Dispatch plan gets deep sixed

Word: No public acceptance for contracting out service

By ROBERT JACKSON Staff Writer

The Northville City Council took the advice of more than 150 resi dents and voted to suspend plans for contracting police dispatch and lock-up services with the City of

The move came at a special meeting of the council last week that was attended by a crowd of about 50 residents. The crowd was smaller than that attending a Northville City Council meeting March 18, where over 150 citizens showed up to oppose the out sourcing proposal

City Manager Gary Word said that city officials had been study ing the idea for several months But the council was taken to task by residents concerned that police and fire dispatch, along with lock up services would soon be the responsibility of the neighboring Novi Police Department

"The trend in local government has been toward such ventures and there are several examples of successful service contracting with other communities." Word said several citizens addressed the council (at the March 18 meeting) to cease explo ration of this arrangement

While no final decision was imminent initial response indicates that any further investigation or implementation of such a program would be difficult for the general public to accept." Word

Citizens committee will study city hall renovation options

Changes are likely once library moves out

By ROBERT JACKSON Staff Writer

A citizens committee will be helping city officials decide how to renovate Northville City Hall once the district library moves to its new building

That decision came at a special meeting of the city council last week as councilmembers studied

The district library is slated to leave the confines of city hall for us new building next door some along with the requirement to bring the building up to the specifications of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) forced city officials to place the city nall renovation project as a high priority for the upcoming budget year according to Mayor Chris Johnson who told councilmembers that if ADA requirements weren't met soon the city could face stiff penalties.

"As it stands right now we are not in compliance with ADA standards, so we need to proceed with this in a timely fashion." Johnson

Township Trustee Mark Abbo makes a point during talks over development alternatives for 900 acres of land.

Discussions resume in great land debate

By RANDY COBLE Staff Writer

Deciding what one-sixth of Northville Township will be when it grows up brought Wayne County and the Northville Township Board of Trustees together last week

Just how the county's 900-odd acres on the south side of town should be developed - and the trustees' allegations that the county is shutting them out of the planning process (see related story) - drove them apart, however

Last Thursday was the first public peek at the county's ideas for the huge vacant parcel between Five and Six Mile and Beck Road and Hines Drive. The development 'dream team" put together last year by County Executive Ed McNamara served up four different proposals as part of an effort to get the township trustees' input about how the land should be developed

"We are not firm on anything in these plans," Dewey Henry, county director of jobs and economic development, stressed. "We're here to get your input. We want to hear from you, what are your priori-

Those priorities will likely bring modifications to county plans for the site Every member of the board voiced concerns about big parts of each of the design proposals Those concerns will be taken

Wayne County Economic Development Director Dewey Henry said the county is willing to listen to all proposals.

"We are not firm on anything in these plans. We're here to get your input."

-Dewey Henry Wayne County Economic Development Director

into account as the planning process goes on, Henry said

Just about all of the 900-acre parcel is zoned for residential development, mostly single family homes with a chunk set aside for multi-family apartment/attached condominium use. Two of the county proposals stick primarily to that vision, while the remaining two deviate from it. All four would include housing for thousands of new residents.

Volunteers find labor of love in acting as youth mentors

By LEE SNIDER Editor

The things they do together are hardly what you'd call eventful trips to the zoo, bowling, craft projects, quiet talking.

But the time that Northville Youth Assistance volunteers spend with their companions has an importance that transcends the simplicity of their activities.

There's no way you can take it lightly," says NYA volunteer Carol Bernardo, who was assigned to a Northville High School student two

"I think I get more out of it than she does

Bernardo is a member of the community who completed a 5week training course and now serves as a personal companion and mentor to a fatherless youth She sees the teen on a weekly basis, and finds herself in the enviable position of acting as part role model, part good friend.

"It's a wonderful situation to be in." she insists "She tells me things she can't tell anyone else I hope I can do this forever.

Bernado's story has its unique features but shares a common element with just about all NYA arrangements - it's tremendously gratifying for both the adult and the youth

"We relate to each other as friends " she said "Sometimes we Program lauded for offering quality nurturing opportunities just walk and talk. But we do some goal setting, too. We talk about her classes in school and how she can meet new friends."

The Northville Youth Assistance program is jointly funded by Northville and Northville Township Volunteers go through 15 hours of training then are assigned to youths who have been referred to the program

Referrals can come from anywhere, but most often come from the schools or the police Many youths, though not all, are growing up in single-parent homes.

The next training session begins April 17 and, as always, volunteers are in short supply Especially needed are male mentors.

Five eager boys are currently on the NYA waiting list

Northville resident Pat Moylan knows all about the importance of male companionship to a young boy Moylan, a single mother, waited a long time for volunteer Bill Obermaier to enter the life of her 7-year-old son, Max

He comes every Saturday and spends two hours with Max "He's just fantastic." Moylan, a pediatric neuropsychologist, said about Obermaier. "I try to leave when he comes and let them do their guy stuff. What's nice about it is that it's very low key. He's a male who's very consistent.'

Obermaier's reliability is vital to Max, who can get attached to his mom's significant others only to be disappointed if the relationships

Obermaier's wife, Christina, also works with NYA but, because of the shortage of men volunteers, is paired with a male youth

She's doing her best to relate to her young friend but is enjoying only limited success.

Sometimes I think he likes going out with me better than he likes doing his homework," she

"He's very private It's probably a guy thing but I think it's hard for him to talk to me.

Though her's is less than a perfect match. Christina manages to have fun with her 13-year-old companion. They shoot pool and go bowling, and they once got quizzical looks when they ran around the neighborhood blasting each other with nerf guns

"He likes computer games."

Northville Youth Assistance volunteer Bill Obermaier visits with his special friend, Max Moylan, as the youngster celebrates his seventh birthday last Saturday.

Christina added. "But he doesn't like to confide. He starts fidgeting."

Fred Geist is another single parent who appreciates the NYA program. At one time, all four of his daughters were paired off with mentors Three still are.

They really enjoy their companions," he said. "They all seem like really good people. They tell them things they wouldn't necessarily talk to me about.'

The NYA session that begins April 17 will meet at 6:30-9 30 p.m. for five consecutive Wednesdays. Training sessions take place at Northville High School, Center Street near Eight Mile. There is no charge to volunteers.

"In three weeks, without lecturing, without doing anything but pal around, I made a difference for a nice little kid who has a lot of potential," was the way volunteer John Hill summed up his NYA experience in a letter to Director Mary Ellen King. "Thanks for giving me this opportunity "

Those interested in volunteering can call NYA at 344-1618.

Trustees claim they're being frozen out of planning process

By RANDY COBLE Staff Writer

ıty

"You have a history of not delivering on your promises. It's a hurdle we're all going to have to be aware of. We don't totally trust the county people when they say they're going to do something."

"When you came to us in November, there was a lot of talk of being partners and of being a team. I find it a little disconcerting when half the team doesn't know what the other half is doing."

Those comments, made by Supervisor Karen Baja and Trustee Gini Britton, illustrate the general consensus of the Northville Township Board of Trustees when it comes to Wayne County and the process of developing its 900 acres

The trustees at their March 28 meeting - a forum with county officials to discuss ideas for the development of the huge parcel on the south side of town - made it clear they're not happy with the way the planning process has gone so far.

County Executive Ed McNama-ra's development "dream team" hasn't taken the board's vision for the property into account, the trustees said, and hasn't kept Northville Township informed about events affecting the land that are happening at the county

They were allegations that Dewey Henry, county director of jobs and economic development, either denied or apologized for.

"These are the first steps in a collaborative effort, a partnership," Henry said. "We want your input. Give us a chance. You may find that you can trust us.'

Members of the board voiced three main complaints at the meeting, including:

· Claiming that county officials have not done much to include Northville Township officials in on planning for the site.

The board spelled out what it wants and doesn't want to see at a study session more than a month ago, Britton said, yet the develop-ment proposals offered so far don't include any of that.

• Alleging that the county isn't acting like a team player, neglecting to tell the board about major developments. Board members expressed anger over the fact that Wayne County did not inform them beforehand of last week's unveiling of a 21st Century economic development fund.

The fund is a planned $25 million series of loans and grants to six communities for redevelopment projects. The money will come from sales of county-owned land. including the acreage in Northville Township.

That, according to the board, was not what county officials promised in November. Back then, Britton said, the plan was to use the money gained from selling portions of the land to clean up other areas, then sell them and repeat the process until the whole parcel

Henry responded that he was 'certain" that McNamara would agree to have money from the land sales used first for clean up of the property before anything was sent

"Ed McNamara is committed to cleaning up that land," he said. "We have to clean it up in order to be able to sell it "

"I'm sorry. If you want a guy to blame, it's me," Henry said. "I didn't make the connection."

"You didn't get the connection?" Britton retorted. "You promised us in November that you would use this money to clean up the land and then you establish this 21st Century fund and you didn't get the connection?

"No, I didn't," Henry said. "I didn't realize this would be a con-

Trustee Mark Abbo also objected to the fact that county officials may sell the land, which is dotted with underground storage tanks and vacant buildings, to developers and then let them clean the property up.

• Third, members of the board criticized the county for not making the land's cleanup, especially the razing of the buildings, a top

The buildings attract kids and street gang members from all over southeast Michigan, township police say, and everything from vandalism to drug deals have been reported as taking place there.

"The county has an obligation to Northville Township to clean up this property that they've abandoned for 20 years," Clerk Sue Hillebrand said.

"We've received no help in patrolling it and no word on when those buildings are coming down,' Trustee Russ Fogg said, "so there's a little bit of resentment there."

"We think it's a ticking time bomb. It's a just a matter of time until something terrible happens there," Trustee Barbara O'Brien

Henry blamed the situation on the Wayne County Commission, which has refused to spend money on the abandoned parcel.

. The criticism of the county was not just limited to Northville Township. Northville City Councilman Chuck Keys also voiced concerns Monday night.

Keys in a memo to the council said that county officials should be considering the impact that this huge development will have on the city, something they haven't done

Keys called for the county to gather input from local officials on issues like the effect of increased traffic and how a proposed commercial shopping center at Five Mile and Sheldon may impact the downtown business district of the

THE WAYNE COUNTY LAND IN NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP: FIRST STEPS

These are the four different development designs that Wayne County officials discussed with the Northville Township Board of Trustees

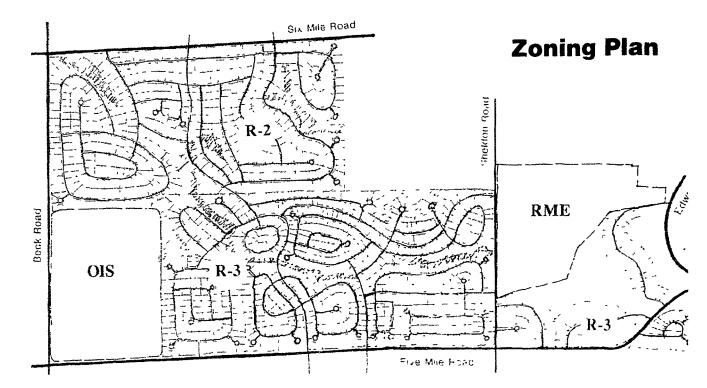

Nothing shown here is set in stone, county officials said. They characterized the proposals as a starting point for both sides to use in thinking about what land uses each wants to see.

The first two designs use the land's current zoning to determine land uses. The remaining two, concept plans "A" and "B," would require the township and the county to sign a planned unit development

(PUD) contract.

The township's PUD ordinance is a tradeoff, allowing the board to approve a development plan that doesn't fit a parcel's conventional zoning. In return, the site's developer must convince the trustees that the community will receive "a recognizable and substantial benefit" from the deal.

That could include preserving natural areas, providing open space for the land's future residents or providing land for public uses such as recreation.

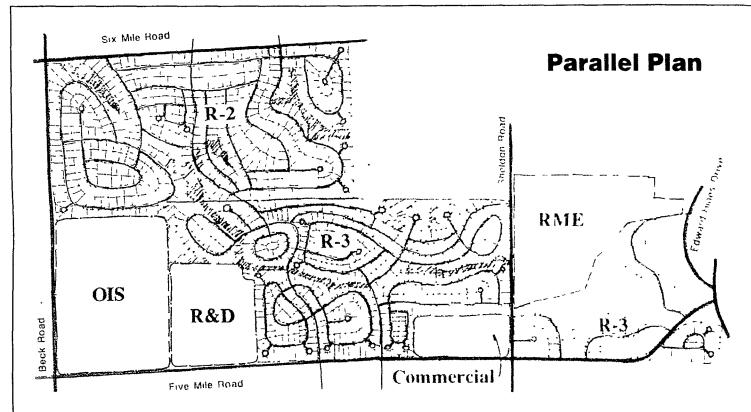

Primarily uses current zoning as a guide for land uses

• R-2 and R-3 single family housing would take up most of the site • Some of the land would be earmarked for apartments (RME)

• The headquarters of Optical Imaging Systems (OIS) is located on 30 acres at the corner of Five Mile and Beck. The company wants to build a second facility next door. This plan calls for the plant to be built to the north of the OIS headquarters

For that to happen, however the board of trustees would have to agree to rezone the land from its current R 3 zoning to R&D (research

Tax rebels win court decision over real estate transfer levy

"It wasn't big money," said taxpayer David Pochmara. "There's a principle. Government thinks it can do what it wants. If they can implement a small tax, there's no reason to believe they wouldn't be more brazen in the future," said the winner of a class action lawsuit against Wayne County. Circuit Judge John R. Kirwan

ruled March 29 that county government violated the Headlee amendment to the Michigan Constitution when it levied a real estate transfer surcharge tax without the approval of voters.

Kirwan read his brief opinion from the bench and said he would approve an order settling the lawsuit some time this week. Carl VonEnde, a Miller Canfield attorney working for Wayne County, said he will wait to see the terms of the order before deciding whether to ask the Court of Appeals to hear the case.

'He buried 'em," said Peter Macuga II, Pochmara's lawyer, of Kirwan's succinct opinion. The 4-year-old case may mean a refund for people in Wayne County who have sold real estate since 1991, when Pochmara started his suit. For the seller of a $100,000 house, it amounts to $40, less than the cost of filing a suit, let alone lawyers' fees.

Pochmara, a former Harper Woods city councilmember, is unsure if he'll recover his legal costs. But he was happy he had won not only a suit against gov-

The recovery could total as much as $10 million for all sellers. But first the county has 21 days after Kirwan's order is signed to decide whether to appeal. If the taxpayers win, the county will have to set up a schedule of settlement payments.

Pochmara organized a group of 10-15 taxpayers after he was nicked for the surtax when he sold a house in Detroit. Last year the Michigan Supreme Court ruled the taxpayers might recover from the time the suit was filed in 1991, but not from the time the tax was levied in 1981. The high court sent the suit back to Kirwan's court to decide the merits.

Kirwan ruled the "plain and unambiguous" intent of the 1978 Headlee amendment was "to prohibit the county from raising a tax without a vote" of the people.

Michigan charges a real estate transfer tax of $1.10 per $1,000 of ing areas as would land preserved as open space (OS) OIS would expand northward and a parcel of land on Five Mile

- · An area would be set aside for development as apartments or condominiums (AR)
- A commercial shopping center would be placed at the northwest corner of Five Mile and Sheldon roads (C).

Any of the four would require the board to approve either rezoning part of the parcel or agreeing to a Planned Unit Development (PUD) contract with Wayne Coun-

The PUD is a tradeoff, allowing the trustees to give the green light for a development plan that doesn't fit a site's conventional zoning. In return the property owner must convince the board that the community will see "a recognizable and substantial benefit" from doing so.

To the board, that benefit could come in several forms - providing a lot of open space for the site's future residents, for example, or including high-quality elements like pedestrian paths interconnecting the whole development.

The trustees were more or less united in telling the county that they expect to see big changes in future proposals. Any county plan, Trustee Mark Abbo said, has to help the township deal with the impact of the land's development on the community as whole.

"The value of this land that you own has been created by the foresight of past and present residents of Northville," Abbo told Henry. The last thing I want to see is Wayne County sell the land, extract the value of it and then abandon it We have needs that will be created here: needs for recreation and public safety and other things. You have to address

"We're not far apart there," Henry responded. "We don't want to take, we want to give." Among the key issues addressed by the trustees were:

- The size of home lots. The two county PUD plans call for lots from 70-100 feet, too small for the
- The inclusion of a golf course. County planners asked the board if putting one on the site, sur-rounded by residential housing, is out of the question. Board members didn't shut the door either way, saying it would depend on who owns and operates it and how a course would fit into the site's overall design.
- Space for a future public park and public facilities like a school or fire station. The two PUD plans reserve 15-odd acres of stateowned land at the corner of Five Mile and Sheldon for that purpose. The trustees said they want to see at least 45 acres set aside and questioned whether the state would agree to donate the land in any case.
- The planned expansion of Optical Imaging Systems (OIS). The company has tentatively agreed to buy 80 acres of county land next door to its Five Mile headquarters but whether it will be land to its north or east has yet to be determined.
- All four county proposals show it going north. The board is firm in its desire for the expansion to stay along the east on Five Mile.
- A 24-acre section of land earmarked for commercial shopping at the corner of Five Mile and Sheldon roads. Several members of the board expressed wariness at allowing that big a development, fearing it might have an adverse impact on the downtown business

Edenderry assessment under consideration

By RANDY COBLE

Could a water main be on the way to part of Edenderry Hılls? Only time will tell.

The answer to that question could mean big changes in the lives of the residents of some homes in the Northville Township subdivision At issue, creating a Special Assessment District (SAD) to pay the cost of installing a 1,500 municipal water line that would serve 17 homes along Fermanaugh Drive and Court and LaRaugh Drive

Northville Township Director of Public Services Bill Anderson met with residents of the 17 homes included in the potential SAD on March 21. The SAD would split the estimated $160,000 construction costs among those lots.

"It went well. This was an informational meeting and we distributed the information to the homeowners," Anderson said.

The meeting came after 11 of the 17 homeowners signed a petition asking the township board of trustees to create the SAD. That's more than the 50 percent needed to legally allow the trustees to approve it.

The board could consider the matter as early as its April 11 meeting. If not at that time, Anderson said, then trustees will almost certainly take up the SAD idea at their May meeting. State law requires the board to hold a public hearing about it before any SAD can be approved.

At the core of consideration of any SAD is cost allocation: how do you divide the expense of the water main's installation among the homeowners? By everyone paying a one-seventeenth share? Or by how many feet of your lot borders the line?

If a straight share formula were used, the per-lot cost would be more than $9,400.

Input sought as city budget process nears

By ROBERT JACKSON

The city of Northville's yearly budget hearings were scheduled this week, and city council members are encouraging the public to become actively involved in the process.

City officials unveiled the preliminary budget at the regular meeting of the city council Monday, and in the process scheduled hearing dates where residents can join in on the decision making process as to how their tax dollars will be spent for fiscal year 1996-97.

According to City Manager Gary Word, the process began in January when city officials conducted goals and objectives meetings. Based on staff presentations and council discussions, the goals and objectives were prioritized for the upcoming fiscal year.

Word explained that by February departments prepared individual line item budgets for consideration.

"These amounts are then analyzed by (myself) and the city controller, which prompted further discussions with departments and their budgets were adjusted accordingly.

The city council, within the next month, will discuss the proposed budget. Word said the discussions schedule by departThe budget is scheduled to be discussed in a public hearing before its adoption on May 20. Health week under way in Michigan

April 1-7 marks Michigan's second annual Public Health Week. The theme for this year's event is

"Celebrating Success."

Public Health Week is a time to recognize the contributions that public health professionals make towards the betterment of our health. Public health measures have helped prevent the spread of many contagious diseases that were once common and have helped assure access to safe drinking water and pure food. Public health programs are prevention oriented, and many are geared towards preventing chronic disease, malnutrition and the birth of low birth weight babies.

One public health tool is nutrition-wise food choices for each stage of life in 1990, it is estimated that over one million deaths were preventable. 28 percent of which were related to poor nutrition and inactivity

Early nutrition interventions can save lives and health care dollars For instance, it is estimated that it costs $150 to provide nutrition counseling to promote the delivery of a normal weight baby. This is a small investment considering the $15,500 added cost to care for a low birth weight baby

Cost savings are significant for the elderly as well. It costs $2,100-$5.275 to treat an elderly person with malnutrition in the hospital, compared to the $300 cost of three nutrition counseling home visits.

dent athletes participating. Sixtynine of the athletes have received scholarship help and this year 29 have maintained a 3.0 or higher grade point average. Athletes must be full-time students and take a minimum of 12 credit hours.

The Schoolcraft teams, members of the National Junior College Athletic Association, met with a variety of successes this year. The women's soccer team was ranked fifth nationally; the women's cross county team finished seventh nationally; the men's soccer team won a regional championship; the women's volleyball team was regional champion, traveled to Florida for the national competition and ranked ninth nationally; and the women's basketball team was the Eastern Conference runner-up champion.

The dinner begins with hors d'oeuvres at 6:30 p.m. at the Waterman Campus Center, and dinner follows at 7 p.m.

"Our customers in Northville, Canton and Plymouth are among the first communities in the United States to experience interactivity and non-stop entertainment with this new service," said Bill Black, Continental Cablevision's corporate affairs director. Sega Channel subscribers will choose from a selection of games including popular hits, special versions of soon-to-be-released titles called "Test Drives," gameplay tips, news, contests and promotions.

Programming will be updated monthly to keep the channel

The Sega channel also includes a security feature - Password for Parents - which allows parents to select the video games that will enter the home.

Parents initiate the program with a PIN (personal identification number) system.

Once activated, a child cannot download any game that is available outside the parent-selected game rating level.

Interested customers can order by calling (313) 459-7300. Boston-based Continental Cablevision acquired Omnicom Cable, the area's former cable provider, earlier this year.

City building improvements subject of study is expected to be financed utilizing community development block grant funds, a public improvement fund allocation, and the issuance of building authority bonds.

A conceptual analysis was presented to city officials last week by city consultant Allen Architects Inc. According to Robert Allen the proposed renovation project will involve three components - upper level renovation, lower level renovation, and a fire station addition. The project would be phased in over a 6-8 month period, Allen explained.

The plan, city officials reported, will accomplish several things:

• It will meet the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities

· It will improve the building's heating, ventilation, and air conditioning operating system, and significantly improve energy efficiency within city hall.

· It will improve customer service by making the building "user

It will improve the supervision and deployment of city staff.

· It will increase public meeting space. According to City Manager Gary Word there is a significant demand for meeting rooms at city hall and the senior building where scheduling conflicts are a problem.

· It will increase the internal storage capacity for records and equipment.

A preliminary conceptual drawing furnished by Allen shows the city council chambers and three meeting rooms taking over the space currently housing the district library. The current council chambers would be renovated to fit the building and assessment departments, a conference room and four work stations. The fire department would receive two extra vehicle bays, and the police department would realize more storage space as well as a meeting

Other departments would be able to utilize more space as well, according to the plan.

Several residents attending the public meeting expressed concern that the city was willing to pay $1.4 million for the renovation project. Even city councilman Chuck Keys slightly balked at the idea, questioning the need for additional workstations at current staffing levels.

"This scares me," Keys said. "I'm wondering if we provide the work stations we'll end up filling them."

Word reminded city officials that the concept was preliminary and that no decision was pending on the project. Johnson added that he'd like to see a citizens committee formed to study the plans and formulate a recommendation to the city council.

"Our recent Waste Advisory Committee is a good example of how residents and city staff can work together," he said. "I think it's necessary that we have the input before me make a decision."

offered a neutral reaction to the decision, but said outsourcing has good savings potential.

"Our only motivation was cost sharing, which we believe will be the trend at all levels of government, to act regionally on a lot of levels to save taxpayer dollars," Kriewall said. "I believe in the future communities will be sharing services such as dispatch."

The council had discussed the matter at a study session two weeks ago, and although no vote was taken and no decision was made, news of the discussion found its way into the community

That prompted more than 150 people to attend the March 18 meeting. Residents at that time sent the council a very loud and pointed message - don't mess with police services.

At the center of the issue, the residents claimed, was response time. City officials claimed that police and fire personnel would still be able to respond to emergencies in a timely fashion, but police dispatcher Susan Hatch said that belief is not universally held. She explained to council members that response time could suffer because Novi dispatchers would be busy dispatching officers of other communities.

The problem wouldn't be they're already patrolling through Northville," Hatch said. "The problem comes when the Novi dispatcher is busy radioing officers in Novi and other communities and they aren't able to dispatch our officers quickly enough.

Novi dispatch also serves the communities of Wixom, South Lyon, and Lyon Township, a combined area of more than 70 square

The other concern cited by residents was that the police department would be vacant during evening hours. Under the proposed contract, the police department would have been locked and Currently the office is staffed by at least one dispatcher and/or police

City officials said contracting for dispatch and lockup services would result in a substantial cost savings to residents. According to a budget analysis provided by the city, the plan could have saved Northville taxpayers about $1.3 million over a 10 year period.

"Even though substantial cost savings could be realized, there is no compelling reason to proceed_ with a change to the dispatch operation at this time - particular-ly in light of apparent substantial opposition," Word said.

Bands score 1st-place honors

This has certainly been a banner year for the Northville High School Music and Band Program. Students have fared well at both the local and state levels, taking home top honors at just about every competition they have entered.

Most recently, the high school fifth hour symphonic band and sixth hour band took first place at the Michigan High School Band and Orchestra District Band Festival. According to the judges at the competition, the sixth hour band was the highlight of the two day festival.

Both bands will also participate in the band festival at the state level on April 27. Their director, Mike Rumbell, said that the bands have done consistent first division work

The high school Music Boosters are inviting all music graduates to their next meeting at 7:30 p.m. April 18, in the choir room. The boosters are currently in the process of forming an alumni association and are looking for new members. Parents of incoming eighth grade music students are also encouraged to attend.

Senators clash over higher ed funding

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

State senators never mentioned the big money, $1.5 billion, as they passed a state aid budget bill for Michigan's 15 public universities

Schuette replied, "It's consistent with our laws on opposite-sex marriages. It doesn't tell private institutions, Hope or University of Detroit, or private persons how they should spend their money. That's their business. It just says we reduce your appropriation to universities who pay benefits to same-sex couples."

expanded Sen. Doug Carl, R-Macomb County: "The taxpayers are sick and tired of special privileges for gay and lesbian couples."

Northville students continue wracking up awards with each passing week of the school year.

One month ago, students from Cooke Middle School captured one of the top honors in the regional MathCounts competition. Next came the regional Odyssey of the Mind competitions and two teams from Cooke and Meads Mill Middle schools, and one Northville High School team walked away with the top three medals.

If those awards weren't enough, Northville High School, Cooke and Meads Middle schools, and the middle school at Our Lady of Victory made it a clean sweep of the top honors at the regional finals for the State Science Olympics.

The high school and Our Lady

The high school and Our Lady of Victory placed first in their respective categories and Meads and Cooke finished second and third at the competition that featured more than 40 teams from Wayne County. The competition was held in Redford.

According to high school team member Kara Guminski, the tournament was enjoyable, exciting, and had plenty of suspense.

"There was plenty of pressure because each of us wanted to do well individually and as a team." she said

It was the second straight year Northville High School has placed first in the regional competition. The team placed in the top three places in 17 of 23 events and had a final point total of 219 – 59 points in front of second place Canton High School

The award allows them to compete April 20 in the statewide competition at Michigan State University

For senior Andrew Song, placing first is an accomplishment but doing well at the state level is the team's main focus

"We finished in 10th place overall last year and I think that we can improve on that," he said "We need to focus on doing better and perhaps that will help us improve"

The high school team consist-

Shalene Jha and Aria Ash-Rafzadeh the competition was plenty of fun, and required a lot of hard work "We were one of the only teams that put our project together by ourselves. Jha explained "We probably spent 50 to 60 hours putting it together"

Their project consisted of connecting various lengths of plastic tubing so that a golf ball would be able to roll through the maze and drop into a cup

Along with Jha and Ash-Rafzadeh, the other Meads team members were Stephen Selinsky, Rebecca Frimenko, Tim Calkins, Nathan Gudritz, Blake Robertson, Justin Messer, Sara Sarkisian, Joanna Lee, Jenna Marquart, Jim Beson, Kyle Wargo, and Powen Shiah. The Meads coach was Roy Hall, who along with Cooke coach Susan Schwiring worked to prepare the teams for the competition.

Cooke teammates Deirdre Schwiring and Danny Ferrara enjoyed the competition and were really excited at the results during the awards presentation.

"It was great to be able to clap for all the Northville teams who did well at the competition," Schwiring said. "It was exciting, and I'm looking forward to the state competition."

The Cooke team placed third in the event, and will also make the trip to Michigan State University later this month. Preparing for the upcoming competition is important, Ferrara explained.

"Preparing for all of the events is the toughest part." he said. "For the regional competition we practiced for more than two months."

OLV takes another science crown

Our Lady of Victory School placed first in the junior high division at the Science Olympiad held at Thurston High School in Redford. This marks the third year in a row that the school will go on to the state finals.

The finals take place on April 20 at Michigan State University.

The competition is a lot stiffer when you get there because you are competing against all the other schools in the county," said fifth grade science teacher Linda Okasınskı, who along with Donna Valente, the junior high science teacher, worked with the students for many months as they prepared their projects for the Olympiad

The students made their projects and then participated in elimination events at OLV similar to the regional contests they would face during the Olympiad.

The projects are based on the science they have been learning right along." Okasinski said "When they get to the actual competition they compete in the same events using the same projects from the school's elimination

Praise for Mom wins essayist award

Cooke Middle School eighth grader Jessica Davis recently rubbed elbows with some of the most prominent women in the Jessica won first place in her category in a statewide essay contest, and received a $1,000 savings bond for her efforts.

Handing out the awards at a ceremony in Lansing were First Lady Michelle Engler and Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld, as well as Trudy DunCombe Archer, 36th District Court Judge and wife of Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer.

"It was exciting," Jessica said of the event.

The competition was cosponsored by the Michigan Women's Commission and the American Association of University Women of Michigan. Contestants were asked to write about a woman they admire, so Jessica decided to focus on her mother

The winning essay is printed below in its entirety.

MY MOTHER, THE SEAMSTRESS -BY JESSICA DAVIS

It has always been a stereotype that mothers are quiet, humble women that spend their lives doing nothing but housework, raising a family, and sewing peacefully by the fire. Though today's mothers are liberated women, different than the stereotype, they all still sew. However, they don't sew, as in needle and thread, they sew together their children's lives using a strand of love. There are no patterns for them to follow: they listen to what their heart tells them will make the best final product. Their stitches weave paths for their children to follow throughout the journey of life. I feel my mother is making beautiful garments, not only my own, but my two little sisters as well. She has made strong stitches to make sure there will be as little trouble as possible. There have been many rips in the fabric of my life. One of the bigger rips was having to move across the country. My mom was there for me with a patch waiting. My mother showed me around town. I found many of my dear friends through my mom. She also told many people about my baby-sitting skills. Soon the rip was mended. My mother's fine tailoring skills have been put to many uses. She volunteers at my school, our church, the many choirs I belong to, and the senior citizens center. My mother has shown me the importance of helping others through her many activities. However, no matter what my mom has going on, she makes sure to take the time to teach me to sew on my own. She provides guidance and corrects any mistakes she can. My mom offers our family unconditional love, and keeps on sewing no matter what we do.

My mother is the best "seamstress" I know. She has influence on almost everything I do. Her careful stitches lead me into the light. I shall follow their path until the day I die. I pray that when her work on my life is done, she will be proud of what I accomplish. I will owe all of my achievements to her. I work hard to be my mother's own personal masterpiece. Her endless support urges me to do my best. She has inspired me in many ways. I can only hope that one day I can be as wonderful a seamstress as my mother.

Schoolcraft to see state aid hike of more than $10 million this year

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

Bottle Rocket.

Area community colleges will receive 5.4 percent more state aid this year, but their good luck is unlikely to hold up in future years. For Schoolcraft College, the hike will be 6.7 percent to more than For Oakland Community College, the hike will be 3.77 percent to $19.2 million. The state Senate last week approved $259 million in state aid by a 23-12 vote. Voting yes were all area Republicans.

The reason for the larger-thannormal boost is that Highland Park Community College no longer is in existence. Gov. John Engler spread Highland Park's funds around to all the other 28 colleges to boost the average over the 5 percent mark. Without that money, the other 28 would have averaged only a 3.3 percent boost.

A second but smaller boost occurred when Engler and lawmakers decided to end a personal income tax break of $250 per student for tuition paid to a college that keeps its tuition hike below the rate of inflation.

The only debate occurred over a new section to cut appropriations to colleges that extend health benefits to same-sex couples. It was tacked on in committee by Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland.

One of the places I tooled to in y 'mobile recently was Francis azlay's home. If I'd been here hen he came to town, though, I obably would have walked.

"Everyone walked back then. You walked to school, you could walk uptown and get everything you needed. The sidewalks were always filled with kids. Now people walk for health. They drive everywhere else. You don't really see people as much. Now we just wave to each other through the window," he recalled.

It was a desire for small town spirit that drew Francis and his wife here back in 1950.

"Ask anyone who's lived outside of a town long enough and they'll tell you they want to live in one. I wanted to live where I wouldn't have to travel to go to the library or the grocery store or any of that.

Northville residents join hospice trip

Some did something they may have never done before when their spouse was alive while others struggled with the trauma of traveling solo for the first time. But one thing is certain, they all shared a sense of renewal and a wave of excitement.

Passengers from Arbor Hospice's fifth annual bereavement cruise left early Saturday morning, Feb. 24, from Metro Airport for a 7-day southern Caribbean cruise.

The cruise was for those who have lost a loved one and have been participating in the Arbor Hospice Bereavement groups.

Sixty-five widows and widowers, including seven Northville residents, departed Detroit on Feb. 24 and headed for San Juan, Puerto Rico, where they boarded a celebrity cruise ship that whisked them away to such exotic places as St. Thomas, Grenada and

Mill Race Matters

Loyal reader and good friend Frances Mattison pointed out an error in last week's column. Current council member/mayor pro tem Carol Ann Ayers was incorrectly identified as Northville's first female council member.

Fran points out that the distinction actually goes to Bea Carlson who served in that capacity more than 20 years ago. Additional research will be done on Carlson for future publication. Thanks, Fran, for your sharp eye.

Mattison, herself, serves as a good example of female leadership in this community. In addition to long-term service in the township she served for many years on the former library commission. She helped establish this community's successful Town Hall series which continues to exist long after other such programs have faded. She has been an active member of the Northville Woman's Club, local Questers, the Northville Historical Society and her church.

The Plymouth Historical Museum seeks to raise $150,000 to acquire, preserve and display the Petz Lincoln Collection now belonging to Dr. Weldon Petz. They are now into a two-year fund-raising effort which ends in September 1997. Pledges to support this project can be made payable to The Plymouth Historical Museum-Lincoln Acquisition Fund and mailed to 155 S. Main St. Plymouth, MI 48170. For more information call (313) 455-8940.

Plymouth also invites all to attend the new exhibit "Plymouth-Canton Collects" which opened on March 20. The exhibit features the collections of 35 individuals including the Lilliput cottages of Tom and Barbara Yack and the "Uncle Sam" artifacts of The Honor-able Ron Lowe, 35th District Court Judge.

Another current exhibit entitled "From Penniman to Pursell" features the two U.S. Congressmen from Plymouth, Ebnezer Penniman (1851-53) and Carl Pursell (1976-92). The museum located at 155 S. Main in Plymouth is open Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is charged.

In two weeks area children will be returning to Wash Oak School at Mill Race Village. Elementary school children from the region spend a day recreating life in a 1873 one-room school. The day begins with a tour of the village which holds nine restored Victorian structures by an Historical Society docent. Tours are booked solidly from mid-April until the end of the school year in June, and then again in early fall. Particularly during the Spring months additional docents are needed. If interested in volunteering contact 348-1845. Interest is the key factor. Volunteers can be trained.

Frequently books and columns feature firsts as highlights are short trivia facts. Many of our community's firsts seem to have been lost to history. If you have any to share, contact 349-9005 for periodic inclusion in this column. Some that are fairly well acknowledged: Oscar Phillips, first child born in the Northville community. First parents were: David and Parna, both of whom are buried in the Waterford cemetery.

The first postmaster was Gideon Benton. The first tax collector was Abraham Markham. William Yerkes got the distinction of first Village President. Claude Ely served as the newly established city's first mayor. Austin Wing served as first representative of the area in the U.S. Congress while William Bartow was first representative in the Michigan Legislature.

Sam Little published the community's first newspaper, The Northville Record, in 1869. Elizabeth Yerkes taught the first school in 1827. A man named Hickox became first to preach in the village in the same year. Also in 1827, John Miller built the first grist mill and the Presbyterian congregation was established.

Most of these facts come from Jack Hoffman's history of Northville entitled Northville ... The just name of some control of the Northville Public Library.

-Diane M. Rockall entitled Northville ... The first hundred years, now out of print.

OCC faces major legal expense

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

And the winners are ... the lawyers.

Oakland Community College will pay more than $64,000 to three law firms hired by trustees to fight each other in three separate circuit court cases, mainly over alleged Open Meetings Act viola-

"While there has been a sharp difference of opinion regarding the best course of action," the settlement deal said, "the central motivation of each board member ... has been the respective vision of the interest of the college.

The board approved the settlement at a special meeting March 11 on a 6-0 vote with trustee Janice Simmons absent.

Golf card works as gift and donation

Just when you thought you've run out of gift ideas for Easter, Mother's Day, graduation, Father's Day or birthdays - the American Lung Association of Michigan (ALAM) has a present for any golfer would appreciate. The 1996 Golf Privilege Card can turn the blues of winter into the greens of spring and summer.

The golf card comes to the rescue and offers free greens fees to your golfer. For $35, your gift can be used at more than 150 of Michigan's finest golf courses. The Golf Privilege Card is valid now through Oct. 31.

While your golfer spends time on the courses trying to find a cure for a bad slice, the American Lung Association of Michigan will be spending time in laboratories, researching to find a cure for lung disease. You can feel good about your gift when you know that research, education and community programs are funded, in part, by your purchase of the Golf Privilege Card. ALAM's aim is to fight lung disease - your aim is for a hole-in-one.

Purchase your Golf Privilege Card for any of the upcoming 1996 holidays, birthdays or graduations in your life. They also make great just-because surprises for the golfer you love. Call 1-800-LUNG-USA for information.

The battle erupted in late summer after the board's 5-2 majority began efforts to fire then-Chancellor Patsy Calkins. She finally was ousted Oct. 16.

The settlement, laced with legal abstractions, said no wrong-doing had been determined in any of the cases. The law firms will be paid on the basis of a standard $160 per hour.

The three law firms and cases: • The Waterford firm of Booth Patterson, $20,500, for representing trustee Anne Scott of Royal Oak. Scott charged the five-member majority with plotting secretly, in violation of the Open Meetings Act, to fire Calkins. The agreement said Scott "believed" OMA was being violated.

• The Farmington Hills firm of Kohl Secrest, $34,000, for representing the board majority of Douglas Wakefield, Carol Crew, Pamala Davis, Sandra Ritter and Judith Wiser. They charged Simmons blocked them from doing in the open what they were charged with doing in an improperly closed

• The Pontiac firm of Hatchett,

Demalt & Hatchett, about $9,700, for representing trustee Janice Simmons of Pontiac. Simmons lost the board chair in the fight. Simmons sought an injunction (denied by the court) against trustees Rit-ter and Wiser to prohibit them from participating in the effort to oust Calkins. Simmons charged conflicts of interest and violations of the Open Meetings Act.

Board chair Wakefield said the settlement would help OCC attract high-quality trustees in the future and "remove any chilling effect" on candidates and trustees.

Senate gets tough with youth escapees

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

Youngsters who run away from juyenile homes will be treated more like adult prison escapees under five state Senate-passed bills now in a House committee

"They call them 'walkaways.' I call them escapees," said Sen Mike Rogers, R-Brighton, whose Livingston County district includes the W.J. Maxey Training Facility in Green Oak Township

"We've had two escape who were second-degree murderers One is still missing Some of them are robbers, murderers, rapists They've wreaking havoc in my dis-

"The prosecutor says in frustration. 'I can't do anything to 'em The DSS (Department of Social Services, now the Family Independence Agency, which runs Maxey) doesn't report them to local authorities

Rogers' package passed the Senate by 33-3 and 34-3 votes and allows prison sentences of up to four years Opposed were Democrats Alma Wheeler Smith of Salem Joe Conroy of Flint and Jackie Vaughn III of Detroit.

Smith objected that the Rogers bills were written too broadly She cited the hypothetical case of a girl placed in a detention facility who doesn't want to return to a home where she was abused

Suddenly we find this young woman charged with a felony for escaping because she was a run away." said Smith who lives five miles from the Maxey facility but calls the Rogers bill too harsh Conrov said his Flint district has a juvenile facility, but most "escapes" are "less than five minutes to half an hour late I guess I just don't want to see them go to Jackson Prison because they were five minutes late coming back ?

Rogers bills apply to residents of high-security and medium-securi ty juvenile homes. He contends the escapees are too violent and the punishments too light - they take away their mall privileges

Countered Smith "In some facilities, it includes a stint in solitary confinement

While the pressure to tighten the law came from Livingston County the bills affect a long list of public detention homes run by FIA and private contractors housing 1 866 voungsters

Altogether public homes house 316 high security and 526 medium-security residents including Maxey Green Oak Center, Adrian Training School and Huron Center Private contractors including

Teamsters pickets settle their grievances

One of the very issues that had the Teamsters Union out picketing the Novi Civic Center in a dispute over an earlier contract has been resolved this time in their favor

As part of the new union con tract recently ratified, union employees who retire after 20 years with the city will get health insurance. The city will pick up 80 percent of the costs, with the retiree adding 20 percent as a co-

"Before everybody in the city but Teamsters got it." Assistant City Manager Craig Klaver said

Now, the city will bank annually a sum equivalent to five percent of each Teamsters' members salary

The old contract expired in July 1995 The new contract with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Local 214, is for four years, running between July 1. 1995, through June 30, 1999

As a concession on the union's part, longevity pay has been eliminated for new hires, already onthe-job employees are grandfathered in.

Seventy city staffers belong to the Teamsters, including clerical workers in city hall, two police mechanics, one clerical worker in the fire department, assessors, building inspectors and Department of Public Works laborers.

They will get 3 25 percent pay hikes the first year of the contract and three percent for the remaining years.

The longevity payment, originally initiated to ensure that staff members stayed for years, was paid once annually. Those with over five years seniority got two percent of their salary; for veterans of ten year's service or more, the payment jumped to four percent.

Three years ago, the Teamsters picketed on several Monday nights before city council meetings, in part to get the health insurance for their members.

Boysville, Vista Maria and Starr Commonwealth, house 184 medi-um-security and 840 high-security

Rogers asked for a single bill but found it will take amendments to five separate statutes to achieve

 SB 866, creating new felony for escaping from a juvenile facility. The prosecutor could charge the escapee as an adult.

 SB 867, allowing automatic waiver to criminal courts for an attempt to escape a high- or medium-security facility.

 SB 868, amending the Revised Judicature Act to give circuit courts jurisdiction. • SB 869, amending the act covering Detroit Recorder's court. SB 870, amending the Penal Code and allowing prison sentences of up to four years and a fine of $2,000 or both.

The bills are in the House Judiciary Committee

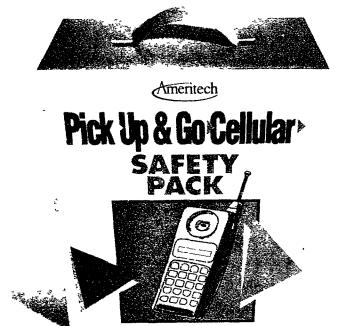

Off to France

A group of Northville High School students jetted off to a place called Agnetz, France, today to explore a sister city arrangement with that city. Though Northville hasn't entered into a formal sister city agreement with Agnetz, representatives of the two cities have paid visits in anticipation of a future arrangement. Students winning the opportunity to travel abroad in an essay competition included Kelly Personn, Jessica Pereira, Elisha Sutton, Brad Fisher, Emily Baldwin, Sarah Heckemyer, Ron Hackett, Amity Heckemeyer and Meredith Kremer. They are due back April 15.

RECORD OPINION

Randy

Our Opinion

County employs questionable strategy

The stakes can hardly be overestimated in the series of major discussions now under way in Northville

An enormous parcel of land owned by Wayne County is set to be cleaned up and developed, and the outcome will have an incalculable impact on the township's make up and future direc-

The 900 or so acres in the Five Mile/Beck Road/Hines Drive vicinity has lain vacant for years, and the buildings on the campus of the former "Wayne County Child Development Center have long since been claimed by gangs, vandals and drug dealers.

Cleanup will be costly and will involve demolition, hazardous materials removal and clearing of underground tunnels.

The good news is that reclamation is on the horizon. County officials, whose constituents own the property, and township representatives, whose constituents must live with the long-term consequences of development, have entered into discussions to finance a cleanup program and design a complex system of upgrades and construction. How's it going so far?

Generally, we've seen a mixed bag of progress and setbacks, disappointments and breakthroughs, vision and

A vast array of uses is contemplated for the land, including research and development, residential, recreation, schools, commercial and public safety. The discussions are still in the preliminary stage and there are chasms to span before there can be a meeting of the minds between the county and township teams.

As we see it, a basic difference of motivation divides the two sides: the county wants to take advantage of the monetary value of the property and gain as much revenue as possible from the sale of the land; the township, on the other hand, wants to follow a more conservative approach, opting for more open space and larger residential lot

If done right, the development can have a gem-like luster and ensure the township of model community status. If botched, the result can be a disaster of population overruns and service

Unfortunately, but inevitably, politics have entered the picture. Republican Northville Township is not crucial territory for the Democratic administration of Executive Ed McNamara. The county "dream team" of negotiators, which includes high-ranking members of the administration, figures it has little to gain by cooperating with a community that will deliver scant payoff at the bal-Moreover, county officials seem to believe that current members of the township board of trustees are negotiating from a position of weakness due to election-year vulnerabilities.

We wonder, though, if obstructive efforts on the part of the county won't just backfire. This hugely important project might be just the thing to unite the board and tone down the in-fighting that has characterized so much of trustees' interaction.

With no less at stake than the future of Northville Township, elected officials might cast aside their differences for the sake of the long-term good of the community. The conflict could strengthen, rather than weaken, the board's public image.

It remains to be seen how the whole thing will play itself out, but we remain hopeful. In any case, what we've seen so far suggests that trustees have their priorities straight and are willing to stand firm in their attempts to protect the quality of life in Northville Town-

Combined gymnastics team delivers again

Northville and Novi high schools again joined forces to field a superb gymnastics squad this year.

Last year the combined team finished fifth in the state, but this year the unit topped even that mark, placing third in Michigan, only one-half point behind No. 2 Plymouth-Canton.

The fine performance of the combined team is proof that athletic accomplishments at the high school level don't depend on individual school identity. The gymnasts rose to the occasion and battled for a state ranking, even though their team didn't carry the banner of just one building.

Think of it as the flip side of the Baseline rivalry that exists between the football teams of the two schools.

Congratulations are in order to all the members of the team, which performed with wonderful precision, discipline and grace.

The team consisted of: Erica Winn, Gina Spinazze, Mary Essary, Danean Pazdan, and Dana Ghedotte of Northville High; Stacey Williamson, Nicole Pelletier, Stephanie Manza, Liz Bucrek, and Shoshana Glick from Novi

Coach Barb Winn is to be commended as well, and special mention must go to Gina Spinazze, who placed fifth in the state on floor exercises.

Good work, girls. You're fast establishing a tradition of cooperation and excellence that could be emulated by other segments of the community.

Last's week's heart-to-heart between the Northville proper traffic regulation, road repairs and school Township Board of Trustees and Ed McNamara's

In November the county folks hit town preaching partnership. They talked about how Northville Township would be part of the team that decides how the county's land will be developed. Since then, however, county officials have made little to no effort to follow through on that promise.

Let me make this clear from the get-go: I am not, repeat not, county-bashing. I'm sure their hearts are in the right place. The object of this exercise to point out that Northville Township has so far been frozen out of the planning process on a property that will seriously affect the future of this entire community.

The property represents one-sixth of the total land area of Northville Township. It's bigger than the country of Monaco. It's nearly bigger than the entire City of Northville. Think about how it's going to change this

More than 3,000 homes could be built on it. At an average of three people per unit, the township's and the school district's populations could nearly double.

With our new neighbors will come increased demands for services like public safety, recreation, space.

Another example: the shopping district proposed in a couple of design plans for this property is larger than the downtown business district.

That could hurt the shops there now, thus impacting both Northville's old-fashioned charm and your proper-

Use summit as a first step

The city of Northville, along with downtown merchants and businesses, took a small but significant step this week in planning the future of downtown Northville they talked and, more importantly, they listened.

Northville hosted its first ever economic summit Tuesday, with more than 50 city officials, downtown merchants and Chamber of Commerce representatives taking part in the half-day seminar presentation by Doyle Hyett of the Virginiabased economic development firm of HyettPalma.

Billed as a first step in the future of downtown Northville by the city's Downtown Development Authority, participants began an important exchange of ideas and visions for the downtown's future. Like any first step, the group started somewhat tentatively and some members left the four hour presentation still somewhat skeptical. That's OK, it's to be expected.

It's normal for people to question change - especially merchants whose life blood is tied directly to the amount of people traveling through our downtown area. Plenty of merchants have found downtown Northville to be a prosperous place to do business, and I can guarantee you that if I were a successful shop owner I'd be scratching my head if someone suggested change - my first question would be, why mess with something that works? Plenty of business owners would probably agree with

But I'd be wrong. Dead wrong

Because looming over the horizon are a few communities that covet our business district and its small town charm. Plymouth, a few scant miles away, has been extremely busy building a charming little downtown of its own, and I'm sure our downtown businesses will begin to feel the effects of Plymouth's success in the not-to-distant future.

like a nice little downtown area of its own. Someplace that would serve as a quaint alternative to their already bulging shopping mall. Novi's version of its own small town charm could

Then there's the community of Novi. It, too, would also take a bite out of Northville's downtown appeal.

I guess what I'm trying to say is that there is no such thing as "staying the same." As one merchant correctly pointed out at the economic summit, "You either move forward or you fall back."

If I'm a downtown business, falling back is not a viable option.

So if we're going to move ahead, I'd suggest we take the time to devise a plan for where we want to go and exactly how we're going to get there. The economic summit was that very first step in what could be a very long process.

So to city officials, downtown merchants and Chamber of Commerce members, I would heartily endorse any cooperative effort to take what was learned Tuesday and use it as the first paragraph of a working plan that will take downtown Northville successfully into the 21st century.

Election has high interest potential

To the Editor: The 1996 presidential election this year promises to be a humdinger. For the first time in our history an incumbent president will be opposed by the sitting majority leader of the Senate. What a power battle we'll witness the next eight months.

OK, political junkies, here's your chance to get your fill of infighting between (among?) opposing political parties.

There is much ado about downsizing the federal government. Proponents want many of the services provided by the federal government to devolve to the individual states.

A prominent example is welfare. Is it forgotten that welfare became a concern of our central government because the states were derelict in their responsibilities toward those who, through no fault of their own, are down and out for a period of time?

Ominously, Congress is proposing legislation that would interfere with the medical profession's judgment in the practice of medicine. On the one hand, some members of Congress decry that government should "get off our backs," while on the other hand, they want government to legislate on matters that are painfully personal and sometimes a matter of life and death for an individual.

I believe it was President Truman who said that he should appoint only one-handed cabinet officers to his administration so as to void the matter of "one or the other hand."

first place? Our heroes and heroines in Lansing twice last week played that kind of game:

· In the state police budget, the House inserted part of Rep Alan Cropsey's handgun liberalization bill. The amendment tells the State Police representative on three-member county gun boards to vote yes on all handgun permits except where the applicant is a America and the Bible. convicted felon or certifiable looney.

· In the university and community college budgets, the Senate added Sen. Bill Schuette's amendment that cuts their state aid if the schools pay health benefits to the homosexual or lesbian partners of employ-

We have some messy bills.

First, our lawmakers have used budget bills to try for non-budget results - more liberal gun rules and fiscal disapproval of unnatural partnerships. Other, cleaner bills that would achieve the same results are stuck in committees. In effect, the lawmakers have bypassed the public hearing and committee procedures by making quick-and-dirty amendments to spending bills.

Second, they are amending acts that have only a one-year life - the fiscal year from Oct. 1, 1996, to Sept. 30, 1997. In short, they have accomplished no permanent change in society's laws.

We in the media eat up such shenanigans. The debates provide colorful quotes about gun nuts and perverts. God's law and social

The great unwashed public gets the impression that Cropsey, R-DeWitt, and Schuette, R-Midland, are in there fighting for Personally, I wouldn't mind seeing both proposals become law. Many county gun boards are a farce, controlled by police state zealots who want to disarm everybody but their own kind. And this "same-sex" marriage stuff is a fad that will go away and embarrass us when we see it in the history books 20 years from now

But conscience compels me to reveal the truth: Neither amendment will make it into law. Each must go through a second chamber of the Legislature. Each must go through a conference committee when the two chambers pass different versions of the budget

Then there's the most important hurdle of all. To take effect this year, a budget bill must get a two-thirds vote - 26 in the Senate, 74 in the House. Since the fiscal year begins Oct. 1, a two-thirds vote is necessary. No way will the pro-gun and anti-homosexual amendments survive.

Meanwhile, the gullible voters get misled, liberals and conservatives can get all revved up, politicians can get headlines and sound bytes, and journalists can earn a living.

Contrary to those who believe marijuana is not addictive, marijuana is addictive!

While not everyone who uses marijuana becomes addicted, when a user begins to feel that he or she needs to take the drug to feel well, that person is said to be dependent on the drug or addicted to it.

Here are some facts:

• There are stronger forms of marijuana available to adolescents today than in the '60s. Stronger marijuana means stronger

Health care competition to heat up

By JAN JEFFRES Staff Writer

Long known as a place for shoppers from all over to hit the malls, Novi in the not-so-distant future will also offer an abundance of opportunities to shop around for doctors.

Providence Park, now the leading medical center in Novi, will soon have a challenger in Sinai Hospital, which plans to open as early as fall 1997 a major health care complex at the southeast corner of Meadowbrook and Twelve Mile roads, close to the Haggerty Connector.

sinai's ultimate goal is to build a 200 bed hospital at the 40-acre.

a 300-bed hospital at the 40-acre property, although the now-vacant site will be developed in four phases. Among the initial services to be offered by Sinai is what is billed as the mid west's first inflammatory bowel disease center.

Sinai Hospital submitted the first preliminary site plan in January to Novi's Community Development Department, with additions turned in on Feb. 9. No date for a review by the planning commission has been set. Meanwhile, city consultants are evaluating the project.

"It'll be similar in size to Providence. It's going to be great. It's going to take a couple of months to get this right," Planning Aide Steve Cohen said.

As indicated in a community impact statement submitted to Novi in January, Sinai would like to begin building in fall 1996. In December 1995, the corporation was granted a certificate of need from the state Department of Public Health, as required to build certain portions of the diagnostic and treatment center.

In the impact statement, Sinai officials noted that one reason the Novi site was chosen is its easy access to M-5, leading into the freeway system and to Twelve Mile Road. The center is anticipated to service communities within a seven-to-ten-mile radius of Novi, including Livonia, Farmington Hills, South Lyon and Commerce Township.

The first phase of Sinai Park is

The first phase of Sinai Park is proposed to serve ambulatory, out-patients with a 60,000-square-foot diagnostic and treatment center housing an urgent care center and a women's heath center, as well as the the treatment facility for inflammatory bowel disease. The women's treatment would include breast cancer detection and maternal/fetal services. In addition, this phase includes 40,000 square feet of doctors' offices.

The initial portion of the health care complex, which would take a year to build, is expected to employ 300 people.

Within the next five years, Sinai indicates it would move ahead with Phase Two, which would also offer 40,000 square feet of doctors offices and 60,000 square feet of additional diagnostic and treatment services, as required by community demand.

required by community demand.
Designs for these two phases call for two-story buildings.

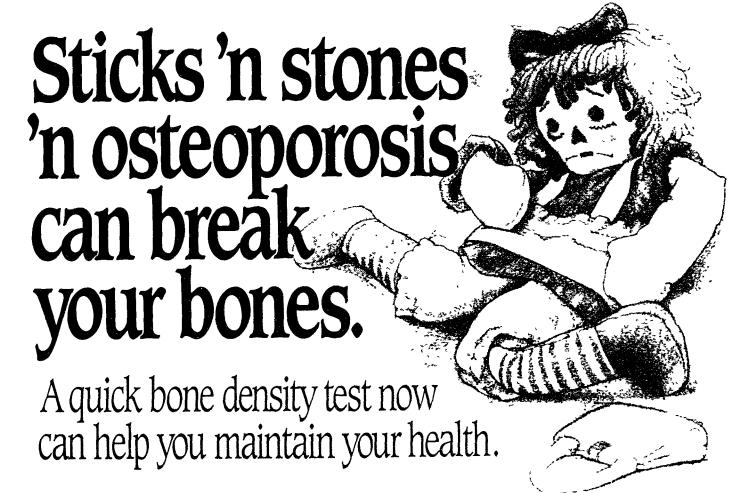

Plans for phase three, the 300-bed hospital, are based on a possibility that the state health department will okay short-stay overnight hospital beds permitting patients to linger there for 24 to 72 hours.

Most of Sinai Park in Novi will be tax-exempt, due to its sponsorship by the Jewish faith. This is similar to the status of the non-profit Providence, a Roman Catholic Church affiliate. Offices of doctors in private practice at Sinai Park may be subject to local taxes. To build on the land, Sinai will need wetlands permits from Novi and the state Department of Natural Resources. The project calls for filling one acre of regulated wetlands and almost three acres of unregulated wetlands, which would be mitigated.

Sinai first optioned the land in October 1994 for one year and now has an option on the land through mid-April, with the ability to carry this over further. The property is owned by several parties, including Emeraldbrooke Associates, Crystalbrooke Associates and Fred, Louise, Victor and Stella Capaldi.

A traffic study commissioned by Sinai found that the development, which at built-out would generate about 8,970 motor vehicle trips, would have little impact on nearby intersections.

In 1953, Sinai Hospital went up on West Outer Drive in northwest Detroit as the only hospital in Michigan sponsored by the Jewish religion. Today, it boasts 598 beds and outpatient diagnostic and treatment facilities which serve 20,000 in-patients and 150,000 out-patients each year. About 3,500 babies are born at Sinai Hospital annually pproximately 50% of women over the age of 50 have osteoporosis and are at risk of an osteoporosis-related fracture. A woman's risk of hip fracture alone is equal to the combined risk of developing breast, uterine, and ovarian cancer. Up to 20% of hip fracture victims die within one year of the injury. A aintain your health and independence by getting a bone density test at Botsford General Hospital. The test is safe, non-invasive, painless and is covered by most insurances if it is accompanied with a diagnosis from your physician. The test provides essential information to help your doctor assess the health of your bones. If you show signs of osteoporosis, your doctor can recommend preventative measures or therapy.

Mustang softball coach Karen Baird returns team to basics and mental toughness

"We can't do as bad." first year Manager Karen Baird said "We're looking at the leadership from our five returning seniors to pull the team along"

The Mustangs will need all of that leadership for a turnaround this season. Baird is hoping a return to basics will translate into more victories on the diamond

"I m a defensive coach" she said and added "I want my team to have a lot of discipline and mental toughness" $\,$

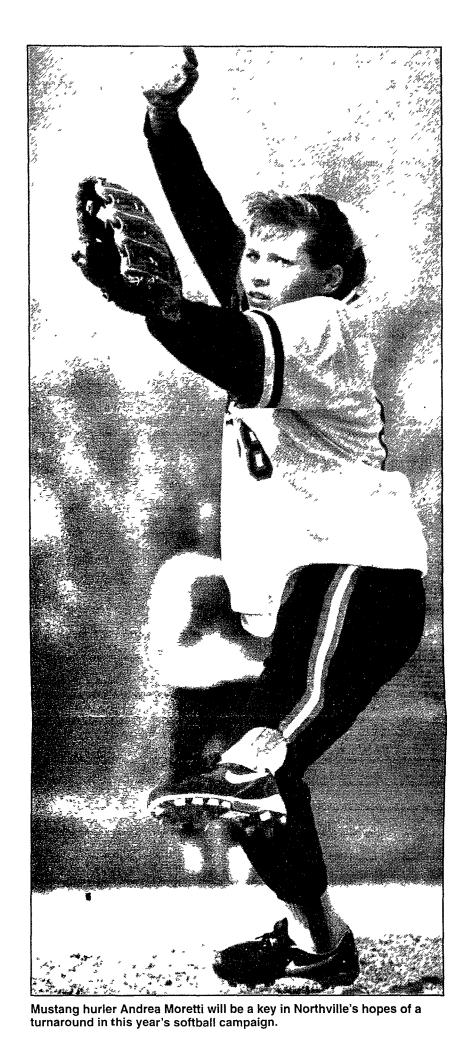

Mental toughness is something Baird had during her playing career

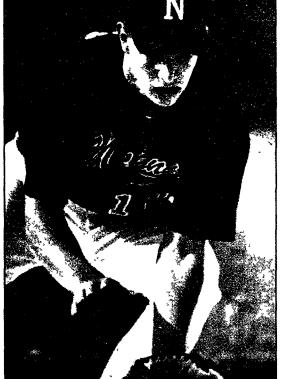

After starring at Northville High in the late 80s, she went on to Adrian College As a Bulldog, Baird played both softball and basketball with great success

She made the All-MIAA team three times as a shortstop and in 1993 was an All-American On the court Baird was a starter for three years

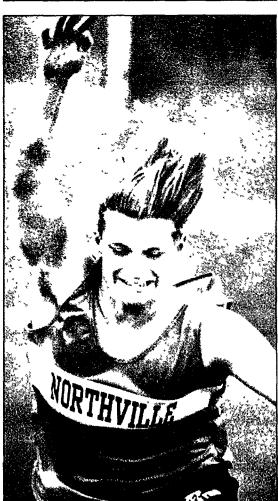

With such a busy athletic and academic schedule, she said she had to be disciplined in order to get everything done. That discipline came in handy after she was hired to teach physical education in Northyille in 1994.

If experience counts for anything, Northville High should have one heck of a baseball team this

The Mustangs feature 11 seniors and seven juniors. According to coach Mickey Newman, that's 11 quality seniors and seven quality

"I'm feeling pretty confident," he

And well he should. The Mustangs went 14-7 a year ago and finished second in the tough Western Division of the WLAA.

About the only disappointment was Northville's quick departure from the scene as Novi beat the Mustangs in a pre-district game.

But that was last year. Northville will pin its hopes this time around on pitching and team speed. Tom Willerer, Tim Smojver and K. Yoshida lead a deep staff while guys like Mark Sander, Chris Shiftar and Kyle Hitchcock have speed to burn.

"We have the fastest team I've ever seen," said Newman.

Northville will need both of those elements to contend for a Western Division title. Walled Lake Western and Canton are both going to be tough to beat.

"Our division is tough from one to five," Newman said. "Only two games separated all the teams last Willerer will be counted on to pitch many of Northville's division games. A right hander, the senior has an excellent fast ball.

To be dominant, Newman said Willerer must improve his offspeed stuff. The coach said he's worked hard on a curveball and changeup in the off season.

"We hope he can throw all three for strikes," Newman said. "That's the key. Pitchers have to throw strikes.

Smojver will be the No. 2 starter. He's a right hander as well.

"He can be a good pitcher," said Newman. "He throws hard."

The rotation is unclear after Willerer and Smojver. Phil Kozdron, Justin Stevenson, Joe Wiley and Shiftar are other possibilities.

Tim Smojver will be Northville's No. 2 starting pitcher this spring.

There's no doubt about the closer, however. Yoshida filled that role to perfection last year - literally.

The senior had an earned run average of 0.00 in 16 innings. Yoshida doesn't blow people away with his fastball.

"He's a smart pitcher that changes speeds well," Newman

Jamie Belanger, a strong defensive catcher, will likely open behind the plate. Junior Eric Sweitlick will also see time and is an excellent hitter.

In the infield, Ben Szostek will work at first. He's a good defensive first baseman. When he's not pitching, Willerer will play some at Nate Forney will open at second base. He'll also play everywhere from catcher to the outfield, Newman said.

"Where ever we need Nate he'll play," the coach added. Forney has really come on at the plate. He batted close to .500 in summer ball last year. Tim Burke will see time at second base as well. Sander is the shortstop. He stole close to 30 bases a year ago and caught most everything hit his way ın the field "His nickname is Hoover," New-

Jeff Sieving returns to third base. The senior has developed

Bill Sekerka will back him up. In the outfield. Shiftar will take either center or left. He's got great speed and is a good defensive out-

"We've got speed throughout the lineup," said Newman.

Hitchcock and J.J. Zaytı will draw the other two outfield starting assignments. Both can hit and are strong in the field.

Kozdron and Matt Olbrantz will back up in the outfield

If you think predicting a winner in the NCAA basketball tournament is difficult you should try high school track.

Team personnel change drastically from year to year. Heck, even the coaches don't know exactly how good they'll be until mid-sea-

That was certainly the case for Northville High's boys' team last

"I thought we'd be decent," coach Dennis Faletti said, "and we went undefeated." Northville was 8-0 in dual meets and finished third in the Western Lakes Athletic Association. While he doesn't have a crystal ball. Faletti thinks his squad might be stronger this spring.

"I think we might be a little better," he said. "I think we have better balance.

The coach was hoping to test that theory last Thursday in a meet with Novi. But cold weather caused a cancellation.

This spring has been really bad in terms of weather," Faletti said. "It's been tough to do stuff."

The Mustangs have been able to run, but work on field events like the pole vault and shot put need to be done outside.

When the weather finally does break. Northville will be strong in Take relay events. The Mustangs qualified for state competition in the 400 and 800 meter relays.

Most of the guys who comprised those teams are back. Jim and Tony Clemens, Eric Moore, Aneil Kersey and Pat Gordon form a solid group. Limited practice time outside hasn't allowed Northville to work on those relays, however. "We're behind in all field events and relay exchanges." Faletti said "We're way behind, but so is everybody else. Lineups for the distance relays are less certain. But Dwight Van-Tuyl, Steve Weicksel, Tim Schovers and Rob Abbott are sure to be involved. In the open events, many of the relay men will run as well. Addıtional runners will be Jon Woodsum (800) and Wes Morland (800)

Northville appears to be more solid in field events.

Josh Minard and Mike Comb are the top two high jumpers. Moore is a fine long jumper while Ty Fowler. Luis Guajardo and Josh Brugeman will compete in the vault.

In the shot put and discus Bryan Grider, Bryce Edmunds Ryan Howe and Ross Baker are ones to watch for. "We were a little weak in those events last year." said Faletti "But I think we'll be much better this In hurdling events. Morland looks like the man to beat for Northville Minard will also try his hand at the 100 meter hurdles.

Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all state to qualify Much of this money goes unused.

A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student athletes. It takes them step-by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship and includes college and conference listings

Basketball fans are wondering if Michael Jordan and the Bulls will win 70 games this season.

It would be a great feat, some-Athing no other NBA team has ever done. But believe it or not, Northville High has an even more impressive streak going.

The Mustangs have won 52 consecutive regular season matches over the past five seasons. Northville has also claimed four straight Western Lakes Activities Association crowns

Coach Dick Norton is hoping to add to those totals

Baird takes over as softball coach

"It made the transition from college to teaching easier," Baird said. Now the coach is hoping her work ethic and positive attitude will rub off on her players. So far, so good.

Baird said the Mustangs have been very receptive to her ideas.

"They're catching on to everything," she said. "They're very quick at learning things.

Just how much progress the Mustangs can make this spring is up for debate. But one thing is for sure, Northville will rely on its seniors.

Perhaps none more so than Jenny Sheehan. A catcher, Baird will count on her defense and strong throwing arm to cut down enemy base runners.

"She's an aggressive catcher," said Baird.

Her battery mate, Andrea Moretti, is another vital cog The senior pitched well, for the most part, last season. Poor defense and run support saddled her with a lot of losses, however.

Baird said Morettı ısn't a power pitcher. But she does have the ability to hit spots. "Her arm isn't totally into shape," the coach said. "But it's getting there. Jenny Frisbie, Mandy Sabo and Sara Roth are Northville's other three seniors. Frisbie is a solid hitter who'll see time in the outfield while Sabo, a good defensive player, will likely hold down third base. Roth is another good hitter who could get the nod at first.

Baird concedes that her seniors have to have a good year for Northylle to improve.

"If they falter," she said. "We're going to (be in trouble)."

The bulk of Northville's roster will be juniors. Erin Tovey is one to watch for.

She's got speed to burn and will try to use it on the base paths.

"She's a great athlete," said Baird. "She's very quick." Michelle Menghini is an experienced returning player. She'll likely start at shortstop Sarah Johnson will have an important role. She'll back up Moretti on the mound as well as play in the outfield and infield. Ğına Chiasson will split time at first and in the outfield Baird says she has some pop in her bat. Christin Connolly and Katie Krupansky played junior varsity a year ago. Connolly can play in the infield or outfield while Krupansky is strictly an outfielder. Natalie Moran and Stacey Vlisides will see playing time, too. Sophomore Kellie Reichard has a lot of speed.

Baird said she will try to take advantage of the Mustangs' speed.

"We could easily steal a lot of bases," she said. "We do have some quickness.

Much of the lineup isn't set. Baird said it'll take a few games to sort things out.

earn all you can about menopause

By ELAINE HOROWITZ Special Writer

For many women, the thought of going through menopause is a frightening prospect. In an era where youth is much prized, evidence of our advancing years is not to be displayed

Yet how do you hide the hot flashes that come on with terrible indiscretion, or explain why you can't remember something you were just discussing not five minutes ago?

Women who are approaching menopause today are vastly different from those in previous centuries. Prior to the late 19th century, fewer than 30 percent of women lived to reach the menopausal age of 51. Today, 90 percent of women reach menopause and 60 percent live to age 75. Most women can expect to live a considerable portion of their lives in the postmenopausal years - and these postmenopausal years are quality years

Women in their 50s are every bit as active as their younger counterparts and many are just hitting their stride. In addition to a longer life span and better health, women are taking a more active role in their health care decisions. It therefore becomes more important than ever that women understand what is happening to them and the treatment options available.

Menopause occurs when the ovaries run out of eggs or when the ovaries are surgically removed During her reproductive years, a woman will ovulate approximately 400 eggs (at puberty she has approximately 500,000 ovocytes - immature egg cells - most of which degenerate and are reabsorbed by the body).

When there are no more eggs in the ovaries, they shut down and no longer produce estrogen and progesterone. The declining levels of these hormones cause the symptoms commonly associated with menopause.

Some of the early symptoms of menopause include hot flashes, irregular periods, changes in short-term memory and a slight loss in bladder control, especially during moments of muscular stress like exercising, laughing or sneez-

Other parts of the body are also affected by the decline of these hormones and may have a significant effect on a woman's health. Osteoporosis (thinning of the bones) occurs in all women after menopause. In order for the bones to utilize calcium to stay strong, estrogen must be present. When the levels of estrogen begin to decline, the bones cannot utilize the calcium as efficiently and bone mass begins to decline. This can eventually lead to fractures in older

Because osteoporosis takes a long time to develop and is often asymptomatic, a fracture is often the first sign that something is wrong. The cardiovascular system is also affected by the decrease of estrogen. Studies show that the incidence of coronary artery disease increases steadily in women after age 50.

However bleak a picture this appears to be, there are things that you can do to feel good and help you adjust to the changes happening

At the forefront is taking care of yourself and staying in good health with regular check-ups, watching your diet and participating in a regular exercise program. Finding a physician you are comfortable with and with whom you can forge a partnership is vitally important.

Hormone replacement therapy can help alleviate some of the uncomfortable symptoms such as hot flashes and provide protection against osteoporosis and heart disease.

Next, find out everything you can about menopause. This includes attending lectures and programs put on by your local hospital or community education department, as well as checking out the library or bookstores for books

Finally, realize that you are not alone. Many of the changes that occur during the menopausal period can make you feel that you are losing your mind. Seeking out others either through a support group, classes or just informally with your friends can go a long way in helping to maintain a sense of normalcy during a difficult time.

You may even be able to learn some coping mechanisms that have been successful for others. You may be able to turn those hot flashes

Many voice problems are preventable

Our voice is a reflection of our underlying personality, as well as an indicator of fluctuations in our emotions and general health. For most people, speaking is their primary mode of communication and their voice serves as an ambassador to the rest of the world.

These and many other reasons make the voice so very important. Furthermore, for a select group of people, the nature of the voice is paramount to professional practice. This group of vocal professionals includes singers, teachers, actors, clergy, politicians, announcers and trial attorneys

Vocal changes can be the result of a natural process such as aging, or be a manifestation of an abnormal condition. Disorders that affect the voice may be limited to the larvnx (voice box) or may affect other parts of the body as disorders include persistent or recurrent hoarseness, a nagging sore throat, a loss of vocal range or strength, or a sense of increased effort to vocalize. These symptoms can indicate a relatively minor condition such as laryngitis or more serious conditions, such as vocal-fold polyps or swellings, gastroesophageal (stomach acid) reflux, vocal-fold paralysis or even cancer.

Many voice problems are preventable if a few simple rules of proper voice hygiene are followed. Abusive voice practices, such as screaming and yelling, or continuing to push your voice when it is showing strain, should be avoided. Keeping properly hydrated by drinking plenty of noncaffeinated beverages throughout the day is also key to good vocal health.

When addressing large groups, or speaking before an audience in an outdoor setting, amplification should be used if possible Avoiding foods that tend to cause heartburn, or try ing not to eat meals within about three hours of bedtime can decrease the chance of stomach acid spilling into the voice box and causing as well as to general health. They are not only irritants to the lining of the voice box and swallowing passage but are potent risk factors for throat cancer.

Thankfully, most voice changes are transient and tend to get better on their own within a few days. If a change in the voice persists more than two weeks, then it warrants examination by a physician. Even the most serious types of disorders that may affect the voice can usually be successfully treated by an otolaryngologist Treatment options include medications, voice therapy under the guidance of a speech language pathologist, or in some cases, surgery. As always though, the best treatment is prevention: practicing good voice hygiene and "listening to your voice" if it starts complaining to you. For more information, please call the U-M Vocal Health Center at (313) 432-7666.

Religious observance of Easter is alive

Drama, music mark Holy Day celebrations

By CAROL WORKENS Staff Writer

Easter season is one of the biggest happenings in terms of church attendance

Area churches celebrate this religious season, com memorating the suffering, death and resurrection of Christ in an entertaining yet informative way through dramas and special presentations

St Paul's Lutheran Church will present "Christ in the Passover" on April 4 at 6 p m

"It is an educational tool to show how from a Christian's point of view the Passover points to Jesus," said Mark Faerber director of Outreach Discipleship at the church. "We realize that part of the mission of the church is to reach out as well as minister within '

Doug Carmel a speaker for Rock of Israel, will go through an abbreviated form of the Passover mealexplaining each main part of the ceremony and then describing how it points to Jesus and how it has been fulfilled from a Messianic Jewish point of view

Carmel will discuss the significance of the times when Jesus broke the bread and shared the cup. according to Faerber

Any curious people of the Jewish faith would be invited to come and see our perspective on this. Faerber said *Carmel has both the Christian point of view and the Jewish point of view because he was a Jew who converted to Christianity

These are the two times of the year when people feel compelled to attend (church)," said Northville Christian Assembly parishioner Mike Mrazik of Novi 'It is one of the biggest attendance days of the year They are drawn back for a day or so because of reli gious upbringing "

Which gives area churches an opportunity to not only present the Gospel to their own parishioners but to give the community a chance to learn more about the life and times of Jesus around the time of his death and resurrection

About 1,200 people attended the four performances of The Fourth Wiseman at Northville Christian Assembly on March 29, 30 and 31

The purpose is to attract people who aren't familiar with the Gospel or church said Mrazik who plays the part of the slave in the play. It is something that is non-threatening a way to reach out to people. They can take in the story and not feel threatened

The Fourth Wiseman is a musical based on the book The Other Maji by Henry VanDyke which was later released as a movie starring Martin Sheen as Artaban the fourth wiseman

The Fourth Wiseman is a fictional account of Arta ban a fourth wiseman, who arrived too late and missed the three wisemen who had already left on their trip to find the baby Jesus, according to Mrazik The audience follows Artaban as he tries to eatch up to the other three and spends the rest of his life looking for Jesus

Lollio and Walker began rehearsing at noon on Saturday and in seven hours costumes were altered, beards were made and lines had been memorized.

About 85 people participated in the production, including 28 actors and technical and stage crew. A reception followed all performances.

About 100 parishioners ranging in age from four to 80, from the combined choirs, orchestra and drama groups at Faith Community Presbyterian Church, came together to present He's Alwe on March 31. Three hundred people attended the lone performance of He's Alwe, which is the story of Jesus, his message and controversy in society, and his ultimate death and resurrection.

Several of his disciples, led by Peter, portrayed by Larry Molloy, tell their reasons for following Jesus, played by Doug Loomer Scenes depicted Jesus with the children, the controversy between Jesus and the Pharisees, the Passover celebration, the Last Supper, Jesus' arrest and trial before Pontius Pilate, the crucifixion and resurrection.

The purpose for the play is twofold, according to Mary Kay Davis, who volunteered to be the drama and technical director. "It creates fellowship within the people putting on the program," she said "The second purpose is outreach to bring the message to

The music director was Michael Miller. The choir was under the direction of Elaine Wroe with Linda Cook directing the children's choir. Shelly Rouse-Freitag was the director of the orchestra. The guest pianist was Nancee Shelton.

"The Passion of Jesus, the last week of Jesus' life, takes up so much of the Gospel and is so important that we felt we needed to go into it more deeply in order for people to understand the importance of it," Pastor Elfner said

"It is a way to draw people into understanding the meaning of the crucifixion.

Mark King handles the money for Friends of Parks and Rec.

King manages parks' pocketbook

For many Northville residents township and city – this is a place to sleep, maintain property and raise children. It should also be a place for enjoyment and participation in community events.

That's where the Parks and Recreation Commission comes in. But Parks and Recreation found it couldn't do all it wanted to do with the money it was allotted. So in 1992, the Friends of Parks and Recreation was formed to give a financial boost to what the commission wanted to do.

And that's where Mark King comes in. (He's the owner of Marks' Small Engines on Northville Road.)

As King said, "I'm the treasurer behind the scenes. I keep them glued together."

He has 12 active members who, as solicitors, raise money for specific recreational projects in the community.

For example, among things they're raising money for, he cites, is a Playscape (a playground for children age 5 and under) which would cost $120,000, a soccer field, and a junior baseball field.

"Our organization is loose," Mark said "We meet four times a year, and I send a mailing to all members we have telling what we're doing."

The big thing recently is a "A Taste of Northville" - an auction and dinner at Schoolcraft College on April 27 at $40 a seat There's a raffle, too included in the raffle are items such as a donated kayak and a Jaguar - and a grand prize of a trip for four to Disney World with all expenses and lodging for five days, including $500 spending money.

"We hope to raise $30,000 to $40,000 with this event." King

If you would like to join Friends of Northville Parks and Recreation, family membership is $35, individual at $20, and annual renewal at

Defector to speak at Town

The Northville Town Hall Series' final speaker of the season will be Dr. Vladimir Sakharov, scheduled to speak on April 15 at 11 a.m.

Once described by the CIA as "the most knowledgeable defector on record," Dr. Sakharov gained a reputation for his unique and totally unconventional foresight into what was to happen in Russia.

Born into the ranks of the Moscow international elite, he became a leading diplomat and intelligence officer representing the Soviets. Later, he became a special operative courting Egyptian counter-intelligence agents and gained access to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who was assassinated in 1981.

During this time he worked as a "double agent" passing information to the United States.

He despises being called a defector because he came out when "glasnost" and "perestroika" did not exist. Disillusioned with the Brezhnev regime, he risked his life to become an American.

Since coming to the West, he has accomplished a great deal, beginning with his international best seller High Treason. He received his Ph.D. in international relations and law from USC, and worked at Stanford University, Universidad de Mexico, the United States Air Force, and served as an advisor to the FBI.

He has been featured on the 60 Minutes segment "Three NBC White Papers," worked as a com-mentator with CNN during the Persian Gulf War, and has appeared on NBC, CBS and BBC broadcasts.

The lectures and luncheons for the 1995-96 season are held at the Holiday Inn West, 17123 North Laurel Park Drive in Livonia.

The Luncheon for season ticket holders follows the lecture. Luncheon tickets are available for Season Lecture Ticket holders only at $15. To order, mail check with a stamped, self-addressed envelope with detailed ticket information to Northville Town Hall-Tickets, P.O. Box 93, Northville, MI 48167-0093. For more information, call Carmen Kuckenbecker, luncheon chairman. (810) 349-7227.

Kaye Lani Rae Rafko (left) discusses her pregnancy with Jenevievi Malicke and Kathy Carlson at the Northville Town Hall Series where she was the guest speaker on March 11.

By CAROL WORKENS

Although the celebrity lights may dim on a Miss America after eight years, they do not go out.

Kaye Lani Rae Rafko, who was the first nurse to be crowned Miss America in 1988, was glad to return to the Northville Town Hall Series as a guest speaker on March 11 but was nervous that her speech might be redundant.

She brushed her fears aside when a woman in the front row who heard Rafko speak two years ago said to her, "Don't worry about repeating, because I don't think I remember anything." A native of Monroe, Mich., Rafko still receives requests for speaking engagements from not only around the country, but around the world.

arrive daily for requests for appearances, autographs, or words of encouragement.

Miss America welcomed back

Rafko always likes to start her lectures with information on her family, and her talk before the group at the Holiday Inn Laurel Park in Livonia was no different, including her announcement that she is expecting her second child in about four months.

She said the rewards of being Miss America at age 24 were phenomenal. She met many giving people along the way. The program gave Rafko a platform to discuss hospice.

"Miss America was just a gift that got me closer to my real dream of opening a program called hospice in my hometown," she

About 15 to 20 pieces of mail said. "Watching it become a reality has very been exciting for me."

Now 32, Rafko packaged her stories in such a way that the audience was on an emotional roller coaster ride. The occasional heartbreaking stories of meeting the terminally ill and family crisis, which had women reaching for their hankies, were followed by the often humorous anecdotes of meeting celebrities.

Patients and family have reminded her to stay on track and keep focused on what is really important in her life - nursing.

Rafko is working on her master's degree in nursing at the University of Michigan and was recently asked to be one of the judges for the finals at the 1996 Miss America Pageant in September.

Redford, Pfeiffer film is 'Too Close & Personal'

UP CLOSE & PERSONAL BY TRACY A. MOROFSKI NORTHVILLE

While many critics rave that Michelle Pfeiffer and Robert Redford "are magic together" and that their chemistry explodes on screen, "Up Close and Personal" has an overdone, predictable plot.

For the first hour of the movie the only "chemistry" going on is stolen glances while they pretend not to fall in love.

"Up Close and Personal" is your typical romance story in which a man (Redford) helps his damsel in distress (Pfeiffer).

The underlying theme behind their romance is the lonely life of a journalist, the struggle to be the best, and the inevitable fall from fame

In the midst of Redford's dying

BY DR. GAIL MAJCHER NORTHVILLE

We all love Ellen Degeneres on her hit TV show. She is funny and makes us laugh out loud at her crazy situations. The assumption is that her first feature film will do the same...wrong.

Unfortunately this movie with Bill Pullman as the crazed lover that has a fatal attraction for Degeneres is quite slow-going and, frankly, not funny. It begins with potential as Degeneres is portrayed as a single professional woman who is having a difficult time finding a decent guy to date (a familiar theme in the real world.) Then she meets Pullman and he appears to be the man of her dreams with his wealth, nice car and good looks (cliche or what?!)

When she spends the night with him on the first date and her clothes are missing in the morning because he is having them dry cleaned, it should be a red flag that something is amiss.

For some odd reason the script casts Degeneres as the straightman in the comedic endeavors.

The movie tries to make us laugh by creating zany characters and situations but drowns itself in the silliness as the movie plods

Even though the movie's plot is practically the same as "Tommy Boy's," David and Chris' on-screen chemistry is even stronger the second time around. That, somehow, makes "Black Sheep" funnier than "Tommy Boy," and made me give "Black Sheep" five stars out of five. "Black Sheep" isn't the most

Pros and cons of selling furnished, vacant houses

By James M. Woodard Copley News Service

Which property sells fastest in today's market, a home that is furnished and occupied or one that's

That question has often been considered by home sellers and brokers. Recently, varying opinions on the subject have been heating

Realtor Dale King, broker-owner of a Century 21 franchised office. summed up the rationale for both sides of the question.

Generally, a furnished home will sell faster and for a higher price, if it's furnished in an appealing and tasteful manner," he said. "If it's not furnished tastefully, it could be a serious detriment to the marketing process.

A nicely furnished home looks warm and attractive to prospective buyers, he noted. It puts them in a positive frame of mind and helps them visualize their own furnishings in the home, and generally motivates them to live in this resi-

On the other hand, a vacant home brings in more offers in a shorter time than a furnished home. Buyers tend to think if the home is vacant, its owner is continuing to make payments on the property. And the pressure to sell will probably result in a bargainprice purchase.

Waterwise gardening

By C.Z. Guest Copley News Service

No part of the country has an endless water supply. Even gardeners dwelling in humid eastern areas have come to expect water restrictions during dry summers. Using water as efficiently as possible just makes good sense, no matter where you live and garden.

For example, traditional overhead watering loses 50 to 60 percent to evaporation and run-off.

Here are some guidelines to help you make the best use of water in your garden.

Start with good soil preparation. Adding organic matter will increase the water holding ability of light soils and improve drainage in heavy ones.

Choose plants that tolerate dry soil or drought conditions. Specific choices will depend on your climate. Garden for the area you live in by planting native plants.

Landscape with water conservation in mind. A windbreak of drought-resistant shrubs and trees planted on the windward side of an exposed site can reduce the water needs of the other plants.

Use intensive planting methods in the vegetable garden. Closely spaced plants in beds will shade the soil surface, reducing water loss.

GARDENING

Use mulch to reduce moisture loss from the soil. It will cut down on your weeding chores at the same time.

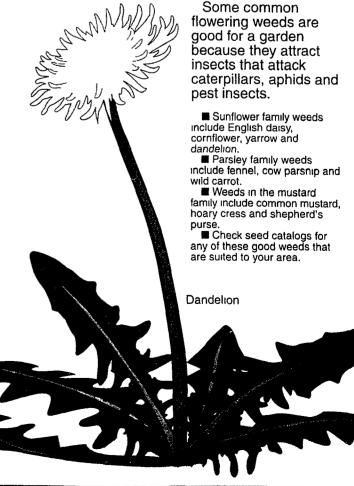

Drip irrigation will put water right where it's needed, with little lost to evaporation or run-off.

If you use sprinklers, water either first thing in the morning or in the evening to reduce water loss by evaporation in the daytime sun. Apply water only as fast as the soil can absorb it, otherwise you will lose a lot as run-off.

Reduce the size of your lawn. Even in humid climates, lawns need frequent waterings to keep them lush and green through the heat of summer. Keep only as much lawn as you absolutely need for children and dogs But those of you that need all the lawn you've got and could still use some more, try planting some of the new varieties of drought-tolerant turf grasses that have been developed recently.

Some housing experts say furnished homes are more marketable

Such reasoning is often correct, but not always. When offers come in, even though they may be low in offered price, there is always the possibility of negotiating a higher price. It's better than no offers.

However, some brokers and other housing experts insist a furnished home is much more marketable. One study indicated that furnished homes sell 30 percent faster than vacant homes, and for 13 percent higher price.

The study also reports that ownersellers have fewer problems with vandalism, deterioration and insurance. Some insurers actually refuse to insure vacant properties, especially in highrisk areas.

That's the kind of information that is motivating a new breed of service across the country, providing people who will live and take care of an otherwise vacant home while it's being marketed.

One such service firm is called Showhomes of America. Sellers pay the firm a fee of $500 to participate in the program. Showhomes recruits "home managers" - people who need temporary accommodations and will agree to furnish the residence with their own furniture, pay the utilities and maintain the home, according to a report in the "Real Estate Insider" newsletter.

"Move-in families benefit because they can live in a nice home for a frac- moderate increase in home values, and tion of the normal rent," said Kelly Rose with Showhomes. "If the normal rent is $2,000, our 'home manager' will pay about $500. That savings is their incentive to keep the property in good

Such a plan could be productive for the marketing process, unless the wrong temporary tenant is selected.

A. A recent report from the consulting firm of DRI/McGraw-Hill shows that the proposed flat-tax, as advocated by, Forbes, would triple mortgage losses and double foreclosure rates.

The study found that a flat-tax without the mortgage interest deduction and property tax deductions would cause home values to drop an average of 15 percent, costing the country's 64 million homeowners nearly $1.7 trillion. This immediate, massive and per-manent loss of equity would occur in spite of the lower interest rates projected under a flat-tax, the report stated.

Some weeds that can actually help your garden; composting tips

GET THE WEEDS OUT

The most effective way to prevent weeds is to use plants to compete with the weeds. And one of the simplest ways to do this is to heavily overseed newly planted shrub beds or ground cover areas with fast-growing annual flowers. They include farewell-to-spring (Clarkia amonea), sweet alyssum (Lobularia maritima) and scarletflax (Linum grandiflorum var. rubrum). These attractive temporary fillers germinate quickly and fill the soil spaces between the slower-growing ground covers or shrubs, thus preventing weeds from growing. The annuals later give way as the more vigorous landscape plants fill in. The occasional weed that does appear can be hand pulled or cut down.

The bottom line, of course, is to recognize that the presence of weeds is not only inevitable, but actually good for the garden.

For instance, the common weeds in the sunflower (Asteraceae), parsley (Apiaceae) and mustard (Cruciferae) famines are the perfect nectar sources for beneficial insects that attack caterpillars and aphids and other insect pests of the garden.

Also, many of the "weedv" plants are attractive. Sunflower family weeds are English daisy (Bellis perennis), cornflower (Cetaureacyanus), yarrow (Achillea millefolium) and dandelions (Raraxicumvulgarae). Parsley family weeds include fennel (Foeniculum vulgare), cow parsnip (Heracleum lanatum) and wild carrot (Daucus carota). Weeds in the mustard family include common mustard (Brassica arvensis) hoary cress (Lepidium draba) and shepherd's purse (capsella bursapastoris). Consult your favorite seed catalogs for quick-germinating annuals suited to your area.

GETTING THE MOST FROM YOUR COMPOST THIS SPRING

Despite all its benefits - both for the environment and for your garden -- composting can seem to be more trouble than it's worth. Many gardeners who faithfully compost kitchen scraps and lawn clippings find the process takes too long and when it's done, there isn't enough compost for an entire garden.

You can avoid this and other common composting problems by adding peat moss to the compost bin and when mixing compost into the soil.

Q. I would like to have information on the chair in this picture. It is one of eight chairs that are the same style. They were purchased years ago in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. All are in excellent condition and have cane seats.

What is the age, style and value?

A. The vase-shape back splat, caned seat, front legs shaped in reverse ogee curves characterize the Empire period of furniture. Chairs of this type were widely produced in New England and New

Before chair maker William

Marcy Tweed, a k a "Boss Tweed," became involved in politics, similar chairs were made in his shop in New York City. Many were shipped to the Midwest, South and the West Indies. The chairs were produced around 1840. Each chair would probably be worth $200 to

Q. Would you please estimate the value of my penny slot machine? It was made by Watling Manufacturing Co., Chicago. The patent number is 1763841.

A. The patent number shows it was made around 1930. Its value would probably be $1,500 to $2,000 in good condition.

9. I have a porcelain mustache cup that is in perfect condition. It is decorated with yellow and blue flowers and trimmed in gold. On the bottom are the words "Haviland and Co."

When were mustache cups first made and what is mine

A. Mustache cups have been around since the early 1800s. They reached their height in popularity from 1850 to 1890. The lip guard was a handy device for keeping mustaches neat when drinking coffee or tea.

Originally they were sold alone, but soon became part of dinnerware sets. Some were accompanied by a matching saucer. They were also available in silver plate. Yours was made by Haviland and Co., Limoges, France, in the late 1800s. It would probably be worth $85 to $95.

Mega Printing goes high tech

By ANNE SEEBALDT GOGOLIN

At Mega Printing, the father-son team of Ed and Mark Grimm believe in and try to deliver quality service every time - since 1983.

They purchased the business from one existing in Walled Lake. We'll always try to help," Mark said. "We'll give the same service for a small order as a large one."

Ed agreed: "No job's too large, no job's too small." He added that their philosophy is to deliver "helpful, courteous, quick service."

In order to meet their goal to better service to customers. Ed and Mark are adding some new technology. Until recently, all of their copy had to be printed by the offset press process, which requires hand inking of the press rollers and close attention. Now, said Mark Grimm, he and his father, Ed, can get even more work done.

Starting in February, Mega

We'll always try to help. We'll give the same service for a small order as a large one."

> Mark Grimm Co-owner of Mega Printing

Printing in Walled Lake can offer computer-generated typesetting from the use of their new highspeed electronic duplicator for quick runs" as well as for print jobs which use black ink. This is truly a time-saving measure. The new method will save two days for the average flyer or business card order. In addition, because the computer printing does not require watching, they can run items on the regular press at the same time. Mark said that one of the advantages of the system is that black and white business cards will be available overnight. Basic flyers should be able to be typeset and printed in one day as well. "It also frees us up to do other things while its printing," he said. "We can get a lot more done ... We are getting into scanning logos for people so they can use them on their home computers."

Another part of their business philosophy is to give back to the surrounding communities. Some of their local activities include sponsoring area softball teams, donating money to area high school fund raisers. They also are arranging to typeset and donate a letterhead for the Milford Historical Society.

Mega Printing services include: faxing, photocopying (including oversized copies), "blackprints" (copies of blueprints), and fullcolor copies (from non-copyright materials). Examples of items Mark and Ed can typeset include flyers, business cards, books, manuals, invoices, resumes, invitations, and letterheads.

Their able assistant, receptionist Julie Stowe, does just about everything. "She's an excellent employee," Ed said. Julie helps keep the business running smoothly. When things get extra busy, Ed's broth-ers, Glen and Ken, pitch in until they get caught up.

Mega Printing is located at 1123 E. West Maple Road in Walled Lake's West Maple Plaza, between Pontiac Trail and Decker Road. Regular business hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call (810) 624-6065.

Reduce your chances of an audit

Late last year, 150,000 taxpayers avoided a tax audit without even knowing it when the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) postponed plans to conduct line-by-line audits as part of its Taxpayer Compliance Measurement Program (TCMP). But don't count on dumb luck this

Before you let your guard down, you should know that, according to the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants, the decision to postpone the temp in no way affects the IRS's standard auditing program.

While some tax returns are selected at random, most returns singled out for audit contain either deductions that appear to be too high in relationship to the person's income, or items that are erroneous, require proof or an explanation, or are on the IRS's list of hot issues. Although IRS targets change with the times, here are some areas that have commanded the IRS's attention in recent years.

HIGH WAGES Generally, as your income increases, so does your chance of being audited. Based on audits of 1993 returns (the most recent data available) the odds of an audit for someone in the $25,000 to $100,000 in come bracket are less than 1 in 100. For those making more than $100,000, the odds increase to 4 in 100. HIGH DIF

When you return is filed, IRS computers compare it against the national Discriminate Information Function (DIF) system average. The IRS calculates the DIF score by using a closely guarded formula. Returns with the highest DIF scores are scrutinized by experienced examining officers who determine which returns provide the best chance for collecting additional taxes, interest, or penalties.

WRONG INCOME ENTRY

The IRS electronically matches the figures you report for dividends, interest, securities transactions, and other income with information supplied by banks, brokerage firms, and other payers. To avoid problems, it's best to report

DOING OUR HOMEWORK

CONNECTED WORLD

Long-term productivity from our forest lands is ever important.

For almost a century, research and studies have been continuously conducted by leading universities, the timber industry and government agencies. Findings on tree growth, ecology, diseases, insects, genetics, and economics guide foresters today in their management planning.

> A never-ending process, scientific research perpetuates our vital forests and forms the foundation of responsible forest stewardship.

Managing our forests today... for tomorrow's value and enjoyment.

Mitch and Aida Menschel spend most of the day on their computer and are self-described Internet junkies.

ON THE INTERNET

By Steve Schmidt

Copley News Service

He sends mail faster than a speeding postal worker, crunches data quicker than a swamp gator, dances about the Internet with as much skill as any yuppie:

Mitch Menschel, cybergramps.

The times, they are achangin', and the 75-year-old San Diego man is, too. Just because others might see Menschel as rocking-chair material, that does not mean he can't log on.

"Those that are not involved seem like couch potatoes," said Menschel, a native of Queens, N.Y. "They get older every day."

In a technological age that many say belongs more to the young and the nimble, comes this flash: They are wrong.

Nationwide, signs abound that usage of home computers among those 55 and older is on a significant upswing:

An organization for San Diego seniors, the Seniors Computer Group, has become one of the largest computer users groups in the county, with 250 members and growing.

A recent survey conducted at a national convention of the American Association of Retired Persons found that 70 percent of the women and 78 percent of the men in attendance owned a computer.

Seniors enjoy surfing in cyberspace

SeniorNet, a San Francisco-based online network for people over 55, has seen its annual membership zoom from 6,000 to 13,000 in less than two years. The organization offers discussion groups and runs dozens of computer learning centers nationwide

"I would say computers are as popular, and possibly more so, with seniors than with any (other age group)," said Gary Whiteside, president of the San Diego Computer Society.

COMPUTER JUNKIES

In many ways, seniors make ideal computer junkies compared with the rest of us working stiffs, students and anyone else who has wanted to fiddle with the machines.

Many have money. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, households headed by people at least 55 or older have double the assets of those in the 35 to 55 age group.

Many have time. Most have slipped into retirement or work part time.

"They are often looking for things to fill their time, and the computer gives them plenty to do and provides community through services like SeniorNet," said Mary Furlong, president of the nonprofit organization.

Or as one SeniorNet member wrote on a computer bulletin board: "It beats bingo and canasta."

Ann Martin, 65, joined the San Diego seniors users group several years ago, after witnessing one of her grandchildren tinker with a home PC.

Today, Martin spends several hours daily on her Compudyne 486, often tooling around the Internet. With the help of a modem, she checks in on a number of news groups, written discussion forums for those with like interests.

Among her favorites: a news group for fans of the old "M*A*S*H" television show, along with groups dedicated to swimming, coupon clipping, speaking Italian and David Letterman.

She also makes pals with people in Prodigy's chat rooms, where written live discussions take place on the commercial online service. And she likes to exchange electronic mail with relatives and friends.

GENERATIONAL TIE

Her technical wizardry has not hurt in the grandparent department, either.

"My grandchildren are delighted," she said. "When they come over they say, 'Grandma, can we play on your computer?""

Seniors often speak of computers as a link to other generations.

"It keeps us young," Menschel said.
"That's why I feel like I'm in my 40s"

Menschel, a semiretired real estate broker, joined the local seniors users group just after it was started a decade ago.

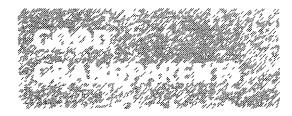

"If you were to add up the ages of those in our group, it would be billions of years old," he joked.

He and his wife, Aida, got their first direct experience with home computing when one of their children gave her a PC for Mother's Day several years ago.

"Both of us are on it night and day, from 6 o'clock in the morning to midnight," he said. Before getting a computer, he said, "we both felt a little left out."

"It's a different world with computers," added Menschel, a World War II veteran and Internet junkie. "It's like going into the 21st century."

When Bobbie Carpenter's grandchildren visit her secret garden, they enter a fantasy world of bungee-jumping bumblebees, snoozing ladybugs and fairy weddings. They see spiders spinning silk for the bride's gown and tiny toadstool seats for the fairy

Overhead a flock of crows flies by squawking rudely

"They're just mad they weren't invited to the wedding." Carpenter whispers to the children

While some may view this as imaginative child's play. Carpenter sees it as a foundation for communication with her preschool-age kin who live far away. In future phone calls, the California grandmother will fill those long silences with the ongoing activities in her fairy garden.

Carpenter's long-distance relationship is not uncommon. As a result of corporate downsizing, marital discord or pure happenstance, grandchildren often wind up living thousands of miles from their grandparents Even so, enterprising grandparents can create close ties that may last a lifetime. It's not as easy as dropping in every Sunday, but the result is worth the effort, says psychologist Kathleen Mojas.

"It is a very important connection because in this day of the nuclear family, we don't have extended-family contacts that can help to buffer children when their parents become overstressed or overextended. Grandparents tend to be more accepting and nurturing than they were of their own children because they don't have so much ego involved," says Mojas.

A close relationship with a grandfather is even more important when the traditional male role model is absent, she says. And grandparents can offer a sense of family history, a multigenerational overview, that allows children to gain insight into their own

The grandparent-grandchild experience was so valuable to 78-year-old grandfather Mike Moldeven that he published The Too-

How to develop bonds with grandchildren

Faraway Grandparent's Newsletter (P.O. Box 71, Del Mar, CA 92014-0071) to encourage positive interactions.

Much of the information is the result of efforts he made to remain close to his own distant grandchildren, ages 13 and 16, which began in 1985 with dozens of stories and family history facts, anecdotes and vignettes he wrote and audiotaped for his family In his newsletters he suggests ideas such as writing stories to grandchildren about life in the old days or co-authoring fantasy tales. punctuated with telephone "plot meetings" to discuss story line and character development.

Moldeven also shares ideas on the Internet on a grandparent chat line.

One grandpa and his grandson maintain open chessboards and communicate moves via computer, telephone, fax or letter along with explanations for the move and other chitchat.

Rituals such as weekly chess games or telephoning grandparents every Sunday can become a family tradition that may be continued when the child is an adult. Ann Hinchliffe passed on her father's penchant for rebuses, or picture and word letters, in an effort to bond with her grandson, 3 -year-old Andy.

"My father used to send me short letters from all over the world using deer antlers for 'dear' and a picture of an eye for 'I,' and now I send these to Andy and he deciphers them. It's our own special way of communicating," says Hinchliffe.

Mary Ziegert figures a card costs about the same as a long-distance phone call, and every two weeks she sends humorous cards to her six grandchildren, ages 13 to 23.

"I have one on my desk now for my 19-year-old granddaughter Dana, who was on the boys' high school wrestling team and voted homecoming queen. Now she's joining the Navy. It says, 'I'm glad we're so much alike. I'd hate to be this weird all by myself."

Geri Dow took advantage of her granddaughter's love of singing to co-write the special goodbye song with which they conclude their phone conversations: "Ta ta, toodle-oo to you. Ta ta toodle-oo to you. There's no need for sorrow. So long 'til tomorrow. Ta ta, toodle-oo to you.'

Owners

On the phone Elizabeth, 6, always asks Dow if she wants to speak to her Barbie doll.

"I say, 'Sure, put her on.' Then Barbie, in the voice of my ventriloquist granddaughter, will tell me things that Elizabeth wouldn't."

Dow recommends building bonds at as young an age as possible and making a point not to make your only contacts around holidays.

"If you let too much time go by, children will think you are just a fixture of Thanksgiving, Christmas or Easter, and by 12 or 13 they will have lives of their own," she says.

Remember children love to gossip. Don't jeopardize your special relationship by discussing any personal grievances you may have with the child's parents.

Before starting a relationship, let your son or daughter know that you intend to send letters and make phone calls to the child, and then carry through.

Connected grandparents realize that children love mail. Dow buys 5-by-7-inch plain and padded envelopes by the dozen and keeps them on hand for little toys, stickers, comics, audiotapes and small books she finds at inexpensive stores or garage sales.

Books can be mailed third-class or book

Consistency is the key so that children will look forward to hearing from grandparents. Include a picture of you at work or with your prize dahlias or wearing a new hairdo so the grandkids won't be shocked if Grandma suddenly is a blonde or Grandpa becomes bald.

Mary Haggerty maintains ties with Daniel, her 8-year-old grandson, by buying a bunch of postcards of Disney cartoon characters and sending him one a month. She also sends him posters of new Disney attractions offered by her company's employee club and sometimes tucks in a weather map from the newspaper and suggests he color in the area where he lives and where Grandma

This way he understands why they can't see each other very often.

For Daniel's 2-year-old sister, Haggerty sends boxes of baby clothes, often including a small bear, the toddler's favorite animal. Nıkki Greenup scrounges garage sales and thrift shops for short VCR demo tapes to record over for her granddaughter. (They are cheaper and lighter for mailing than regular

Copley News Service

Exercise is important at any age, but new research indicates that it may be even more critical for people in their 50s and 60s.

It is now known that most of the disabilities of old age are associated with weakness, not chronic disease as originally thought. Physically inactive people are at twice the risk of developing heart disease as active people and are also more susceptible to arthritis, osteoporosis, diabetes, high blood pressure, obesity and premature death.

In fact, according to experts, lack of exercise is said to play a role in up to 12 percent of all early deaths in the United States.

Despite these sobering statistics, one in four American adults still doesn't exercise on a regular basis. The good news is that you're never too old or out of shape to start exercising. Studies show that even nursing home residents benefit from modest forms of exercise.

Exercise, of course, not only provides a host of physical benefits but is also one of the best techniques for lifting your spirits and reducing stress.

"Just a 10-minute brisk walk will give you one hour of increased energy and reduced tension," says Robert E. Thayer, Ph.D., in a recent issue of New Choices For Retirement Living magazine.

Before beginning any exercise program, it's wise to consult with your doctor first. Discuss your training program and find out if you have any limitations that may preclude certain activities. If you suffer from any type of debilitating condition such as back pain, heart disease or arthritis, your doctor may be able to recommend specific exercises that will help you.

One word of caution: If you ever experience shortness of breath, dizziness, chest pain or fainting during or after exercise, contact your doctor immediately.

GETTING IN GEAR

Most people who embark on an exercise program have every intention of sticking to it, but more often than not, they lose interest after only a couple of months. That's why it's important to set realistic, short-term goals. Trying to do too much too quickly will only result in fatigue and burnout.

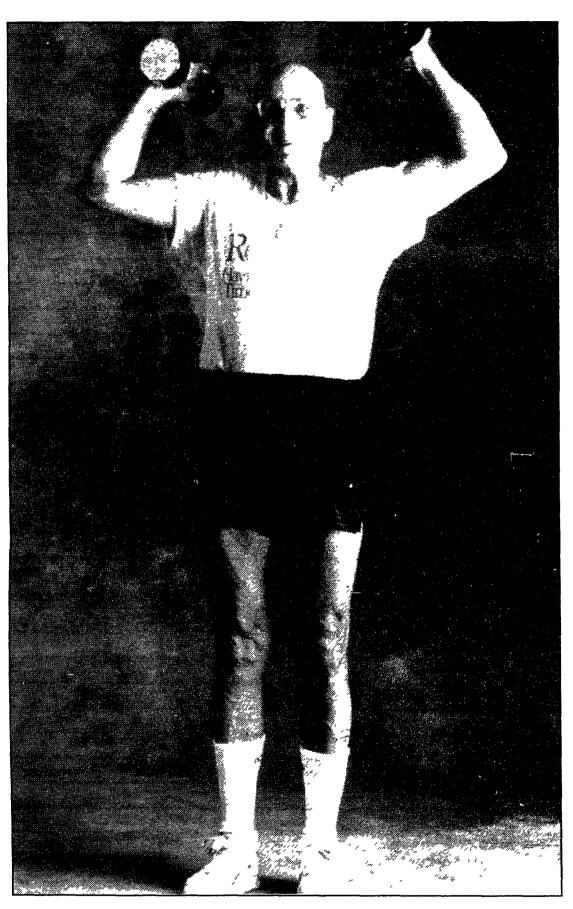

If you haven't exercised in awhile, you will want to start out slowly — perhaps a brisk walk around the block twice a week. After a month, re-evaluate your routine and determine if you're ready to increase the distance and/or frequency.

You may discover that you're ready to tackle something more challenging such as biking, swimming or dancing. But, again, remember to start out any new activity slowly, gradually building up your stamina.

Despite what you may have heard, you don't have to exercise 30 to 40 minutes at a time to reap the benefits. Research shows that 10 minutes of exercise in the morning and 10 minutes in the afternoon are just as good as 20 sustained minutes. The important thing is to exercise regularly.

If you have a tendency to put off exercising, invite a friend to join you. Working out with a partner makes exercising more enjoyable and will help you stick to your program.

Exercise has many benefits for older crowd

Weight training is helpful to seniors who want to stay vital and active.

RESISTANCE TRAINING

For years, experts have been stressing the importance of aerobic exercise for improving cardiovascular fitness, but there is now a growing emphasis on resistance training (also called strength training or weight lifting).

"For a long time, all of us thought that exercise meant only an aerobic sweat-filled, get-your-heart-thumping workout," says William Evans, Ph.D., professor of nutrition and applied physiology at Pennsylvania State University.

"But over the past 12 years my colleagues and I have found that this kind of exercise — beneficial as it is — does not build muscle power or prevent age-related loss of muscle. Resistance training does."

The prevailing myth used to be that resistance training was of little benefit to people over 50, but recent studies show that after just 12 to 15 weeks of weight training, 50- and 60-year-olds can be stronger than they have ever been in their lives. Even more impressive is the fact that people in their 90s were able to double their strength through resistance training.

Resistance training is the process of building muscles by working out against resistance, either by lifting weights or using a machine or large rubber bands. Fortunately, you don't have to invest in a lot of expensive equipment to reap the benefits of weight training. Plastic bottles or milk jugs filled with water or sand work well as weights.

While weight lifting may sound too strenuous for seniors, it is actually safer than aerobic exercise since it doesn't tax the heart. Even frail nursing home patients can benefit from weight-bearing exercise.

People who engage in resistance training find that they have more energy, greater endurance and are able to perform many of the activities and tasks that they couldn't do before.

Resistance training helps to build muscle, strengthen bones, and reduce the risk of diabetes, heart disease and high blood pressure. It also helps to trim fat, alleviate arthritis and reduce the risk of fractures.

The best exercise program, of course, is one that combines strength training with a cardiovascular workout.

If you like the support and camaraderie that a class offers, you may want to join a gym or health club. Many offer classes geared specifically to older adults.

Smart eating habits

Although there is no magic formula for living longer, experts say one of the most important things you can do to protect your health (and potentially lengthen your life span) is to eat a healthy, wellbalanced diet.

The American Heart Association offers these tips for better nutrition:

Eat a variety of foods from each of the basic food groups. Get more of your energy from carbohydrates and less from fat

Learn to read food labels and check the nutritional value of the foods you buy. Pay close attention to the fat, cholesterol and sodium content.

Look for low-fat or nonfat versions of your favorite foods, including deli meats, cheeses, ice cream, pasta sauces, soups and more. Try to keep your daily fat intake to less than 30 percent of your total calories and your saturated fat intake to less than 10 percent.

Limit your sodium intake to 3,000 milligrams per day. When cooking, consider using herbs, spices and juices as seasonings instead of salt.

Use low-fat cooking methods such as baking and broiling rather than frying.

Watch your blood cholesterol level and try to consume no more than 300 milligrams per day.

For many, home is in the Sunbelt

By Jennifer Plantier

Copley News Service

Senior citizens who decide to relocate upon retirement find that there are many things to consider. What regions and communities appeal to them most? What kind of home is most practical? What kinds of facilities and services would be most helpful as they grow older?

For others, leaving the homestead behind is unthinkable. Fortunately, there are services available in most communities to help them live on their own.

SUNNY CITIES

The mild climates of many Southern locales — in both the East and West of the United States — attract active seniors who intend to spend lots of time outdoors. Florida, South Carolina, Arizona and California have had kind winters, recreational opportunities and senior-friendly communities for years. However, fine retirement communities are popping up all over — Maryland, Nevada, New Jersey and Washington state included.

The best of these neighborhoods offer beautiful scenery, attractive homes, lots of activities and access to all the necessities from shopping to health care. In most cases, residents pay a reasonable monthly maintenance fee for grounds-keeping and access to the clubhouse, golf course or any other activities.

New Choices for Retirement Living magazine has published its pick of 20 of the best retirement communities in the United States. The following winners boast all the amenities listed above, and are considered some of the best values around.

Arizona — Pebble Creek and Sun Lakes Resort Communities near Phoenix; Saddle Brooke Resort Community near Tucson.

California — Oakmont, north of San Francisco and Sun City Palm Desert.

Colorado — Battlement Mesa, 90 miles southwest of Aspen

Florida — Kings Isle near Palm Beach, Pennbrooke Fairways near Ocala and Timber Pines near Tampa.

After retirement, many people choose to live in a warm-weather climate where they can play year-around.

Maryland — Heritage Harbour, Annapolis and Villa Cortese at Leisure World, northwest of Washington, D.C.

Massachusetts — The Villages at Great Hill near Boston.

Nevada — Sun City Las Vegas. New Jersey — Lake Ridge, 60 miles south of New York City.

North Carolina — Carolina Trace Country Club south of Raleigh

South Carolina - Dataw Island and Willbrook Plantation near Charleston.

Texas — Country Place, Houston. Washington — Providence Point, Seattle and Port Ludlow, 90 miles north of Seattle.

Many more areas are now courting seniors like never before. Quiz Realtors, read magazines and do some traveling before deciding on an area. There's even a new service called Stage Three, designed to be a source of information about gated senior communities in Florida, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia. It helps seniors narrow down their search by rating more than 100 communities according to a detailed criteria.

For a brochure, write to Stage Three Inc., P.O. Box 271, Ridgefield, CT 06877.

Of course, moving to a new community will require some adjusting. Once you do find a suitable roost, get out there in the community. Pursue your favorite interests or discover new ones. Get involved by volunteering around town or take advantage of a community calendar full of social events.

OTHER OPTIONS

Seniors who must rely, to some extent, on the care of others have several housing options to choose from themselves. When the full-time care of a nursing facility is just not necessary, they can consider valuable alternatives like assisted living facilities and even home-care agencies.

Continuing care. Residents of continuing care retirement communities remain active and independent as long as possible. receiving just the amount of help they need

Staying home possible, thanks to caregivers

By Jason Zappe

Copley News Service

The memories of the last days of a loved one are haunting enough without the added image of a cold sterile hospital room. With people living longer, attitudes toward dying away from home changing and hospitals adopting less-intrusive care management, caregiving at home is on the rise.

For those with terminal illnesses, being at home until the end makes the last days more comfortable for everyone involved. Although this sounds like an easier task than being admitted to a hospital, finding the right kind of home care and assistance can be daunting. Trying to find home-care assistance, or a spouse or other family member assuming the role of a caregiver, can be extremely stressful under such circumstances. But there is plenty of help and a variety of levels of home-care assistance available.

Levels of home-care assistance range from once-a-week visits from a nurse to 24-hour nursing care. Depending on the level of illness and type of insurance, costs can be very manageable. Also, the level of caregiving ranges from taking care of a spouse inflicted by chronic back pain to a quadriplegic spouse who needs a much higher level of assistance. But in all these cases, caregiving is not 100 percent; those being taken care of do have their own levels of independence.

The important thing for those who become caregivers is to work with the caregivee to find common ground as to how much assistance is needed and wanted. This is extremely important because nobody wants to feel totally useless. In addition, the caregivers must also remember to set aside time for themselves.

In many cases, being a caregiver can be emotionally and physically exhausting without the right kinds of support. Often it appears that the caregiver is overlooked and underappreciated, and at times the caregiver may feel this way.

Support groups — including family members — abound that can provide emotional support. If these two areas are worked out early in the caregiver's new responsibilities, it won't create problems down the road.

Being a caregiver should not turn into a full-time job no matter what the circumstances. Those who only need minor care in the early stages of an illness or injury will require more as the illness spreads or the injury worsens. This is when it is important to find the right kind of care, whether it is a nursing home or bringing someone in to help out

When my father's cancer metastasized to his lungs and he was no longer able to drive and was confined to a small, 45-minute-limit portable oxygen tank, my mother had to become the caregiver. But this was extremely difficult for her. because my father had played that role for more than 15 years — when my mother was disabled in a car accident. She first turned to their doctors.

Depending on the illness — Alzheimer's, cancer. Parkinson's or arthritis — consulting with the doctor is the first step. The doctor can refer patients to various hospice agencies, outpatient services from the hospital and agencies that will provide inhome medical equipment, such as oxygen tanks. Other sources for finding the right kind of home-care needs are:

The American Association of Retired Persons, (202) 434-2277, offers plenty of free publications focusing on long-term care issues and other related services.

National Institute on Aging, National Institutes of Health. (301) 496-1752.

National Council on Aging, (202) 479-1200, will provide referrals to national and local services.

Aging parents with adult children away from home can turn to the increasing number of adult day-care centers. While arrangements can be made by adult children out of state, this also makes sense for adult children living in the same town. During the day parent(s) are taken to a center and are provided for with varying levels of activities and supervision.

As the sandwich generation has sought out day care for children. looking for the right kind of adult day care requires the same amount of research. Having already sifted through handfuls of day-care centers for their kids, looking for the right one for a parent is a little easier. Before signing up for adult day care, check with the parent's physician and ask for referrals from the abovementioned agencies.

If the condition is beyond being transported from the home, and a family member cannot become the caregiver, it is time to look for a home-care professional to come to the house. Again, the first stop to make is with the physician or nurse. Often the nursing staff has more information since they work on a more regular basis with the ailing patient.

In the case of my father, his nurse was always the one with the right answer and the helpful smile. This extra care made it easier on everyone.

Another agency to contact about homecare assistance is the National Association for Home Care, (202) 547-7424. The organization functions as a lobbying group to Congress and produces several publications that focus on home-care issues.

In her book "Hiring Home Caregivers" (Impact), Helen Susik suggests using the fol-

Many older people use computers to look back as much as forward.

With word-processing programs, some like to write family histories to pass on to children.

Others construct genealogy charts from software down-loaded from bulletin boards and other outlets.

Some see their computers and modems as social lubri-

"Being able to communicate throughout the country and the world is an added bonus at a time of life when some of us, not all, apparently, are becoming more limited in our ability to gad about," reads one message recently posted on SeniorNet.

Paul Elarde, president of the San Diego Seniors Computer Group, said many older users prefer to learn their way around cyberspace from their generational peers.

"They'd rather learn from a senior than a grandson," said Elarde. "They feel embarrassed to have some young person running rings around them."

Many seniors don't mind, however, leaving the weaponry to the kids.

Shoot-'em-up software programs that feed a need for vicarious violence — Doom, Wolfenstein 3-D and the like — appear less popular among older computer jockeys.

ON-LINE OFFERINGS

While SeniorNet is available through America Online, other major commercial services also make a pitch for seniors.

CompuServe maintains a forum that includes on-line talks and information on Social Security, health and other subjects. Prodigy customers can tap into a wealth of bulletin boards on senior-related topics.

For those who cannot afford a computer, SeniorNet allows seniors to tap into cyberspace at 55 learning centers it operates in conjunction with community colleges and other institutions nationwide.

and when on vacation so the child, who hasn't visited since she was 3 months old, will be familiar with them and their home. Their efforts paid off.

"When we visited her when she was 2, she recognized us and came running up to us at the airport.

Also, when the child had chickenpox, she played a VCR tape we made of us with her in the snow so many times that she memorized every word," says Greenup.

Home care. This option describes seniors who live at home and are cared for by family members, home health aides and/or visiting nurses. Home-care agencies provide a range of caregivers including physicians, nurses, social workers, dietitians, pharmacists and other aides.

Those who don't need regular health care in their home can also access helpful services like transportation, house-keeping, home repair, social activities and other community services provided by local agencies.

Home-care workers provide services ranging from running errands to cooking and cleaning. As the graying of America continues, this service is becoming critically necessary.

Home-care agencies provide for many of today's seniors' needs in the home, but when illness becomes terminal or severely debilitating, home hospice care is the next step. Hospice has traditionally meant a safe haven, and in more modern times it has meant a safe haven for AIDS patients to live out their last days. Today, it also means having qualified personnel come into the home to care for a terminally ill loved one.

Staying home possible, thanks to caregivers

Hospice care can be referred from the physician. There are many legalities involved in arranging for hospice care, such as when the patient actually needs as opposed to the patient wanting it. Check with your doctor for complete information in your state.

Hospice care, while someone may be there 24 hours a day, is not intrusive. The staff is trained to provide comfort and support to the patient, not get involved in the personal life of the patient and interfere with the family.

When hospice workers were finally called to my parents' home they worked in shifts and provided pain management as well as seeing to all his other medical needs. The comfort of knowing that 100 percent of a qualified person's attention focused on his needs was an incredible relief.

Hospice is covered by Medicare, and some elements are covered by Medicaid and other medical insurers. You can call your insurer to find this out. In the case of my father, the hospital that was treating had an arrangement with a hospice and most of it was covered by his insurance and was taken care of with little work on my part.

While it may not be the primary goal of hospice to have the patient die at home, many families prefer that a loved one suffering from a terminal illness be allowed to die at home. Hospice workers will assist in this decision. One of the more important things to remember during the last hours of a loved one's life is not to panic. Hospice workers will console and advise — but never force — family members on what to do

One of the first things that many family members do upon the death is to call 911—never do this. Emergency medical technicians will arrive to attempt of save a person's life—even if there is no pulse—and assume control of the situation. Hospice workers will provide support and reassurance during this event. They will call the selected mortuary for removal of the body.

very family has its traditions. Gathering for Sunday dinner. Marking anniversaries and celebrating birthdays. Unfortunately, some families share more than happy times . . . they also share the risk of certain illnesses.

Breast cancer—which now strikes one in nine American women—is among them. If your mother, grandmother, aunt or sister has been diagnosed with this disease, your doctor probably has explained the added risk you face. But unlike women in past generations, you can put time and technology on your side.

We at the Marian Women's Center, St. Mary Hospital, encourage you to see your doctor regularly whatever your age and, once you reach 40, to see us for a mammogram. Our mammography services are designed to give you peace of mind by bringing together certified radiologists and staff, personalized education and high-tech imaging equipment approved by the American College of Radiologists.

Make mammography and regular breast exams a new family tradition. For more facts on mammography services and other programs at the Marian Women's Center just call us at (313) 655-3314.

Editor's Letter

Dear Readers,

hey say April is the cruelest month. Sunny and warm one day, rainy the next. Just as we spot the first sign of crocusses peeking above the ground, we get hit with one of those late-winter snow storms. And if that's not enough to make you crazy, how about the beginning of allergy season? Apparently, while Spring struggles to bring forth the buds and bushes and lovely green things that signal the season, also flying around in the air are the allergens that cause your eyes to itch and your nose to run.

But please don't despair. Those crocusses are waiting underground, along with daffodils and tulips, to pop up in colorful array around your garden. You may see a robin hopping across your lawn, a sure sign of more feathered friends. I always think of April as a time of regeneration, new birth. Although it's often difficult to find them, April does offer up several exquisite days of warmth and sunshine.

Our feature this month focuses on how you can cope with Spring allergies. Unfortunately, Michigan is plagued by high levels of ragweed, which cause some of the worst allergy symptoms. But they don't start until later in the season; tree and grass pollens are flying high this month.

We also share some news on those great staples: carrots, potatoes and apples. A little too early in the season for some of their more succulent siblings, these vegetables and fruits are good, and good for you, any time of year. (Did you know the Granny Smith Apple is really named after a granny? It was named in the 1800s for Marie Ann Smith of Australia.)

Please read about the importance of getting a health and fitness assessment before beginning a strenuous exercise routine. Some are quite unique, such as the one we feature from the Franklin Fitness & Racquet Club, others are less elaborate. The point is to find out as much as you can about your body, so you can make the most of your efforts, both short and long term.

In this issue, we include some straight talk about your teeth, and we'll be visiting the subject of dental care again in the future.

Please write and tell us what other subjects you'd like us to cover. We would enjoy hearing from you!

In good health,

Cathy J. Smillie Editor

ALLERGIES

Start Snifflin' and Sneezin', It's Allergy Season

Forget jolly. 'Tis the season to be sneezin'. The hay fever holiday is upon us - and nowhere is that more apparent than here in the Midwest.

ichigan has one of the highest levels of ragweed, resulting in some of the worst allergy suffering in the country, says William Solomon, M.D., professor of Internal Medicine in the Allergy Division of the University of Michigan Medical Center. But that's getting ahead of ourselves. You don't have to worry about ragweed for another couple of months. Tree and grass pollens are flying high now. And, of course, there are all kinds of allergens that affect people year-round.

An estimated 50 million Americans suffer from an allergy of some sort, reacting to everything from ice cream to cat dander to perfume. And that number is increasing.

Some people hear "allergy" and think "ho hum," but the problem is a serious one, say allergists.

"It's the most common illness in the country," says Warren Brandes, D.O., an otorhinolaryngologist (ear, nose and throat doctor) at Oakland General Hospital. If that doesn't surprise you, maybe a few numbers will: $2 billion are spent each year on over-the-counter and prescription medicines and $200 million is lost in missed school days and work productivity, says Brandes.

Ragweed accounts for much of the problem. It's the single biggest cause of allergies in the United States, says Lawrence Sweet, M.D., head of the Section of Clinical Allergy at William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak. It grows in areas where the land has been disturbed. So, while 10 to 15 years ago the Upper Peninsula offered some respite for allergy-sufferers in Michigan, it too has been populated since that time and now is just as much a ragweed haven as anywhere else.

The green, leafy plant grows everywhere and the pollens blow for miles, spreading the sneezing dust across the state.

So that's the bad news. The good news is there are plenty of good treatment methods for hay fever caused by ragweed and other allergens. While there's been no major breakthrough in allergy care, there are some substantial improvements over earlier medications, says Dennis Ownby, M.D., director of the Henry Ford Health Systems Allergy Research Lab.

"Medicines are becoming more and more efficient," he notes. One example of this is prescription antihistamines that don't make patients drowsy - a serious side effect in the past. As a result, Ownby says fewer people need to more invasive undergo the immunotherapy (allergy shots) to control their symptoms.

What, exactly, should patients expect from any type of method they choose?

"Good management should get rid of 60 to 80 percent of symptoms," says Ownby. "You certainly should notice a real improvement."

The best approach to allergy relief is avoidance of the allergens that bother you (see sidebar for tips.) If that's

Allergies through the ages

ou've probably heard someone refusing to believe he is allergic to something because he "never was allergic to it before." But allergies can hit any one, any time in his or her life. Research does indicate that allergies and asthma probably are inherited, even if they don't wreak havoc for many years to come. Here's a general look at when allergies hit:

- Most allergies can start when a child is as young as 2 to 4 years old.
- From age 10-20, expect allergies to be most bothersome; this is a peak time for them to cause problems, though researchers aren't sure why. Women are a little more likely to have allergies at this time.

- In middle age, allergies stay fairly constant, and may even lessen slightly in severity. New allergies usually don't develop after age 40.
- In older adulthood, only about 20 percent of the people who had allergies still do.

The most common culprits ere are a few of the most common substances that people are allergic to:

- Inhalants, such as pollens, mold spores, animal products (dander, saliva, urine), house dust, and house dust mites.
- Foods such as cow's milk, eggs, chicken, shellfish, whitefish, peanuts, soybeans, wheat products, chocolate and celery - plus products containing one or more of these.
- Food additives, such as sulfites (used as a preservative) and nitrates/nitrites. Also under scrutiny by researchers are Aspartame and Monosodium glutamate (MSG).

- Drugs such as penicillin.
- Substances that touch the skin, such as plant oils; cosmetics and perfumes; nickel in jewelry or on buckles or undergarment fasteners; hair dyes; topical medications; and occupational chemicals.

- Information from the American Academy of Allergy and Immunology

Allergies play hardball with kids

hildren are especially hard hit when it comes to allergies, for several reasons. First, they're susceptible to more pollutants and so have more allergies, says Warren Brandes, D.O., an ear, nose and throat doctor at Oakland General Hospital. Common childhood allergies are ragweed, cat and dog dander, milk, wheat products and peanuts, he says.

Second, their symptoms may be more widespread, and include an itchy, runny nose; diarrhea; body itching; and facial rashes.

Third, over-the-counter remedies don't usually work well on kids, so they need to see an allergist sooner.

Finally, since kids aren't always able to tell parents what they're feeling, their allergies can be confused with colds.

There is hope, though, says Brandes: kids do grow out of many allergies.

Mothers can help their children earlyon by breast-feeding, which seems to reduce the development of allergies during breast-feeding, says Alan Kwaselow, M.D., an allergist with the Detroit Medical Center's health care in Novi and Detroit.

Nursing moms should avoid foods such as shellfish, peanuts and eggs which may cause an allergic reaction in an infant, he adds. Removing stuffed toys from the baby's crib, and pets from the child's room also can reduce exposure to allergens, says Kwaselow.

Look in the child's classroom for other potential allergens, says Hugh Mackechnie, M.D., an allergist with the Henry Ford Health Center's Grosse Pointe Pierson and Fairlane clinics. If a youngster is experiencing allergy flare-ups at school, a classroom pet may be the culprit.

There also are times when an allergy may not be the problem at all. "There are some children whose symptoms totally disappear when a parent stops smoking," says Dennis Ownby, M.D., director of the Henry Ford Health Systems Allergy Research Lab. Exposure to cigarette smoke causes stuffiness, a runny nose or watery eyes, much like allergies. Smoke also increases a child's risk of sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), hospitalization for pneumonia, asthma emergencies and risk of lung cancer, he notes.

ore is known about asthma than ever, and treatments are better than ever, yet sufferers are sicker, deaths are more frequent and the number of people with the disease is increasing, according to a number of studies.

In the last 10 years, the number of cases in children also has increased rapidly, says Dennis Ownby, M.D., director of the Henry Ford Health Systems Allergy Research Lab. This makes asthma the most common chronic disease among youngsters.

According to Ownby, between 1980-82, 5 percent of the children in the United States had asthma; that figure increased by 50% from 1987-89.

Air pollution is one of the reasons, proven by the fact that children in the city are more prone to asthma than rural kids, he says. Also, homes are better insulated and more airtight - so there's less air turnover and more chance of dust mites.

Asthma is not the same as allergies, although about 30 percent of people with allergies eventually develop asthma, a condition in which the lungs' airways narrow, leading to inflammation and fluid in the airway walls that restrict air to the lungs.

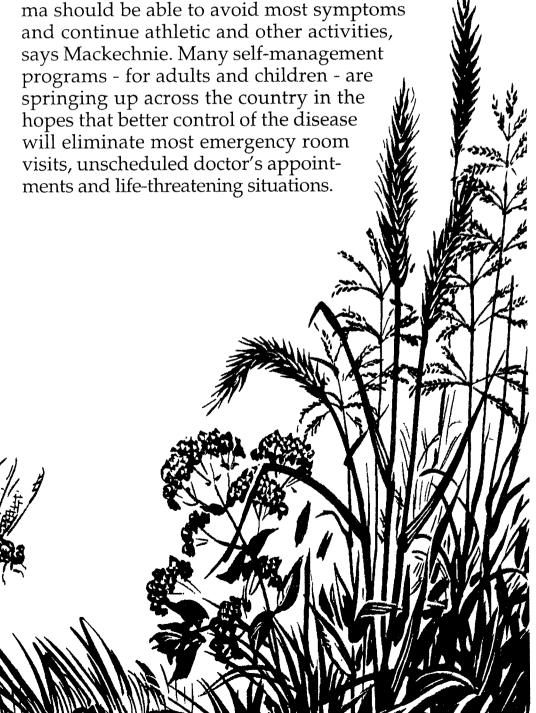

In addition to allergies, asthma can be caused by infections, fumes, exercise, cold air or even emotions, says Hugh Mackechnie, M.D., an allergist with the Henry Ford Medical Center's Grosse Pointe Pierson and Fairlane clinics.

The National Institutes of Health is undertaking a major study looking at the reasons why asthma is increasing so dramatically in the inner cities, and what can be done to combat it, says Lawrence Sweet, M.D., head of the Section of Clinical Allergy at the William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak. Detroit, he notes, is one of the cities under study.

Symptoms of asthma include wheezing, coughing, shortness of breath and tightening in the chest.

When properly treated, people with asth-

Avoidance is the best medicine

he best way to deal with allergies is, quite simply, to avoid the stuff you're allergic to. Of course, sometimes that's easier said than done, but here are a few tips from the experts on how to stay clear of allergens.

Concerning yourself

- Stay indoors and use the air conditioner during peak allergy times. Pollen counts are highest about 6 a.m. on days with sun and light wind. Pollen counts are lowest after a heavy rainfall.
- Wear a protective allergy mask when you're doing yardwork.
- Be especially cautious on windy days when pollen really takes flight.
- Avoid areas where molds thrive, such as deep shade, heavy vegetation, piles of leaves and wooded areas.

Take your vacation during pollenating season to somewhere else, pollen-free.

Concerning your home

- Dust is a common allergen. Avoid it by covering pillows, mattresses and box springs - all big dust collectors - in impermeable plastic coverings.
- Avoid feather beds, comforters and pillows. Use synthetic.
- Buy only wicker or wood furniture for bedrooms. Save the upholstered furniture for another room.
- Window treatments should be easily washable drapes or Venetian blinds rather than fussy, difficultto-clean curtains.
- Use a dehumidifier if moisture is in the air. Dust mites thrive in moist areas.

- Wash bed linens in hot water to kill dust mites.
- Clean room air humidifiers regularly where the molds might grow. Don't over-humidify, which encourages molds and mites. A winter home should be kept at 68-70 degrees with 30 percent to 35 percent humidity.
- In the summer, an air conditioner will help filter pollen grains. Don't sleep with the windows open.

Concerning your pets

- If you can't remove a pet that is causing allergies, at least restrict the animal to a few rooms - but not the bedroom. Carefully vacuum every
- Keep pets inside to reduce the likelihood that they will bring in pollen grains.

The dangerous ones

hile allergic reactions to these substances are uncommon, they can have dangerous - even deadly - implications.

People who are allergic to the following items can have what is called an anaphylactic reaction to the allergens, says Lawrence Sweet, M.D., head of the Section of Clinical Allergy at the William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak. This reaction includes a skin rash, such as hives; breathing difficulty; a drop in blood pressure; and a loss of consciousness.

Still, he notes, few people die as a result of an anaphylactic reaction - for example, only about 40 people die of insect stings in the United States each

The dangerous allergens are:

- bee and other insect stings
- food, such as peanuts
- medicine, such as penicillin
- latex, such as gloves and condoms

Putting allergies to the test here are several ways allergists say they determine what has a patient scratching, sneezing and sniffling. A medical history taken by an allergist who knows what questions to ask reveals much about where an allergen lurks. A skin test, in which minute amounts of suspected allergens are injected under the skin to see if a postive reaction occurs is another option. A positive test doesn't necessarily mean a person has allergic symptoms - only that he or she is predisposed to the allergen, says S. William Paris, M.D., director of the Paris Allergy Centers in Farmington Hills, Livonia and Brighton.

Blood tests, used for people with widespread skin conditions such as eczema, or those who have taken medications that interfere with skin testing, are available. Still, skin tests are preferable because they're more sensitive, less costly and results are more immediate.

A good doctor isn't hard to find ou've finally decided you've had enough of this nose-blowing, eye-scratching, coughproducing allergy of yours, but now you're not sure where to turn for help. Or, maybe you're not quite convinced you should go, and you wouldn't know where to start anyway. First, here's a look at when you should go, then a look at who you should see.`

When to go to an allergist

- Your allergies are causing secondary symptoms such as chronic sinus infections, nasal congestion or difficulty breathing.
- You experience hay fever or other allergy symptoms several months out of the year.
- Antihistamines and other over-thecounter medications don't control your allergy symptoms, or create unacceptable side effects, such as drowsiness.
- Your asthma or allergies are inter-

- You are experiencing warning signs of asthma such as frequent wheezing or coughing, especially at night or after exercise; frequent shortness of breath or tightness in your chest; frequent acute asthma attacks for those who have already been diagnosed with asthma.

How to find a good allergist

- Get a referral from your primary care physician or, if it's your child, his or her pediatrician. They usually know the experts in your area.
- Make sure your allergist is certified by the American Board of Allergy and Immunology. This assures your allergist has completed a minimim of two years of specialized training in the field and has passed a comprehensive examination.

Remember that any physician can call himself or herself an allergist, but not all are certified.

- Talk with family members, friends and neighbors. They often are a good starting point for finding someone you'd like.
- When you do select a doctor, ask that physician what treatment you will receive and why. You should clearly understand your basic options and why one is being recommended over the others. Of course, you should agree with the doctor's recommendation before pursuing care.
- Don't be alarmed if your doctor immediately suggests a rather aggressive treatment. If your case is severe, he or she may feel this is the most effective way to approach your allergy.

Getting the straight facts on dental care

We're all aware of the myth about how visits to the dentist are scary, painful and just plain unpleasant. Not a myth you say? Dental visits may frighten some people, but they need not be painful and unpleasant.

eanwhile, perhaps it's time to dispel some other myths about dental care. For example:

Myth: Adults don't get cavities.

Truth: According to Wilson G. Smillie, DDS in Ypsilanti, although growing children accumulate more cavities than adults, getting older doesn't guarantee no more cavities. "Although decay rate tends to slow down somewhere in the late teens, adults continue to get some decay often accelerating greatly later in life, especially when gums begin to recede," Smillie says. This means maintaining a routine of regular brushing and check-ups and investigating anti-cavity fluoride rinses, such as Act or Fluorigard, both approved by the FDA and the American Dental Association.

Myth: If you brush and floss regularly, you won't have bad breath.

Truth: "Although the oral cavity can produce some cases of bad breath, halitosis often originates in the sinuses, the stomach and the lungs," Smillie says. Causes include: garlic, onions and other sulfur-producing foods; dry mouth caused by certain medications; bacteria build-up at the back of the tongue; and some medical conditions, such as respiratory infections.

Myth: Candy is the worst food for your teeth.

Truth: "In my opinion, the worst food for your teeth are the colas with their high concentration of acid and sugar, " Smillie says. Most sugary and starched foods can stimulate bacteria in plaque to produce acids that destroy tooth enamel and cause cavities. Perhaps it's best to cut back on snacks and drink more water or chew sugarless gum.

Myth: The harder you brush your teeth, the better.

Truth: According to Dr. Smillie, it's not necessary to brush hard to remove plaque. "Over-zealous brushing can damage both tooth structure and gum tissue, " he says.

It's best to brush gently with a softbristle toothbrush at least twice a day, and make sure you cover all sides of each tooth.

Myth: It's OK if your gums bleed a little when you brush or floss.

Truth: "Healthy gums should not bleed when you brush and floss normally," Smillie says. Bleeding gums may be a sign of gum disease or some other illness.

Myth: White teeth are healthy teeth.

Truth: Dr. Smillie says that the color of teeth, initially, is genetically inherited. "Over time, teeth tend to naturally discolor due to a number of factors including habits such as smoking," he says. "White teeth are no more immune to disease processes than discolored teeth." Teeth that look extremely white may be suffering if the gleam comes from overusing non-prescription whitening products that can damage the protective enamel layer.

Myth: Nothing hurts more than a root canal.

Truth: According to Dr. Smillie, with improved methods of anesthesia and improved root canal techniques, endodontic or root canal therapy is rarely painful.

Myth: Your dentist does not need your complete medical history, as your doctor does.

Truth: "Your teeth and oral cavity are part of the entire human body and interact with it," Smillie says. "What is happening in your mouth can affect your body and visa-versa. Your overall health history and medical condition is extremely important when treating your teeth."

The benefits of a personal health and fitness assessment

The best way to develop an appropriate health and fitness plan is to understand your physical strengths and weaknesses along with your performance abilities.

ccording to Dany Saar, PhD, Director of Sports Medicine and Performance Enhancement at Franklin Fitness & Racquet Club, the first step in a successful fitness program is to gather as much information as necessary to intelligently design a program that takes into consideration an individual's motivation, lifestyle, physical and fitness profile, as well as his or her activities and preferences.

Dr. Saar was involved, at the Coto Sports Research Center, in the development of the first computerized muscle performance and diagnostics systems, and 3D movement analysis systems. Dany has developed strength, conditioning and performance programs for Olympic and professional athletes, including the U.S. Women's Olympic Volleyball Team.

"A comprehensive evaluation is the basis from which we customize a program for each person — his/her needs, goals and the status of the physical makeup," Saar says. "We use this information to develop a personal health and fitness plan."

The health and fitness evaluation used at Franklin is composed of the following:

- Medical history
- Blood pressure, resting heart rate, body weight and height
- Body composition, body fat, muscle mass
- Posture, body awareness, body alignment and biomechanics
- Gait/walking mechanics
- Feet alignment, biomechanics and shoe wear
- Computerized muscle performance testing
- Flexibility and joint range of motion
- Balance, stability and coordination
- Cardiovascular stress testing

Review results and make recommendation

This very extensive test takes about three hours and involves the use of computerized diagnostics equipment that provides detailed information about an individual's body potential and limitations. The very breadth of the assessment demonstrates how many elements are involved in developing safe and effective athletic training, rehabilitation programs or fitness routines.

"Most people follow a classic evolution where, first, they need to recognize the importance of exercise to their health," Saar says. "When they finally do, they normally join a club and watch others exercise. Then, they try to copy some of the exercises others do. Next, they start to experience pains, aches, stiffness and soreness. What they need to get as early as possible is professional help in customizing their program and learning proper execution."

Saar cites an example of someone trying to lose weight by walking, running or riding a bike. These are great exercises for burning fat, he says, but they also can be hard on the joints. "The body is a linked system; when you train and load one body part, a weaker part may suffer. For example, people who do sit-ups stress their lower backs and necks unnecessarily, and those who do squats stress their knees and backs."

"Any physical activity that stains the body, increases risk for injury," Saar says. "People need to learn how to train efficiently, exercise correctly and progress gradually."

A key part of the assessment, according to Saar, is an individual's medical history, explaining that this interview is the best way to predict risk. "Failure to consider an old high school spinal injury can have a negative training effect and lead to more serious injury in the future," Saar says. "A runner with poor foot mechanics may need orthotics or another form of correction to avoid damage to his or her knees. People with knee problems may need to consider alternatives to running and biking in order to achieve the aerobic training effect they're looking for."

Saar stresses that the fitness assessment does not include medical testing procedures, such as an EKG, which are done by licensed physicians. However, the assessment does provide critical information that the trainers should consider in order to prevent injuries and maximize training.

Eating Well

Keeping an eye on potatoes

otatoes are great! Called "earth apple" or plain old "spud," the potato is a healthy staple filled with fiber, complex carbohydrates, vitamin C and iron. Potatoes are low in calories and can be prepared in a number of easy, delicious ways. But how do you know what to look for when selecting this terrific tuber?

A delightful variety in size and color

Most potatoes fall into two categories: mealy, low moisture types, such as long brown russets (baking potatoes); and the round white kind that are perfect for mashed potatoes.

New potatoes include any variety that is dug early in the season while still small and immature. They have thin skins and are waxy, tender and sweet. You can boil new potatoes in their skins and serve them with butter and parsley. Or bake them whole, until tender, and include garlic cloves, sprigs of thyme and a few bay leaves, all drizzled with olive oil.

Newer varieties to look for are the Peruvian Purples, which retain their purple color even after cooking. Hybrid Yukon Golds are great mashed, in potato salads or can be used in hearty soup recipes. And the little Peewees, which used to be left in the field because of their small size, are now considered a delicacy.

Because potatoes contain nutrients both in their skins and meat, the healthiest way to cook them is with the skins intact. When you peel and boil potatoes, you can capture the nutrients by using the cooking water in gravies and soups.

Selecting and storing your spuds

According to the National Potato Board, it's best to select potatoes that show no wrinkling, sprouts, cuts or dark spots anywhere on the skin.

Potatoes should be stored in a dark, dry, slightly cool (50°), and well-ventilated place. Potatoes will sprout if stored in a warm, moist environment or if kept for more than two weeks.

into sugar and creates a sweettasting potato that will darken when cooked. It's best not to refrigerate them, except for new potatoes, which should be used within a few days after purchase, or be placed in the refrigerator.

"Skinny fries"

Guaranteed to taste as good as French fries, without the fat, these potatoes are baked in a very hot oven (450°) until brown and crispy. Cut potatoes (with skins) into slices, add a small amount of olive oil, salt and pepper, then bake for about 25 minutes. Add ketchup for taste or enjoy them on their own..... guilt free!

Carrots, the vision vegetable here is an ailment called agerelated macular degeneration (ARMD), which is the leading cause of blindness in people over 50. ARMD victims experience night blindness, or impaired ability to see in the dark, as well as a limited range of visual acuity.

According to researchers at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston, the risk of suffering from ARMD may be decreased substantially by increasing your intake of Vitamin A, which is derived from carotenoids. Among nearly 900 people studied, those with the highest intake of carotenoid-rich vegetables, such as carrots, spinach and collard greens, had 43 percent lower risk of developing ARMD than those with the lowest intake.

So, the joke about rabbits never having to wear glasses could make sense after all!

Golden, Granny or Gala: a delicious apple picking guide ome apples are great for baking or applesauce, but not for snacking. Then, there are those wonderful Granny Smith apples that are just right when you want a crunchy treat. Picking apples is fun, but picking out the best brands for particular recipes takes a little help.

For applesauce:

The McIntosh is tangy and aromatic and stays flavorful when cooked. You can also try Jonathan, Macoun, Newtown Pippin, Rome and Winsap.

For baking:

The Rome Beauty is recommended because its sweet, slightly juicy flesh gets richer when baked, and it holds its shape. Other good choices include Cortland, Golden Delicious and Gravenstein.

For breads, cakes, muffins and pastries:

You can use many varieties. The best are Crispin, Golden Delicious, Rome Beauty and Winesap.

For pies, cobblers and apple crisp:

The Golden Delicious retains its texture and flavor nicely. Other tasty options include Cortland, Granny

Smith and Newton Pippin. If you're creative, you may want to combine several types for a good contrast of taste and texture.

The best apples for eating raw are:

Red Delicious, sweet, crisp and juicy - great for snacking and salads. Other good choices are Cortland, which stay white when cut; Empire; Fuji; Gala; McIntosh and Winesap.

Information about apples was gathered from Good Housekeeping magazine, October, 1995.

Water Gardening Made Easy.

In just one weekend you could be enjoying the relaxing sounds of water gardening right in your own back yard! Just follow these steps:

- Select a location if you will be adding plants, select a location with 6 to 8 hours of sunlight
- Select a pond Hard shell ponds can be used either in-ground or above ground on decks or patios. Soft-lined ponds are used in-ground and can be customized to your individual design.
- Excavate the area to conform to the shape of your pond.
- Set your pond in the hole and level. A 2" layer of sand in the bottom of the hole will help to level the pond.
- Fill with water, add your pump and filter. Enjoy! We will be glad to assist you with any other questions you have with your water gardening project!
