Pool location, costs subject of discussion

Township likely location?

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

If a public swimming pool is ever built in Northville it will probably cost millions of dollars and have to be located in the township, members of the Northville Parks & Recreation Commission were told last week.

The commission, during its April 17 meeting, heard an update on the idea they've been exploring since last summer. Public pool time is hard to come by in Northville, and only comes from what the Parks & Rec Department can arrange at Northville High School.

In the last several months, the commission, Vice Director Tracy Sincok and a special pool committee have been plumbing the notion of building a community pool complex in Northville. Last week saw Sincok update the commissioners on the latest information she's obtained.

That included the fact that even a basic summer season outdoor pool could cost anywhere from $2.3 million to $3 million, Sincok said, basing that estimate on figures from a pool construction specialist.

She stressed that the numbers "are very preliminary at this point, however."

A more elaborate facility located indoors and able to be open year-round would probably be more in the $7 million range, Sincok said.

The yearly cost to operate such a facility might range from $150,000 to $180,000, she added.

Board prefers cash over courts

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

Take the money and run.

That's the advice the Parks & Recreation Commission offered to the Northville Township Board of Trustees last week when it comes to accepting courts or cash from the shopping center developer on the Ward Church property.

Members of the commission at their April 17 meeting agreed to recommend to the board that the trustees take a promised $100,000 in cash offered by Grand/Sakwa Properties instead of $50,000 and two tennis courts.

Commissioners said that $50,000 cash in the community's coffers will bring more recreation bang for the buck than the two "isolated" courts. The decision on which to accept, however, is entirely the board's and it's one that's expected to be made soon.

The trustees last month approved the Huggerty Planned Unit Development (PUD) contract that will govern development of the 140-acre Ward parcel, which is scheduled for groundbreaking this summer. To get the PUD, which allows the site to be developed with both a church and shopping center on it, Ward and Grand/Sakwa have had to show that their plan offers a "substantial benefit" to Northville.

A big part of that has been support for community recreation. Ward officials have agreed to allow the Parks & Rec Department to use their baseball fields two and a half days a week for the next 10 years, while Grand/Sakwa has earmarked money for rec programs and/or two tennis courts.

The courts would be built on a five-acre parcel deeded to the township on the Ward property, a section bordering Huggerty Road.

A quilt in time

Carol Doyle (front) and members of the Hands All Around Quilting Group pick out colors and patterns for the library quilt. It will measure 59 by 57 inches and look like a bookshelf. Those interested in having their names placed on the spine of a book can go to the library to fill out a request form or contact Doyle at 349-5715. A minimum donation of $75 is requested, with the money going to the library. The group is donating the materials and time needed to make the quilt.

Accused attacker faces the evidence

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

An argument over how to light a bonfire sparked the fight that nearly cost a boy his life three weeks ago, witnesses at the preliminary exam of Joseph Elliott testified Monday.

Elliott, 18, is charged with assault with intent to commit murder. Wayne County prosecutors say the Plymouth Township resident stabbed a Livonia teenager seven times during an alcohol-influenced scuffle which took place in the woods near Six Mile and Northville roads on the night of April 4 in Northville Township.

Elliott's defense attorney Brian Stacey told 35th District Court Judge John MacDonald that his client, fearing for his life, acted in self-defense after the Livonia teen's surprise attack.

MacDonald declined Stacey's request to reduce the charge against Elliott from attempted murder to something less serious or to lower his bail, which remains at $100,000 in cash. That means that Elliott, who works full-time as a machinist, will remain behind bars in the Wayne County Jail for at least the time being.

A preliminary exam is one of the first court proceedings facing someone accused of a serious crime. In it, the prosecution must prove two things to a judge: that a crime has taken place and that enough probable cause exists to believe that the person accused of the offense actually committed it and thus should be put on trial.

Witnesses during Elliott's exam testified they saw him with a knife just before the stabbing. They also alleged that he'd uttered threats both before and after it.

"He was kind of like running his mouth, trying to be a big shot," one teen testified. "He was saying, 'I could beat all of you up, and I could kill all of you.' He said it two or three times, loudly, like he meant it."

"I was in shock that I got stabbed. I backed away from him. He was screaming, telling me to come back, that he wasn't done with me," the 17-year-old teen himself alleged.

Cup conservation

Doug Scheer uses an overturned cup perched on the head of Winchester Elementary School student Chris Davis to make a point about conservation. Scheer told class members to turn the water off when they brush their teeth, and that seemingly small amount of savings will add up to countless gallons over the course of a lifetime.

City wraps up hearings on budget plan

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

The city's spending blueprint is beginning to take shape.

The Northville City Council completed its third and final hearing on the proposed 1996/97 budget Monday, and officially set a proposed operating millage rate. At the same time, city officials approved two additional budget requests.

The new millage rate was set at 12.89 mills, 0.54 mill less than the current fiscal year rate of 13.42 mills, and 0.39 mill above the rate set in fiscal year 1994/95.

The council will conduct a public hearing on the proposed budget

May 20.

The new millage rate, once set by the council, cannot be increased. It can, however, be decreased if the council decides to eliminate proposed expenditures.

When city officials released the first draft of the proposed budget earlier this month, the millage rate had been tentatively set at 12.23 mills, but councilmembers bumped the rate up to cover the cost of two significant budget requests not included in the original budget request.

City officials tacked on $20,000 to the police budget for the purchase of a new dispatch tape logger and $157,930 for new computers, software training and data conversion.

Both requests are important to the overall operation of the city administration and will help to provide quality services to the community, according to City Manager Gary Word.

Schools officials seek bids from construction firms

By ROBERT JACKSON
Staff Writer

With the community dialog process complete and the High School Future's Committee recommendation slated to go before the Northville Board of Education within the next month, district officials are gearing up for a possible bond election this summer.

School officials are soliciting requests for proposals for construction management services in the event the district calls for voter approval on a $60 million bond and enhancement millage election.

The district could build a new high school and convert the current high school facility into a middle school with the money, and administrators believe that hiring a construction manager would be necessary to facilitate the process.

The proposal calls for the district to secure the services of a construction management company to assist in the development of the bond applications for the potential bond issue election and for services during the actual construction and renovation work, according to Assistant Superintendent for Administrative Services Dave Bolitho.

"The rationale for the recommendation is twofold," he explained. "First, the proposed projects are very complex in nature and, secondly, the number of projects necessitate construction management services."

Township brings on new building official/inspector

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

If you're constructing a new home or business or renovating an old one in Northville Township, get ready to meet Daniel Smith. Come Monday morning he'll be the township's new chief building official.

Smith, chief building official for Commerce Township, was offered the job earlier this month after the board of trustees gave its stamp of approval. His April 29 start date will cap a four-month hunt for a replacement for former CBO Mick Kruszewski, who left the township in December.

"We're very excited to have him on board," Director of Public Utilities Bill Anderson said.

Notices advertising the position were published in January, Anderson explained, bringing in 23 applications to the township. Those applicants were tested and the top seven candidates interviewed last month, he added, with Smith coming out on top.

The Clarkston resident will be a non-contract, "at-will" employee. He'll head up the township's building department, which is part of the Department of Public Utilities. The department includes Smith, three full-time inspectors, one part-time inspector and a full-time ordinance officer.

He'll oversee a budget of about $400,000 and will be paid $47,000 a year to start.

Smith has been with Commerce Township since 1993. Before that he worked in the building industry and for the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Department.

He's a graduate of Oakland University and the Detroit Carpentry Apprentice School.

Walk for CF coming to Maybury

Pedal power will work its magic at Maybury State Park Saturday, May 18, when the Eighth Annual Great Strides Walk for cystic fibrosis helps raise funds to combat a deadly disease.

Sponsored by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, the 10K (6.2 mile) walk-a-thon is one of 170 similar events that will be taking place around the country that same day.

Last year the Foundation raised over $5 million nationwide, with $100,000 being raised in the Metro Detroit area alone.

The Metropolitan Detroit Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation is seeking both corporate sponsors and exercise buffs to help carry the torch for the cause.

"We always have a good response from the Metropolitan-area community," CFF Special Events Director Angie Bevilacqua said. "We're hoping the generous outpouring that we've seen in the past will be duplicated - and surpassed - this year."

Cystic fibrosis is the No. 1 genetic killer of children and young adults in the country. The ailment causes a thick, sticky mucus to clog the lungs, leading to chronic pulmonary infections and damage. In 1993, research identified the defective gene that causes the disease. The Foundation currently supports six landmark studies into CF treatment.

This year two local posterchildren, 4-year-old Anna DiPirro of Canton and 10-year-old Nicole Dishaw of Troy, will serve as "Ambassadors of Courage," symbols of the long struggle against the disease.

To participate in the walk or to sponsor one of the Ambassadors, call the Foundation office at (810) 524-CURE (2873).

Volunteers are also invited to form their own teams, get their companies involved as sponsors or help out at the walk site. Walkers can earn incentive prizes by collecting donations from friends, family members and co-workers.

Donations of at least $50 will earn walkers a T-shirt for their participation.

Corporate exposure is available through name association with the event. Promotions can appear in the print or broadcast media or on signage the day of the event.

The walk at Maybury will get under way at noon May 18. Check-in is set for 11 a.m.

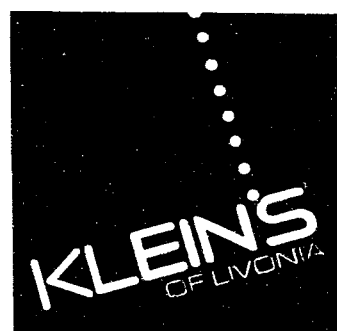

The main entrance to Maybury is off Eight Mile west of Beck Road in Northville Township.

Breast cancer patient makes headway in battle

Prognosis good one year after transplant

By LEE SNIDER
Editor

It could be a case of losing the battle but winning the war.

Novi resident Kathy Karney, who underwent treatment for breast cancer last year, isn't eligible for a new medical program her husband's employer General Motors, is sponsoring. However, the hugely successful community fund-raising effort held on her behalf in 1995 provided enough funds to get her own treatment program going full steam ahead.

So far the outlook is optimistic. "I'm doing well," she said last week. "My last scan showed that I'm in regression. There were no changes for the worse."

Karney required auto-transplant treatment to combat her illness last year, and her doctor recommended she enroll in a program out of Duke University in Durham, N.C.

But her family's insurance company Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Michigan refused to pay expenses for the therapy, choosing to classify the program as an unreimbursable "experimental" surgery. The aggressive treatment involved removing the patient's bone marrow, then putting it back into her body after cleansing it with radiation.

After receiving word of the denial, a group of Karney's friends began an impressive fund-raising campaign and generated $80,000 to help defray medical costs.

"The support from the community was just unbelievable," organizer Linda Baca said. "We had a big dinner, a silent auction, a raffle - almost no one said no."

To date, only about $15,000 has been spent from the fund, mostly for travel expenses, Baca added.

The transplant operation took place last May, and though the high doses of chemotherapy took a toll in terms of side effects, the results have been encouraging.

"It's worth being sick for a couple of months in order to save your life," Karney exclaimed.

Ironically, GM announced only last month that it would sponsor a breast cancer treatment program on a pilot basis. But the two-year research study, offered at the Barbara Karmanos Cancer Institute in Detroit and 30 other centers around the country, had a start up date of Jan. 1, 1996, and the bulk of Karney's treatment took place last year.

"About 1.7 million people - GM workers and their dependents - have the option to participate in the study, but I guess it's not retroactive," said Joe Michaels, the marketing director for the Karmanos Institute.

"I'm not eligible," Karney confirmed.

Karney, who worked at Providence Hospital, tries submitting her bills to several medical carriers, including the SelectCare health maintenance organization that covered her. A few of the expenses get paid, but most don't. Only after exhausting all other possibilities does her benefit fund get dipped into.

Nevertheless, much of her treatment has already been completed and there's enough money left over to keep the bill collectors at bay, at least for now.

Baca said that GM's decision to sponsor the breast cancer study represented a victory of sorts.

"Maybe the bad press GM got over Kathy's case and others like it helped cause them to fund it. Even if it helped just a little bit, that counts for something."

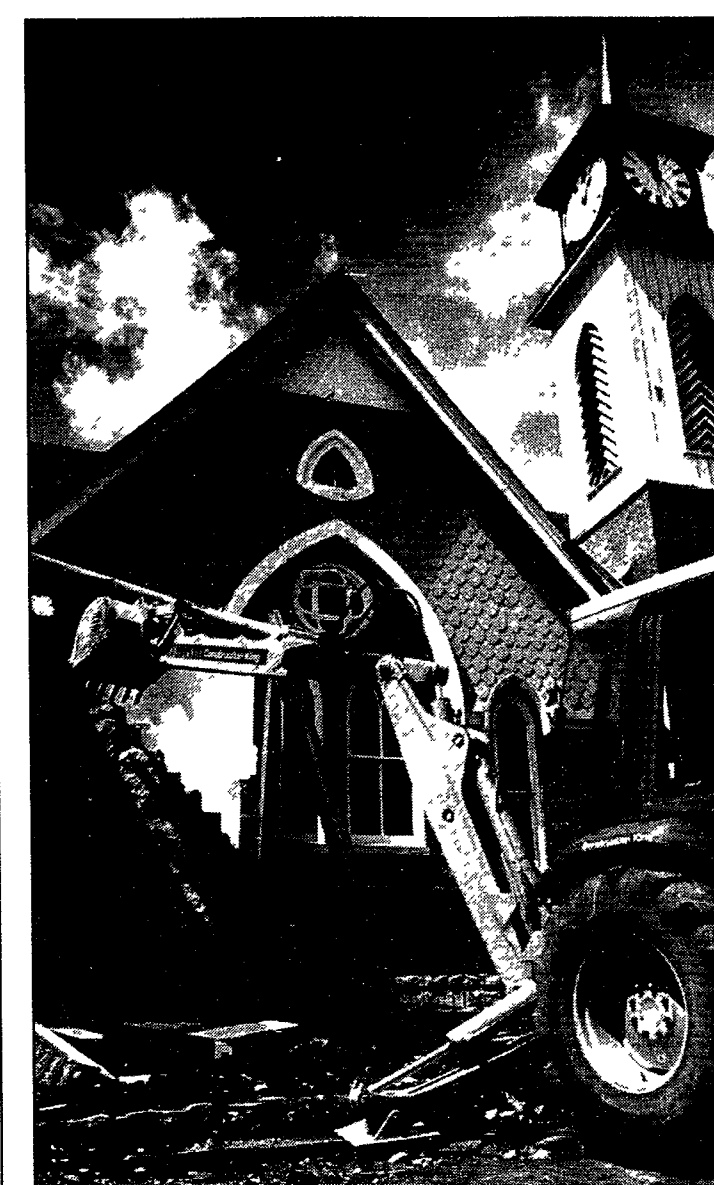

Karney lives in a Novi neighborhood located in the Northville School District and many of her fund-raising activities took place in Northville. According to Baca, two downtown Northville businesses, Genitti's restaurant and the Great Harvest Bread Company, were especially generous in providing food and entertainment.

Karney must remain cancer-free for five years before doctors will declare her cured.

Offing the wall

That unsightly simulated sandstone partition in front of the former Open Door Christian Church building went the way of the Berlin Wall last Friday, crashing to the pavement in a cloud of dust and a pile of rubble. Northville businessman Tom Rice celebrated the demise of the structure, which many people regarded as an undesirable addition to the downtown community. Rice is renovating the former church building at Center and Dunlap, and plans to open the Northville Academy of Music and Arts, a combination retail shop and performing arts school, on April 29. A few months down the road, a folk club, The Raven, and a restaurant will be added. Rice owned and operated the Gitfiddler Music Store in the city for over 20 years before deciding to change locations. The Gitfiddler used to call an old corner gas station on Main Street near Griswold home.

Budget crunching

STORIES BY ROBERT JACKSON

It's budget time!

That's right, Northville taxpayers, it's that time.

Officials decide how to spend your money they're all about.

conversely, how to spend that money they are.

It's a process that boggles the minds of many of us — which is one of the main reasons you don't see too many taxpayers showing up to city budget hearings — with numbers and formulas bouncing back and forth throughout the entire process.

There is hope for novice budget watchers, however. This year the staff of The Northville Record thought it would be useful, if not at least appropriate, to put together a survival guide on how to understand the city budget.

So we prepared a crash course in city budget 101 — the layman's guide to understanding the entire budget, and the process used to put it together.

The city of Northville runs its budget process like most Michigan cities, designating the City Manager — in our case Gary Word — as the chief budget officer, responsible for the preparation of the city budget according to the policies set by the City Charter.

The process begins in January each year, with the City Council and administrative staff discussing goals and objectives at scheduled public meetings.

"Based on the presentations of staff and discussion among the mayor and city council, those goals and objectives are prioritized for the next fiscal year," Word explained.

Goals and objectives could include public improvement projects, like street, sewer, and sidewalk repairs, or even items like maintaining flowers and plants along downtown sidewalks or purchasing a new police vehicle.

After that series of goal setting sessions, each department begins the process of preparing individual line item budgets. Those budgets reflect the projected costs by each department in order to operate for the next year. The process is sort of like figuring a household budget, deciding what is needed to get through the month based on the amount of money available to an individual.

When departments complete the line-item process, Word said, the departmental budgets are submitted to City Controller Nickie Bateson and the amounts are then analyzed by Bateson and Word. "Individual meetings with department heads for further discussion take place and the budget is adjusted accordingly," he said.

From all the department budget requests, Bateson and Word put together a lengthy document called a "proposed budget," which Word explained supports the direction and focus of the community.

The city council then conducts three separate budget hearings where the entire budget is discussed line-item by line-item. This process allows councilmembers and city officials to "tweak" each department budget, and enables the public to provide input within the process.

Once those hearings are complete, the council adopts the proposed budget. This year the budget is scheduled for adoption at the regular council meeting May 20.

The city's fiscal year runs from July 1 through June 30.

Now that you understand the overall process, other stories in this special section will guide you through the city's proposed 1996/97 budget document itself.

Most of what's explained has to do with the city's biggest portion of the budget — the general fund — but we'll also provide some insight into the other funds that make up the city budget. By the time we're done, you'll learn everything you need to know about how the city gets its revenue and how it goes about spending it.

Other Funds: Enterprising and separate

The Northville general fund may represent the largest single portion of the budget, but there are other funds city officials manage throughout the year.

Two of the funds — water and sewer and waste and recycling — are, for the most part, self supporting or "enterprise" — meaning that the funds received are user related, and are not considered general fund revenues.

According to Controller Nickie Bateson, enterprise funds are like separate businesses, and are not the same as other funds.

"They are totally self-supporting and are not funded by tax dollars," she said. "In reality we are not even mandated by state law to include enterprise funds in our budget, but we list them anyway so the public and city council will understand how those funds are managed."

For instance, if you own a home in Northville you have to pay for water and sewer service. When you pay your bill, that money goes directly into the water and sewer fund and can't find its way into the general fund or any other category.

With some fund categories — like streets, the parking fund, and beautification committee — a portion of the revenues may come from city contributions. Those categories are not considered "enterprise" funds because they are not totally self-supporting.

In addition to the general fund, Northville manages 11 funds in its budget. A quick glance at the proposed budgets for the major categories will give you an idea what to expect from these funds in fiscal year 1996/97:

• Major Streets — This category manages the revenue received from the state gasoline tax, under Act 51 passed by the state Legislature. The money is used to maintain major streets in Northville and includes patching, sealing, grading of gravel roads, repair of storm sewers, street sweeping, traffic signs and signal maintenance, winter road maintenance and debt service. The proposed budget amount is $275,000, a decrease of about 18 percent.

• Local Streets — Just like major streets, this category manages the revenue received from the state gasoline tax. The money in this fund is used for major road maintenance, drainage systems maintenance, traffic signs and winter road maintenance. The proposed budget amount is $221,400, a decrease of 25 percent from the cur-

• Water and Sewer — This fund is self-explanatory, managing the operations and maintenance of the city's water and sewer system. The fund is considered an "enterprise" fund, because the activity related to it is self-sustaining. Northville's system has aged quite a bit, and officials have planned several projects for the next fiscal year, including the Rural Hill Drive watermain replacement, city-wide water meter replacement, water system study and report, sanitary sewer flow monitoring, city-wide pavement repair, and city-wide crack sealing. The proposed budget for this fund is more than $1.9 million, a 1.5 percent increase.

• Refuse and Recycling — Residents will notice a decrease in this category's budget because city officials, with the help of a citizens committee, renegotiated the refuse and recycling contract with city hauler Painter and Ruthenburg Inc. The refuse and recycling fund manages the collection and disposal of residential solid waste, yard waste, and recycling materials. The proposed budget amount is $381,002, a decrease of 14 percent.

• Parking Fund — The city's parking fund is used to receive special assessment revenue and pay the principal on the bond used to finance construction of the new parking decks. It is also used to manage lease payments on land used by the city for parking. The proposed budget shows a slight increase of 1 percent, at $26,923.

• Beautification Commission — This fund manages the completion of beautification projects within the city of Northville on an annual basis. The proposed budget is $8,010, a slight increase of less than 1 percent.

• Arts Commission — This fund manages the activities of the commission including the fine arts series, art market, lecture series, and band concerts. The proposed budget is $11,045, which represents no change from the current budget year.

• Downtown Development Authority — This fund manages the expenditures to the debt service fund for payments of principal and interest, a transfer to the general fund for maintenance of the parking facilities, and expenditures for repairs and improvements to the downtown area.

The proposed budget for this fund also includes expenditures for the reconstruction of city parking lot No. 2, the purchase of a power sweeper, parking lot striping, and curb and sidewalk repair. The budget proposed for this fund is $539,500, a slight increase of about 1 percent.

NORTHVILLE CITY BUDGET

City Revenues: On decline after Prop A

Understanding how city officials use Northville's general fund budget is as easy as looking at your own check book.

When you drive to your local bank on payday to deposit your paycheck into your checking account you are taking in revenue. After leaving your bank you may return home and write a few checks to pay for bills you've accrued during the month.

Many of us receive the same bills each month - mortgage, rent, credit cards, car payments, car and home owners insurance, electricity phone, etc - and because those bills usually don't increase or decrease with any regularity, we have a pretty good idea what our monthly expenditures are going to be.

That's because many of us work on a monthly budget. We plan on a certain amount of money (revenue) coming in, and we figure on how much of that money we have to spend (expenditures) to live for the next month or three months, or six months.

The same philosophy holds true for the city of Northville. City officials plan on a certain amount of revenue to come in and based on that amount, they budget for the necessary expenditures to keep the city running.

They begin the process by figuring the amount of revenue the city will take in for the entire fiscal year.

Northville general fund revenues are received from a variety of sources - nine to be exact - and all of those funds go into the city's checking account or general fund. The nine revenue sources the city counts on are pretty straight forward:

- Property tax - Property tax represents the primary source of general fund revenue - this year about 69.3 percent - and is based on millage. While the formula for setting the city's maximum millage rate is complicated, the main thing taxpayers need to know is simple - the maximum millage rate for Northville in fiscal year 1996/97 is 15.41 mills - that's the highest it can be set this year by law.
- The proposed millage rate for next year is 12.89 mills, and each mill is worth $209.013. So the amount of money the city will take into its general fund from property taxes is the product of $209.013 times 12.89 mills, or $2,694,177. Don't forget, however, that an additional 2.84 mills will be assessed property owners for the city's street repair debt, and 0.36 mill for the Randolph Drain Debt. Both of those debts were approved by voters.
- Licenses, Fees, Permits - This revenue source has to do with new construction or renovations of homes and businesses within the city. The revenue comes from the various permits builders must purchase before any construction is done within the city. Next year it's projected that the city will take in about $120,970, a decrease of roughly 12 percent from the current budget year.
- State Grants - This revenue source is directly related to police department training, and will bring in about $3,000 to city coffers next fiscal year.
- Racetrack Breakage/Police Service Fee - This revenue source is tricky, and city officials don't include racetrack money in the budget because the revenue varies from year to year. And in some past years the state failed to deliver Northville's racetrack revenue.

What city officials project is the estimated cost of providing Northville Downs with police and fire services - this year's figure is about $143,660. If the breakage amount is under that figure, the city will bill Northville Downs for the difference. If it is over that amount, city officials will place that money into the Public Improvement Fund.

Any excess above that enables officials to place the surplus in the city's fund balance - which we'll discuss later in the story. The past couple of years Northville has used excess racetrack funds to help the city climb out of a deficit situation.

- State Shared Revenue - This revenue source includes Northville's portion of the state income tax, state sales tax, single business tax, and state liquor license fees. Next year's $678,945 projection is based on the amount of money Northville received from the state this current fiscal year.
- Sales and Services - This revenue category has two primary sources, cemetery sales and police protection services. Northville owns and operates Rural Hill Cemetery, and the revenue comes from the sales of grave sites and burial services. Police protection services come from various organizations that request police personnel at special events or activities. This year's projected revenue amount is about $77,000, a decrease of some 1.9 percent over the current budget year.

- Fines and Forfeits - This is a unique revenue source, with money coming from 35th District Court and based on parking fines and other violations. Northville officials project the city will receive about $55,000, a decrease of 19 percent.
- Miscellaneous Revenues - The major source of revenue coming into this category is the interest the city earns on investments. According to City Manager Gary Word, the increase in the fund balance, which is the surplus revenue the city carries for emergencies, will increase the amount of interest earnings. This year's take is projected to be $114,650.
- Interfund and Other - This category, according to Word, accounts for inter-fund reimbursements - for overhead and administrative costs incurred by all city funds - that are charged directly to the general fund.

Contributions from the city's Downtown Development Authority reimbursing the city for maintenance costs for the two new parking decks will be found in this revenue category of the proposed budget.

This year's projected revenue amount is $209,300, an increase of 19 percent.

When you take all of those revenue sources and add them up, the city's magic number for the general fund in fiscal year 1996/97 - the projected revenue amount - is $4,709,561, a decrease of 1.5 percent from the current fiscal year.

Expenditures: The cost of doing business

Joe Smith is your average everyday Northville worker. His salary is $50,000 per year, and after taxes his annual take home pay is about $35,000.

Joe lives in a modest $125,000 home and drives a $15,000 automobile. He is married and has one child. Even with his yearly salary, money is tight and the only way Joe and his family can make sure they make ends meet is to keep to a strict monthly budget.

That means that Joe's bills must not exceed the $2,915 he receives every month because if his spending exceeds his income Joe and his family will find themselves in a deficit situation. He does manage to sock away $250 from his income per month in the family savings account just in case any emergencies crop up.

An additional $200 per month from Joe's wife Sue and her housecleaning side business also finds its way into the family savings.

Joe's and Sue's situation is not unlike that of the city of Northville. Officials predict the city will take in $4.7 million in revenues for fiscal year 1996/97. Out of that money, they must pay bills, lots of bills, for administrative services, police, fire, public works, buildings and grounds, and other services that are provided to taxpayers.

That $4.7 million, once the budget is officially adopted, is all city officials can spend without amending the budget.

Should they spend more than the revenue coming in, the city would find itself with a deficit. If they spend less, the excess money will most likely find its way into a "savings account" called a fund balance, which is used in case of emergencies - just like with Joe Smith and his family.

To ensure city officials don't spend more than the projected revenues each city department plans and submits its best guess as to how much money they will need to provide a quality level of service. Because there is an amount of guess work involved, Northville officials according to City Manager Gary Word, have planned next year's budget on the conservative side.

"Every effort has been made to reflect the policies, goals, and objectives of the city council within the financial means available," he said.

How efficient did the major city departments budget for the upcoming fiscal year? A quick look shows that they didn't do too badly.

- City Administration - This portion of the budget includes the city council, city manager, elections, city attorney, city clerk, finance and computer, and taxation department. Of those departments, only the city council and elections budgets showed an increase over the current budget year at 3.9 percent and 9.8 percent, respectively. The proposed expenditures budgeted for city administration are $838,020, a 3.9 percent decrease.

- Buildings and Grounds - This department budget is responsible for the operations and maintenance of the Rural Hill and Oakwood cemeteries, along with the maintenance and utilities for city hall, Mill Race Village, and a number of city-owned buildings and properties. The proposed budget is $315,562, a 0.70 percent increase from the current year budget.

- Police Department - The budget for the police department is the largest of all city departments and includes salaries, police patrol, investigations, court appearances, training, civic events, dispatch and record keeping, patrol car maintenance, administration, contracted services, emergency preparedness, and the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program. The projected budget for the department is $1,562,560, a 9.8 percent increase over the current budget.

- Fire Department - The focus of the proposed Fire Department budget, according to Fire Chief Jim Allen, is to anticipate the expansion of the fire inspection program, improve training, add equipment and manpower, and improve the overall quality of fire and emergency medical service to the community. The projected budget is $188,124, an increase of 5.4 percent from the current amount.
- Department of Public Works - The DPW budget will remain at about the same level of the current budget, only increasing some 2.8 percent to $409,000. DPW funds will pay for engineering services, parking system maintenance, equipment maintenance and rental, service for civic events, and city electrical costs.
- Debt Service - This budget reflects the payment of principal and interest for bonds and notes issued by the city over several years, according to Word. The proposed budget shows a decrease of 2.7 percent at $583,825.

All and all, city officials managed to decrease total expenditures by 2.5 percent, to $4,546,331 and, with the fund balance calculated into the equation, the total budget dropped by 4.3 percent.

City council bumps millage rate to include projects

"The dispatch tape logger is an essential item that the police department cannot do without, because the current equipment is failing and in need of about $8,000 in repairs," Word explained. "We need to invest in the computer project because it will increase the efficiency of city staff, along with their productivity."

The tape logger is a device that records all police dispatched radio transmissions. The current unit failed earlier this year, prompting police officials to make the request for a new tape logger.

To make additional room in the proposed budget, city officials removed the Mill Race Village parking lot paving project from the public improvements and building and grounds budgets. Northville must comply with a court order to complete the parking lot paving by October, 1997, and officials stated that the project will be included in the next budget year.

Also included in the new millage rate is 0.02 mill, or about $3,000, towards funding a full-time director for the Northville Youth Assistance. NYA Director Mary Ellen King is currently budgeted to work about 30 hours per week, but at the budget hearing she told city officials that due to a larger work load she is working closer to 40 hours per week.

According to NYA board member Doug Bingham the full-time position will be needed soon.

"With the amount of casework taking place, we're going to have to make that change sometime real soon," he explained. "If we stay status quo and do nothing, then we can expect that the quality of service to children is going to drop, as well as the number of children we're able to serve."

"If we put on the brakes and don't increase the hours worked, then the service to the children is going to ultimately suffer," he added.

Mayor Chris Johnson said that NYA is a successful program, and that the request merited the city's backing. "I think this would be a wise expenditure, and I think that I would support the position to go full-time," he said.

The problem with the request, city officials admitted, is the timing. Because NYA is a shared service between the city and Northville Township, the township board of trustees would have to approve the request when their budget comes up for adoption in October.

The city works on a July to June fiscal budget year and the township works on the traditional calendar year.

"We don't know how the township is going to view this, but I believe we should budget for our share of the cost for increased hours," Johnson said. "That way if the township approves the request, we'll be ready to fund our portion in January."

Even though the proposed millage remains below last year's rate, city councilman Mark Cryderman was not pleased with the slight increase.

"Last year's millage rate was to be a one-year increase only, so even though this proposed rate is lower than last year, it is still above the 1994/95 rate," he said. "I don't want to raise the rate anymore than it has to be."

There were other significant budget requests that were denied by councilmembers and city administrators in their efforts to keep the millage rate down. Requests that were rejected include paving the Rural Hill Cemetery road, repair of city-owned sidewalks, purchase or lease a fire department command vehicle, hire an additional police officer, and street improvements to E. Cady Street. In all the additional requests totaled $192,000, or approximately 0.81 mill. For fiscal year 1997, one mill is equal to $209,013.

Three departments converge on suspect

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

One gas station cashier in town sure earned his pay this week.

After all, grappling with a robber and getting dragged alongside his car probably isn't listed in his job description.

Township police say the man the cashier, 19, confronted is Northville resident Kenneth Michael Winters, 32. Winters, according to investigators, stole $363 from the Mobil gas station at Seven Mile and Northville roads on Sunday afternoon.

The teen called police at about 4:30 p.m. on April 21, saying that a robbery had just occurred. A man came into the station, he said, and asked to borrow 50 cents. When the cashier opened the register cash drawer to get the money, the man leaned over the counter and snatched a stack of bills inside it, then ran out of the store.

The cashier pursued the man, catching up to him at his car, which was parked by one of the gas pumps. The teen put the man in a bear hug, according to police reports, and tried to prevent him from getting in the blue Ford Escort.

The man struggled with him, the cashier said, but no punches were thrown.

Instead, the man managed to get part way into the Escort and hit the gas pedal, causing the car to lurch forward.

The cashier hung on even as he was dragged 20 feet, finally letting go as the Escort sped away east on Seven Mile.

A "be on the lookout" advisory was issued to all area police departments. Less than an hour and a half later a Michigan State trooper arrested Winters in Garden City.

According to police, he matched the description of the robber given by the cashier and his 1993 Ford Escort matched the description given of the car.

Winters was arraigned Monday in 35th District Court on one count of armed robbery.

Judge Ron Lowe entered a plea of not guilty on his behalf and set his bail at $100,000 cash. To date Winters has been unable to post it and remains in the Wayne County Jail.

His next date in court on the charge will be May 3 for a preliminary exam.

Farmington police are also questioning Winters in connection with a purse snatching and a store robbery in their community, township Detective Fred Yankee said Tuesday.

Cleaning company employee suspected in heist

Northville Township police investigated a theft last week and netted a prime suspect but ended up not being able to pursue the case.

A township woman contacted police one week ago (April 18) and reported that $127 in cash had been taken from two envelopes in her daughter's room. The woman said she saw her daughter put the money away on the morning of April 15 just before a cleaning crew from a Livonia firm called The Cleaning Company arrived.

According to police reports, the woman said that her daughter discovered the money missing later that day. She told the investigating officer in the case that she thought one of the cleaning people was responsible.

The officer contacted a supervisor at the firm and left a message for the suspected employee to call him. The woman, however, later called police to say she wanted to drop the case.

The amount of money involved wasn't worth the effort, the officer said she told him, and besides that she was unsure of who took the money and didn't want to go after an innocent person.

The officer then called the supervisor back to inform the company that the investigation was being closed. The supervisor, he said, was disappointed: the employee had been investigated on three previous occasions for theft but no one ever wanted to prosecute.

UNDERAGE DRINKING: Four teens were caught hanging out and drinking beer in the same spot where a Livonia boy was stabbed almost to death three weeks ago.

Township police said they found four men, two age 18 and two 19, drinking beer in the woods near Waterford Pond, which is located near Six Mile and Northville roads. All but one of the 19-year-olds are from Livonia. He is from Monroe.

The remaining beer, about four cans, was destroyed at the scene. All four men were ticketed for being in possession of alcohol while underage.

They face a court hearing scheduled for May 9.

TRANSPORT STRIPPED: A township woman's 1995 Pontiac Transport was stolen from the parking lot at Meijer last Thursday afternoon, then found the next day in Detroit.

The vehicle was taken sometime between noon and 12:25 p.m. It was found by Detroit police with damage to its steering column. Its wheels, airbag and radio were missing.

The Transport is valued at $20,000.

SHOPLIFTERS APLENTY: Township police arrested several people for larceny at Meijer last week. All face court hearings soon.

On April 16 a Southgate woman was ticketed after store detectives said they saw her put six cartons of cigarettes worth $132 in her purse and then leave without trying to pay for them.

The next day it was a Brighton teenager's turn.

Store detectives said they saw her take the price tag off a pair of sunglasses and then leave the store with them and a camera as well. The items are valued at $61.

April 18 saw the arrest of a 20-year-old Concord man for allegedly taking an answering machine off the store shelf, then trying to return it at the service desk for a refund. It's valued at $60.

CAR VANDALS: Northville police are searching for possible suspects who vandalized two cars parked in the Northville High School parking lot April 22 and 23.

According to police, a 40-year-old Plymouth woman reported her 1995 Ford Windstar had been damaged by vandals who apparently used a key to scratch the paint on the passenger side of her vehicle.

One day later a 41-year-old Novi woman reported her 1995 Ford Contour had also been "keyed" as it sat in the high school parking lot.

No suspects have been identified.

The estimated damage to both vehicles was $200.

SPEEDER ARRESTED: A 27-year-old Sterling Heights man, who decided to speed through Northville was arrested for drunk driving April 19.

According to Northville police, the man was speeding westbound on Eight Mile near the high school overpass when a police officer caught the man on radar. After stopping him, the officer noticed the smell of alcohol and requested the man perform a field sobriety test.

A preliminary breath test was administered and the result was a .19 percent blood alcohol content.

Additional tests registered .17, according to police.

The man was arrested and held on $100 bond.

SUSPECTED INDECENT EXPOSURE: Northville police are still searching for a man who allegedly exposed himself to a 10-year-old Northville girl April 15.

According to police, the girl was playing in her backyard when she noticed an unidentified man begin walking through the girl's backyard with his blue jeans and underwear pulled down to his ankles.

The girl fled into the house and told her 14-year-old sister, who in turn notified her father of the incident.

The father immediately called the police.

According to the police report, the suspect is described as a white male with a dark beard and dark knit cap, wearing a plaid long sleeve shirt and blue jeans. The suspect may also have been driving a white Ford Fiesta.

If you have any information pertaining to this case, contact Northville Police Detective Dave Fendeleat at 349-1234.

Stabbing suspect faces court exam

Prosecutors claim that those threats and the fact that Elliott allegedly stabbed the boy seven times show his intent to kill, something they must prove in order to convict him of an attempted murder charge. Stacey, however, argued that Elliott faced "an extremely dangerous situation" and was acting out of fear for his life.

The stabbing took place in the woods near Waterford Pond, a popular party spot for area teens. About 20 of them were gathered there that night.

Most were students at Livonia Churchill High School, Northville Township police say, and at least four - Elliott and three of his friends - were from Plymouth. Many were drinking.

Everyone got along well for about half an hour, witnesses testified, including Elliott and his alleged victim. The teen told MacDonald that the two of them drank whiskey together and "talked about the schools we were going to go to."

Things headed south soon after that, however, when Elliott and a friend of the teen argued over how to best light the bonfire they'd built.

"I called him a fool and I told him to get away from it," the friend said. "Then he said, 'I'll kill you.' I said, 'Come on and kill me.'"

As the confrontation geared up, others ganged up on two of Elliott's friends. Five boys apiece jumped them as the Livonia teen, hearing someone shout that Elliott had a knife, attacked him from behind. The incident took place near edge of a bridge in the wooded area.

The teen admitted to striking Elliott in the head with a full beer can, then to punching him three or four more times as the defendant sought to regain his balance. It was then that Elliott began wrestling him repeatedly, prosecutors said.

The most serious wound - a puncture in the teen's stomach - was the last one he inflicted, they added, made as the boy backed away and called for help. It caused the boy to suffer internal bleeding and the loss of three liters of blood, doctors told police.

Stacey pointed to the alcohol, the attacks on Elliott's friends and Elliott himself as key factors that made his client fear being injured or killed.

"There's no premeditation here, no maliciousness," he told MacDonald. "He got cocked and was defending himself. He didn't want to get pushed off the bridge."

"The (attempted murder) charge is onerous. It is unjustified," Stacey added.

Instead, he claimed that the most prosecutors could try to charge his client with is some form of assault. MacDonald disagreed, saying that the prosecution met its burden in the preliminary exam.

Whether the attempted murder charge will be allowed to stand in a trial, he added, is for a Wayne County Circuit Court judge to decide. Elliott's case now goes to that court system and he's expected to be arraigned within two weeks.

Recreation News

SEEDLING GIVEAWAY: The City of Northville and the Northville Township Beautification Commission are holding their annual Arbor Day Seedling Giveaway on Saturday, April 27.

The seedlings will be distributed at the Community Recreation Center on Main Street between 9 a.m. and noon. A valid driver's license or other documentation of residency is needed.

For the best selection come early. This year there will be eight varieties available: red maple, pin oak, river birch, white pine, Norway spruce, Douglas fir, high bush cranberry, and white flowering dogwoods.

Please bring a bucket or a plastic bag to carry your new trees home in. Should you wish to order seedlings on your own they are available at a nominal charge. The address is: Wayne County Soil and Conservation District, 5454 Venoy Road, Wayne, MI 48184.

SUMMER JOBS: The Northville Parks & Recreation Department is looking for full-time workers for the summer to cut grass and prepare ball diamonds and soccer fields for games. The pay is $6-7 an hour. Call Director Traci Sincok at 349-0203 if you're interested.

EASTER EGG HUNT A HIT: More than 500 children and their families took part in the Rec department's Easter Egg hunt on April 6. The kids picked up 1,526 plastic eggs filled with candy in just 26 seconds, according to Sincok.

The Easter Bunny was on hand, ferried to the hunt by a township fire truck. The township's Harley-Davidson police motorcycles were also on display as was a petting zoo.

Sincok and the Parks & Rec commission, at its April 17 meeting, praised the efforts of the Northville Rotary Club whose members stuffed the eggs and helped out during the day of the hunt.

PARK TO BE LANDSCAPED: The township and city beautification commissions, as well as the Northville Garden Club, have pitched in to bring landscaping to Fish Hatchery Park on Seven Mile Road.

The three organizations will cover the $2,050 cost of the landscaping, Sincok told the commission. Commissioners praised the groups' generosity.

HEALTH NOTE

by Dennis E. Engerer, P.T.

GIVING ARTHRITIC JOINTS A WORKOUT

According to a recent Dutch study directed by a physical therapist, a program of weightlifting and aerobics benefits arthritic joints more than the traditional therapy of stretching to improve range of motion. The study consisted of dividing 100 arthritic patients into four groups. The first group performed hour-long workouts three times a week with hand weights and exercise bikes. The remaining three groups performed range-of-motion exercises to varying degrees. Most of the study's participants took anti-inflammatory medications to control the chronic swelling that accompanies the disease. After 12 weeks, it was noted that the members of the group devoted to vigorous exercise were not only in better shape but they had improved flexibility and muscle strength around their joints. The study shows that loss of function in joints and limbs due to lack of exercise holds true for arthritis sufferers as well as it does for healthy people.

At Northville Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Inc., our staff works closely with referring physicians and provides timely initial evaluations and routine progress correspondence. We specialize in orthopedic and sports injuries, neck and back rehabilitation, and pain management. Our staff now includes three physical therapists and we have early and late business hours including weekends. Insurance is welcome. For more information or to schedule a consultation, call us at 349-3816 or see us at 332 E. Main Street, Suite A.

P.S. Experts believe that harder workouts could be of benefit to the 16 million elderly and middle aged people in this country with osteoarthritis, the most common form of arthritis in which joint cartilage wears out.

Housing starts shoot upward

Michigan 1996 housing project starts were up 19.5 percent from 1995 year-to-date totals through the month of February, and February housing project starts were up 23.3 percent from January.

"1996 started out very well," commented Jerel Konwinski, president of the Michigan Association of Home Builders. "Our outlook for the year is optimistic, but we will be keeping our eye on lumber prices and the inventory of unsold homes. This is a great time to buy a new home for the consumer; mortgage rates are still low as are lumber prices."

Fixed-rate mortgages climbed a bit to 7.32 percent in February from 7.08 percent in January, which is still well below the rates of a year ago. Lumber prices for 1,000 board feet of framing lumber jumped to $350 in February from $322 in January.

The Michigan Association of Home Builders is composed of more than 10,500 member companies, thus providing service to over 400,000 people in the home building/construction industry. MAHB also represents 36 local home builder associations throughout the state.

Local clinic part of anxiety screening day

Nearly a quarter of all Americans will suffer from an anxiety disorder at some time in their lives. Sadly, only about 25 percent of those sufferers will seek treatment for their illnesses.

According to recent studies, anxiety disorders cost the U.S. $46.6 billion in 1995, nearly one-third of the nation's total mental health bill of $147 billion. These dollars were not spent on effective treatments, but were lost due to social and economic costs such as worker absenteeism, job loss and alcohol/substance abuse.

The hallmark symptoms of anxiety disorders include a sudden, uncontrollable attack of terror that can manifest itself with heart palpitations, dizziness, shortness of breath, and an out-of-control of extremely frightening feeling, excessive worry, a general feeling of irritability and restlessness, difficulty concentrating, repeated, intrusive and unwanted thoughts or ritualized behavior, or similar symptoms of anxiety.

Anxiety disorders, which include panic disorder and agoraphobia, obsessive-compulsive disorder, generalized anxiety disorder, social phobia, and post-traumatic stress disorder, are America's most common mental health illness.

On May 1 thousands of people across the country will participate in a free program which can help them or a loved one learn more about panic disorder and other anxiety disorders.

The program will include viewing a video, completing a screening questionnaire, and meeting with a mental health professional to review the questionnaire and receive information about anxiety disorders.

Locally, Psychotherapy and Counseling Services, P.C., will take part in National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day.

"Abnormal anxiety is a tremendously impairing problem shared by millions of Americans regardless of age or socioeconomic background. As incredible as it may sound, nearly a quarter of the American population will have an anxiety disorder at some point in their lifetime," said Stephen Paul Stocker, ACSW, co-founder of Psychotherapy and Counseling Services and director of its Center for Anxiety Disorders.

"This is an opportunity to bring hope and help to those who take advantage of this free screening day on May 1.

National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day is being sponsored by many national mental health organizations, including the American Psychiatric Association, American Psychological Association, Anxiety Disorders Association of America, National Institute of Mental Health, and the Obsessive Compulsive Foundation.

For additional information or to register, call Psychotherapy and Counseling Services at (810) 348-1100.

He's lived through four major wars, a global depression and revolutions that have shaken the very foundations of civilization.

He's seen the introduction of electricity, the shift from horse-drawn transportation to automobiles, the invention of the telegraph, telephone and the radio.

And on April 10, Allen Terrace resident Bill Klope took it all in stride when friends and well wishers gathered to celebrate the centenarian's 100th birthday.

"There were 105 people from all across the country," daughter Eleanor Williams of Northville said. "Some of his neighbors from 50 years ago in Detroit came out."

Williams organized the big birthday bash, receiving much needed assistance from the Northville Housing Commission and the Allen Terrace staff. The party was held in the activities room from 2-5 p.m. and is reportedly the largest single event ever held at the senior complex.

According to Williams, Klope is still going strong, though he underwent balloon angioplasty surgery at Harper Hospital Cardiac Center in March.

"He's the oldest person ever to undergo the surgery," Williams added.

According to the booklet "The Life and Times of Bill Klope," which Williams prepared for the birthday celebration, Klope was born in 1896 in Morgan County, Tenn.

He moved to Detroit in 1927, and was hired by General Motors Corp. in 1934.

He continued working for the automaker until 1965, serving as a maintenance welder at a Chevrolet Gear and Axle Plant.

He was married to Irwina Meyers for 55 years. His wife died in 1975.

Today, he boasts 10 grand children and 12 great grandchildren.

The secret to his longevity?

In an effort to promote art appreciation in the community the Center for Creative Studies, under the sponsorship of the Northville Arts Commission, is offering art instruction to interested children and adults. The classes will take place in the Scout building, 215 W. Cady, during the evening and on Saturdays beginning in the fall of 1996.

The Center for Creative Studies provides a unique, internationally prominent environment for education in the creative arts. Situated in the heart of Detroit's University Cultural Center with branch locations throughout the Metropolitan area, the Center provides excellent art instruction. This will be its first venture in the Northville community.

Classes can include drawing, graphic design, ceramics, glass, photography, fiber design, clay modeling and specially designed classes, depending on the interest shown.

The Center for Creative Studies has ongoing classes at the present time in areas other than Northville, for those wishing to join a group.

Those who would like this program available in Northville beginning in the fall are urged to call the Center at (313) 872-3118 and make their wishes known.

Author plans stop at Cooke

Pulitzer Prize-winning author Paul Zindel - The Pigman, Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds, etc. - will visit Cooke Middle School to address students and staff on Thursday, May 9.

Three assemblies will be held in the Cooke Media Center for Zindel's presentation: 9:10-9:56 a.m., 10:10-10:46 a.m., and at 1:09-1:56 p.m.

Juice and bagels are sold weekly and the money from the sales is deposited into the "author fund." It is well supported by staff and students as well as through donations from the PTSA.

Paul Zindel will be the fifth nationally-known author to visit Cooke Middle School, thanks to the "author fund" and PTSA. The visit is meant to promote reading and writing, and offer students and staff the opportunity to meet an established, award-winning author.

Utility issues caution about power lines

April showers bring May flowers, but they also have the potential to play havoc with Detroit Edison power lines and equipment.

With the spring storm season soon in full swing, Detroit Edison cautions its customers to remember the No. 1 safety rule: stay away from downed power lines and anything those wires may touch.

Fallen wires should be reported immediately to Detroit Edison by calling 1-800-477-4747 so crews can be dispatched to secure the area and remove the hazard.

Although it is impossible to control the weather, Detroit Edison recommends the following when electrical service is interrupted:

- Always be prepared for an emergency. A battery-operated radio, fresh replacement batteries, a flashlight and candles, a first-aid kit and food should be kept in a centralized location.
- If using portable generators, disconnect house circuits from Detroit Edison lines.

Pull or switch to "off" all main fuses or circuit breakers to protect line crews working to restore service.

- To avoid electrical overload when power is restored, disconnect appliances and turn off lights. Leave one light on, however, as an indicator when power returns.
- Keep refrigerator and freezer doors closed to avoid food spoilage.

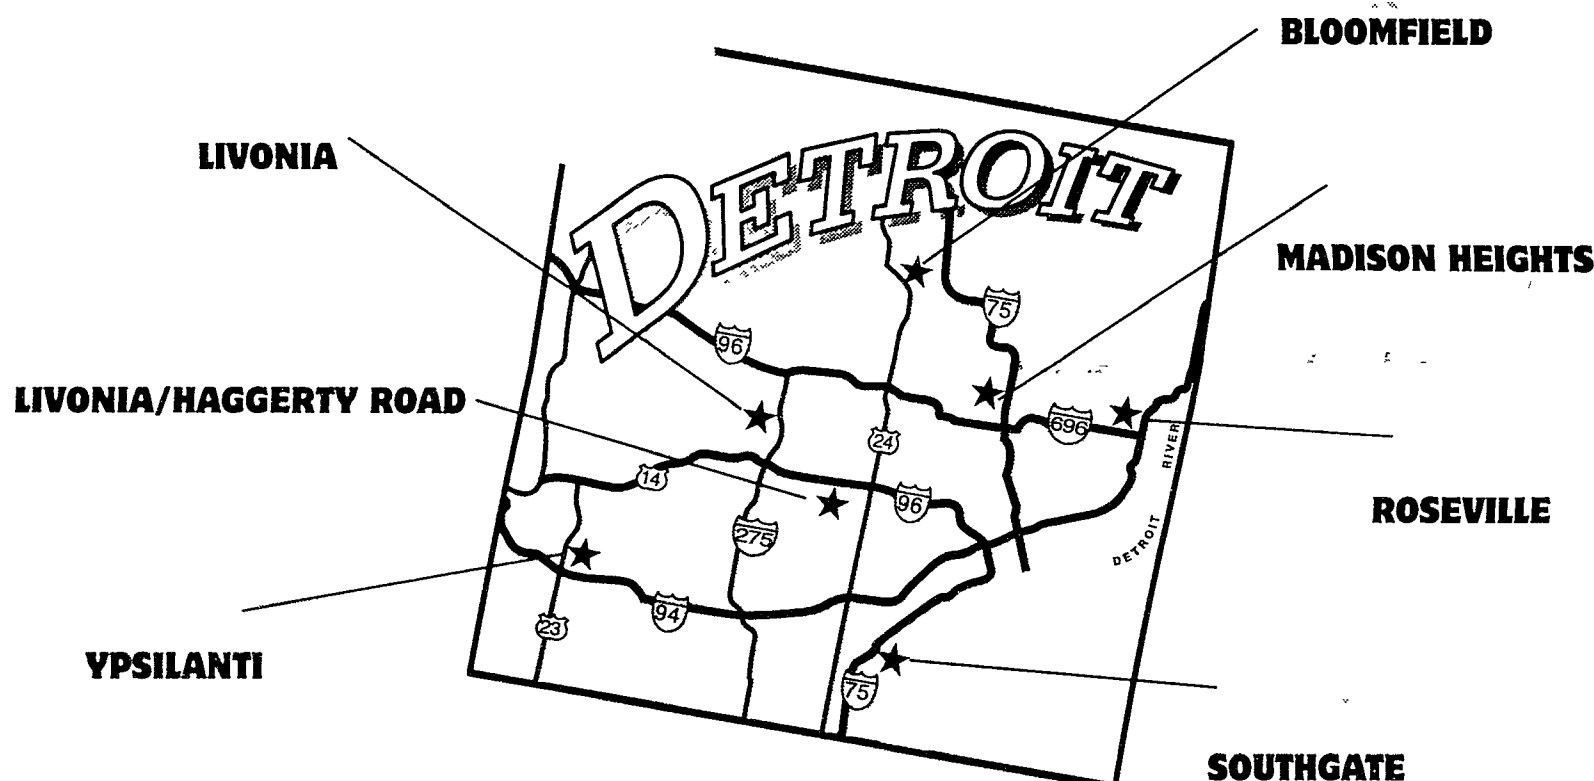

Refrigerated food will stay cold for at least 12 hours if the door is closed. A well-filled freezer, if kept shut, will preserve food for two to three days. Partially thawed food or food that has ice crystals can usually be refrozen.

- During low-voltage conditions — when lights are dim and television pictures are smaller — shut off motor-driven appliances such as refrigerators to prevent overheating and possible damage.
- Stay out of flooded or damp basements.

The water or moisture around furnaces or electrical appliances may serve as a conductor of electricity.

Utilities headquarters undergoes expansion

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

If you drive Beck Road during your daily commute, you've probably seen a bevy of busy bulldozers working away at the building next to Our Lady of Providence for the last few days.

That building is the headquarters of Northville Township's Public Utilities Department. The work you're seeing is the construction of an addition to the existing building and a new maintenance and storage garage being built in the back. The object of it all, Public Utilities Director Bill Anderson said, is to improve services for township residents.

"This is all really long overdue," Anderson said.

Space is hard to come by in the building now, Anderson explained. Its 3,850 square feet house all water and sewer employees, as well as equipment storage space. Some employees have desks in the garage.

The 5,000 square foot addition will provide office and conference space, Anderson said, and will project out in an L shape from the eastern side of the current building. An added plus, he said, is the fact that the six members of the township building department can now move out of Township Hall, located on Six Mile, and into the new facility.

That will in turn free up space in the overcrowded hall, Anderson said the addition should be ready by September.

Paved parking for employees and people coming in to make use of the public utilities building will be provided out front, along with landscaping. The old barbed wire fence running along Beck Road will be torn down.

Fencing along the back portion of the property will be kept to provide security for the new maintenance garage, which is expected to open in July. It measures 6,000 square feet and is meant to keep the department's expensive equipment away from the elements.

"Right now we've got a lot of equipment that's sitting outside and it's suffering from the effects of the weather," Anderson said. "This lets us get that inside and allows us to do maintenance indoors as well."

The township board of trustees approved the maintenance facility last month at a cost of about $260,000. It came in about 8 percent over budget, Anderson said, but all the bids submitted for the job reflected nearly the same price. The garage will be built by the Davenport Brothers Construction Co. of Belleville.

The building addition is being done by Bedzyk Brothers Inc., and came in at $305,000, well below the budgeted amount of $365,000.

Pool possibilities under discussion

probably won't be in the city. According to Sincoc's information, a minimum of five or six acres would be needed for a pool complex.

There's only one undeveloped parcel of that size left in the city of Northville, she said: a six acre parcel off Dubar Street, the going price for which is $2 million.

Northville Township, on the other hand, has plenty of undeveloped land and it goes for around $40,000 an acre, Sincoc noted.

Members of the commission asked the director to continue researching the pool idea, including keeping track of what the Northville Public Schools decide to do. The district is discussing a possible bond issue this fall to build a new high school, which would probably include a new pool and thus may mean public time at the existing pool in the future.

Some of the questions that the commission, Sincoc and the committee have been looking at include:

- Where would a public pool facility be located?
- Would it be a simple outdoor pool open only in the summer or a year-round indoor facility, perhaps with amenities like a gym or aerobics area? Should it even be something like a "family fun park," with water slides or wave pools?
- Should whatever might be built provide strictly recreational swimming or should it be designed to allow competitive swim leagues to use it as well?
- How does the community pay for its construction and annual operating costs? Some alternatives are a bond issue, general tax revenue, the selling of memberships or fund-raising.

Commission opts for cash, not courts

Controversy has erupted over it in the last few months, however, after soil problems were discovered that make much of the acreage undevelopable without expensive improvements.

Trustee Barbara O'Brien also serves on the Rec Commission and was one of two board members to vote against the HPUD. She has charged Grand/Sakwa with backsliding, saying they promised the moon in the beginning and handed the township the equivalent of green cheese at the end. That's something the Farmington Hills-based company disputes.

"I'm not sure we got a substantial benefit here," O'Brien said.

Several of her colleagues on the Rec Commission meeting said they shared that opinion, part of the reason why they urged the board to take Grand/Sakwa's money instead of relying on the company to build the courts.

Commissioners also said that the two courts, set off by themselves, wouldn't be used enough to offset the costs of installing parking there and constant maintenance and upkeep. A better community benefit will come from strictly cash, the commission felt, money that can be used for a variety of projects that will mean more to more people.

Grand/Sakwa officials last month said they wanted an answer by April 15 on whether the board wants the courts or money.

District seeks bids from construction firms

The district would pay for the bond application services, according to Bolitho, and then if a bond election were successful the construction manager would be paid from a percentage of the bond proceeds. Bolitho did not know what the bond application service cost would amount to.

Four prospective companies have been identified as possible candidates: the George W. Auch Co., in Pontiac; Barton Marlow, in Southfield; Etkin, in Farmington Hills; and Granger, in Lansing.

A selection committee has been formed, and administrators are working a tight timeline to hire a construction management firm. Should the district decide to hold a bond election, it would most likely take place in late August or early September.

Leaders serve up glowing assessment

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday afternoon, April 17, saw the community's leaders gather to discuss the state of the community.

The event is a yearly tradition that is sponsored by the Northville Community Chamber of Commerce.

Meadowbrook Country Club, located on Eight Mile Road, played host to more than 100 chamber members and guests who heard the past year's highlights as recounted by officials of the city, township, school district, district library and public recreation department.

In general, all five of the speakers painted a picture of a community that's accomplishing many great things and has a lot more in store for 1996. Achievements big and small were pointed out and the goals each body of government is taking aim at now were explained.

They included student and teacher awards and increased test scores.

A new park and library are on their way to town.

On tap are possible millages for school improvements and city roads as well as a potential renovation of city hall.

Northville Township will see its entire seven-member board up for election and will continue to tackle the tricky issue of developing the Wayne County land on the south side of town.

The five speakers at the state of the community function included:

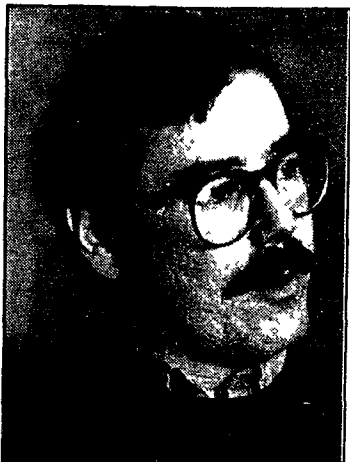

• Chris Johnson, mayor of the City of Northville.

• Karen Baja, supervisor of Northville Township.

• Leonard Rezmierski, superintendent of the Northville public school district.

• Pat Orr, director of the Northville District Library, which is governed by a seven-member board of trustees.

• Traci Sincok, director of the Northville Parks & Recreation Department, whose programs are jointly funded by the city and township.

The City of Northville is seeing a lot of change these days. Mayor Chris Johnson said, alterations that bring great potential for the community's future.

One of the biggest, and yet one of the slowest-moving, changes that's ongoing is the consideration being given by city officials, residents and business owners to the direction of the downtown.

"We used to do the usual DDA stuff, looking at solely brick and mortar issues," Johnson explained. "Now we're developing a more overall plan to keep downtown vital."

A highlight of that effort was last month's economic summit, a way for people to exchange ideas about how to achieve that important goal.

"The city feels that the image of the entire Northville community is involved in downtown," Johnson said.

City officials have also spent a lot of time in the preceding months adapting to changes in state racing laws that affect Northville Downs. Changes in how money is sent to city coffers, as well as the presence of simulcasting and its affect on public services, "have given us some surprises to deal with," Johnson noted.

Besides that, the city council is considering the idea of renovating city hall to allow for new space uses, Johnson said, at a potential cost of $1.4 million. A possible dedicated millage for road improvements could be in the wings as well.

In business news, R&D Enterprises - now in the old Ford plant - is up to full occupancy, Johnson noted. And the city is looking forward to welcoming the Giftfiddler and other businesses in the old Open Door Christian church.

Supervisor Karen Baja.

By RANDY COBLE

Northville Township's motto speaks of a community looking toward tomorrow without forgetting yesterday. That's always a tough thing to do, Supervisor Karen Baja said.

"We have all sorts of growth going on in the township," she said. "It's a constant challenge to meet the balance between the interests of old and new residents."

One of the biggest issues Northville Township will tackle both this year and in ones to come will be working on the development of the 900-acre Wayne County parcel that lies between Beck, Five Mile, Six Mile and Edward Hines Drive.

County officials last month presented their ideas for the site, ideas that aren't sitting square with the township board of trustees.

"This will be one of the biggest changes to our community in recent years and we have a long way to go," Baja said.

On the other end of the spectrum, another huge township development stands on the verge of a groundbreaking. Township officials gave their approval for the Ward Church property last month.

Among the other achievements of the past year: the board's move to increase the township fund balance and a new supermarket being built, along with a new adult living community now under construction. New police officers were hired, while others were promoted.

The seats of all seven members of the board are up for election this year, a fact that led the supervisor to put out a call for candidates.

"I encourage people to run. It's too bad if apathy keeps people from having a choice," Baja said.

Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski.

By RANDY COBLE

"Our people make Northville Public Schools the excellent school system that it is."

Teachers, administrators, students and parents are at the root of the school district's past achievements, Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski said and they're the reason why the future looks bright as well.

It's been a year of honors and awards across the board for the schools, Rezmierski said. This year could see, among other things, a $60 million bond issue request being put to voters this summer or fall.

Among the district's high points over the last 12 months, according to Rezmierski:

• Northville students won acclaim for all kinds of achievements in scholastics, athletics and student activities as well as excelling in community organizations like the Boy Scouts.

• General student academic performance continues to be strong and growing stronger, as measured by MEAP and ACT testing. Northville students perform particularly well when compared with their peers across the state and the nation.

• District teachers were honored with awards, grants and certifications of many kinds.

On the horizon looms several challenges, the superintendent said, among them seeking national accreditation for Northville schools and continuing to deal with funding changes instituted by Proposal A and constant population growth.

The district has spent the last several months considering a possible bond issue request to pay for technology improvements, a new high school and renovation of several current facilities.

Library Director Pat Orr.

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

After more than a hundred years of waiting, 1996 will see Northville's library have a home of its own.

That historic achievement stands at the summit of a series of attainments being chalked up by the Northville District Library these days. It's a pattern that's expected to continue, Director Pat Orr said.

"Every aspect of library operations is up from two years ago," she told the audience. "We are just growing and growing."

That includes everything from general borrowing to more specialized programs for kids like the popular preschool storytime and a new "tots" story time, Orr said.

Northville's population increase, bringing with it a concurrent demand for services, sparked the effort to get a new library built. The 26,000 square foot facility will stand just behind City Hall and when it opens this fall will become the first building designed specifically for the library since it was created more than a century ago.

The new library will take its place as part of downtown, Orr said, becoming an anchor that will help keep Northville's old-fashioned charm firmly in place.

Public Internet access from the library and access for home computer users highlight plans for the future.

Computers will even allow elementary school children to write and publish their own books, Orr explained.

Library officials also plan a "thorough review" of their holdings to get rid of outdated information and add more current selections, all with an aim to keep the library's circulation up to speed with its new home.

Recreation Director Traci Sincok.

By RANDY COBLE
Staff Writer

The past 12 months have been a year of dreams come true for the Northville Parks & Recreation Department. The next 12 will see the continued reality of increased demand for services, Rec Director Traci Sincok predicted.

"Given Northville's growth, the future is an open book for us," Sincok said. "The participation in our programs is just going up and up and up."

Last spring saw "the fulfillment of a 9-year dream" when the new community park opened on Beck Road, Sincok said. The year gone by also saw the renovation of Fish Hatchery Park on Seven Mile.

Gone are the broken-down tennis courts of the past. They've been replaced by a set of sleek new ones, courtesy of a state grant and funds from the city, township and Friends of Northville Parks and Recreation. In addition, Sincok noted that a new children's play structure has been put on the park's grounds.

1996 will see the Rec Department tackle a number of projects including:

- Completing the acquisition of land off Griswold Avenue behind the old Ford plant for reuse.
- Working on bringing a first class playscape to Ford Field.
- Revamping the community recreation master plan.
- Exploring the construction of a public pool complex.

"We're seeing a constant growth in participation," Sincok said. "For example, we had 600 kids sign up for soccer three years ago. This year it's well over 1,000. We'll have to work closely with all segments of the community to maintain and improve recreation. It's a big part of our quality of life."

The Northville Record

Note: What follows are profiles of two of the candidates running for the vacant state Senate seat for merly held by David Honigman, who resigned recently due to poor health. A special election will be held to fill the seat in the state 15th Senate District, which includes the Oakland County portion of the city of Northville.

The election, a primary contest, is slated to take place May 13.

Both Dobb and Sever are Republicans.

Barbara Dobb stresses practicality

By TAYLOR LINCOLN
Staff Writer

As one of only a few certified public accountants in the legislature, Barbara Dobb sees herself as a voice of pragmatism in the often theoretical debates about proposed tax legislation.

She remembers the role she played along with fellow accountant Susan Grimes Munsell, R-Howell, in the bipartisan school reform committee that eventually churned out Proposal A.

"We were the two with the calculators on the team," she said. "We were out there with our calculators and said, 'This is how it will affect an individual's tax return.'"

The same pragmatic sense shows through in her efforts to reach out to her constituency. For instance, she has developed a "Senior Horizons Network" to inform senior citizens about what's available to them.

"All of those programs that are designed to help people are no good when the seniors don't know about them," she said.

The response from the seniors has let her know that they appreciate the program. More than 8,600 have signed up to receive the information that Dobb's office distributes. The information is geared toward informing senior citizens of what issues are at hand and what services and publications are available to them.

Dobb has also frequently spoken at the schools and libraries in her district and is frequently found at the podium of local chamber organizations.

On the legislative frontier Dobb has focused on tax bills, acting as an advocate both for businesses and senior citizens.

In her efforts for business she was part of the effort to increase the tax threshold for businesses up to $250,000. In most cases, businesses who bring in less than $250,000 in receipts for a given year no longer need to file a tax return. Likewise, she helped push to make it easier for small businesses to qualify for an alternate tax that offers lower rates.

On behalf of senior citizens, she takes credit for initiatives passed near the end of 1995 that will eventually offer senior citizens an annual tax deduction of up to $7,000 on earnings from interest and capital gains.

As a lifelong resident of the area, Dobb resides on Union Lake in Commerce Township. She cites golfing and traveling as primary interests. She also has close relationships with her six nieces (ages 8 to 18) as well as her siblings and parents.

The close family ties have helped her as she has graduated from her tenure on the Lakes Area Chamber of Commerce and Commerce Township Planning Commission to the public campaigns that accompany the pursuit of a legislative

Her parents, who still live in the Commerce Township house in which she grew up, take an active role in her campaigns along with her three sisters and two brothers.

"I have wonderful volunteers working for me," she says, stressing the "from the ground up" and "grass roots" campaign methods that she has used since her first campaign.

"I'm out there knocking on doors every day," she said. "I wouldn't ask my volunteers to do anything I wouldn't do."

It worked the first time around. As one of eight Republicans vying for then-Rep. David Honigman's open House seat in 1990, she won the primary by one vote.

Terry Sever vows to overcome odds

By MARGARET WOLFGANG
Staff Writer

Terry Sever says his candidacy for the 15th Senate race is a shot at beating the system.

And rather than spend money for polling to tell him what voters think, Sever, 45, is pounding the pavement. He's delivering his message, one house at a time, in person.

"I believe every campaign ought to be won or lost by personal contact with the voters," he said. "If I get elected, I'll be beholden to the voters, not money, and not special interests."

Sever prides himself on taking a hands-on approach to all aspects of his life.

Married for 24 years to Linda, they own and operate TL Printing Co. in Farmington. Residents of Farmington Hills for 30 years, they have three children, Jennifer, 19; Melissa, 18; and Aaron, 15.

Sever's involvement in community goes back to his days as a very young man.

"One of the most important goals I had for myself as a young man was to have a family. And now I want to make a difference with my life for other people and I know I can," Sever said. "I feel like my background in local politics give me something to work from."

Sever's roster of activities both political and community is extensive. It includes his current term as a Farmington Hills councilman; in 1995 and 1988 he served as mayor pro tem; and was mayor in 1989. He was first elected to council in 1985.

In 1986, he was recognized as one of the 10 Outstanding young people in Michigan for his involvement with the Michigan Jaycees. He also served as vice president of the U.S. Jaycees in 1983; having served as president of the Michigan Jaycees in 1982.

He was president of the Farmington Republican Club in 1985, and was chosen as Citizen of the Year by the Farmington Chamber of Commerce in 1978.

Also in 1978, Sever was chairman of the Founders Festival and president of the Farmington Jaycees.

Regardless of how busy his political and business lives are, Sever says he always makes time for what's really important — his family.

with my family. I'm at home by 5:05 so we can all sit down together," Sever said.

He maintains that if his career were to include the duties of state senator, the family life he and his wife worked hard to build won't suffer.

"I won't compromise my family or the principles I believe in. My wife is very supportive of me and she makes it possible for me to pursue these other interests."

Sever said the accelerated time schedule imposed because of the special election May 13 puts a crimp on his chances as a newcomer to the state political arena.

"I'm convinced if I had three months to campaign, I'd win this election."

Local V.F.W. honors ace cops, firefighters

Public safety awards handed out at ceremony

By LEE SNIDER
Editor

They are entrusted with no less an assignment than maintaining the public safety, and once a year the Northville V.F.W. organization thinks they deserve a pat on the back.

Five outstanding members of the law enforcement and firefighter communities were honored Sunday at the annual Public Safety Appreciation Dinner sponsored by the Northville Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4012, 113 S. Center.

It was the 13th annual ceremony honoring police and fire personnel who demonstrate exemplary service with their respective departments.

As in past years, one officer and fire firefighter were honored from both the city and the township, along with one trooper from the Northville State Police Post on Seven Mile.

The honorees for 1996 were:

- Sue Hatch, Senior Clerk Dispatcher, City of Northville Police Department.

Hatch has been with the department for over 17 years, directing the city's response vehicles to emergency sites. She has a criminal justice degree from Schoolcraft College and supervises and trains the city's dispatch crew.

"Sue is always composed under pressure," Police Chief Rodney Cannon said. "She's a fountain of information. If someone isn't sure of the location they're calling from, she'll ask them to describe it and she'll put you right on the money. She knows the city very well."

- Officer Chuck Cole, Northville Township Police Department.

Cole, a U.S. Navy veteran, has been a member of the township police department since 1987. He has a criminal justice degree from Madonna University and serves as a field training officer for new members of the department.

He also participates in the township's new motorcycle patrol.

"Officer Cole received an award from MADD for his enforcement of OUIL (operating under the influence of liquor) laws," Public Safety Director Chip Snider said. "He was the department's No. 1 producer in 1995 in the initiation of arrests."

- Trooper John Jackson, State Police.

Trooper Jackson has served with the Michigan State Police for almost 25 years. According to Lieutenant Dan Bateman, Jackson assisted in the rescue of a drowning man last year, receiving credit for helping to save the man's life.

"John's attendance is exemplary and he consistently exhibits a positive attitude," Lt. Bateman added. "He maintains excellent physical fitness, and his dedication to the public and his high work ethic speak well of him."

Jackson is also involved in the International Orthodox Christian Charity Relief, assisting orphaned children of the former Yugoslavia.

- Jon Meck, Northville Township Fire Department.

Originally from Woodhaven, Meck is a fairly new arrival, serving with the township fire department for about a year and a half.

Meck has extensive training and is certified in Firefighter I and II, and in emergency medical technician skills.

In addition, he serves with the Wayne County Hazmat team, the unit that handles emergency hazardous materials releases.

Meck is currently employed as a

- Hugh H. Jordan II, City of Northville Fire Department.

Jordan comes by his interest in firefighting naturally. His grandfather, Lou Westfall, spent 30 years with the city department before retiring a few years ago, and his uncle, Tom Westfall, currently serves as Assistant Fire Chief.

Another uncle, Brad, was city firefighter of the year in 1994, and Jordan's brother also has taken up the profession.

Jordan is superbly qualified, earning certification in Firefighter I and II and EMT training.

"He's a very dedicated firefighter and EMT for our department," city Fire Chief Jim Allen said.

Jordan is engaged to be married to Traci Mihalik this fall. He has been with the department six years.

Post 4012 Commander Bernie Burkacki served as master of ceremony for the event, which was attended by about 150 people.

Each honoree received a plaque and had his or her name inscribed on the perpetual plaques that are on display inside the headquarters of the individual departments.

OCC trustee hopefuls duke it out at forum

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

One candidate for trustee sent ripples of surprise through the Oakland Community College Faculty Association by saying he would "decline" the union's endorsement.

Most others, including the challenged incumbent, said faculty interests were close to college interests and welcomed union support.

Six of the nine candidates for two seats in the June 10 election showed up April 19 for a dinner-hour meeting with a few dozen of the college community on OCC's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills.

Charles Neumann, the math instructor who heads OCCFA, said later the union is divided on whether to make endorsements this year. In 1994 OCCFA, an affiliate of the Michigan Education Association, and other unions teamed up to support two winning candidates for the OCC board of trustees. OCCFA and the college currently are negotiating on a new contract. Among OCCFA's questions:

"Why should OCCFA endorse you?" candidates were asked.

John Wangler, retired OCC instructor and administrator from Beverly Hills, said, "I'm opposed to in-house union support. It sends the wrong message. I would decline an endorsement," said Wangler, describing himself as a "life-long union member" who served on OCCFA's council and bargaining team prior to his retirement in 1992.

Wangler and publishing executive Jeanne Towar, who didn't attend, are part of a bipartisan slate working to unseat incumbent trustee Sandra Ritter.

James A. Doyon, a former Democratic Oakland County commissioner, said he had run for that post with endorsements from both labor and the chamber of commerce, but added, "If you want to pull my string, I'm not your candidate. I'm an objective decision-maker. I'll listen to you, whether or not you endorse me. I don't believe authoritarian management is good," said Doyon, now a teacher at U-D High, a Jesuit-run school. Early in his career, he said he was a member of UAW Local 227 and AFSCME, the municipal employees union.

Lawrence Kohl, who lives in Farmington Hills and practices law in Royal Oak, said OCC interests "are in line with those of the faculty - providing education to those who attend. I will advocate the institution as best I can," said Kohl, adding he has represented many United Auto Workers members and has "a particular affinity for the UAW."

"I'll take your endorsement," said Ritter, a Waterford public school teacher and three-term incumbent on the OCC board. "I would like everyone to recognize we have the same interest - the students." Ritter promised to listen to the faculty and respond but added it's "not always the way you like." Ritter told of attending union meetings in her girlhood with an aunt and "willingly signing up" with the American Federation of Teachers and MEA.

Dr. Thomas Sullivan, a dentist from Rochester Hills with a practice in Bloomfield Hills, said, "I hope your endorsement would be based on what I can give to OCC," adding he was a union member seven years before becoming a dentist.

Margaret Walker II, a Royal Oak attorney and former part-time faculty member, said she had "direct hands-on experience as faculty" with OCCFA and was a member of the American Association of University Professors at Wayne State University. Walker told of associations with the late Kenneth Cock-

"I'm opposed to in-house union support. It sends the wrong message. I would decline an endorsement."

rel in auto-related unions in the 1960s and '70s.

No-shows, beside Towar, a publishing executive, were Ellen Ferguson, a Pontiac junior high teacher who lives in Bloomfield Hills, and Jan Mack, a former student from Waterford making her second bid for the OCC board.

Would you vote to reinstate Patsy Calkins as chancellor?

The OCC board, led by Ritter, fired Dr. Calkins last fall, causing a major political upheaval across the county, leading to a failed effort to recall five board members and resulting in the current effort to unseat Ritter.

Doyon: "I'm not here to fire or hire. If I fire someone, the person will know all the reasons. I have no problems with the Open Meetings Act."

Kohl: "I'm not privy to all the information on what happened to her. I can't say in good conscience."

Ritter: "I would not vote to reinstate. My reasons: She did not keep the board informed. She had no plan for the millage (the property tax hike approved last June 12 by voters). The budget was in disarray. She circumvented board policy ..."

Ritter accused Calkins of carrying the fight to the news media, soiling OCC's reputation.

Sullivan: "I couldn't make a decision. It (firing) portrayed a negative image (of OCC)."

Walker: "I would not. We have a chancellor (Richard Thompson, who took office March 19). We have a big job in the next five or six years. We can't revisit history."

Wangler: "Patsy who?" He explained the matter was settled and "I don't think she would accept it."

Wangler remains a strong admirer of Calkins, later calling her the best of five chancellors he has served with.

Mill Race Matters

All area residents interested in assisting this year as docents at Mill Race Village are reminded that the spring potluck luncheon is scheduled for Saturday, May 11, at Cady Inn, Mill Race Village at noon. This will be the opportunity to select dates you plan to work during the season, to socialize with fellow docents, and to refresh memories of what the job entails.

New participants are welcome. Training can be provided. Each docent usually works three or four Sundays during the May-to-October schedule. The hours of operation are 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Marietta Rathbun and Elaine Elliott will be chairing the docent committee this year.

Northville Historical Society members are invited to attend the District Historical Society meeting on May 2 at Milford Village and Township Hall between 6:30 and 7 p.m. The group will tour historic Oak Grove Cemetery then return to the village hall for refreshments.

Greenmead will host its 40th anniversary annual banquet on Thursday, May 23 at 6 p.m. in its Newburgh Methodist Church. In addition to dinner the program will feature Dr. Weldon Petz and a slide presentation on "Big Bands of the '40s."

Also coming in June at Greenmead are an antique show on June 2, an arts and crafts festival June 8 and 9, and the Livonia Garden Walk on June 29. Greenmead is located at 20501 Newburgh Road in Livonia.

This week's column concludes highlights taken from the diary excerpts included in Justin Kestenbaum's "The Making of Michigan." From the diary of John Gordon:

"Saturday - Oct 8 (1836). Prays, an Inn, six miles (from Plymouth). We arose at 5 and have stopt here to breakfast. I slept last night in an open garret under a crack and awoke with a stiff neck. Cloudy. We have had bad roads again and passed through a region heavily timbered, with frequent clearings on the road.

"Oaks of the circumference 9 to 15 feet abound in the forests. Such are their dimensions generally to Detroit. I remarked this morning some of the largest Black Walnut I have ever seen.

"The soil appears to be very fertile and a little more clayey from its proximity to a water course. Having stopt at a farm house to procure a glass of new milk (the water is all Limestone and creates a thirst) I was informed by the owner that he had bought the 80 acres on which he lives two years since at $15 per acre. It has few improvements but has been cultivated some 15 years and seems to be very rich.

"Marl abounds through the county and state generally of so pure a quality that it is used for lime. We have seen very little stone yet. The surface of the earth is becoming more rolling.

"This Inn is full of Emigrants and their children are crouding around me while I write with the rabid curiosity of genuine Yankees. The men are prying into my saddle bags and the pockets of my Mackinaw.

"This is a substantial two-story brick house, a rare thing in the interior, as the soil contains lime which when burnt slacks and destroys the Brick. Hence, being without stone likewise, the architecture of Michigan must in great degree be confined to wooden materials.

"The landlord tells me he entertains about 50 emigrants a day and lodges about 30. Taverns occur at short intervals and there is another main route west parallel (sic) and a few miles south of this, on which the travel is reported to be greater. These data will enable us to form some idea of the mount of Emigration pouring into this part of the state. Beside which there are other streams setting up to Grand River and Sagana.

"When the obstacle of impassable roads (at certain seasons) is overcome by rail roads and canals, what an inundation of population will sweep over the state? A National Territorial Road is under construction from Detroit to the mouth of the Grand River, commenced by the General (federal) government."

Those who have read the past few installments from Gordon's diary will know that he probably traveled along North Territorial. The brick Inn of which he writes would then have been six miles west of today's Plymouth on that road.

Presumably the road to the south he refers to would have followed near today's Michigan Avenue route, but the farm cultivated 15 years prior to 1836 would be a quite a difficult find for area historians.

-Diane M. Rockall

... at Northville's past
by Randy Coble

I've said it before and I'll say it yet again: some of the history to be found in this town is absolutely, utterly fascinating.

Saturday was a great day, and not just because the sun shone for most of it or for the fact that Randy got to wear shorts to work for the first time in 1996. Nope, I had just a bang-up time because I took a walking tour of Northville put on by Bruce Turnbull, one of our eminent local historians.

Bruce and one of Northville's four Questers chapters were nice enough to let me tag along on a foot-powered trip down the town's memory lane and it proved to be a heck of a time. My thanks to both and kudos, by the way, to the Questers, who are celebrating their 25th year as an organized bunch of fun-seeking folks.

This is one of those weeks where I could write a column three times the size I'm allotted. What I note this week and next doesn't quite do justice to the tour, so I recommend catching it in person sometime. I'll keep my ear to the ground for the next date and let y'all know when it's coming.

• Let's begin with my personal favorite — the time when John Dillinger came to town.

Yessiree, the gangster labeled as "Public Enemy Number One" by the FBI paid us a visit back in 1932. As Bruce tells it, Dillinger came to Detroit from Chicago "to handle a little business with some people here."

That "business" must have been something, because of John needed a heck of a lot of guns and ammo to get it done. He cut a hole in the back door of Ware's Hardware on Main Street (where Baby Baby is now) and cleaned the store out of all its firearms and ammunition.

That theft bankrupted the business, since Mr. Ware was selling it all on consignment. When he went under, he suggested to Bruce's dad to buy the shop and move Northville Electric into it.

• Here's another great one that's absolutely true. Ever wonder why a section of Northville is called Cabbagetown? It's because Mrs. Rayson opened the wrong door at the wrong time.

Mrs. Rayson died in 1909, struck by a large falling icicle. According to reports, she opened a porch door, causing the icicle to shake loose and come down. She called her garden a "cabbage patch" and once the story of her unusual demise circulated, people around town called her the "cabbage lady" and eventually nicknamed the area where she lived "Cabbagetown."

• Here's one I love. The current offices of The Northville Record used to be a hardware store with an interesting sideline business. The store was at street level and upstairs was a target range where hunters could peer through the sights of their rifles.

For those of you who don't know, my office is on the second floor and so I had to chuckle when I heard that. It wasn't so funny to a woman who worked in a business next to the range, however, when she came in and found bullet holes in the wall above her desk, so they closed it down.

• Remember when telephone exchanges were all run by hand and operators talked to you on the line, found out who you wanted to call and then plugged in the wires to make the connection? If you're like me and too young to recall that, do you remember seeing something like it on Green Acres?

Northville's phone exchange used to be located above modern-day Orin Jewelers at Main and Center. In it was a woman who proved to be the town's own wholesale information broker, a switchboard operator who knew everything that was going on and passed it along with a smile.

Her name was Mrs. Watts, and if you wanted to know the latest tidbits of news or gossip you just had to pick up the phone and ask. You could learn everything from which girl was "in trouble" (that's an old fashioned way of saying "pregnant") to the score of the high school basketball game just as the final whistle blew.

On deck for next week are such items as the stories behind the disappearance of the Crow's Nest and the building of the old Methodist clock, Henry Ford's attempts to save a piece of Northville history and world firsts that came right from here.

Randy Coble is always interested in your Northville memories. Call him anytime at 349-1700

Assessor recalls tragedy that claimed Novi city councilman

By JAN JEFFRES
Staff Writer

It was a nightmare scene Jim Klausmeyer will not soon forget.

On May 8, 1995, the Novi city assessor was waiting at a Grand River Avenue business to meet Novi City Council Member Tim Pope on an errand concerning the charitable Christmas In April program, when he saw a Ford Escort turn left in front of a truck. The car was smashed, the driver severely injured.

"I didn't realize it was Tim," Klausmeyer said last week.

"I had a difficult time with that." Pope remained in a coma until his death in October.

Now, Klausmeyer and Oakland County Assistant Treasurer Pat Dohany have succeeded in putting together a fitting tribute for Pope.

This week, with a major blitz on Saturday, they will fix up a Novi residence as a Christmas In April memorial home which will honor the former council member. Each year, a sign will go up at a memorial home listing the names of deceased volunteers. In addition, the organization's past president's plaque will now be known as the Tim Pope Memorial.

"Jim has earned the torch and is pulling together another successful project," City Manager Ed Kriewall noted in a memo to the Novi City Council.

Klausmeyer said the young council member had drawn him into the national program, which gathers together volunteers of labor, money and supplies to refurbish residences of the economically disadvantaged.

Days before the accident, both Klausmeyer and Pope had been busy fixing up inside and outside of a lakes area home owned by an elderly widow. Pope said afterwards his muscles were aching from all the hard labor.

Christmas In April expects nationwide to fix up 4,300 houses and non-profit facilities, with the help of 135,000 volunteers who will produce the equivalent of $26 million worth of work. In Oakland County, 23 residences will be made over.

Novi volunteers will tackle the home of Ethel Turner, a senior citizen who lives on North Haven in the lakes area with her adult mentally challenged son.

There's been an outpouring of the community in support of the project. Among the donors, Tri-Mount Construction is giving a furniture, windows and other materials for the house.

"We're going to put in a new front porch for the home and just a number of other things. Tri-Mount has done an awful lot," Klausmeyer said.

The roof will be repaired, the bathroom insulated, the home's exterior will be power-washed. Other donors include JCK & Associates and the Optimist Club of Novi.

"We're just going to make her life a little nicer," Klausmeyer added.

Anyone interesting in donating to the cause can contact Klausmeyer at the Novi City Assessor's office, 347-0485.

Out of the corporate heat, into the cooker

NORTHVILLE BUSINESS SCENE

He isn't touting it as the place to get the grill of your dreams, but the owner of the Sunny Day Barbecue is convinced he's got a winner in his new Northville business.

"We sell two lines of stainless steel grills, residential and commercial," owner John Cullen said. "We offer quantity discounts and we also have accessories."

Cullen's career took a new direction recently when he was downsized out of a job as a field engineer with IBM. His wife was also let go from the business machine giant but was able to land a new position in the same field.

Cullen, however, decided to make a clean break from the corporate world and open his own business. After picking up his severance check one day, the Canton resident went scouting locations and found one at 543 Seven Mile, next to the Good Time Party Store in Northville.

"I saw the vacant store and figured this would be a good place to set up the business," he said. "I've got a lot invested in it."

Cullen's showroom boasts 13 different barbecues and grills, inventory he gets from Rainbow Iron Works and Dynamic Cooling Systems of Los Alamitos, Calif.

Cullen's son helps out around the store and delivers merchandise to customers.

The hours of Sunny Day Barbecue are 10 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday; 9 a.m.-7 p.m. the other five days of the week. The telephone number is (810) 449-8062.

It's just as divine as ever, but there's been a change of ownership at Heavenly Gourmet, 43053 Seven Mile in the Highland Lakes Shopping Center in Northville Township.

The gourmet delicatessen and restaurant is now in the capable hands of Andrew Kile, who comes to the community from Ann Arbor where he was a chef at the Movable Feast restaurant.

"My wife (Sandra Hoffmann) and I have a lot of favorite things we think will appeal to people," Kile said. "We've added some new breads and other products and we're making our own jams."

When owned by restaurateur Rich Willerer, the place was known as Heavenly Bakery and Gourmet Shop. Kile altered the name slightly to reflect a somewhat changed emphasis.

The restaurant will still offer soups, salads, baked goods and continental breakfast, as well as lunch and dinner, but plans to expand its shelf offerings, concentrating on Michigan-made products.

Kile is continuing his involvement with Mama Mucci's pasta, a Plymouth-based company with which he has been associated for seven years, and will sell Majszak Maple Syrup and Green Mountain Gringo salsa.

In addition to working at the "white table" Movable Feast, Kile has also cooked for Cass Avenue Cafe in Utica, Golden Mushrooms, and LaBecasse, a French Country Inn in Northern Michigan.

The hours of Heavenly Gourmet are 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Friday and 7:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday. The telephone number (new) is (810) 349-3566.

Willerer sold Heavenly Gourmet to become the head of a new enterprise, The Raven, which will open inside the Northville Academy of Music and Arts in June.

The academy itself is expected to open April 29 at Center and Dunlap, in the building that used to house the Open Door Christian Church.

Heavenly Gourmet isn't the only Highland Lakes business with new faces. Canterbury Cleaners in the same shopping center is also being headed up by a new owner, Todd Kerrigan.

Kerrigan, whose family runs two other dry cleaners in the Belleville area, bought the business from former owner Paul Foster in late March.

He said customers will notice little change from the ownership shift.

"I'm going to keep the name and just take it from there," Kerrigan explained, adding that he learned of the Highland Lakes vacancy through his contacts in the industry.

Kerrigan said Canterbury Cleaners will continue offering dry cleaning and laundering.

The hours of operation are 7 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday. The number is (810) 349-5440.

Send business-related announcements and releases by 4 p.m. Monday to Northville Business Scene, fax No. 349-1050, or drop off releases at The Northville Record, 104 W. Main, Northville.

Hospice legislation gaining approval in state Legislature

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

State legislators are moving on three fronts to help the chronically and terminally ill and provide fewer customers for Dr. Jack Kevorkian. So far, the bills are winning overwhelming approval.

The first will license hospices so they can care for the terminally ill in places other than the patient's home. The House has passed the bills sponsored by Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth.

Law represents Northville Township and Wayne County Northville in the state House.

The second is the "dignified death act" - changing emergency procedures to honor dying persons' do-not-resuscitate wishes. The bills are nearly ready for Gov. John Engler's signature.

The third measure is pain management, a more complicated set of bills that Rep. John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township, hopes to see adopted by summer.

"Before we start debate on Kevorkian and assisted suicide, we need to get these out," said Jamian, chair of the House Health Policy Committee. "People are going to Kevorkian because they couldn't get pain relief. For those who specialize in the terminally ill, these make it easier for them to manage pain instead of going to Kevorkian."

He spoke on the House floor April 17 even as Kevorkian, a retired pathologist from West Bloomfield, was on trial in Oakland Circuit Court for assisting in the deaths of two terminally ill persons.

HOSPICE LICENSES

The House approved, 100-0, two bills by Law to set up a licensing system for residential hospices.

"Right now, hospices are licensed only for home care or as a supplement to home care," Law said. "But a lot of people don't have anyone who can help care for them at home."

"Only a hospital or nursing home can give residential care. The nursing home law is written for people who might get well. This creates a new license for residential hospice. You can't just open up a hospice home."

House Bill 5491 sets up a separate licensing procedure. House bill 5490 excludes a medicare-certified hospice from the definition of a nursing home.

Law worked with officials of Angela Hospice, operated by the Felician Sisters in Livonia. "Angela had to get a license under the nursing home statute," he said. Raj Weiner, who headed the Public Health Department in the administration of Gov. James Blanchard, helped write the act, he added.

The bills make it unnecessary for applicants to go through the "certificate of need" process before getting a license. "It's time for this industry to have its own license," Law said.

DIGNIFIED DEATH

The House last week moved to third reading (ready for a final vote) three bills amending the emergency medical procedures to honor patients' do-not-resuscitate wishes.

"EMS (emergency medical service) and police have state mandates," said Jamian. "On a regular basis, EMS technicians are dispatched to a scene where a terminally ill patient has died. In a hospital setting, the available staff would be in a position to know that emergency CPR (resuscitation) should not be administered. EMS technicians don't have that advantage."

Senate Bills 712-715 would allow patients and their physicians to execute a legal document (do-not-resuscitate order) instructing EMS technicians to withhold CPR in a non-hospital setting.

PAIN MANAGEMENT

"We need better procedures for doctors to treat the terminally ill," said Jamian, who expects to have his bills ready in three or four weeks.

"Physicians and health care workers need to feel free to provide necessary amounts of pain medications without fear of being accused of assisting in suicide or euthanasia. The bill will provide a carefully-crafted legal immunity for that purpose."

"Other laws regarding access to, and prescribing controlled substances also hinder the appropriate use of pain medications. This bill will address those obstacles."

"Finally, education of health professionals and the general public is an ongoing need. The legislation will set up a pain commission which will focus on spreading the word about the quality pain management options available," Jamian said.

Our Opinion

Community outlook continues to be upbeat

We heard another rosy prognosis of the state of the community at the annual Chamber of Commerce luncheon last week.

One expects little more than a superficial account of the condition of the city, township and school district at those annual sizing up sessions and there is, in fact, little opportunity for the leaders of the five major entities to give anything more than just a brief outline of what's happening.

In truth, though, the glossy outlook put forth by Mayor Chris Johnson, Supervisor Karen Baja, Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski, Library Director Pat Orr and Recreation Department Director Traci Sincok is an accurate one. On the cusp of a new decade and a new century, there is much to be optimistic about.

City officials are preparing to lower the millage rate slightly and the new race-track funding formula, though in its early stages, is delivering consistent revenues to the city.

The township's fund balance continues to be healthy and progress is finally being made to bring municipal facilities up to speed.

The new library building is taking shape nicely and is on pace to open on time later this year.

The community's recreational offerings have probably never been so complete, with the new Beck Road Park and the freshly renovated Fish Hatchery Park providing fine venues for outdoor activities.

Only the school district remains in a state of flux at this time, facing an uncertain future with inadequate facilities to meet increased demands.

We are disappointed that no concrete recommendation appears imminent from the just completed communitywide dialog sessions focusing on the future direction of the schools, but we agree with assessments suggesting that something has to be done to accommodate the growing population of the district. The extent and the cost of the expansion remain very much open to question, but the need for additional space is not.

It's true that the community might be benefiting from the overall healthy economic conditions of the state and the country but the bottom line remains bright just the same.

Take smart approach to television viewing

Welcome to "TV Turn-Off Week."

Parents across the country are being encouraged to "pull the plug on the tube" for a week in order to enrich the lives of their children.

While it is the responsibility of parents to place restrictions on their kids and efforts such as TV Turn-Off Week are well intentioned, unplugging the set for a week is merely a short fix. Realistically, in this world of working families and single-parent homes children can't be constantly monitored.

A suggested long-term solution? Teach kids media literacy.

What is media literacy?

It is the ability to understand, evaluate and analyze the information received from a communication medium such as TV, by using critical viewing skills and understanding the motivations and techniques of those who run that medium. In other words, a person needs to take control of what he or she watches, sees and hears.

In the case of television, it means being an active viewer and deciding what to be influenced by. Turning off the television may help us avoid watching "bad" programs, but it doesn't help viewers get the most out of "good" programming.

Here are some simple suggestions parents can follow to teach media literacy:

- Keep telling children that much of what's on TV is pretend: it tells a story someone made up. Play "real" or "make believe" with small children, asking whether a character is made up or real.
- Discuss TV's point of view. All programs carry underlying messages about who and what is important. Some people are cast as victims, others as heroes. Who is telling the story? How would it have been different if someone else had told the story?

Media literacy can be extended to other areas, too. This year, Continental Cablevision is applying analytical viewing principles to media coverage of the presidential campaign. Our education initiative, called "View Smart to Vote Smart," is designed to equip voters and students with the viewing skills necessary to analyze the way the media cover elections. By looking more critically at what the media are telling us about the campaign, we can become better educated voters and citizens.

We are currently seeing efforts that represent the first step in preparing the next generation for the day when they will not simply decide which television programs to watch but will actively navigate an "Information Superhighway" traffic jam of video, computer and telecommunications messages and data.

Drama critic Clive Barnes has described television as the first truly democratic culture, "available to everybody, and entirely governed by what people want. The most terrifying thing is what people want."

A week without television is unlikely to change the content of the medium. We can only do that by being more selective in what we watch. If TV can have a negative influence on children, it can have a positive one as well. Turning off undesirable programs and critically viewing the programs you choose to watch is a far more satisfying and effective approach.

Bill Black is Director of Corporate Affairs, Continental Cablevision.

Kind of restores your faith

Northville Township resident Connie Wilson has been around the block a few times. In her decades on this planet she's seen a lot of changes in the way people behave and treat each other.

She doesn't like the way everything has turned out, and she doesn't hesitate to let you know how she feels about it all.

One of the things that disturbs Connie is the lack of politeness and courtesy she often sees. People aren't friendly or honest the way they used to be. And that bothers her.

So when she lost her purse while shopping one day a few weeks ago and got it back with the contents fully intact she decided to send a message to the young boys who returned it. Honesty pays, she wanted them to know; don't ever think that honesty doesn't have its rewards.

Some of you might have read the story in last week's Northville Record urging the two unknown Good Samaritans who helped Connie to come forward and identify themselves. Well, I'm pleased to tell you that the lads who found Connie's purse and turned it in to the customer service desk at Target March 28 called this office in response to the article.

After learning who the boys were, Connie straightaway went out and bought thank you cards for them both. She placed a $50 money order in each envelope.

How's that for gratitude?

My guess is that the youths wouldn't have netted $50 apiece if they had kept all the money in the purse and split it up between them.

Congratulations to 12-year-old Danny Massa and 10-year-old Reggie Holmes for their solid character and recent good fortune.

Oh, and Connie, you're not the only one who benefits from the honesty of strangers. The other day I unwittingly dropped a $10 bill in Borders and a young woman promptly picked it up and handed it back to me. Even addressed me as "sir" in getting my attention. Could it be that we exaggerate the absence of integrity nowadays?

OVER MIDDLE SCHOOL WAY

I had a chance to play teacher recently when I stood in for the AWOL Mike Mallot at Novi Middle School.

Mike, the managing editor of The Northville Record/Novi News, was off prancing through Disney World with his family last week and asked me to handle the instructional duties at the school in his stead.

Mike is cooperating with the school on a journalism project the students over there are producing.

During my on-site visit I got to meet with the students in small groups and offer them advice about feature writing, news reporting, sports writing and advertising. It was all really interesting and it gave me a chance to refresh myself on the basics of the business.

The last time I had that much fun was when I took over teaching an English class at Cooke Middle School a couple of years ago.

There was a time when I thought I wanted to teach, but when I see the patience that's required I'm not sure I'd have what it takes. Thankfully there are people around who do.

Few better places on earth

Friends and neighbors, the next time you pass through the tiny town of Ames Heights, W.V., you'll find a little slice of home.

If you happen to find yourself going down the main drag, pull into Lesh's Carry Out. You'll find a column by this reporter taped up on the front window. Walk inside and you'll meet some of the nicest folks breathing air.

A lot of tourist types aren't that lucky. They walk in, buy a few supplies and walk out.

Oh, I understand how that happens, though. The rugged beauty of West Virginia is more than enough to distract you, as Bob Jackson, Bryan Mitchell and I found out the weekend before last. Climbing this place's mountains and rafting its rivers is a feast for the soul. It renews you, kind of like rereading your favorite book or shooting the breeze with your oldest friend.

Friends, though, are something we made a lot of in just four short days. There were Jean and Lucille, the proprietors of Lesh's, who sent us home with peppers and Mr. Pibb and let us in on the secret of just what "ramps" are (and why it's not a good idea to eat them just before a long car ride).

Jean and Lucille are mother and daughter and run what is without question one of the greatest establishments in all the fruited plain. Lesh's has cold pop, a pool table in back that leans and sits next to a jukebox with country songs about rednecks, white socks and

Stroll outside and take a seat on the picnic table by the door and you're sure to meet someone interesting. My newest bud is Leon, a coalminer turned preacher turned local historian who shares my passions for history and old Bogart movies.

Then there was Steve, who got our emergency brake unstuck. His mama just happened to drop by Lesh's as we leafed through the yellow pages, looking for a mechanic. She took us over to her house and ol' Steve, who was going to the second of his two jobs in less than an hour, got out his jack, took off our wheel and popped things back into place before you spit a mouthful of Skoal.

Much as I like Northville, I'd venture to guess that something like that ain't likely to happen in this town.

All of this good stuff happened, by the way, before we ever hit the river for our round of whitewater rafting, which brought its own series of adventures. When one of the guides who may end up saving your life looks like a skinhead, talks like a good old boy and has a name like "Squirrel," you know you're in for a good time.

We slept under the stars. We chawed sizzling steaks by the campfire. We hunted for Five Dollar Frank, a World War II combat pilot who now flies anyone around for a tour (for you guessed it) a mere Abe Lincoln.

We discovered The World's Greatest Radio Station: I kid you not, it yielded up nothing but 24-carat gold rock 'n' roll in six straight hours of listening.

"Almost Heaven: West Virginia."

They ain't kidding, friends and neighbors. Randy Coble is a staff writer for The Northville Record.

Letters

Real writer didn't sign critical letter

In last week's paper Editor Lee Snider and I sure got raked over the coals by Karen Baja. The editor said he thought the letter had some adult input and I agree 100 percent. In fact, I think Karen Baja wrote it.

She will deny it, as usual. I believe her like I believe O.J., President Clinton and Hillary.

My reason is because she misled me at an open trustees meeting her first year in office. She declared a snow day and all the employees stayed home. When I asked her why she declared a snow day when all the schools and businesses were open she told me the head of the state police had called her about the road conditions. She knew that he didn't call her and I knew he didn't call her. She always has an answer, right or wrong. That free day cost the township a few thousand dollars.

Lately she accused me of running down her children. I wrote that she said she had four wonderful children and I said if we had 4,495 more like her children we wouldn't have any behavior problems.

Now I ask the question, did I run down her children? I praised her children in my mind.

Karen says my letters are hurtful, unsubstantiated, deceitful and untruthful and yet The Northville Record prints them.

I disagree with her statement. I have never written any untrue statements and she knows it. I have never attacked other members of the community. I have written that teachers aren't underpaid. The reason I say that is because I have a number of tax clients that are teachers and they aren't complaining. Their retirement beats the big corporations.

As I have written before, Karen is intelligent but she wants to be Queen Bee. She got rid of the first manager and would like to fire the present manager. I think the trustees have a say in it now and that is the only reason she is still here.

The letter in the petition had 86 signatures and the editor would have printed them except he couldn't read most of them. I think we should teach handwriting in school. I'll always remember my third grade teacher, Mrs. Norris. She kept me off the honor roll the whole third grade because I had a C in handwriting. I practiced a lot and have always been considered to have good penmanship.

My wife and I have been in the area for 39 years and we know a lot of people. They keep telling me to keep writing letters as they agree with me. Karen is going to run again so she is getting ready for the next election.

I admit I voted for her but after about two months in office, I wrote a letter admitting my mistake. I won't make the same mistake in November 1996. I hope the present trustees run again and win because they show some common sense.

Thornton says thanks for help

To the Editor:

The students and staff of Thornton Creek Elementary School would like to publicly thank the businesses who helped us make "March Is Reading Month" so successful.

The Pizza Cutter, owned by Jim and Liz Delano, once again provided personal pizzas for each child who completed the reading goal; Don Massey, Cadillac dealer in Plymouth, graciously donated two bicycles for the raffle held as the culminating event of the Winners' Festival; First of America provided four lucky students with $25 gift certificates to a local toy store; Border's Book Store in Novi donated 10, $10 gift certificates for our raffle; McDonald's Restaurant provided the drinks for the children at the festival.

Parents Daphne Kermin, Marlene Jawarski, Sue Simcox, and Patti Clark worked many long hours to make this party a success for the children. Many other parents donated time both before and at the festival. Their work was greatly appreciated by all of us.

Dance Dynamics Performing Co., a local dance studio, provided entertainment for the children at the party. No-Mans' Band, a local senior citizen washboard band, held everyone's interest during their performance. The children were fascinated by the clever instruments, especially the "clanking teeth."

The party was for the children and nearly the entire school was present.

We appreciate our many friends in the Northville community.

The ancient proverb, "It takes a whole village to raise a child," was evident the night of March 29 at Thornton Creek Elementary School.

Thanks again to all.

Consider third solution for jobs problem

Phil Power

Item Looking forward to this summer's contract negotiations with the auto industry, the UAW is in the process of putting together its demands. In light of widespread anxiety about downsizing now under way at the Big Three, its key demands will revolve around job security.

Item Pat Buchanan didn't run better in the March 19 Michigan Republican presidential primary than anyone expected merely because he talked about our late spring. He talked about high wage American jobs being exported abroad. And lots of people listened.

Item A scholarly article in last week's New Yorker magazine by John Cassidy concluded "For the past three decades the intensification of global capitalism has been undermining the living standards and the prospects of the unskilled. That process is continuing, and although the rigors of competition are now striking some of those who were previously protected, the costs of economic progress are still being borne primarily by the poor and ill-educated."

Now, some economic history.

The unemployment compensation system that is our main safety net against job loss was developed in the 1930s. The economic assumptions underlying the system are illuminating, if only because they are so out of touch with the reality of today's economy.

The idea was that business cycles would sweep periodically through the economy. When the cycle turned downward, businesses would lay off workers to save costs due to falling demand. When the cycle turned up, laid-off workers would be re-hired by the same firm.

Workers would, in effect, bob up and down, going in and out of work with the waves of the business cycle. To protect family incomes (and to maintain aggregate demand to avoid a depression), the unemployment insurance system was developed. When people lost their jobs, they could file for unemployment compensation; UI checks would help sustain their families until they got their old jobs back.

Nobody who has been laid off recently, however, has much hope of getting back his or her old job. Unemployment compensation checks, while vital in keeping a family alive as workers look for new jobs, do nothing to provide unemployed folks with the new skills they need in order to get a good new job.

Plainly, the old UI system needs a refit.

For that reason, some of us proposed a couple of years ago converting part of the unemployment compensation system into the reemployment training system, through which workers who are laid off would receive vouchers entitling them to training to qualify for new jobs. They wouldn't lose their entire UI check, of course, but some resources allocated entirely into family sustenance would be diverted into re-training.

The point here is that economic statistics show that while most workers who are laid off eventually find work, their new jobs often pay far less than the old ones. Skills training is the big factor in helping people find new jobs which are also good new jobs.

Vouchers would be spent by workers themselves, not some distant bureaucrat. Because there would be a limit to the amount of training vouchers people could earn, there would be an incentive for people to spend the voucher wisely, not on some fly-by-night truck driving or cosmetology school.

It doesn't take much imagination to see that such a system could evolve into something like Social Security, in which individual workers get numbered individual training accounts, into which both employer and employee pay a portion of gross wages. These accounts would be tax-protected while building up and could be drawn on either when workers are laid off or want a career change.

Now the punch lines. Elections are coming, folks. The big debate in the races for U.S. Senate and House are the workings and worth of government. The right argues, in effect, that any money going to government will be wasted; the traditional left urges ponderous and intrusive traditional programs. The notion of a re-employment training system offers an interesting third way, neither left nor right.

How about it, candidates?

Reassess values for spring break activities

Maybe it's Cancun, San Pedro Island or Ft. Lauderdale.

Thinking ahead to Spring Break '96: we're not talkin' about the family's vacation, we're talkin' teen. Parents in tow? Heck no, just the teens and their friends.

What's wrong with this picture? Doesn't every teen have the inalienable right to take off for a week while still in high school and party-hardy with their friends? Isn't this the new rite of passage? No more bus loads of kids going to D.C. (with chaperones) for these folks.

Oprah Winfrey captured the significance of this unchaperoned trip south with a video that would make grandparents (and maybe parents) roll over in their graves. The scene looks like this: scantily-clad women and muscle beach guys gather on the beach or poolside for a day of drinking, dancing and sunning.

By evening, everyone has warmed up from sun and drink and keeps on drinkin' and partyin' (complete with wet T-shirt contests and women's mud wrestling). The night culminates with a new-found partner for the night.

When asked whether the teens were worried about their indiscreet choice of a bed mate, they usually said they didn't worry about it much because they were too drunk to care, and they didn't think they could catch STDs (sexually transmitted diseases) or AIDS.

This is a puzzlement, because one wonders how they have learned to be so much more careful than everyone else. Some even admitted that when they didn't have a condom available (they did know to use them), they resorted to a bread bag (ingenious, don't you think?).

Is anyone worried about this cavalier attitude about drinking and sex?

Obviously, we as parents aren't particularly stressed out by it because nothing has changed in the last five years.

But, you say, "So what's a parent to do about it?"

Let's begin with a lesson in values. Maybe we need to be sitting down with our kids at ages nine, 10, 11 and talk about the reasons that it is a good choice for a teen to remain abstinent. Maybe we need to ask ourselves, are we giving them a mixed message by having our live-in or weekend partner stay overnight?

Or should we be looking at our own drinking and drugging?

(Oh, we know what you're thinking. "They don't know about my marijuana stash in the bottom of my underwear drawer." Yes they do. They're telling us about it in schools all over the country. They're even stealing some of your stash, your booze, your beer, your pills.)

Maybe, parents, it's about time that we wake up and admit that our kids are getting every single thing in life they could ever hope for. Would it be unreasonable to let our pre-pubescent teens know that an unchaperoned trip during high school is unacceptable? Or could we at least put parameters around what we will allow in terms of a high school trip?

One parent shared that this was an opportunity to teach negotiation with their teen. They told the teen that they didn't approve of an unchaperoned trip, but would take them on a family trip to a much nicer destination. The teen realized that this might be one of the last trips the family would take together and went with them.

Another group of parents got together in June of the year prior to "senior trip year" and talked with each other about what they would and would not allow. Interestingly, they all had had a discussion with their teen, and had been bamboozled into thinking that they were the only parents not in sync with the senior trip concept.

After realizing how their kids had pulled the wool over their eyes, they were able to band together and create their senior-trip guidelines. It was so nifty to see them become a unified front and make decisions that would be healthy and safe for their teens. Several of their guidelines included the following:

- We will allow our teen to go on a senior trip only if they agree to be accompanied by one parent chaperone and if they pay for the trip from their own money.
- The parent will stay in the same condo/motel or directly next door.
- The parent will have the right to come into the teen den upon knocking.
- There will be no drinking/drugging or overnight guests of the opposite sex while the teens are on vacation.
- The parent chaperone has the last say in whether a teen's violation of rules means that the teen must leave and go home.

Teens will initially balk at this idea if it is broached only two months before the trip, but the successful parents have been the ones who talked to their children six months to a year prior to the trip.

Maybe you can think about these valuable guidelines right now and be proactive in talking with your teen. It may make the difference as to whether your child has a safe spring break or one fraught with consequences.

OCC considers freezing tuition

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Students at Oakland Community College may win twice this year - no tuition increase but a wage hike for those employed by OCC.

"Tuition and fee rates will not change," chief financial officer Clarence Brantley told the board of trustees Monday in a preliminary report on a budget that will top $100 million. OCC's rate for in-district residents is $46 per credit hour.

Students employed by the college currently are paid $5 an hour. Brantley said he will recommend a $6 rate to Chancellor Richard Thompson - and maybe more for those with 1,000 hours or more longevity.

OCC board members are scheduled to adopt a budget before the fiscal year starts July 1. It will be the second of seven years for OCC's 0.8 mill voted property tax that supplies about $25 million. Another tax of 0.85 mill is permanent.

Brantley is looking at a 3.38 percent increase in overall revenues to $101.9 million. Elements:

- Property tax revenue is capped at a 2.8 percent increase because Proposal A of 1994 limited annual assessment increases to the rate of inflation. Total estimated property tax revenue: $55.7 million.
- State aid will go up 2.2 percent to $19.2 million.
- Tuition and fee income will rise only 1 percent due to enrollment growth to $25.6 million.

- Investment income will rise to $1.25 million from the current $1.2 million due to stable returns and better cash flow.

On the cost side, OCC will have to pay 15.42 percent of salaries for retirement benefits, up from the current 14.56 percent, Brantley said.

The total salaries figure, currently $44 million, is uncertain because the number of jobs has yet to be decided and contract talks are on with two unions - operating engineers and faculty.

As it stands, the preliminary budget has $17 million for facility projects, capital outlay and new equipment as renovations proceed on OCC's aging buildings. Brantley said the administration is likely to raise that amount before presenting it to the board.

PLANT IMPROVED

Work on a deteriorated bridge at the Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills has begun, said Thomas Hickey, vice president of George W. Auch Co., the Pontiac firm acting as construction manager for OCC's renovations.

Trustee Carol Crew said public users of the pool at Orchard Ridge were praising its reopening after its reconstruction and renovation. "They're saying the mileage was worth it," Crew said.

Hickey said architects will be at work in April through June as plans for other renovations are developed.

The Auburn Hills Campus

parking lot is due for many changes, the construction manager said. Traffic flow interferes with drop offs for child care; better lighting is being designed; and parking for handicapped and faculty will be separated.

SAFETY IMPROVED

The board approved a $50,000 annual contract with the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, which will provide public safety dispatching services to all five campuses.

Joseph A. Macri, dean of public services, said the contract is being changed to a flat amount for three years from the previous $13.60 per call, which cost $36,000 in the year ended March 31.

"Calls to public safety have increased monthly," Macri said. "A call can be made by dialing 5555 from any phone on any campus."

Few calls are for physical crimes, although a few report "crimes of opportunity" such as theft of unguarded property. The big jump is due to a new state law allowing courts to issue "personal protection orders" on behalf of women fearing assault from an ex-husband or ex-boyfriend. Public safety officers then provide escort service.

"We have 13 PPOs issued for people at the Pontiac center alone," Macri said.

Board members expressed some sticker shock at the increase in price. Vice chancellor James Warner said the contract is cancelable with 90 days notice. Macri said OCC contacted several city police departments for bids on the dispatch service before deciding the Sheriff's Department offered the best deal.

EVALUATION TIME

Board chair Douglas Wakefield appointed three trustees to revise the board's form for evaluating the chancellor. Trustees Janice Simmons of Pontiac, Carol Crew of Waterford and Sandra Ritter, also of Waterford, will review the criteria. Ritter will chair the panel.

"It's only fair," said Crew, "for an evaluation to have known performance criteria. We have to give them goals and performance objectives. We were a little lax."

"For a true evaluation," added Ritter, "we need agreement on goals."

Wakefield called the chief executive's evaluation "one of the most critically important jobs of the college."

HEALTH PROGRAM OK'D

In other business, Martha Smydra, president of the Southfield campus system, said the Respiration Therapy program has been awarded a five-year accreditation from a professional society.

Recreation therapists work in hospitals, nursing homes, extended care facilities and outpatient clinics. The program requires 72 credit hours, a dozen more than most associate in science degree programs.

Recycle your phone books

Residents and businesses can recycle their telephone books in two Resource Recovery and Recycling Authority of Southwest Oakland County (RRRASOC) communities.

Recyclers can drop off their phone books at the Material Recovery Facility (MRF) in Southfield through the end of May.

The MRF is located at Eight Mile Road and Evergreen Road in Southfield. For information, call (810) 208-2270.

Michigan anglers would receive more support from law enforcement and conservation officers to prevent people from harassing them while they are fishing. Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, announced at a press conference held at the Brenke Fish Ladder in Lansing.

Geake is the sponsor of a four-bill package protecting the rights of Michigan fishermen. Joining Geake to advance support of the bills was Michigan's best known hunting and fishing advocate, Ted Nugent.

Geake stated, "The individuals against legalized fishing in Michigan purposely harass anglers by speeding by in boats, throwing rocks in the water near fishing lines, scaring away the fish and ruining the legitimate enjoyment of a great American pastime." Geake said, "Senate Bills 963 through 966 protect recreational and commercial fishermen by establishing what are acts of harassment and creating misdemeanor penalties for those engaging in such activities."

The bills constitute a fishing version of the "Hunter Harassment Act," passed one year ago to protect the rights of hunters legally hunting game in Michigan.

Fred Trost, host of the popular television show "The Practical Sportsman," said at the conference, "The thing that encourages me here is that it is to protect the fishermen, not to protect the fish. Fishermen take care of the fish. We pay for hatcheries we have regulations. You know, the fish are fine. And right now the Legislature is realizing that fishermen are going to get bashed and so they're doing something to protect them."

"These bills have tremendous bipartisan support," Geake added. "Fishing may be the only outdoor sport the young, the old and the handicapped can all actively participate in."

The bills were to be taken up in Bennett's committee this week.

Oakland debates secrecy issue

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Is it a forward-looking attempt to use technology to bring public records on-line to business users?

Or a sinister plot by county bureaucrats to hide public records from the public by jacking up prices and sabotaging the Freedom of Information Act?

Some of both, judging from the reactions of lawmakers on the House Local Government Committee to House Bill 5726. They held one hearing April 17 and expect to do a lot more work before the bill sees the light of day on the House floor.

"Our concept is improved service through increased access in an electronic format for a fee," said Oakland County's Bob Daddow, interim director for information and technology.

Oakland's plan, putting records on-line for business and charging fees that recover not only the reproduction cost (allowed by FOIA) but also the cost of computer programming, millions of dollars of new hardware, new software and "system development."

"It's not cheap," said Daddow, adding that Oakland's partner in providing enhanced service may be Ameritech.

NOT HIGH-MINDED

"I'm more agitated and more offended at this than anything that has ever come before us," said Rep. Lingg Brewer, D-Holt, a former Ingham County clerk. "The concept is wrong, the conclusion's presumptuous and arrogant."

"County records are not an adjunct of Ameritech. They are government doing its work."

"Our concept is improved service through increased access in an electronic format for a fee."

—Bob Daddow
Oakland County interim director, information and technology

Brewer said. He noted the current FOIA allows charging the wage of the lowest-paid clerk for research and limits the cost of reproducing records to incremental costs of copying. The Oakland-Ameritech scheme allows charging the wages of an employee capable of handling a technical request.

Brewer quoted a Michigan Association of Counties newsletter asking member officials for ideas on further restrictions on FOIA. "That's not so high-minded," he said.

"To say there's a whiz-bang market, a 'resource' to be mined — that's not the business of government. It's shameful to create a two-tiered market where the riffraff gets a handwritten document and the top-drawer folks and techies get computerized records."

"You set an artificially-imposed cost. Then you require (the customer to sign) a contract. Then require people to pay high fees — a gross misconstruction of government's role," Brewer said.

TARNISHED HISTORY

Mark Grebner, a political consultant and expert on the FOIA, said the bill's history "has a history, frankly, of stepping on FOIA — accidentally, on purpose — in about 10 places."

"It basically has government saying that when the public asks for a document, you're inconveniencing us."

Any document the government wants to hide will require "interference in government," Grebner said.

Grebner is a Democratic Ingham County commissioner who, in his political consulting work, makes about 1,000 FOIA requests a year — and files many lawsuits to get them.

He faulted Oakland County for spending thousands in courts to fight his "$25 request" for voter records — "a cheerful, friendly, helpful bunch of people," he said with obvious sarcasm.

The genesis of the bill, Grebner said, was an effort by the Michigan Association of Counties to charge more for geological records to a commercial book publisher.

"That's the wrong dichotomy — to say somebody's going to make money off this," said Grebner. "People make money off the roads, but you don't stop the truck drivers."

HB 5726, a 15-page amendment of the FOIA, is in its third draft and faces more work. The sponsor is Rep. Bob Brackenridge, R-St. Joseph, chair of the House Local Government Committee and a former Berrien County clerk.

'ENHANCED ACCESS'

"It's not our intent to limit access to information," said Brackenridge. "We're trying to protect accessibility by providing enhanced access (on-line) to those willing to pay for it." He likened paper copies to an out-house and computer access to indoor, flush toilets.

The case for HB 5726 goes like this:

• Businesses don't want their people to stand in line at county offices to make records requests that will take five days to fill. That opinion came from Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson's Business Roundtable.

• Delivering records on computer lines is expensive. "If we have no ability to recover our investment," said Oakland's Daddow, "I submit to you the investment will not be made. That will withhold information from the public. FOIA doesn't allow recovery of the investment."

• "Enhanced access," Ameritech's name for the system, allows customers more choices. "Ameritech makes the investment in lines and security. Government makes the decision on what the cost should be."

"We split the cost with government. That's how we recoup our investment," said Ameritech lobbyist Stephanie Taylor.

Taylor painted a glowing picture of "electronic commerce" in a global economy, but also said it could be a money-maker for government, citing a Canadian system called CivicLink.

In British Columbia's registry of liens, she said, "expenditures decreased from $2 million to $1.5 million, and revenues increased from $7.2 million to $9.7 million."

Ameritech's presentation triggered Brewer's explosion about the use of public records as a money-making resource rather than as a service to the public.

Bowlfuls of caring

Fifth grade students from Amerman Elementary School and Northville High School art students believe art can feed the hungry. Working together over the past few months students have created ceramic bowls for guests who will attend the April 29 Empty Bowls meal at Amerman. The dinner will take place from 6-7 p.m. in Amerman's gym/cafeteria. Suggested donations are $5 for adults, $2 per child. Canned food or paper items are also welcome. Sponsors include Community Federal Credit Union, Genitti's Hole in the Wall, the Michigan Department of Education—Learn and Serve Michigan Grant, Northville Public Schools and Papa Romano's. Amerman art teacher Gail Raben and Jan Purtell, the district's Education-Business Partnership Facilitator, joined Amerman teachers Cheryl Holmberg and John Walen, as well as Northville High School instructor Judy Patton, in coordinating the project. The Cooke Middle School "Encore" Choir, directed by Vickie Abodeely, will provide the entertainment. Above, Northville High senior Alex Modos and Amerman fifth grader Leif Millar apply glazes to bowls that will be featured at the meal.

Organization rates Law as most conservative

Out of the 110 House members serving in Lansing, state Rep. Gerald Law is among Michigan's most conservative according to the Michigan Conservative Union.

The Union ranked Law, R-Plymouth, as one of the top 12 most conservative legislators. The group, based in Madison Heights, periodically produces a State House Scorecard to evaluate lawmakers.

"I stand by the issues that matter most to my district and the state," Law said.

The ranking places Law 12th in voting on issues the MCU rates as critical to the state's economic health and the preservation of family values.

The selection of roll call votes included in this year's conservative scorecard was based on a variety of bills and amendments, according to the MCU.

"I'm inspired by the progress this House has made in the past 15 months," Law said. "By following an agenda of common sense and integrity, we have made this state a better place to live, work and raise children."

Law represents Northville Township and Wayne County Northville in the state House.

PSO gala billed as 'Night in Casablanca'

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra is celebrating its Golden Anniversary with "A Night in Casablanca," a gala to be held Friday, April 26, at Fox Hills Country Club in Plymouth.

The event is a major highlight of the PSO's Endowment 2000 campaign, which hopes to raise $250,000 to endow the symphony by the year 2000. To date, over $82,000 has been pledged by symphony supporters. All proceeds from the gala will benefit Endowment 2000.

"This promises to be the social event of the year," said Kathy Aznavorian, PSO board member, gala chair and owner of Fox Hills Country Club. "Guests will be treated to a gourmet dinner, premium bar and dancing to the music of the Matt Michaels orchestra."

With a Casablanca theme, the Golden Anniversary Gala will nostalgically take guests back to the glamorous '40s when the PSO first began performing. Another highlight of the gala will be awarding Ken and Esther Hulsing a Plymouth Symphony Orchestra Lifetime Appreciation Award for all of their generous support over the years.

"We believe the Plymouth Symphony has been an important part of this community over the past 50 years," said Dave Burnisky, PSO president. "Our Endowment 2000 campaign was created to allow the symphony to continue performing beautiful music in the community for another 50 years."

Tickets to the Golden Anniversary Gala are $100 per guest. There are packages available for businesses which would like to sponsor the event.

Gala raffle tickets are being sold at $5 each or 3 for $10.

Both gala and raffle tickets can be purchased at any PSO performance or by calling the symphony office at (313) 451-2112.

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, which is celebrating its 50th Anniversary this season, is a non-profit organization that does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, sex, age, handicap, origin or creed.

Bill would change school election dates

By TIM RICHARD
Staff Writer

Capitol capsules:

School elections would be held in November rather than June under a controversial set of bills passed by state Senate Republicans.

"Voter involvement, interest and participation in school board elections will increase significantly," said Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton, sponsor of one of the three bills.

In 1999, one bill would move partisan elections for the State Board of Education from even-numbered years (when the president and governor are elected) to odd-numbered years.

Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, won approval of an amendment to allow local school boards to shift their elections to the same time as the State Board of Education elections. University board elections are unaffected.

School boards would be limited to scheduling property tax and bond issue ballot proposals to three dates per year - the Tuesday after the first Monday in April, August and November.

The bills won by narrow majorities. Bennett's Senate Bill 775 won 22-15, supported by 21 Republicans and one Democrat. The 15 no votes were cast by Democrats. Area senators all voted with their parties.

The bills face probable death in the House Local Government Committee, where chair Bob Brackenridge, R-St. Joseph, is working with an ad hoc committee on a similar approach that will take most of the year.

BIGGER CAR LOANS

The House passed and sent to Gov. Engler a bill to remove the $15,000 ceiling on new car loans from the Regulatory Loan Act of 1963. There will be no limit once the new law takes effect.

The sponsor is Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, chair of the Senate Financial Services Committee. The Senate passed his bill March 20.

"Most loans exceed that," said Rep. Gary Randall, R-Elwell, who guided the bill through House passage April 17. "This deletes the limit that precludes young people from getting loans."

No one spoke against Senate Bill 441 as it passed the House on a 79-27 vote. All HomeTown Newspapers area lawmakers voted yes.

END TO CAMPUS PC

"The first amendment (freedom of speech) is under attack on college campuses by totalitarians who advocate political correctness."

So saying, Rep. Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills, introduced a bill to prevent universities from enforcing a rule or policy that subjects a student to disciplinary action solely on the basis of free speech protected by the U.S. Constitution. It also would give a student at a public university the power to sue the university in circuit court for violation of the act.

Kaza, a conservative policy wonk and civil libertarian, said campuses "are supposed to be an open marketplace of ideas." His bill applies to colleges, unlike a 1993 bill by then-Rep. Lyn Jondahl to protect freedom of expression in K-12 schools.

PARK BILL OK'D

David Honigman may be gone from the state Senate, but his colleagues recently passed one of his pet bills - allowing local units to issue special assessment bonds for local parks rather than paying for them from the general fund.

Honigman is a Republican who resigned in March due to poor health.

The House vote was 94-11. Voting yes were Republicans Willis Bullard of Milford and Gerald Law of Plymouth, both Northville area representatives.

What day is it again?

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

Do you know what today is? Take Your Daughter to Work Day. Friday is Hug an Australian Day. National Arbor Day and Richter Scale Day, which is to recognize the importance of Charles Francis Richter and his work in the development of the earthquake magnitude scale known as the Richter scale.

Until January of 1995, the commemoration of people, events, ideas and activities thought worthy of national recognition had to be first introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives or Senate as a bill. If it passed by a majority vote and was signed by the president, it became a commemorative day, week or month.

"It was a legislative process," said Frank Malsano, press secretary for Rep. Joe Knollenberg. "It was not a binding law."

As of the beginning of the 104th Congress, no bill or resolution establishing a commemorative day or week may be introduced. As of January 1995, the government put a stop to the process because the bills took up a disproportionate amount of time on the part of the senators, representatives and their staff.

"The government reform and oversight committee, which is a standing committee of House of Representatives, was directed to consider alternative means to establishing commemorations," Malsano said. The committee's report is due back during this Congressional term which ends December 1996.

"They put an end to the madness, it was getting a little out of hand," Malsano said.

Commemoratives issued in the past included National Humor Month, National Anxiety Month, Make Up Your Mind Day, National Thank You Day and Make Up Your Own Holiday Day.

In Novi, many organizations requesting proclamations will send the mayor, city manager or city council members literature about their special event or holiday, according to Lou Martin, Novi's public information director.

"We probably see at least one a week," he said.

Some organizations request proclamations as a formal recognition to let the citizens know the day exists, while for others it serves to benchmark their event.

"It is at the discretion of council and the mayor if they are used and when," Martin said. They are mostly things we think are important for the public to know or the county is asking the cities to be aware of this information.

"National potato day probably would not come to us," he said.

Before granting a proclamation, the request is cross checked with two publications, The Book of Days or Chases, to make sure there is no duplication of a national holiday or that the holiday does fall on that day.

"It is a way to keep that legislation alive in the city such as Fair Housing Day, Police Memorial Day, and Days of Remembrance from the United States Holocaust Memorial Council," said Martin.

Requests for proclamations in the city of Northville amount to just a couple a month, according to city clerk Delphine Gutowski.

The process for requesting proclamations is to make written submissions and include, among other things, the day, week or month to be recognized, the reason the event, group or individual should be recognized and a list of achievements.

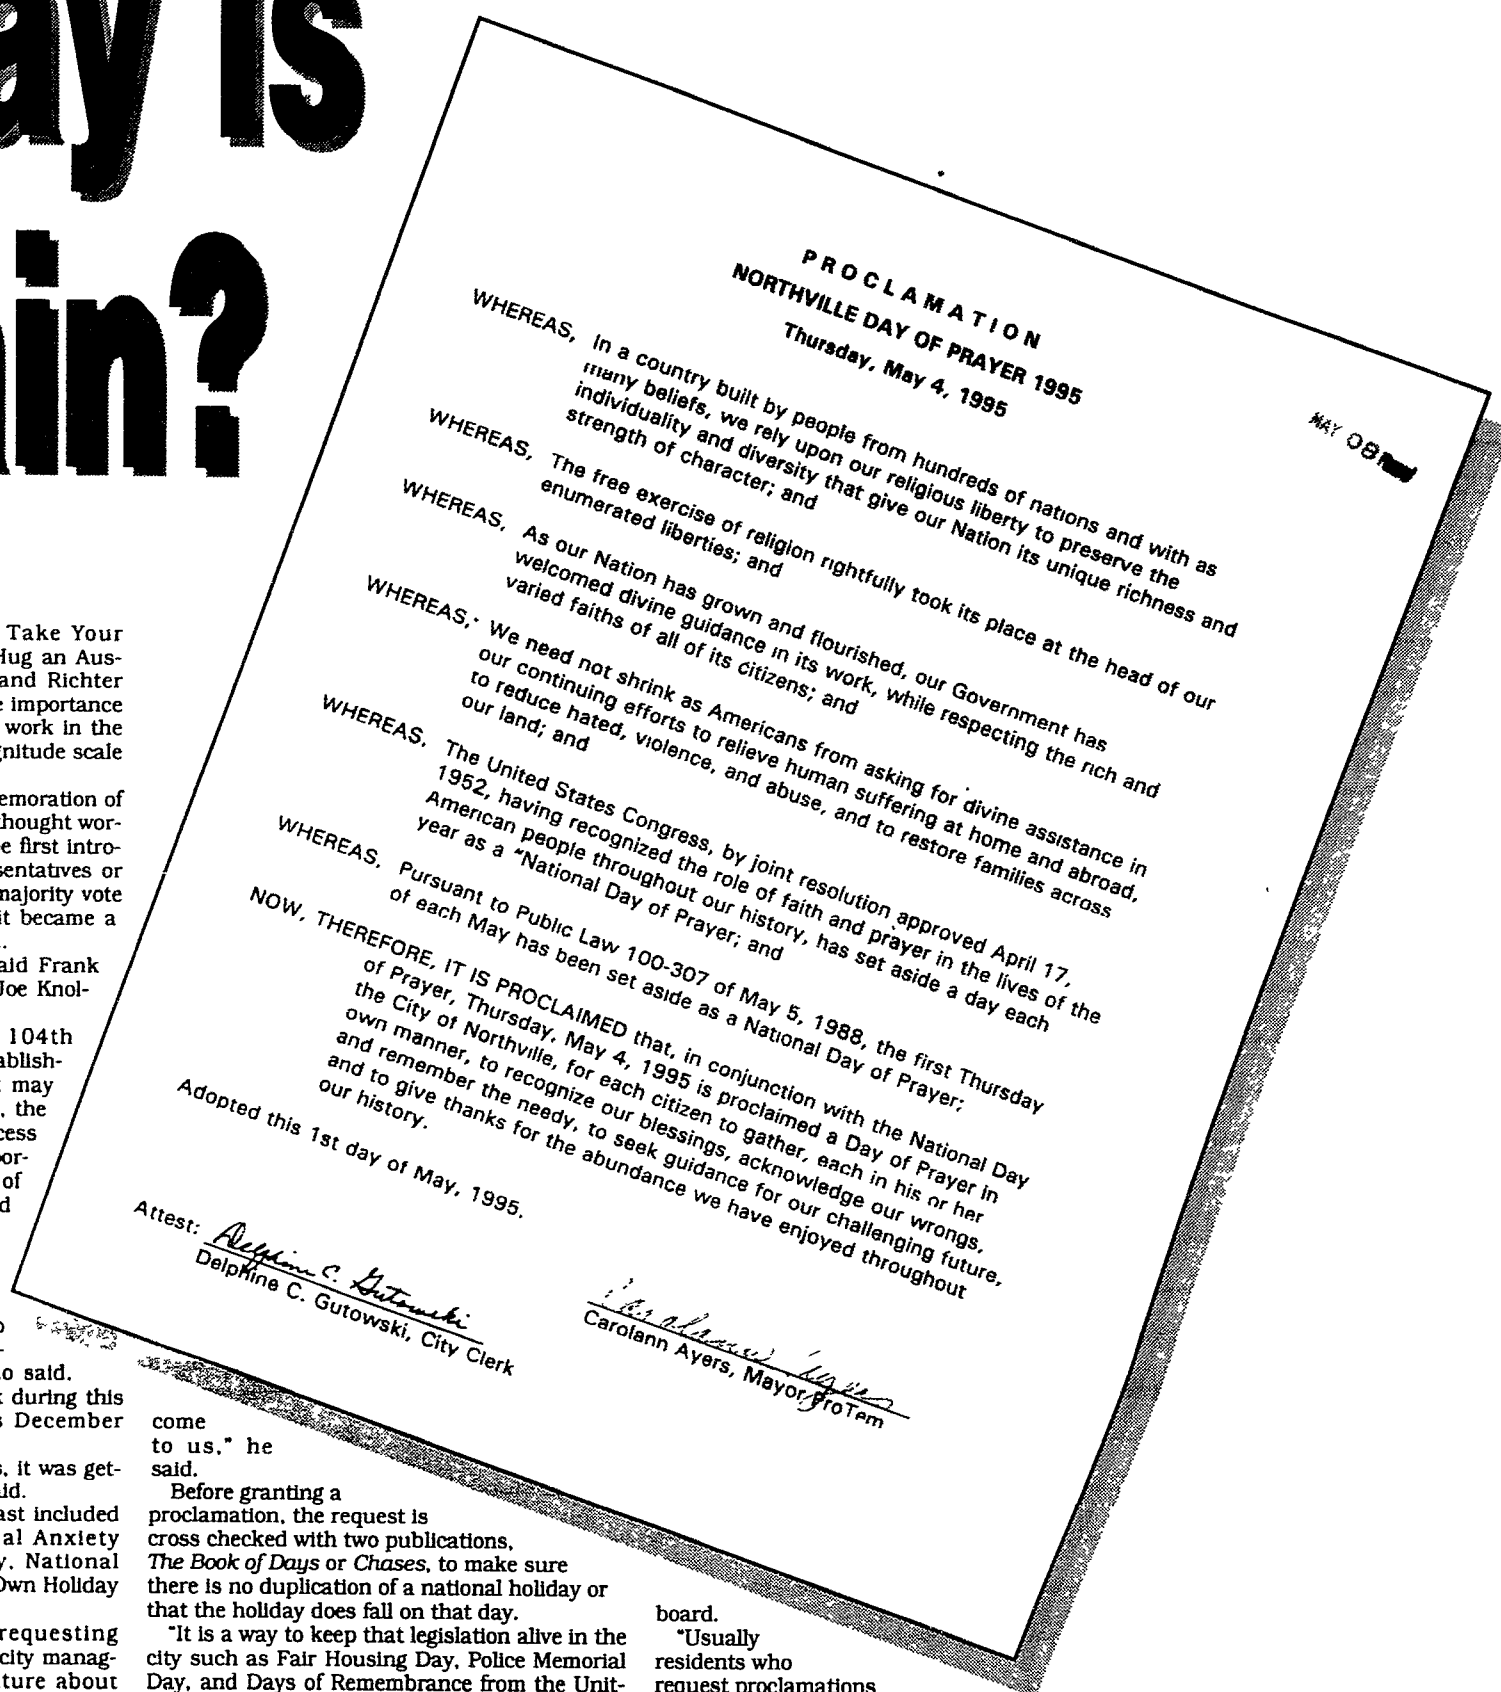

If the city council adopts it, Mayor Chris Johnson and Gutowski sign it and the proclamation is then posted on the city's bulletin board.

"Usually residents who request proclamations belong to specific groups or are aware of the event," Gutowski said. "A lot of them are repeats."

Proclamations issued in Northville include Moslem Shrine Temple Hospital Fund Drive Days, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, National Prayer Day, Amerman Arts in Action Week, Community Development Week, Drug Awareness Week, and Junior Achievement Month. April is the Month of the Young Child.

"For some of the silly stuff, when they find out they have to go before the city council and write a letter, they change their minds," Gutowski said.

Companionship part of Clinesmith's role

By DOROTHY NASH
Special Writer

It's one and the same thing - working and volunteering - for Celena Clinesmith. No, not really.

Professionally, she's hospice coordinator for Allen Park Veteran's Hospital.

"I evaluate patients and meet with families all the time," Clinesmith said. "I find out the kind of help they need." And she provides a hospice to do whatever is needed.

As a volunteer, she's available after work hours to spend time with a person for whom a request has been made to Arbor Hospice.

"I'm more like a companion," spending time with one person as it fits into her schedule.

"I was with one woman for 21 months until she died at 94. She lived alone and had several volunteers, coming at various times. She was pretty much independent, but she needed volunteers who could share hours during the week."

Clinesmith spent two or three hours on Saturday with her,

"washing dishes and preparing a few meals she could micro-wave, as she needed them."

Then, she said, "there was a gentleman" with whom she spent three or four hours - sitting with him and talking, reading, watching television. "I was more like a companion."

"I found out about Arbor Hospice through a thing in our church bulletin," she said. "And I thought this is where I can make a contribution."

Clinesmith is more apt to be available on evenings and weekends than days.

After you take a 30-hour training course, "you are assigned a case, and become close to the family."

"Sometimes you see them only once, and the person dies. It's hard for the family, and they may say, 'If you can, will you still come?'"

To inquire about the training program for Arbor Hospice, call the main office in Ann Arbor (313) 677-0500 or the Down River office at (313) 383-8800.

In Our Town

City recognizes prayer day

Northville will observe the National Day of Prayer on Thursday, May 2, by meeting at the city hall to affirm the nation's spiritual roots and to enlist prayer for local, state and national leaders.

Carol Workens

In a declaration, Gov. John Engler stated that "a day of prayer allows us the opportunity to acknowledge the numerous challenges that we, as a society and as a nation, face here at home and throughout the world, and to rededicate ourselves to eradicating the tragedies of homelessness, poverty, violence, war and international conflicts."

"A day of prayer is also an opportunity to renew and inspire the joy we find in our faith and in our friends, family, and community members."

President Bill Clinton stated in a proclamation he issued on April 2 that "A National Day of Prayer, first proclaimed by the Continental Congress in 1775, stems from the understanding that faith is a fundamental part of our nation's social fabric."

He went on to state that "I encourage every citizen of this great nation to pray, each in his or her own manner, seeking strength from God to face the challenges of today, requesting guidance for the uncertainties of tomorrow, and giving thanks for the rich blessings that our Nation has enjoyed throughout history."

Those interested in participating in National Prayer Day are encouraged to meet at the flag pole at city hall, 215 W. Main, at 12:20 for 20 minutes. About 70 adults and 70 children participated in National Day of Prayer last year.

Fine arts show seeking artists

The First Presbyterian Church of Northville is now accepting applications for "Sharing the Gift," the fourth annual juried fine art show featuring Edde Joppich as juror. 1996 entry forms for the show, which will be held on Oct. 5 through 11, are available at the church.

The show will feature on-site jurying of multi-media works, including watercolor, oil, collage, sculpture, graphics, photography, clay and fiber. Cash awards range from $50 to $300.

For more information, call the church at (810) 349-0911.

Volunteer honored at luncheon

Nancy Fotiu of Northville was among the area volunteers honored by Arbor Hospice at an annual luncheon on Saturday, April 20, at the Fox Country Club in Plymouth.

Fotiu received a five year certificate of service. Also honored with a five year certificate was Joan Michels of Plymouth.

Last year over 11,000 volunteer hours were given to the agency. The duties are as varied as addressing envelopes and hand-crafting 3,000 annual giving tree ornaments to providing direct support to the patient and the caregiver.

Arbor Hospice offers a comprehensive set of services designed to address the physical, emotional and spiritual needs of individuals and families who face a life-threatening illness.

If you have information for In Our Town, call Carol Workens at 349-1700.

Book tour brings writer back home

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

It's not often that Suzanne Babich Havalala gets back to her old stomping grounds. This time it's because of a national book tour promoting Shopping for Health, A Nutritionist's Aisle-by-Aisle Guide to Smart, Low-Fat Choices at the Supermarket.

Havala, a 1977 Northville High School graduate, will be at Border Books on April 26 at 7 p.m. to sign copies of Shopping for Health, her second book.

The 310 page paperback takes the reader aisle by aisle through the supermarket and gives companions on nutritional foods.

"There are tons of things you can eat that are good for you," she said. "I focus on the positive, not so much on what you can't eat but what you can eat."

The book is divided into three parts

"There are tons of things you can eat that are good for you."

Suzanne Havala
Dietitian and writer

Part one includes nutritional information and pointers on reading the new food labels.

Part two is the tour of the supermarket, with foods grouped as they are really found in most stores.

Part three begins with sample grocery lists and includes shopping cart "makeovers."

"I am a people watcher," she said. "I notice what people put in their baskets."

Standing at the check out counter, Havala peeked into the baskets of shoppers as they waited in line to get the realistic information she included in that part of the book.

Havala is a registered dietitian and has a home-based nutrition consulting business. Among her special areas of interest are health promotion, food trends and vegetarian diets.

Havala also writes articles, appears on radio and television and lectures to professionals and the general public.

She moved to Charlotte, N.C., nine years ago and was followed by her sister, Julie, a few years later.

Havala's parents, Milt and Kay Babich, moved to a suburb of Charlotte from Northville just over a year ago, while her brother, David, has remained in the area, teaching third grade at Amerman Elementary School in Northville.

Suzanne Babich Havala

An older sister, Sandy, lives in Montana.

Border Books and Music is located at 43075 Crescent Road in the Novi Town Center.

Woman honored by club

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

"I just like making a difference," said Sandra LaVerdure of Northville of her decision to join the Suburban Republican Women's Club in 1989.

On May 3, LaVerdure will receive the "Tribute to Women" award at the 14th annual banquet at Zehnder's in Frankenmuth, Mich. This event is sponsored by the Republican Women's Federation of Michigan to recognize one outstanding woman in each of the 32 clubs in the State. The women are honored for their contributions to their own club and the Republican Party.

According to Sylvia Haskell, president of the Suburban Republican Women's Club, LaVerdure was chosen for the honor because of her dedicated volunteer work on behalf of local Republican activities and candidates.

"We have always appreciated Sandra's enthusiasm and willingness to help, especially during her term as vice-president and corresponding secretary of the Club."

During campaigns, LaVerdure makes phone calls, knocks on doors, attends fund-raisers, and handles mailings.

Besides their political involvement, group members also have a picnic once a year, a Halloween party and an untalent show, which LaVerdure produced and directed. Other involvements include working the registrations tables during the cancer drive and the River Rouge clean up.

"If more people got involved on the local level, we'd be a lot more successful in our presidential campaigns."

Sandra LaVerdure

"The most exciting campaign was George Bush's because I got to shake his hand and meet him in person," she said of her work on the president's reelection campaign. "It was exciting to be that close to the President of the United States. It was awesome."

"Another exciting time in the 11th District was when I started working on the campaign for Joe Knollenberg," she said. "He was low man on the totem pole. No one knew him. He had been our Congressman for a long time."

"I really felt like I made a difference in that election," she said. "We did everything and anything we could do to get his name out there."

LaVerdure grew up being politically active. While a student at McKenzie High School in Detroit, LaVerdure first got involved with local campaigns.

"My dad's philosophy was you go to church and you vote — those were a person's two duties in life," she said. "It was always a big factor in my household when I was growing up."

LaVerdure moved into the 13th District two years ago when she and her husband, Dennis, moved to Northville.

"If more people got involved on the local level we'd be a lot more successful in our presidential campaigns," she said. "People don't think it is important enough. What they don't realize is that if you don't get your own city running properly how can you go any further."

The LaVerdures have three grown children, Ginger, Denise and Gordon, and five grandchildren.

The Suburban Republican Women's Club is open to any Republican woman who is interested in furthering the Republican party.

The club, which has about 100 members from Westland, Northville, Plymouth, Ann Arbor, Birmingham, Bloomfield, and Novi, meets monthly on the fourth Thursday of the month at the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth.

Tickets for the event are $40 and may be obtained by calling Carolyn Molinosky at (616) 866-1321. A special invitation is extended to local elected Republic officials who will be given the opportunity to present the honoree with a certificate of recognition.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church will present "Walk Thru the Bible Learning Adventure" on Sunday, April 28.

Using a unique teaching method participants will integrate knowledge of all 39 books, 929 chapters and 23,214 verses of the Old Testament; meet the Bible characters; learn to "Walk Thru" 77 major events in less than three minutes; rekindle a desire to read the Bible and pray daily and apply yesterday's lessons to today's challenges, all in five hours.

Over this short period of time, participants will be able to recall from memory the key characters, places, events and themes of scripture.

Using hand motions, catch phrases and group review, participants will understand the scriptures as never before.

A "Together In Love" seminar with Ray Mossholder will be held April 28 through May 3 at Northville Christian Assembly. Mossholder believes you can overcome the obstacles to intimacy in marriage, poor communication, negative emotions, financial pressures and sexual issues. Divorce doesn't have to destroy a family.

The Together In Love seminar helps unlock key principles to restore, refresh, and help people enjoy the commitment couples have made to one another.

There are seven different topics presented and the public is encouraged to attend all or any one of the classes. Topics include: "God Can Heal Any Marriage," "Things Winners Have to Know," "Who's the Boss," "Love Talk," and "One Plus One Equals One."

Ray Mossholder has been teaching about marriage for 25 years, often with his wife Arlyne. Ray discovered this unique approach to resolving marital problems when his own marriage was crumbling after 12 unhappy years.

He is now an internationally known speaker, teacher and author of three bestselling books. More than 7,000 divorces have been canceled as a direct result of his seminar, and many who have attended his seminars feel he is an expert in how to divorce-proof any home.

Artist goes solo

By CAROL WORKENS
Staff Writer

There is a first time for everything. Linda McMillan's time is now.

Her first one-woman exhibit began April 17 at the Gate VI Gallery in the Novi Civic Center and continues through May 16.

McMillan, who lives in Novi with her husband, Bill, has chosen for the exhibit etchings, lithos, acrylics and sculptures in landscapes, people, objects and abstracts.

"It's a hard decision - there are so many things you want to show and only so much room," she said.

"I like the freedom you have with acrylics and the instant feeling," she said. "It's colorful and catches your eye."

McMillan has enjoyed art as long as she can remember.

"You can express yourself through your painting," she said.

While raising three children, now 25, 20 and 18, she painted porcelain dolls and taught art courses.

She went back to college and earned a bachelor of liberal arts degree with a fine arts major from Madonna University in 1993.

McMillan has been teaching children and adults watercolor, sculpture, acrylics, drawing, paper mache and soap sculpture at Novi Community Education for two years.

She is also employed as a secretary at Valassis Communications in the insert publishing department.

The soon-to-be first-time grandmother paints whenever she has free time.

Prior exhibitions include shows at First Presbyterian Church of Northville and the Ann Arbor Print Making Club, among others.

"To be spontaneous is great," she said. "You get much more feeling for the art and the environment and what you're looking at."

"It all comes very naturally," she said. "I don't sit down and plan it very much."

"Then I'll sketch it out and apply it to my canvas."

The Novi Civic Center is located at 45175 West Ten Mile Road in Novi.

Hours are Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. On the weekend, the gallery is open if the building is open.

For more information, call 380-0470.

'Fargo' is one of the year's best films

FARGO
BY HELAINE BINSTOCK
NOVI

Wow! Though it's still April, I'm certain this will be one of the year's best. Not often do writing, directing and performances combine to create a perfect comedy/tragedy. 'FARGO' easily slides back and forth from buffoonery to disaster. It works!

Jerry (William H. Macy) is a loser! He's executive sales manager on the car lot, only because his rich father-in-law owns the business. Jerry himself is definitely a non-achiever, and sadly realizes it. So, he undertakes to get rich quick "on his own."

Jerry's problem: he never does anything right. He plans a kidnapping of his wife to wangle a large ransom from his father-in-law.

READER MOVIE REVIEWS

But what he perceives to be a clever way to acquire fast money snowballs into multiple homicides. And why? Jerry hires two bungling, unprofessional thugs who screw up.

Conversations between the pregnant police chief (Frances McDormand) and her loving, unsuccessful, artist husband (whom she regularly bolsters) are magnificent. In fact, all dialogue is written and executed to perfection!

Severe Minnesota winters, impeccably displayed in this hard-to-believe true story, cleverly accentuate Jerry's relentless frustration in life. Macy is great!

RUMBLE IN THE BRONX
BY MIKE KAPUSKY
NORTHVILLE

What do you get when you take a touch of the three stooges, Bruce Lee, some unbelievable stunts, and mix it all together with cheesy acting and script? Well, if you said a Jackie Chan movie you guessed it.

If "Rumble in the Bronx" had a plot I might try to explain it here but instead how about this: New guy comes to New York (Jackie Chan) to visit his uncle and help out with his store, but gets in trouble with some local bad dudes, and then gets in trouble with some bigger bad dudes that wear black suits. When his friends get kidnapped, Chan comes to the rescue with style. Kind of fast and choppy, well that is one way of describing a Jackie Chan movie.

"Rumble in the Bronx" is not intended to be serious, it is an action-packed flick with a touch of humor, a lot of dubbing, and a plethora of speedy, fist flaring, quick kicking, furious fun. Jackie Chan can take a roll of toothpaste, a chair, or a fence and make heart-pounding, turbo-driven thrills breathe life from it. Just think what he can do with a Ferrari or a hovercraft.

The acting is almost unbearable, but the action is so pumped with adrenaline it does not matter. "Rumble in the Bronx" deserves nothing more than a sturdy three stars (based on five with five tops). Ignore the dubbing and the cheesy acting and it might be the most unique action to hit the big screen. Definitely worth a peek.

OLIVER & COMPANY
BY HEATHER WADOWSKI
NORTHVILLE

In my opinion, Walt Disney's classic "Oliver & Company" is the best Disney cartoon ever made. While the animation may not compare to "The Lion King," the humor, music and heart definitely outshines all of Disney's latest movies.

"Oliver & Company" is the story of an orphaned kitty (Oliver) who's taken in by a pack of city dogs, led by Dodger. But Oliver gets separated from Dodger and the Gang really soon, and ends up in the arms of a rich little girl named Jenny.

Now, Oliver is living life up as the richest cat in New York City until he is kidnapped by Dodger and the Gang. And soon, Oliver has to choose between the family who raised him, and the little girl who needs him.

Filled with tons of great music, such as Billy Joel's "Why Should I Worry?" and tons of humor, "Oliver & Company" receives five stars out of five, with five being absolutely outstanding.

If you've seen "Oliver & Company" before, see it again. And if you haven't, see it soon. You won't be disappointed!

Quirky comedy explores the nature of true beauty

Abby Barnes (Janeane Garofalo) should have it all. She's a veterinarian and successful host of her own radio talk show called "The Truth About Cats and Dogs," where she entertainingly dispenses useful advice to befuddled pet owners ("It's O.K. to love your pet, but you shouldn't love your pet," she tells a listener who's let his cat lick his face for hours, not surprisingly inducing a rash). Abby's smart, funny, and plays a mean violin. But she's not tall and blond — and routinely gets overlooked when it comes to romance.

Noelle Slusarsky (Uma Thurman) on the other hand, is tall and blonde. She's also kind, generous, and a little lost. Her career as a model isn't all that satisfying, and her relationships with men could provide fodder for a multi-part series on Oprah. Jenny and/or Ricki.

Enter Brian (Ben Chaplin), a photographer who finds himself on the wrong end of a roller skating Great Dane. He turns to radio host Abby for help, and he's charmed when she solves his snarling problem with a dose of common sense combined with disarming humor and grace.

Intrigued by Abby's beguiling charm, evident to him even over the radio airwaves, Brian invites her to meet him so he can thank her in person. Abby nearly agrees, that is until he utters those dreaded five words: "What do you look like?" Rather than suffer what she is sure will be another rejection, Abby describes herself as a tall blonde (who looks very much like her neighbor Noelle) and makes plans — with the intention of never keeping them — to meet Brian.

But the persistent and besmitten Brian seeks out Abby, finding her at work. A panicked Abby asks Noelle, who happens to be visiting Abby at the station, to assume Abby's identity, setting in motion an escalating series of comic and romantic crises. Without knowing what's hit him, Brian falls head over heels for someone who could very well be his perfect soul mate. But in the process, he's also going to discover the not so simple truth about the woman he loves.

That she's really not the woman he loves.

Twentieth Century Fox presents A Noon Attack Production. A Michael Lehmann Film. "The Truth About Cats and Dogs." The film is directed by Michael Lehmann, produced by Cari Esta Albert, and written by Audrey Wells. Richard Hashimoto and Audrey Wells are the executive producers.

Within the story's romantic comedy framework lies some intriguing looks at relationships, dating, the nature of true beauty and the infinite possibilities offered by love and friendship.

The film's often humorous and invariably thought-provoking themes can be traced back, in part, to one of our most popular and enduring works of theatre. Screenwriter and executive producer Audrey Wells credits

Ben Chaplin is Brian, who falls for the right woman but later finds out she's the wrong woman in "The Truth About Cats & Dogs."

Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" with planting the seeds that would grow into the screenplay for "The Truth About Cats & Dogs."

"Cyrano was poetic, witty, brilliant and brave, yet people could look no further than his giant nose," Wells points out. "His situation reminds me, frankly, of what women go through every day. In our beauty-obsessed society, in which a woman's looks are considered to be the measure of her worth, a woman doesn't need to have a grotesque feature like Cyrano's nose in order to be judged romantically unfit. The slightest deviation from the Madison Avenue ideal and she finds herself right in Cyrano's shoes.

Wells also explored our most pervasive sexual stereotypes. "I wanted to deal with this whole concept that states that plain women are not sexual and romantic and that beautiful women are not intelligent or trustworthy," Wells remarks, "and I wanted to turn these ideas on their heads. Abby, for example, is very sexualized in the movie."

Wells also drew upon her experiences as a disc jockey to come up with the notion of Brian falling for Abby, even though he's only heard her on the radio. My listeners were constantly fantasizing about what I looked like," she recalls.

One group of listeners was particularly imaginative and enthusiastic.

"I had a big fan club at San Quentin, and the prisoners were constantly writing me. They all thought I was something different — a gorgeous black woman, or tall and blond, or whatever. I remembered how much people assume about voices and they project whatever appearance they want with that."

Uma Thurman as Noelle Slusarsky and Janeane Garofalo as Abby Barnes as friends and neighbors who are enmeshed in romantic chaos in "The Truth About Cats & Dogs," a Twentieth Century Fox release.

Golfers edge Churchill 244-250

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Being good sometimes isn't as important as just being better than your opponent.

The Mustang golf team proved that point Thursday afternoon by beating Livonia Churchill 244-250 at Whispering Willows golf course. It wasn't great golf by Northville High, but it was good enough.

"It's definitely not where I'm comfortable," coach Trish Murray said of her team's score. "If we can stay 210 to 220, I'd like to stay in that range."

The Mustangs were a bit rusty coming back from Easter break. Murray said consistency is the main problem right now.

"We're having different swings every day," she added. "We're trying to get the feel (back)."

Monica Prasad shot a 54 to lead Northville. Emily Baldwin finished with a 61. Liz Krueger a 64 and Katie Culp shot 65.

Ideally, Murray wants all scores under 55.

"I'm really stressing course management," she said. "I want them to keep it in play."

NORTHVILLE 220, CENTRAL 254

The Mustangs played their first home match of the season on April 17.

Perhaps it was the familiarity of Fanglewood or just a better day, but the Mustangs played a much better round. Murray said the weather was much better that day, too.

"It was pretty nice," she said. "But cool."

Prasad had an excellent round of 43. Baldwin took 54 to complete the round. Laura Genitti racked up a 58 and Becky Rankin a 65.

Northville closed the week by playing in the East Lansing tournament. It was another long day for the Mustangs, however.

Northville shot 474 and finished last.

Ashley Ossola was second in the long jump against Farmington Hills Harrison.

Harrison rips runners in field for 73-55 win

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Not bad, but not great either. That's probably the best way to sum up Northville High's showing in Saturday's Novi Relays. The Mustangs won one event and finished fifth out of eight teams.

"I thought our girls ran well," coach Chris Cronin said.

Host Novi won the relays with 78 points. WLAA rival Farmington Hills Harrison was second with 70 points.

"Novi looked very impressive," said Cronin. "Their distance people are tough."

The Mustangs' lone first place came in the long jump relay. Meredith Reveal, Melissa Poole and Ashley Ossola combined for 46-feet 2-inches.

Northville was second in the sprint medley, which consisted of legs of 400, 200, 200 and 800 meters. Lauren Metaj, Poole, Nicole Weyer and Lori Delano ran that race.

The Mustangs were third in the 400-meter relay with Christina Chase, Weyer, Katie Rompel and Carrie Dalziel. Emily Howland, Poole, Rompel and Dalziel were third in the 800-meter relay.

HARRISON 73, NORTHVILLE 55

The Mustangs lost their second dual meet of the season Thursday, much the same way they lost the first one — in field events.

Farmington Hills simply dominated the shot put, discus and high jump to build a 26-1 lead.

"We beat them on the track," said Cronin, "but couldn't beat them in the field."

Until those problem areas come around, it'll be hard for the Mustangs to win a dual meet.

Cronin said he's hoping for improvement over the next few weeks.

Northville did do well in the long jump. Ossola took second place with a leap of 15-4 while Reveal was third at 15-3.

Mary Essary got Northville's only points in the high jump. She made it over 4-6 for third place.

In the 100-meter hurdles, Dana Chamotti was second in 18.4 and Chase third in 19.4.

Dalziel took second in the 100-meter dash in 13.7 while Poole was third in 14.1.

The team of Lisa Armstrong, Delano, Kajal Parikh and Amity Heckemeyer won the 3,200-meter relay in 11:04.

Karen Loeffler finished second in the 1,600-meter in 6:20. Chase, Essary, Rompel and Dalziel combined to win the 400-meter relay in 54.4.

In the 400-meter dash, Delano won in 1:09.4. Howland was third in 1:10.4.

Chase tried her hand at the 300-meter hurdles and ended up winning in 54.7.

"I was pleasantly surprised," said Cronin. "She's a real competitor."

Poole was second in the 200-meter in 29 seconds and Metaj was third in 30.2.

Parikh was second in the 800-meter race in 2:44 while Katie Spillane grabbed second in the 3,200-meter race with a time of 14:18.

In the 1,600-meter race, Ossola, Delano, Poole and Metaj won with a time of 4:51.

Tracksters finish third at Novi Relays; fall flat against Hawks

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

For most working folks, it's hard to get back in gear after a long vacation.

The same holds true for athletes. Northville High's boys' track squad had a substandard performance early last week against Farmington Hills Harrison.

Coach Dennis Faletti said the Mustangs were somewhat in the dumps after that meet, in fact. But a solid third place showing in Saturday's Novi Relays helped turn attitudes around.

"We ran a lot better," Faletti said. "Novi was a morale booster for our team."

Milan won the Relays with 77 points while host Novi was second at 72. The Mustangs had 56 points for third and beat out WLAA rivals Walled Lake Western and Farmington Hills Harrison.

"We ran a lot better. Novi was a morale booster for our team."

Northville won three events Saturday. The first came in the 800 meter relay as the team of Jim Clemens, Anel Kersey, Pat Gordon and Eric Moore ran a 1:34.6. Northville also won the sprint medley in 3:48.6 with Gordon, Clemens, Moore and Jon Woodsum.

The Mustangs' final victory came in the 3,200 meter relay. Rob Abbott, Luis Guajardo, Steve Weickel and Dwight VanTuyt ran a 8:54.6.

Northville totaled 57-feet 1 1/2-inches in the long jump relay. Eric Moore led the way at 20-3. Kersey jumped 19-5 and Matt Minard cleared 18-3.

The team of Bryce Edmonds, Bryan Grider and Ross Baker totaled 123-4 for third in the shot put. The mile relay team of John McInnis, Woodsum, Wes Morland and Gordon was third in 3:37.4.

HARRISON 75, NORTHVILLE 61

Northville ran at Farmington Hills Thursday and just didn't have it.

"I didn't think we performed real well coming off Easter break," said Faletti. "Both teams didn't do well."

The loss put a serious roadblock in Northville's hopes of a Western Division title. Faletti said the Mustangs have to hope Harrison loses while they win the rest of their meets.

As for a league title, well, that's an uphill battle, too. "John Glenn is the defending champion," said Faletti, "and still the team to beat."

As for the Harrison meet, the Hawks didn't dominate any one particular event. Farmington Hills had just the right combination of wins and places to take the meet, though.

Northville took second and third in the shot put. Grider had a throw of 40-4 3/4 while Edmonds went 39-11.

Grider came back to win the discus with a throw of 117-5 3/4. Eric Miller threw 95-2 3/4 for third.

In the pole vault, Ty Fowler was first at 10-6 and Guajardo third at 9-6. Moore placed second in the Tom Willerer overpowered Farmington Hills Harrison Friday.

The senior right hander struck out 10 Hawk batters in Northville's 4-2 home victory. According to Mustang Manger Mickey Newman, Willerer had a good fastball and curveball.

"He felt very strong," Newman said. "They had him on the (radar) gun at 86 miles per hour."

Despite how well he pitched the game was in doubt until late. Northville and Harrison each managed to scratch out a run through the first five innings.

In the bottom of the sixth, though, the Mustang bats came alive.

With Kyle Hitchcock on second base and two out, J.J. Zayti slapped a grounder to third base. The ball went off the infielder's glove and on into short left field.

Hitchcock flew around the bases and ended up scoring. Newman said he tried to hold the senior outfielder up at third.

But Hitchcock ran through the sign. Harrison's catcher got the throw in well before Hitchcock arrived, but dropped it and he was safe at the plate.

Zayti went to second on the play. Eric Swietlik followed with an RBI double and defensive specialist Tim Burke came through with an RBI single to make it a 4-1 ballgame.

Willerer showed signs of tiring in the sixth. Newman said he wanted to go to his bullpen for the seventh, but his right hander talked him into leaving him in.

Farmington Hills rallied for a run off Willerer in the seventh. But he got tough and ended up striking out a Hawk batter to end the game.

"It was a great game," said Newman.

The win improved Northville to 2-0 in the Western Division and 3-2 overall.

WESTLAND 10, NORTHVILLE 8
Poor defense killed the Mustangs April 17 on the road.

Northville committed seven errors and several wild pitches in losing the league game.

"It was an ugly effort defensively," said Newman.

The coach said nerves may have played a part in the miscues.

"It was our home opener," Newman said. "The kids were extremely nervous defensively and tried to do too much."

Northville led early on after a four-run first inning. Nate Forney had an RBI double and Bill Sekerka had two-run single to cap the rally.

The Mustangs started to kick the ball around in the third inning. Westland "chipped away" at Northville's lead and was ahead to stay by the sixth.

Tim Smojver started and took the loss. He pitched four innings. Forney was the silver lining to the game. He had three hits, including a solo home run, and four RBIs.

NORTHVILLE 6 WESTERN 5
The Mustangs opened the week on the road April 15.

Northville was in command all of the way, until the seventh inning, anyway.

Ahead 6-3, reliever Chris Shiftar got in trouble in the final frame. He hit a batter to start the seventh then a second batter reached base after striking out.

The right hander ended up surrendering two runs. Relief ace K. Yoshida came on to record the final out for a save.

Willerer started the game and got the win.

The Mustangs scored five runs in the second inning to blow the game open. Sekerka, Forney and Willerer each had run-producing hits.

No. 1 Troy Athens slaps kickers 5-0

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Troy Athens proved why it's the No. 1 soccer team in the state Friday night by whipping the Mustangs 5-0.

The Red Hawks dominated Northville over the last 60 minutes of the game to win going away. Coach Doug Lyon didn't make any excuses for his team.

"The effort wasn't there," he said. "We looked flat and like we didn't want to play soccer."

Northville held Athens scoreless in the first 20 minutes of the game. But Troy took over from that point and won easily.

"They were focused," Lyon said, "and very disciplined. It was nice soccer to watch."

The Red Hawks didn't have more soccer skills than Northville. But Troy was, perhaps, a bit fresher as the Mustangs were playing their third game in five days.

"They were beating us to the ball," Lyon admitted.

The only saving grace about the game was that it was non-league. Northville dropped to 5-2 overall.

CHURCHILL 3, NORTHVILLE 2
If you're looking for a contributing factor to Friday's performance, here it is.

The Mustangs played their biggest game of the year April 17 and came up on the short end. A pair of penalty shot goals in the first five minutes of the game turned out to be the difference.

Lyon was disappointed with the loss, but not at his team's effort.

"If we hadn't given them two penalty shots it was a 2-1 game."

"The effort wasn't there.

We looked flat and like we didn't want to play soccer."

DOUG LYON
Northville soccer coach

he commented.

Livonia star Maria Scappatala caused the penalty shots. Noted as one of the top players in the state, the speedy forward was pulled down twice in the penalty box area.

Lyon said the Mustangs focused almost too much on her.

"It made us nervous," he said. "We panicked when she got close to our goal."

To the Mustangs' credit, though, they fought back.

Brigid Bowdell made a 2-1 game at the midpoint of the first half. About two minutes later, the freshman set up Sue McQuaid's tying goal.

The game stayed tied well into the second half. But with about 10 minutes gone by, Scappatala drew Northville's defense towards her in the corner of the field.

She then placed a beautiful crossing pass and a teammate scored the game winner.

Lyon said last week's games were a "wake up" call.

"It was a slap in the face," he said. "But we needed something to get us focused. It's what we needed."

HOCKEY CHAMPS

The Livonia Knights Pee Wee AA hockey team captured the USA Hockey Tier Two National Championship with a 4-2 win over the California South Coast Sabres in Mentor, Ohio, on Sunday, April 14. The Knights won all six games in the tournament, scoring 41 goals and only allowing eight.

Strong defense and explosive offense were the keys in the tournament as Livonia defeated Providence, R.I., 8-1; Cleveland, Ohio, 7-1; Highland Park, Ill., 5-1; Ithaca, N.Y., 9-2; and Arlington, Mass., 8-1 on their way to the title game.

Northville residents Joe Hillebrand and Jim Spiewak play forward for the Knights, and Ryan Yost, who attends Our Lady of Victory School in Northville, plays defense. The Livonia goalies are Bobby Pruchnik and Kevin Marlowe, the other defensemen are Erik Reitz, Derek Martin, Sean Szostak and Nathan Jakubowski.

The other forwards are Bryan Marshall, Bobby Zagata, Sean Smith, Patrick Lerg, Kevin Krogol, Mike Walsh, Shaun McDonnell. Head coach Dan Lerg is assisted by Bill Smith and Ron Griffin, and the team is managed by Angie Krogl.

BOWLING

Local Northville Commons bowler, Barb Reichard, excelled in bowling by receiving the triplicate award. She bowled a 121 three games in a row on Wednesday, April 17, at the Northville-Nowi Women's League at Novi Bowl. She didn't choke under pressure in the 10th frame and showed her bowling skill to achieve this feat.

NORTHVILLE TRAVEL BASEBALL

The travel team for 9-year-olds (Aug. 1, 1986, and younger) will enter six tournaments beginning Memorial Day and ending early to mid August.

Tryouts are scheduled for Sunday, April 28, at 5 p.m. and Monday, April 29, at 6 p.m. at Henningson South.

If you are interested in this team and expect to attend the tryouts, please contact Jim Cicala at (810) 347-4598.

GOLF OUTING

Eighteen holes of challenging golf, support for student scholarships and auction items that feature Red Wings autographed jerseys or golf weekends in northern Michigan await duffers who participate in the Schoolcraft College Foundation's 13th annual golf tournament.

The tournament is scheduled for Monday, June 10, at the Washtenaw Country Club. Golfers can opt for a morning package, an afternoon package, hole sponsorship or President's Club level participation, each including a pro clinic.

The proceeds from last year's outing provided scholarships for more than 300 students, many of whom would not have attended college without this help.

Among the special items for auction is a dinner cooked in your home by Gary Ellis, the Schoolcraft graduating senior in culinary arts who will be Gov. Engler's summer cook at the Governor's Mansion on Mackinac Island.

Other auction items include autographed jerseys from Detroit Red Wings hockey stars Steve Yzerman, Paul Coffey and Sergei Fedorov, golf package weekends for two at Grand Traverse Resort and Shanty Creek and a set of custom made golf clubs.

There is still time to sign up for a hole sponsorship, place an ad in the banquet program or donate a raffle prize. For information, call the Office of Marketing and Development at (313) 462-4417.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all-state to qualify. Much of this money goes unused.

Netters dominate Warren tourney

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

Rarely in the annals of Northville High athletics has a Mustang team so dominated an event like the tennis squad did Saturday.

The netters won seven of eight flights, 23 of 24 matches at the Warren Mott Invitational. Even venerable coach Dick Norton was a bit surprised.

"That was even better than my wildest dreams," he said. "We've never dominated to that point where we won all but one flight."

A combination of so-so competition and excellent play from his squad accounted for Northville's showing.

"The competition wasn't as good as I would've liked," Norton said. Northville had 21 points to win the tournament. U of D Jesuit was a distant, distant second with 12 points.

Considering the gusty weather conditions, Northville's performance is even more impressive. The high winds, which made serving very difficult, actually may have aided the Mustangs.

"We're used to playing in wind," Norton said. "Our guys adjusted better than the competition."

All of the Mustangs played three matches and made it to the finals. Dave Anderson took the No. 1 singles championship. He beat Birmingham Groves' Adam Cohen 6-4, 6-3 in the final.

Ravi Mujumdar earned the second singles title. Mike Bush defeated Anand Thkur of U of D Jesuit for the third singles title.

Arjun Srinivasan lost in the finals in straight sets to U of D's Bill Crandall at fourth singles.

Nick Sriraman and Ganesh Nayakwadi took a two set victory in the finals of No. 1 doubles. The Mustang duo survived a three set match in the opening round to advance.

Rohit Jha and Ryan Steinhauer took the title at second doubles. Matt Thompson and Yusuke Ishigami won a third doubles championship. Norton said the sophomore combination will be around for a long time - together.

Rory Dunnabeck and Jared Cromas beat Dave Hall and Evan Collins of U of D in the finals of fourth doubles.

WLAA MATCHES

Northville opened its league season last week with a pair of easy wins over Westland John Glenn and Canton.

The Mustangs beat John Glenn Friday 8-0. Norton juggled his lineup a bit, but it didn't matter much in terms of the final outcome.

Singles winners included Anderson, Bush, Srinivasan and Nayakwadi.

In doubles action, Cromas and Thompson paired to win at No. 1. Other winners included Axel Von Freyhold and Dunnabeck, Anish Shah and Steve Rietzke, Andy Otterman and Paul Stachura.

Northville blanked Canton 8-0 on April 17 on the road.

Singles winners were Anderson, Mujumdar, Bush and Srinivasan. Nayakwadi and Sriraman, Jha and Steinhauer, Thompson and Ishigami, Cromas and Andy Williams were all doubles winners.

Ravi Mujumdar won the title at No. 2 singles in Saturday's Warren Mott Invitational.

Softballers trounce Farmington Hills 14-2

By SCOTT DANIEL
Sports Editor

It's amazing what solid defense will do for a softball team.

For Northville, it meant an easy 14-2 road victory over Farmington Hills Harrison Friday. Coach Karen Baird said her team is begging to settle down both in the field and at the plate.

"People are getting comfortable," she added. Early season jitters and Easter break are finally behind Northville now. Baird said she also has a better feel for the team.

Whatever the case, the Mustangs played a strong game Friday.

A six-run second inning all but decided the contest. Three straight walks to Sara Roth, Jenny Sheehan and Mandy Sabo loaded the bases.

Ern Tovey then picked up an easy RBI with another walk. Sarah Johnson followed with an RBI single and Jenny Frisbee added a two-run double.

"She's been hitting the ball great," Baird said of the senior second basewoman. "She's been very disciplined at the plate."

Six runs were more than pitcher Michelle Menghini needed. She allowed just four Hawk hits while walking one and striking out three.

Baird said solid team defense aided the hurler's effort.

"Our defense looked the beat against Harrison," she said, "both infield and outfield. We didn't let anything get by us."

JOHN GLENN 4, NORTHVILLE 1

The Mustangs managed just three hits in losing to Westland on the road April 17.

Northville made just two errors in the game, but both were costly. Both occurred in the fifth inning and helped push two Rocket runs across.

"When you have a tight game every hit counts, every error counts," said Baird.

Northville simply couldn't recover from the miscues. The silent day at the plate wasted a good outing by Andrea Moretti, who pitched six innings, striking out six, allowing just four hits and two walks.

Northville's lone run came in the sixth inning. Menghini had an RBI double.

NORTHVILLE 14, WESTERN 7

Baird got her first coaching victory April 15 at home against Walled Lake.

The Warriors just about handed it to her on a silver platter. Northville collected 15 walks off of Western pitchers.

Frisbee led the offensive attack. She had two hits, two RBI and scored twice.

Johnson pitched. She went all seven innings and allowed nine hits and four walks. She struck out six.

Despite the win, Baird wasn't totally pleased. Four Northville errors in the fourth inning led to that sentiment.

"We should've been a little sharper," she said.

long jump at 20.3 while Josh Minard cleared 5-6 for second in the high jump.

A time of 12 seconds was good for second place in the 100-meter dash for Clemens. The team of Morland, Clemens, Kersey and Eric Moore won the 400-meter dash in 46.5.

In the 400-meter dash, Gordon was first in 52.9 seconds. Gino Peters placed third in the 300-meter hurdles in 46.2 seconds.

Northville went one-two in the 800-meter with Woodsum (2:16) and Guajardo (2:17.1).

In the 200-meter, Moore was second in 23.8. The 3,200-meter saw VanTuyll take third place in 11:00. The senior came back to win the 1,600-meter in 4:52.7 while Weickel finished in 4:55. Northville also won the 1,600-meter relay in 3:45.3 with the team of McInnis, Guajardo, Woodsum and Gordon.

Northville is now 1-1.

Children should wear bike helmets

By DR. TOM DEEGAN
Special Writer

With the arrival of spring, we will soon see the trees budding, the grass turning green again and the flowers blooming.

However, for some families, it will mean unplanned trips to the emergency room for treatment of their injured child. Though accidents will always occur, there are some things we can do to prevent many injuries.

Approximately 300,000 children are injured each year while riding their bikes. Some of these injuries will result in death; 70-80 percent of these deaths are due to head injuries.

In Seattle, the impact of bike helmets has been studied extensively. It has been shown that with the proper use of bike helmets, 85 percent of all bike related head injuries could have been prevented.

It is not only important for children to wear bike helmets, it is also important for parents to realize that to be effective bike helmets must fit properly. Additionally, helmets should be replaced if a significant impact has occurred, even if the helmet appears intact.

Though bicycling has been enjoyed for many decades, in-line skating or "rollerblading" has proliferated over a very short time. It is estimated that approximately 19 million people over the age of five have rollerbladed at least once. This popular form of recreation has resulted in a tremendous number of injuries.

A recent study in Chicago examined the types of injuries associated with rollerblading and made recommendations on how to prevent many of them. Though scrapes and cuts were common, almost 50 percent of rollerblading injuries resulted in fractures, most commonly of the wrist. The use of wrist guards was shown to significantly reduce the incidence of injury.

Six percent of patients studied suffered significant head injuries or concussions, none of the head injured patients had been wearing a helmet. Therefore, when purchasing rollerblades for your child, make sure to include protective gear on your shopping list.

Baseball is another favorite warm weather pastime. The use of batting helmets has reduced the risk of head injuries or concussions. However, baseball continues to be the leading cause of sports related eye injuries. In response, in 1984, the Sports Eye Safety Committee of the National Society to Prevent Blindness recommended that batters wear helmets with face protectors. Unfortunately, very few leagues use them.

Encouraging your child's baseball league to use only helmets with face protectors would greatly reduce the likelihood of eye injuries.

Accidental burns also increase during the warmer weather of spring and summer. The use of barbecue grills and bonfires require careful supervision of children in the surrounding area. Even small burns can cause disfiguring scars that can interfere with the function of the burned extremity, especially on the hands.

An even more dangerous source of burns in children is caused by the use of illegal fireworks such as firecrackers. Even legal fireworks, such as sparklers, require very close supervision by a responsible adult.

In the interest of protecting our children from accidental injuries that can accompany many of our favorite recreational activities this spring and summer, let's all think injury prevention

Most serious form of skin cancer is melanoma

More than 1 million Americans will develop skin cancer this year. The most serious form of skin cancer is melanoma. Melanoma is characterized by the uncontrolled growth of pigment (melanin) producing cells in the skin. Melanomas may suddenly appear without warning or may develop from or near a mole. They can occur anywhere on the body.

As melanoma grows deeper into the skin, it may spread to other organs and may result in death. But if detected in the early stages, melanoma usually can be treated surgically with very high cure rates.

The incidence of melanoma continues to rise at a rate faster than any other human cancer. In 1935, one in 1,500 people developed the disease. By the year 2000, a projected one in 75 will be affected. Approximately 38,000 new cases will be diagnosed in the United States this year, resulting in approximately 7,300 deaths - one death every 72 minutes.

Melanoma is the most common type of cancer in women between 25 and 29 years of age, and it is second only to breast cancer in women between the ages of 30 to 35.

Excessive exposure to ultraviolet radiation is the most important preventable cause of melanoma and all types of skin cancer. Excessive sun exposure and a history of sunburns, especially during childhood, are associated with the development of melanoma. The risk is increased if an individual has many moles, large or unusual moles, a family history of melanoma, or fair skin and light hair.

If detected and treated early, melanoma often can be cured. Melanoma often begins as a mottled, light brown to black flat lesion with irregular borders. The lesion is usually greater than 6 millimeters in diameter (the size of a pencil eraser). Melanomas often turn black with shades of red, white and blue and may crust on the surface and bleed.

Any changing mole or a new mole that begins to change in size, shape or color requires prompt medical attention. The earliest symptom is persistent itching, and eventually melanomas may begin to bleed. The American Academy of Dermatology recommends a regular self-examination of the skin to detect changes in appearance, especially changes in existing or new moles.

While melanoma can be prevented, many adults already have overexposed their skin to ultraviolet light. Avoidance of excessive unprotected sun exposure is the best form of prevention. Peak sunlight hours when the sun's ultraviolet rays are most intense usually occur from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 should be applied 15 to 30 minutes before going outdoors and reapplied every two hours, especially when playing, gardening, swimming or doing any outdoor activities.

Alternatively, protective clothing can be worn, including a wide-brim hat, a long-sleeve shirt and pants.

If we learn the early warning signs of skin cancer, conduct self-examinations, and protect our children from excessive sun exposure, we can decrease this ever-growing epidemic.

The Bobolink offers plenty of room to grow

By James McAlexander
Copley News Service

If you have a large family that needs plenty of room to fit your busy lifestyle, the two-story, 3,107-square-foot Bobolink might be the house you are searching for. This incomparable floor plan, designed for ease of movement throughout, features many gathering places for the family and friends.

The long entry hall leads directly into the raised living room, the focal point of the first floor. You and your guests can bask in the warmth of the fireplace while relishing a spirited game of cards or watching a favorite television program.

If the weather is agreeable, step right out onto the back deck for a barbecue, or just to soak up some sunshine.

The walk-through kitchen provides the cook of the house an excellent overview of the goings-on while meals are being prepared. In addition to the built-in appliances and pantry, the convenience of a utility room is adjacent to the kitchen.

This allows you to bring groceries directly into the kitchen without regard to weather conditions. A half bath is nearby.

Formal meals may be served in the dining room, which has a bank of windows to take in the view. Breakfast or less-formal meals may be eaten in the sky-lit nook, which has plenty of windows and access to the back deck.

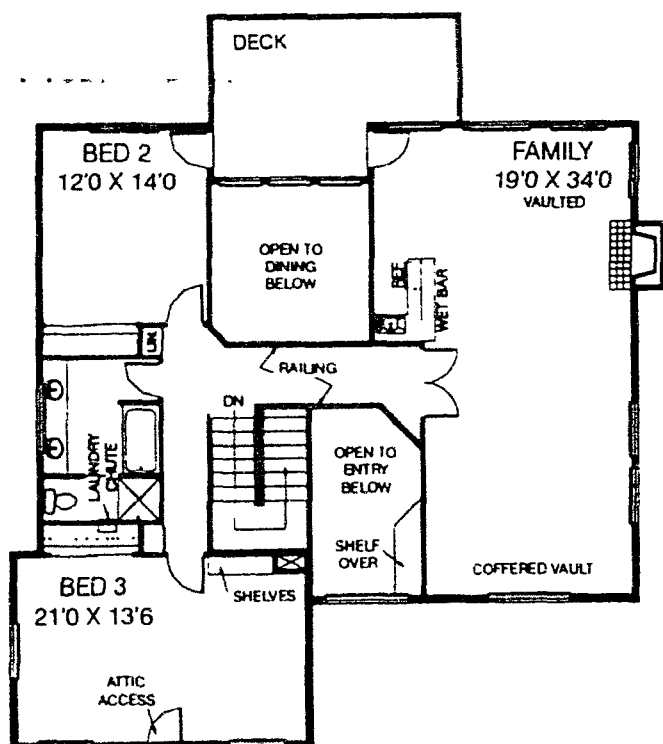

The remainder of the first floor is taken up by the luxurious master suite. Isolated for privacy, this elegant room features an enormous walk-in closet and private bathroom.

The second floor is arranged around two areas that are open to the first floor. Both at the head of the stairs, one to the dining room and one to the entry, have railings that let you safely glimpse the action below.

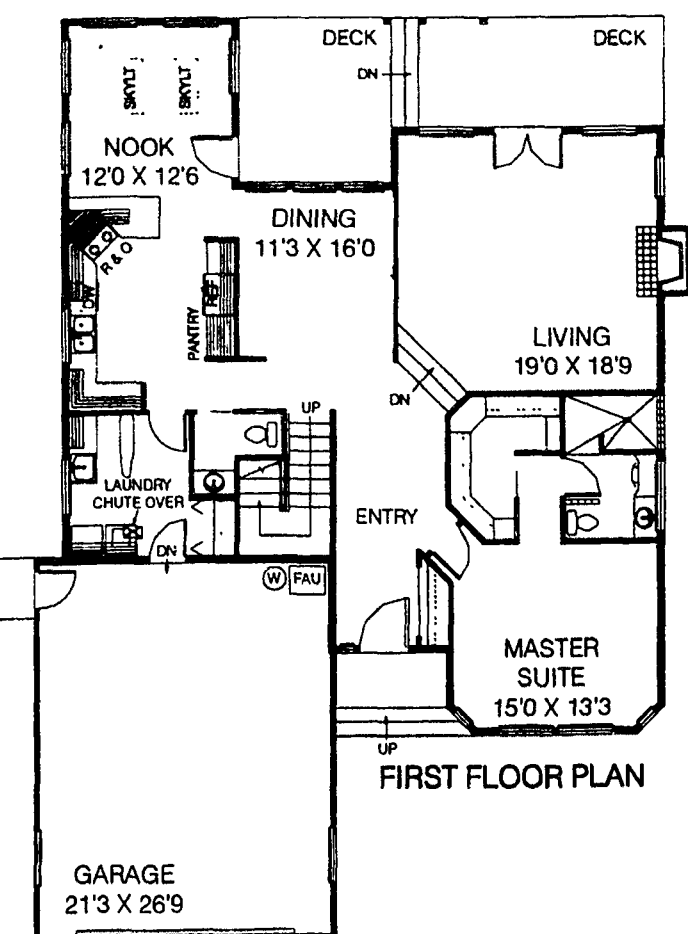

A roomy, vaulted family room highlights this floor. With windows galore, a fireplace and a wet bar, this is the place to gather for fun.

Two bedrooms, with a full bath separating the two, complete this floor plan.

FORM & FUNCTION

Landscape can be attractive and practical

An attractive, functional landscape takes planning. Designing an attractive, practical landscape populated largely by edible plants is possible but can be complicated.

It still starts with a plan, says Curt Peterson, Michigan State University horticulture specialist.

"A landscape plan includes specific goals for the landscape - what you want it to do for you, whether that's provide privacy, enhance the appearance and value of your home, provide for outdoor living space - whatever," he says. "Then you need to determine what role you want plants to play in that plan. Then you can start looking for plants with edible parts that will meet your landscaping needs."

Fruit-bearing plants from strawberries to grapevines to apple or pear trees, nut trees, perennial vegetables (asparagus, rhubarb, Jerusalem artichokes) and annual vegetables may all have their niche in the landscape. Like other landscape ornamentals, they should be chosen on the basis of their mature size, the function you want them to perform, their susceptibility to pests and diseases, their hardiness, their adaptability to growing conditions in your yard, and their ornamental characteristics - shape, blossoming time, foliage color, fruit and flower color, etc.

With edible plants, productivity is another concern. That may be related to variety, hardiness (in some years, peach trees, for instance, may be killed by cold temperatures), planting site, availability of other varieties for pollination (especially true of apple trees and nuts) and depredations by wildlife that will want to harvest your crop for you (without protection against birds, you may never harvest a cherry from a backyard tree).

Productivity often depends on maintenance. Pruning, winter protection against gnawing rodents and deer, and spraying to control diseases and insect pests make fruit trees a high-maintenance addition to the landscape. Failure to control insects such as apple maggot may turn a backyard apple tree from a delight to a nuisance that carpets the lawn with bug-infested apples and perfumes the backyard with an apple vinegar stink.

Perennial vegetables such as asparagus and rhubarb, on the other hand, need only weed control, watering and an occasional dose of fertilizer - the same sort of maintenance you'd give non-edible ornamentals.

The feathery ferns of the asparagus find a strong contrast in the large leaves of the rhubarb and turn a warm golden yellow in the fall. Another perennial, Jerusalem artichoke, produces a wealth of yellow sunflower-type blossoms in late summer.

Strawberries can be part of a perennial or mixed flower bed or serve as a ground cover in a sunny, out-of-the-way spot. Annual vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, bush squash varieties and snap beans can mingle with annual or perennial flowers in sunny beds and borders.

"With a well thought out plan and carefully selected plants," Peterson says, "an edible landscape can be beautiful, functional and productive."

Good soil means good garden

By C.Z. Guest
Copley News Service

Every gardener dreams of a garden bursting with succulent vegetables and glorious flowers spring through fall.

To cut down on the weeding, watering and fertilizing necessary to make that dream come true, garden from the ground up and properly prepare the soil.

AMENDING EXISTING BEDS

Unless you are planting a large area, hand dig peat moss into existing vegetable and flower beds. Be careful not to disturb plant roots. For best results, dig 1 inch of peat moss into the top 6 inches of soil to condition the beds for existing plants or new transplants.

Checklist for creating new garden beds:

- Outline the area for your new garden bed with string.
- Cut away the sod, saving it for lawn patches or the compost pile.
- Dig or rototill 2 inches of peat moss into the top 6 or 8 inches of soil.
- Consider adding organic matter, such as compost, for nutrients.
- Add bedding plants, perennials or seeds.
- Water gently over a period of one to two weeks.

GARDENING

WHY PLANTS FAIL

The most common causes of plant failure are:
Planting too deep.
Planting too shallow.
Poor drainage.
Infertile soil.
Drought and spray damage.
Foreign material in the soil.

Always set plants at the same depth. Make sure the roots are covered; if they're too shallow, the sun will bake the roots, and plants usually die immediately. If planted too shallow in the fall, frost can heave the roots of perennials right out of the ground. Foreign materials in the soil, such as buried concrete, around newly built dwellings restrict root growth, and a plant may die.

Compacted or hardpan soil can kill plants because excess water simply won't drain away, and roots cannot penetrate hardpan soil. Infertile soil may also kill plants. Some soil is so poor that it will not let anything grow except weeds.

The best remedy is to deeply till the soil, fertilize it and plant a cover crop, such as white clover. Plant this cover crop in spring and plow under in fall. Several years of

Sick soils equal sick plants

■ Some signs of soil problems: slow-growing and skinny plants, plants don't set fruit properly, reddish-purple or yellow leaves, weak stems, bitter-tasting vegetables.

■ Be sure your soil type and moisture levels are right for the plants you intend to grow. Have soil analyzed and consult with your county extension service.

■ Dig or rototill 2 inches of peat moss into the top 6 inches of soil. If possible, add organic matter such as compost.

■ Poor soils can be improved by deeply tilling, fertilizing and planting soil-enriching crops such as clover.

■ Other common causes of plant failure: planting too deep, planting too shallow, poor drainage, infertile soil, drought, spray damage, contaminated soil.

Sewing cabinet is worth nearly $200

By Anne McCollam
Copley News Service

Q. Enclosed is a picture of my mother's sewing cabinet that is at least 40 years old. The bottom drawer swings out to reveal an area to store spools of thread and other sewing items. There is no manufacturer's mark anywhere on the cabinet.

What is its value?

A. Sewing cabinets were popular in the first half of the 20th century. The style of your cabinet was inspired by colonial furniture. It was not unusual for furniture to be unmarked. Many had paper labels that have been lost to time.

ANTIQUES

Your cabinet was made in the mid-1900s. Its value would probably be $175 to $200.

Q. I still have a blue Beatles Thermos that I had in elementary school. On one side there is a picture of the four Beatles in white jackets. Each Beatle is holding a musical instrument. On the other side are their pictures and signatures. It holds a half pint and has a light blue plastic cup cap.

The words "Aladdin Industries Inc., Nashville, Tennessee — 1965" are on the thermos.

It is in perfect condition. Does it have any value?

A. Who would have thought that "Beatlemania" would have endured more than 30 years? Your thermos is listed in "The Beatles Memorabilia Price Guide" by Augburger, Eck and Rann at $150 in mint condition. It was originally sold with a lunch box or brunch bag.

Technology changing face of real estate

By James M. Woodard
Copley News Service

The explosive growth in computer technology is dramatically changing the way people buy and sell real estate, impacting both consumers and real estate professionals.

For consumers, it's no longer top priority to find a house close to a central city employer. If an employee's firm is in the central core area of a major city, new technology allows an increasing number of employee families to enjoy the superior lifestyle as residents in small towns or rural settings.

Much of the employee's work can be telecommunicated to the firm's office, reducing the number of commuting trips to perhaps one or two per week.

And that's precisely what is happening in an increasing number of cases, according to Realtors.

This trend is great for families looking for a way to escape the big-city jungle.

REAL ESTATE

But it's not so great for owners and developers of those big intracity office buildings. The vast office space needed a few years ago for many full-time employees isn't needed anymore, as employees opt to spend time behind computers in a home office.

"As the rapid emergence and expansion of technology enables businesses to use less real space and more cyberspace, firms with large property holdings in central business districts could risk severe value reduction unless they take action soon," said Barry Libert, real estate expert with Arthur Andersen Real Estate Services Group.

"The economics that drove the development of real estate for the past three decades aren't there in today's information age," he said. "In the old days, all business was done in buildings. But today's companies are expanding globally, using fewer people to do more work in less space with the help of electronic connections."

Location — a business's proximity to customers — no longer drives the bottom line, according to Libert. Businesses can now reach customers, bankers, even the assembly lines, via their "infrastructure," not just infrastructure, he said.

"Not only do industries need less space to do business, they hold real estate investments worth billions that could fall in value as more companies put real estate on the selling block. About 10 percent of the country's estimated $4 trillion worth of commercial real estate could be negatively impacted."

The Internet, now used most frequently by younger, computer-savvy buyers, is wiping out technical and geographic barriers to information sharing, Tuccillo noted.

"More and more young home buyers are doing advance research on properties and coming to Realtors to complete the transaction. This, in turn, is fueling interest in unbundled, fee-for-service payment options where the client chooses from and pays for a broad menu of services. Five years from now, you will be as proficient on the computer as you are on the telephone."

More people will be shopping for real estate via the Internet in future months, according to an NAR research report. Realtors will need to offer "home pages" (on-line information sources) that are topical, exciting and continually updated.

Realtor John Peckham pointed out that on-line services will substantially reduce the time and costs involved in closing a real estate transaction.

Jerry Beebe, president of a regional association of Realtors, agrees that it's essential for real estate brokers to be computer-savvy in today's brokerage industry.

"You just can't exist as a successful broker in today's world if you're not competent and using methods of high-tech communications," he said. "Persons who are new to the brokerage business seem to be the most progressive and most likely to use state-of-the-art tools of the trade."

Questions may be used in future columns; personal responses should not be expected. Send inquiries to James M. Woodard, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190.

Garden from the ground up, beginning with good soil

this practice will add enough humus and nutrients to the soil to support plants. This way the soil will be fertile and healthy once again.

Drought can kill plants. Few plants, trees and shrubs can get by with less than 20 inches of rainfall each year.

Unfortunately, even evergreens or other well-established plants 10 or more years old can be killed in a drought. Remember, water your ornamental plants every few days if you don't have rain.

Spray drift kills plants, too. This type of damage often occurs in small towns or near the edge of large towns where farmers spray crops with chemicals. The spray can drift several miles on a windy day. There isn't much you can do about this. However, I do suggest visiting the farmers and convincing them the way to go is with an organic soap spray. Chemicals are no longer acceptable, and it's about time they know it.

SIGNS OF PROBLEMS IN THE SOIL

Your garden soil has a way of telling you it needs attention. Slow growth and skinny plant stems may be a sign of nitrogen deficiency, especially if the leaves are fading and yellow. If growth is slow and plants don't set fruit and mature properly and the undersides of leaves are a reddish-purple color, the problem could be phosphorus deficiency. If older leaves turn yellow at the edges and the plants are stunted with weak stems, they may not be getting enough potassium.

Bitter-tasting vegetables are a sign of boron deficiency; this is common after three to four straight years of cultivation. Don't forget to rotate your vegetable beds every few years. This practice keeps a buildup of insects, bugs and disease at bay, and you'll have a clean, healthy, happy garden.

SPRING TIP

To avoid leggy, spindly seedlings:

Sow thinly. If leaves overlap when seedlings sprout, thin immediately.

seedlings emerge.

Do not overwater.

Keep temperatures on the cool side once seedlings emerge; growth will be slower, but plants will be sturdier.

Provide good air circulation.

Time Is Money!

How long does it take to sell a home?
As a property owner planning to sell, you'll need the answer to that question.
Fortunately, the answer is readily available - from your sales agent.

Have you ever noticed that a stock prospectus states that future stock values cannot be predicted? The prospectus then goes on to outline the historical increases in the stock's value in other words, while history cannot guarantee the future outcome, it's value is nevertheless significant.

How can the sale time of a home be predicted? Again, historical data is the most likely source. Ask your agent to provide the sale time of all homes which have sold in your area over the past year. The numbers are readily available from the agent's local Multiple Listing Service records.

Before beginning an analysis of the sale times provided, throw out the longest and shortest sales times. Next, average the rest. The result will give you a "ballpark" historical summary of recent sale times. From this figure, it is possible to predict with some accuracy the time it will take to sell your home.

Are there any other factors which may affect the projected sale time?
Definitely. The condition of your home can either make or break your predicted sale time. Offer your home in peak condition and buyers may compete to own it. Offer it without needed repairs and improvements, and it may be badly ignored.

The best advice for selling in a reasonable length of time is to price it fairly, offer it in top condition, and consider each offer carefully. The marketing plan implemented by your agent will further insure an early sale.

Turning temp job into a business

By ANN SEEBALDT GOGOLIN
Special Writer

Ron Clancy started cleaning windows years ago in Detroit in order to pay for his schooling. It was supposed to be a temporary job, but turned into the business of a lifetime.

"When I was in Detroit, I did a one-year apprenticeship to become a journeyman window cleaner," he said. "I did just about every building in Detroit, I think."

This experience gave him the ability to clean windows in high-rise buildings.

In 1961, Clancy decided to start his own cleaning business in the Milford-Highland area.

"I started my business here at a time when there was nothing out here and was received very well," he said. "I guess our business grew up with the communities."

"We've changed the name several times, but we've always been in Milford and Highland," Clancy said.

He plans to stay in the area which he says is experiencing "phenomenal growth. These two communities have been good to me."

Clancy's Window Cleaning and Building Maintenance Inc. also serves nearby communities such as Howell, Brighton, Wixom, Walled Lake and Union Lake.

"We do cover a large area for our window cleaning," he commented.

"We do a lot of residential window cleaning and we're very good at it."

Ron, and his son, Bruce, clean the windows of more than 300 residences per year. The window cleaning season begins in April, Clancy said, that it usually takes two to three weeks after an estimate for them to come out for a new customer.

"We don't do a lot of high-rise buildings," he said.

The equipment Ron and Bruce use for window cleaning include extension and section ladders, squeegees, sponges, "Dazzle" (a biodegradable cleaning fluid), and trisodium phosphate (TSP).

The services that Clancy and his staff offer include window cleaning for commercial and residential buildings. The maintenance portion does not include repairs, as one might think, said Clancy.

"Actually, what it amounts to is janitorial service," he added. His business will undertake power washing of decks, commercial buildings and homes. Another service of Clancy's is cleaning new construction sites.

He and his son, Bruce, do the window cleaning. The janitorial services are conducted by custodians Cory Fletcher, Candee Gillespie, Jeff Hickson and Joan Skaggs. Diane Brown, who has served as the business secretary for nine years, keeps everything running smoothly, Clancy said.

Bruce (in hat) and Ron Clancy clean windows across the western Oakland County area.

Estimates are free. They usually charge on a per-project basis, but will work on an hourly rate. The rates for his business services vary because it depends on the type and number of windows which need cleaning.

"We go according to what the client wants," he said. "It all works out the same anyway."

As a member of both the Highland Business Association and the Huron Valley Area Chamber of Commerce, he tries to stay active in area fund raisers.

He has participated in several golf outings, such as a Joel/Jeremy Memorial Fund fund raiser as well as an event to benefit the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP).

Clancy's Window Cleaning and Building Maintenance, Inc. is located at 1360 Milford Rd. directly north of Lone Tree Road in Highland Plaza.

OUTDOOR
ENHANCEMENTS

Extras make yard more inviting

By Priscilla Lister

Copley News Service

Every element in your garden should be as well-planned as your home if you wish to make the most of your very own piece of the outdoors.

Some additions to your garden may not only give it personal character and charm, but may also literally invite you to spend more time in it. These additions include the obvious ones of furniture and barbecues. But some touches you may not have considered could transform your outside space into a virtual personal paradise.

"Whether formal or informal, the rule is to plan the garden as a collection of individual pictures or theatrical scenes, each of them an 'eye-catcher,'" says Robin Williams in "Garden Design: How to Be Your Own Landscape Architect" (Reader's Digest Books).

To create these scenes, first ponder what purposes you want your garden to have, then create the best atmospheres for those purposes. Here are some common garden elements that help do that.

STRUCTURAL
ENHANCEMENTS

Walls and even fences need not be strictly territorial boundaries. When you plant them with climbing, flowering plants, they can be literally transformed into beautiful garden features.

"Often an undervalued space in the garden, any structurally sound fence or wall will provide a good surface against which to grow a range of plants," says Pippa Greenwood in "The New Gardener: The Practical Guide to Gardening Basics" (Dorling Kindersley).

"In addition, the shelter provided by a solid barrier such as a wall may well allow you to grow more tender plants than would otherwise be possible."

Fruit trees, in particular, thrive if planted close to the protection and support of a sunny wall or fence, she adds.

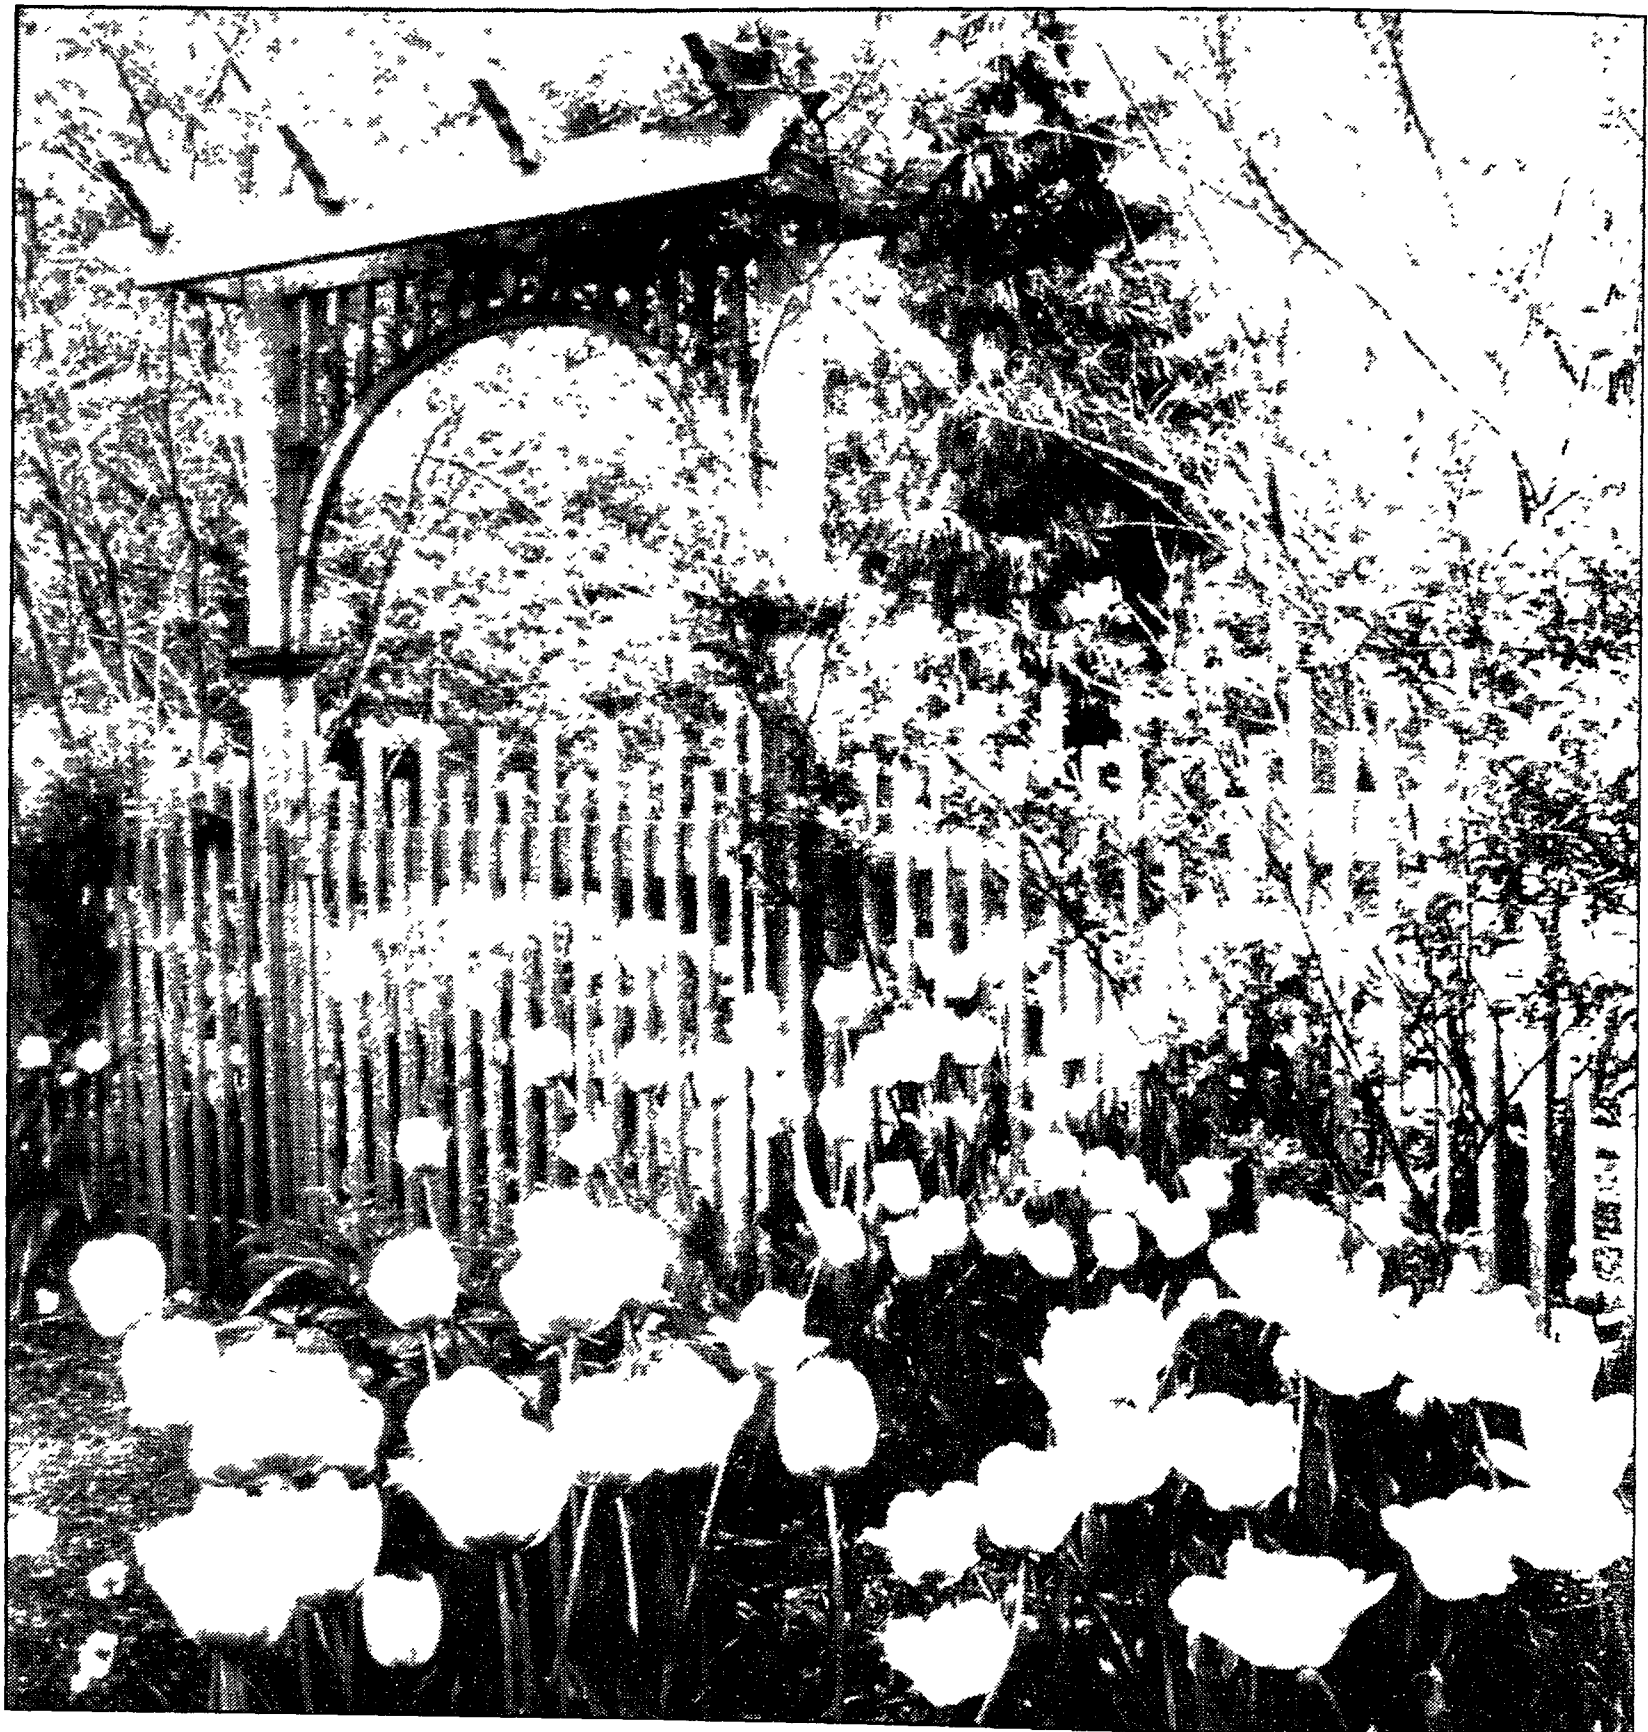

There are other such structures that don't define your boundaries, however, that can be equally transforming: screens, arches and pergolas.

A screen can be as simple as a single trellis panel, planted on both sides with climbing plants, both flowering and foliage.

"Ornamental screens can be used to hide eyesores from view, to break up a long, thin garden into a series of garden 'rooms,' or simply to increase available planting area," says Greenwood.

Arches and pergolas, also potential canvases for climbing plants, can make perfect foils for dining tables, as they frame a location that otherwise wouldn't be apparent, or can be used to link parts of the garden. A pergola refers to a series of two or more interconnecting arches, leading from one part of a garden to another.

"It can also be used to frame a view as well as to divide a garden into two or more sections, to provide shade and a sense of privacy or enclosure, and to create a framework for planting in a confined area," says Tim Newbury in "The Ultimate Garden Designer" (Ward Lock, London).

All these structures can be made from virtually any material that will enhance your garden: wood, brick, rocks, wrought iron or a combination of materials. Many such structures can be purchased already constructed, or can be constructed relatively easily.

WATER FEATURES

in a garden as a pool, pond, waterfall or fountain.

"Water in the garden has a peculiar fascination, which is shared by young and old alike, whether it be tumbling over rocks and splashing into a pool alive with the red and yellows of goldfish, or in some sheltered nook supporting the broad verdant pads and brightly colored waxy blossoms of waterlilies," says Philip Swindells in "Garden Pools, Waterfalls & Fountains" (Ward Lock).

If you have a swimming pool, that feature naturally takes center stage. But even if you have a tiny town house garden, a small fountain can create tremendous visual and audio appeal — especially good if you need to hide street noise. Water is particularly fascinating when it is moving, Swindells notes.

"The visual aspect must be carefully accommodated, for, even with a small area of water, the position in which it is placed can make or mar the garden," says Swindells.

"Full sunlight promotes the growth of algae, so partial shading from nearby walls, garden structures or foliage, or from the leaves of aquatic plants such as waterlilies, is desirable," says Williams. "Avoid excessively shady sites, especially beneath trees. ... The ideal aim is to maintain a balance of plant and animal life that will keep the water clean and clear."

A water feature could even be as simple and entertaining as a birdbath, drawing more of nature's creatures to your home.

ART & ORNAMENT

Statues have long been elements in classical, formal gardens, and today all forms of sculpture have found their place in formal and informal gardens. A well-placed bench can even take on sculptural interest.

Keep in mind the kind of impact you wish the sculptural feature to attract. White-hued or marble statues will contrast vividly against the greens of a garden, so will stand out wherever they're placed. If you wish something more subdued in effect, "choose limestone for the statue (lichens will mute the paleness further), paint the seat a pale gray, or use natural wood weathered to a silvery tone," says Williams.

Some ornaments may not be readily apparent to a visitor to the garden, but are discovered on closer scrutiny. Some painterly gardeners are successful in "hiding" a limestone bunny in a bed of plantings that can add a fairy-tale quality to the scene.

Other ornamental choices include sundials, birdhouses, or even trompe l'oeil scenes painted on a back wall, incorporating plantings.

LIGHTING

Lighting can also become ornamental in a garden. Consider a spotlight on that corner fountain, statue or stately tree, which will continue the magic at night.

"Lighting the garden makes it look attractive when viewed from the house and makes it accessible at night, transforming the site into an outdoor living room," says Williams. "Artificial lighting offers dramatic potential as special features are singled out from the darkness."

As you would inside your home, choose garden lighting fixtures to be decorative as well as functional. During the day they need to blend into their surroundings.

Among today's lighting choices for gardens, as outlined by Williams, are fiberglass boulders, which blend inconspicuously during the daytime when they are not lighted but glow softly at night, Japanese lanterns lighted at night by flickering candles, art nouveau-style flower lights, convex wall-mounted lamps, coated-steel lampposts, wooden lampposts, both in old-time styles for older homes or housed in contemporary rectangular boxes, and movable spotlights.

FUNCTIONAL BEAUTIES

And, finally, consider incorporating function with beauty, such as constructing a hinged-top bench or wooden box to double as storage for your garden hose or planting tools, or building a seating bench around the base of your favorite specimen oak tree. Similarly, build a cupboard/counter area for your barbecue needs and you will truly have a functional and inviting outdoor room.

What to do when creepy critters move in

By Caron Golden

Copley News Service

They're creepy and they're crawly and there's nothing much worse than walking into your kitchen and finding them munching away on your food. No, we're not talking about the neighbor's kids or the relative who won't leave — we're talking pests, the kind with wings, tails or antennae.

Those little things like roaches or mice or termites or ants or fleas that the mere mention of make you cringe in disgust. We're talking the ultimate proof of Darwin's theory of evolution, because no matter what you do to these guys, they just won't go away — or will they?

Different pests cause different problems and require distinct methods of obliteration. Here are some tips on how to keep them from invading your life and what to do if they decide to settle in anyway.

MICE

It seems that along with Christopher Columbus and his crew, mice made their first voyage to the New World. Apparently, they originated in Asia before making their way to Europe and stowing away on the Santa Maria.

Mice thrive outdoors when it's warm and food is available, but when cold weather hits, they'll come out of their shelter into yours. If the getting is good, they'll stay. Mice may eat as many as 40 meals a day, and that means that if you stock a sloppy kitchen, you're going to have uninvited company.

D-Con Rodenticides offers some advice on preventing their advance into your home:

Remove items that can become nesting sites, such as newspapers and storage boxes, from the floor and away from walls.

Store building supplies and firewood away from buildings and at least a foot off the ground.

Seal up potential rodent entrances to your home with sheet metal, steel wool or cement, paying special attention to spaces around pipes, vents and ducts.

Check that windows and doors close tightly.

Store bulk food items in sturdy, covered containers.

Keep garbage in sturdy cans with tight-fitting lids.

Keep your house well-maintained. Trim bushes and hedges and keep plant debris away from the foundation.

Keep a supply of baits and traps on hand.

How will you know if the mice are living with you? While they generally will hide in undisturbed areas like attics, garages and behind baseboards, you'll know they're around if you see their droppings (generally about 1/4 inch long and black), signs of recent gnawing on things like packaged goods or cardboard boxes, scampering or gnawing sounds or nests in the ground along the house. If your pets are getting excitable at what seems to be nothing, take a look at what they're pawing at.

D-Con suggests using baits in low-traffic areas. They're a great way to avoid contact with the mice, since they'll eat and go back to the nest to die. Traps are better in high traffic areas, where you see mice run. If the traps don't catch mice within a few days, move them to a new location. Use cheese, nuts or peanut butter to bait them.

You know the problem is solved if you continue to place bait and set traps in areas where you've already caught mice and after 15 days they are still undisturbed.

TERMITES

Drywood, subterranean, Formosan — these are the three most common types of termites, and between them and their 41 other cousins they cost the American consumer over $1 billion annually.

Subterranean termites are found in every state but Alaska and cause 95 percent of all termite damage. They nest in the ground and enter the home by building mud tunnels or entering through cracks.

Drywood termites are found in the humid Southern coastal regions of the United States. They live in the wood itself, not the soil, attacking through the air.

Formosan termites are found in small numbers in the Southern coastal region. They look and act like subterranean termites but their colonies are twice as large, they consume wood six times faster than other termites and, consequently, are capable of wreaking far more havoc on your home.

To prevent termites from entering your home, Orkin Pest Control recommends the following steps:

Remove wooden trellises from exterior walls.

Don't let leaves accumulate in gutters or outside drains.

Trim tree limbs so they don't touch or hang over the house.

Ventilate crawl spaces to minimize moisture buildup.

Remove tree stumps and firewood from beneath and around the house.

Be cautious when building an addition to a house or when gardening; you could destroy existing termite barriers by disturbing treated soil around the foundation.

When gardening, leave 18 inches of undisturbed soil adjacent to the house.

You'll know you've got problems, however, if you find mud tubes along the basement or attic walls or outside the house, if paint on wood starts buckling, if you see tiny holes in wood, or see flying or swarming insects, especially near light sources.

If your house is under attack, there's really no way of treating the situation other than calling professional exterminators. If you think you may have termites but are unsure, call a termite inspector. Since termites eat from the inside out, an inspector will be able to spot signs that the homeowner may not notice or know to look for.

COCKROACHES

Roaches are among the most disgusting and yet most fascinating of household pests. It seems they have an amazing ability to develop resistance to many common insecticides.

Cleanliness is one of the key ways to prevent the appearance of roaches. Take out garbage regularly, clean the kitchen sink and run the disposal long enough to get rid of all food, rinse bathroom sinks, put away toothbrushes (they love toothpaste!), store cupboard foods in airtight containers and don't leave pet food or bowls of fruit out at night and, finally, regularly vacuum rugs and sweep floors in or near eating areas.

If you get hit with roaches, there are a number of ways to hit them where they live. We hear a lot about "roach motels," but according to some exterminators they're just sticky traps and don't get to the source. Sprays will kill roaches when you see them, but again don't reach the source. What may prove the most effective are bait stations, which can be placed in vulnerable areas in the home.

The roaches feed on the bait and return to the nest, resulting in contamination of both adults and eggs. Combat, which makes bait stations, also makes a crack and crevice gel for use in hard-to-reach places. Make sure that the product is child- and pet-safe before putting it out.

FLEAS

There's no way around it. If you don't want fleas, don't have a pet. At least that's the gospel, according to Lloyd Pest Control's sales manager, Greg Augustine. Other than that, however, Augustine recommends superb hygiene to prevent fleas, including continuous vacuuming (dispose of the bag outside after each session or pop cut-up flea collars into the bag to kill what you pick up). Also groom your pet and don't forget to wash its bedding.

Check with your pet's veterinarian to see if you can put your pet on an internal flea-buster called Program. It's not harmful to dogs or cats and is apparently quite effective when ingested monthly.

If you get hit with fleas despite your best efforts, Augustine recommends a holistic approach to getting rid of them. You'll know you've got problems if your pet is constantly scratching itself, if you notice bites on your own body or if you see tiny black spots on upholstery — that's flea fecal matter.

The trick to getting rid of fleas is killing both the adult and the eggs. Bombs therefore won't be effective. They'll kill only the adult because they don't leave any residue. You'll need to apply a residual chemical that will stay around long enough to attack the larvae after they hatch. Lloyd's uses a combination of insect growth regulator and what they call an adulticide that are not toxic to either people or pets.

Of course, this approach also requires simultaneous cleaning of the animal itself, its bedding and any other places where fleas nest, such as carpeting and upholstery. If the animal goes in and out of the house, consider treating your outdoor environment with the chemicals as well.

ANTS

In some parts of the country, ants are a regular menace. After a wet winter, they breed crazily. When the dry summer sets in, they look indoors for water. You find them in the kitchen, but also in the bathtub.

As with termites, the key to prevention is cleanliness. The key to elimination is seeking out the source. People love to spray counters, but that's only a temporary fix. Trail them back to their nest and treat that.

Of course, if you live in an apartment and can't get to the source, the best approach, according to Augustine, is using ant baits. This requires fortitude and patience because you are luring the ants to the bait so they can eat before going home to share their bounty. Therefore, admonishes Augustine, don't mix pesticides and bait. It's an inconsistent approach that may temporarily drive the gullible away — but they'll be back.

The bottom line for preventing an encounter with each of these pests?

Augustine has three suggestions that will help most situations: consistently keep sanitary conditions in the house, make sure tree limbs are trimmed away from the house and don't keep standing water around in the house or just outside.

Comfortable furniture and plenty of shade turn an ordinary patio into an outdoor room.

PATIO PREFERENCES

Proper outdoor furniture turns yard into extra room

By Caron Golden

Copley News Service

Patio furniture has come a long way from the flimsy aluminum chairs with the fraying plastic straps that I remember from my Southern California childhood. With families treating their yards and gardens as outdoor rooms, more attention is being paid to the look and feel of the furniture — and there is now a wide range of styles to choose from.

"More and more homeowners are extending their living space to their decks and yards," says Deborah Durham, an outdoor entertaining expert. "And decorating the deck or patio as you would any indoor room will enhance its appearance, ambience and, ultimately, the overall enjoyment of the back yard."

Each year, Americans spend almost $6 billion on yard design and renovation. If you are planning on adding your two cents — or more — here are some suggestions for creating as comfortable a world out of doors as you have within your four walls.

Wood classics. A low-slung Adirondack chair made of teak, a Mission-style rocker, a Chippendale-style glider swing. These are the pieces that invite us back to slower, more contemplative summer days. Since durability is a factor when purchasing outdoor wood furniture, look for pieces made of teak or mahogany. These weather nicely and don't split or splinter. Teak is also rot- and termite-proof.

Manufacturers of wood outdoor furniture, like Wood Classics of New York, recommend letting the wood weather naturally to a soft gray. But they recognize that not everyone finds that color right for them. While many paints eventually peel or chip, they have found some exterior house stains that work well on their mahogany furniture. And even if after letting your chair or table weather naturally for a couple of years, you can still change your mind and stain it with products sold at your local paint or hardware store.

If you are ambitious and want to make your own furniture, there are two books out with practical designs for the home builder: "Summer Furniture" by Tom Carpenter (Camden House) and "Docks and Projects" from Cottage Life (Cottage Life Books). Each is well illustrated with step-by-step

10 tools every gardener needs

By Nicola B. Godfrey

Copley News Service

You better not just call a spade a spade. Professional gardeners don't. At one time a spade and shovel were practically synonymous. But technology today offers up as many variations of the basic spade as eggs on a breakfast menu. Hollow backs, close backs, solid shanks, cushion poly "D" handles, square points, round points, perforated, beveled-edge blade spades.

It is the same with many garden tools we once assumed to be pretty basic. And it is we believe the gospel of the gardening catalogs, we wouldn't even consider getting our hands dirty, let alone our thumbs green, without an assortment of tillers, trimmers, pruners, whackers, weeders, shears, loppers, brush cutters, mowers, rollers, chippers, shredders and spreaders — to name a few.

It's enough to have you running indoors. But don't despair, because any seasoned gardener will tell you that underlying all the new fangled gadgets available on the market, there are just a few basic tools that have withstood the tests of time since they were first developed in the 1600s and perfected during the Industrial Revolution.

A consensus of several gardening sources recommends the following list of 10 tools every green thumb needs for basic yard maintenance:

Spade. Yes, there is a difference between a spade and a shovel. Shovels have deep, curved blades compared to the flat-edge blade of spades. Spades come in all shapes and sizes, literally. One gardening catalog alone offers 102 different styles. An important factor when choosing a spade or any other long-handled tool is to get the right length for your height to avoid backache. A four-pronged or "tined" spading fork is also good to have for particularly heavy root-lifting work.

Pruners. Look for a quality cutting edge, spring mechanism and safety latch, and consider a style with replaceable blades. Long-handled pruners, known in the biz as loppers, make pruning dense shrubs and high branches easier and can usually cut inch-thick woody stems. A good pair of hedge-clipping shears can also double as a more cumbersome alternative to pruners. Shears are also good for cutting lawn edges and borders.

Rake. Like spades, they come in a variety of styles for leveling soil and gathering leaves. Angled handles and springy tines make for quicker work with less stress on the body.

Weeder. Unwanted growth in your garden is inevitable. Weeders come in a selection of shapes and sizes and just make it easier and quicker to get rid of the pesky intruders.

Hoe. Used primarily for aerating soil, a good hoe can replace the need for a weeder. They are easy to use and gentler on plants being hoed around.

Hand trowel. For planting flower beds, seeding and potting plants and intricate weeding, a hand trowel is the most essential and, because of its size, the most often misplaced tool among the shrubbery. Trowels come in many widths. But narrow blades are recommended for giving more soil maneuverability. Ergonomic designs now offer handles to reduce wrist stress, and bright handles make them easier to find in the garden.

Wheelbarrow or gardening cart. Invest in a sturdy, heavy-duty cart or wheelbarrow that should last your lifetime because there is an awful lot of fetching and carrying of large loads involved in serious yard maintenance.

Watering cans. A selection of inexpensive, lightweight plastic cans can make watering a whole lot easier and faster.

Hose and sprayer. Again, invest in a quality hose. Nozzles are available in all shapes, sizes and water-spouting speeds and are cheap, so you can buy a selection for different applications. A sprayer, whether hand pumped or fitted to a hose, makes for easy and quick application of fertilizer and pesticides.

Mower. An obvious necessity for gardeners with grass. Whether it's a push mower, mulcher, electric or ride-on, choose a model that best fits your budget and the size of your lawn.

Meg Smith of Gardener's Supply Co. suggests additional equipment to advance your basic tool kit, including a seed-starting kit, compost starter and a hammock.

"Every gardener needs a place to relax and enjoy the fruits of one's labor," Smith says.

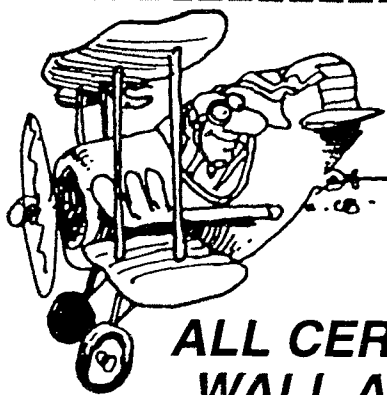

Of course, specialized gardening requires its own set of tools. Because of increasing concerns about the environment, a growing gardening movement is organic gardening, for which Mike McGrath, editor of Organic Gardening magazine, offers the following list of "Top 10 Tools Every Organic Gardener Needs."

A compost bin

Another compost bin.

"I'm serious about that!" McGrath exhorts. "You need the second one so that you have a place to throw fresh stuff when the compost in the first bin is almost finished, because organic gardeners never have enough compost."

10 tools for every gardener

A chipper/shredder to get everything ready for the compost pile and to turn leaves into fabulous mulch and branches into chip-pings for the garden path.

A mulching lawn mower.

A sturdy fence to keep out critters.

Naturally rot-resistant wood for raised beds.

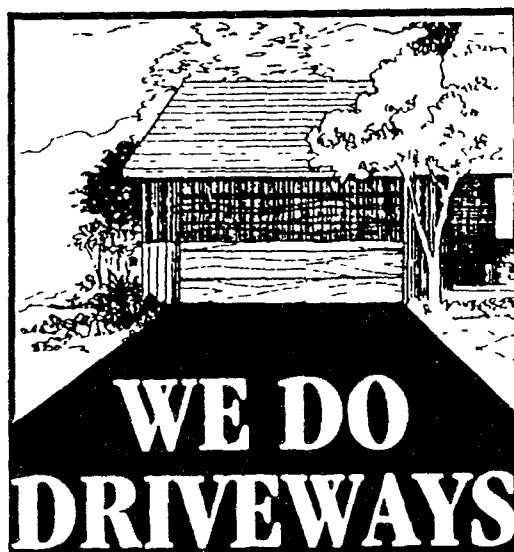

McGrath says, "Organic gardeners have to grow in raised beds because of all the advantages they convey, and they want to avoid poisonous substances like treated wood, so they use naturally rot-resistant woods like cedar or cypress."

A good nozzle for pinpoint spraying.

A wheelbarrow.

A good hoe.

"The No. 1 tool organic gardeners need," says McGrath, "is a sense of humor so they come back and garden again next year!"

Expert offers tips to conquer clutter

By Priscilla Lister

Copley News Service

Are piles of paper taking over your home? When you enter your closet, do you find yourself on a warlike mission that seems impossible to win? Do you fear windowed cabinets in your kitchen would reveal the disorganization in your world?

You can conquer clutter, and Stephanie Culp can help you. The Copley News Service columnist and author of eight books, including "How to Conquer Clutter," "Streamlining Your Life" and "Conquering the Paper Pile-Up" (all published by Writer's Digest Books), "You Can Find More Time For Yourself Every Day" and, her most recent, "Stephanie Culp's 12-Month Organizer and Project Planner" (both published by Better Way Books), says clutter comes down to the fact that "we just have too much stuff."

"In general terms, I advocate the in and out inventory rule," says the Wisconsin resident. "If something new comes in, something old goes out."

Culp got her start in the business of organizing other people's homes and offices after she'd helped friends at nights and on weekends while she was vice president of an importing firm for Chinese antiques.

"People knew I was organized, and finally I decided to turn this into a business," she said. "I've been quite successful, and now I'm a consultant and travel nationally to work on business projects as well as large home projects."

To organize incoming paper — that stuff that just seems to combust spontaneously year after year — Culp suggests that you set up four baskets, labeling them "To Do," "To Pay," "To File" and "To Read."

"Throw the rest away," she asserts. She prefers wire baskets for this task, "The bigger and deeper, the better; small plastic ones never work because papers fill up in there too fast."

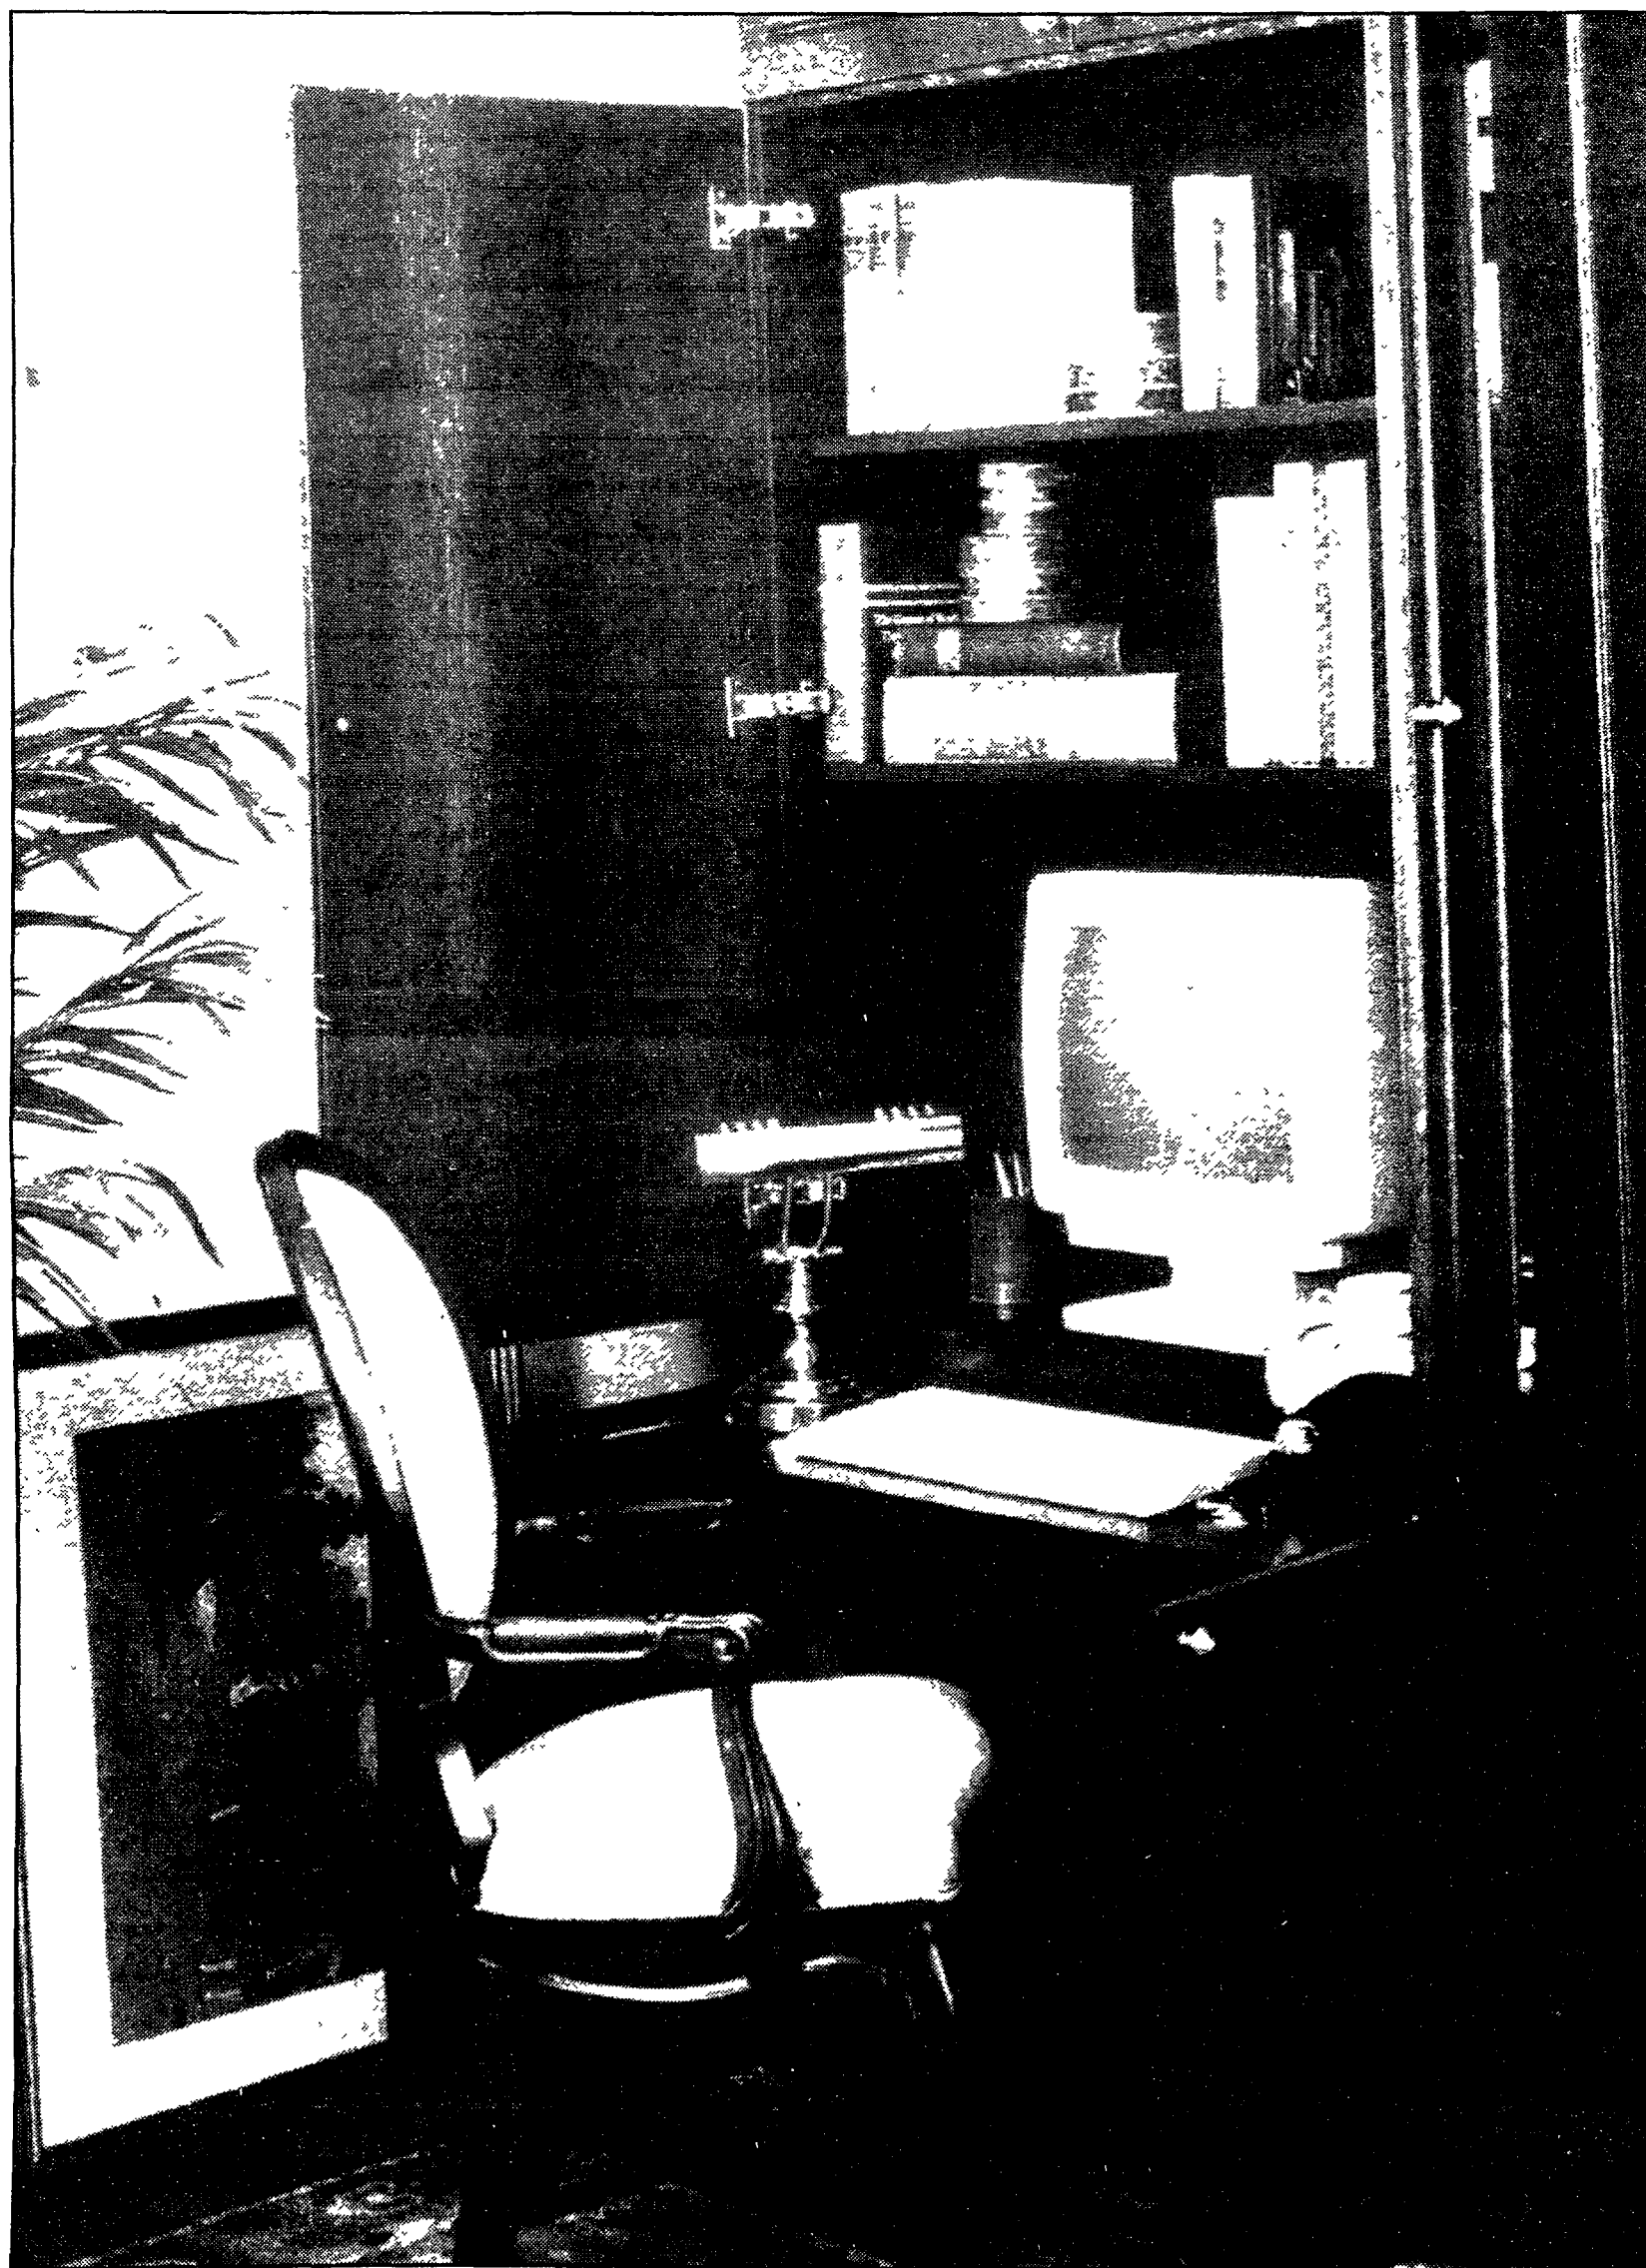

Place these organizing paper baskets where you need them: in your home office or bedroom or kitchen, wherever that paper comes in for handling.

"The 'To File' basket can be on the floor somewhere, under your desk — it doesn't have to be up on top of something because that's just stuff that's going to storage," she adds.

How about those piles of magazines many of us accumulate?

"Review subscriptions you have and let some go — this is a revolutionary thought," says Culp. "And then instead of hanging onto them because there's something in there you have to read, keep scissors and stapler in a basket, clip articles and staple them, and throw the rest away."

As for closets that have gotten away from you, "as a new year's thing, break down the task into manageable segments," advises Culp.

Expert offers tips to conquer clutter

"Don't try to do all your closets in one day. Do one closet a day, and while you're working on that project, don't allow yourself to be distracted by other things, such as phone calls, visitors, snacks. You really need to eliminate things you don't need or don't use. Mementos are good, but mementos need to be selections, not entire archives worthy of warehouse space."

When you weed out your clothes closet, keep only clothes that you regularly wear, "period." "You might install a new closet system, which can sometimes even double closet space," adds Culp. "Especially in older homes and apartments where closet space is really not used well at all, systems make a big difference."

Two top franchisers of closet systems are the California Closet Co., based in San Francisco, with 114 locations nationwide, and The Closet Factory, based in Los Angeles, with 30 locations nationwide. Both firms have branched out from offering organizing closet systems to organizing home offices, garages, basements, pantries and other areas of living space.

Firms like these can take your closet from a mess of a single rod and shelf to a built-in organization of double rods, shelves and drawers that literally maximize the unused space your closet could provide. The cost for these closet systems ranges from $300 to $40,000.

Culp also suggests that when you tackle your own closet, bring along a friend.

"A closet with 14 items in it that mix and match that you absolutely love and look great in is a lot better than 40 items you're always digging through and yet you never feel just right when getting dressed. When you're going through your closet, have a friend who can tell you to rid yourself of something that looks horrible on you. They'll probably take half the stuff with them, and that's always a plus — saves you a trip to charity," she adds.

In your kitchen, likewise, "the biggest secret is to get rid of stuff you never use," says Culp. "Almost everyone has fancy dishes or cookware they never use or duplicates like three lemon peelers, and the last time they peeled lemons was 1952."

expired medicines first, says Culp.

"If you have 12 containers of eye shadow, get rid of 10. Old makeup gathers bacteria and is really not good for you, and people usually keep tons of it. Also put shelves in the bathroom, over the toilet or over the towel rack where you can keep additional bubble bath or washcloths — they can be attractive extra storage."

Other extra storage ideas include storing stuff in boxes that are made to go under the bed. "Even kitty litter pans can be great for stuff you get in and out of, like toddler's shoes that can stay together under the bed."

Culp uses bins and containers to group a lot of items, in drawers, under beds and on shelves.

"And buy functional furniture, such as an end table with a couple of drawers or a cabinet underneath or a coffee table that might be a trunk with a glass top — if it takes up space it also holds things," she says. "Don't forget wall space for shelves and hooks, and even interior door space for hooks and shelves above."

"Using a variety of over-the-door organizers can make it easy and convenient to clear off the top of the dresser or night stand, by making use of the often-overlooked behind-the-door space of a closet or bedroom door," offers The Container Store, a nationwide retailer of storage and organization products.

"Stacking bins and baskets are another space-efficient way to store anything from hobby and sewing supplies to books and videotapes. These vertical storage bins use a minimal amount of floor space but utilize wasted floor-to-ceiling areas."

What about the clutter caused by children's toys strewn throughout your living room?

"Parents can have a couple of attractive chests, say wicker or padded trunks, in the living room and should start teaching the toddler to throw things into the chest at the end of the day. Or they could get a little wagon, or something on wheels, and at the end of the day teach the toddler to put all the toys in this cart and take it to their room."

If you have loads of laundry, consider having "an attractive dirty clothes hamper in each bedroom, so people aren't throwing mountains of clothes in the bathroom or making huge piles in a tiny laundry space," says Culp. "On laundry day, each person brings their hamper to the laundry area."

Lush, green lawn is attainable dream

By Elizabeth Scheibner

Copley News Service

Most homeowners dream of the perfect lawn — the one that is the envy of the neighborhood — but in reality, few ever achieve it.

It's not for lack of trying, but rather not knowing how to properly care for a lawn. Although lawns appear to be fairly self-sufficient and maintenance-free, they actually require more upkeep than you might think.

"A properly established lawn is a lifetime investment that will provide both aesthetic and environmental benefits to homeowners," says Doug Fender, executive director of the Turf Resource Center.

According to experts, a lush lawn begins with grass that fits the climate and soil. With more than 300 varieties to choose from, it's important to select the right type for your region. There are basically two types of grasses — warm season and cool season.

Warm-season grass grows primarily in the South while cool-season grass is grown primarily in Northern states. Each type requires specific climate conditions to germinate and thrive.

Typically, cool-season grass should be planted in the late summer to early fall when the weather is starting to cool off. Warm-season grass is best planted in the late spring to early summer when the soil is warming up.

Thanks to modern science, researchers are working to develop hardier, faster-germinating grasses that are drought-resistant and require less maintenance. Color, texture and mowability have also been dramatically improved, particularly among the perennial ryegrasses.

PLANTING THE LAWN

Before planting your lawn, consider how much sun and shade it will get. Most grass varieties require full sun to remain lush and green, although they can tolerate some shade.

If your yard is shaded most of the day, you will want to plant grass that is specifically suited to shade.

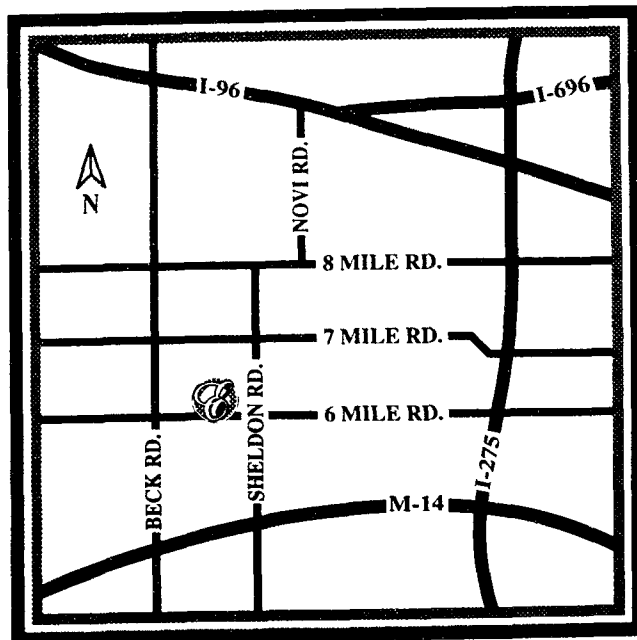

Beautiful lawns start with healthy soil that's high in organic matter. Experts recommend using peat moss to help promote root growth and improve the soil. Peat moss also aerates plant roots by loosening heavy soil and adding body to sandy soil.

TOP TURF

Lush, green lawn is attainable dream

Peat moss can either be spread over an existing lawn to condition the soil underneath or can be blended with the soil prior to seeding or sodding. Using peat moss eliminates the need for fertilizer since it releases nutrients over time.

There are basically three ways to plant a lawn: seed, sprig or sod. Seeding is the least expensive way to go but also requires the most maintenance and upkeep (as well as a good deal of patience). Seeding is best done in the spring or fall. Because it takes time for the seeds to germinate, be prepared to stay off the area for two to four months.

Sprigs are clumps of grass that are inserted into the ground and eventually spread to form a lawn. As with seeds, it will take awhile for the sprigs to take hold.

Sod, of course, is the fastest and easiest way to acquire a new lawn. The beauty of sod is that you can have a new lawn within a few hours. What's more, sod can be installed any time of year, even on frozen ground. Because sod is fully mature, it can be affixed to slopes and on inferior soils where seeding would be nearly impossible. Sod is also an ideal solution for erosion-prone areas.

Whether you opt for seed or sod, make sure to moisten the area daily (or twice daily during hot periods) for two to three weeks. Pay close attention to areas near buildings where reflected heat tends to dry the turf.

LAWN CARE

Experts agree that the average lawn needs about an inch of water per week. How you accomplish that is up to you, but a good rule of thumb is to water your lawn every other day. This encourages deeper root growth and makes your lawn better able to endure heat.

The best time to water your lawn is early in the morning or during the evening when there is less chance for evaporation. Although many homeowners invest in sophisticated underground sprinkler systems, a hose and sprinkler that you move around the yard is just as effective — and a lot less expensive.

Although most homeowners are diligent about fertilizing their flower beds, they often neglect their lawns. Ideally, you should fertilize your lawn three times a year. You can use either organic lawn food, such as manure, seaweed extract or fish emulsion, or use a synthetic fertilizer. If you use a synthetic fertilizer, make sure it is slow-releasing.

Just as there are established guidelines for watering your lawn, there also are preferred methods of mowing. Experts agree that a high-cut lawn is better equipped to stay green and will help shade the soil and keep it moist. Always cut grass when it's dry and try to mow late in the day when the temperature is cooler.

Most importantly, mow with a sharp blade. A dull blade tears and leaves ragged edges that turn brown. And, finally, leave clippings on the ground. They return nutrients to the soil and stimulate biological activity.

A well-maintained lawn not only adds to the value of your home, but also benefits the environment. A mature lawn cleans the air by releasing oxygen, traps particulate pollution, stabilizes dust and restores ground water.

It also has a cooling effect, reducing temperatures by as much as 5 to 7 degrees, and helps absorb noise and air pollution, reduces fire danger and prevents erosion.

CONTAINER CULTIVATION

Potted plantings are easy and fun

By Jason Zappe

Copley News Service

It's not the size of your plot, but the design of your pot. Container gardening lends itself to a more creative pursuit when encouraging gladiolus or jasmine to bloom.

Using containers isn't just for people trapped in cramped spaces. Many gardeners with tons of room use containers — just for different reasons.

But for those with plenty of room, experimentation ranks high when using containers for gardening. It only makes sense to try out new seeds in containers before going to all the work of digging beds and preparing the soil for something that may or may not work. Also, containers are great if your soil is lousy.

But container gardening isn't just about buying some pots, soil and seeds. It is still serious gardening, just on a smaller scale. What you can do with containers and small areas ranges from harvesting edibles and creating ponds to growing bonsai and a host of other eye-appealing projects. Container gardening also allows you to combine floral beauty with artistic expression depending on the type of pots you buy.

WHERE TO BEGIN

The first step is to decide what you want to grow — flowers, produce or both. Almost all flowers and shrubs will grow in pots. Most, but not all, vegetables can be grown in pots. It is possible to grow garlic, eggplant, lettuce and cucumbers in containers.

The advice found in "The Container Expert" by D.G. Hessayon (Expert Books) is rich in information. He walks you through the basics of how to fill your container with the right stuff.

He recommends that containers be stable and able to withstand rot, rust and corrosion. The first item that should go into large containers is a layer of gravel or small river rocks. You may want to do this with all your containers — it does help the drainage. Always be sure your containers have drainage holes in the bottom or you will just be growing a plant destined for root rot.

Gardening with containers allows you to have total control over the type of soil, or growing medium. You can easily adjust acidity and alkalinity.

Pots of brightly colored blossoms bring an otherwise plain patio to life.

Hessayon suggests using compost for your containers. Regular soil taken from your yard won't work as well due to the regularity of watering. After you become an old hand at growing in containers, you can play around with mixing soil and compost and other nutrients.

Watering is going to be more of a chore with containers, but weed and pest control will be practically nonexistent.

TYPES OF PLANTS

Short of pine and apple trees, just about anything can be grown in pots.

Following are suggestions from Hessayon:

Bedding plants. Primarily annuals, these can include flowering maple, floss flower, sweet alyssum, snapdragon, African daisy, asarina, monkey flower, petunia, geranium, bleeding heart and leopard's bane.

Trees, shrubs and bonsai. Hearty plants like these include clematis, Mexican orange blossom, heather, butterfly bush, juniper, ornamental currant and cotton lavender.

Rockery perennials. Commonly referred to as alpine, these include whitlow grass, thrift, rock jasmine, bellflower, gold dust, scab weed and rockery violet.

Aquatic plants. You can create miniature ponds with containers with water hyacinth, parrot's feather, Japanese water iris and bob bean.

Herbs. Perhaps the best container goodies you can grow. Just about any herb will do fine in a pot, but you might try basil, rosemary, dill, parsley or thyme.

Vegetables. These edibles also do quite well in containers. It's easy to grow tons of lettuce with just a few containers. Other delectables include cucumbers, onions, peas, peppers (sweet and hot), radishes, beans and tomatoes.

Fruits. Strawberries work famously as do blueberries, plums, peaches and pears.

PERFECT POTS

Using containers to grow your bounty allows you to be creative with what you plant. The main types include:

- Window box.
- Tower.
- Hanging basket.
- Wall mounted.
- Standard pot.

It doesn't matter which you use, except in how you want your area to look. Almost all growables will work fine in any of the above — it becomes a matter of aesthetics and space limitations.

Specific pots, such as parsley pots and strawberry pots, can be used for a variety of creative uses. You can trail vines from them, plant similar herbs.

Other containers that allow the use of creativity include old tires, chimney pots, old wheelbarrows, old sinks or any odd object with enough room to plop in dirt and some colorful flowers.

You may want to use plant stands, as well. Some of the more popular styles of plant stands are large etageres. They can be found in a myriad of sizes and shapes ranging from half-moon corner units to multilevel rectangular side units.

When it's all said and done, you still don't have to settle for your creation. Container gardening allows the flexibility of rearranging, incorporating new plants, tossing old plants or adding other touches that your creativity conjures up. Now's the time to stop and smell the roses.

Proper outdoor furniture turns yard into extra room

Precious metals. If your taste leans toward the more delicate, take a look at chairs and tables made out of wrought iron or aluminum. A sweet rose design with flared legs makes for perfect seating on a stone patio for a twilight espresso or early breakfast. Set two chairs and a small table on a bedroom balcony surrounded by potted flowers. Or place a bench along a garden path. If you like the elegance of the metal look but want to add some color, make sure your furniture is coated in a waterproof enamel finish.

If your taste runs to whimsical, catalog retailer David Kay has a bright, springlike chair and table in a sunflower design. Forged out of iron, it's hand-painted for use in a sheltered area.

Plastics and other materials. If your primary interest is in environmental friendliness, David Kay offers a generously sized recycled rocker. Manufactured from 500 milk containers for the look of wood without the trees, the weather-resistant chair won't warp, crack or split. And, they claim, it will never need painting or staining. They offer the chair in hunter green or white.

Many of us have come to enjoy increasingly durable plastic furniture. What's great about them is that they don't absorb the heat like aluminum or iron, they're easy to keep clean and they don't fade.

Bemis Casual Furniture, which manufactures very sturdy outdoor resin products in a variety of styles, offers everything from dining sets to chaise longues, beverage trolleys to love seats, and even a multiposition folding rocking chair. They also have a 48-inch glass-top pedestal dining table and an oval dining table that extends from 60 inches to 75 inches with a leaf.

Regardless of the type of furniture you select, if you plan to entertain a lot outdoors or spend hours at a time yourself on the chair or chaise longue, you probably ought to pick up cushions for each piece. The best outdoor fabrics are heavyweight acrylics that will hold their own with sun or salt. Look for fabric called Sunbrella or Giat. Both are treated for water repellency and mildew and won't fade. Fillings should be urethane foam. It's practical, comes in a range of densities, sheds water and is inexpensive. You can also go with Dacron batting material.

Wood Classics sells cushions and pillows custom made to fit their benches and chairs. They are made out of the same fabric used in their umbrellas and, therefore, are fade- and mildew-resistant. They also sell mix-and-match pillows in a variety of colors and sizes — all designed to be left outdoors.

You can, of course, make your own very simply by using sheets, recycled curtains or colorful bandannas with pillow inserts. To make bandanna pillows, tie the corners together. These pillows are best stored indoors when not in use. To dry more durable pillows after a rainstorm, Wood Classics suggests that you place the pillows on an edge for an hour or two. To clean, rinse off with a garden hose. Don't wash covers in a machine or you'll lose the water-resistant finish.

Whether you live in a dry desert climate in Arizona or one more humid and prone to sudden rainstorms, it's important that you look for durability and weather resistance in your purchase. It will also make a difference whether you live inland or by an ocean. The salt air has a tendency to eat away at most materials. Ask a salesperson at a patio furniture store for recommendations for your location, use and price range. And consider purchasing outdoor furniture covers to keep your pieces safe from the elements.

Once you've ordered or built your furniture, it's important to place and enhance it with you and your guests' comfort in mind.

Place some loungers and chairs in the shade.

Light citronella candles to keep away biting bugs.

When hosting a large party, plan the layout to encourage traffic flow easily from inside the house to outside areas. Keep pathways clear of furniture, and create small seating arrangements conducive to chatting.

SELECTING A LANDSCAPE COMPANY,

When you built your home, you spent a great deal of time in the planning stages, from the design to the finished product. There were a lot of decisions to make and each one had to be carefully made. When it was finished, it was just as you wanted it.

Planning your out of doors is just as important as the designing of your new home. Your landscape is the first thing that people see when they arrive. It should be as unique as your home design. It is also one of the major points when selling your home. The first impression is a very important one.

Selecting a Landscape Company should be just as important as selecting the builder who built your home. You don't want to trust your out of doors just to anyone. Select a Landscape Design & Build Firm. They specialize in creating an environment for your out of doors. They design the landscape and then they spell out, in detail what you are getting - such as plant size and quantities of materials that are needed.

Questions to ask your prospective landscape company.

1. How long have they been in business?
2. Are they insured? Make sure that the company can supply you with proof of insurance, covering liability and workmen's Comp. If a company starts working on your property and hits one of the lines, who would pay for the repairs? Or if they are putting in a deck and a worker, using a nail gun nails his foot to the deck-who is going to pay for his medical bills? Without Workmen's Comp. insurance, the home owner is responsible.
3. References? Ask for some job locations in the area.
4. Is the company licensed? Do they have a Landscape Nursery License? Do they have a Builders License, if they are doing any construction.
5. Can they handle all of the work that you need to have done? Design, planting, patio, deck, sprinklers, etc. It is a real problem if they don't. It is up to you then to co-ordinate all the phases of your work, making sure that one company finishes and another one starts.
6. What kind of warranty do they offer? It should be spelled out in their contract.
7. Landscape Design Service. What type of designs do they do?

Are they drawn to scale?

Do they charge for this service?

What type and length of experience do their designers have?

Do they have to locate all your plant material or do they have their own nursery?

Can they handle your entire project? Sprinklers-deck-brick patio & walkways

A company that spends hours drawing a plan to scale has to charge for their service. If they don't charge up front for the design, they will make-up the material costs on you or the next person. Someone has to pay for the work. No one that I know works for free. The designer also needs to be someone with some experience in residential designs.

Look for companies that have designers on staff, who do aerial and elevation view designs, so you can see what you are getting. This also enables you to plan now and do the work over a period of time.

Next sit down with the designing company and go over the plans so that you understand what you are getting. You not only should have the design but a list of plants and materials with sizes, quantities and a price for doing the work. If you are going to check prices with other companies, use a bid list (list of all plants, materials, sizes and quantities) This is a way to compare apples to apples. If the other company doesn't quote on the same thing you won't know if you are getting a fair comparison.

Time to make a decision. Select the work you want to have done and talk to the selected landscape company. Check the insurance, licenses and finally ask the payment terms. Normally most companies ask for 1/3 down, 1/3 upon starting the job and the final 1/3 when the job is completed. Some companies ask for 1/2 down and the balance upon completion. What ever their terms are make sure you know what they are and have them in writing. Don't ever pay for the job in full in advance, even if they offer a huge discount, you may never see the work or your money again.

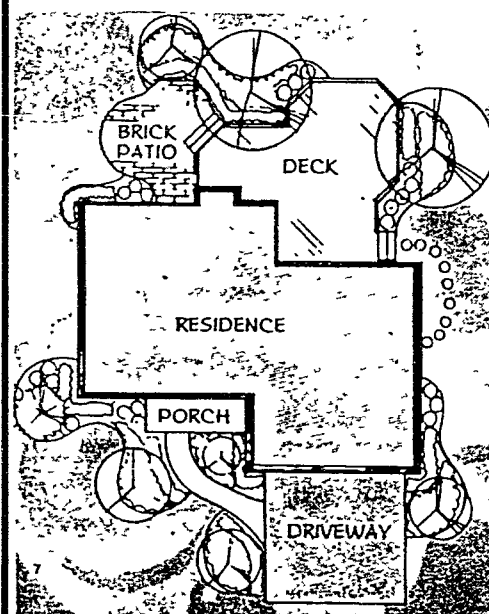

Make sure you are getting what you paid for. We have seen many companies that say I can do that job for less, then when it comes time to do the work it's another story. One particular customer we worked with had this happen.

Know who you are dealing with!
Remember the bitterness of poor quality lasts long after the sweetness of low pricing!

Jackson Landscaping has been in business for 35 years and has been located in the Novi area since 1971. They do all phases of landscape design and construction and have designers on their staff. Many of their employees have been with them for up to 15 to 30 years. They are also licensed and insured in the State of Michigan.
