City budget talks open

By ROBERT JACKSON

The first round of North ge ot) idget discussions drawed fo almost empty house this week despite the city council s urging that the general public become actively involved in the process

With only three residents in attendance the council virtually breezed through the first of three study sessions reviewing the proposed budgets from the general fund which include city council city manager elections city attorney city clerk finance and computer tax department building and grounds and police and fire departments

While very few questions were asked of department heads presenting their budgets some important news came out of the first session

• The proposed city operating millage will be 12 23 mills a decrease of 1 19 mills which represents a one year millage allocation for the Sherrie Lane/Jeffrey Drive Improvement Project that was completed this year For revenue purposes one mill is equal to $209 013

• State shared revenue excluding the breakage funding from Northville Downs is projected to increase by 4 58 percent According to City Manager Gary Word the revenue projections are conservative based on the uncertainty of the state government s ability to

The ears have it

Kids attending the Easter egg hunt had a hoppin' good time Saturday on the grounds of Northville Community Park, Beck Road between Five and Six Mile The event, sponsored by the Recreation Department and the Northville Rotary Club, featured the usual search for hidden treasure, as well as a portable petting farm for the children to enjoy Above, Sara Rigatto (right), 2, and brother Nick, 4, inspect their booty under the supervision of mom, Carol Rigatto. Right, Sara Barton, 6, of Northville, discovers that rabbit ears and face makeup do little to keep your for-real ears warm during unseasonably cold temperatures. The hunt was open to children under 12. The petting farm was provided by Carousel Acres.

Only two join school race

Pair will run unopposed for board of education seats

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

With Barbara Bennett out of the race for the upcoming Northville Public School Board of Education election school officials have been wondering who will run for the vacant slot?

They received their answer Monday as Northville resident Michael Poterala submitted his nominating petition before the filing deadline He will join board incumbent Joan Wadsworth to fill out the election slate Both have until today at 4 30 to have their names removed from the ballot

If neither withdraws from the race Poterala and Wadsworth will run unopposed in the June 10 election as there are two vacancies to be filled this year

Poterala an attorney said that he decided to place his name on the ballot after reading about Barbara Bennett's decision not to seek reelection It s something that I had considered and when I read about (Bennett's) decision not to run I figured the district would need somebody " he said "So I talked it over with my wife and decided to give it a try "

Poterala also believes that having two children who will attend Northville schools – one will begin kindergarten in the district next fall – is important as well

"I agreed with what (Bennett) said in reference to having that tie to the school district " he said "I think it s important With children you have a real interest at stake and that was one of the reasons I made the decision to seek election

"I am taking this commitment on because I believe I can make a contribution "

Northville Board of Education terms run for four years Board members receive no compensation for their time as district trustees

In the end Jenna Marquart s body betrayed her

The fun loving outgoing 12 year old was always active according to those who knew her She was quick to laugh and always managed to make those around her feel good which is why she was popular with her classmates and teachers at school

Although Jenna s spirit was full of youthful exuberance a silent killer was hidden inside her poised to strike at any time last week it took her life as she was thousands of miles away from the friends teachers and residents who now mourn her passing

Jenna Marquart was pictured in last week's paper.

Tough review boards turn away assessment appeals

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

The total number of appeals has been going down for two years now, the result of Proposal A in 1994 which includes an annual assessment cap.

A lot of community residents tried but only a few were successful in appealing their 1996 property tax assessments

Actually, the boards of review for Northville and Northville Township dealt with fewer assessment appeals this year than in 1995 The total number of appeals has been going down for two years now, the result of Proposal A, approved by voters in 1994, which includes an annual assessment cap

Like last year, few assessment reductions were granted Of the 244 property assessments appealed by their owners in February and March, only 48 won approval.

Property assessments – the township's and city's assessors' best estimate of market value – determines how much property owners pay in taxes. Most appeals come from residential home owners and almost all say that an assessor has overestimated the value of a property

Rarely an owner will argue that his or her property has been undervalued That didn t happen this year in either the city or township

Here's a breakdown of the appeals

• Northville City Of 120 total appeals, only 30 were granted, all for residential properties Fifteen requests for assessment adjustments came from commercial property owners, all were denied.

• Forty-three of the appeals came from the Oakland County section of the city Fifteen were approved for reductions.

• The Wayne County section of the city was responsible for 77 total appeals

Of them the board of review granted reductions to 15 property owners

• Overall the city billed its property owners a total of $9 37 million in taxes in winter 1995 $4 52 million in Oakland County and $4 84 million in Wayne County

• Northville Township The township saw 124 petitions filed for assessment reduction, 18 of them being granted

All of them were residential properties.

The board of review denied 53 commercial property owners' requests for reductions

ASSESSMENT APPEALS:

Here are the results of the 1996 assessment appeals heard by the boards of review in Northville and Northville Township:

- Northville City/Oakland County. 43 appeals, 15 reductions given.
- Northville City/Wayne County: 77 appeals, 15 reductions given.
- Northville Township: 124 appeals, 18 reductions given.

• The township's total tax bill for winter 1995 came to $19.38 million

Lights to dim on Seven Mile radio tower

State police respond to multitude of complaints

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

Hey, guess what? You can fight City Hall after all.

Community protest has gotten the Michigan State Police to modify the lighting system on that radio tower on Seven Mile Road that s been the source of controversy in recent weeks.

The tower is the second in a series of 181 across Michigan. The towers will be the backbone of a microwave communications system intended to eliminate radio "dead spots" where state troopers now can t communicate with their police radios.

The lights on the Northville Township tower were turned on in February and since then have sparked complaints from people living more than a mile away. The flashing white strobe lights annoyed many, especially at night, and they took their beefs to the state police.

The effort worked. Captain Jeff Steffel, the head of the state police communications division in Lansing, said his agency has decided to retrofit the Northville tower with a new two stage lighting system.

"We ll have blinking white strobes on the tower by day and slower flashing red lights at night," tower construction project director Harry Warner said. "This will all take about six to eight weeks to get the parts and install it, so we re asking people to be patient with us."

The Michigan State Police will be picking up the estimated $27,000 tab for the retrofit.

Motorola, the company hired to install the lights, contracted to put a white strobe system up, Warner explained.

Another change was made recently to ease the lights' impact on nearby residents. Motorola workers leveled the strobe lights on the tower, as called for in federal regulations.

The FAA calls for tower lights to be tilted upwards from the horizon from three to eight degrees. The tower lights were initially tilted up less than three degrees.

Finally, ferrite suppressors will be placed on the tower's power lines to eliminate the TV interference that some people living near the tower have experienced.

Novi Community Schools, in association with Professional Builders Institute, will offer a seminar open to all adults that will provide intensive training on remodeling your home.
The course provides information on kitchens and bathrooms. You will learn how to replace windows, floorings, counters and countertops. The instructor will also discuss common plumbing, heating and electrical problems.
The class will be held on April 23, 25, 30 & May 2, at 7:00 p.m. and will run for three hours each night. The fee for the class is $95.00, which includes the manual. An optional remodeling book is available for $30.00.

Nine-year-old Micky Webber of Northville gets a boost onto a new Harley-Davidson police motorcycle by Lieutenant John Sherman. The bikes were on hand at Saturday s egg hunt.

Beefy bikes hit the road

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

If you haven t seen the newest tool in the Northville Township law enforcement arsenal tooling around town yet you will

After all Harley Davidson police motorcycles are kind of hard to miss

Township police are putting two honest to goodness patrol hogs out on the road for the first time ever this spring – and for a dirt cheap price The two men responsible for bringing them here say the bikes will save taxpayers money and give police the ability to patrol places where cars can t go

Township Trustee Mark Abbo and Director of Public Safety Chip Snider had to take some good natured flak from the rest of the board of trustees to get this done of course since both of them are motorcycle owners

Abbo a CPA and Honda owner says that using the bikes will extend the lives of the township s police cars in the end savings tens of thousands of dollars a year

It will cost the township far less money to put a motorcycle on the road versus a car Abbo said and will also keep miles off the police cruisers

Under the terms of the township s contract with its police union a patrol vehicle must be replaced when it reaches the 75 000 mile mark

Putting mileage on the two Harleys can save as much as $18 500 a year because the cars won t have to be replaced as quickly Abbo said

That estimate is based on a cost estimate of $12 000 per bike per year

Through a special deal worked out by Snider a BMW executive the township will pay Harley Davidson just $300 per bike for a one year lease which includes a full warranty

Many calls to a township station the township gets the bikes Harley gets great PR and can use the bikes next year for a greatly reduced price

Besides the cost savings Snider points out that the motorcycles are good for traffic control duties and for patrolling places where cars can t go such as sections of the Lower Rouge Corridor and in the Southwest Northville subdivision

Motorist killed in road accident with squad car

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

A Northville woman was killed Saturday when the vehicle she was driving was struck by a patrol car driven by a 35 year old Northville police officer

Suzanne Bogden 50 of Northville was pronounced dead at 3 14 a m at St Mary Hospital of undisclosed injuries suffered in the crash The police officer 35 year old Glenn Stewart was treated for minor injuries at Providence Hospital in Novi

According to an accident report filed by the Michigan State Police Bogden was driving her black 1995 Ford Explorer north on Randolph Street and apparently did not stop at the stop sign at Eight Mile Road

At the same time Stewart was driving his patrol car east on Eight Mile at about 40 mph when Bogden drove out in front of him. Stewart according to the report attempted to apply his brakes to stop his vehicle, but was unable to do so hitting the Explorer on the driver's side door Investigating officers were unable to estimate how fast Bogden was traveling when she drove onto Eight Mile

The impact of the collision turned the Explorer on its side pushing it across the street to the north side of Eight Mile Bogden was not wearing seatbelts at the time of the collision and although both airbags deployed she was thrown from the vehicle Emergency medical personnel discovered Bogden lying several feet away from her vehicle the report stated

At the time of the accident a fuel truck was in the process of pumping gasoline into underground tanks at the Mobil gas station, police officials said

Stewart was wearing his seatbelt, and the patrol car's airbag also absorbed most of the shock from the crash Medical personnel discovered Stewart sitting immediately outside his vehicle

The fatal accident is the second to take place at that intersection Two Northville teens were killed several years ago when they pulled out in front of a garbage truck traveling west on Eight Mile Road The accident is also the second involving a Northville police officer in the past month Patrol officer Norm Kubitskey received minor injuries March 21 when he swerved to avoid a downed pine tree and power line and clipped an oncoming vehicle driven by a Northville woman The accident happened during last month's severe snow and ice storm

The fatal accident is the second to take place at the intersection of Eight Mile and Randolph.

Northville business operator found innocent of gun assault

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

A man arrested by Northville Police for allegedly threatening three men with a handgun last December was found innocent of those charges last week

It took a jury only 10 minutes to find 47 year old Zlatko Stojcevski innocent of one count of felony assault with a weapon The charges stemmed from an incident that occurred Dec 24

According to Northville Police Stojcevski the owner of the Donut Scene located at 314 N Center Street allegedly threatened three Milford men with a 38 caliber revolver following a verbal altercation in the parking lot of the business

During trial testimony however two of the three men were not clear as to whether they actually saw Stojcevski point a gun at them The police report stated that the three men had stopped at the business to purchase some donuts not realizing the store was closed

When Stojcevski did not allow the men into the store they became irritated and attempted to open the door anyway

"The three men looked unruly and (Stojcevski) most likely thought they were up to something " said Dorothy Mueller a defense witness who testified on Stojcevski's behalf "So when the three men went back to their vehicle (Stojcevski) went to his car grabbed his gun and put it in his pocket

"He did not point it at the three men "

Minutes later police received a 911 call from a pay phone at the Center Street Market in which one of the men reported that Stojcevski had fired shots Police immediately responded and confiscated Stojcevski's 38 caliber snub nose revolver An investigation determined that no shots had been fired

Stojcevski said he did not point the gun at the men but had come outside because he was concerned for his business

Mueller who is one of many regular customers at the donut store said she was appalled by the whole incident

"There were so many inconsistencies in their story I can't believe this case was even brought to court " Mueller said

"(Stojcevski) is a respected businessman in this community and his business has suffered because of this incident "

Cycle club wants in at location in Wixom

Group gave up on site in township two years ago

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL
Staff Writer

A Detroit motorcycle club which attempted to move to Northville Township in 1994 is now looking at a Wixom location a couple hundred feet from the Novi border and a few hundred feet from a daycare center.

The Wheels Private Trust Organization, formerly known as the Forbidden Wheels, wants to turn a former kennel establishment, Char-Mur Kennels on Twelve Mile east of Wixom Road, into a clubhouse for its 20 members and their families

The club is selling its Detroit location and looking for a new place to call home Calling it's Fenkell and Lahser location an unsafe neighborhood, the members want a place they can go to meet and unwind, catch a few football games, hold some aerobics classes, and store camping equipment

The club says it will most likely use the facility at night and on the weekends

"We have had an immensely difficult time identifying exactly what constitutes the uses of this private club " said Michael Dornan, Wixom city manager

He said the group submitted site plans in December and was scheduled to appear on the Wixom Planning Commission agenda. However, the group asked to for a postponement

Dornan now says the plans are scheduled for the May 6 meeting

But the City of Wixom is wary of approving the request of the club, located a hundred feet from the Little Hornbook Day School, a daycare center for 130 children ranging in age from 2-weeks to 7-years-old

According to Dornan, the daycare center is concerned it will lose business should the bikers move nearby

'The city's concern is that we have a responsibility as public officials to review site plans to ensure they meet codes and ordinances and in doing so ensure the health, safety and welfare of the community is preserved,' explained Dornan.

He said the trick is to assure the rights of both the applicant and the community in a compatible setting

The Wixom Planning Commission will have to approve the club's site plan, which appears to meet the necessary requirements

The Twelve Mile Road property is zoned for business use which includes use by fraternal organizations The plans for the property include building renovations for the three structures on the property landscaping improvements and additional parking space

The property and the daycare center is separated by about 300 feet of land owned by Detroit Edison

This isn't the first time the club has found a city unwilling to embrace them

In March 1994, when the club attempted to use property it owned on Northville Road between Five and Six Mile roads, neighbors and Northville Township officials became queasy

Concerns about parties and the not-so-angelic past of the club combined with stereotypes of motorcycle gangs, prompted neighbors to write anonymous letters to the club

They even distributed newspaper clippings from Detroit News and Free Press issues dating from 1969 to 1983 reporting of gang activity and involvement in a 1983 murder investigation

Club members said the news articles were misleading and inaccurate

The controversy forced the club to pull out of the location a month later, saying it would look for headquarters location in the direction of Ann Arbor

In the plan for the Wixom location, the club changed its name to the Wheels Private Trust, but when Wixom officials discovered its past, they weren't too happy about the non-disclosure

Novi has had a biker encounter before

Back in the 1970s and through the late 1980s the city was home to a chapter of the Joker's Motorcycle Gang

The Joker's had a clubhouse on Eight Mile near Garfield Road

"We used to have big problems out there," said Novi police Lieutenant David Butler, "shootings and parties "

The clubhouse has since burned down

Stricken youth described as bright, active vacationing with her family in Hawaii.

According to her death certificate, Jenna, a seventh grade student at Meads Mill Middle School, died of a heart attack brought about by cardiac arrhythmia The condition is rare in children, according to Rhonda Welsh of the American Heart Association, and is sometimes difficult to diagnose.

"The family was aware there was some problems and had taken Jenna to specialists to attempt to determine why she was getting dizzy and faint when she exercised," said Martin Moeller, director of the Moeller Funeral Home in Valparaiso where visitation services were scheduled Wednesday "She had been tested several times by several different specialists and the tests could find nothing wrong with her."

Moeller said that funeral services for the young girl were scheduled for today at the First United Methodist Church in Valparaiso. Memorial services have also been scheduled for April 21 at First United Methodist Church in Northville The time of the service has not yet been determined, church officials said

Moeller said that Jenna was well-known and well liked within Valparaiso.

"There are plenty of people here who are going to miss her," he said. "She was extremely popular."

The Northville community will mourn the loss as well. Prayers were offered on her behalf at a Methodist church in nearby Plymouth, according to Meads Mill teacher and friend Shirley Klokkenga.

"The members of my parish remembered her because she had performed on the piano and flute at our church last year," she said. 'When they offered prayers for her you could hear a gasp come from the congregation."

Klokkenga was one of Jenna's favorite teachers, and the youngster offered words of praise on a nomination form for Klokkenga and the other members of the Meads Mill seventh grade teaching team who recently won teacher of the year honors.

"I enjoy the team teaching concept because it builds self-esteem," Jenna wrote at the time. "Having a team of teachers has given me a good feeling about myself and what I do, the school work I do, and how to work with people even if I don't get along with them very well."

Klokkenga said that Jenna was an extremely bright girl who was always active in school activities. Earlier this year she was one of a five member team of spelling standouts who were finalists in the seventh grade spelling bee, and represented Meads Mill in the recent Liv-Oak spelling competition.

She was a member of the Meads Mill Science Olympiad team that recently placed second in regional competition. The team is scheduled to take part in the statewide competition later this month.

She was also a member of last year's Meads team that fared well in the 1995 competition, and she earned a spot on the Meads Mill honor roll for the 1994-95 school year, achieving a grade point average of 3.3 and higher. Jenna also excelled in music, playing the piano, flute, and saxophone.

"I can't even begin to tell you how valuable Jenna was, not just as a student but as a team player," Klokkenga said "She reached into so many lives, and to me she was everything that I admire in a student

"There's going to be a void in my classroom that can never be filled, and I'm not sure how we'll handle that when we come back on Monday," she added. "We'll try to come together and heal together "

Arrhythmia rare condition among the young

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

The condition that took the life of 12-year-old Jenna Marquart is rare in young children, according to statistics from the American Heart Association, but arrhythmias do occur throughout the population with great variation in severity.

According to national statistics compiled by the AHA, more than 40,000 people died from cardiac arrhythmia in 1992 and an estimated four million will suffer from the condition this year.

What is a cardiac arrhythmia? According to Rhonda Welsh of the Detroit Metropolitan chapter of the American Heart Association, arrhythmia refers to any change in the sequence of cardiac rhythm.

"Under certain conditions the automatic firing rate of secondary "pacemaker" heart tissue may become too fast," she explained. "If that happens the secondary tissue may take over control of the heart rhythm and produce tachycardia."

Tachycardia usually refers to a heart rate of more than 100 beats per minute.

Welsh explained that arrhythmias may also develop because of abnormalities in how electrical impulses are conducted. Delays in the spreading of impulses can occur anywhere in the heart's conduction system, and when the transmission of impulses is intermittently or completely blocked – referred to as heart block – bradycardia may result, meaning the heart will beat at a rate of less than 60 beats per minute.

SYMPTOMS OF ARRHYTHMIA

Arrhythmias can produce a broad range of symptoms, Welsh explained, from barely perceptible problems to cardiovascular collapse and death.

"When they're very brief, arrhythmias are most likely to be almost without symptoms," she said. "For example, a single premature beat may be perceived as a palpitation or skipped beat. Premature beats that are frequent or occur in rapid succession may cause a greater awareness of heart palpitations or a fluttering sensation in the chest or neck."

When arrhythmias last long enough to affect how well the heart rate works, more serious symptoms may develop, she said. At slower rates, the heart may not be able to pump enough blood to the body.

"This can cause fatigue, lightheadedness, loss of consciousness or even death," Welsh stated. "Death occurs if the heart rate is zero or so slow that the heart and brain stop working."

Welsh added that tachycardias sometimes can cause serious injury to other organ systems. The brain, kidneys, lungs, or liver may be damaged during prolonged cardiac arrest. Blood clots can also form in the upper heart chambers as a result of atrial fibrillation, and they could break free causing stroke or damage to other organs.

WHO IS PRONE?

The prevalence of arrhythmia tends to increase with age, Welsh said, even when there is no sign of heart disease.

"Certain conditions may make a person prone to arrhythmias," she said. "For example, an incompletely developed heart conduction system may cause chronic heart block and bradycardia."

A variety of other factors may predispose a person to develop arrhythmias. Chemical agents may provoke arrhythmias, sometimes with serious consequences, Welsh said. Known factors include high or low blood and tissue concentrations of a variety of minerals, such as potassium, magnesium and calcium.

"These play a vital role in starting and conducting normal impulses in the heart," she said.

Addictive substances, especially alcohol, cigarettes and recreational drugs, can provoke arrhythmias, as can various cardiac medications.

"Even drugs used to treat an arrhythmia may provoke another arrhythmia," she added.

Felony suspect could get life was just hanging out," he said. "Then for some reason an argument broke out and that led to multiple fights being started."

During the ensuing melee, Wildt continued, Elliott was seen by witnesses wielding a folding knife with a three-inch blade. The Livonia boy, fighting with two of Elliott's friends, shook them off and approached him, Wildt said.

"At that point he punched Elliott in the face, causing him to fall and (the boy) fell on top of him," the detective said. "There was a struggle, (the boy) punched him again and then Elliott began to stab him."

Of the seven knife wounds the boy sustained, the most serious one was to his chest, causing the loss of three liters of blood, according to the doctors who treated him later that night at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia. The boy also suffered one stab wound to his scalp, three to his back and two to his left arm.

Friends rushed him to St. Mary after realizing the extent of his injuries. Doctors performed surgery on him and the boy spent the next two days in intensive care. He was released from St. Mary on Tuesday and is now recuperating at home.

A friend of the boy who allegedly witnessed what happened told police that something else strange happened that night as well. As he waited in the hospital lobby for news of the boy's condition, the teen said he saw Elliott come into the emergency ward to seek treatment for an injured right arm.

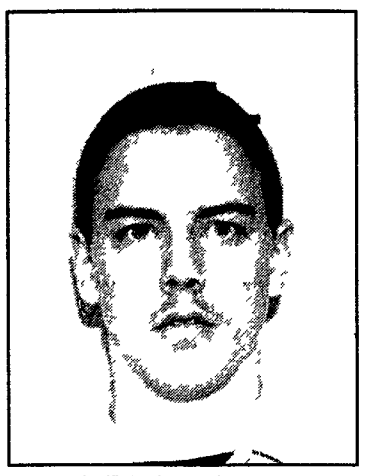

When he recognized him, the teen said, Elliott fled to the parking lot and took off in a gray-colored Cadillac which had its lights off.

Witnesses to the stabbing have allegedly identified Elliott as the suspect. The boy also picked Elliott's photograph out of a group of pictures but is "not positive" that he's the culprit, according to police reports.

Township police searched for Elliott, who works full-time as a machinist, for four days after the incident to question him. They did not find him until the teen surrendered to Wildt at police headquarters on Tuesday morning with his attorney, Brian Stacey, present.

35th District Court Judge Ron Lowe arraigned Elliott two hours later, entering a not guilty plea on his behalf and setting the teen's bail at $100,000 cash.

Stacey protested, asking for "a low bond." The attorney said that Elliott's family can't raise $100,000 and that such a high amount is unfair because the teen doesn't present a threat to others, nor is he a risk to flee from justice.

Joseph Edwin Elliott

He has only one prior conviction – for drunk driving – on his record, Stacey explained, and has lived in the area all his life. Besides that, the attorney argued that Elliott faced "extenuating circumstances" during the fight.

To date, Elliott has not posted bond and remains in the Wayne County Jail.

Lowe scheduled a preliminary exam in the case for Friday, April 19. At that hearing prosecutors will have to demonstrate that a crime actually took place, and that enough probable cause exists to put Elliott on trial.

Attempted murder is a felony in Michigan and carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Youth program seeking volunteers

The Northville Youth Assistance program is putting out the call for volunteers from the community.

A new training program for NYA participants is set to start Wednesday, April 17, and mentors are needed to serve as adult role models for young people who are currently on the NYA waiting list.

Volunteers go through a 15-hour training session then are paired with young people who are in need of adult companionship.

Many, but not all, of the youths come from single-parent homes.

The training session that begins next Wednesday will run for five consecutive weeks. Volunteers will meet for three hours a night at Northville High School.

Afterwards, adults are assigned to their youths and are asked to spend a couple of hours a week with their new friends. There is no charge to complete the training course.

Male role models are especially needed.

Those who are interested are asked to call NYA at 344-1618 for more information.

HEALTH NOTE

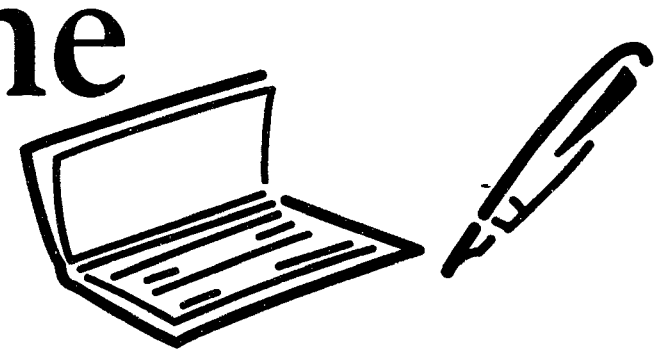

by Dennis E. Engerer, P.T.
TILT
Runners who weigh 150 pounds endure 450 pounds of pressure with each strike of their feet upon a level surface. If their legs are of different lengths, the longer leg will absorb an unequal share of the pressure. As a result, runners may experience hip, leg, foot, or back pain that becomes all the more evident when they accelerate their training. Leg length difference may be anatomical in nature, due to a leg fracture, or inherited abnormality. It may also result from a functional difference, such as pronation in one foot that effectively makes one leg "shorter." A study in the journal Physical Therapy suggests that careful observation and measurement of a runner's gait by a professional can lead to accurate diagnosis of leg length discrepancy. Usually, the problem can be treated effectively without an orthotic.
At Northville Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Inc., our staff of well educated, experienced and highly motivated professionals specialize in all phases of rehabilitation care. Our registered therapists specialize in returning patients to their highest level of function by focusing on improving muscle strength, function, and coordination of the upper extremities. For more information, or to schedule a consultation, call 349-3816, or see us at 332 E. Main Street, Suite A.

Suspected smoke thief wanted on other counts

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

A Farmington Hills man could be spending a few years in jail following his arrest last week in Northville Township

David Allen Riebe, 42, is accused of stealing six cartons of cigarettes from the Farmer Jack supermarket on Seven Mile during the evening of April 2

Given the fact that he's wanted on other felony charges in area communities, Riebe could face additional charges soon.

A store security guard called township police a little after 8 p.m. April 2, saying he'd seen a man take cigarettes from the store without paying for them, then leave the area in a black Buick.

The guard followed the Buick, police reports said, and a township officer stopped it on the southbound I-275 freeway entrance ramp.

Riebe, after giving a false name to the officer, allegedly denied stealing anything

The driver of the vehicle, a 42-year-old Ann Arbor man, and another passenger, a 49-year-old man from Livonia, allegedly told police, however, that Riebe had taken the cartons and that they were hidden in the trunk of the car.

The owner of the car gave permission for a search of the trunk, according to police, and the cigarettes were found there

A computer check revealed arrest warrants for both the driver and other passenger arising out of a case involving Detroit and Farmington police, but both departments said they could not pick the suspects up. They were released at the scene.

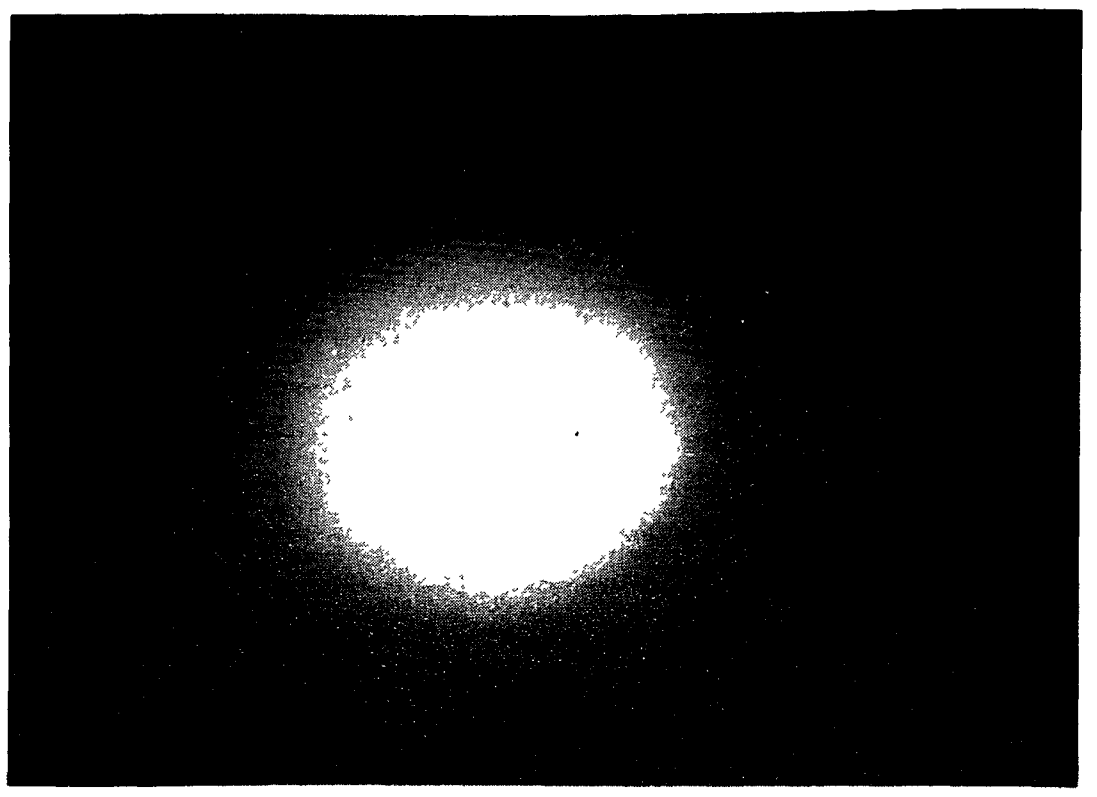

The check also turned up two felony and two misdemeanor arrest warrants out for Riebe According to police, he has three convictions for retail fraud on his record already

Riebe was arraigned on the shoplifting charge on April 3 in 35th District Court before Judge John MacDonald

The judge entered a plea of not guilty on the defendant's behalf and set bond at $15,000 cash.

To date Riebe has not been able to pay the bail amount and he remains lodged in the Wayne County Jail

A preliminary examination will be held at 35th District Court in Plymouth later this month

Nature's light show

Northville amateur astrophotographer Glenn Krieger caught the comet as it streaked across the northern sky the night of March 26. Using an 8-inch reflector telescope with a camera adapter, Krieger set up his equipment on the hill near Amerman Elementary School and took this picture of the comet Hyakutake, which hasn't been seen around these parts in roughly 18,000 years. Known formally as C/1996 B2, the comet can be glimpsed on some evenings when the sky is free from overcast. Krieger, who was assisted by his brother, Gary, used 400 speed. B&W film.

Millage rate set to decline under city budget proposal

address its financial problems.

• The city's water and sewer fund appears to be stabilizing, according to Word, following a 4.2 percent water rate and 1 percent sewer rate adjustment approved by the council in February. Word said the increases stem from rate hikes by both the city of Detroit and Wayne County.

The magic budget number for city officials budgeting for fiscal year 1996-97 is $4.57 million. That's the amount of revenue city staff projects the city will receive during that period The city's expenditures must not breach that $4.5 million number, which means, according to Word, the city will utilize its funds conservatively.

"The preparation of this year's budget has been guided by the constraints of emerging from a deficit position in prior years," Word said. "Every effort has been made to reflect the stated policies, goals, and objectives of the council within the financial means available."

Most of the departments discussed in the first session presented budgets that were somewhat lower than fiscal year 1995-96 There were some slight increases however, with the police department increasing its budget by about $40,000; buildings and grounds by $35,000; the fire department by $28,000, and the city manager by $4,800.

The departments that will experience a proposed budget decrease include the city attorney by $4,400, city clerk by $8,000, and the tax department by $2,900.

The police department represents the largest budget at $1.5 million or 34 percent of the total general fund budget The city administration – including the city council, city manager, elections, city attorney, city clerk, finance, and tax department – is second with a budget of $680,090 The department of public works is the third highest with a proposed budget of $409,000.

There are two budget hearings remaining before the council approves the document. Those meetings are:

• April 16 – General fund (continued), including recreation and senior citizens' services, department of public works, building department, recreation and cultural, contributions to other funds, debt service, insurance, central supplies and unallocated reserve

Also being discussed are major streets fund, local streets fund, parking fund, beautification commission, arts commission, Downtown Development Authority Downtown Development Authority debt service fund, and public improvements fund.

• April 22 – Northville Youth Assistance, housing commission, parking deck construction fund, refuse and recycling fund, water and sewer fund, and equipment fund.

All meetings will be conducted at the city hall council chambers, 215 W. Main The meetings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Word also said the budget is scheduled to be discussed in a public hearing before its adoption on May 20

Utility company issues caution as new storm season approaches

April showers bring May flowers but they also have the potential to play havoc with utility power lines and equipment

With the spring storm season soon in full swing, Detroit Edison cautions its customers to remember the No. 1 safety rule, stay away from downed power lines and anything those wires may touch.

Fallen wires should be reported immediately to Detroit Edison by calling 1-800-477-4747 so crews can be dispatched to secure the area and remove the hazard

Although it is impossible to control the weather, Detroit Edison recommends the following when electrical service is interrupted

• Always be prepared for an emergency A battery operated radio fresh replacement batteries a flashlight and candles, a first aid kit and food should be kept in a centralized location

• If using portable generators disconnect house circuits from Detroit Edison lines Pull or switch to "off" all main fuses or circuit breakers to protect line crews working to restore service

• To avoid electrical overload when power is restored disconnect appliances and turn off lights Leave one light on however as an indicator when power returns

• Keep refrigerator and freezer doors closed to avoid food spoilage Refrigerated food will stay cold for at least 12 hours if the door is closed A well-filled freezer, if kept shut will preserve food for two to three days Partially thawed food or food that has ice crystals can usually be refrozen

• During low voltage conditions – when lights are dim and television pictures are smaller – shut off motor driven appliances such as refrigerators to prevent overheating and possible damage

• Stay out of flooded or damp basements The water or moisture around furnaces or electrical appliances may serve as a conductor of electricity

Montessori expansion rejected

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL
Staff Writer

Despite a number of letters from parents, the Novi Planning Commission nixed plans for an expansion of the Novi-Northville Montessori School, saying the 1.32-acre site is being overbuilt.

"We are disappointed," said Geetha Rao, owner of the school "We've served the community for 18 years. We want to give the best educational opportunity for the community."

Commissioners Eda Weddington, Gwen Markham and Kim Thomas Capello voted to approve the measure last Wednesday night but their fellow commissioners would only agree the school could come back to the commission at a future date.

"This use and this building is too big for this site," said commissioner Michelle Bononi "Just about everything that could go wrong is going wrong."

The Montessori school wants to increase enrollment to 85 students and thus needs to expand the size of its 10-year-old building, located on Novi Road just south of Ten Mile The addition would add 1,500-square-feet in various places around the existing 3,657-square-foot building. Also, Montessori would add a sidewalk.

While city consultants recommended approval for the plan, commissioners still found problems with non-compliance great enough to merit a "no go."

One of the sticking points with the commission was the old parking lot system and drop-off in front of the building. Old ordinances did not require parking lots and drop-off's to be separated Now that the site is being altered, commissioners would like to see that changed to be in accordance with current standards.

In fact, the school would have to go to Zoning Board of Appeals to request a variance for continuation of the drop-off section.

But the board received a series of a dozen letters from parents who encouraged the commission to approve the plans and let the drop-off space stay.

"The current procedure for dropping off and picking up of children works out quite well and it is much safer for the children when they do not have to walk in a parking lot with a lot of traffic," wrote Ellen Hulverson of Novi.

Other parents wrote to the commission telling of the convenience of the drop-off system and it's ability to move traffic and children along in an orderly manner.

The commission found other problems beside the parking lot Members found fault with the encroachment into and use of the wetland buffer behind the school for use as an outside "playspace." That space would have to be increased even more with the additional children.

The wetlands setback is intended to provide further protection from the wetland itself, said Bononi. It shouldn't be used for the playground.

Bononi and some other commissioners also took issue with drainage problems on the site. The parcel lies within a floodplain and drainage is seeping over to the neighbors' residence.

Consultant David Bluhm said the changes to the building and landscape could be used to improve the drainage issue.

> "We are disappointed. We've served the community for 18 years. We want to give the best educational opportunity for the community."

> –Geetha Rao
> School owner

Rao said she and her husband haven't decided what course of action to take, they are still getting over the surprise.

But Rao said they are staying put "We'll never move. Our school will always be there."

BACKWARD GLANCE

... at Northville's past
by Randy Coble

I like learning about the history of Northville for the same reason I like my wife: both are, to borrow a phrase from Shakespeare, an undiscovered country.

Carolyn, for instance, defines the mystery that is woman. Just when I think I know her, some little heretofore unknown nugget pops up and keeps me wondering what else there is to find. Case in point: my Easter weekend was punctuated by unearthing the fact that my better half is a coin collector

Carolyn broke the news to me as she and I and the mom-in-law sat down to roll a mountain of change on Sunday afternoon. We ended up inspecting pennies, nickels and dimes by the hundreds to find the few dozen that were minted in the years she needs for her collection

Coins aren't my thing but this taught me to understand the fascination some people have for them You wonder if John Kennedy or Hank Aaron has maybe held the one you're looking at now You speculate about where it's been

Case in point: the 1972 penny that appears here. Who made the inscription, I ask myself? For whom? Did it work out?

It s a little piece of history, a story that fits on the face of a cent. It also brings me to the subject of this week's Backward Glance, the memories of one Vince Banks, who came to Northville the year before that penny was minted.

Mr. Banks was nice enough to stop by my office last week to show me some slides of the old Maybury Sanatorium. The place had just been closed but its buildings, some as high as four stories, were still standing.

"It was a little strange. There was still food in the cupboards, stuff out on the tables," Vince recalled. "It was almost like they'd just been called away for something."

Here's something you might not know – those buildings are still out there. According to Vince, they dynamited them into their own foundations, then covered those over with dirt when Maybury became a state park.

Sometimes people who lived near Maybury as he did would see beds from the Sanatorium by the side of the road on Seven Mile, Vince said.

"They had casters (wheels) on them and the people there would ride them all the way down and out the gate," he said.

This found penny was evidently intended as a keepsake.

- Every year at Christmas, Santa Claus would set up shop in the basement of Northville Hardware on Center Street.
- A roller rink once stood where the parking lot behind Main Street's Northville Camera shop is now. Another was where Web Printing, on Northville Road near Seven Mile, is now.
- People visiting Northville'S famous well could gaze across S Main at the Studebaker car dealership located where that small plaza of shops is today.
- Remember when Parmenter's cider mill burned down? Vince thinks it was about 15 years ago
- Back when the MAGS building was a mall, TV newscaster Jack LeGoff owned a bookstore there, Vince told me, and was frequently seen in town.
- How about the big white house with a spire that sat on the hill before Allen Terrace was built? (My usual prize, coffee, to the first person who can tell me what that was and who owned it)

'Nuff for now See you next week. Same bat time, same bat channel.

Randy Coble is always interested in your Northville memories. Call him anytime at 349-1700

During this past week this columnist read The Making of Michigan: 1820-1860 – A Pioneer Anthology, by Justin Kestenbaum. Kestenbaum used diary entries from throughout the state to describe life during this region's early years. The diary notations make a few comments about this immediate area.

Edward W. Barber discussed religion in the prestatehood days in his 1890s reminiscence of 1836. He discussed Sylvester Cochrane among other pastors.

About Cochrane he said:

"Religion and education were the ideals of the Vermontville colonists. The congregational policy was as natural to them as was the town meeting ... Cochrane ... remained in the colony from 1837 to 1842, and afterwards for many years was pastor of a church at Northville, Michigan."

Community records identify Cochrane as the only pastor called to serve the New School Church. That Church split off from Northville's Presbyterian congregation and existed only from 1845 to 1849. Cochrane remained in Northville, establishing an Academy on Randolph to provide private education for the young.

John M. Gordon visited Michigan from July to December 1836 as a land speculator. In October he journeyed across Michigan. His diary from that trip reads as an early travel log. He departed Detroit on Friday, Oct. 7.

On the first evening of his journey he stopped after nine hours in the village of Plymouth, having covered 26 miles on horseback. He wrote the following:

"We have just reached this little village (sic) which is situated at four cross roads, contains about 50 or 60 houses, 300 inhabitants and is 7 years old. For the distance of 20 miles our route led us over the worst road imaginable, what to the emigrant must be a 'slough of Despond' and through the same level, heavy timbered land described this morning. The soil contains a large proportion of clay and while it holds water on its surface long, has no inclination to give current to its streams ... The soil, as may be supposed, is admirably adapted to the growth of grass, which springs up spontaneously in great luxuriance when the trees have been cut away, and near the road, several of the cultivated species are to be discovered which have doubtless been transplanted in a measure by the food and manure of horses ...

More from Gordon's diary next week.

Antique weapons stolen from home

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL
Staff Writer

The home of a Novi gun collector was robbed March 29, and a door that did not have a lock may have served as the means of entry for the thief or thieves to the Haggerty home.

The man returned home from work at about 6:30 p.m. when he realized someone had entered his home and rifled through his bedroom, according to police.

Police reports indicate more than 30 various semi-automatic pistols, shotguns and antique rifles and pistols were taken as well as antique bayonets, survival knives, bow and arrow sets as well as $2,500 worth of ammunition.

All the items were registered properly, said police.

Also missing were model airplanes, cameras and beer cans.

Police said there was no sign of forced entry and have determined that a door to the home had no lock and was probably the entrance point.

The home also had many broken windows not related to the crime.

According to police they do have some leads and are investigating fingerprints lifted at the scene.

Pet fans go hog wild over cuddly friends

Store offers unusual critters

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

While America's not exactly going hog wild over hedgehogs, the little critters are becoming a popular pet

"They're the $100 hamster," said Chad Collins, manager of Petland in Twelve Oaks Mall.

"Ferrets are the rage. I get a dozen and sell them in two days People who buy hedgehogs, it's a very slow step They return a lot first."

The animal s most distinctive feature is its spine needles, which cover most of its upper body. Actually hair filled with air chambers, the hedgehog will get its back up when frightened or angry, curling into a ball and making itself almost impossible to pick up

"It s just kind of like petting a hairbrush They're soft under neath," Collins said

For a year now The Living Science Foundation of Wixom has included an African pygmy hedgehog – one of 10 varieties of the animal – in its repertoire of mammals, which includes wallabys, chinchillas and genets, a member of the weasel family. Program Director Chris Tanner says he uses kitchen gloves to scoop up Sonic, the hedgehog, when it's in a standoffish mood.

"We put her down and she kind of motors along. She lets kids handle her, but if this bothers her, she rolls up into a ball Once in awhile, she'll squeak," Tanner said

"I think they're nice, exotic, unusual animals They're not the common, everyday pet. I'd rather have a hedgehog than a ferret."

Petland sells up to 35 African pygmy hedgehogs each month They've been available as a domesticated exotic pet in the U S for as long as 20 years. Store staffers pick up the hedgehogs at Detroit Metro airport; they're flown in from a breeder in the south

While the 6-week-old babies on sale there are about the size of a hamster, a grownup will weigh two to three pounds and extend about six inches from nose to backside.

Males and females are easy to tell apart, but we're not going to detail it here

In the wild, hedgehogs hibernate for three months When they're in this state, children in Africa use them for soccer balls, a practice not recommended here You can avoid having your pet konk out for 12 weeks by keeping it in temperatures between 65 and 90 degrees Fahrenheit It's cold weather that puts them into the deep sleep

Of course, even if it's not hibernating, a hedgehog needs a lot of down time.

"Basically, they re nocturnal They don't need a whole lot of socialization They re affectionate They like to come up close and cuddle," Collins said

"They've come a long way from being soccer balls."

Unlike hamsters, hedgehogs aren't hung up on running in wheels. But they are friendly, once they've used their sensitive little noses to check out the inquisitive human. When they've become accustomed to your scent, you've got a friend – a friend for as long as 10 years, the typical lifespan for the animal

A low-maintenance buddy, too. They eat cat food or ferret food, which can be kept in the cage in a small pan. Hedgehogs can be housebroken. A small container of kitty litter in the corner of their cage takes care of necessities

The little animal has a lovable quality that quickly wins over the hesitant customer

"All it takes is two moments of it sniffing them, then it jumps up on their arm and they say, 'Ah, I've gotta have this,'" Collins said.

He knows two enthusiasts who had figures of a he-hog and she-hog on their wedding cake.

Some companion humans will even try to teach their hedgehog a trick or two.

"I know people who will teach them to eat a little potato chip from their mouths," Collins said.

These 8-week-old hedgehogs seem more interested in sleeping than in having their picture taken.

State taking boat registrations by phone

Michigan boaters will be able to renew their watercraft registrations by telephone beginning this month, according to Secretary of State Candice S Miller

The pilot program is designed to make watercraft registration renewals more convenient and is the first step toward giving motorists the option of renewing vehicle registrations by touch-tone telephone

"Touch-tone telephone renewal represents a major breakthrough in delivering on our mandate of improved customer service," Miller said "In fact, touch-tone renewal has the potential to revolutionize how people do business with the secretary of state's office. It offers the ultimate convenience of doing business from the comfort of home 24 hours a day seven days a week with no requirements other than a touch-tone telephone and a valid credit card

The telephone registration pilot kicks-off later this month when more than 270,000 watercraft registration renewal notices will be mailed by the secretary of state s office. Included in each renewal notice will be an insert explaining how to renew watercraft registrations by telephone."

After calling the telephone number provided with the notice, the person renewing will be connected with a prerecorded message that leads them through several brief steps. Among those steps is a request that they input data using the telephone key pad, including the personal "touch-tone ID number" printed on the renewal notice, their credit card account number and the credit card's expiration.

The three credit cards that can be used in the program are Discover, MasterCard and VISA Watercraft can be renewed by telephone until Aug. 31, at which time the pilot program will be evaluated.

Watercraft registrations are valid for three years, making only one-third of the registrations eligible for the pilot project.

There are 883,742 watercraft on file with the Secretary of State, with some 782,477 currently registered.

Artists to exhibit at fair

As a boy living in Northern Michigan, wildlife photographer Carl Sams II grew up around whitetail deer. He'd watch bucks, does, even newborn fawns learning to walk. Sams would "shine" deer with his father in the evening, and in the daytime, he'd hunt the animal. His boyhood revolved around the AuSable River and its wildlife

It is this background that the Milford resident brings to his wildlife photography, a lifelong obsession that has culminated in an intimate understanding of the animals he photographs. In their habitat, Sams works without the human barrier that can exist between camera and animal.

His work has appeared in vario-

By nature, Sams is a quiet man – his years of waiting patiently in the wild have shaped his demeanor with the public he meets. For stories however, one can go no place better.

Ask him in person at the Sugarloaf Art Fair coming to the Novi Expo Center, April 19, 20, and 21. Joining Sams will be over 300 nationally acclaimed artisans ·

Two new gas stations slated for Ten Mile and Novi Road

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL
Staff Writer

It could get a little congested along Novi Road and Ten Mile this summer.

The dust will be flying and the orange cranes rumbling, but the result will be two shiny new and modern gas stations at a corner that's needed a new look for many years.

Both Total Petroleum and Speedway gas stations requested preliminary approval from the Novi Planning Commission last week and they got it.

Both hope to begin construction this summer which could cause confusion if the Metro Cell Security Store on the northwest corner is also finishing up driveway construction.

Speedway intends to raze and rebuild the current station, replacing it with a 2,410-square-foot convenience store, office and 12 pumps on the 0.7-acre site. In addition, plans include adding sidewalks and reducing the number of driveways to two and prohibiting left hand turns into the station from Ten Mile Road.

Conceptual plans for the new structure reflect building facades to be all brick with a gable shingled roof.

The plans have the commission happy except for the company's reluctance to take down its high pole sign and replace it with a ground monument sign on the corner.

People know it's a gas station, said Brandon Rogers, city planning consultant. So there's no need for the high sign. He called it a "singular sore thumb."

"For public relations I would make the sign smaller or they'll come out looking better than you," member Dr. Arthur Vrettas said to Speedway representatives, comparing their plan to the Total station's intentions across the street. "Be a good neighbor."

But representative for Speedway say they are grandfathered into the old sign ordinance and would like to keep it high in the sky.

The Speedway plan was approved 6-2 with Vrettas and Glen Bonaventura voting against the motion.

On the southwest corner of the intersection, Total Petroleum plans to tear down, rebuild and reconfigure the location of its service station, located on a 0.43-acre site.

This is the fourth plan for that site to come before the city. One of the past plans included a redesign of the entire corner property to include a new gas station and a McDonald's restaurant.

Now, Total intends to eliminate two of the four existing driveways, add bike paths and sidewalks, improve landscaping and reconfigure it's four pump islands. Left hand turns will also be prohibited from Ten Mile Road.

Proposed building facades indicate brick and glass will be used on all sides.

Also, Total will put in a ground monument sign to replace it's pole sign.

Commissioners unanimously approved the Total plan.

Both properties will have to head to the Zoning Board of Appeals to get a variance for building on a deficient site size.

Commissioners also requested both stations vary their construction times so as not to cause too much confusion at the intersection. Member Michelle Bononi also requested Total monitor the removal of some of the soil of the site labeled contaminated.

The new look is just another improvement to one of the busiest intersections in the city. Just a couple of months ago, the vacant and decrepit gas station on the northwest corner of the section began to get an update and landscaping and building improvements will continue on through this spring on the new Metro Cell Security Store in place now.

Jobless mark remains steady in state

Michigan's major labor markets reported little change in their unemployment rates from January to February according to estimates released today by the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC).

"Unemployment rates rose in only three areas in February," MESC director F Robert Edwards reported. "Three other areas had rate declines, while jobless rates in four areas remained unchanged from their January levels."

In those areas where rates changed, the changes were modest, ranging from one-tenth to three-tenths of a percentage point.

Among the state's major labor markets, unemployment rates declined in the Detroit and Lansing areas and the Upper Peninsula (UP.).

Rates climbed in the Ann Arbor, Benton Harbor and Jackson areas and remained unchanged in the Flint, Grand Rapids, Muskegon Holland, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and Saginaw/Bay/Midland areas.

The greatest change occurred in the Benton Harbor area, where the jobless rate climbed from 6.3 to 6.6 percent in February.

The Detroit and Lansing areas had the largest declines, as rates in both regions fell by two-tenths of a point to 4.7 and 3.7 percent, respectively.

The Ann Arbor area had the lowest February rate at 3.5 percent, while the UP had the highest rate at 10 percent.

Every area but Flint and Saginaw had employment increases in February, and all but three areas had labor force gains.

"The service industries and government reported job gains in most areas during February," Edwards said.

"Government increased as local schools as well as state colleges and universities reported higher employment with the end of school breaks in January."

Among the service industries, business and health services reported higher employment in February along with private education and amusements and recreation.

In the Detroit area, auto industry recalls contributed to the drop in joblessness, while gains in university and school employment lead to lower unemployment in the Lansing area.

Our Opinion

Good move to drop plan to contract out

Government

The Northville City Council, at the recommendation of the city administration, made the right move in deciding to scrap a proposal to contract out public safety dispatch and police lockup services.

The city had been looking into the possibility of paying Novi to perform dispatch and lockup functions on behalf of the city, citing a projected cost savings of more than $1 million over a 10-year span.

But a lot of people were made uneasy by the plan, saying they didn't like the idea of busy dispatchers in a remote location routing emergency calls for Northville. The proposal also involved closing the police department after 4:30 p.m. each day, another feature that apparently made residents nervous.

Whether the concerns of city taxpayers were well-founded or not, the fact is that the outsourcing proposal raised a protest the likes of which hasn't been seen in this city in many years. Approximately 150 people attended a city council meeting last month to express disapproval of the plan, an extraordinary number compared to the usual lack of attendance at such sessions.

We don't always believe that government should follow the ebb and flow of public opinion; in fact we have at times been critical of attempts to pander to the public whim. But in a case involving public safety we believe that perception is tantamount to reality.

Safety is often a state of mind. While it is potentially dangerous when people feel a sense of false security, the opposite is not true, and an unhealthy situation arises when people feel unprotected without due cause.

Using Novi dispatchers to handle Northville emergency calls might have resulted in no compromise of response time, but the loss of public confidence could have been considerable. Most people don't think about where their calls go when they dial 911, but enough residents were aware of the pending change to fill the council chambers with angry words of objection. Apparently people also find comfort in knowing that the doors of their police department are always open, even if only a couple of citizens walk through them late at night.

Few services that a city provides are as basic to a sense of community well-being as public safety. It seems ill-advised to tamper with this vital function when a large segment of your constituency is willing to bear the extra costs of full service provision.

Apathy marks involvement over city spending policies

The past few weeks have offered a good lesson to the level the public will become involved in the democratic process of small town politics.

Three weeks ago more than 150 people packed the Northville City Council chambers to voice their complaints over a proposed plan to send city police dispatch and lockup services to neighboring Novi

The meeting was ugly, with residents becoming emotional, even somewhat hostile towards city officials who thought they had a chance to save the taxpayers some money. In the end, the residents won the battle, and the city suspended the plan.

One week later about 50 residents showed up at city hall to criticize the city's preliminary plans to spend $1.4 million towards renovating city hall. Residents in attendance at the meeting voiced concerns over city officials spending that kind of money on city hall, and some even intimated that the city council and city officials were wasting taxpayer money needlessly and wanted a total accounting for the entire renovation program.

We bring this up, because first and foremost, we believe city residents have the right to question city officials when it comes to taxdollars. After all the residents and businesses are footing the bill

We find it interesting – even somewhat hypocritical – however, that those very people who were screaming at city officials for "recklessly" spending city taxdollars were conveniently absent from the first round of city budget hearings – the very meetings where spending taxdollars is discussed.

Three residents turned out for the first meeting on Monday, and not one word was uttered as city councilmembers and city staff virtually breezed through the general fund budget line item by line item.

Not one word. Sort of makes us want to question all of those people who landed some low blows at city officials a few weeks ago. Where were all of those "fiscally concerned" residents when the police and fire, city administration, and building and grounds budgets were being discussed? After all, those three departments have the meatiest budget proposals this year.

There are two budget hearings left, April 16 and 22, with a public hearing on the budget scheduled for May 20. We'd like to see more members of the public attend, but we're realistic enough to know that probably won't happen.

We expect the next time taxpayers decide to become involved with city government will come when city officials begin discussing plans to misuse some more taxdollars to, heaven forbid, repair streets.

Those cons can see you coming

Lee Snider

I had to chuckle a little, at my own expense, after reading the front-page story in Monday's Detroit Free Press about a Florida death-row inmate who's playing mail-correspondent Romeo to several women on the outside.

According to the article, a serial killer awaiting an eternity of appeals has been placing ads in lonely hearts publications and convincing vulnerable, lovelorn victims to send him money. The amounts are never large – $3 here, $5 there – but he's collected enough money orders to have a tidy four-figure con business going for himself.

As the story pointed out, that'll buy a lot of cigarettes, snacks ... and postage stamps.

The female prisoners at Scott Correctional over on Five Mile run the same racket, warden Joan Yukins once told me.

As I was reading the article, shaking my head at the mind-boggling gullibility of the love-starved victims, I had to recall my own naivete on a related matter not long ago.

A couple of years back, I received a pleading letter from an inmate in Nevada wanting to use my newspaper to help him find a pen pal. The prisoner employed an unassuming tone to explain that he was dutifully paying a debt to society for an armed robbery he had committed. Vowing to turn his life around, he offered sincere assurances that he was working hard to complete his high school GED and gain release at the earliest possible date.

In the meantime, he was desperately lonely, having no family or friends to give him a warm greeting or a simple how's it goin'. Would I please place his name and address in my newspaper in the hope that someone would take pity and correspond with him in prison.

I almost did. In fact, it was a last-minute bail-out by my general manager, Rich Perlberg, that saved me from a potentially embarrassing situation or worse.

Like a sap, I wrote a column identifying the inmate and inviting good-hearted readers to drop the guy a line. Didn't have to be anything fancy, I insisted, just a few words to show the poor slob someone cares about one of society's forgotten sons

Come publication day, the column was firmly in place on the editorial page, poised and ready to cast its Good Samaritan spell

Luckily, Perlberg happened to proof read the galley boards at the layout studio that day, catching the column before it went to press.

Perlberg said he had learned from a recent issue of Editor & Publisher magazine that inmates around the country were securing the home addresses of people by entering into pen pal arrangements with them Once released, the ex-cons would decide to pay a visit to their newfound friends, often showing up on the front porch of the unsuspecting letter writers.

What happened after that can only be imagined, but it's a safe bet the con game didn't end there

Perlberg wisely pulled my column, replacing it with a South Lyon reporter's childhood reminiscences about fireflies. I was never so moved by such innocent banality.

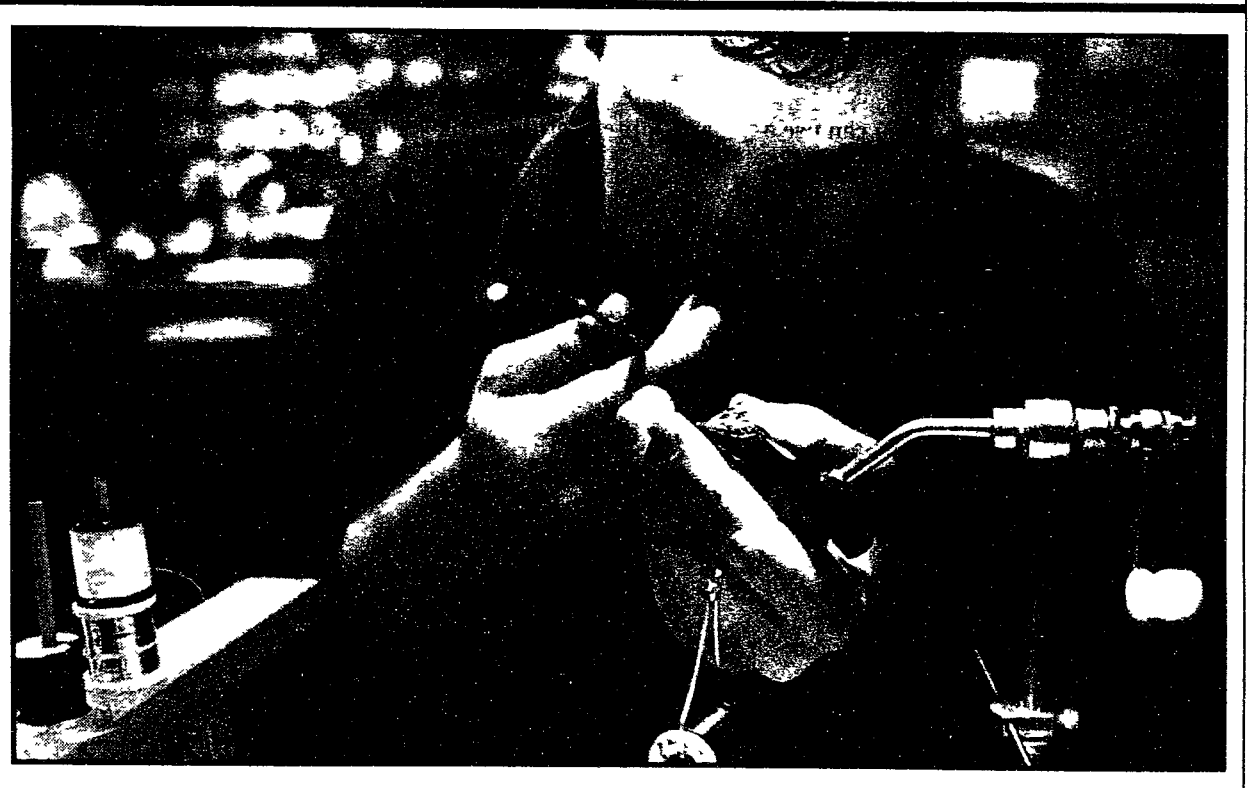

What I almost did wasn't on a par with the stupidity of the death row inmate's lady friends, but it was none too bright either I guess what P T Barnum said about a sucker being born every minute didn't make an exception for editors.

Randy Coble

By the time you read this, friends and neighbors, most of The Northville Record's staff will be on our way to West Virginia for a weekend of white-knuckled whitewater rafting.

Yup, Bryan Mitchell, Bob Jackson and I just can't take it anymore: wives, girlfriends, deadlines and the same-old same-old. That's why the three of us are hightailing to the hills for a good old-fashioned testosterone fest, mixing in the risk of life and limb just to spice things up.

There will be no phones, no faxes, no interviews or photo assignments for four glorious days. Instead, we will live as men, scratching at will and gnawing on hunks of beef jerky 'round the campfire before testing our mettle against the potentially deadly rapids of New River.

I love the smell of napalm in the morning.

It's funny how this trip came about in the first place. It turns out that Bryan has rafted the Gauley River, also in West Virginia, for the last couple of years. He goes on the weekend after Labor Day, when the dam at the headwaters of the Gauley is opened to control the level of the lake there.

As you can imagine, the ride that weekend is a pretty wild one, as evidenced by the video of his last trip that Bryan showed Bob and I about a month ago. It didn't take a half an hour before we were on board for this fall. About five minutes later the three of us decided we couldn't wait that long for the adrenaline high, hence this week's sortie.

If you've never done it, serious whitewater rafting is a blast, fun, action and excitement and a certain amount of danger all rolled into one. Besides that, this trip gives us a break from the everyday grind and lets us recharge the batteries

We've also got rock climbing and skydiving on tap in the next few months to make sure our summer doesn't get boring and Bob's even talking us into doing the Colorado River out west next year

The Northville Record – we live on the edge.

HARLEY HEAVEN

Speaking of cool stuff, there's surely not much in heaven or on earth that's cooler than a Harley-Davidson. The smiles are wide these days at the Northville Township police department among those who are cycle-qualified.

The department's two new police bikes hit the road recently and if you're into scooters they're something to behold. Kudos, by the way, to Department of Public Safety Director Chip Snider for making sure that his men are checked out on these things.

Snider has given them a kid's bike safety manual to make sure they remember to check the tires and handlebars before going for a spin. Informed sources say he's even tried to get each rider to sign the "Bike Safety Pledge" in the back of the manual.

Do they pick up gold stars for good behavior or some of those free ice cream coupons the kids get?

Returning to Michigan after a trip to Italy is a real eye-opener.

Our streets are wider, the traffic more law-abiding, the smoking far less. When lines are called for, people actually stay in the queue, relatively politely. The weather is warmer.

Moreover, there exists in Michigan today a real sense of economic optimism entirely lacking in Italy and the rest of Europe

Fueled by the expected retirement of nearly 250,000 hourly and salaried workers during the next 10 years, the Big Three are expected to hire up to 120,000 replacement workers in Michigan between now and 2003 In Europe, by contrast, unemployment is at historic highs - often in double digits - with no serious prospect of coming down in the foreseeable future

The solution most often mentioned by European politicians is to cut the work week, on average already shorter than the American 40-hour standard The idea is to spread available jobs over a larger number of people, regardless of the increased cost per hour

Talk to European business types, however and you discover the cause for long unemployment lines: Very high costs to employers for everything associated with hiring somebody, from long vacations to high social security taxes, from the virtual impossibility of ever firing a worker for cause to high-cost government-run health care systems.

"Why should we hire people," European businesses say, "when it costs us so much to pay for all the costs associated with employing them?"

And to judge from the wave of strikes in France and the general political climate elsewhere, in no European country does there exist enough political will to reduce sharply the costs associated with hiring people. An international lawyer from Michigan with an extensive client base in Europe put it this way "I don't see European business being internationally competitive for the foreseeable future.

"Their costs of employment are just too high, while their productivity gains are far too low "

By contrast, the University of Michigan study that produced the 129,000-new-hires estimate has provoked a feeding frenzy of activity by state government to find ways to get local youth ready for auto jobs that can pay up to $43 per hour

"The auto industry is very concerned about the ability of our basic educational system to produce the people necessary for the new auto jobs," according to U-M Professor David Cole, author of the study. Manufacturing plans are increasingly automated, requiring workers to be highly skilled, well motivated and competent to work in self-directed teams.

Gov. John Engler promptly proposed a new Michigan auto college, an on-line consortium led by U-M, to offer two-way video courses for potential auto employees.

He also proposed spending $4.5 million for a bunch of jump start institutes in communities with major auto plants to provide hands-on training for current auto employees and to help applicants qualify for new auto jobs.

He also wants to spend $500,000 to set up an Internet site to offer a virtual auto plant tour for students, teachers and parents. As Professor Cole says, "We must replace the social stigma of factory jobs. They are now knowledge jobs and demand more intellectual capacity than ever before."

Returning home to America is striking. In Europe, old states with ossified political systems seem unable to cope with the realities of today's global competitive economy. In America, government and industry seem hot to change the old assumptions and adapt new ways of preparing young people for new, productive jobs

Maybe that's why they called it "the New World "

Keep resources in public hands

Tim Richard

Got my new fishing license with trout stamp over the weekend Still $20 70 Gov John Engler's proposed 20 percent increase hasn't passed the Legislature and can't take effect until April of 1977

Got trout fever. Been doing a lot of thinking about it Picked up a fly rod on clearance at my favorite superduper market last fall Added a reel and fly line over the winter Been reading books and magazines about fly fishing

It made me ponder how lucky we Michiganians are to have cheap access to woods, lakes and rivers, despite Engler's policies Sure an angler needs a license to drive a license for the trailer, a license for a motorized boat, a state park pass so you can use a public boat launch, a license to fish and the need to satisfy a law on personal flotation devices But it's still relatively cheap

Consider Peter Essick's article, "A Passion for Trout " in the April issue of National Geographic magazine He opens with a description of a trout census while diving in chilly Oregon waters then winds up visiting a private club in England

The pinnacle of privilege is the 24-member Houghton Club in Stockbridge, owner of 14 glorious miles of the Test (River)

Turn the brass knob, ease open the green wooden door marked PRIVATE, and perhaps a member will pour you a glass of port from the dimpled crystal decanter on the sideboard Note the leather bound book on the club room table It is the fishing diary, and you will turn its pages to find the names of Gen Dwight D Eisenhower and Prince Charles, among other notables, who have fished as guests

"I see a flush of lords has been here," says Mick Lunn, inspecting the previous day's entries

I'm invited to fish with (the Honorable Anthony Samuel a member of 37 years) More precisely, since I'm not a member I'm invited to watch

The scene is irresistible Samuel, in tattersall shirt and black knit tie, is aiming a small brown fly at a feeding trout.

"A painting come to life " I scribble in my note pad as a mayfly alights on my finger

Not quite picture perfect, however. My hand itches for a rod.

Absentmindedly, I make casting motions with my pencil

Samuel glances back. "So sorry you can't have a go " he says And continues casting

"In America it is very different " Conrad Voss Bark (former fishing correspondent for the Times of London who) meant I shouldn't be offended.

"Here fishing rights can be bought and sold like commodities You might say rather wickedly that Americans have a socialist system of fishing, with the Brits, it's capitalist ."

For years I've thought of myself as a capitalist and a pal of the insurance companies But if Michigan's system of natural resources access is socialism, let's preserve it

Engler would like to raid the Natural Resources Trust Fund, claiming we have enough public land

A lot of riparian owners would like to block further acquisition of public boat launch sites No one who heard him will ever forget the guy who said at a public hearing in Oakland County, "If you don't own property, you don't need a boat "

A friend tells how his north woods neighbors tear down Department of Natural Resources signs on state land to disguise the fact that it's public

The attempt is deliberately to misguide the great unwashed public so they won't use the land.

Engler himself never has said it, but a pal of his advocates selling off all the state parks and letting "market forces" mete out natural resources Those of us who wear checked flannel shirts rather than tattersall and black ties have reason to fear that

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional events

In that capacity, she will oversee events such as the college's Culinary Extravaganza, Madrigal Dinner and Golf Outing She also will work with the Schoolcraft Foundation Board of Governors and major donors

Moceri has a background in sales and customer service, having worked with Glidden Paint Co., Northwest Airlines and Digital Equipment Corp., where she was in charge of special events, trade shows, internal publications and press releases

She has a bachelor's degree in marketing from Lawrence Technological University

One candidate pulls out of race to fill Senate seat

Four Republicans, including one Northville resident, remain in the hunt for David Honigman's former seat.

The Republican primary for former State Senator David Honigman's job is no longer as widely contested as it once was.

Candidate Robert Perkins of West Bloomfield, a self-employed CPA, has pulled his name from the race. Still very much in the running are State Rep. Willis Bullard, R-Milford, State Rep. Barbara Dobb, R-Commerce, Northville resident Ed Cox and Farmington Hills City Council Member Terry Sever.

Bullard has been endorsed by Honigman.

The Democratic primary will not be so exciting. Only one candidate has entered the field, Barry Brickner of Farmington Hills.

Brickner and the Republican winner of the May 13 primary will face off in a June 4 special election to fill the 15th District state senate vacancy.

If one of the two state representatives makes it to the senate, an additional election could be called to fill his or her seat, which would stand vacant from September to January. Both Dobb and Bullard are up for reelection in November for their current jobs. The new terms begin at the start of 1997.

Until his resignation, Honigman represented Oakland County Northville in the Michigan Senate.

State park staff take show on road during off season

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Kids in Walled Lake, Detroit and outstate schools learned about life in the 18th and 19th centuries on the northern Great Lakes during the months when Mackinac State Park staffers have little to do

"Before Detroit and Chicago were there, Mackinac was thought of as a place of commercial, strategic and military importance," said Carl Nold, director of the Mackinac Island State Park Commission.

"I have seen antique maps of the 1600s in French and Italian that identified the Straits of Mackinac," Nold told the House Natural Resources Committee in Lansing.

Reaching out to schools is part of the autonomous commission's effort to promote an area the National Geographic Society ranks as one of the top 10 state parks in the United States.

"I like your school outreach a lot," said Rep. Bill Bobier, R-Hesperia, committee chair. "How'd you do that?"

"In 1988 we decided to take the program out to the schools during the off season," Nold said. "Initially, we went only 65 miles from the park. Two years ago, we went beyond 65 miles. We asked the schools to share the cost of travel and food.

"We reached eight classes a day, five days a week," he said of some areas. "If you want to attract a fourth grader, you fire a rifle."

"Those fourth graders are the ones you want to get," said Bobier.

FEEL BEAVER'S TEETH

According to a news release from the Mackinac Island Commission.

"The teeth of a beaver can only be emphasized by feeling and touching them. Talented male and female costumed interpreters transport students back into colonial history with their classroom presentations. Children explore frontier music, dance, crafts and games ... Thousands more children can see first-hand how red-coated British soldiers fired their muskets, how Native Americans started fires for cooking and keeping warm ..."

Nold said the traveling history show came to Marquette, Munising, Traverse City, Holt, Ironwood, Coldwater, Mount Pleasant, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

A 1994 trip to Walled Lake covered five schools and 31 classes.

Field full in OCC trustee election

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

New coalitions are developing in the politics surrounding Oakland Community College as the election season opens.

Nine candidates filed Monday for two posts on the seven-member, non-partisan board of trustees in the June 10 election. By Tuesday they were scattering to work or spring break vacations, leaving many political questions unanswered for the time being.

Among them:

• Will Republican and Democratic leaders be able to put together a bipartisan coalition behind publisher Jeanne Towar and retired OCC professor John A. Wangler?

They are trying, said George Mosher, a Southfield lawyer who chaired the OCC board when the two-year college was founded three decades ago. Mosher, who fought the current board majority unsuccessfully to keep ex-Chancellor Patsy Calkins in place, said two key figures have endorsed the Towar-Wangler ticket.

One is Republican L. Brooks Patterson, the county executive and gubernatorial hopeful. Patterson worked with Dr. Calkins on economic development, aided Calkins in OCC's first successful bid for new property tax money, and rose to support her when the movement to oust her surfaced last September.

The other is Democrat Donald Tucker, of the Bloomfield Hills law firm of Howard and Howard. Tucker has been a county party chair; he was a Democratic nominee for the University of Michigan board; he and his firm have been big contributors to the OCC Foundation; and he advised the OCC board minority on its parliamentary tactics as it sought to preserve Calkins' job. Eventually the board majority fired Howard and Howard as its counsel.

Towar is the publisher of Detroit Monthly magazine and a vice president of Crain's Detroit Custom Publishing Division.

Wangler, of Bingham Farms, taught psychology and philosophy at OCC from 1968 until his retirement in 1992

• What kind of defense will incumbent trustee Sandra Ritter put up?

Ritter, an 18-year veteran of the OCC board and longtime veteran of Waterford Democratic politics, was the moving force behind Calkins' ouster. Weathering enormous pro-Calkins pressure from audiences, Ritter shoved out Tucker's law firm, engineered the ouster of board chair Janice Simmons, and won 5-2 approval for the dismissal of Calkins.

Ritter, too, could not be reached Tuesday for answers to how she will campaign for a fourth term.

• Where do the other candidates fit into the campaign?

The best known is James A Doyon, highly visible in his seven terms (1971-84) as an Oakland County commissioner. Doyon, a Democrat from Huntington Woods, left politics for teaching but in the past made one unsuccessful bid for the OCC board, finishing in the middle of the pack.

Jan A. Mack, a former OCC student from Waterford, made an earlier bid for the OCC board.

Thomas A. Sullivan, a dentist who lives in Oakland Township, was first to file.

Lawrence D. Kohl, of Farmington Hills, is an attorney in a Royal Oak law firm and is among many bearers of the Kohl name practicing law.

Rounding out the field are Ellen Ferguson of Bloomfield Hills and Royal Oak attorney Marguerite Fitzsimmons Walker II. Candidates have until 4 p.m. Thursday to withdraw

Comedy acts drive audiences bananas at The Timbers in Novi

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

As far as night life goes, Novi's never been much of a threat to Las Vegas ... or for that matter even Royal Oak.

But now the city has its first comedy club, at the Timbers Seafood & Grill.

Several years ago, the restaurant was destroyed by fire. These days, owner Chuck Miller hopes to bring the house down again, this time with laughter.

Comedy is mostly what's on the menu at Bananas, the swinging spot in the basement. Soupy Sales opened the club several weeks ago. On stage over the next few months will be performers including Soupy again and Michael Powell, the guy from the Police Academy movies who makes all the vocal sound effects.

This spring, the popular musical act, The Gaylords, will also make an appearance.

The show business stuff started, Miller said, when his friend from Farmington Hills, Jack Bogorad, asked to look the place over

"It's the only club in Novi, we take care of our own. We want people to show up and have a good time," Bogorad said.

"The acoustics and the sound and the setting are absolutely perfect. It's absolutely great. Soupy said to me."

From the public the response so far has been tremendous, Miller's found

"I think it's going to be very good for people, there's going to be a lot of activity" he added.

"I try a lot of different things. A lot of people don't even realize we're open again."

The Timbers reopened in June 1994

Upstairs, Miller has enlarged the dance floor so folks can have a real night out, dinner, a show and then jiving with a live band. Downstairs, the basement has been completely redesigned to accommodate the new club, with seating for over 200.

Impresario Bogarad, who also handles the entertainment at the Farmington Elks, is in charge of setting up the shows at Bananas. It's all brought to Novi by Classic Productions and Joseph A. Nahra Enterprises.

"A lot of people come to me and say, 'you have the only comedy club in Novi; we have to go a long way to drive to a comedy club," Miller said.

Currently, shows are scheduled mainly for Fridays but with some on Saturday.

Past appearances have included comedians Nancy Redman and Johnny Ginger. On April 12 and 13, the Tom Taylor Show is on-stage with music and comedy

The Timbers is at 40380 Grand River Avenue. Shows are on Fridays.

Bananas opens at 8 p.m. The show is at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

SCAMMING SENIORS

Novi Police officer informs seniors about crime prevention

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

Why would anyone want to prey on a helpless old lady?

The answer is in the question – help less. But seniors don t need to be help less or uninformed

Seniors who have a loss of strength vision problems or are not as alert as a younger person are likely targets for con artists and criminals

Todd Anger, crime prevention officer with the Novi Police Department, visits seniors groups and explains that there are over 800 different kinds of scams but they all are derived from about 12 basic types

"Crime is like a triangle " Anger said The criminal has a need and sees an opportunity and tries to reel in the potential victim

"We do have control of the opportunity " Anger said "by removing the oppor tunity "

Be alert and observant Don t look at the ground or carry too many packages

"Criminals won't choose someone who is likely to identify them," Anger said

Make sure your home is as secure as possible Deadbolts should be on good solid exterior doors You might consider installing a stronger larger strike plate with long screws

Use a wood dowel in sliding glass doors and windows and also consider drilling a hole for the dowel for a tighter fit

A home that looks vacant may attract the wrong kind of attention Keep leaves raked remove snow have good lights even on timers to make it look like someone lives there

Anger advises keeping garage doors closed Most crimes in Novi are crimes against property When garage doors are left open anyone driving around can see if you have anything worth stealing like snow blowers lawn mowers expensive bikes golf clubs etc

If you are home alone and think someone is breaking into your house, call out turn on a light or the television A criminal doesn t want to be caught according to Anger

Cordless phones are good because you can take them with you throughout your home Anger also recommends having phones in several rooms in the home

When you call 9-1 1, the caller s phone number and address appear on the computer screen The 9-1-1 operators know where the call is coming from

When you are in your car there are several things to keep in mind Keep the doors locked when you are in the car and lock it up when you park. Never stop in a remote area Always leave room ahead of you so you can drive away if a problem should arise Anger advised Park close to a building in a well lit area

Then there are the contractor scams that are pretty common A person, usually a man, knocks on a victim's door and introduces himself as a contractor He then tells the homeowner they have a bad roof, cracked cement, etc and offers to give a free estimate He offers a 50 percent discount if the victim pays up front

Don't pay any money up front, advises Anger Read the contract and check with the Better Business Bureau

If you need to have repairs done on your home, talk to neighbors, relatives and friends for referrals

Another sting operation is the bank examiners scam. The victim is approached by someone identifying themselves as an officer in the bank examiners department and will even show identification to that effect. They go on to identify a bank employee that is suspected of having a problem and tell the victim they need to set up a sting in order to catch the teller They offer to take the victim to the bank so that they can withdraw money from their personal account They promise that the money will be returned after the teller is caught and even write out a receipt for the withdrawn money

Another common hustle is the Pigeon Drop Although well publicized, it still manages to claim victims. Two people lay a sob story on the victim and a third person comes along who claims to have found a sum of money. The three offer to see an attorney but suggest that all four individuals put up good faith money The victim pays the good faith money and never sees the trio again

Criminals often use the telephone to pull their cons

With telephone caller identification capabilities, the caller's phone number, name and business may show up on the caller identification screen You know before you pick up the phone who's calling

You can call the police department with that phone number if you suspect someone might be trying to pull a fast one

"That little piece of information can really help us out," Anger said

The potential victim receives a telephone call and is told that a relative or friend is in jail and that they should send money After the caller convinces the victim that his story is true, he gives instructions on where to mail the money to get the friend or relative out of jail

Police do not make the phone call, according to Anger, the person arrested makes the call If you receive a call soliciting for money on behalf of the police, Anger advises calling the police to check it out to see if it is legitimate.

Anger tells seniors in his talks to keep wallets in the front pocket of your pants Don't carry much in the wallet Purses with long straps should not be worn with the straps across the chest It is better to carry the purse over the shoulder and hold on to the strap, Anger advises

"If they want something like your purse or your wallet, just let it go," Anger said, "You can't replace your life."

Keep a whistle handy or put it on your key chain and use it in panic situations.

You can protect yourself by not giving out personal information such as your phone number, your mother's maiden name, your social security number, your date of birth, etc

Another way to protect yourself when using a credit card is to always take the carbon receipt.

If you are being bothered by prank phone calls, note the time and day you receive the calls. Then file a police report. Ameritech Security will run a trace

"Trust your gut feeling," Anger said, "and act on it "

Con artists will also watch the obituary announcements in the newspaper and send a widow or widower a bill saying the deceased made a purchase for which there is an outstanding balance. The con artist is banking on the bereaved not thinking clearly. It is also possible that the remaining spouse was not aware of every purchase made and therefore pays the bill.

Be wary of someone who shows a lot of interest or sympathy.

There are some catch phrases to look out for when a person calls on the phone or knocks at the door. Words like free stuff, sign now or this offer is only good today

If the offer sounds too go to be true, it probably is.

Mary Bolander offers support to the recently bereaved.

Bolander is a phone call away for some

By DOROTHY NASH
Special Writer

When death takes away a person who has been close to you – a relative or a friend – it helps to talk to someone and that person may be a bereavement volunteer for Ann Arbor Hospice.

Mary Bolander is that kind of volunteer. For the last five years she has had a list of five or six persons at a time who have asked for help. She calls them on the phone every three or four days, "encouraging them not to sit at home, but to go out with family or friends."

"I tell them my name," she said, "and that I am a volunteer I ask how are you doing? Usually they're aware that I'm going to call. Some people can talk better to a stranger."

"Usually it takes 13 months before the person is able to do it alone."

"There are 15 of us in the bereavement group. The women – there was one man in our class" she said, – "take a training course in the daytime for eight or nine weeks

"We are taught you have to cry," Bolander said " You have to grieve, get it out of your system "

The first Friday of every month a bereavement group of 12 or 15 gets together to discuss individual clients – never by name – and give a report

'Why do I do this?" Mary Bolander asked.

"It isn't something I enjoy. But I'm helping somebody I've been through it myself and it helped."

When she thought about getting into this type of volunteering, she considered being a "befriender volunteer," one who takes a person out to lunch to distract them but "I couldn't do it."

Working on the phone without ever meeting is the only way Mary Bolander feels at ease. It's better for her and the client.

If you are interested in volunteering in the Arbor Hospice bereavement program, call Kathy Brennan at (313) 677-0500.

Woman's retreat planned

Carol Workens

A woman's retreat focusing on Woman to Woman in Search of Fulfillment" with Luan Jackson and Kelly Williams will be held on Saturday, April 20, from 9 until 3:30 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church, 200 East Main Street in Northville

Luan Jackson was raised in the Belgian Congo where her parents were medical missionaries. A graduate of the University of Michigan, she has a master's degree in psychology, is married and has two grown children. Jackson has done extensive speaking and is dedicated to helping Christians realize their God-given potential. She can intertwine scripture with life experiences and will help retreat attendees accept themselves as God's children

Attendees will break into small group sessions in the morning and have time for reflection in the afternoon.

Kelly Williams is the assistant director of music at the church and a graduate of Wittenburg University with a bachelor of music degree. She is married and the mother of three children. Williams will provide the opening music as well as an afternoon music program.

Prom season good time to remind youngsters about car crash statistics

Many teenagers and young adults have the attitude that they are invincible They also are of the mistaken belief that statistics don't apply to them

But approximately one-third of deaths among 15- to 24-year-olds result from car crashes In 1994, 29 percent of crash-related deaths among 15- to 17-year-olds and 44 percent among 18- to 20-year-olds were caused by intoxication This data supports the emergency medicine physicians' experience that youth who engage in drinking as part of prom and graduation activities are at risk of dying as a result of car crashes.

Botsford Emergency Department director Ronald Lagerveld, D.O., serves as medical director of Health Emergency Medical Services, the organization responsible for pre-hospital care in western Wayne County. He sees firsthand the results of drinking and driving on prom night "Although there is more and more awareness concerning drinking and driving on prom night, I'm sure that this prom season myself or one of my emergency medicine colleagues will again have the unfortunate task of relaying tragic news to family members in an emergency waiting room.

"I urge parents to talk with their teenagers about the decision not to drink and drive. Set a good example, and your children will follow your lead."

NORTHVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

With the freshness of spring in the air many of our students have been involved in extra activities that we would like to recognize and congratulate them for:

To Mike Clancy for scoring high enough on the American High School mathematics examination to participate in the American Invitational Mathematics Examination. Andrew Song also did real well on the exam.

The VFW sponsored a "Voice of Democracy" radio speech contest in which first place was awarded to Andy Song and second place went to Anne Wang.

Justin Jezewski was the proud recipient of a tremendous scholarship by the Center for Creative Studies.

The Pom Pon team brought home for the first time a division championship. The girls placed first in the Division II state finals ahead of 10 other qualifying teams. Coach Patti Paciocco and the team were delighted to bring home a win for Northville High School for the first time since the Pom Pon program has begun.

This month's Teacher Pat on the Back goes to Ms. Pryce, Patton, Zidell, Couzens, Smith, Sole, Davis, Hall; Mrs. Gorshak and Seiler; Messrs. Sharrar, Ford, Romba, and Dent; and Dr. Johnson. These teachers continue to have a positive affect on our students. We would like to thank them for their kindness.

Congresswoman Lynn Rivers from the 13th Congressional District has invited all Northville High School art students to submit artwork for the U.S. House of Representatives 15th annual High School Art Competition. All winning pieces will be on display locally for a week. The winning entry will be sent to Washington, D.C., and put on display for one year. Good luck to all of the participants.

And 40 million more on the ground below.

"Executive Decision" a Warner Bros and Silver Pictures is an airborne action thriller starring Kurt Russell, Steven Seagal and Halle Berry

A Washington, D C bound 747 is hijacked by Nagi Hassan (David Suchet) the second-in command of one of the most ruthless and feared terrorist organizations in the world It is presumed the 400 Americans aboard will be offered in trade for the group s leader imprisoned in England and awaiting extradition to the United States

David Grant PhD (Kurt Russell) an American intelligence analyst and expert in international terrorism shatters these assumptions when he presents his own chilling assessment of the facts that Nagi Hassan operating on his own secret agenda has targeted Washington with a cargo of DZ-5 — the most lethal nerve toxin in the world

The President s Crisis Management Team must choose between ignoring Grant s theory and allowing the 747 to land in Washington, risking the lives of thousands, or destroying it before it reaches U S airspace, sacrificing 400 American passengers

Lieutenant Colonel Austin Travis (Steven Seagal) Special Forces leader of an elite-terrorist unit, offers the only solution Using an experimental aircraft designed to transfer bomber crews at high altitude Travis proposes to dock with the 747 five miles above the Atlantic and put his team of experts, including Rat (John Leguizamo), Cappy (Joe Morton), Louie (B D Wong) and Baker (Whip Hubley), secretly on board

Two others are asked to join the mission Grant, for his intelligence expertise and Cahill (Oliver Platt), the civilian design engineer of the delivery plane

During the docking with the 747 the delivery plane is destroyed leaving half the team on board the 747 with no communication to the outside world

As the President s Crisis Team prepares to destroy the 747, assuming all were lost in the explosion of the delivery plane, the stranded men work feverishly to dismantle a hair-trigger computerized bomb and take over the aircraft before it reaches the fail safe of U S airspace Their only ally on board is Jen a brave and resourceful flight attendant (Halle Berry)

"I like the idea of this movie" says Joel Silver who produces "Executive Decision"

"I felt that this was the kind of film the audience could have a good time watching They could ask themselves what they would do in this situation because the hero, David Grant, is a pretty ordinary guy who gets thrown into this situation"

Says Kurt Russell about his character, Grant is someone I haven't had the opportunity to play before He lives in an ivory tower, surrounded by people just like himself He makes decisions based on his intellect but never has to suffer the consequences of those decisions"

Unforgettable adventure 'White Squall' brings rave reviews

WHITE SQUALL
NORTHVILLE

A group of problem teenage boys join forces aboard a teaching windjammer sailing vessel as they sail halfway around the world Their bonding begins to form as they face the difficulties of handling the ship against the wilds of the ocean under the firm command of their captain played by Jeff Bridges The personality of each boy is revealed as their insecurities and vulnerabilities come forth while confined to close quarters with a group of peers

A strong performance is given by Jeff Bridges as the captain of the aging sailing vessel who tries to impart discipline on the young crew who are aimless and need direction

The boys become quite skilled at handling the ship and each other it is an unforgettable adventure Just as all appears to be going well an overwhelming storm called a white squall reeks havoc with the ship

In spite of the expertise of the captain tragedy abounds When they arrive back on land a court case is held to determine if the captain s license should be revoked The unity that is displayed in this scene is about as good as it gets with heart-warming feelings Although a bit slow at times, this movie definitely redeems itself in the end Ignore the poor reviews in the "other papers A must see

BY TRACY A MOROFSKI
NORTHVILLE

"White what? you may ask

In my opinion "White Squall" is an excellent movie that has failed to receive proper recognition

Haven t heard much about it? The movie is about a crew of young men guided by their fearless captain Jeff Bridges, who molds them from scared boys into confident young men.

In the beginning each of the boys have their own fears to overcome and they fail to get along but they become a team of shipmates and friends

This is a dream of many children, to be free on the open sea, to climb mountains to experience danger, and to make friends out of potential enemies

Although Bridges hardly made an Oscar-winning performance the young actors show a substantial amount of talent Examples include Balthazar Getty and Party of Five's Bailey

The boys develop skills to work a well-run ship learning to cope with the unexpected Regardless of what they have learned, however they are only "students and their captain is the only person responsible for the decisions made while on their voyage

The growth and maturity of the crew becomes obvious when they firmly stand behind their captain even though he makes a crucial decision that ends in tragedy

Kickers pound John Glenn 9-0 for 4-0 record

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

It had to happen.

Northville High wasn't going to go a full season without allowing a goal. Westland John Glenn got the first score against the Mustangs this season in an April 3 contest.

But relax sports fans Northville still won the game 9-1

Coach Doug Lyon said his team, which is now 4-0, has been focusing on not playing down to the level of weaker teams But a momentary breakdown allowed the goal to happen.

"We let up a little," he said

But when you're undefeated and allowed one goal the whole season, things are going pretty well

"I'm very happy," said Lyon "I wish we didn't have spring break this week We're on a roll "

Northville wastes no time in getting back into action The Mustangs play Farmington Monday, Livonia Churchill Wednesday and Troy Athens a week from tomorrow

"It's a big week for us," said Lyon.

Several Mustangs had big games against John Glenn.

Amanda DeKoker, Courtney Todd and Brigid Bowdell each scored twice Lori Carbott, Sue McQuaid and Jackie Rompel had the other goals

Bowdell added two assists Lyndsay Huot, Rompel and Tisha Mazolle also had assists

Northville led 8-1 by halftime

The Mustangs had a similarly easy game on April 2 by beating Walled Lake Central 9-0 Northville scored six times in the first half of this game

> "I'm very happy. I wish we didn't have spring break this week. We're on a roll."
> Northville soccer coach

Rompel led the scoring attack with three goals for the hat trick.

"It was a good game," Lyon said "We moved the ball well."

NORTHVILLE 2, CANTON 0

This was the big one. For years, the Chiefs and Livonia Churchill have dominated the WLAA's Western Division

Northville served notice April 1 that it might be the team to beat in 1996 The game was a testament to the hard work the Mustangs have put in thus far this spring

Canton used 21 players in the game Lyon said the Chiefs shuttled players in and out continuously, as many as five at a time, in an effort to wear his team down

Didn t work. Although Northville played the game with just two subs, there were no breakdowns.

"We kept up with them," the coach said "I think they were kind of surprised "

Both teams put pressure on the ball, which forced more kick-and-run soccer instead of the controlled passing game Northville likes to play

Despite that fact the Mustangs controlled the game Bowdell scored in the final five minutes of the first half on a crossing pass from McQuaid

Northville then came out strong in the opening minutes of the second half DeKoker tipped in a beautiful crossing pass from Bowdell

Lyon said the first few minutes of the second half were important

"I told the girls we need to beat them in the first 10 minutes," he said "We have to beat them to the ball be aggressive and take it to them "

Northville did just that. After the second goal, Lyon said some of the wind went of Canton's sails

The Mustangs then cruised home for the victory.

"It's been five years since we beat them," said Lyon "It was a huge victory."

Mustangs tame Lions 7-5

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

The great thing about baseball is that it's so darned unpredictable.

Take Northville High's 7-5 road victory over South Lyon April 3. Ahead 5-3 in the bottom of the sixth, manager Mickey Newman summoned relief ace K Yoshida to the mound.

Here's a guy who didn't give up an earned run all of last year So, what happens? The Lions rally for two.

Yoshida came in with runners on first and second and two out. Before he throws a pitch, he's called for a balk and the runners advance to second and third.

Then the batter knocks a seeing-eye, dying quail blooper that scores both of them to make it 5-5.

Ah, but the baseball gods were smiling on the Mustangs. Northville got two runs of its own in the top of the seventh on no hits, three walks, a ground out RBI by Ben Szostek and a steal of home by Jeff Sieving.

Weird ball game But a win, nonetheless.

"We fought back in both games," Newman said of the South Lyon win and a loss to North Farmington the day before "I was happy with the kids' effort in the late innings. But we need to get better early on."

The victory improved Northville's record to 1-1 on the season The Mustangs resume action Monday on the road against Walled Lake

Locals set to run in Boston

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Monday's Boston Marathon will feature a field of close to 50 000

But it s doubtful that any of the runners will be more serious about competing than Carol Poenisch The longtime Northville resident runs twice a day, monitors her diet closely and studies the sport as intently as anyone

"It's a science " said Poenisch "People I run with are always talking about better ways of training and (avoiding) injuries "

All of which translates to better performances on the course Poenisch is hoping to use that knowledge to achieve a very specific goal

"It would be wonderful to go under three hours," the 41-year-old said

Robyn Frankowicz has a more modest goal She simply wants to finish and enjoy all of the festivities surrounding Boston's 100th installment of the marathon.

"I haven't taken (training) seriously," Frankowicz, 43, said "I plan on running and walking and carrying a camera. I'm going to take my time. I don't care how it takes to finish; I just want to have fun."

Running is fun for Poenisch, too

The one-time educator and current homemaker has been racing since the 1970s. She began running with the Livonia YMCA and has belonged to several groups since.

Marathoning may seem a little tedious to most. But it's a constant challenge for Poenisch.

"I'm never bored," she added. "I think about each mile that goes by."

She also keeps a constant eye on her split times, such as the 10-mile mark, 15 miles and so on.

"There's so much strategy," Poenisch said. "You have to keep focused."

Focused is exactly what she has been in her training.

Poenisch runs about 60 miles per week in "doubles." She runs in the morning and evening for about seven miles total.

As the race date gets closer, she gets more strict with her diet. No junk food, high fiber and lots of carbohydrates a few days before the marathon.

"I think my training has been going pretty well," she said.

Monday will be her second Boston race and 10th marathon overall. The New England course is a tough one, but she's looking forward to it.

"There are a lot of hills and a lot of declines," said Poenisch. "It's tough on the quadriceps.

"It'll be a lot of fun."

While Frankowicz's focus will be on fun, it doesn't mean she's a novice at the sport.

Like Poenisch, this year's race will be her second in Boston. In all she's done more than a dozen marathons.

"This is the one I'm taking a totally different attitude with," she said. "I'm going to take in the scenery."

Frankowicz qualified for Boston last May at a Traverse City race. She beat the cut off mark of 3:50 by more than a half hour.

Netters gain split with Wildcats 4-4

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Northville High tennis team didn't win its season opener with Novi on April 3.

But, the Mustangs didn't lose either The two Baseline Road schools battled to a 4-4 at Novi High.

Northville coach Dick Norton said the Wildcats played tough.

"They played well and had us on the ropes," he added.

The Mustangs trailed 4-2 heading into the final two matches. Third doubles team Rory Dunnabeck and Axel Von Freyhold took a three-set victory to give Northville the draw.

Norton said he had to juggle his lineup significantly because of player vacations. He believes the match would've been quite different with a full lineup.

"I think the score would've been 6-2 or 7-1," said Norton.

Northville resumes the season Wednesday at Canton. Match time is 4 p.m.

Top singles player Dave Anderson was on hand for last week's match. He lost in two sets to Novi's Rich Vandermass 6-3, 6-3

"I don't think Dave had a particularly good day," said Norton

At second singles, Ravi Mujumdar beat Jem Tankersley 6-3, 6-1 Arjun Srinivasan beat Scott Baetens 6-3, 6-2

Novi drew even in singles matches when No. 4 Adam Williams, a sophomore, lost to Rich Kowalczyk 2-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3.

"I thought Williams had a nice match," said Norton. "He did well for his first varsity match "

The Wildcats' Chris Chirgwin and Terdell Hayes beat Ryan Steinhauer and Jared Cromas at top doubles 7-5, 5-7 and 6-4. Northville's Matt Thompson and Yusuke Ishigami beat Chris Duprey and Jukes Namm 7-6 (8-6), 4-6 and 6-4.

Dunnabeck and Von Freyhold played Adam Fischer and Erin Vermillion at third doubles. They won in three matches, 4-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4.

Anish Shah and Steve Rietzke lost to Cory Davenport and Joe Simon 6-2, 6-2

Tracksters fall big to Falcons 75-53

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

It's hard to hide a weak spot in track.

Farmington proved that point to the Mustang girls' track team on April 2. The Falcons swept the shot put and discus events to put Northville in a big-time hole.

As it turned out, it was a hole the Mustangs couldn't climb out of. Farmington won the dual meet 75-53.

Coach Chris Cronin said his team needs to develop a "stopper" in the two events.

"We need somebody that will score first or second no matter what," he commented.

The coach added that his team simply doesn't have enough talent to overcome 18-point deficits. Shot put and discus need to produce points, in other words.

"We aren't going to do much of anything unless we get that squared around," said Cronin. "We need to find people on the team that can contribute."

Northville resumes the season a week from today at home against Farmington Hills Harrison Give Farmington credit. The Falcons are a strong team, Cronin said, but Northville will improve.

"We're definitely a better team than we showed Tuesday," he added.

The Mustangs started off decently.

Mary Essary placed second in the high jump by clearing 4-foot-6. Ashley Ossola won the long jump with a leap of 14-6 while Essary was third at 13-5.

Farmington won the 3,200-meter relay. Northville came back to take first in the 100-meter high hurdles.

Erica Winn, a sophomore, had a time of 17.9 for first. Dana Chamotti was second in 18.3.

Northville went one-two in the 100-meter dash. Carrie Dalziel won in 13.8 while Nicole Weyer was second in 14.2.

The team of Dalziel, Rompel, Emily Howland and Weyer won the

Softballers ripped by South Lyon 17-8

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

The Mustang softball team's offense got rolling in its second game of the season April 3 at South Lyon with eight runs

The only problem was that Northville's pitching surrendered 17 runs and 18 hits to the Lions It all added up to the Mustangs' second straight loss

"South Lyon is a very hard hitting team," coach Karen Baird said "They hit it where we weren't."

The first year coach tried to take some positives from the game Baird pointed out that her team played well defensively and didn't commit any errors

"We had our moments," she said "But we need to continue to work on our fundamentals."

Northville, 0-2, resumes play Monday at home against Walled Lake Western

Despite the lopsided score, South Lyon didn't lead the game the entire way.

Down 1-0, Northville rallied for five runs in the top of the second Andrea Moretti tripled home Jenny Frisbee to start the uprising

Erin Tovey and Michelle Menghini added runs batted in during the frame Wild pitches accounted for two other runs

That lead didn't last long, however

South Lyon put 10 runs on the board in the bottom of the second The Lions hit Northville starter Menghini hard during the rally

The Lions led 12-5 after four innings when Baird changed pitchers. Moretti didn't fare much better, though, and allowed five runs on six hits

Menghini did get a little revenge at the plate She blasted a solo home run over the centerfield fence in the sixth inning

Menghini had two hits and two RBI on the day Frisbee and Moretti each added two hits

NORTH FARMINGTON 10, NORTHVILLE 3

The Mustangs opened the season at home April 2 with a loss to North Farmington

The game remained close until the sixth inning

Ahead 4-3 in the top of the sixth inning, the Raiders added six insurance runs Three Mustang errors aided the visitors rally

Northville got all three of its runs in the third inning

Mandy Sabo led off with a walk After two were out Tovey singled to score Sabo

Menghini then hit a two-run homer The Mustangs had a chance to blow the game open

After Menghini s homer Northville loaded the bases on walks to Sara Roth and Moretti and a single by Sheehan Sara Johnson grounded out to the pitcher, though to end the threat

Western.

Tim Smojver opened on the mound for Northville against South Lyon and did a fine job. The right hander pitched into the fourth inning and allowed just two runs

The Mustangs supported him at the plate with three runs in the top of the second

Kyle Hitchcock doubled and stole third to lead off. Eric Sweithick followed with an RBI single and then scored on a single by Bill Sekerka Phil Kozdron got the final run home with a single of his own

"He s been amazing so far," Newman said of the junior left fielder, who has four hits in six at bats this spring

Smojver got in trouble in the fifth Chris Shiftar replaced him on the mound with runners at first and second He was able to work out of the jam and allow just one run to preserve a 3-2 Northville lead

The Mustangs made it 5-2 in the sixth Kozdron had an RBI double and Nate Forney an RBI single

NORTH FARMINGTON 4, NORTHVILLE 3

The Mustangs made a good comeback on the road April 2 but ended with a loss in eight innings

Down 3-1 in the top of the seventh, Kozdron smacked an RBI triple and later scored on a single by Sekerka Both were pinch hitters

Errors and dropped balls allowed South Lyon to score an unearned run off Yoshida in the bottom of the eighth

Golfers open season Tuesday

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

The Mustang golf team lost a lot of experience and talent through graduation last year

But does that mean a rebuilding season is in store for Northville High this spring?

Hardly The Black and Orange feature several of the top players in the Western Lakes conference.

While repeating last year's 11-1 mark and second place WLAA finish may be difficult, coach Trish Murray thinks 1996 will be a good year nonetheless

"I expect we'll be right up there," she said "We're young, but they're young kids with experience "

Success is nothing new for the Mustangs

In their five years of existence Northville has posted a 50-9 dual meet record The Mustangs worst record in that span was 7-4

"I think we have a good team " Murray said "I'd love to have another 11 1 season "

Northville will carry 11 girls on its varsity roster Six of those are returnees

Emily Baldwin heads the list

"Emily saw a lot of varsity time last year " Murray said "She's very capable of shooting in the 40s She's got a great head for the game "

Fellow senior Laura Genitti may be a diamond in the rough She joined the team for the first time last year and since then has worked hard to improve

"She's a true competitor " said Murray

Monica Prasad has a varsity slot nailed down The junior finished in the conference top 15 a year ago Murray said she has the ability to shoot in the 40s on a consistent basis

In high school golf six players compete in dual matches The top four scores are counted for the varsity total

Murray said she'd like to have two scores in the 40s and two more right around 50

"We want to throw out anything above a 52," she added

Katie Culp and Liz Krueger are two more juniors that could crack the lineup Meredith Walsh is a new player with potential

Kara Guminski Sara Church and Andrea Troschinetz are sophomores on the team Guminski and Church played junior varsity last year while Troschinetz is new to the program

Monica Prasad will be a mainstay on the golf team this year.

Freshman Becky Rankin may make an impact this year Murray said she comes from a golfing family and is a pretty solid player

Marie Dingwall is another freshman who may surprise

"These two freshmen come with a lot of experience " the coach said

Like most of the area's other golf teams Murray said the Mustangs haven't had a chance to get outside with the poor weather Northville has been hitting at a local golf dome for weeks but it's hard to predict how the team will do from that said Murray

Weather is always a factor in the spring she added

"It's the biggest thing we have to deal with " Murray said "Last year we had two good days in three months "

Northville opens the season April 16 at Livonia Churchill

Tracksters take it on the chin

800-meter relay in 1:57. Karen Loeffler finished third in the 1,600-meter run with a time of 6·19.

A cross country runner last fall, Cronin thinks Loeffler will help the Mustangs this spring

"She ran a nice race," he added. "I think she's capable of running under six minutes."

Northville won the 400-meter relay as well. Rompel, Dalziel, Christina Chase and Lauren Metaj ran the race in 54 seconds.

Farmington swept the open 400-meter race.

"I don't know what happened there," said Cronin.

That event may have cost Northville the meet. The Mustangs had pulled to within six of Farmington going into the event But the Falcons added nine points to their lead and never looked back

"It was frustrating," Cronin said

Winn grabbed first place in the 300-meter hurdles with a time of 54.7. Amity Heckemeyer was second in the 800-meter race in 2:46.

In the 200-meter dash, Howland and Metaj both finished in 29 seconds Howland was awarded first and Metaj second.

Freshman Katie Spillane closed the meet by placing third in the two mile run. She finished in 14 19 Spillane edged out a Farmington runner at the tape to take third, Cronin said

Novi runners beat Milford

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

If last week's 100-37 win over Milford was any indication, 1996 could be one heck of a year for the Wildcat boys' track team

Novi High dominated a good Redskin program in both field and track events The Wildcats, in fact, won all but two events.

"We could do no wrong," coach Bob Smith said "The kids were ready. We hit the ground running "

You can say that again, coach

Novi appeared to be in mid-season form in several events Long jumper Andy Gatt, for example, leapt better than 20 feet on his only try

Smith gave credit to his assistant coaches and a lot of hard work by his team Despite this spring's poor weather, the tracksters have gotten tons of work in thanks, in part, to the high school's new indoor facilities

Smith was glad all of that pounding paid off.

"I wanted them to experience a real good meet," he said "It was a satisfying opening meet "

Novi opens its home schedule Tuesday against South Lyon at 4 p m

Gatt's hot performance in the long jump opened the meet He sailed 20-feet-4 inches on his first try to take first place Greg Smith finished second at 18-9 1/4

"They could be the best two jumpers in the league," said Smith "Both are very gifted "

In the 3,200-meter relay, Novi won in 8 51 with the team of Corneal Den Ridder, Adam Hagfors, Scott Shepley and Smith

Chris Resciniti won the 100-meter high hurdles with a time of 16 7 Steve Chang finished third in 18 5 seconds

Novi swept the 100-meter dash. Ime Akpan took first, Scott Keys second, Jason Witherspoon third and Akili Dolle fourth

Mike Alberty took first in the pole vault. He made it over the 9-6 mark

The Wildcats had problems with an exchange in the 800-meter relay and were disqualified

In the mile run, Hagfors garnered first with a time of 4.48 while Shepley was second in 4:57.8 and Kevin Avenius was third in 4 59 The team of Keys, Peter Wickman, Witherspoon and Akpan won the 400-meter relay in 46 6 seconds

Gatt took first in the 400-meter race in 52 8 and Ty Clark was second at 54 5.

"I think 52 8 will place in the top five of the league," said Smith, "easy "

In the 300 hurdles, Resciniti won again with a time of 41 3 while Chang finished third in 44 2.

Novi went one-two in the 800-meter Den Ridder was first with a time of 2 15 8 and John Mione placed second at 2.17

Joe Thompson won the 200-meter dash in 24 1 seconds while Ryan Beach was third in 24.7. The Wildcats failed to score in the shot put

That wasn't true in the discus, though. Bill Collins set a personal record with a toss of 133 feet. That was good for first place. Dave Kovacs took third at 113-2.

Avenius, a freshman, won the two-mile race in 11.11 Cameron Chipponeri was second at 11.24

The Wildcats closed on a high note by winning the mile relay and high jump.

Hagfors, Beach, Gatt and Brandon Griffin combined to win the relay in 3 45 Nick Iannotti had a good effort in the high jump and cleared 6-0 for first. Chris Perkins grabbed third at 5-10

Start running – the right way

By ED PIENKOSZ
Special Writer

It's any Saturday in the early days of spring and you're preparing for your daily run As you walk to the door, all layered-up and ready to go, the radio announces the current conditions

"Currently, we've got light flurries and 28 degrees with winds all day Bundle up out there" Upon hearing this even the most die-hard veteran would think twice about braving the elements.

Unfortunately, Michigan winters and early springs do not lend themselves to "personal record" training schedules, nor does the weather always bode well for beginning a running program In fact, runners in our state must combine running with appropriate cross-training activities to complete their exercise programs

Let's talk about some ideas for maintaining or starting a running program

The first thing a veteran or beginner should remember is that March and April are typically base-building months. These months should find a veteran runner reestablishing his or her aerobic base, while new runners should be slowly but steadily increasing their mileage. This can be accomplished in two main forms either by increasing weekly running distance by no more than 10 percent per week or by increasing the minutes of weekly totals by no more than 15 percent per week. This format allows all runners to increase their "base" without exceeding their ability level. This "base-building" period should last for eight to 12 weeks.

This period, also called phase one, is the perfect time to use cross-training in your program. Keep in mind also that even though many runners use indoor running (treadmills, indoor tracks) during the winter months, it is not considered cross-training. Activities such as cross-country skiing, swimming, mountain biking, aerobics, even some racquet sports are what you should consider to supplement your running.

These activities use different muscles or those running muscles in a different way. However, such exercises are meant to give your body and mind a little rest and not overload them The best way to accomplish this is to maintain your training heart rate within 60-80 percent maximum range.

The most accurate way to determine target training range, without completing a maximum VO2 test, is to use the Karvonan formula, which also takes into account your fitness level.

Additionally, there are two other important aspects of a winter and early spring program that are too often overlooked by runners – weight-lifting and flexibility If you wish to prevent injury and improve performance you must include these activities in your program Many runners of all levels, unfortunately, disregard these extremely important parts of their training program.

By the time you have developed your aerobic base the weather has started to break and allows you to begin phase two of your training program speed Every runner, regardless of ability, wants to go a little faster. Phase two is the perfect time to develop enough leg speed to get you through those early spring races and head quickly toward those mid-summer classics

Suggestions on how to get started in or how to improve an individual running program, as well as information on proper nutrition, preventing injuries and more are available at Botsford's Total Rehabilitation and Athletic Conditioning Center's (T R A C.C.) one day running seminar on Saturday, June 22. TRACC also sponsors "Run for the Health of It," an 8-K run and fitness event on June 9.

For more information and to preregister for either of these events, please call (810) 473-5600

Olestra to reduce fat in variety of foods

Nelda Mercer

Olestra, soon to be marketed under the trade name "Olean" by Procter & Gamble Co., in late January received final FDA approval for use in savory snack foods such as chips, crackers, cheese puffs and other fried snacks What sets Olestra apart from other fat substitutes is that it can withstand the same high cooking temperatures as natural fats and, therefore, can be used in frying and baking.

Consuming even moderate amounts of Olestra may cause some unpleasant, and even a few potentially harmful, side effects To explain these side effects, let's first look at how Olestra is manufactured and metabolized in the body.

Normal fat is composed of three fatty acids attached to a glycerol (a type of alcohol) molecule Once ingested, fat travels through the intestine where any enzyme splits it up into free fatty acids, which are absorbed by the body.

Olestra is composed of a sugar molecule, which is much larger than glycerol and can hold eight fatty acids tightly packed together.

The fat enzyme is unable to split this molecule apart. Therefore, the fatty acids are unable to be absorbed by the body. Consequently, Olestra passes through the body unabsorbed In so doing, the calories from fat (9 per gram) are also not absorbed, making Olestra fat-free

One of the important health features of fat is not only that it provides essential fatty acids required by our bodies for good health but also that it provides a means for the fat-soluble vitamins (A, D, E, and K) to be absorbed into the bloodstream by hitching a ride on fat molecules that are naturally present in food. Unfortunately, these vitamins latch onto Olestra just as easily, but because Olestra is not absorbed, neither are the fat soluble vitamins.

There is, therefore, cause for concern over possible nutrient deficiencies. Proctor & Gamble dealt with this problem by fortifying these foods with extra vitamins, A, D, E and K That way, when Olestra goes through the intestine, it is already so overloaded with the nutrients that it cannot absorb more. As a result, the Olestra eater will not lose these vitamins

Let's also consider the additional side effects of abdominal cramps, flatulence, bloating, loose stools and the urge to use the bathroom immediately. While these effects may not be harmful, they can certainly be unpleasant

More important, will yet another fat-free substitute help solve America's obesity problem? If you consider what has happened to American weight trends over the last decade, the answer is a resounding no. One-third of American adults over 18 are overweight (up from one-fourth 10 years ago) and nearly one-tenth are obese. Yet Americans are eating a lower percentage of fat. But eating a lower-fat diet doesn't necessarily translate to eating less total fat.

According to the National Center for Health Statistics' food consumption data, although Americans are eating a lower percentage of fat than in 1978, they are eating more calories. In 1990, the average adult consumed 34 percent of total calories in fat, down from 36 percent in 1978. Saturated fat accounts for 12 percent of total calorie consumed, compared with 13 percent in 1978

Despite this percentage drop, however, the increase in daily calories from 1,969 to 2,200 during these 12 years means that the total fat intake rose from an average of 709 calories per day (79 grams of fat) in 1978 to 748 calories (83 grams of fat) in 1990

How can this be? One possible explanation is that many people misunderstand the meaning of "fat free " They believe that eating fat-free or low-fat foods allows them to eat all they want (or at least more than they normally would) without gaining weight However, fat free does not mean calorie free It's not fat per-se that contributes to overweightness, but calories, whether those calories come from fat, protein carbohydrates or alcohol

Consumers will probably start seeing Olestra-based snack foods by this summer Federal law will require all foods containing Olestra to be labeled with the following warning. "This product contains Olestra Olestra may cause abdominal cramping and loose stools. Olestra inhibits the absorption of some vitamins and other nutrients. Vitamins A, D, E, and K have been added."

So, does America need yet another fat substitute? What Americans need more is common sense It makes far more sense to cultivate a taste for foods that are naturally low in fat than to satisfy one "fat tooth" with snacks fried in Olestra

Debating the value of part-time sales agents

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

Is it risky to work with a part-time real estate agent? This question is being raised more frequently as an increasing number of part time sales agents are entering the field

A Realtor owner of a large Century 21 franchised brokerage firm said "We tend to shy away from hiring part time sales associates But in some cases it's justified particularly when a person plans to become a full-time sales associate but needs to be part time for a period to achieve that goal."

A brokerage firm that hires a lot of part-timers is asking for problems the Realtor said Due to their lack of knowledge and experience, they can give property buyers and sellers bad advice, which can lead to liability problems

But another Realtor says there

Artist Jeff Bartoy uses an airbrush to produce the vivid color and detail of the cartoon characters from "The Little Mermaid."

MURAL, MURAL on the wall...

When Dave Rice wanted to spice up his basement with art hanging a painting here and there just wouldn't do

The Milford man, who owns a palatial Victorian Tudor in the Berwyck on the Park development wanted more impact and permanence from his decor

"I just wanted to make this (space) more personal I thought it would be neat to do something custom made that nobody else had," he explained

Enter artist Dolores Anetrini, president of Adelena Morgan, the design firm she founded in Warren Anetrini and her staff meticulously transformed Rice's expansive basement into a virtual museum of murals

That's right — murals Not just one mural There are nine, to be exact Nearly every inch of wall sports art in vibrant, radiant color schemes Rice is proud to say make his basement "come alive"

That's a fair assessment when considering the sheer number and variety of the works

Walking down staircase into the Rice basement, one is greeted at the bottom by the life-size image of a hairy gorilla bursting through a painted brick wall. This is the gym area, where Rice arranged his collection of workout equipment.

"It's kind of inspirational when you're exercising to have that big old gorilla busting through the wall," he said with a laugh.

Turn the corner to the left, and the spa area — complete with a sumptuous eight-person hot tub — is surrounded by paintings from the movie, "The Little Mermaid."

The deep blue azure sea is contrasted with the perky colors of that diminutive character herself, Ariel, after whom Rice's 20-month-old daughter is named.

"Our Ariel just loves 'The Little Mermaid,' so that's why we did this here," he said.

Rice added he knows someday he'll be looking at perhaps having a different scene painted around the hot tub once his daughter grows up

"By the time she's 16, she'll be Little Mermaid-ed out."

Up next are two facing walls that feature a bucolic country scene, complete with horses, dogs cavorting in the tall, high grass and a barn or two. Rice and his wife, Julie, are avid fans of all things equestrian.

A jaunt to none other than Las Vegas prompted his decision to finally commission the murals.

"I thought about doing this for two years before I ever called Dolores (Anetrini, the artist behind the works,)" Rice said.

When he and his wife, Julie, ventured to Vegas around Christmas, visiting MGM Grand and Caesar's Palace spurred him into action.

MGM's "Wizard of Oz" lobby theme, and especially Caesar's lifesize, faux Italian courtyard design got him thinking about how to incorporate art into his own home.

"It was Caesar's that was the real inspiration to do something," Rice said.

Her design firm, Adelena Morgan, based in Warren, was inspired by the combination of her love of Morgan horses and her grandmother, Adelena.

"She was unconditionally supportive of my art when I was a child," Anetrini said. "She was a very special lady. She died when I was 16 and not a day goes by that I don't think of her."

Putting her beloved grandmother's name into her business seems to serve as something of a luck charm for Anetrini. Her art design business is thriving

"When I named my business after my grandmother, I did it to honor her and her support," she said. "And I also figured she wouldn't let me go wrong"

Consider shopping by mail with the members of the Mailorder Gardening Association Results of the 7th annual national customer shopping survey administered by the National Marketing Intelligence Service Inc. of Hicksville, N Y , indicate member firms are superbly providing for their customers.

Consumers received their gardening catalogs more promptly in 1995 than they did in 1994. The 1995 average delivery time was 20.9 days, down five days from 1994. After comparing the survey results from years past, it's evident the members are working hard to upgrade and improve their in-house mailing facilities Members are also working closely with the postal system to continue improving the number of catalogs actually reaching their delivery destination. Murals make Milford home unique

work is the mural opposite the farm scene Painted in the dreamy, nostalgic style of Currier and Ives is a winter portrait of the Rice's own home

It's designer, Dolores Anetrini, says that one may just be her favorite of them all

"It just has a genuine homey feel to it," she said "I fall in love with a different one for different reasons all the time I've personally never done so many murals in one home before so it s interesting how each of them blends together to form a truly unique look

Unique is the perfect word to describe the next mural in the Rice's billiard area. An ornately carved wood base billiard table is watched over by a mural featuring pool-playing dogs. The pool parlor scene is one Anetrini adapted for Rice from the popular series of card-playing dogs scenes

"I've always liked those dog pictures so I just asked if Dolores could make them playing pool instead," Rice said

And Anetrini was able to make the adjustment. She and the artists who created the murals with her worked from the dog paintings

"We can work from a picture and produce something original from it," Anetrini said "Even when I use a picture to capture a certain style, I still put my own design into it to make it unique "

That's where Rice got started last November The pool mural was the first one for which he sought Anetrini's talent

"Believe it or not, I started with just one and we just kept going until we covered just about everything," he said

The artists collaborating on the murals with Anetrini are Suzette Sadjek, an acrylic painter from Troy, and Jeff Bartoy, an airbrush artist from Clinton Township

Both Anetrini — who also specializes in acrylics — and Sadjek are hand painters That is, they use freehand when creating their works Bartoy in an expert in airbrush technique.

The combination of the two methods is something Anetrini says is rather unique itself.

"I've been in art all my life and I don't know of anyone using airbrushing with acrylics," she said "We're creating some wonderful effects with it "

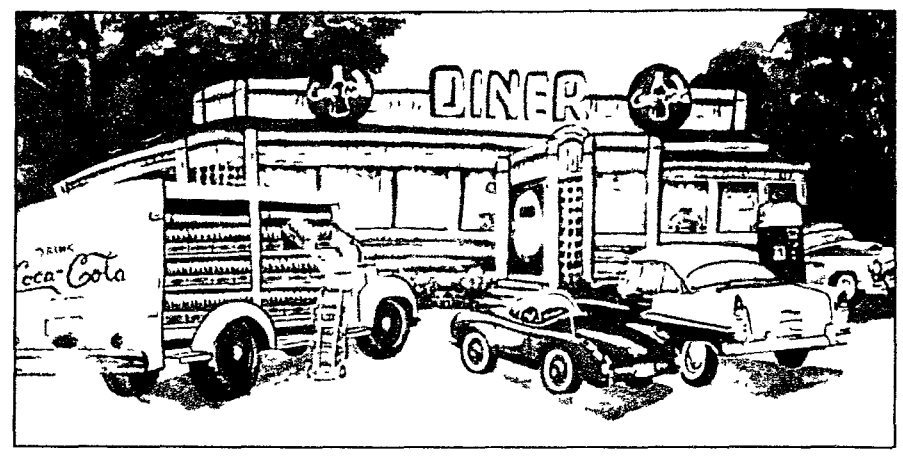

Other murals gracing Rice s basement walls feature a carousel scene, a 1950s diner, and two murals featuring his favorite soft drink, Coca-Cola

"I've always loved Coke, so that s where those came from," he explained

One painting shows the Coke polar bear taking a swig of the beverage, the other, Santa Claus doing the same Along with the diner scene these works surround the Rice's bar area

He says seeing his murals may inspire others to use commissioned mural work to make their home interiors more unique interesting and personal

"It might be catching on I've got a neighbor who s thinking about having Dolores do some painting too," Rice said "You always see more and more mural art work at restaurants and stores I just thought why not put em in my home?"

are positive aspects to hiring part-time sales associates

"The idea that part-timers are nonproductive and a liability risk is a myth," he said in the "Real Estate Insider" newsletter

"Some part-timers do more business than full-timers Others bird-dog (seek prospects) for full-timers Furthermore, most brokers are so busy competing against each other for super achievers that part-timers are practically an untapped market "

This Realtor has built one of the largest offices in metropolitan Phoenix. "We have grown from three to 425 licensed associates, and about 85 percent of those are part-timers,' he noted

That type of brokerage firm is often referred to in the real estate industry as a "body shop, promoting as many licensees as possible to associate with their firm, and providing minimal supervision of each associate's work. And part-timers have a special need for close supervision.

Most part-timers don't keep their license active for more than a year When the property sales and listings don't come in, and they must pay out dues and fees of various kinds, they decide to concentrate on their day job.

But the Phoenix Realtor continues to hang more licenses of part-time agents on his office wall. His advice to other brokers:

"Forget any preconceived notions you might have about part-timers. Be prepared to give them a try, but keep close tabs on their activities until you feel confident they know what they are doing "

From a consumer's perspective, I would not want to be a person who depends on a part-timer to guide me through one of the largest investments of a lifetime That part-time sales agent might be one of those who didn t know what he or she was doing

Whether it's buying or selling a home, or any other major transaction, it's always best to work with a seasoned professional — someone with the experience to do the right thing and give you the right answers, at least most of the time

As the Century 21 Realtor said "Real estate transactions in today's market are extremely complex and involve a complicated process. If a sales associate is to deliver competent service for clients, it demands full-time involvement in continuing education and experience."

Q. What type of real estate service does American Home Shield provide?

A It was one of the first firms to provide warranty coverage for previously owned homes It remains active in this area and has expanded operations in recent years

AHS now provides real estate firms with error and omission insurance coverage and recently acquired AmeriSpec Inc , a major home inspection organization

AHS is a subsidiary of ServiceMaster Diversified Health Services

Q. How come home sales are sluggish even though mortgage interest rates remain low?

A The slowdown in home sales during the past year was the result of a combination of factors that even falling interest rates couldn t cushion, according to Art Godi, president of the National Association of Realtors

"Many purchasers took themselves out of the market to play a waiting game against high interest rates This year many people are worried more about catching up with bills and job security The result is slow sales

"Also in large parts of the country bad weather conditions including major snows and flooding dampened the home sales market "

REAL ESTATE FACTS

Protect Your Equity!

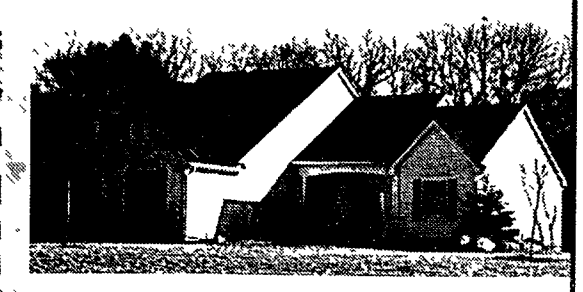

If you have a toothache, who do you call? Who do you depend on to prepare your tax returns to your best benefit? For medical emergencies, who is likely to render aid?
In each case, you're likely to ask a professional to render the needed service. You need and respect their knowledge and skills.
Why is it then, that some homeowners attempt to sell their home alone - without benefit of professional advice. They often reason that they can save the professional real estate fee, failing to understand that is what buyers are doing too.
Buyers who approach a 'By Owner' often do so because they know the owner is not paying a real estate fee. They buyers make low offers to gain the benefit for themselves, and sellers and buyers obviously cannot both save the fee. A 'No Sale!' is often the outcome.
Selling by owner also presents other challenges. Real estate agents qualify their buyers before showing homes to be certain they can complete the purchase. Owners selling without representation are at the mercy of tire kickers' and other unmotivated prospects who may not have the financial ability to make a purchase. Selling a home is a complex process which begins with market research, requires a fair asking price, and begs for the close attention of a real estate professional who understands buyers. Without the knowledge and skills of an active agent, sellers can lose valuable equity through ineffective negotiations. Worse, a sale may never close without careful scrutiny of the buyers' financial abilities. The best protection for property owners is the careful choice of a representative.

*For more information about the selling process, or what a Real Estate professional should be expected to do, please call me at my office (810) 348-3000 or call my 24 HR "customer service" line at 1-800-965-SOLD

Menders can handle the major repairs

By RICK BYRNE
Staff Writer

When your car needs normal maintenance, you have plenty of choices

Shops that do mufflers, tires, tune-ups and oil changes have saturated the landscape

But when a serious breakdown occurs – your transmission gives out, your engine dies or your drive axle fails – where do you turn Motor Menders, a new heavy auto repair shop in New Hudson, gives you an option

Brothers Vince and Baron LeBlanc opened Motor Menders in the Trico Tools building at 29565 Costello Drive to meet the needs of people facing big repairs They can handle engines, transmissions suspension and rear axle work, as well as body electrical problems like power windows They take on jobs other shops may not be able to handle

"We do any driveline work" said Baron "We did an oil pan for a guy last week that nobody wanted to do for him It seems like there's a lot of shops that don't want to get into the bigger jobs"

Cars have gotten so complex Baron said that repairs now require a careful, thorough mechanic Otherwise you risk having a customer come back many times He points to a Ford pickup, in the shop for a cylinder head repair

"To do something like a cylinder head, there's so much stuff that you have to move out of the way" Baron said "You're assuming a lot more liability and there's a lot more chance of come-backs It's really like open heart surgery you're doing here"

Motor Menders has certification from ASE to do most any work About the only jobs the LeBlancs can't handle are air conditioner repairs and alignments and that's only for lack of the equipment to do that kind of work

Their 2,100 square-foot shop can handle three cars at a time A pleasant waiting area greets customers and it's adorned with Baron's trophy for winning a state championship in off road racing The love for cars runs in his blood as his father raced stock cars and midgets in the 1950s 60s and 70s

The LeBlancs aim to give their customers honest service at a fair price Their labor rate of $45 an hour keeps them competitive with other shops and below the rate charged by dealerships And if they aren't a customer's cheapest alternative they're not afraid to send him to someone else

"I find it hard to beat the chain stores prices on things like struts" Baron said "If I'm already doing some other work for him, and the customer asks me to put a set of shocks or an exhaust on the car, I can do it But I let them know I'm not their cheapest alternative."

Both men make it a practice to communicate the problem carefully to the customer, and to let him know his options

"When it's a big job, nobody's ready for it, and we know that," Baron said "Financially, it's a big hit, and sometimes you have to ask them if they think it's worth putting the money into the car, because usually it's a seven- or eight-year-old car"

Vince who had been a seaman and repaired motorcycles for several years, joined his brother in business to be closer to home Baron chose New Hudson after a couple of months of searching because he lives in South Lyon, and saw a need for the service and experience he had to offer.

"From New Hudson you have to go to Novi or Brighton or South Lyon to get this kind of work done," he said "My wife, Johanna, sells real estate and she said the homes are coming The businesses are already here I see it as an expanding area"

He's also built a clientele over the years working in repair shops in Novi Though Motor Menders only opened its doors in January, Baron said customer response has been good

"It's spreading by word of mouth and we're getting referrals so that means people are happy," he said

He adds that a new heavy repair business stands a good chance at success because "you'll find a lot of people are unhappy"

"I've heard the complaints and a lot of them are not about price like you'd think" he said "The most common complaints I hear are, first time the amount of time a customer's car is tied up Second they don't like bringing it in and having to come back again Third they're unhappy when they bring it in with a problem and you don't cure that problem after they've put $300 $400 into it"

The LeBlancs don't like having cars sit around their shop for a long time and they put an emphasis on curing the problem the customer came to them for in the first place

"I've seen a lot of botched engine jobs" Baron said "A person who spends a lot of money shouldn't get treated that way I don't believe in it because I think it would get to my conscience"

Motor Menders is open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fridays Saturdays work is by appointment only For details, call 486-4445

Medical expenses may aid finances

If you've had high medical expenses this year, you may be able to get a jump on your financial health in the form of a tax deduction

The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants points out that unreimbursed medical expenses are deductible to the extent that they exceed 7 5 percent of an individual's adjusted gross income (AGI)

To find out if you can claim this deduction on your tax return, make a comprehensive listing of your medical expenses during the year. Include expenses you've actually paid for yourself, your spouse, children, and other dependents

Generally, any unreimbursed medical expenses incurred for the "diagnosis, cure, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for treatment affecting any part or function of the body" are deductible What exactly does this include? Much more than you may realize, according to CPAs. Here's a rundown

SERVICES

Fees paid to any qualified medical practitioner are deductible These can include dentists, podiatrists, chiropractors and even acupuncturists

Amounts paid for mental health services provided by psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers also represent qualified expenses Deductible hospital services include most surgery fees (except those associated with cosmetic surgery), and the cost of a semi-private room, as well as fees paid for anesthesia medications and monitoring devices.

HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Home improvements made for medical reasons are deductible to the extent that their cost exceeds any resulting increase in the value of your house For example, if you spent $15,000 on a home improvement and the value of your home increased by $10,000, you can only deduct $5,000

To claim the deduction, the improvement must be necessary and not merely for the sake of convenience and must be authorized by a physician. For example, deductions have been allowed for a bathroom installed on a first floor for a person advised not to climb stairs, for the installation of air conditioning when an individual suffered from a respiratory ailment, and for building a pool for an individual with arthritis if that person does not live near one.

If you are handicapped, the cost of certain home-related expenditures is fully deductible, subject to the 7.5 percent limitation.

INSURANCE PREMIUMS

Be sure to include all health insurance premiums on your list of deductible expenses. Don't overlook any amounts that you contribute automatically through your paycheck.

Uncle Same allows deductions for insurance covering hospitalization, dental care, membership in a cooperative health maintenance organization (HMO), ophthalmologists and optometrists, prescription drugs and contact lens replacement. You can also deduct amounts paid for Medicare.

MEDICAL EQUIPMENT

Medical equipment is expensive and, even when prescribed by a physician, is not always covered by insurance. For this reason, it's especially important to keep track of these expenses As long as you meet the 7.5 percent threshold, you can deduct costs for hearing aids, false teeth, eyeglasses, leg or back braces, and prostheses Whirlpools, special mattresses, reclining chairs, and other items required for therapeutic reasons also may be deductible

OTHER EXPENSES

Amounts paid for prescription drugs and insulin are deductible So, too, are the costs of special aids to assist the blind, remedial reading to correct dyslexia, and equipment that enables a handicapped person to operate an automobile

Finally, don't overlook transportation costs incurred to obtain medical care You may deduct car, cab or bus fares to visit local physicians as well as out-of-state specialists

If you are a parent accompanying a child who needs medical care, the transportation costs for both of you are deductible. Lodging also may be deductible, within certain limits

TIMING

After making an inventory of all your qualified medical expenses, if you discover that you re close to the 7 5 percent threshold, the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants recommends that you schedule and pay for medical services or buy needed medical equipment before year-end so you can qualify for the deduction

Save for retirement with U.S. Savings Bonds.

They'll mature before you do.

And why you still haven't started to save for retirement.

Exactly what are you waiting for? The very day you retire and find yourself with no more job and no more paychecks?

Give your retirement savings program a solid foundation by investing in U.S. Savings Bonds. They're backed by the full faith and credit of the United States and guaranteed to earn interest.* And they're easy to buy for just a few dollars each payday through your employer's U.S. Savings Bonds Payroll Savings Plan. Or buy them at your bank.

Plus, the interest earned on U.S. Savings Bonds is exempt from state and local income taxes and can be deferred for federal income tax purposes for up to 30 years.

Ask your banker or your employer about including U.S. Savings Bonds in your retirement savings program. Even if you call it "saving for a rainy day."

Quality of Life with a Victorian flair

The City of Northville is a charming example of small-town America, with a stable population of about 7,000

NORTHVILLE, an upper middle class bedroom community in Northwest suburban Detroit, is composed of Northville city and township. More than 27,000 residents find it a wonderful place in which to live and work, thanks to a balance of several factors: a proud Victorian heritage; controlled orderly growth, and a community dedicated to preserving quality of life.

Settlers in the late 1820s were primarily farmers and lumbermen, and the small city was an industry and trade center. Today, downtown Northville boasts a thriving retail community, with most of its residents commuting to professional occupations or auto-related industries.

Physically, Northville is a product of the glaciers, with low, flat land to the east and scenic rolling hills to the west. Several gravel and rock masses, carried and deposited directly by a glacier, still prominently mark the area. The interesting topography of the area has attracted a great many people and has recently spurred increased residential growth. Currently several new subdivisions are in the planning stages, or under development.

The Northville community is situated in both Wayne and Oakland Counties and encompasses an area of 19.2 square miles. It is located 30 miles from Detroit, 17.5 miles from Detroit's Metropolitan Airport and 50 miles form Lansing. Residents have most of southeastern Michigan at their fingertips through easy access to a network of freeways.

The City of Northville is a charming example of small-town America with a stable population of approximately 7,000. The downtown area is highlighted by the Victorian architecture of many of the HEART OF the community

NORTHVILLE COMMUNITY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PROMOTES BUSINESS BY PROMOTING THE COMMUNITY

THE CHAMBER of Commerce is the heart of the Northville community. It is the catalyst for progress, the kindler of the community spirit, the promoter of the good life.

The Chamber is a dedicated, caring organization serving a community-oriented population of 27,000 in the city and township. The Chamber's mission is to promote, develop and support business and industry for the benefit of the Northville community.

Headed by an Executive Director and an 11-member Board of Directors, the Chamber serves the business community in many ways. It acts as a clearinghouse for general information and promotional activities. In addition, the Chamber sponsors workshops and seminars on topics of interest to business and professional people. It also produces a monthly newsletter on events sponsored by the Chamber and offers various mixer networking activities for business people to exchange information, services and ideas.

We also serve as a political ombudsman to keep our elected officials informed on the needs and priorities of the business community, maintains Laurie Marrs, Chamber Executive Director. We feel we are an image-maker, creating favorable impressions of the area to businesses and to residents.

The Chamber promotes business by promoting the community. Marrs adds, something that has been very successful at doing since its inception in 1904. Some of the more recent Chamber-sponsored events and activities include a Victorian Festival, a Business Showcase, Farmers Market, Art in the Summer, a golf outing and a host of business seminars, mixers and breakfasts.

By far the most popular of the Chamber-sponsored activities is its annual Victorian Festival, a three-day, fall event which transforms the community into a turn-of-the-century hamlet. Many people take part in this back-to-the-past event, including merchants, residents, school children and organizations who dress in period costumes.

The Victorian Festival is a celebration of our heritage—what we have and where we came from, says Marrs. We are a Victorian city and proud of it.

The weekend festivities include a community parade through downtown Northville's historic district, a Victorian melodrama, street entertainment and children's games and antique shows, with booths and a ramp-down auction and a candlelight costume ball. In combination with the festival, the Northville Arts Commission stages a striving artists juried art show and sale.

The Christmas Walk, an annual Chamber-sponsored winter event, takes place each Sunday before Thanksgiving. Northville is transformed into a holiday wonderland with elaborately decorated shops, and includes a special holiday shopping hours, a Santa Parade, complimentary treats from merchants and nightly caroling groups caroling through the downtown streets.

In March, a one-day Taste of Northville Business Showcase offers businesses, restaurants and non-profit groups an opportunity to promote their products and services. Summer Chamber-sponsored events include Art in the Sun, a two-day fine arts-crafts event in the downtown area, a Farmer's Market each Thursday, May through October and a day-long community Golf Outing.

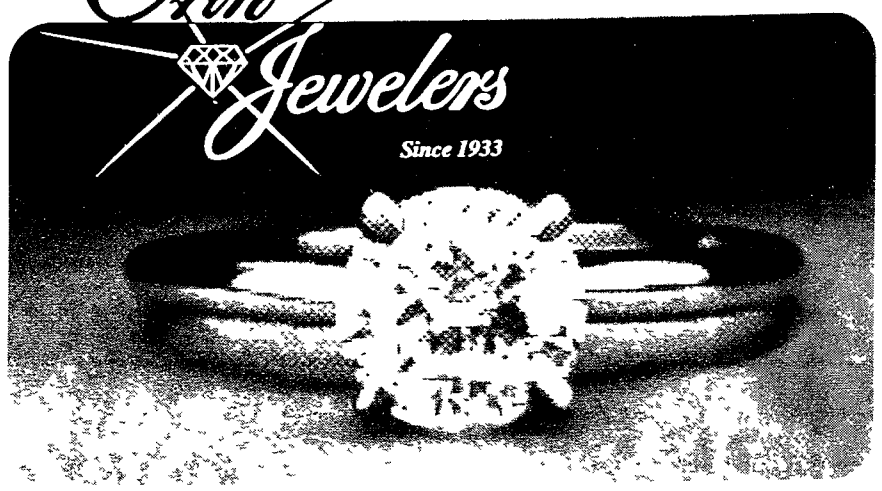

The Chamber of Commerce supports many other community events and activities throughout the year including band concerts, sidewalk sales, fairs and parades. The Chamber also gathers and provides information on local demographic studies and free listings of clubs, organizations, realtors, schools, physicians, dentists and restaurants for use by members and visitors to the area.

In addition to taking part in the many promotional events, Chamber members can participate in a number of educational and social opportunities designed to benefit business professionals. Understanding legislative issues, advertising, networking, goal setting and effective communication are a few examples of the many topics covered. Members also can take advantage of such benefits as free listings in the Chamber membership and business directory, membership in the Dealers Bureau and [illegible] business credit card rates and [illegible] discounts.

Herman Frankel Organization

by Craig Farrand

Home Spotlight's Builder of the Month was also honored by The National Association of Home Builders with its gold medal as "America's Best Builder."

Herman Frankel knows the right way to do things. His way may not be the standard way, but that doesn't deter him. And it shouldn't: after 45 consecutive years in the home building business and coming off one of the most successful years ever, Frankel's way works just fine.

Frankel's way focuses on integrity rather than interest rates, principles rather than profits, and philosophy rather than fill dirt. For almost five decades he's run his business like he runs his life, and he has prospered.

"Instead of concentrating on more," Frankel says, "concentrate on better and the more will take care of itself."

Successful in home building over five decades, Herman Frankel has established an unblemished national reputation in the industry.

Builder Of The Month

Herman Frankel's charming Village at Simsbury features stunning condominiums from the mid-S200.000's. The gated community is located off Farmington Road, just north of 14 Mile Road in West Bloomfield.

Frankel's views permeate every aspect of his business. Nothing happens that is shoddy or shady. For example, he dislikes negotiation. Almost by definition, negotiation means holding things back and trying to get one over on the other party. Frankel believes in being totally up front and making your first offer your best. He expects the same from others. "We do not negotiate with customers on building jobs at all," he says.

"It used to be," Frankel says, "to be a successful builder you had to be good at two of the three facets of the business: finance, marketing and construction. Now, you have to be good at all three."

Frankel excels in every phase of the business. "He's an expert," says Mark Ian Frick, who has worked with Frankel for nearly 20 years and is vice president of operations.

"He know more about real estate law than most lawyers, more about engineering than most engineers and more about design than most architects." Twenty-five years ago, Frick says, Frankel wrote the company's computerized business management program, and the company still uses it today. "He knows more about different things than anyone I've ever met."

Woodcliff features large single-family homes with West Bloomfield School and detached condominiums on Morris Lake. Models for both communities are located west of Orchard Lake Road, off Pontiac Trail.

Frankel doesn't give himself that much credit. All he will say is he was born with an ability to run a business. "I understand how business works," he says. "If you understand that, you'll be successful."

Frankel's understanding of how business works has three primary components: conservative business practices, a strong organization, and an obligation to the customer.

He focuses on the semi-custom market in which customers choose a floor plan from among a collection of copyrighted designs. Between his three active developments, Frankel has seven models open. "We make almost unlimited changes for a customer as long as they are based on one of our original floor plans," says Laurie Frankel, Herman's daughter and vice president of sales and marketing.

Frankel demands a lot from his employees. "I take excellence for granted, and to be honest, I'm not very good at acknowledging a job well done," he says. "I always expect more."

"We have always had a sense of obligate toward our customers," says Frankel. "In this industry today, everyone takes for granted the importance of customer service and quality, but we've done it for the entire history of the company."

Since the first project in 1958, the company's office has always been in one of his active developments. "I want to be accessible to customers," says Frankel, who also lives in his own developments. "I want to know how they feel. If they get mad, I don't want for them to have to sue me to see me."

Project managers conduct two formal inspections of each house before closing: once before drywall and again before customer walkthrough. Each item in need of repair is sprayed with red paint so the appropriate trade and the customer can see it. Customers are invited to walk through the house at any time, so few surprises pop up during the two official walkthroughs. The first takes place one week before closing, to prepare a punch list; the second occurs on the day of closing to make sure all the work is done. The company follows up with customers 60 days after closing and again after one year to deal with any problems that may crop up. Weekly service meetings monitor the outstanding repairs and every check sent to a supplier or a trade includes a list of outstanding repairs.

The system has its benefits. Almost two-thirds of Frankel's customers are referrals, and in the past 10 years, 23 percent of the sales have been to second- or third-time purchasers of Frankel homes.

Design contributes significantly to customer satisfaction and referral rates. Of all his company's facets, Frankel may be most proud of the design of his houses. Walking through one of the models, he becomes almost effervescent. "This is fun," he says. "This is what I've enjoyed. This is how I've made my living."

Just as with everything else he does, Frankel believes there is a correct way to design a house. "We start out with a plan that functionally works," he says. "Then we make it aesthetically pleasing." Making a plan functional means keeping the garage near the kitchen, putting the library toward the front of the house, having large windows to keep the interior bright, and not trading space for pizzazz.

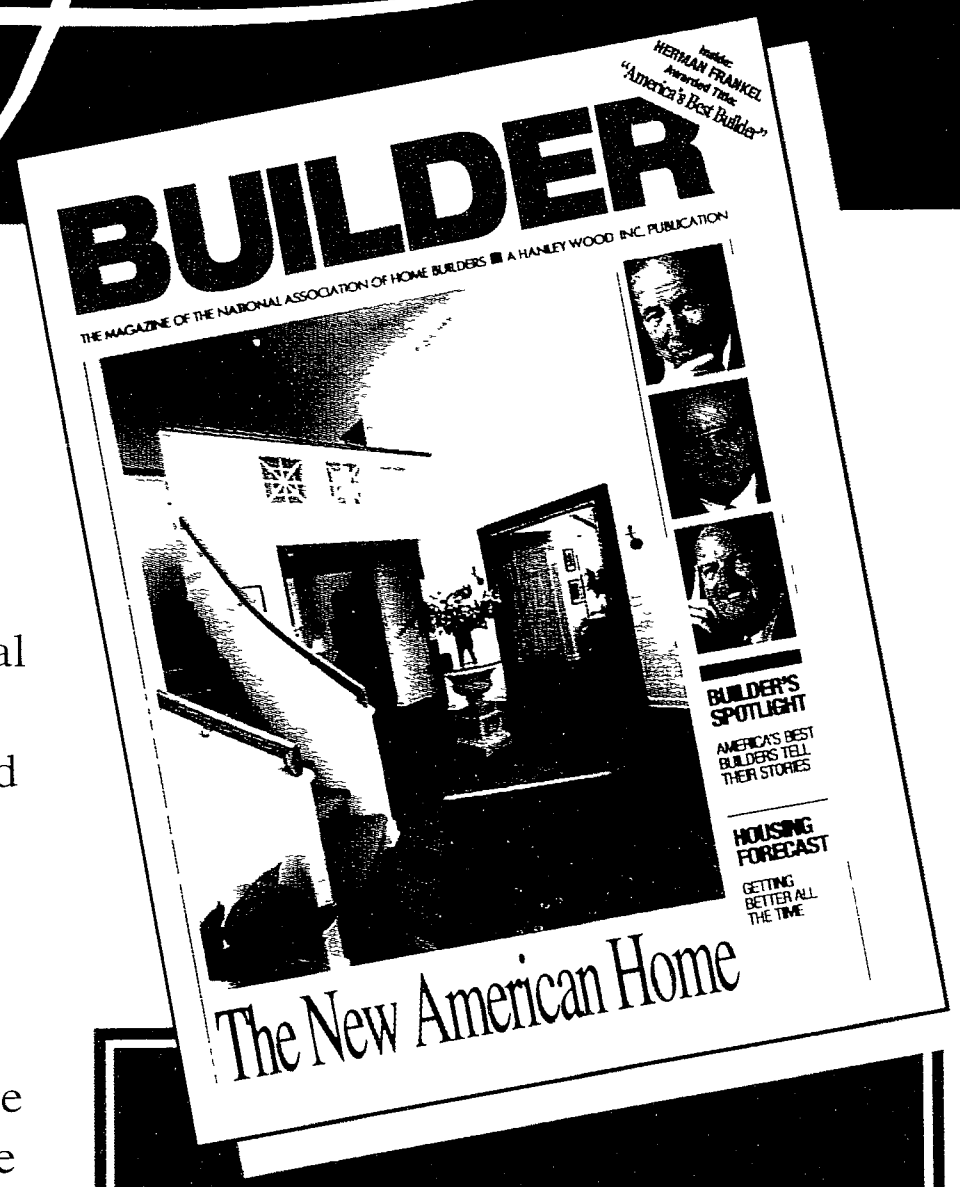

Village Square is a picturesque family neighborhood off Farmington Road, just north of 14 Mile Road in West Bloomfield.

Frankel has been dealing with time. He has worked with his daughter Laurie and Frick to succeed him. "My major concentration over the past several years has been preparing Mark and Laurie to run the company," he says, "making sure they know the reasons why I do things, giving them the contracts I have, and letting them make their own decisions."

Frankel intends to stay involved in land buying, development and product design. "The future is up to Laurie and Mark," he says. "They have to determine what will give them the greatest satisfaction." ■

National Builder of the Year

Winning the National Association of Home Builders' highest award certainly puts The Herman Frankel Organization in a class by itself.

But the true winners are the thousands of people who purchased homes in Herman Frankel's signature communities over the past 45 years.

They're the ones who have long enjoyed the real value of our extraordinary designs, attention to detail and unmatched commitment to excellence and integrity.

"Successful in home building over five decades, Herman Frankel has established an unblemished reputation in his market, in his community, and in the industry. He richly deserves the title of AMERICA'S BEST BUILDER."

MICHIGAN'S AWARD WINNING BUILDER

Chelsea Park

Can Mother Nature and business ever coexist to each other's benefit?

That's a question many American companies have asked themselves since the first Earth Day in 1970 called for a change in attitude.

For home builders, that question has been particularly challenging.

Their every effort is in direct contact with the environment; every tree, blade of grass and rolling landscape is fair game when a development is planned for a community.

Nevertheless, there are superb instances where home builders have not only found ways to coexist, but to even thrive and develop entire marketing strategies around their care for the outdoors.

Take, for example, Gary Shapiro and Steven Perlman, partners in Ivanhoe-Huntley Homes, and their jewel "Chelsea Park."

Whereas any other development boasting so many homes might conjure images of a rabbit warren gone wild, the pair have succeeded in doing just the opposite.

Nearly 100 acres of the site has been set aside as a natural habitat area for indigenous wildlife, and an adjacent portion of Halstead Road has been proclaimed a Natural Beauty Road by the state.

"We've always looked for that special blend of homes and the surrounding environment," said Shapiro, who worked with top experts in the field of design - and with DNR officials - to come up with the right mix of home and nature.

"And what we've been able to do here is retain the woodland effect of the area."

To that end, the partners went to great lengths to ensure that nearly every home backs up to either an open space or a pond within the project. This 333-acre project boasts 318 units which actually houses two separate developments: "The Glenns of Chelsea Park," offering homes up to 3,250 square feet in the $270,000 range; and "The Hills of Chelsea Park," with homes up to 4,150 square feet in the $340,000 range.

Indeed, an important measure of the project's success is in the marketplace. In less than a year since its groundbreaking in the fall of '94, the developers have sold 70 homes, with many deals closed before the homes had even been constructed, making it one of the most successful developments in Oakland County.

But the partner's success can't only be measured in home sales: in 1994, the site won the Community of the Year award from the Michigan Society of Planning Officials.

In addition, Shapiro and Perlman remain particularly proud of the fact that during the site's groundbreaking, Gov. John Engler was on hand for the ceremonies. He called the project "a perfect example of a 'win-win' strategy."

"Families with beautiful homes will coexist with Mother Nature," the governor said. "I look forward to returning to enjoy the outcome when Chelsea Park is complete."

For Perlman and Shapiro, the governor's comments were a validation of their efforts to blend man-made structures and a natural setting.

"Our goal has always been to integrate our projects into the surrounding landscape," Shapiro said.

"And to make it a perfect match of land and home."

Which is the best relationship you can have with Mother Nature.

• Rock, log and mulch piles offer very effective cover. Small mammals reptiles, amphibians and a great variety of insects and other small animals find homes in these simple-to-construct structures.

PLACES TO RAISE YOUNG

• Nest boxes for bluebirds, chickadees, wrens and purple martins have been placed in the habitat.

• Evergreen and deciduous trees and shrubs provide additional nesting areas for birds.

• Rabbits, shrews, mice, snakes and salamanders lay their eggs or raise their young under the boughs of plants or in the rock, log or mulch piles.

• Aquatic animals, such as frogs, fish, dragonflies and other insects deposit their eggs in the ponds.

• Butterfly eggs and caterpillars find safety among the herbs, flowers, shrubs and trees of the habitat. ■

Information provided by the National Wildlife Federation.

Wild Birds Unlimited

A $15 application package that will allow you to certify your backyard is available at Wild Birds Unlimited nature shop located in Rochester Hills, Farmington & Royal Oak which covers the cost of registering the habitat with The National Wildlife Federation. It includes two NWF books that help you make plans for your habitat.

Plant Of The Year
Perennial Plant Association

(NAPS)-Continuing its successful promotion of outstanding perennials, the Perennial Plant Association is pleased to announce it has chosen Penstemon digitalis 'Husker Red' as the 1996 Perennial Plant of the Year.

Here are some facts about the popular plant most commonly referred to as "Beardtongue":

• Husker Red is a white-flowered, red-foliaged form of P. digitalis that was selected and introduced in 1983 by a horticulturist from the University of Nebraska.

• Penstemon is native to open woods, prairies and fields from North Dakota to Maine and is naturalized in several eastern Canadian provinces.

• This plant is a versatile garden perennial, valuable as a specimen or as a cut flower.

• When plants are well-established, height averages about 30 inches, with as many as 50 white flowers on each of 20 or more flower stalks during July and August. The plant's most valuable asset is the rich, bronze-red foliage which provides striking contrast with the masses of white flowers.

• The best way to propagate Husker Red is either by division or from cuttings.

• The plant prefers well-drained soils that are slightly acidic.

• Plants thrive in full sun to light shade.

• Husker Red is normally purchased as a potted plant. At planting, loosen the soil in an area 2 to 3 times the diameter of the pot. Incorporate a complete fertilizer, such as 10-6-4 or a 10-10-10, into the top 6 to 8 inches of soil at a rate of 2 to 3 pounds per 100 square feet.

• The gardener can use Husker Red in the perennial border or used as a specimen plant. It adds elegance to a summer garden and is very effective in combination with a wide variety of plants including the rich, green foliage of Delphinium or Veronica 'Sunny Border Blue', and the delicate pink of Geranium 'Biokovo'. It contrasts well with Coreopsis 'Moonbeam.' ■

HOMES

Master Suites:

A getaway inside your home

Cocooning in the '90s has never been more luxurious - especially in an area of the home far away from the hustle and bustle of daily life: the master bedroom and bath.

No longer just a place to sleep and then get ready for work, this area has become a hub of activity - from exercise to relaxation, and everything in between.

And, with both parents working and looking to escape simultaneously, the bedroom-bath complex often has taken on a split personality: his and her everything - or at least everything that's big enough for two.

Of course the first thing one sees when walking into today's master suite is that it's larger - much larger.

"People now want a lot more in their master bedrooms," said Kevin Serba, a designer for Perlmutter Freiwald.

Clearly the most interesting developments in the master suite have taken place in the bathroom-both in design and in technology.

"They're looking at rooms, depending on the size of the home, of up to 14-by-20 feet," he said.

In addition to being larger, these suites are also being located away from normal household traffic areas, adding even more seclusion to the site, according to Deborah Litz-Beard, a designer with Kitchens Plus.

"They're not removed from the home," she said, "but they're about as far removed as you can get within the confines of the house.

"The idea is that people look at these rooms as a retreat.

"It's a place to relax and get away from everything," she said. "So that's what we do–make it a place to go to."

Besides the obvious need for a bed and dresser, and maybe the addition of some exercise equipment, the only major addition to most bedrooms today is a larger closet.

Or closets: Walk-ins with room to dress and get ready to face the world.

In some instances, Serba said, these closets even act as gateways to the real jewel of the suite: the master bath, or baths.

"We did one home," Serba said, "where you left the bedroom down a hallway and turned one way into the husband's closet and bath.

"And you turned the other way to enter the wife's closet and bath.

"They had completely separate facilities," he said. "But that's clearly the exception."

In most instances, the separation of husband and wife takes place in more subtle ways - via separate washing areas.

But more times than not, the facilities aren't separated at all; in fact, they're merely enlarged to accommodate both parties at the same time.

"Today's master bath has a bigger tub and a bigger shower," said Jeff Moss, vice president of Advance Plumbing Supply Company.

"And those bathtubs almost always include whirlpools with jets everywhere: the bottom, for the back, for the neck - even hand-held.

"The showers," he said, "are also larger, with multiple shower heads."

Clearly the most interesting developments in the master suite have taken place in the bathroom - both in design and in technology.

From new materials to new features, the bathroom of the '90s may look more like a health spa than your rush hour stop on the way to work.

First, like the bedroom, the bathroom may also have increased in size - not only to accommodate larger tubs and showers, but to also accommodate a separate room for the com-mode.

Indeed, many of today's baths completely segregate the water closet from the rest of the room, taking a page from Oriental tradition.

Some bathrooms even use heated drawers to pre-warm the bath towel for that cold winter morning.

In fact, in some arrangements the shower actually steps down into the tub - allowing for the very Oriental requirement that you be clean before you enter the bath.

In addition to these obvious design arrangements, other improvements in the bath include more subtle advances, Moss explains.

"For example," he said, "we often install temperature indicators that can be preset to certain levels.

"Then we have a pressure-balanced valve that maintains that temperature - even if someone flushes the toilet - and we have scald protectors.

"And coming up are whirlpools with tiny holes in the bottom that blow warm air," he said. "And toilets that only flush when you lower the seat lid."

These kinds of bows to the practical side of life are more than offset by the changes in design and decor that have also come on the scene in today - and tomorrow's - master bath.

"Since we're looking to create a getaway," Litz-Beard said, "but not a dungeon, so we work a lot on getting in as much light as possible.

"And that means skylights, in order to bring in natural light; and all kinds of other lighting.

"We also use glass blocks in our designs," she said, to create the illusion of even more space."

To create space, Serba said he inevitably designs most new bathrooms with vaulted ceilings and skylights, with other lighting ranging from recessed halogen bulbs to over-sink and side-sink directional lights for shaving and makeup.

Finally, he said, mirrors also transcend the normal boundaries of the medicine cabinet, taking up the entire wall over the sink - or even more than one wall to further create the illusion of size.

For the final touch, both Litz-Beard and Serba agree that the use of marble and ceramic are almost customary in today's bath, with colors softened from harsh white to mild earth tones.

"Marble is definitely the first choice in fine homes," Serba said. "And tile is second.

"For colors, we look for neutral tones, something you wouldn't tire of over a period of time.

"Still, if there are separate baths, you can bet the man's bath will involve accents in hunter green," he said, "while the woman's will be more white."

"It's not likely any bath today will be all white," says Litz-Beard.

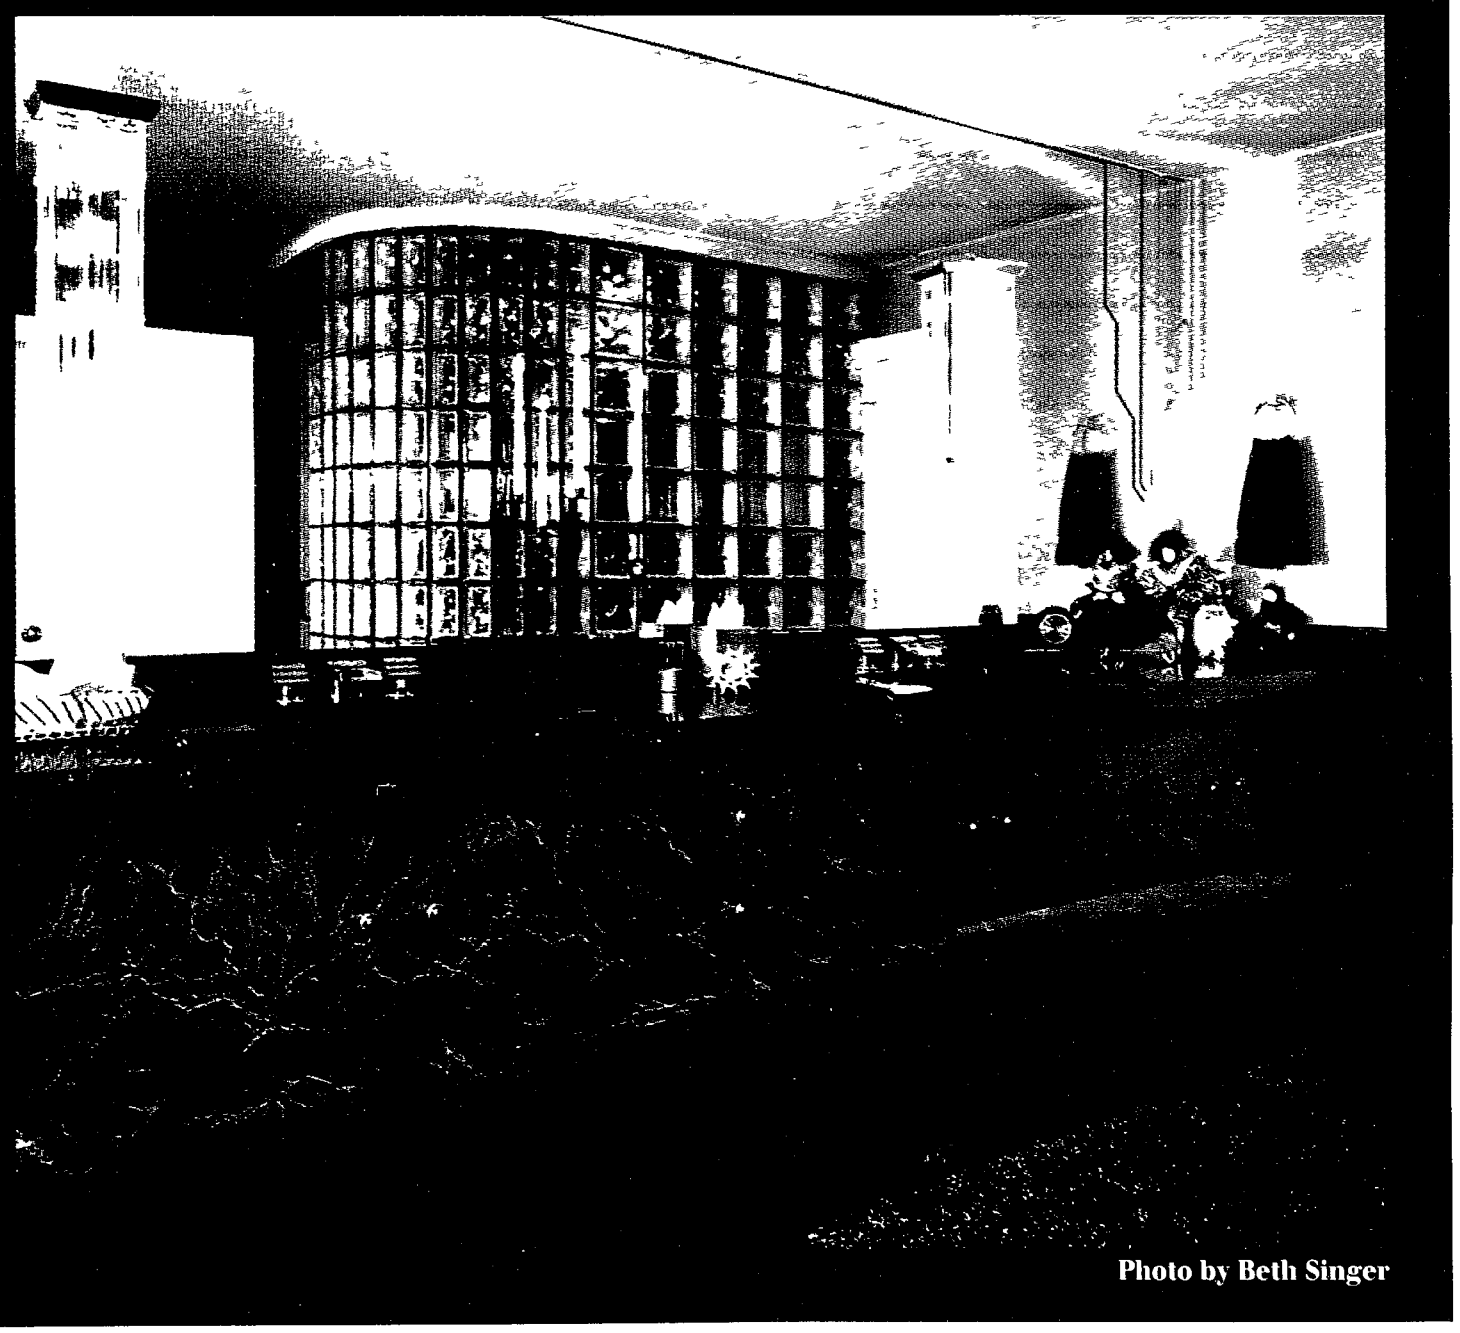

"It's going to be warmer, homier; it's a retreat.

"What you'll find are a lot of earth tones, but modified, with a touch of sea green to soften the edge," she said.

In the end, the choice of colors and decor often complement the nearby bedroom, but are clearly intended to let the bath stand on its own merits.

And when it comes to the final look, Moss summed it up for all three: "It's ultimately a matter of personal taste." ■

Q: We are in the process of building a 3,000 sq. ft. home. What are the trends for the master bathroom?

A: For the size of your home, I believe that you can expect your builder to give you an option of a jaccuzi and a shower. Enclosed is a photo that points out that a step to the tub can provide comfort as well as good design. Make sure that your floors are non-slip on the floor and on the step. If you have long cabinets, an inlay can make it more balanced with the size of the room. Your builder can handle that as a reasonable upgrade. Your sink can be "drop-in" or a continuous effect with the counter if you use corian or similar materials. If you have the budget and the wallspace, mirrored walls above the counter can double as recessed cabinets for medicine and cosmetics. You can even hide your electrical outlets in them. Make sure that your lighting is not only glamorous, but sufficient without daylight. Remember, if you are too macho to take a bubble bath, you're missing a lot! ■

This Month's Master Planned Community Offered By:

Prestwick Village

Located just north of the Village of Milford in Highland Township, Prestwick Village encompasses 426 acres of natural rolling terrain, woodlands and picturesque lakes. Prestwick Village offers an exclusive collection of custom homesites in a private club community featuring an 18- hole private championship golf course, 20,000 square foot clubhouse, pool and tennis center, playground area, an unparalleled 26 acre golf practice facility, 9-hole putting course and cross country skiing.

"The Prestwick Village lifestyle offers recreational opportunities throughout the community. The quality and uniqueness of this community, along with the lifestyle it provides, are the prime reasons why over 120 lots have been sold in the first 15 months," stated Managing General Partner Roy Gaddey.

The immediate area offers additional recreation including downhill skiing, boating and fishing. The award winning Huron Valley Schools, parks and expressways are located nearby.

Perhaps the most impressive offering at Prestwick Village is the Private Championship golf course designed by internationally recognized golf course architect Ron Garl. The course is scheduled to open this July. Garl has designed over 100 courses worldwide including 10 of the top 50 courses in the State of Florida including: Fiddlesticks CC; Golden Ocala GC; Palm Beach Polo & CC; CC of Sebring and Heathrow CC.

The 205 acre course is designed to optimize the natural characteristics of the land. "We chose Ron to design our course for three reasons: 1) We were looking for an architect who had not worked in Michigan before; 2) Ron has a reputation of building visually beautiful courses; and 3) Ron's courses are very enjoyable to play," stated Gaddey.

Prestwick Village Golf Club will provide a challenge to the best golfers, while at the same time providing a golf course that is enjoyable to play for golfers of all levels. The course will have four sets of tees (Gold - 7,077 yards, Blue - 6,644, White 6,008 and Red 5,416).

Throughout Prestwick Village, home values are protected by sound planning from highly respected architects, engineers and builders. The high standards are further assured by protective covenants and architectural guidelines.

Lot prices start at $66,000 and include a family equity membership to Prestwick Village Golf Club. The lots are approximately half-acre in size.

All the homes at Prestwick Village will be built by one of the five exclusive custom builders. Builders have been selected to ensure the highest quality of homes throughout Prestwick Village. Buyers are encouraged to create their own custom plan. Minimum square footage is 2,000 square feet for ranch homes and 2,400 square feet for a story and a half homes. The average home being built to date is 3,400 square feet.

Prestwick Village's sales center is open Monday through Friday 10AM to 6PM, and Saturday & Sundays from noon to 6PM. We invite you to stop by and see why Prestwick Village is becoming Metropolitan Detroit's premier master planned community.

President, Robert R. Jones Associates

Robert R. Jones

Q: I've always loved the sophisticated effects achieved with moldings in both old and new homes. I have convinced my husband to install some in our living room and dining room. I know that they are available in a wide variety of styles. What criteria should I use to select just the right molding for our home?

Mrs. N. Douglas

A: That depends on several factors, including your personal taste and decor in your home. Moldings can be ornate, traditional or contemporary in design. In addition to their decorative appearance, moldings offer an excellent way to conceal seams and to protect your walls and baseboards from inevitable nicks and scratches.

The majority of moldings are made of pine or another softwood but you can also find them in such popular hardwoods as mahogany, oak and birch. Most come in lengths from 3 to 20 feet and when you make your measurements at home, round each one up to the next larger foot so that you won't run short. If you want to reduce your costs a bit, consider using finger-jointed moldings (if you are planning to paint your moldings) which are short pieces that have been joined end to end.

Here is a quick overview of some of the more common types of moldings and what they are typically used for:

• Crown and Cove Moldings make popular trims because of their elegant appearance and are superb at concealing the joints between walls and ceilings.
• Stop Moldings attach to faces of door jambs and limit the door swing; also used to hold the inside sash on place on double-hung windows.
• Half Round Moldings work well for shelf edging.
• Quarter Round Moldings are used as base shoes and interior corner guards.
• Baseboards and Base Shoe Moldings are an excellent trim used to protect the wall along the wall-floor line.
• Brick Mold and Casing Moldings are used around window and door openings on the outside and inside, respectively.
• Screen Moldings cover seams where screen material is fastened to frames.
• Batten Moldings make wonderful concealers of horizontal or vertical panel seams.
• Outside Corner Guard Moldings are a good choice to protect corners where different wall finishes meet. ■

Making A Splash!

Every year, Memorial Day marks the unofficial beginning of summer - and for many Americans, a time to start thinking about putting in that long-desired swimming pool.

But for experts in the field of design and installation, the work on this year's crop of swimming pools began while the snow was still on the ground.

The result of their efforts is a selection that gets even more varied - in size, shape and cost.

For those coming from modest backgrounds, nothing brings back memories as quickly as that good ol' 3-foot deep, 12-foot round pool out by the garage.

Splashing around as children, they recall that simple design as the perfect setting for a summer day of fun and sun - and today it remains the sales foundation for Viscount Pools and Spas, of which Terry Westfall is its advertising director.

"Our business has always specialized in above-ground pools," he said, "because we wanted to bring affordability to the option of owning a swimming pool.

"With in-ground pools running $15,000 and more, we look at providing something in the $1,000 or $2,000 range.

"Face it," he said, "water is just as wet, regardless of the pool."

Of course, saying that one pool can cost a fraction of another in no way limits the level of quality or amenities to be found. In addition to the common above-ground versions, Westfall's company also offers a hybrid pool that also can go slightly below ground to create greater depths.

The only limitation, he said, is that while above ground pools are round and oval, these hybrid versions are naturally rectangular.

In all cases, however, the size of these pools can be quite arresting: up to 28 feet in diameter for round pools and upwards of 18-by-33 feet for oval and rectangular.

"The only other limits," Westfall said, "is the size of the yard and the amount of money the homeowner wants to spend.

"Certainly, if you have a $500,000 home, you're not going to put in a $2,000 pool - but if you're a young family just starting out and have a $75,000 home, this is a good place to start.

"In addition, because these pools are considered 'portable,'" he said, "you avoid certain tax assessments."

Still, for those with the money, that is probably the last consideration as far as Judy Mayer is concerned.

As owner of Total Pool Concepts in Lake Orion, Mayer deals with in-ground pool installations of several types - with the most popular quickly becoming those that utilize a vinyl liner over an insulated wall.

Open-ended foam blocks are stacked and then filled with steel re-rod and concrete. As a finished unit, Mayer said, these walls offer the insulation protection equivalent to 6 to 7 inches of home insulation.

And that, she said, can not only moderate the water temperature during the year, but even extend the outdoor swimming year a little bit further - with the use of an optional solar blanket.

The foam construction also provides one other benefit. Mayer said: "In addition to the blocks, we also insert a foam pad between them and the liner.

"That quarter-inch pad acts much like the padding on carpeting - creating a cushion for swimmers and enhancing the life of the liner.

"And," she said, "with the pad you don't feel any imperfections in the wall."

Not surprisingly, the use of foam blocks in swimming pools did not arrive in a vacuum. The same technology is also being used in Michigan in the construction of home basements, offering superior insulation when compared to poured concrete.

When it comes to the top end of home swimming pools, however, Paddock Pools takes the concept one step beyond doing laps.

For Todd Rosa, Paddock's sales representative, the visual impact of a pool is just as important as its practical value - and to that end, his company works in an area of pool construction that incorporates the "vanishing edge."

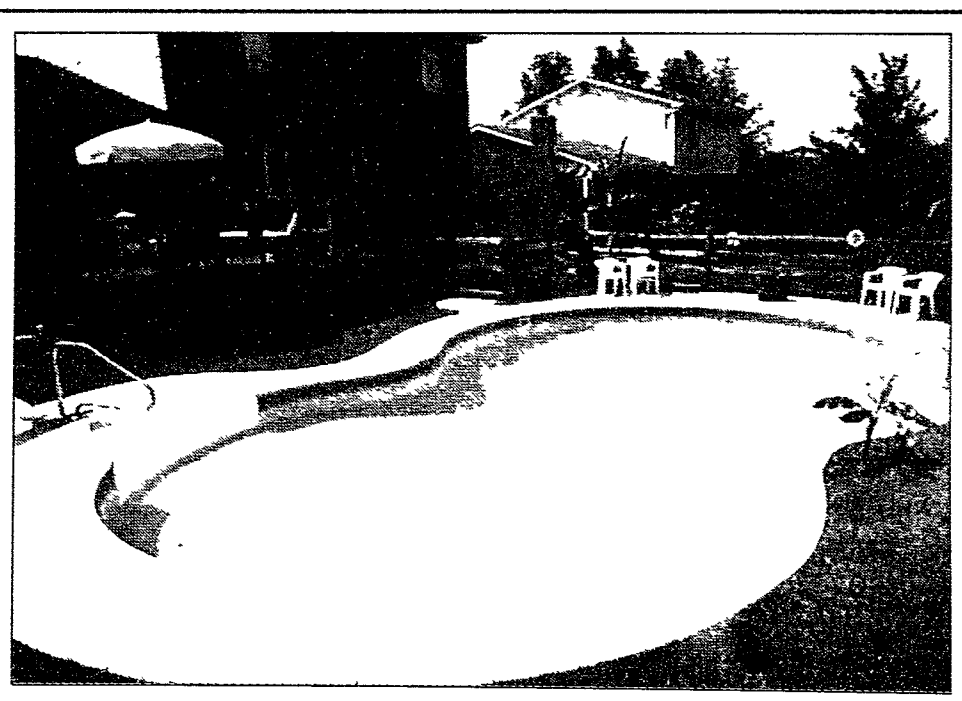

Also known as the "negative edge," this method of construction employs a drop off at one end of a pool (actually a side of the pool) that creates an illusion of the water blending into the background.

The idea builds upon the overflow trough that circles many competitive and oversized public pools. In normal private pools, water is drawn through gates in the side of the wall - but in public pools, the water sloshes over a short lip and into a trough, where it makes its way to collectors for filtering.

In Paddock's design of the "vanishing edge," one side of the pool - the one at the far end, away from the home - is

From the opposite side, the trough isn't visible, but the water gently falling over the edge is - creating a water-only boundary to the pool.

Of course, the trough itself is encased in a retaining wall, but that, too, is lower and hidden from view.

"It looks like either the water from the pool is falling into the lake," Rosa said, "or is actually part of the lake.

"Believe me, the view is quite spectacular.

"Of course, to make it work, you need a sloping area away from the home," he said. "Toward the lake, for instance."

What you also need is a few more dollars: depending on the size of the pool, the effect can add another $15,000 to $20,000 to the base price of

But, Rosa said, for those who can afford it, the look is worth every penny. "We just finished one pool that had 120 lineal feet across the vanishing edge - and it was the most fantastic sight you can imagine."

To create the effect, pools incorporating the design actually use two independent pumping systems that interact only when the effect is desired. With the "edge" turned off, water is circulated normally through the pool's filtering system.

When it's turned on, however, an increased flow of water raises the level to a point where the overflow pours ever-so-slightly over the edge. From there, the "edge" system also diverts the water into the filtering system.

Although the use of overflow troughs has a long history in swimming pool construction, the move to vanishing edges is quite a recent development.

Rosa said that Paddock Pools installed its first one in 1994. Since that first one, however, the company averaged four a year coming into 1996.

Of course, for those simply wanting to relax after a day at the office - or wanting to take a dip in the wee hours of the morning - it may make little difference as to whether the pool is round, oval, over or under ground.

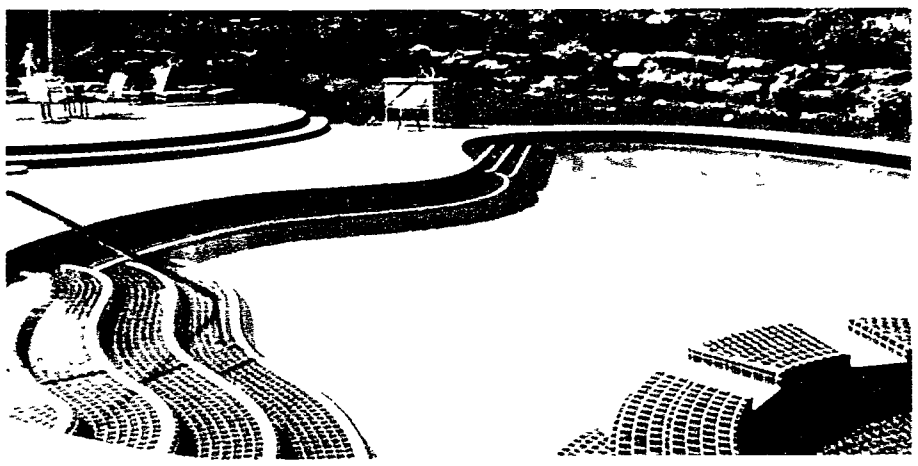

And it may not matter if the edge vanishes or sits there to be seen all day long.

The water will still be wet. ■

"Timeless and classic" is this Bloomfield Hills landscape by Environmental Artists

Wonderful Waterfalls

For many people, the "music" that soothes the savage beast is the simple sound of rushing water.

A babbling brook, breaking waves, a rushing stream - even the quiet current of a flowing river - all of these can put one to sleep, or at least calm a hectic day.

But one of the most dramatic of water sounds - and sights - is that made by falling water.

And that's the effect Jeff Hennig works to achieve every time he steps into someone's backyard. As owner and president of Environmental Artists, his task is to create the beauty and tranquility of the waterfall.

"The sounds and aesthetics of water are incredibly therapeutic," Hennig said.

"And creating a waterfall with a babbling brook is one of the most natural images possible.

"The only limits are the area and topography of the land," he said.

Working exclusively in "upscale" residential settings, Hennig both designs and builds entire water-based projects - actually a compilation of several elements connected by running water.

In fact, every one of his designs involving a waterfall incorporate four distinct parts: an origination pond, the waterfall, an exit stream and a collecting pond.

"You can't just build a waterfall and that's it," he said.

"You have to make the water appear to come from somewhere and then go somewhere.

"And you have to have a creek to carry it away," he said. "You just don't build two pools with a waterfall in the middle; I wouldn't even design it."

Because of the four parts required in creating the right look, the first step for Hennig is to scope out the topography of the landscape, using the natural grade and contour of the area to create the right look.

"For example, the topography might limit the height of the drop or the way in which you wind the creek," he said.

"And you want to install the origination pond in such a way that it's actually hidden from view; you don't want to see where the water is coming from.

"Finally," he said, "after you've mapped out the area you begin to design in other elements that will complete the effect."

These "other elements," Hennig said, include the addition of trees, rocks and other landscape items to create the most natural setting as possible.

"We want the waterfall to look like it was carved out of natural stones and then have the creek roll and bend.

"We want irises and creeping plants and moss.

"We even want to plant 20 and 30-foot tall trees right in the middle of the stream," he said. "Anything to add to the natural beauty of the project."

The waterfall itself is usually built into the existing raised topography, but Hennig will build up the area if necessary - with soil excavated to make the collection pool.

From there, the site is covered first with a liner to prevent erosion and then stone - most often shale - to give it its natural look. To top off the effect, Hennig plants most within the cracks of the stone so the waterfall "looks just as good when the water is shut off."

Indeed, the real beauty of one of Hennig's waterfalls is that it has an on and off switch, with all the plumbing and pumping necessary to keep the water recirculating when desired.

In fact, for many of his clients, the entire system is governed by a computer that can be programmed to start the effect in time for an afternoon homecoming from work.

One of the keys to making the project a complete success, however, is providing more than a man-made source of the water supply; creating an "open" rather than a "closed" system.

Pumping about 150 gallons of water a minute - and with some of it inevitably evaporating, splashing or leaking out of the system - such a project needs periodic replenishment, which can be accomplished two ways: from the faucet or from a nearby lake or pond.

Hennig prefers the latter.

"In a closed system, you need to feed the loss yourself," he said, "usually with some kind of timer that puts water back in the system.

"But with normal loss, that mean's you'd probably have to do it every day.

"With an open system, though," he said, "you are hooked into a nearby lake or pond that can naturally keep your levels where they should be."

This open system also keeps the water fresh.

The final wrinkle to one of Hennig's systems is the inclusion of a hidden reservoir installed under the collector pond. This reservoir acts to "prime the pump" when the system is first turned on, preventing an unusual drop in water level in the collector pond before the water has a chance to complete the cycle.

The final look of one of Hennig's designs can incorporate drops up to 12 feet and more, with streams winding and twisting more than 120 feet throughout a back yard.

But that still isn't enough of a challenge for Hennig.
