. Send inquiries to James M. Woodard, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190.

Annuals are colorful, versatile and surprisingly easy to grow

lasting and grows rapidly, comes in white and several bright colors with yellow centers, grows 2 to 8 feet high. Sow seeds directly into the garden (after the frost is out of the ground) in a sunny location. Thrives even in poor, dry soil. Excellent choices: "Bright Lights," shades from yellow to orange; "Versailles," a Japanese strain bred for commercial-quality cut flowers; "Sonata," a white flower. These lovely flowers attract butterflies and birds to the garden

Marigold — Sun-loving and long-flowering The seeds are easy to handle and start to germinate swiftly Four common categories and recommended series include "Signet," feathery-leaved, compact plants with thumbnail-size single blossoms. "Gem" series French or dwarf, generally no more than 12-inches tall, double-flower heads and many warm colors; "Aurora" series triploids, 12 to 18 inches tall, flowers all season; "Nugget" and "Fireworks" series, tallest variety with large, coarse leaves and huge 4- to 5-inch blooms. The perfect annual for a children's garden.

Alyssum — Ground cover for edging or drifts in a formal bed, extremely hardy, tolerates hot and cold temperatures, fairly drought-resistant, compact and very fragrant with pink, white or purplish flowers. Plant in full sun. Good cultivars: "Pastel Carpet", "Rosie O Day," "Snow Crystals" and "Carpet of Snow," another favorite of mine.

Geranium — Brilliant colors, marvelous as bedding plants, in pots, as borders or as shrubs or ever-cascading varieties over window boxes and hanging baskets. Most types grow to 30 inches and don't mind neglect. Don't overwater, simply let the soil dry to about 1 inch deep, then water thoroughly. Start seeds about 12 to 14 weeks before the last frost date. Suggested varieties: "Orbit" or "Multibloom."

Our apologies . . .

The recipe for Christmas potpourri that ran in C.Z Guest's column in the Country Living section of Dec. 13, 1995, was that of Howell resident Edith Salyer and was originally printed in the Autumn 1984 issue of The Herb Quarterly.

Petunia — Recently edged out as a favorite U.S. flower. Easy to tend, long-flowering and versatile. The perfect bedding plant for window boxes or in hanging baskets. Seeds will germinate in 10 to 12 days with heat and light. Start six weeks before planting. There are many sizes, shapes and colors from which to choose.

Zinnia — The perfect annual for a child's first garden and for yours, too, with large, easy-to-handle seeds that can be sown directly into the garden bed. All colors except blue. Flowers range in size and shape from 1 -inch singles to pompons 6 inches across. Many All-American Selections winners include "Ruffles," "Peter Pan," "Dasher" and "Border Beauty." Plant in masses in the cutting garden.

Ground covers — Cover the ground quickly with trailing annuals. Such plants spill over the edges of walls, paths, trellises and fences or screen the pool or patio for privacy. I suggest nasturtium varieties such as "Climbing Mix" and "Double Gleam"; they are foolproof, inexpensive, lush, and instant trailers and climbers. They can blanket the ground before slower-growing perennial ground covers.

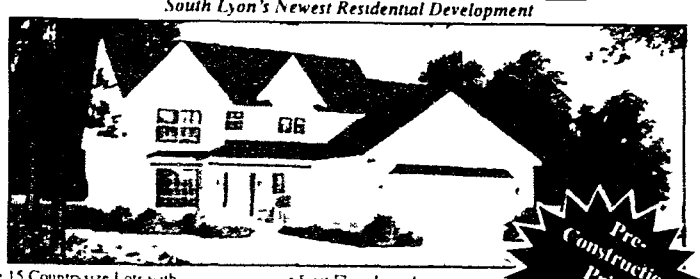

Other spreading annuals include zinnia "Mandarin Orange" and portulaca "Wildfire," both of which thrive in poor, dry soils. "Heavenly Blue" morning glories are a perfect solution; they create a luxurious wall of flowers from midsummer to frost.

Annuals can bridge the transition between spring-flowering bulbs and later perennials. To fill the gaps, use dependable annuals such as petunias of the floribunda or multiflora variety, since ligher colors like "Celebrity Mix" or "Light Pink Pearls" produce more blooms per season than darker shades. To keep plants blooming, always eliminate spent blooms to keep the plant thriving.

Venetian masters saw things in a whole new light.

So will you.

Treasures of Venice

Paintings from the Museum of Fine Arts, Budapest

After spending 200 years in the Museum of Fine Arts, Budapest, this extraordinary collection of works from the Venetian Golden Age is now in Detroit until May 12, exclusively at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Admission (includes audio tour): $5 adults, $2 children & students. Free on Wednesdays (with general museum admission). Members always free.
The following programs are free with exhibition or museum admission.
Daily Film: Venice Pleasure and Power. Shown continuously in the Prentis Court Screening Room.
Tours. Docent-guided tours at 2 p.m., meet at exhibition entrance. Tours are available weekday mornings for school and adult groups. Call 313/833-7981.
Saturday, March 16-Video: Tintoretto: The Yellow Gash. The words of French writer Jean-Paul Sartre guide viewers through this exploration of Tintoretto's work. 2 p.m.
Sunday, March 24-Lecture: "Portraiture and Possession." Dr. Rona Goffen, Rutgers University distinguished professor of art history, discusses Venetian portrait painting. 2 p.m.

THE DETROIT INSTITUTE OF ARTS ▸ THROUGH MAY 12

WEDNESDAY THROUGH FRIDAY, 11 TO 4. WEEKENDS, 11 TO 5. CLOSED MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

Collectibles are stock in trade at Byers Country Store

By ANNE SEEBALDT GOGOLIN
Special Writer

June Byers shows a lively interest in life and the world of collectibles as she walks among her treasures at Byers Country Store in Commerce Township

"It's just an interesting place" she said brightly Byers said that unlike many other antique and collectible store owners she encourages children to come to her business with their parents The property around the big red barn which serves as the main portion of her store is a wildlife refuge for about 500 ducks and geese

In the summer and fall months, children happily watch the ducks geese and their offspring swim gracefully in a nearby small pond They also may picnic on site with their family with her blessings

The red barn used to serve as a bait barn in her parents day Originally, the shop was just in the historic farmhouse located on the site Byers Country Store has been up and running for nearly 49 years

A former teacher for the Detroit Conservatory of music and a graduate of what was then called Ferris Institute Byers owns and operates the store largely on her own

Byers manages well with the assistance of her friends "I've got wonderful help from all my friends" she said "That's what keeps me going - all the friends that I have"

Two buildings on the property house the antiques and collectibles that she sells, another out building houses another business Byers herself lives in a house near to the store that houses the items that she isn't willing to part with yet

Byers explained that her business was the logical outgrowth of her near lifelong hobby

"I was brought up collecting" she said Byers was an only child who was very close to her parents She began to amass a collection of antiques and other interesting items at an early age in imitation of her parents favorite hobby Her father was a steel man in Detroit

"When people asked me years later how I got into this I say that I always knew that I would have to set up a stage somewhere and this is it," she explained

The other reason she got into the business was because her and her parents collections were starting to push her out of house and home

A former dramatics teacher Byers still assists with stage settings "That ties so beautifully into antique collecting" she said "You're always looking for some prop"

In the large red barn, Byers sells vintage jewelry, a ton of teddy bears, older children's books, reproductions collectible animals, throws, and just about anything to grace one's home

"We deal in antiques, collectibles and reproductions," Byers said

Unlike many collectors of antiques, Byers explained that she is "not a purist" She added that most antique collectors scoff at crafts and collectibles Byers likes them all in varying degrees and she sells what she likes The ever-changing stock always includes animal motifs

"We're great ones for animals – live or stuffed" Byers said

Chauncy a resident cat, tries to sneak in the building at about that time Byers is saying this She picks him up gently and takes him back towards the house so that he won't damage anything in the store

Some of the more popular items in Byers store include items which display what she calls the "lodge look" These have Native American or wild animal motifs Neil Rose limited edition carvings brass and copper items from Turkey and the very collectible Noah's Ark items are some of the items Byers has in stock

Another feature is a set of note cards depicting historic places in Commerce The artist Linda Ondero is donating the sales of this series of artwork to help support the state registered historic site

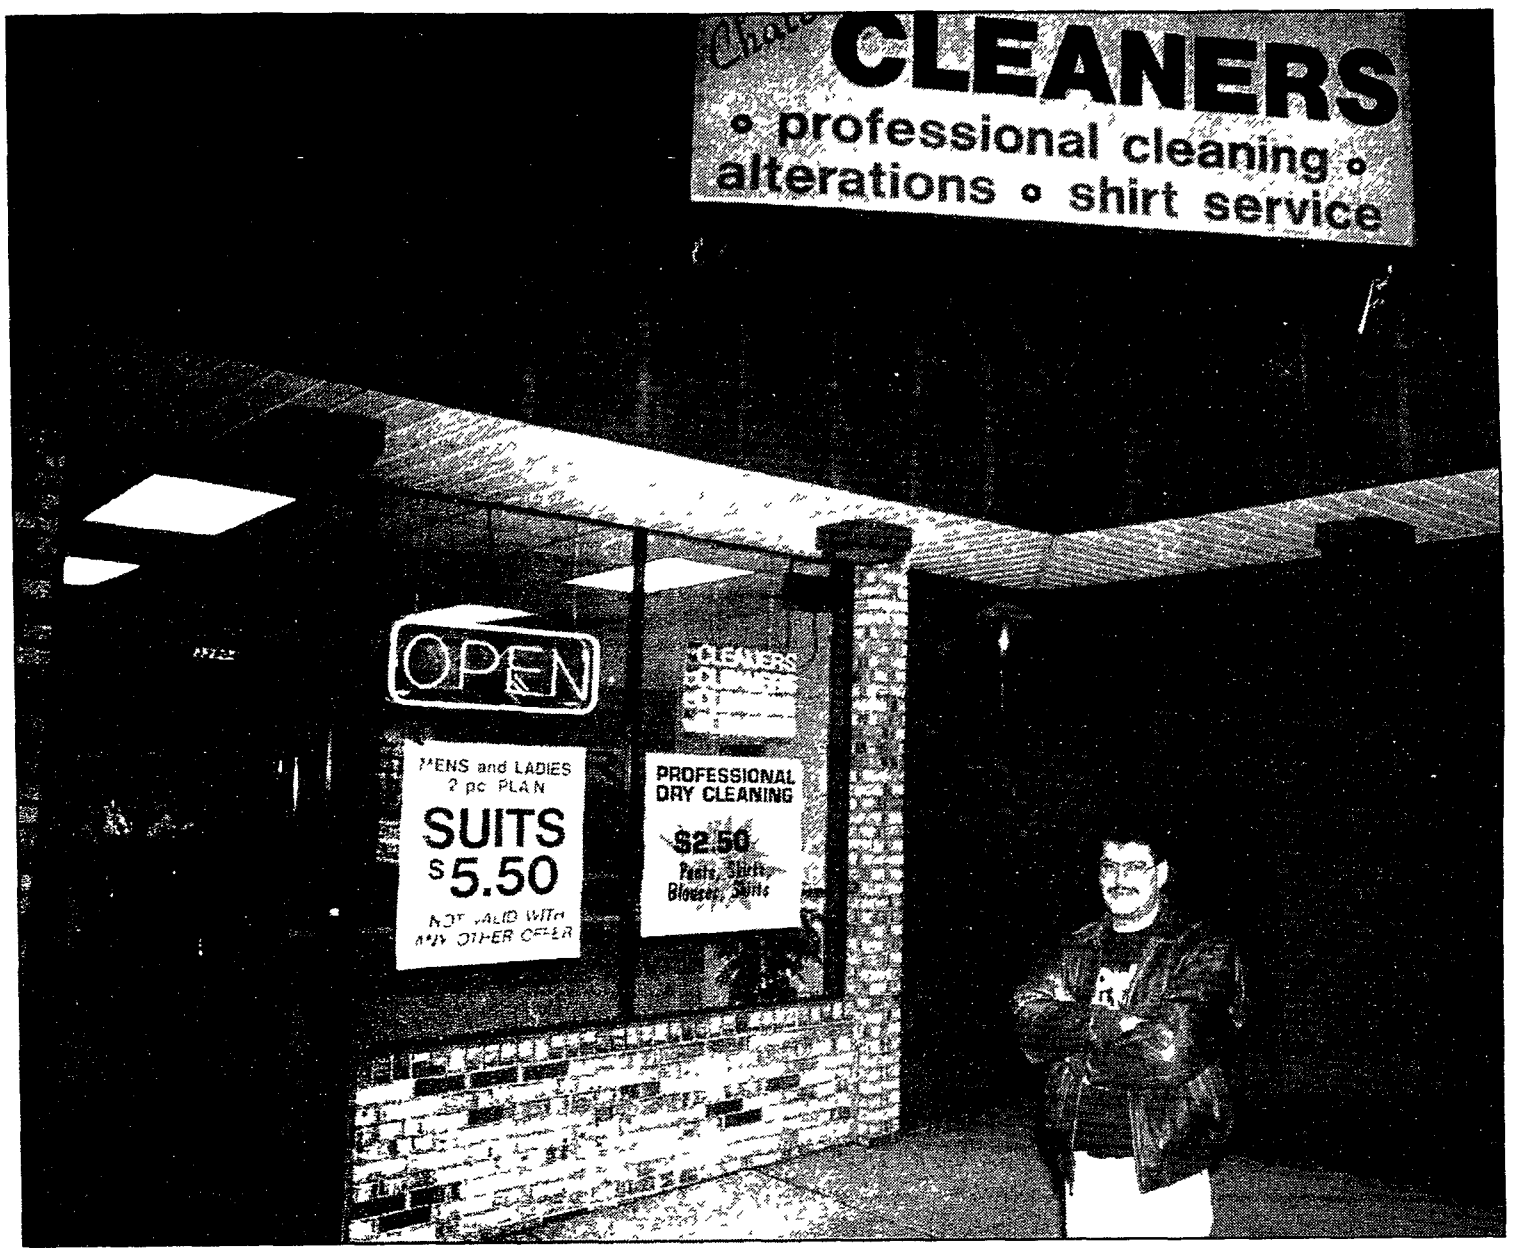

"This store is about remembering the good things," Byers said "We used to just handle antiques but the new generation had not been that interested in antiques" So Byers branched out and began to sell collectible items As a result of this and the fact that she encourages children to come in with their parents she is confident that the latest generation is becoming interested once again in antiques

"Your children are welcome at Byers" she said "They're the collectors of tomorrow"

Now on to the historic farmhouse It dates back to 1850 and has not been "improved" which means among other things, that it still has an outhouse and does not have running water Byers Homestead was designated as a historical attraction of the State of Michigan in May 1977

In the farmhouse Ruby Morrison Antiques features many and varied antiques including some Victorian items belonging to Byers Ruby was a former customer of her parents when they ran the store and has been in business in the farmhouse for about three years She and Helen Frew who works in the store, are among those friends who help Byers keep the place up Other important helpers include Michelle Hund, who is a general helper and wildlife rehabilitator and Jessie Nicolay who takes Byers where she needs to go

Items on sale in the farmhouse include a wide variety of antique children's toys, early 1800s furniture, linens antique clothing, and quilts During part of the year Grandma's Pantry is open nearby to serve cider and donuts

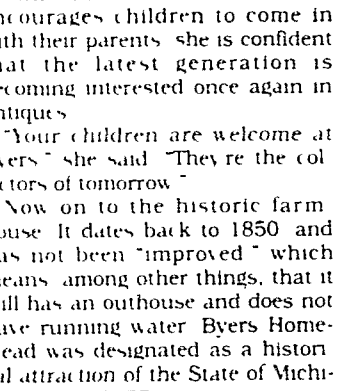

Chalet Cleaners

A new professional dry cleaning shop, Chalet Cleaners, has opened in South Lyon's King Plaza. The new shop at 22904 Pontiac Trail is owned by Nedal Al Masri, and offers what you would expect from a dry cleaner – and then some. In addition to ordinary dry cleaning and pressing, Chalet can do alterations and repairs to clothes. The shop can also handle the cleaning of suede and leather, as well as wedding gowns. A shirt service is available to those who need regular cleaning and pressing. Lacking for time? Chalet Cleaners will pick up and deliver. Cleaning arrives on a recyclable hanger and bag. Hours are 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Mondays through Fridays; 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Call 810-437-0596.

Divorce has tax challenges

Money Management

Divorced parents experience some unique challenges and rewards in both their personal and tax lives. The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants, points out the following federal income tax provisions that may be of interest to such parents

DEPENDENCY EXEMPTION

For starters, special rules determine which divorced parent can claim the dependency exemption for a dependent child Generally, the law gives the exemption to the parent who has custody of the child for the greater part of the year This is the case whether or not that parent actually provided more than half of the child's total annual support

For divorced couples with a pre-1985 divorce agreement, the non-custodial parent may be eligible for the dependency exemption if the agreement so provides and that parent pays at least $600 for the child's support during the year

Parents do have some flexibility in working out the most suitable arrangement By signing Form 8332, Release of Claim to Exemption for Child of Divorced or Separated Parents, the custodial parent may agree to let the non-custodial parent claim the exemption. The non-custodial parent then attaches the form to his or her tax return for each year the exemption is released

MEDICAL EXPENSES

Regardless of who has custody, each parent can deduct medical expenses that he or she incurs for the child Qualified costs include unreimbursed physician and dentist fees, costs for prescription drugs, and insurance premiums Of course, keep in mind that medical costs are deductible only to the extent that their total exceeds 7 5 percent of adjusted gross income (AGI)

CHILD CARE CREDIT

If a custodial parent pays someone to care for the child (under age 13) while he or she works or looks for work, that parent may be entitled to a child care tax credit This applies even if that parent has released the right to a dependency exemption or, under a pre-1985 divorce decree, is not entitled to a dependency exemption with respect to the child

The child care credit ranges from 20-30 percent of qualified expenses paid during the year with the exact percentage based on the parent's adjusted gross income The credit applies only to total annual expenses of up to $2 400 for one child and $4,800 for two or more children If the parent participates in an employer sponsored dependent-care assistance plan the $2,400 and $4,800 limitation on the amount of expenses eligible for the credit must be reduced by the amount excluded from the parent s income under this plan

CHILD SUPPORT AND ALIMONY

Child support is generally neither taxable to the receiving spouse, nor deductible by the paying spouse Alimony on the other hand is deductible by the person who pays it, and taxable to the recipient

HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD

A custodial parent may qualify for "head of household" filing status, which entitles him or her to lower tax rates than those for single taxpayers or for married people filing separately. To qualify for this status on a 1995 return, the parent must be unmarried on Dec 31, 1995, and must have paid more than half the cost of maintaining his or her own home for the year Furthermore the child must have lived in the home for more than half the year

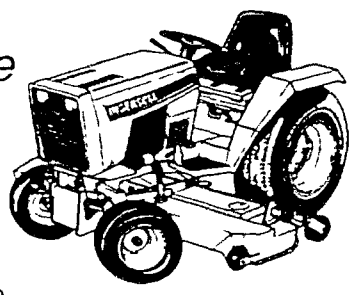

EARNED INCOME CREDIT

The earned income credit is available to low income workers who earn less than a specified amount – for 1995 $24 396 for a taxpayer with only one "qualifying child" and $26 673 for a taxpayer with more than one "qualifying child " Child support is not considered income for this purpose For years after 1995 the credit may be lost if the taxpayer s investment income exceeds a certain amount

If you need additional information consult a CPA or refer to IRS Publication 504, Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals For a free copy, call 1-800-tax-form or obtain one from the local IRS office

Government will help repair homes

Most homeowners are unaware that regardless of their income there are federal, state and local programs that will help them repair and remodel their homes

Government at all levels recognizes that neighborhoods are the basis of life in our country When a neighborhood deteriorates, many things happen both physically and socially When the homes look shabby, a neighborhood seems more attractive to crime and criminals

An area in decline is like a spreading cancer As homes become shabby looking and in need of maintenance the residents lose their desire to keep up the neighborhood Streets become receptacles for trash schools lower their standards and very quickly the selling price of homes in the area drops sharply This accelerates the cycle of degeneration

In order to keep and maintain the nation's housing and neighborhoods, governments at all levels have programs to give homeowners money (that does not have to be repaid) for repairs or to lend them money at below market levels or at no interest

In many areas utility companies will either do energy conservation work free or at low cost and in other places, will lend homeowners money at no interest to pay the contractor of their choice for the necessary work In addition there are tax incentives to promote efficient energy use

These programs are not restricted to low-income people, slum areas or urban neighborhoods Owners of single or multi-family dwellings are eligible While the grants do not have to be repaid, most of the loans offer low or no-interest, long terms and low payments

Some of the other home improvements covered under these programs are: attic and wall insulation, new windows, outerwall siding, security doors, and locks, window guards, sidewalks and masonry work, bathrooms and kitchens, electrical and plumbing, new roofs, gutters, and downspouts.

The Consumer Education Research Center, a national nonprofit consumer group formed in 1969, has just published the 208 large-page edition of Consumers Guide to Home Repair Grants and Subsidized Loans ($16.95 plus $3 postage and handling) from CERC GRANTS, 1980 Springfield Ave , Maplewood, NJ 07040 or (1-800) 872-0121 It lists over 7,000 sources of loan and grant programs offered by Federal, state and local government, utility companies and others

Typical programs offered and how to qualify information are included Form letters for inquiries to these loan and grant sources are included as are detailed instructions on determining your debt-to-income ration for eligibility.

Robert L. Berko, executive director of CERC, tells us, "Some programs have no income ceiling and others allow income of as much as $50,000 per year or more. There are even programs for which tenants are eligible and many allow loans to poor credit risks. In many areas, people with disabilities can receive grants to pay for needed repairs such as access ramps and widening of doorways."

Since it is important that the work be done properly, the book includes a section describing the rough costs of the many jobs as well as advice on picking a contractor, negotiating a contract, and insuring the work is done properly.

Jobless rate puts state second in U.S.

Michigan's annual unemployment rate of 5.4 percent for 1995 gave the state the lowest annual rate since 1969. It was the fourth straight year that the state's annual rate has declined. Also, it marked the second consecutive year that Michigan's annual rate fell below the U.S average. The U.S. averaged 5 6 percent for 1995.

For the year, Michigan's jobless rate was at or below the national rate for nine months. The seasonally adjusted employment figures released by the federal government also reflected the following:

- Strong employment gains, , were seen in manufacturing, especially among auto producers.
- For the year, the number of unemployed dropped to an average of 245,000 This is a decrease of 27,000 from the 1994 average This is Michigan's lowest annual level since 1973
- Among the 11 largest states, Michigan had the fourth lowest jobless rate in December California had the highest unemployment rate in December at 7.7 percent

How to train for your first triathlon

By Alison Ashton
Copley News Service

When the first triathlon was staged in San Diego in 1974, it was the domain of gonzo endurance athletes who wanted to test their limits. Twenty years later, the number of people competing in swimming-cycling-running events has swelled to 300,000 in North America (an estimated 1 million worldwide).

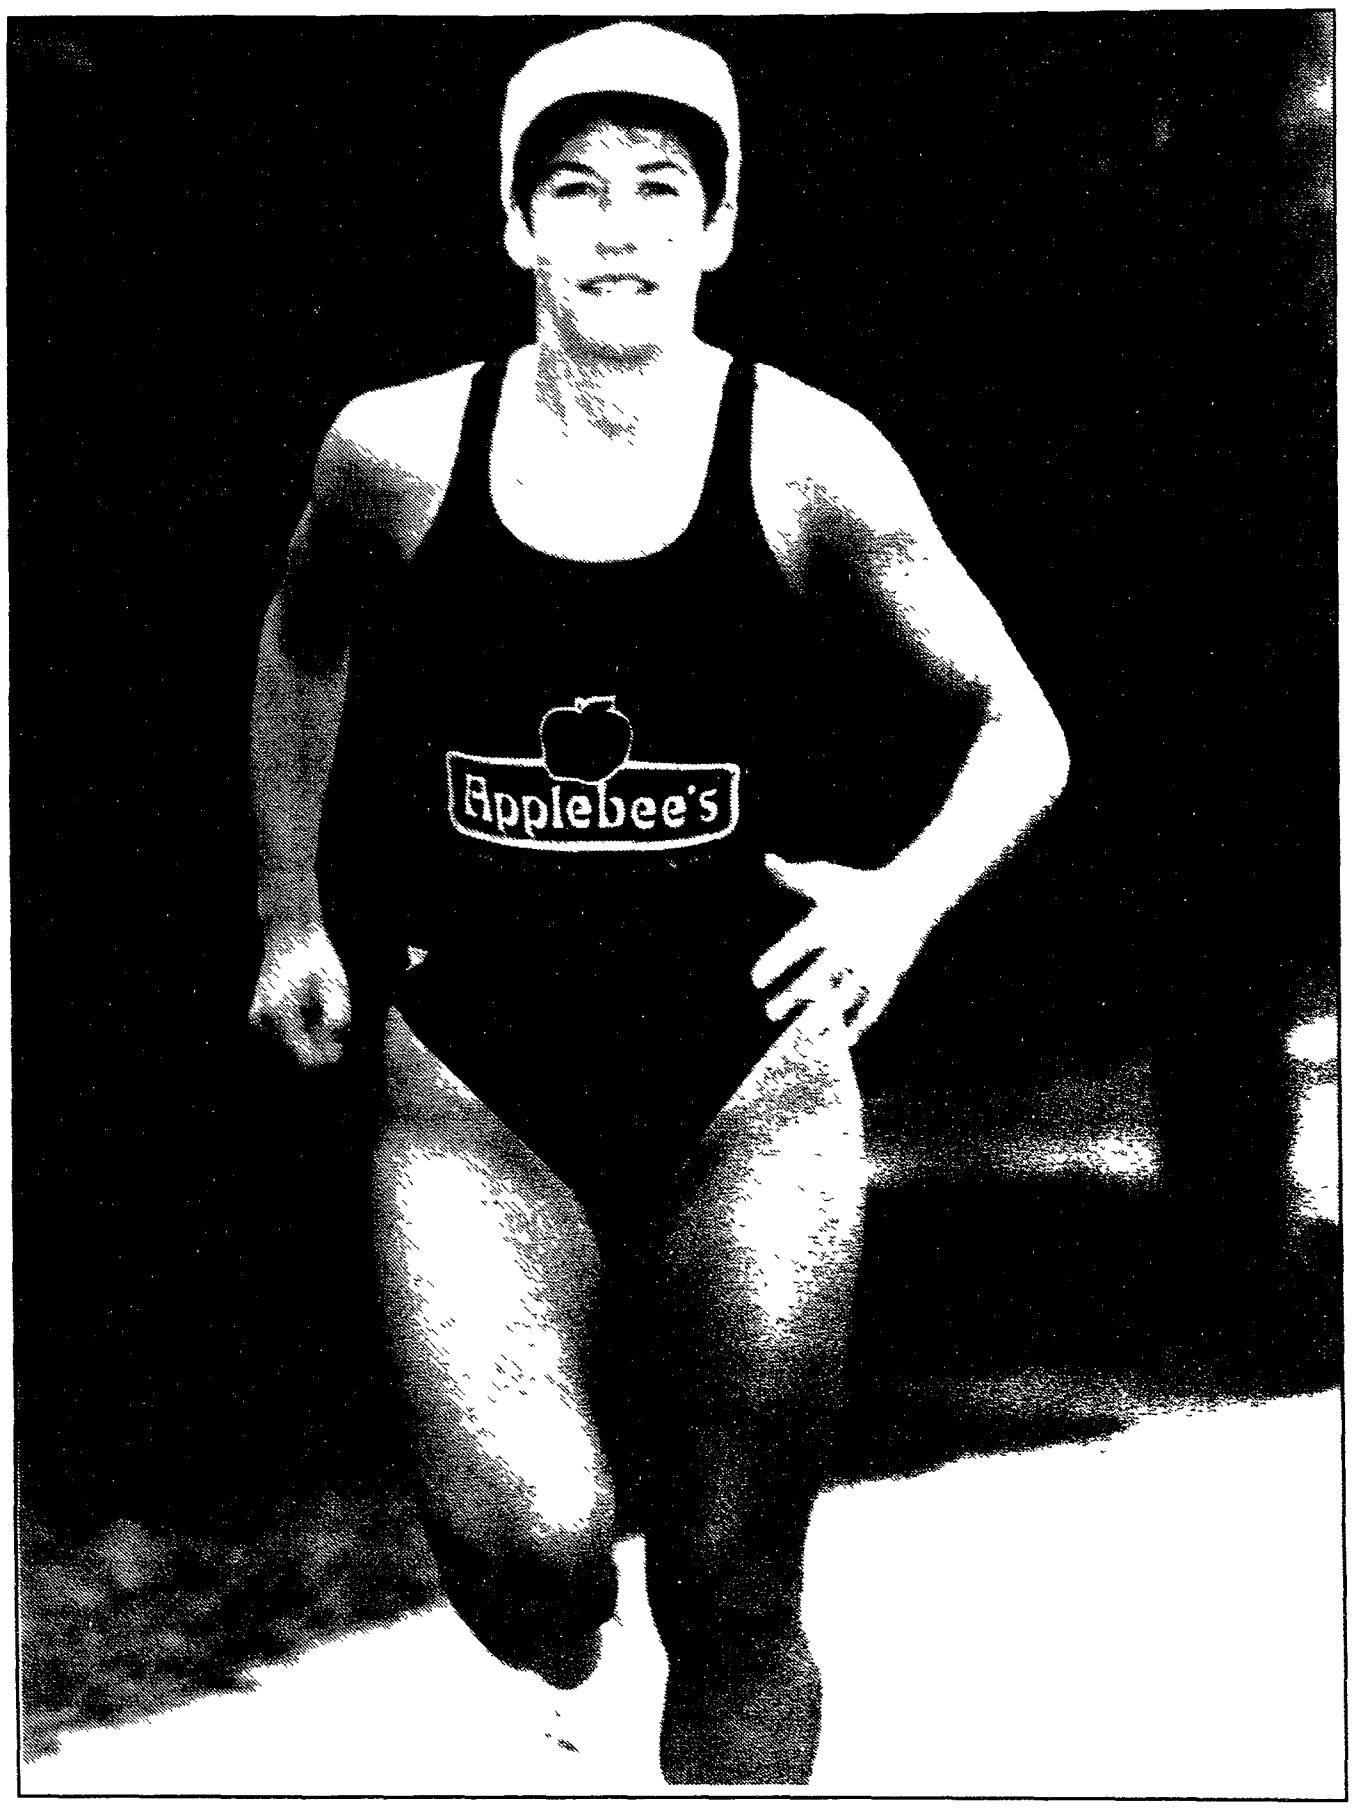

The top champs, including six-time Ironman winner Dave Scott (he placed second in 1994 at age 40) and seven-time Ironman winner Paula Newby-Fraser (she has won the prestigious race more times than anyone, male or female), are well-known professional athletes with high-profile endorsement contracts.

But not everyone who jumps into the water (then on a bike, then runs) is a pro. Most are serious recreational athletes looking for a new challenge. And they find it.

Still, the thought of becoming proficient at three sports can be intimidating. You may be running 30 miles a week, but how good are you at swimming and cycling? Do you even have time for all this activity?

"If you don't have a goal of winning, I think the goal is to fit it into your lifestyle," says Rachel Blythe-Kodanaz, 35, a motivational speaker for Applebee's International Inc., who qualified for and completed the 1995 Ironman World Championship race in Hawaii.

Blythe-Kodanaz's story is somewhat unique in the annals of the sport. Following the sudden death of her first husband, Rod, three years ago, she pulled herself out of a deep depression by adopting his dream of competing in the Ironman as her goal. But she had to fit her training in around a full-time job and raising her then-2-year-old daughter.

Rachel Blythe-Kodanaz was a single mother working full time when she trained for the Ironman triathlon. She says that preparing for the three-sport event is a matter of finding time.

While her goal was to make it to the starting line of the Ironman uninjured and finish the grueling race on her feet (she did both), she says, "One of my goals was not to be away from my daughter."

As a single parent pursuing a time-consuming dream, Blythe-Kodanaz learned a thing or two about being flexible. In winter, she would rise at 5:30 a.m. to run on a treadmill before her toddler awoke (a baby monitor let her know if the child woke early). On alternate days, she rode her bike, which was mounted on a turbo-trainer. Sometimes mother and daughter rode side-by-side while watching "Snow White" on video. When the weather was fair, she ran her daughter to preschool in a baby jogger.

On weekends, Blythe-Kodanaz traded baby-sitting time with other parents in order to fit in longer workout sessions. And she swam at the local pool while her daughter took swimming lessons or played with friends in the gym's day-care facility.

As a result, neither mother nor daughter felt shortchanged when it came to family time.

You may not be planning to compete at the Ironman distance — a 2.4-mile swim, 112-mile bike ride and 26.2-mile (marathon) run for which athletes must qualify — but participating in triathlons still takes planning and training. Here are some tips for first-timers:

Make sure you have time. Training for three sports does take time. It's best to train when you're not facing monster deadlines at work or time-consuming family commitments. That way, training will be a pleasure, not just another source of stress.

Get support. Training will be easier if you have the support of your spouse and other family members. A spouse who doesn't understand your commitment to training might resent the time it takes.

Blythe-Kodanaz started dating her second husband, Taner, while training for the Ironman. She told him she didn't have time to date because she was training so hard. Though he'd never owned a bike, he took up cycling to spend time with her and lost 40 pounds in the process.

Be flexible. Like Blythe-Kodanaz, you may have to get up early in the morning to fit in a workout (which also means going to bed early at night). Other athletes train at lunchtime. Also look for ways to make it convenient: Blythe-Kodanaz invested in a treadmill so she could run at home. You don't want to go far out of your way to bike, swim or run.

Have a plan. You don't have to run, bike and swim every day. Develop a training schedule that allows you to do different workouts, such as running and cycling on alternate mornings and swimming three times a week at lunchtime. Plan to do longer workouts on the weekend that combine at least two of the three sports so you can learn how it feels to move from one sport to the next.

Train with a group. This makes training fun and challenging. Some cities have triathlon clubs, which can attract very competitive members. Also find out what local masters swim classes (to improve your stroke), cycling groups (try the American Youth Hostel) and running clubs have to offer. You'll find tips, training partners and structured workouts. You might even find a club coach who can develop a training schedule for you.

Choose a reasonable first race. Blythe-Kodanaz recommends choosing a short course for your first race. Not only is it easier physically, but it's less intimidating psychologically. Short-course triathlons, ideal for beginners, have a quarter-mile swim, 12-mile cycle and 3.1-mile run. The Olympic distance is a 1.5-kilometer swim (about a mile), 40-kilometer bike ride (about 25 miles) and 10-kilometer (6.2-mile) run. There also are half-Ironman races as well as the granddaddy of them all, the Ironman.

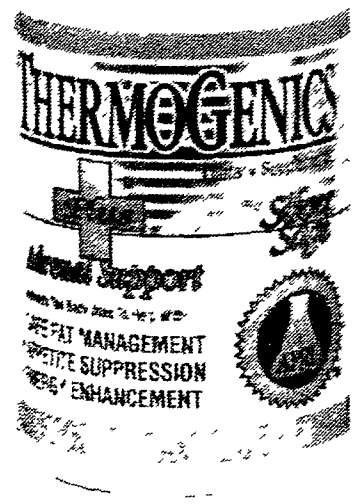

Have fun. Training should be challenging, but not a grind. Similarly, competing should be enjoyable. Races usually are held in very scenic locations (they have to be near a lake or ocean for the swim portion). And many athletes like the variety the triathlons offer — when they're ready to get out of the water, it's time to cycle; when they tire of the bike, it's time to run.

It's up to patients to schedule regular exams and share information about their health with their doctor.

Take time for a physical exam

By Judith Miller
Copley News Service

A physical examination, including the appropriate screening tests, can detect some illnesses, including colon cancer, diabetes and hypertension, before they become life-threatening.

But a physical exam is only as good as the doctor who performs it, and some tests will be ordered only if he or she is aware of a patient's risk factors.

And if you think your physician will remember everything about you, think again. People are realizing that they have to check up on on their checkups.

"Medicine changes. It's difficult for physicians to stay up to date on everything, much less the laypublic," says Dr Ted Ayliffe, director of the Springfield Residency Program, Department of Family & Community Medicine, Southern Illinois University School of Medicine.

There's nothing "routine" about a routine physical examination, Ayliffe says.

"It depends on age and sex, personal and family history. It's complicated as to who needs what. That's why the patient needs to be informed."

People need to know what illnesses and/or medical conditions have affected their families of origin, Ayliffe says. That information should be shared with the physician — even if the doctor fails to ask.

Patients in for a checkup need to report any sudden or gradual changes in their health, along with an update on medications they are taking. If no one asks, volunteer the information, Ayliffe says. The more doctors know, the better they can treat you.

Unfortunately, Ayliffe says, some people still expect to report their ills to the doctor and then be "cured." Those people apparently feel once they've told the doctor, it's the doctor's problem, Ayliffe said.

That attitude may, in part, be the fault of the medical profession itself, he said. For years, doctors took over the care of patients who felt little or no responsibility for their own health.

But in these days of probable health care reform, the focus is on practicing preventive health care and lowering overall medical costs, doctors are encouraging patients to be more aware of their own health.

How difficult is it for doctors to steer people toward health? Who does need what and how often?

The U.S. Preventive Services Task Force has published a book of recommendations.

In general, the task force recommends that adults age 19 to 64 undergo an examination every one to three years, depending on their risk of disease. Anyone over age 65 should have a checkup once a year.

Before you make an appointment for a physical, you should understand something.

"There's no guarantee that the physician is going to find an illness or condition," Ayliffe said. "Medicine is very humbling."

For instance, there is no test to detect lung cancer; an EKG won't predict a heart attack, he said.

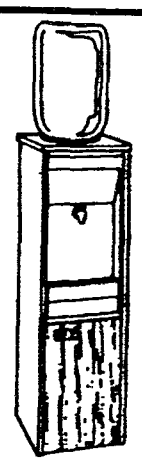

Yet a physician can be swayed by a patient's expectations.

"Some patients have the expectation of (being given) a certain test, even though it's not cost-effective and we know that," Ayliffe said.

But to not order the expected test is to "set yourself up to be sued," he adds

"People started to find out more (about health and medicine) and wanted more input (into their own care)," Ayliffe says

New workout wear goes the distance

By Elizabeth Scheibner
Copley News Service

Does wearing the right exercise clothes make you a better athlete? If you ask the experts, they'll tell you yes.

Studies have shown that wearing the right clothes when exercising can actually improve your performance and prevent injury. This doesn't mean that you have to go out and spend a fortune on the latest exercise garb, but it does mean you should take a look at the clothes you do have to see if they are adequately suited to your particular sport or activity.

Perhaps the most important item you can own is a good pair of athletic shoes. If you've visited a sporting goods store lately, you know there are shoes for virtually every sport imaginable, from aerobics to volleyball — and everything in between.

Although cross-training shoes are still a popular choice for people who combine running, weight training and court-related activities, most athletic shoes today are sport-specific.

A shoe designed for aerobics, for example, will have more heel and forefront cushioning than one designed for walking.

When choosing athletic shoes, it's important to consider how you're going to use them, how often you're going to wear them, and on what type of surface they'll be worn (treadmill, track, gym, asphalt, etc.).

One of the best ways to determine proper fit is by bringing in an old pair of shoes with you when you shop and having an experienced salesperson evaluate wear patterns. In many cases, an insert may be recommended to compensate for a high arch, hammertoes or other foot abnormalities.

"Feet are the foundation for the entire body," says Tom Brunick, footwear editor for Runner's World and Walking magazines. "It amazes me how people get so fanatical about their workouts and their diets but then sabotage their own efforts by not having the proper athletic shoes."

When buying athletic shoes, a good rule of thumb is to select a shoe that is a thumbnail's width longer than your longest toe so that you can wiggle your toes comfortably.

The shoes should also fit snugly in the heel, but should not be so tight that they chafe. In most cases you'll end up buying athletic shoes that are a half-size larger than your dress shoes.

When trying on shoes, make sure you wear the socks you would normally wear to work out in and shop at the end of the day when your feet are most swollen. Test the shoes for comfort and support by moving your feet the way you would when you wear them.

For example, if you plan to use the shoes for running, jog around the store. If you plan to use them for tennis, lunge from side to side the way you would on the court.

And, finally, always try on several different pairs before making your final decision.

Today's workout wear joins sporty fashion with confortable cuts and high-tech fabrics.

CLOTHES THAT MAKE THE GRADE

When it comes to exercise apparel, there is really no right or wrong way to dress, although there are certain guidelines you may want to follow to ensure that you are performing at your best.

Although cotton has always been touted for its comfort, softness and durability, it is not necessarily the best fabric for exercising. Synthetic materials such as nylon, Lycra and polyester are better choices since they are lightweight and keep perspiration away from the skin.

For activities that involve constant movement, such as aerobics, running and skiing, experts suggest clothing that fits close to the body and doesn't interfere with your range of motion. Other sports such as basketball, tennis and hiking are better suited for loose-fitting clothes.

While there are some people who spend extravagant amounts of money on trendy exercise wear, it is not necessary to go into debt in order to stay in shape. A good place to find reasonably priced fitness wear is outlet stores, specialty catalogs and large sporting goods stores.

In many cases, you can find name-brand shoes and apparel at 30 percent to 50 percent off department store prices. Make sure you examine the items carefully, however, before buying. Some of the items may be irregular or have slight defects.

THE BIG CHILL

Sticking to an exercise regime is difficult enough under perfect conditions, but when the weather turns cold, even the most dedicated athlete may think twice about continuing to work out.

Exercising during the winter months requires more than donning an extra sweat shirt or jacket. The key, experts says, is to layer, using clothing made of synthetic fibers such as Sanchilla and Polartec, which not only provide good insulation but keep moisture away from the skin. Stay away from cotton and silk, which tend to get soaked quickly and retain moisture.

Start with long underwear made of polypropylene or similar lightweight polyester and add a synthetic fleece garment followed by a breathable water- and wind-resistant Windbreaker or rain jacket. To keep your toes and fingers warm, don a pair of mittens and slip on a pair of polypropylene socks.

And, finally, don't forget about a hat, cap or headband to keep your head and ears warm. In extreme climates, a face mask may even be advisable.

Because there is less daylight during the winter, many people find they have to exercise in the dark. If you are one of these people, make sure you wear reflective clothing that makes you visible to oncoming cars. Most of the nylon jackets and pants on the market today now come with some sort of reflective trim.

To keep your shoes in good condition during the wet winter months, treat them with a waterproofing product that protects the upper material against salt, snow and water without blocking breathability. Always air out your shoes at room temperature between wearings and never put them under a heater as this may cause shrinkage and premature aging of the material.

"SOFT TOUCH" CHIROPRACTIC

Kathy Duncan had a satisfying full time career as a registered nurse in critical care when she decided to pursue a degree as a Doctor of Chiropractic. The career move came when Dr. Duncan found relief from her migraine headaches after being treated by a Doctor of Chiropractic. In chiropractic treatment, Dr. Duncan found her problem resolved when other methods of treatment failed.

This prompted Dr. Duncan to become a chiropractor. She graduated from Life Chiropractic College in 1986, where she was president of her class. In 1990, Dr. Duncan opened Soft Touch Chiropractic in Novi.

Dr. Duncan practices a soft, gentle, non-invasive pressure point treatment for all types of pain or discomfort in the back, neck, head or legs. With the spine as the focal point, muscles are relaxed by using pressure on points along the muscles in conjunction with the spine. With the muscles relaxed, the spine can re-adjust itself naturally.

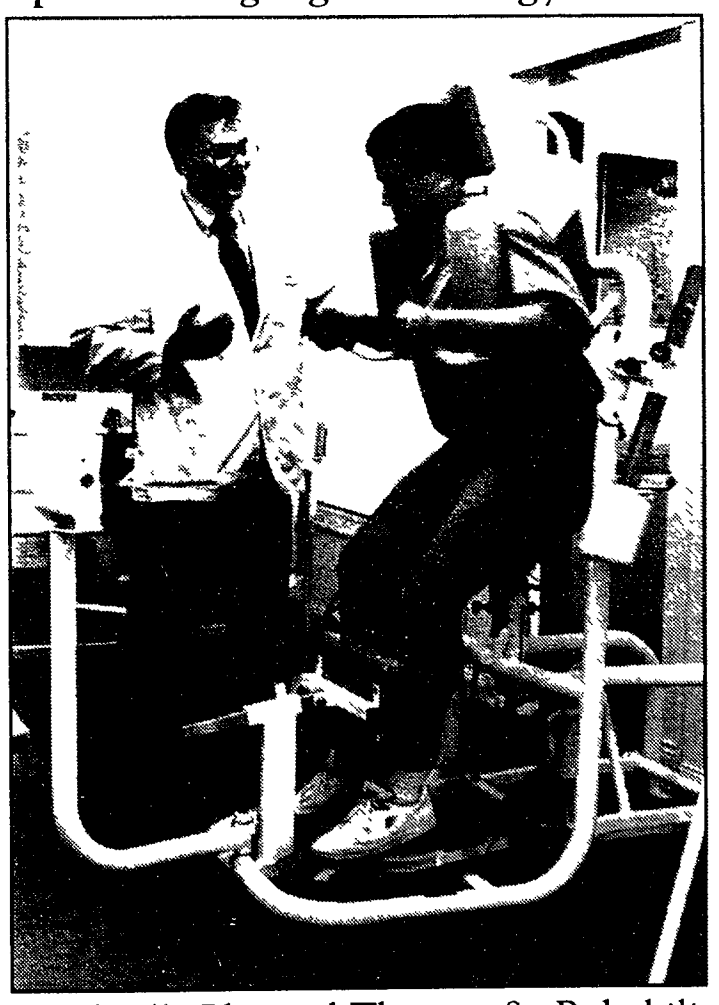

Tight muscles caused by stress, tension, strains or trauma can pull the spinal column out of alignment. This can produce many types of pain or discomfort in the body.

Dr. Kathy Duncan

Located at 23895 Novi Road, Suite 400 in Novi, Soft Touch Chiropractic is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday 9:00 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. until 6:00 p.m. Saturday hours are by appointment only. The phone number is (810) 348-2000.

If you want to know what kind of shape your kids will be in as adults, take a look in the mirror. Better yet, step on the scale. Raising children to eat well and exercise regularly depends a lot on you. Studies have shown that children with parents who demonstrate healthy eating habits and active lifestyles are much more likely to be healthy and fit themselves. For today's time-crunched families, that is getting harder to do. Take nutrition, for example.

According to a recent McCall's survey, 33 percent of the magazine's readers said that cooking well-balanced, nutritious meals took too much time to do every day. Increasingly, more parents are turning to eating out as a solution. Today, at least 40 cents of every food dollar is spent on snacks and meals eaten away from home, compared to 29 cents per dollar a little more than 20 years ago, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. That wouldn't be so bad, except that 80 percent of all restaurant meals eaten by children consists of fast foods larded with fat and calories.

But while healthy eating is important, what today's parents really need to take stock of is how — or if — their children are using up as much food energy as they take in, medical experts say. A generation ago most schools had physical education programs and children spent most of their time after school running around the neighborhood, not watching television or playing computer games at home.

Today, only one state — Illinois — requires schools K-12 to offer physical education, and tight budgets have curtailed many gym programs, particularly elementary school programs, in most states. Only 36 percent of U.S. kids receive daily physical education, according to a recent issue of the C. Everett Koop Foundation's bimonthly Health Letter.

"Physical education is often the first thing that goes when the budget pressures are on," Judy Young, executive director of the National Association for Sports and Physical Education, says in one issue.

Meanwhile, the average child cozies up to the TV between 19 and 25 hours per week, often waiting for Mom, Dad, or both, to get home from work. By the time parents walk in the door, there's just enough time to make dinner (or heat up the take-out) and help with homework. So much for exercise.

The consequences for children's health is frightening. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, at least 25 percent of U.S. children are more than 20 percent over their desired weight, up from 15 percent 20 years ago.

About half the people under age 18 today will die of coronary artery disease or stroke, says Woman's Day columnist Dr. Loraine Stern, citing recent Bogalusa, La., research that followed more than 12,000 people for 20 years to track heart disease.

Of children ages 10 to 13 who are overweight, 70 percent will grow into overweight adults. Overweight children also are at higher risk for diabetes and other weight-related health problems, not to mention self-esteem issues.

Team sports like soccer are one way to encourge kids to stay active.

While genetics have been found to be the root of most chronic obesity, a growing number of experts argue that the decline in physical activity for both adults and children is a larger problem.

Since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution, the goal of human progress has been to make it possible to go through the day without expending any extra energy, says San Diego State University healthy psychology Professor James Stallis, designer of Project SPARK, a 2-year-old nonprofit program now in 150 schools in seven states, which encourages more participation (by schools and students) in physical education.

"To get food now we go to the store or we can order in pizza or order in our groceries," Stallis recently told a university audience in Australia, where he is on sabbatical. "The connection between energy intake and energy expenditure has been completely severed. There are no longer any checks and balances and we wonder why people are becoming obese."

Stallis and colleague Paul Rosengard, director of educational services for Project SPARK (which stands for Sports, Play and Active Recreation for Kids), believe that getting kids engaged in physical activity early in life is the key to reversing this trend. And that means making it fun, one of the goals of the SPARK program.

Most parents today grew up with demanding physical education programs that emphasized competition, Rosengard says.

If you weren't one of the fit elite, you were left out. This may be one reason parents have not complained too loudly as physical education has been phased out by many schools, he says. But children need a minimum of 35 to 50 minutes of vigorous organized activity at least three times a week and that doesn't mean recess or free play, Rosengard says.

According to the National Institutes of Health's Healthline newsletter, exercise during childhood or adolescence has a number of important benefits: It lowers blood pressure in children with high blood pressure, it increases beneficial blood cholesterol, it increases bone density (which lowers the risk for bone fractures) and lowers stress and anxiety.

It also helps children with important problem-solving and social skills, Rosengard adds. In any case, parents need to get more involved in children's fitness.

Stallis advises:

Make sure your child has plenty of access to a safe place for physical activities, such as a playground, a park, a nearby gym or safe sidewalks. If there are none in close proximity, look to institutions like the YMCA for classes and activities.

Get physical with your child; that is, do household chores such as raking leaves or gardening together. Bike, hike, play Frisbee or dance together.

Make sure you're getting exercise yourself. While researchers disagree that exercising regularly can pose an effective role model for kids, it certainly can't hurt, as long as it doesn't cut into time you need to spend with your children.

Actively support your child's need to exercise by following through on planned activities and making sure their schools offer adequate physical education.

Here are some questions to ask.

Is there a credential physical education specialist on staff? If not, have teachers been adequately trained (the SPARK program, for example, trains elementary school teachers and gives them a specific curriculum)? What is the required amount of physical education your child is supposed to receive; is he or she getting it?

In the end, your interest in your child's physical well-being will be anything but an empty exercise.

Healthy eating habits should start young

By Liz Poppens
Copley News Service

With a little planning, teaching your children good eating habits can actually be fun. Just don't tell them it's good for them.

In the nutrition department, Ellyn Satter, a Madison, Wis., dietitian, family therapist and author of "How to Get Your Kid to Eat ... But Not Too Much" (Bull Publishing), counsels parents to avoid overcontrolling children when it comes to guiding them toward more nutritious foods. Offer them a good variety and proportion of healthy foods, but don't nag. Especially for overweight kids, it's important to focus on preventing further weight gain rather than weight loss.

Don't sabotage your plans either by having foods on hand that don't fit the program. Make sure your kitchen is stocked with lots of whole-grain breads and cereals, a plentiful bowl of fruit, plenty of fresh or frozen vegetables, low-fat milk, cheeses and yogurt, dried beans and lean meats, fish and poultry. These are good building blocks for any healthy diet, advises the American Dietetic Association.

When it comes to snacks, provide carrots, celery, raisins, fruit, pretzels, pickles, reduced-fat cookies, anything without a lot of fat. Pick up an air popper to make no-fat popcorn; toss with a little food spray and spices for flavor. Try baked tortilla chips or pita triangles with salsa or a cottage cheese-based dip instead of cheesy nachos.

Just as it does for adults, good nutrition for kids all boils down to balancing fat and calories. Don't panic if everyone wants pizza for dinner; just make sure the rest of the day hasn't been filled with doughnuts, french fries and other high-fat foods.

Finally, take the time to plan menus and mealtimes in advance. Make a weekend day a shopping/cooking day that involves the whole family. Make a pot of vegetarian chili or a kettle of soup that can keep in the refrigerator (or be frozen) for use later in the week. Cut up and store carrots and celery in easy eyesight of refrigerator foragers. Let your kids look through low-fat recipes and choose one to try that week.

If you're including a stir-fry meal in the week's menu, cut up vegetables and meat in advance and refrigerate.

Post your menu on the refrigerator and let the kids check off the list as it goes. Let your kids rate the new recipes, too. Thumbs up, give it a star on the menu; thumbs down, give it a ceremonial burial in the trash bin.

Do yourself a favor and take time for a physical exam

He and many other doctors have no problem with that; in fact, they encourage it.

"It is always appropriate to ask a physician a question," Ayliffe said. "But at some point, the patient has to trust in the physician's knowledge and training. At some point, you say, 'I trust you or I don't.'"

For years, the medical profession let the laypublic believe it had all the answers, Ayliffe said. No more. The public needs to understand what medicine can and can't do, should and shouldn't do.

What you can do to check up on your checkups is this:

Keep a chart of what screening and/or diagnostic tests you are due to have, based on your age and gender.

Keep careful written records of the screening and/or diagnostic tests you have had performed, when they were done and the results. A National Cancer Institute study showed many people overestimated the number of screening tests they have had.

Record your family's medical history as well as your own surgeries, illness or injuries.

Ask your doctor what you can do to prevent disease; don't assume he or she will take the initiative. A survey of 322 adults in a small Southern town found that although many people wanted recommendations on preventive care, their doctors didn't automatically dispense them.

Here are the recommendations for adult physical examinations issued by the The U.S. Preventive Services Task Force.

FOR EVERYONE

Check blood pressure, measure height and weight and listen to heart for signs of a murmur.

Manual exam of the abdomen for signs of an enlarged liver or spleen; the neck for thyroid nodules; the lymph nodes in the neck, underarms and groin, as well as the breasts (men and women), mouth and skin for early signs of cancer.

Several laboratory tests are recommended for all adults, including a chemical profile of blood chemistries, an automated analysis of up to 22 blood chemistries.

The test can detect diabetes, gout, thyroid problems, impaired liver or kidney function and risk factors for coronary artery heart disease such as high cholesterol.

A complete blood count and blood smear to detect anemia, bleeding disorders and white blood cell disorders such as leukemia.

A urinalysis to detect diabetes, infections and urinary-tract disorders.

(Although not on the task force list, many physicians routinely include taking the patient's temperature, testing reflexes, examining ear canals and nasal cavities, and looking at fingernail color and condition.)

AGE-SPECIFIC RECOMMENDATIONS

Men and women age 40 and over should undergo a digital rectal exam for detection of colorectal cancer.

An occult-blood stool test, which would indicate an intestinal polyp or cancer, also is in order for 40 and over.

Every three to five years, people age 50 and over should undergo a flexible sigmoidoscopy to detect colorectal cancer.

People in their mid-30s may undergo a baseline electrocardiogram (EKG) for possible future comparison. The task force recommends future EKGs for people at risk for coronary disease at intervals recommended by a physician.

Men and women age 45 and over should be tested for glaucoma.

"5 TIPS TO REDUCE BODY FAT"
by Karen Carroll, C.N.C.

1. TAKE CITRIMAX. Citrimax, also known as hydroxycitrate keeps your body from storing fats when taken before a meal. Hydroxcitrate is an extract from a fruit and is extremely safe for use.
2. TAKE CHROMIUM PICOLINATE. Chromium Picolinate is a mineral which helps to balance blood sugar levels, reduce sugar cravings and reduces fat storage. Chromium is extremely important for energy output.
3. TRY THERMOGENICS. Thermogenics increases the metabolic rate and suppresses the appetite, increases the body's product of heat, therefore working as a fat burner.
4. TAKE L-CARNITINE. L-Carnitine shuttles fat to where it is burned for energy. L-Carnitine also reduces fatigue and increases levels of HDL (the good cholesterol).
5. TAKE COENZYMEQ$_{10}$ (CO-Q10). CO-Q$_{10}$ increases energy production at cellular levels and energy production is necessary for burning excess fats.

Work out indoors when weather is foul

By Lee Littlewood
Copley News Service

Exercise has come a long way since Jane Fonda and Richard Simmons first hit the scene. And although they're still around and looking great (thanks to working out, no doubt), ways of becoming fit have changed dramatically. So no matter what your age or body type, lace up those Nikes, class. It's time to sweat through the options and find workout plans to fit everyone.

Ideally, we'd all like to exercise outdoors. Nothing beats breathing fresh air while hiking a mountain trail or jogging along the beach. For most of the country much of the year, however, outdoor activities turn inward. No problem. The market is saturated with exercise equipment, health clubs and home videos galore to help burn fat and tone muscles even when it's miserable outside.

Gyms these days are as high-tech as Silicon Valley. Not content with simple stationary bicycles and fat-rolling machines, today's health clubs boast the latest in advanced exercise hardware.

Exercycles have turned into specially designed Spinner bikes equipped with adjustable resistance levers, detachable seats and receptacles for bottles of designer water. There are even "spinning" classes at some gyms complete with instructors with names like "The Spin Doctor," who bark orders and pump disco tunes to pedal by.

For those who want to take it a tad bit easier, recumbent bikes provide ergonomic two-piece seats and comfort. Most mod are VR bikes (for virtual reality) and the Life Fitness Exertainment System.

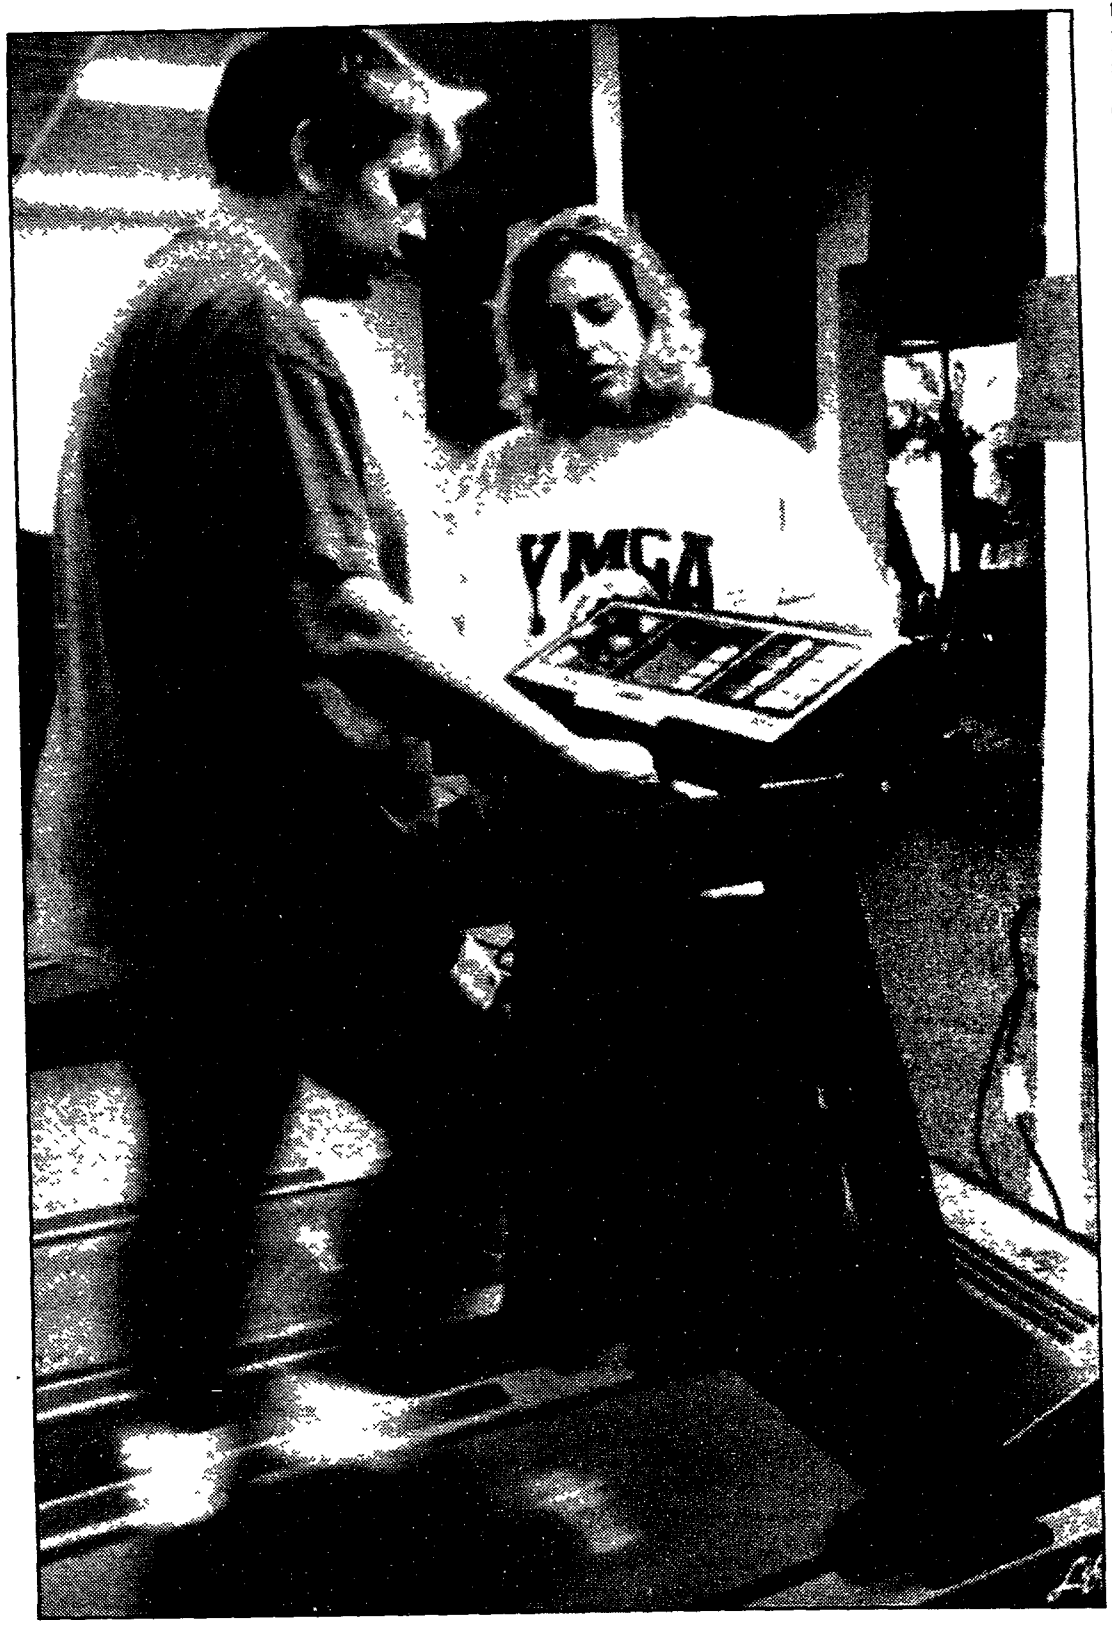

With the new virtual-reality bikes, a 20-inch monitor in front of the rider displays unfolding terrain, soft breezes and sound-appropriate speakers. Pedal tension even changes as the rider crosses a stream and the picturesque frame tilts when he makes a sharp turn. The Exertainment System couples a state-of-the-art Lifecycle with Super Nintendo to make working out a blast for everyone above age 8.

Treadmill fans walk and run much more smoothly these days on new low-impact versions that absorb shock away from knees and feet, and those with features like Life Fitness' Heart Rate Zone Training help users get the right personalized workout every time.

Stair-steppers of all types, such as the Versa Climber, are out in abundance, allowing exercisers to pre-program workouts of all ilks and all step lengths.

And Reebok's brand-new Sky Walker looks like something George Jetson would work out on. This breakthrough cross-training machine lets users stride away with a gliding motion that's somewhere between walking and cross-country skiing. There's no pounding on the knees and ankles, both the upper and lower body are used and the experience (called "vertical swimming" by some) is weightless and full of resistance.

Want to climb a rock indoors? There are 275 rock-climbing gyms in the United States, and many regular gyms have their own walls to conquer. Also new are sports simulation centers where participants can golf, ski and sailboard while feeling authentically in the midst of their proper terrain.

If high-tech cardiovascular equipment isn't enough to keep members engaged, some gyms have mounted big screen TVs to entertain them.

The Nautilus Skate Machine lets users move side-to-side on a nonimpact machine while, through computer graphics, cruising through popular in-line skating locales.

And aerobics classes have changed tremendously. Step classes with air step benches are the current rage. So are cardio hip-hop and funk dance classes, sometimes called "aerobics with an attitude" for those who can't face another rep on the butt-blaster.

Body sculpting classes, cross-training workouts, aerobics boxing and kickboxing are also high-energy, high-fun ways to sweat out the aggression and fat at the same time.

Even tango and ballroom dancing classes are among the more social ways to cope a cardiovascular workout.

Overwhelmed? Join the club. But if you don't want to, don't panic. If the nearest gym is 20 miles away or you don't have the driving time, membership fees and ubiquitous fashionable workout gear at your fingertips, you can get fit at home — it has never been easier.

Economical versions of stair-climbers, Lifecycles, strength-trainers, cross-country skiers, rowers and treadmills (and even the more high-tech, expensive ones) are available for home use, adding a whole new dimension to the fitness boom.

Other new machines are the Fast Track, advertised on television by Cathy Rigby, and the Weslo CardioGlide Plus, both providing excellent total body workouts for reasonable prices.

With a little ingenuity and effort, however, you won't need to delve into your savings to work out when it's 20 degrees below zero. It's easy as fat-free pie to turn your home into a gym with or without the zillions of exercise videos on the shelves.

Basic aerobics videos from celebs such as Kathy Ireland, Elle Macpherson, fitness specialist Kathy Smith, Buns of Steel queen Tamilee Webb and diva of body-shaping Karen Voight beg viewers to sweat in front of the VCR.

Voight's "Strong and Smooth Moves" is currently at the top of Billboard's fitness video charts. (She also designed and co-starred in Macpherson's release. It does bring credibility to a workout if a trained fitness expert lends a hand on a celebrity video.)

For quirkier, funkier workouts with a sense of humor and dance, "Paula Abdul's Get Up and Dance" combines her original dancercise program with Abdul heart-pumping hits.

"Brenda Dyksgaard's Disco Workout" brings back shiny tights and leg-warmers for a '70s-style party set while MTV's "The Grind Workout" provides plenty of mod moves with today's hits and young supple bods to shimmy with. Martial arts fans, too, can knock themselves out with "Cardio Kickboxing."

Even without videos, simple home gym transformation is easy with household items used every day.

Before the Stairmaster, remember there were stairs — speed up and down a flight enough times and you'll know you're working out. Jump rope or dance to your favorite tunes.

Make your own dumbbells by filling water bottles with sand or water, or use soup cans to lift reps and tone muscles. Grab a broom and rest it on the top of your shoulders for waist-whittling. Lower-body squats and lunges can be done anywhere, as can push-ups, sit-ups and stretches. And for proper instruction, you may want to purchase a book on dance steps or fitness routines.

"Definition" by Joyce L. Vedral, Ph.D. (Warner Books), promises shape without bulk in 15 minutes a day, especially for women on the go. Trainer-to-the-stars Keli Roberts' "Fitness Hollywood" (The Summit Group) is a usable notebook full of strength exercises, program designs, healthful eating tips, goal-setting hints, blank fill-in charts and insights on how Cher, Susan Dey and Kirstie Alley stay in shape.

Another is "A Woman's Book of Strength" by fitness expert Karen Andes (Perigee Publishing). And guys, don't be shy, you can follow all these workouts, too, for amazing results.

Most important of all is this: Make your workout fun and varied and be prepared for setbacks. When you backslide, eat like a pig for a week or blow off a few workouts in favor of a movie and a glass of wine, don't despair.

"Everyone relapses," says Thomas McKenzie, Ph.D., professor of physical education at San Diego State University. "It's part of changing your behavior. So dust yourself off and get back on track."

Bubble never bursts for club maker

Taylor Made golf begins 1996 as the maker of the sport's hottest clubs, a title it earned more than a decade ago.

The metal woods with the catchy name, Burner Bubble, caught on like a brush fire in August, as 11 PGA Tour wins were recorded by pros using the new Burner Bubble metal woods in 1995.

Players, using the new clubs also 83 top 10 finishes, excluding the 11 wins. The closest competing manufacturer, Callaway, had 8 wins and 43 top 10 finishes.

Public demand for the clubs pushed sales to a all-time record last year when more than 500,000 bubbles were sold, the company reported.

And like the Burner metal woods, the irons are selling at a record pace.

"We are close to selling out every set we had and we aren't even in the golf season yet," said Dick Held of Birmingham's Bavarian Village. "That's really something at $849 a set."

The irons have the now famous bubble in the graphite shaft feature weight moved up higher on the long irons and lower on the short irons.

Weight was shifted from the grip end to the middle of the shaft to lower the inertia of the club. Taylor Made said this weight shift allows a player to generate faster club head speed without swinging harder.

The deep, cavity-back club heads have very low centers of gravity to promote more backspin and accuracy

Taylor Made reinforced the middle of shaft for more stability through impact, keeping the club head on the target line longer for more accuracy, the company said

Titanium is an alloy sometimes used in the construction of racing cars and the space industry because of its lightness, strength and toughness.

Because of its lightness, Taylor Made was able to couple larger titanium heads to the graphite bubble shaft which, the company says, boosts clubhead speed without the need to swing harder.

The titanium club head is 20 percent larger than other Taylor Made drivers. In comparison tests with other similar clubs it hit 20 percent more fairways than the others, the company claims.

"We believe the marriage of titanium and bubble shaft technologies has produced the most accurate, forgiving, metal woods ever brought to the market," said Mike Kelly, Taylor Made product manager.

Taylor Made staff professional, Mark O'Mera, who won nearly $1 million last year using the burner clubs, got off to a fast start this year when he won the Mercedes championship using them in January.

The line of new clubs include bubble shafted titanium metal woods and oversize irons in the Champagne series for women. The women's clubs include a 12 degree loft driver, a 15-degree lofted three wood, and a 19-degree five wood.

Also new are mallet putters of pure copper and lightweight aluminum.

For 1996, Taylor Made will offer 8.5-degree and 12-degree loft drivers to go with the 9.5 and 10.5-degree loft models previously introduced.

All four drivers can be ordered with 44-inch shafts. The men's line includes a 15-degree three wood and a 19-degree five wood.

For senior players, a super lightweight M-70 bubble shaft is available.

All this technology does not come cheap. The good news is that the company cut the cost of the titanium woods 20 percent to around $400 a club.

Thoroughbred's an exciting drive!

Rothbury, Michigan—

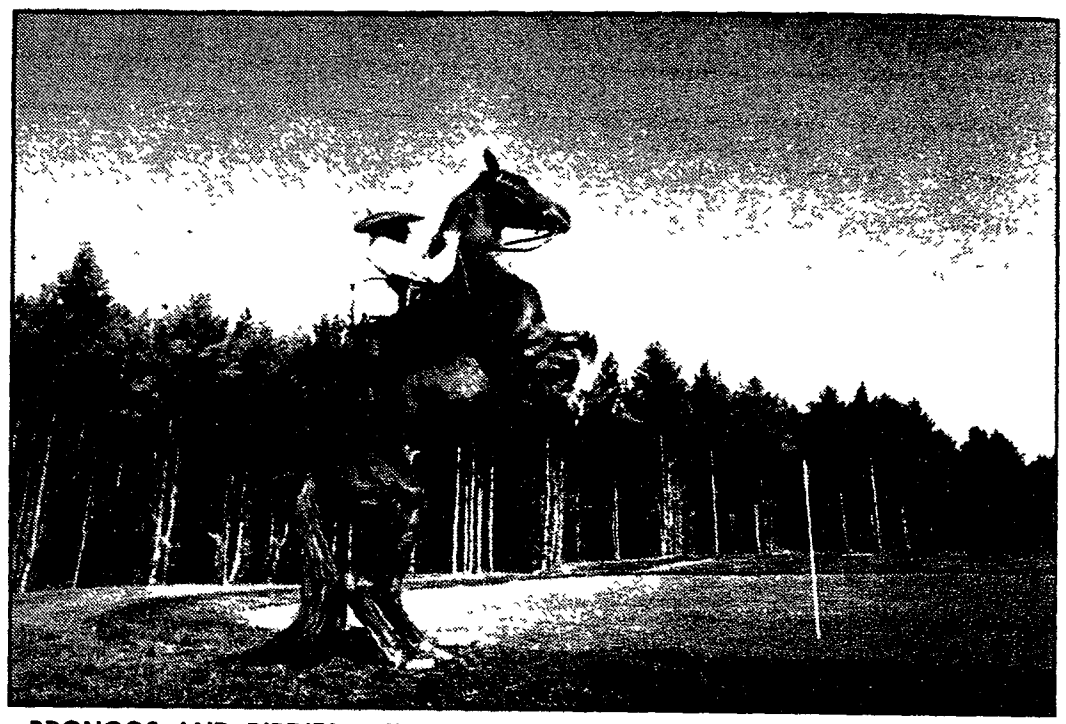

Twenty miles north of Muskegon, just off US-31, in the village of Rothbury, a real dude ranch with western wranglers and bucking broncos is home to The Thoroughbred, one of the finest golf courses in the state.

Since it opened as the Jack and Jill ranch on 1,000 acres back in 1937, the ranch now known as the Double JJ Resort is still the state's only authentic dude ranch.

In 1994, on ranch property just down the road. The Thoroughbred Golf Club, designed by nationally acclaimed architect, Arthur Hills, was named the No. 3 Best Resort Course in America by Golf Digest Magazine.

For golfers who do not care for the spartan accommodations of a dude ranch, owners Bob and Joan Lipsitz and their partner, Wally Wojak, have added the proper creature comforts in the Thoroughbred Lofts hotel and the luxury condominium units overlooking Carpenter Lake.

There are 36 rooms in the hotel and 12 units in the condominium complex. The conference center which opened last year can accommodate groups from 20 to 300 persons.

The exciting news at the golf club this season is the new two-story restaurant with a glass front overlooking Carpenter Lake.

"This is a really nice facility for the area," said Joan Lipsitz. "The local folks are thrilled about it and so are we."

Diners in the 200-seat eatery can see into the open kitchen and watch the cooks at work on the open grill. The style and menu is casual fine dining, Lipsitz said.

Work begins this year on a separate kids dude ranch where parents staying on the adult facility can leave their children.

Also in progress is a fitness center with an indoor pool, volleyball courts, a weight room and tennis courts.

Although the idea of mixing golfers and horses on the same fairways may seem quirky, The Thoroughbred is the real thing.

Although on some holes, riders on horseback have the right of way across fairways, this is one of the states more spectacular layouts. There is an amazing diversity of features found only on some top northern Michigan golf courses.

There is a little of Boyne Highlands' Heather course, the Legend at Shanty Creek-Schuss Mountain, and Black Forest in Gaylord in the mix at the Thoroughbred.

Hills let nature take the lead as he carved Thoroughbred out of severe, rolling terrain with wide fairways framed by thick hardwood forests and pines, similar to those in the north.

Several sections of marshland and cranberry bogs as well as the beautiful 40-acre Carpenter Lake come into play on half dozen holes.

This is a golf course on a grand scale with wide fairways, big undulated greens, and detailed bunkering, especially on the very strong par three holes.

The 2nd hole is the bear on the course, a photographer's dream and a player's nightmare.

From the back tees set high on a hillside, the hole is a dramatic 446-yard par 4 that curves left around a huge chunk of a hauntingly beautiful marsh.

While the marsh itself is intimidating, the major challenge is finding a flat landing area for your tee shot on the hillside that slopes down to the marsh.

If your drive is short or left, your second shot off the slope could be a real adventure with the ball way above your feet.

Even from the white men's tee and the forward tee, this hole is still scary at 398 and 349 yard respectively.

The rest of the way, the Thoroughbred is an exciting ride with a superb string of fine golf holes one after the other.

The last four holes are as good a finishing stretch as you will find anywhere.

The 16th is a 358-yard shot through thick stands of trees lining the fairway to a green surrounded by a thick stand of pine trees. Bunkers on the left and right await the errant approach shots.

Number 17, a par 3, is 184 yards, with the shortest distance to the pin carrying over water down the right side of the fairway. The water bends in towards the green before curving towards the back of the green.

This is a hole that dares the brave to go for the green and a possible eagle by cutting the corner over the lake.

In the mornings you wake early to the sound of a cowbell, as a hired hand walks the paths of the village-like ranch, ringing his bell to get you up for breakfast.

Golfers booking a golf and ranch package get three meals daily and can take part in all the activities including dancing, hay rides, pool parties, beach volleyball, tennis, archery and rifle shooting, paddleboating, and a Friday night rodeo.

At night the cowboys who work the ranch as instructors and rodeo performers strum their guitars and break into love songs.

Course, eatery receive make-overs

Union Lake, Michigan—

Brian Hendrickson, the man in charge of transforming the Union Lake Grill and Bar into a first-rate eatery, is an old hand at launching new restaurants.

He spent two years managing Ditka's in Chicago, after opening the celebrity spot for former Bear coach and football legend, Mike Ditka.

Hendrickson moved on to manage a Ruby Tuesday restaurant in Chicago before his wife, Tammy, a native of Ortonville, persuaded him to move to this area.

Last year he hooked up with developer, Sam Cattone, who had purchased the old Harley Golf Course at Union Lake. The golf course is now being refurbished. A new driving range, home, and condominium sites are part of the development.

Another part of the Harley property was the restaurant at the corner of Wise and Union Lake Roads.

"The old owners just locked the doors and walked away," Hendrickson said. "They left food and dirty dishes in the sink. It was a mess."

Cattone has since renovated and redecorated the facility. The 99-seat bar area has a sports motif with a separate dining room to the side.

"We want it to be not only a good place for Union Lake, but a good place for the whole area," Hendrickson said.

Prices range from $4.75 for a fried chicken sandwich with french fries, to $10.25 for the Voodoo Steak - a 10-ounce, grilled strip coated in hot and spicy Caribbean-style seasonings topped with sautéed peppers, onions, and mushrooms, served on a hot skillet with mojo potatoes.

The restaurant enjoys a premier site, across the road from a marina and Union Lake. Patio seating will be available when the temperatures warm up.

Grass never greener at these courses

Shelby Township, Michigan— Cherry Creek Golf Club owner, Mike Bylen, and PGA professional Glen Pulice of the Rattle Run Golf Club, have every reason to believe that 1996 will be a banner year for both clubs.

For Bylen, this season marks the grand opening of the Lanny Wadkins-designed course at 24 Mile and Van Dyke in Shelby Township.

The course opened to limited play last fall before the 18,000 square-foot club house and practice facility were completed.

Then there was the problem of disease on some greens and fairways, complicated by last spring and summer's severe weather changes that went from dry to wet to hot humid summer conditions with seven inches of rain in August.

Some of the areas top clubs experienced similar problems, especially with their greens.

"We worked diligently all summer and fall, and late in the year we had some good growth on the greens, so I expect we will be in good shape this year," Bylen said.

Wadkins, who captained the U.S. Ryder Cup team last fall, will come in for the festivities, scheduled for June 4th, Bylen said.

OLD COURSE, NEW SUPER— Kris Waagen is on board as grounds superindentent at Rattle Run Golf Club in St. Clair, Michigan. (Dave Richards-Golf Marketing Services photo.)

At Rattle Run Golf Club in St. Clair, the refurbishing of this traditional old layout that began two years ago continued last year.

Some mens and forward tee boxes were redone. One fairway was expanded to take water out of play. The 88 bunkers that got new sand the year before were re-edged, giving them much better definition.

The 19th hole, a for-fun 60-yard shot over water to an island green guarded by two bunkers, was spruced up with twin hitting mats. This is an ideal feature for closest to the pin contests and other fun events for outings.

The cart path on the front nine was rebuilt to match the new one on the back nine. The cart fleet was also upgraded.

The club house renovation was completed with a new area for the pro shop, improved merchandise and equipment, and new carpeting throughout.

Maybe the best addition at Rattle Run last year was the hiring of Kris Waagen as grounds superintendent.

Waagen is the brother-in-law of British golf star, Tony Jacklin. He brings a lot of experience with grass to Rattle Run, and the results were showing when the season ended last year.

"The course will be in the best shape in its history," Pulice said, a lofty prediction that should see Rattle Run restored to the condition that once earned a Michigan-best-public-course rating from Golf Digest magazine.

Pulice said he hopes to use his prior private club experience to attract more corporate charity golf outings. Last year Rattle Run did nearly 100 outings, Pulice said.

Pulice also promises that golfers will not be rushed as tee times are set 9 minutes apart on week-ends and in outings.

The impressive landscaped, brick and cement boulevard entrance at Cherry Creek suggests a country club before you even spot the centerpiece 18,000 square-foot clubhouse.

Bylen hopes to cultivate a clientele that will use the facility for weddings, showers, corporate meetings, and golf outings.

As at his other property, Pine Trace Golf Club in Troy, Bylen hopes to develop a stand-alone reputation for good food to encourage lunch time traffic to the mixed grill.

Brunches will be served at Cherry Creek on Sundays as well, he said.

While he will welcome outings on Mondays and Tuesdays, Bylen makes it clear Cherry Creek, like Pine Trace, is a club for golfers who want to take advantage of good weather and get right on a course without worrying about leagues or outings.

"Golf is a game that is inclusive for all, and we want Cherry Creek to be the same way," he said.

As for the course, Wadkins, with input from Bylen, designed a challenging layout from four sets of tees over 6,850 yards.

The terrain is typical Macomb County, in that it resembles the courses of northern Michigan, with rolling land, sharp elevation drops, hardwood trees, marshes, and of course, Cherry Creek running through it.

For those who are serious about their game, or folks who just like to hit the ball at targets, this is the place to work on your shots.

Where spring golf's a value, Naturally!

Gaylord, Michigan—

One of the Gaylord Golf Mecca's most popular course, The Natural, is also one of the area's most affordable, especially for golfers who choose a spring midweek getaway. Designated as a wildlife sanctuary by the National Audobon Society due to its design that preserves and features sensitive wetlands, the Natural is located at Beaver Creek Resort. This highly rated "Outdoor Resort" caters to RVs and also offers upscale log lodges, along with a host of indoor and outdoor facilities that have earned Beaver Creek Five Stars for eight years running.

At prices that begin at $49.95 per person through May 23, golfers receive two nights accommodations in a log lodge, two 18-hole rounds of golf per person including cart, free club storage and cleaning, complimentary continental breakfast and use of Beaver Creek Resort's indoor pool, sauna, jacuzzi and outdoor family facilities. The fully-equipped log lodges sleep up to eight persons and offer all the amenities one expects in a resort condominium while surrounded by hardwood and pine forest.

Through May 23, golfers lodging elsewhere can book a midweek round of golf for just $25 per person including cart; Friday, Saturday or Sunday rounds are still an affordable $35 per person with cart.

Due to their popularity, owner Larry Bowden is building additional log lodges in 1996, bringing the Resort's total up to 30, while also adding 35 permanent campsites in addition to the Resort's existing 70 overnight sites. Designed to allow larger recreational vehicles stays of up to six months, "permanent" campsites offer cable TV, electric, water and sewer hook-ups.

For more information on the Spring Golf Getaway call Beaver Creek Resort at 517-732-2459. For tee times, call The Natural at 517-732-1785.

Your passport to discount rounds

Gaylord, Michigan—

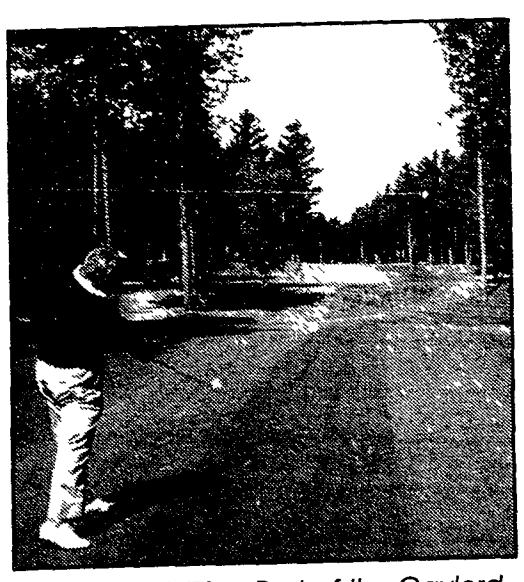

For golfers who can get away midweek, there's no better value available than the Golf Passport offered through the Gaylord Golf Mecca. For just $89, golfers receive 16 rounds on 16 different courses, or more than $800 in golf on some of the best layouts that Gaylord has to offer.

Passport rounds can be played all season long, anytime on Sunday after 3 p.m. and all day Monday through Thursday. Passport players must be accompanied by a player who has purchased one 18 hole round with cart, but unlike many "two-for-one" golfing offers, there are no additional fees or hidden costs with the Gaylord Golf Passport. Midweek play offers uncrowded, relaxed playing conditions, which are ideal for seniors or those just learning the game.

Courses participating in the Gaylord Golf Passport include: Black Bear Golf Resort; Elk Ridge; Fox Run; Garland Reflections; Gaylord Country Club; all three of Hidden Valley's courses including the Classic, the Loon and the Lake; Lakes of the North; Marsh Ridge; Michaywe' Pines; the Natural; the Rock; Treetops' Jones; and Wilderness Valley's Black Forest and Valley courses.

Additionally, Passport holders are automatically entered in a drawing for a seven-day, six-night "Dream Golf Vacation" giveaway to Gaylord, to be awarded in 1996.

To purchase a Gaylord Golf Passport, contact the Gaylord Area Convention and Tourism Bureau for an application form by calling toll-free 1-800-345-8621.

Golf Mecca course count stands at 21

Gaylord, Michigan—

The Gaylord Golf Mecca, the Midwest's fastest growing golf vacation destination, turns 21 this year with the opening of its twentieth and twenty-first fully complete courses: the Fountains at Garland Resort and all-new Black Bear Golf Resort.

And within this season, this expanding golf hub one-ups itself again, as nine holes open at another tract at Treetops Sylvan Resort and construction continues on at least two more Mecca courses, at Hidden Valley Resort and Michawye' Hills.

"Golf is the engine that drove over $30 million in direct expenditures in the Gaylord area in 1995", states Gaylord Area Convention and Tourism Bureau Executive Director Paul Beachnau. "Last year over one out of ten persons in our area worked in golf or hotels and resorts. Golf tourism is tops here." And the Gaylord area keeps rolling out offers that make it easy and affordable for golfers and their families to choose the Mecca, especially if booking for spring or fall, or midweek anytime throughout the golf season.

A quick tour of the Mecca's newest course options shows the increasing diversity available for golfers. After a brief preview in 1995, the Midwest's only Four-Star resort complex, Garland, is opening the Fountains, its fourth 18-hole layout this spring and, many critics say, its best yet.

Whereas Monarch, Swampfire and Reflections are relatively flat, Fountains is laid out on land that has as much as 90 feet of elevation changes, features water fountains on ten of its holes, and is characterized by a covered log bridge that spans the highway in front of the resort and connects the course to the main lodge. Meantime, course designer and resort owner Ron Otto, has already routed and cleared land for Sanctuary, Garland's fifth and final course.

Gaylord's twenty-first course, Black Bear Golf Resort, is the area's first nineteen-hole layout, and one of only a few such courses in the nation. Aware that most golfers arrive with little time to practice before playing, course designer Mark Sauger created the par three practice hole to allow golfers to warm up and develop a feel for the turf and greens prior to beginning official play.

Black Bear Golf Resort is also distinguished by its four sets of tees: two for men and two for women. Most visible of its attributes, however, is Black Bear's 300-foot long illuminated wall of water that fronts along Interstate 75 at the Resort's location in Vanderbilt north of Gaylord.

'CHEAP SHOTS'— Marsh Ridge Resort offers a discount stay-and-play package through June 6.

Soon to be the area's first resort sporting five golf courses, Treetops Sylvan Resort will preview the front nine holes of its newest design this fall, the Tradition by Rick Smith. Featuring the first caddy program at a public golf course in Michigan, the Tradition caters to those who want to exercise while they golf and joins Smith's two other designs, Signature Course and Threetops, along with Tom Fazio's Premier and the Masterpiece by Robert Trent Jones Sr.

At Michaywe' Hills, a new 27-hole layout is being routed by designers Pat Conroy and Jim Dewling, whose background includes working with Raymond Floyd on the "Captain's Club", a course in southeast Michigan. Designed to accommodate 250 to 300 golf course lots, the layout also features an all-new clubhouse. Preview rounds are expected to be played in 1997.

Under construction and well on its way to offering preview play in 1997 is Hidden Valley's fourth course, this one being designed by former television analyst and sometime Senior Tour player Gary Koch. Joining the Classic, the Loon and the Lake, this latest golf addition is part of a large expansion at Hidden Valley which includes renovation of one of its lodges, addition of a luxurious two-story clubhouse at the Loon, and redesign of three holes on the Classic by golf director Mike Husby, all of which were completed last fall.

For best values on stay and play packages in the Gaylord area, start by checking out Hidden Valley's "54 Hole Blowout". Available all season long, the Blowout includes two night's lodging, plus 54 holes of golf with cart including rounds on the Loon, the Lake and the Classic. For those who stay by May 23, most dates in September, or anytime in October, the price is just $135 per person based on double occupancy.

Or check out Marsh Ridge Resort's "Cheap Shots" package available through June 6. Now offering a total of 59 lodging units, most with jacuzzis, this popular little resort's package includes a minimum of three nights midweek lodging, three full breakfasts, three full dinners, and a choice of three 18-hole rounds of golf with cart on any of five courses, including Marsh Ridge, the Natural at Beaver Creek. Fox Run or Wilderness Valley's Black Forest or Valley Courses.

The best-priced stay and play package, however, is available at Beaver Creek Resort. Prices begin at $49.95 per person per night double occupancy and requires a two night stay Sunday through Thursday in a fully-equipped log lodge, includes two 18-hole rounds on the Natural with cart, and continental breakfasts.

The Rock at Woodmoor is offering a special supersaver package available seven days a week from May 3 through May 23. Fifty-nine dollars per night per person double occupancy includes lodging, continental breakfast, and unlimited golf with shared cart on The Rock's secluded course that features waterfalls, ponds and wildlife as only this Upper Peninsula island retreat can.

For golfers who can get away midweek, just $25 will buy a round of golf including cart on the Natural at Beaver Creek, Michaywe's Pines Course and Wilderness Valley's Valley Course. These prices are in effect

Hope springs eternal for bloomin' gardeners

Iris Sanderson Jones

PUN UNEARTHED— Iris and other early-flowering bulbs form the framework for humor in this scene from Shipshewana, Indiana.

My only claim to fame as a gardener is that I once planted a yard full of crocus bulbs upside down. I don't know anything about gardens, so I decided to compensate by being artistic.

I planted bulbs around the trees, against a large rock and even in the middle of the lawn. What could bring spring to my eyes faster than a crocus peeping through the snow as winter ended?

Even those friends with green thumbs, maybe especially those with green thumbs, were astounded at the results. On the first warm day of spring my yard looked like a mushroom farm. The stems had grown down and pushed the bulbs into the air, an inch or so above the soil!

Please don't tell me that this can't happen. I know it can't happen. It happened anyway.

I may not linger over garden catalogs, by specific request, but that doesn't stop me from enjoying the wondrous colors of spring when they bloom in other people's gardens.

I love to watch the azaleas begin their pink and white march in Georgia and slowly color the landscape as they blush north through the Carolinas. I love to see the tulips come up in Callaway Gardens and do their dance north through Ohio. I love to see the lilacs climbing up the map until they paint Mackinac Island purple during the Lilac Festival in early June. (This year June 7-16).

St. Joseph and Benton Harbor will burst into bloom April 28 through May 5 when they celebrate the Blossomtime Festival for the 90th time on the shore of Lake Michigan. Watch the Grand Floral Parade and you will know that winter is over. (616-926-7397). If you've never thrilled at the flower gardens that grow in Western Michigan, start at the Fernwood Botanic Gardens in Niles, where you can see one of the few fern conservatories in the country.

The real show starts there in April, however, when hundreds of daffodils blow in the spring breeze and visitors can attend home gardening demonstrations. Niles Festival is scheduled for May 7-31, when the roses , the hostas and the irises are out by the hundreds.

Take the kids and let them squeeze the scent out of the plants in the Herb and Sensory Garden; let them explore the Discovery Garden, the Amazing Maize Patch and the Sweet Tooth Patch. (616-695-6491)

You should reserve now if you want to see the tulips marching around the windmills at the Tulip Festival May 10-18 in Holland, Michigan. There are three parades during this ten-day event. If you've ever followed the old custom of sweeping your doorstep in early spring, you'll enjoy watching 4000 costumed

If you don't like festival crowds, check out the 88-acre Veldheer tulip farm and show garden, which opens in April and blooms until early October. (616-399-1900.)

The newest blooming attraction in Michigan is the Frederik Meijer Gardens, which opened last spring in Grand Rapids. It boasts Michigan's largest conservatory, soaring five stories above 2000 tropical plants. Walk through the plants of five continents and don't miss the orchids.

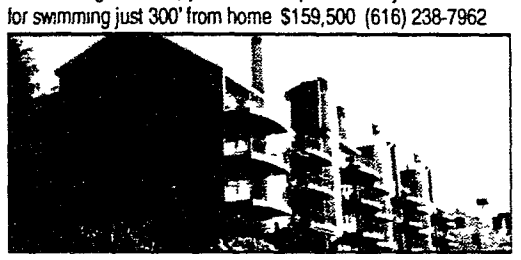

I like my garden plants to blossom in bronze as well, so its a full day's adventure to enjoy both the growing things and the 40 life-sized

Braking for antiques on spring break

Jean Day

It's finally April and, if the end of winter makes you think of heading south to meet spring, you'll find plenty of antique shops and malls as well as dogwood and daffodils along the way.

Travelers going south along any Interstate will see miles of billboards proclaiming that the area's "largest" or "best" antique mall is located in the upcoming town.

The "Malling of America" absolutely includes antique malls as well as manufacturers outlets.

Many antiquers like the idea of browsing through a mall as they see in one setting the offerings of from a dozen to as many as 1,000 dealers (in a few mega-malls). When I interviewed two of the country's most important pewter collectors, they told me they look for malls on their buying trips as they view them as a way to visit many dealers at once.

Increasingly, dealers who have a shop in one city will rent space in a mall in another area. Earlier this year, at the upscale Adams Mall near Fort Walton Beach, Florida. I noticed booths of dealers from Nashville and New Orleans.

But long before Florida we were teased by antique mall ads. If your spring break is taking you down the I-75 to popular destinations in Ohio, Kentucky or Tennessee, you can combine antiquing with visits to historic towns and sites. Even a lunch stop offers the chance to stretch your legs through the aisles of a mall or shop — and traffic safety experts strongly advise taking such timeouts.

South of the Michigan border, east of Dayton on US-42 in Ohio lies Waynesville, which bills itself as the Antiques Capital of the Midwest. Settled by English pioneers in 1797, Waynesville is older than the State of Ohio. It's Old Main Street historic district is five blocks long and lined with buildings containing 25 antique shops and 14 antique malls.

Birthplace of the Stetson hat, Waynesville was named for General "Mad" Anthony Wayne. Waynesville historians relate that he skirmished with local Native American tribes here in the late 1700s.

South of Waynesville on US-42 east of the I-75 lies Lebanon, Ohio, one of my favorite towns. Lebanon boasts 14 antique shops and 10 antique malls, including Broadway Antique Mall with 60 dealers and Hunter's Horn Antiques Center on Main with 70 dealers.

It is the Golden Lamb Inn at 27 S. Broadway that keeps me coming to Lebanon whenever I'm in the area. In continuous operation since 1803, the Golden Lamb is the oldest inn in Ohio, serving lunch and dinner in its gracious dining rooms. Upstairs, its 18 guest rooms have hosted 10 U.S. presidents and other notables.

The rooms are identified by the name of the personage who slept there and, if unoccupied, are open for visitors to see the high poster beds and antique furnishings. Once, on an overnight stay, I found the steps provided to climb into the high bed very handy.

The inn is known for its Shaker furnishings as a Shaker community had been located nearby. The Robert and Virginia Jones Shaker Collection at the Warren County Historical Society Museum in Lebanon is considered one of the best in the country.

If you are continuing into Kentucky on US-71, it's worth any antiquer's while to stop at Shelbyville on Kentucky 55 east of Louisville. The region of softly rolling hills and farms that are among the oldest in Kentucky is a visual treat.

While Kentucky abounds with antique dealers, Shelbyville is known as a center for top quality dealers.

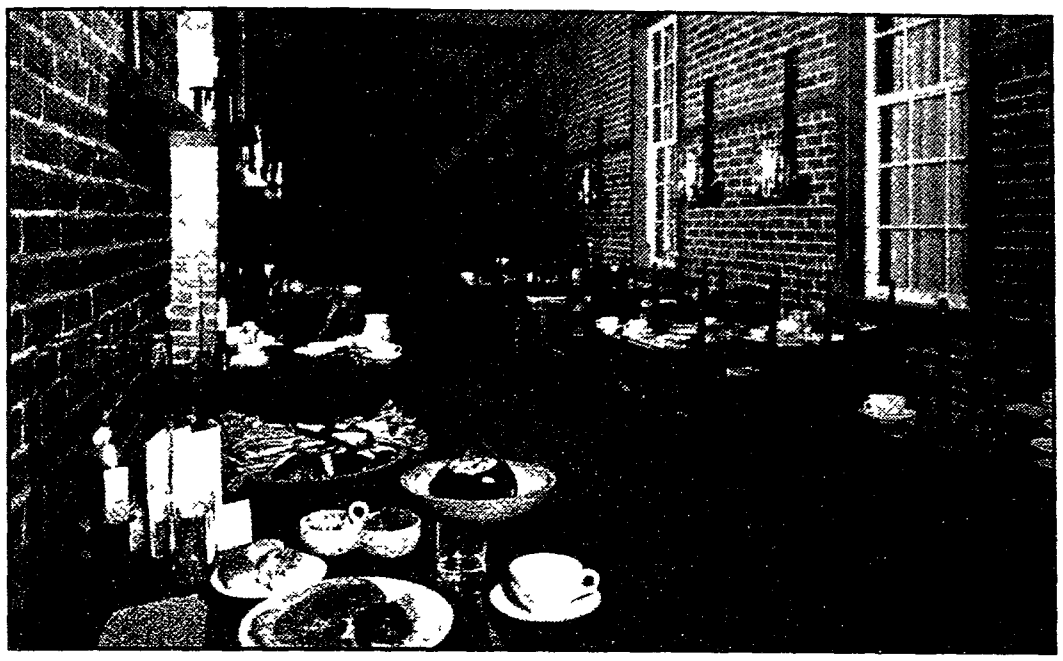

For some 25 years, I have studied the ads in Antiques Magazine for the Wakefield-Scearce Antique Galleries located in the historic Science Hill Building at 525 Washington Street.

A visit three years ago did not disappoint. Science Hill was established in 1825 as a foremost finishing school for girls, and operated for 114 years. The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

In addition to containing galleries of fine antique furniture, silver and accessories, it houses the Science Hill Inn restaurant. Its Sunday buffet of traditional Kentucky dishes is well known. (The galleries, however, are not open Sundays.)

Eight antique shops and malls are located on Washington and Main streets in downtown Shelbyville

CLASSIC SHAKER LINES— A dining room at the Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill, Kentucky is lighted with candles and furnished with reproductions of furniture made at the settlement.

On the I-75 south of Lexington the college town of Berea has been designated "The Folk Arts and Crafts Capital of Kentucky" by the Kentucky legislature.

The Boone Tavern Hotel and dining room serviced by Berea College students long has been a popular stopover. Southern spoonbread is a dining room specialty. The Log House Craft Gallery, part of the college, includes the Wallace Nutting Collection of Early American furniture. Colonial reproductions are for sale.

For serious antiquing, it is hard to beat Harrodsburg, located southwest of Lexington on US-68. Kentucky's oldest town was established in 1774. The historic Beaumont Inn furnished with antiques is worth a visit, if just to sample the dining room's regional fare.

Seven antique shops and malls are located in town. On US-127 is Granny's Antique Mall; J. Sampson Antiques and Books and Main Street Antiques are on Main Street; James House Antiques is on Beaumont Avenue while Antique Mall of Harrodsburg is on College Street.

Locals can point out shops to visit when they know your interests. In the south, silver and fine china are fully appreciated. In Harrodsburg we bought a pearl-handled set of butter spreaders with beautifully engraved blades — perfect for serving hors d's oeuvres. As collectors know well, part of the enjoyment is remembering where the treasure was purchased.

South of Lexington and north of Harrodsburg lies the Shaker Village of Pleasant Hill. The restored Shaker village of 33 original 19th century buildings is the only restored one in the country offering lodging and dining on site.

Exhibits and craft demonstrations offer a learning experience about the Shakers and their way of life. The village was founded in 1805 by the celibate, communal religious sect. The venture ended in 1910.

Overnight accommodations are offered in 81 rooms in the restored buildings furnished with reproduction Shaker furniture. The Trustees' Office houses dining rooms serve fine regional fare.

Virtually every town in Kentucky boasts an antique shop—Lexington lists 43 while Louisville has 54 for truly serious seekers.

If your spring break takes you into Tennessee, billboards will announce that Goodlettsvilie, just 14 miles north of Nashville is "An Antique Community." The seven antique malls and shops there fly magnolia banners attesting to their integrity.

South of Nashville off the I-65 is the historic city of Franklin, which bills itself as "The New Antique Capital of Tennessee." Around the public square are 15 antique malls and shops. Franklin Antique Mall located in a former ice house claims to be the oldest and largest in middle Tennessee. First Avenue Antiques is housed in an old milk bottling plant while J.J. Ashley's is in the old Franklin railroad depot.

Magic Memories and Walton's Antique and Estate Jewelry specialize in jewelry.

East of Nashville on US-40, Lebanon, Tenn., says it is the "Antique City of the South" with eight antique malls and four shops with a total of 150 dealers. Visitors learn that the first antique mall in Tennessee was opened here in 1969.

(Jean Day is a journalist and free lance writer who retired as editor of Northville Record, a weekly newspaper in Michigan. She and her husband are lifelong collectors, filling their Northville home with decoys, samplers, silhouettes, copper and pewter mold, brass candlesticks and paintings.)

Where have all the seawomen gone?

Julie Candler

Allan Hayes

When last we saw our plucky young heroines during the America's Cup races, the all-woman (except-for-one-man) crew aboard the Mighty Mary was about to be blocked from defending the nation's sailing honor against the evil New Zealand challenge. It was April, 1995. After making sailing history and proving that women can handle all the tough sail-changing, winching, line-hauling and sea chores on a 75-foot sailboat, the Mighty Mary crew was eliminated as a potential America's Cup defender by a rule change.

Team Captain Dawn Riley and her crew thought they had eliminated Dennis Connor's Stars & Stripes in fair combat, only to find that a new rule had been agreed to in the meantime by the male CEOs in charge. The net result was that Connor and crew sailed the finals in another American boat, Young America, and were soundly trounced by a very fast Kiwi boat. America's Cup now resides in New Zealand.

Our heroines, discouraged but undaunted, went on to other things, most involving sailing.

Dawn Riley, and three others of the Mighty Mary contingent—Katie and Debbie Pettibone and Merritt Palm—are from Michigan, a remarkably high percentage for a world-class athletic event. We asked each of them, "What have you been doing since the America's Cup?"

We reached Dawn, a former Detroiter who now lives in New Zealand with her fiancee, Barry McKay (pronounced McKye in Kiwi-land) when she was back home visiting her mother. Dawn was 30 at the time of the America's Cup, and had enough fame and high adventure in the years before, during and after those races to inspire most people to hang up their foul weather gear forever.

But soon after the America's Cup races were over, Riley and Katie Pettibone flew overseas to compete in the Tour De France a la Voile.

"It was 25 days of racing, sailed in JAD 35's," Riley tells us. "We started from Dieppe and followed the coast south to the border between Spain and France. Then the boats were taken on trucks to the Mediterranean and ended up at Monaco.

"We were the only Americans in the race. It was harder than we expected. We thought it was going to be a piece of cake, but we were just average. Sometimes we had two races a day. Sometimes we started at 9 p.m. and got in at 6 a.m., with another race at 4 in the afternoon. It was hard to get much sleep.

"Eight people raced at a time, and we were required to rotate through 12 people. It was a very complicated French regatta. I'd like to do it again."

Says Katie Pettibone of Port Huron about the French experience, "The French are very good sailors. I suspect they didn't do well in the America's Cup because they didn't have the right boat."

Dawn Riley is accustomed to going without sleep. During the year before the America's Cup, she commanded the all-woman crew of Heineken during the Whitbread Round-the-World Race, one of the world's most grueling and dangerous sailing events. The Pulitzer Prize-winning book Taking the Helm, by Dawn Riley with Cynthia Flanagan, is a riveting and beautifully written account of the voyage. The trip involved sailing for days in the Southern Ocean among icebergs and in mountainous seas, as well as coping with a broken rudder in mid-ocean. (Little Brown and Company, 1995, $24.95)

We ask Dawn how she survived the hardships of wet, freezing, and perilous mid-ocean sailing in the Whitbread race. "It just becomes normal after a while," she says.

After the America's Cup and the French adventure, Katie Pettibone enrolled at the University of Miami in Coral Gables, Florida. While she's pursuing a degree in marine biology, she skips classes occasionally to compete in internationally-important races. She spent an October week racing at Sardinia in the Mediterranean, and took seven more days for a Nippon challenge cup in Japan in November.

"The university is pleased that one of their students was in the America's Cup," says her mother Joanne Pettibone.

"They let her take time off and worked her assignments and class work around her racing schedule."

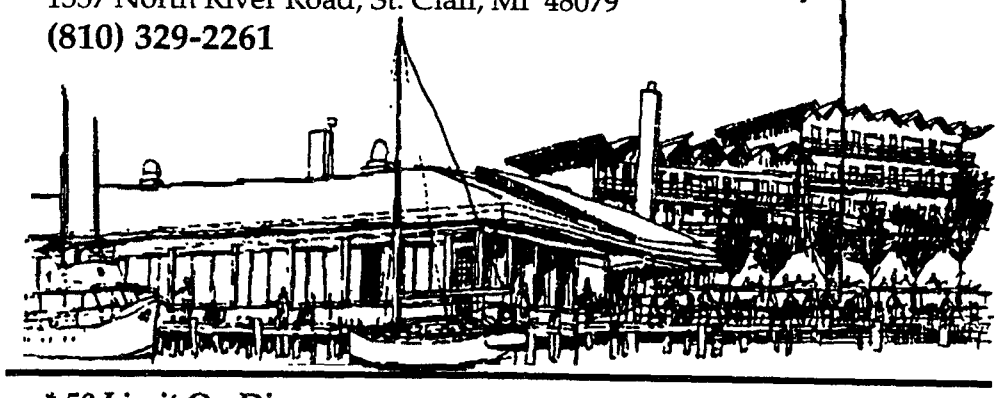

Debbie Pettibone, Katie's sister, now works in the world of business. "For me," she says, "the America's Cup helped me move into the business world. I had a little more credibility, whatever I was into. That experience made the difference."

Debbie works for Norrell Corporation's office in Miami. "I like my job as a recruiter for the company, which is a staffing service. I'll sail when I can, but now I'm focusing on my career (she's going on 27). It's a new challenge for me. It's hard to be in an office 8 hours a day, but I get breaks because I also make calls. Katie and I see each other once or twice a week in Florida."

Debbie says she too would like to try out for the next America's Cup.

We meet the Pettibone sisters at the Fox Theater in Detroit as they wait for an awards ceremony. This is the night the March of Dimes presents top Michigan athletes with National Athletic Awards. Michigan's four Mighty Mary alumna receive theirs for their contributions to the America's

Katie is tall, blond, longhaired and glamorous in a black tux outfit with choker pearls. Debbie is beautiful in a slinky red dress, and looks a little more business-like than her sister. But you wouldn't take either one for a world class athlete and sailor.

The Pettibone sisters come by their sailing prowess honestly. Also present to witness the awards event is Jean King of Port Huron, their grandmother. She is a lifelong sailor, and was the first to teach her little granddaughters to tie a bowline, arguably the sailor's most useful knot. "If you can tie it behind your back you have it down pat," she tells us.

The fourth Mighty Mary from Michigan is Merritt Palm, 28, who hails from Grosse Pointe.

We catch her at her apartment in Boston. She now works for Pact 2000, an America's Cup Syndicate succeeding Pact 95, the sponsor of Young America in the '95 America's Cup. It's called Pact 2000 because that's the next year in which they can compete for the Cup.

"I've enjoyed my work at Pact 2000," says Palm. "I'm doing marketing things, events management. We'll see what the future brings.

"They allow me to sail. I've been doing some sailing on a 50-foot R P (Richel-Pugh) owned by Bill Alcott of Grosse Pointe. I sailed with him in the Queen's Cup, the Manhasset fall series, and the I M S Rolex championship in the fall. I also taught sailing at Bay View Yacht Club last summer.

"There's a very good possibility that I will sail on the new boat. Actually, Pact 2000 will have two new boats. And I can use the knowledge I gained from the last campaign."

Pat Palm, Merritt's mother, says, "As a parent I can see that it was a pivotal event in her life. It was such an incredible thing for women who are sailors to have the opportunity to show that you don't have to be a 300-pound offensive lineman to succeed in athletics. They demonstrated that they have skills and can accomplish something, as long as they were getting the opportunity that was given to them by Bill Koch. And they almost did it. They came within 50 seconds of doing it. They captured the sentiments of the American public who watched the campaign."

Mrs. Palm and other parents were on hand during the America's Cup racing in San Diego. "It was an incredible experience for all of us. There's nothing like watching one of those boats. They seem to suck up the seas around them."

When the next America's Cup race is held in the year 2000, all four of Michigan's supersailor women would like to be there.

Says Dawn, "I would expect to be more involved with the organizational side of the America's Cup the next time. I would like to sail, but if there is an all-woman crew again I don't think it will be sponsored by Bill Koch. He's fed up with it and he has some personal things going on."

Meanwhile, Joanne Pettibone sums up the America's Cup races in which her daughters competed: "If we had to lose the Cup, I'm glad it wasn't the women that lost it. It would have been blamed on the fact they were women."

bronze figures in the Meijer Sculpture Park. (616-957-1580).

Of course, the blossoms will be out soon enough in Traverse City, the Cherry Capital of the World, so you don't need to wait for the July 6-13 Cherry Festival. I notice that I soon take spring and summer for granted, so those early spring blossoms in the Leelanau Peninsula are the most spectacular for people who like to look at but not weed flowers.

Flowers don't end with the spring, much as we love to see them during this season. You can enjoy gardens even after the last memory of winter has disappeared into leaf-covered trees and swimming pools. Some charge admission.

Midland's Dow Gardens are open year-round. (517-631-2677). The Saginaw-Tokushima Friendship Garden, with its Japanese Cultural Center and Tea House, will show you how tranquil a garden can be. Gardens are free, admission charged to the tea ceremony. (517-759-1648).

Michigan State University has several public gardens in East Lansing: the Botany Greenhouse, the Clarence E. Lewis Landscape Arboretum, the Horticultural Demonstration Garden, the W. J. Beal Botanical Garden. Kids also love the Michigan 4-H Children's Garden and the Dinosaur Garden.

As you can see , the list is nearly endless. Call (800) 5432-YES toll-free and ask the state to send you a blooming list, including the Leila Arboretum in Battle Creek, Hidden Lake Gardens in Adrian, Matthaei Botanical Gardens and Nichols Arboretum in Ann Arbor, the Anna Scripps Whitcom Conservatory on Detroit's Belle Isle and Cranbrook House and Gardens in Bloomfield Hills.

Learn a little something. Soothe your wintered soul. But never, never plant a crocus upside down. It's no fun digging them up and replanting them in their proper upright position.

Rhubarb—Old-time spring tonic

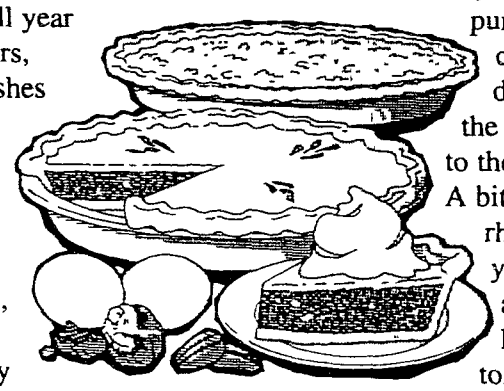

Dorothy Webster

As springlike temperatures warm the earth, fat rosy-red spears of rhubarb poke through the garden's soil - renewing one's spirit with the predictability of its appearance. This perennial sign of spring is welcome, especially by those who live north of the 45th Parallel, where the season often makes a late entry.

Early settlers knew and appreciated its value, and the versatile, handsome plant was prized by thrifty housewives who were sure to include some rhubarb roots along with the herb seeds, lilac cuttings, and peony "eyes" that traveled along to new homesteads. Those stalwart standbys of dooryard gardens, along with fruit tree saplings, were the foundation of many northern gardens.

Throughout Michigan, old, long abandoned homesteads still harbor these favorites - but now the apple trees have been neglected for years and their names forgotten. Hardly anyone forgot what rhubarb was because those practical farm women called it by a descriptive name—pie plant—and it still appears alongside fallen-in foundations of houses lost to banks during the Great Depression.

Of all those plants, seeds and cuttings laboriously packed and tended, none gave such early bounty as the homely rhubarb plant. In the springtime, its sauce was regarded as an important tonic and purgative, thought to "purify" the blood, in summertime its juice was chilled to refresh field workers, in winter its jams and jellies added a sweet-tart touch to toast - and all year long, the pies, cobblers, crisps, cakes and relishes provided tasty eating at economical cost.

Often rhubarb wine was raised in toasts for special occasions - weddings, christenings, betrothals and holiday meals. Even genteel ladies considered it a suitable libation, claiming it wasn't really an alcoholic drink but more medicinal, even though it packed a wallop. No wonder many front parlors boasted fainting couches! It was even deemed appropriate to serve visiting parsons after Sunday dinner.

Sorting through long-stored boxes of family papers recently, I came across many "receipts" written down by my grandmother, Mary Alice Hawkins, who was born in 1871 in Michigan's Thumb area. A survivor of the Sand Beach Fire of 1881, (when the newly-formed American Red Cross helped the victims), she later married James Beebe and moved to a busy lumbering camp in northeastern Michigan. She brought her pie plants in a washtub and apple tree whips in a barrel.

They were the basis of an orchard that still produces fruit today, and the pie plants, divided and moved many times, provide tasty sauce, pies, and wine.

Grandma Beebe prepared rhubarb just about every way possible, for there were thirty-some "boys" in the lumber camp to feed, and, known for her "light hand at pastry", she set out 18 pies to cool every day the crew was in camp.

Her eldest daughter, Ella Clements, recalled years later: "Ma and I laid planks between barrels outside the cookhouse and put the pies and bread to cool. We baked every day. The pies were apple, pumpkin and canned or dried fruit. But once in a while when the railroad brought a barrel of fresh lemons, she made lemon meringue pie as a treat - and did the boys eat that up!"

In season, fresh fruits and berries were used for pie fillings, but by summer the lumbering crews were disbanded for the season, so the harvest was canned or dried for winter's use.

The spidery handwriting of those receipts is faded now, and the paper is brittle with age, but the recipes themselves are a link with the past and they're just as good as when Grandma Beebe fed a lumberjack crew or the twelve children she raised.

As a child, I recall the pie plants growing close by the well's hand pump - where they could be watered daily - a testament to the importance attached to them.

A bit of advice on using rhubarb if you grow your own: Never use any part of the leaves. They can be toxic. Pull, don't cut, each stalk from the ground. After planting, expect to harvest a light yield the second year, a full harvest the third year. Don't pull all the stalks - leave about one-third to renew the plant. Water well, and fertilize in the spring in a wide circle around the crown; they are heavy feeders. You may wish to use a bit of red food coloring to enhance the color. Stalks can be washed, diced and placed directly in a freezer bag, or canned as sauce. When making sauce, jam, jelly or chutney today, you're advised to use a hot water processing bath after putting the produce in jars. Call your local Cooperative Extension agent for details.

SAUCE

Put 6 cups of cut-up rhubarb, 2 scant cups of sugar and a little water in an enamel pan on the front of the stove until almost boiling. Push to back of stove and simmer until soft. Cool and eat or seal in hot jars.

(Grandma used a cast-iron wood range all her life. The fire in front was hotter, while the back burners kept food at a slow simmer).

PIE

Use thin, tender stalks for pie. Wash and cut in small pieces. Lay them in a big pudding dish or deep pie pan and spread very thin slices of lemon in the middle.

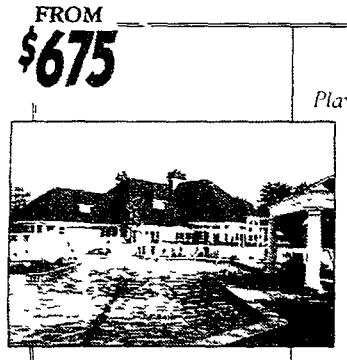

Fill to heaping. Scatter brown sugar over and add the rest of the pie plant. Cover with a nice short crust (lots of shortening) and bake for almost an hour in a hot oven (about 400 degrees).

SHRUB (A COOL DRINK)

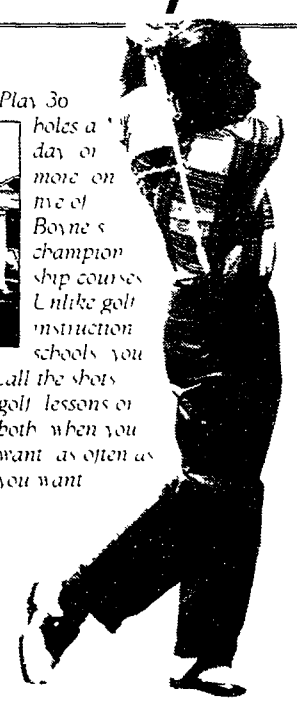

In a graniteware pan, simmer a quart of diced, washed rhubarb with a quart of water, juice of 1 lemon with the rind sliced or grated, and a scant cup of sugar, for about a half hour. Strain through colander. Cool well and serve over ice chips if you have any.

PIE PLANT JAM

Use an enamel pan of good size. Dice up 2 pounds of rhubarb, add a scant cup of water and bring to the boil on the front of the range, then push to back and simmer until soft. Put through a strainer and measure out 3 cups of juicy sauce. Wash out your enamel pan, add the sauce, 4 cups of sugar and 6 oz. liquid pectin when it comes to a second boil. Hold at full boil for 1 minute, then remove from the heat, skim off foam and pour into hot, scalded jars and seal.

MOTHER'S RHUBARB WINE

Wash an armful of rhubarb stalks and cut in small pieces. Put in a big crock or the butter churn with 5 pounds of sugar and a teaspoon of yeast. Pour a gallon of warm water into it and stir. Cover with clean muslin. Stir it every day for a week. Then strain and add 1 pound of sugar and let it sing for another week. When it's through singing, bottle it. Best if you wait a month for it to mellow before drinking. Makes about 2 gallons.

("Singing" was the term used for the yeast working. It bubbled and foamed and sometimes seemed to sigh, if you listened closely).

QUICK PIE FOR COMPANY

Stir together 2 cups of diced pie plant, 1 cup of sugar, 2 egg yolks, a lump of butter and 1 tablespoon of flour. Cook slowly until thick. Fill a baked pie shell and spread with meringue made from 2 beaten egg whites, then brown the meringue in the hot oven.

RHUBARB RELISH

Cook in enamel stewkettle 1 quart of diced rhubarb, 1 quart of onions cut fine, and 1 pint cider vinegar for about 20 minutes. Add 1 pound good brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, and a bag of tied spices with 1 teaspoon of whole cloves, 1 teaspoon allspice. Boil for a half hour. Bottle in hot jars.

RHUBARB CAKE

(Good for Ladies Aid Meetings)

Cream together 1/2 cup butter and 1-1/2 cups good brown sugar in a large mixing bowl. Add 1 egg and beat well. In another bowl, combine 2 cups sifted flour and 1 teaspoon baking soda. In a small bowl, mix 1 cup of buttermilk and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Stir the flour into sugar and egg mixture alternately with buttermilk mixture. Fold in 1-1/2 cups of small diced rhubarb.

In a small bowl, stir 1/3 cup white sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon for topping. Pour cake batter into a greased pan and sprinkle top with sugar and cinnamon mixture. Bake in medium oven (350 degrees) for 40-50 minutes until a broom straw stuck in the middle comes out clean.

A PRETTY CONSERVE

In a graniteware pan, cook 3 heaping cups of diced rhubarb, 3 large oranges cut fine. the grated rind of 1-1/2 oranges, 1/2 cup of tinned pineapple cut fine and 2-1/2 cups of sugar. Simmer slow on back of stove until done, pour into scalded jars and seal.

It seems strange now, remembering all the chores Grandma Beebe did, that she took time for Ladies' Aid meetings and to prepare "a pretty conserve". Yet those domestic accomplishments were expected of women in the early part of this century and they did their best to conform to what their peers expected of them.

So, it's no wonder that the handy and familiar "pie plant" conveniently by the well, was used in so many tasty ways.

(Dorothy Webster, a former magazine and newspaper publisher, lives in northeastern Michigan where she gardens - and grows six varieties of rhubarb, including some of the pie plant from her grandmother's garden. She recommends "Valentine", "German Wine", "Canada Red" and the old-fashioned dooryard variety for a change of pace).

Keyboard stars collaborate at Kalamazoo concerts

Kalamazoo, Michigan—

Look to see doubles—and more—at the next Irving S. Gilmore International Keyboard Festival, April 20-28. With the theme "Artists in Collaboration," Gilmore organizers will try an unusual programming approach: pairing some of the world's best known pianists with other musicians and performing artists. The purpose? To explore the role the keyboard plays when it is no longer a solo instrument and to celebrate the importance of collaboration in music.

The roster is star-studded: Emanuel Ax, piano, with Yo-Yo Ma, cello; Jean-Pierre Rampal, flute, with John Steele Ritter, piano; Bruce Hornsby, piano, with Bela Fleck, banjo; Dudley Moore with Battle Creek Symphony Orchestra; Alicia de Larrocha with Grand Rapids Symphony Orchestra; Misha and Cipa Dichter with Southwest Symphony Orchestra; Evelyn Glennie, marimba, with Philip Smith, piano; Jose Molina, the famous Spanish dancer, with Pamela Ross; and others.

BRASS HAMS— Take a pianist with a great sense of humor (David Owen Norris) and mix him up with a brass ensemble of equal wit (Canadian Brass) and you have the ingredients for a delicious evening of fun (April 23) at the Gilmore Keyboard Festival.

Other highlights of the Festival include the return of Gilmore Artists David Owen Norris and Ralf Gothoni—winners of the Gilmore's noncompetitive prize for pianists—to whom the 1996 event is dedicated; and performances by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and Canadian Brass.

Dorothy Donegan, a favorite at the last Gilmore in 1994 when she opened for Ray Charles, will return to the Jazz at the Gilmore series. Grammy-award winner McCoy Tyner will also perform on that series.

The 1996 Gilmore is divided into six series: Master Series, Director's Choice Series, Noon Series: Piano & Dance, Afternoon Series: Piano Plus, Jazz at the Gilmore, and Film Series. To that concert schedule are added master classes, pre-concert lectures, a music critics institute, Gilmore Family Concerts, and the Keys to Education program for schools.

In all, more than 150 events will be offered in Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Grand Rapids, St. Joseph/Benton Harbor and neighboring communities.

Tickets are on sale now; prices range from complimentary to $30. For more information, contact the Gilmore Festival at 616-342-1166 or 1-800-34-PIANO.

The Irving S. Gilmore International Keyboard Festival is a nine-day festival held every two years, celebrating the music of the keyboard and the musicians who play it. An artist-in-residence program in K-12 schools, Keys to Education, is held concurrently throughout the region. The Gilmore also presents a noncompetitive prize, the Gilmore Artist Award, to a pianist every four years. The prize is worth $115,000 in financial assistance along with professional management and concert tours. The Gilmore also gives $15,000 scholarships every two years to gifted American piano students through its Gilmore Young Artist Awards.

Phone call connects with counselors

Travelers to Michigan will find not only great things to see and do but also where and how to do them with just one easy phone call (1-800-5432-YES) to the Travel Bureau's Michigan Travel System (MITS).

MITS is staffed by travel counselors who have access to more than 10,000 records, which include listings of festivals and events, attractions, theaters, museums, lodgings, campgrounds, restaurants, shopping centers, golf courses, downhill and cross-country skiing areas, cider mills, and charter boats.

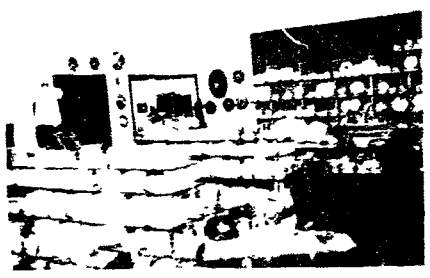

Travel counselors are available 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. A voice-messaging system is in operation when the system is not staffed. Requested information can be mailed or faxed—the choice is yours.

For information about statewide festivals and events highlights, call (800) 644-8644. Information is updated weekly, and the toll-free number is accessible 24 hours a day.

2 qt. saucepan w/lid
3 qt. saute w/lid
6 qt. stock pot (lid interchangeable with 3 quart saute)

A. Stainless Steel Fry Pan

B. Stainless Steel 1 Qt. Saucier

$76.00 Value

All-Clad Ltd. is the cookware to fit your lifestyle of good taste

Uniquely designed, manufactured by a process called three-layer bonding. The 18/10 stainless steel interior is highly polished and does not react with foods or reclaim its character. The core is pure aluminum, known for excellent heat conduction. And the exterior is anodized aluminum, a durable scratch resistant finish. The stainless steel handles are securely attached and stay cool. Put the stainless lid fits snugly.

B.F.F.

For a wholesome breakfast. Bring your own buddy or a bunch of buddies, and get in on our bodacious breakfast bargains for the whole gang.

For a limited time only at Chesapeake Bagel Bakery.

Buddy Breakfast Bargain for 2

Your choice of 2 bagel cream cheese* sandwiches, or 2 bagel knots, or 1 of each, plus 2 regular coffees $2.99

Buddy Breakfast Bargain for 6

9 bagels and a 1/2 lb container of cream cheese* $4.99

Buddy Breakfast Bargain for 10 15 bagels and 1 lb of cream cheese* $6.99

At the Chesapeake Bagel Bakery, 1996 is the year of the friend. At all our stores, we're now offering breakfast specials that you can share with all kinds of friends. One special pal. Neighbors. Cronies at the office, etc.

So bring your own friend. One of them. Six of them. Even ten. Everyone will enjoy a choice of bagel cream cheese sandwiches. Bagel knots. Not to mention our special bagel-brew coffee. It's delicious.

And what goes better with a warm bagel than a hot cup of coffee?

Of course, they'll enjoy the warm, friendly atmosphere.

After all, when two friends founded the Chesapeake Bagel Bakery back in 1981, they set out to create a place where folks could get together and enjoy a healthy meal in a relaxed environment.

And we're still promoting that idea all the time. Especially this year.

So start with breakfast. Then watch for lunch and dinner specials throughout the year. You'll want to bring your buddy (or buddies). And bring them often.

Or surprise them and take breakfast to them. Clip the coupons on the back and come in today for a truly bagelicious breakfast.

An Open Letter . . .

From: Casterline Funeral Home, Inc.

To: The Families We Serve

There is a major change going on within our industry today as more and more emphasis is being placed on funeral planning ahead of time instead of waiting until the time of passing to make arrangements. Although this concept is currently being embraced by hundreds of thousands of people nationwide, we have been made increasingly aware of your desire to examine such information without being exposed to telephone solicitors salesmen knocking on your door unannounced.

We respect your privacy. We do, however, feel it is very important for all our community members to be aware of the benefits that funeral planning can give you and your loved ones.

We are not going to call you. We are not going to come knocking on your door. We will, however, be happy to share with you the advantages and costs of funeral planning. We hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

Ray J. Casterline

Tools for Tomorrow

SERVISTAR and Coast to Coast salute the 10 national winners and 12 special merit honor students of the 1995-96 All-American Vocational Student Awards. These students were selected from a pool of more than 2,700 students selected to represent their schools as local winners.

Each year, SERVISTAR and Coast to Coast honor hundreds of outstanding secondary vocational students from across the United States through the All-American Vocational Student Awards. The awards program is one component of Tools for Tomorrow, SERVISTAR and Coast to Coast's national initiative to support and promote vocational education in America. For more information, call 412/284-6400.

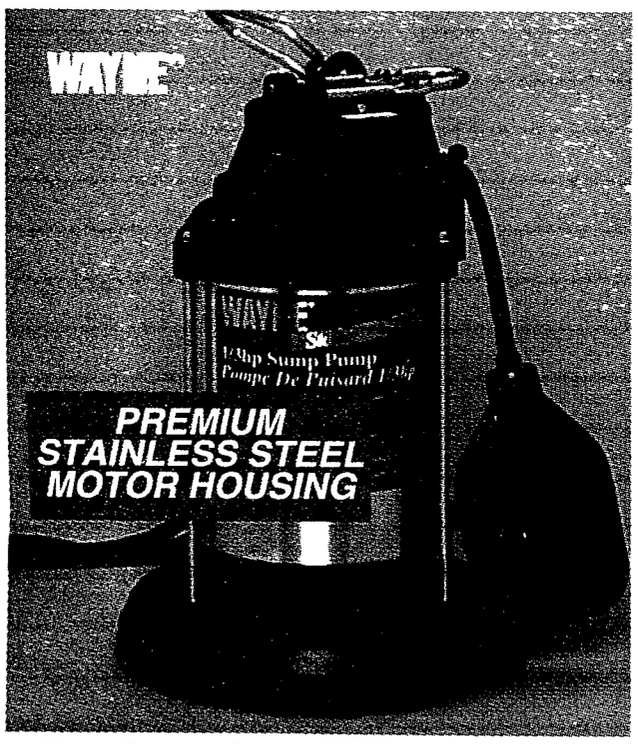

SERVISTAR and Coast to Coast also salute the many vendors that support the Tools for Tomorrow program.
