Petitioners ask for city road improvements

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Main Street resident Shirley Ebel told the Northville City Council Monday what many had already suspected: watch drivers move along the north-south artery through town and you'll see almost every illegal move imaginable.

Ebel, acting on behalf of the North Center Citizens Association, attended the meeting to present a petition signed by 61 residents and property owners along North Center Street. The petition asked for improvements to the road, including placement of:

• A large "Welcome to Northville" sign at the southwest corner of Center and Eight Mile Road.

• A boulevard island instead of a center turn lane on Center Street between Walnut Street and Baseline Roads:

• Trees on both sides of Center Street from Eight Mile to Dunlap Street;

• A pedestrian crossing with a traffic signal near Shopping Center Market;

 "Bypass" signs which would direct otherwise thru-traffic to use Griswold and Beck, and;

Enhanced speed limit signage.

Meeker told the council that after having lived on North Center for more than 20 years, she had become very attuned to the habits of drivers.

"I can tell you that the speed limits along North Center aren't adhered to very closely," she said. When you see a car actually going 25 mph, it sticks out like a sore thumb.

Meeker said she had seen drivers cross over the double-yellow line to pass one another and zip across lawns to get through town faster. She said speed was the predominant problem with North Center, not the volume of traffic.

Council member Tom Swigart agreed. "I think it's reasonable to ask anyone driving through a community to respect the rights of the residents living in it," he said.

Council member Kevin Hartshorne said he agreed with Meeker's suggestion to create a boulevard design in the reconstruction of North Center.

"I just hope our (traffic study) experts turn out to be as wise as

Candlelight Walk fuels holiday sales

By WENSDY WHITE Staff Writer

To stoke the holiday spirit and fuel down-town Northville's retail sales, the 3rd annual Christmas Candlelight Walk will kick off Friday, Dec. 5.

And for the first time, the candles will be lit three Fridays in a row.

"Shoppers will be walking among all the ' said Lorie Novel vns the Merchants, local girl scout and cadet troops and the Ladywood Youth Group will turn out to light over 350 candles that will be placed in luminary bags along Main, Center and Dunlap streets. The candles will guide shoppers through the gift shops in downtown Northville

Dec. 5, 12 and 19 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. "We hope it will be festive," Novelly said, adding that her employees are planning to sing Christmas carols as they light the flames.

Novelly said her sister-in-law Lorie Wyant, who owns the Salutations gift shop at 147 E. Main. has been instrumental in organizing this year's walks, and Novelly also extended thanks to Edison for helping pay for the luminaries that will line the stre and the weather was frigid, some shoppers braved the weather to spend the busiest retail day of the year in downtown Northville. The Creative Priority craft show held last weekend at the Northville Recreation Center brought a crowd into town that later took to the streets to browse, but some merchants said that didn't generate a marked increase over sales during the same time last year. "The day after Thanksgiving is always crazy," said Cindy LaChance, owner of Ultimate Toys and Gifts at 107 N. Center. "Sales this year were about the same as last year. They weren't up, but they were good. People seem to be in the Christmas mood, and all we can do is hope for the best.

Orin Jewelers at 101 E. Main was also busy on Friday, but manager Dave Beyer said the shop's busiest time has yet to arrive.

"It's a good day for us, but it's not our busiest by far. I think most people tend to go to the malls that day," Beyer said. "The last four days before Christmas are our extreme busiest.'

Down the street at Art Source, an art and framing shop at 126 MainCentre, owner Barbara Davies said her post-holiday sales were 50 percent higher than average.

"It was pretty good but not terrif-ic," Davies said. "Definitely up from last year."

Davies agreed that malls are the hot spots as the Christmas shopping season kicks off.

People tend to go to malls the first weekend and come to places like Northville either before or after that," she said.

more than just name

By WENSDY WHITE

It's the bagel bakery formerly known as Chesapeake.

Although the new sign won't be up for a couple months, the name has been changed.

After over two years of doing business named for the famous Eastern Bay, the bagel cafe in downtown Northville will from now on be known as "Motor City Bagels.'

But aside from the name, owner Joe Anthony said little else will change as the bagel shop breaks away from it's franchise.

'It's the same old gathering place it always was," the s biggest reason we de the change is that we sim get any support from our franchise organization. They didn't make any effort beyond their region."

The Chesapeake chain was started in the Washington D.C. area in 1981 and has grown to include about 160 stores nationwide, with 100 of those on the East Coast. Anthony opened two in Michigan, the Northville shop and another in Troy.

When he set out to open a bagel business, Anthony said he researched various franchise options and chose Chesapeake because he liked the product line and thought it would go over well in the area.

But from the start, he had to

Goodfellows host annual paper sale By WENSDY WHITE

The persistent bells of Salvation Army kettle collectors will withdraw for a day this weekend, to allow the Northville Goodfellows to hold their annual newspaper drive Saturday, Dec. 6.

Rain, sleet or snow, the Goodfellows will be hawking 5,000 donated copies of a special edition Northville Record at intersections throughout the city.

All of the money the 80-plus volunteers raise that day will go directly to Northville Civic Concern, and all motorists have to do to help is roll down their windows and stick their hands into the cold air just long enough to purchase a paper. "Whatever the person wants to donate for the paper, they can donate, whether it's one cent to one hundred dollars," Dick Milder, co-chairman of the Northville Rotary Club, said. "Some citizens say 'Gee, there's no one in Northville who's poor.' Well, unfortunately there are. There are famihes that fall below the poverty level and need help."

Northville Civic Concern is a non-profit organization committed to helping those less fortunate families in town.

And although the slogan for the Goodfellow's annual newspaper drive is "No child without a Christmas." the money raised by the fellows who hit the streets this Saturday will extend far beyond the holidays.

"Their drive is a spirit for us. It starts our year out right," said Civic Concern Director Marlene Kunz. "Every cent that we get goes straight to Northville families. There are no administrative expenses. It's all a labor of love."

Kunz said up to 40 local families seek out Civic Concern throughout the year for help with food, clothing, utilities and medical expenses in times of need. Families may also be referred by area churches, schools or the police department. According to Kunz, Civic Con-

Students get close look at moonrocks By WENSDY WHITE Staff Writer

It was a giant step for mankind and a small bound for education when real moon rocks landed in an Amerman classroom.

On loan from NASA, the authentic rock and sand samples provided the basis for fifth grade science lessons during a two week period. The moon rocks were brought to the school by student-teacher David Wayne, after he, attended a course sponsored by NASA last month. The workshop, held at Plymouth-Canton High school, included hands-on lesson plans based on the moon rocks and security procedures for protecting the priceless national treasures.

Probation officer: youth offender program is working

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

It's been a year since the 35th District Court kicked off its effort to change the way young lawbreakers are dealt with.

So, how's it going? The answer, according to juvenile probation officer Tara Van-valkenberg, is "very well." The youth offender program was the first of its kind to be developed in the state, but similar offerings are being considered at other locations.

Vanvalkenberg said the program was created to help deal with misdemeanor or ordinance violations by youths age 17 and under. She said the program handles cases such as under-age smoking, assault and battery, marijuana possession or trespassing.

The program is operated in conjunction with the probate court office

The program is applicable to youths in the five communities in the 35th District Court jurisdiction - the two Northvilles, the two Plymouths and Canton Township. A similar program is being developed for other portions of Wayne County, she said.

The program was developed in the hope that a full-blown court process would serve as a deterrent for youths who might otherwise go on to commit more serious crimes.

That, coupled with greater pressure on parents to involve themselves with their children in the court process, is designed to help make a young person's first interaction with the law also their last.

District Court Judge John MacDonald addresses a youth-offender in his courtroom. He decided not to hear the case against the youngster as his parents were not present.

To that end, she said, the pro- realize you're getting through to gram has apparently met its objective.

"I'd say that better than 90 percent of the kids in these cases are getting something out of this," she said. "Measuring success is hard to do, but when you see them in the office and hear them talk, you them.

Vanvalkenberg said statistics hadn't been compiled, but she estimates that she sees between 50 and 60 cases a month

The case load, however, has made a noticeable increase as of late.

"I've probably seen 20 cases this week," she said.

Despite the large numbers of young people who work their way through the system, Vanvalkenberg said the relatively low number of youths who wind up being repeat offenders is a sign that

"Measuring success is hard to do, but when you see them in the office and hear them talk, you realize you're getting through to them."

getting headed off at the pass.

Vanvalkenberg said one of the main objectives of the youth offender program is to get parents involved with the court process. That way, she said, there's an awareness by the guardian that a problem exists.

And it was that lack of awareness which was the biggest problem with the old youth system, Vanvalkenberg said.

Before the program was put in place, if a minor was caught smoking, police would issue a ticket which could be paid without any further legal involvement.

However, with the youth offender program, it's not as simple as paying a fine.

What we discover so often is that once you sit the parents and the kids down together and start having them talk, the illegal behavior is a sign of a more serious problem," she said. "It could be something as simple as the kid not feeling like he's getting enough attention at home, or it may be something more serious, like an abusive home life."

The youngest person Van-valkenberg said she's spoken with was a 7-year-old who was picked up on larceny charges. The boy was brought in only two weeks

"I try to hold the kids as responsible as possible," she said.

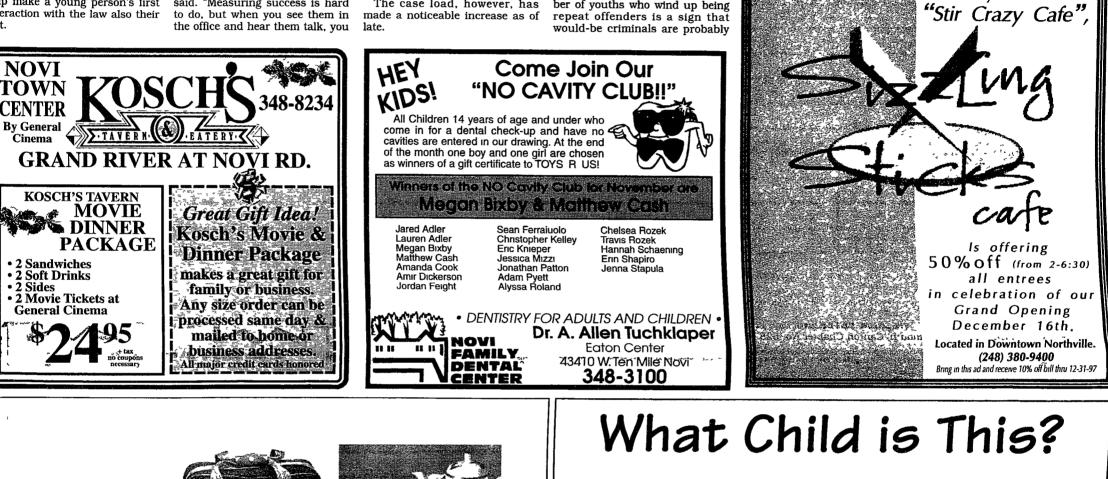

In situations where the offender is too young to have access to the necessary funds to pay the fine, Vanvalkenberg said she makes an effort to have the youth work off the penalty.

Vanvalkenberg said the youth offender program will likely continue locally and expand across other areas of the state.

The court building was destroyed by fire during a July electrical storm.

Routine court-related matters are now handled out of the fire station at the intersection of Cherry Hill and Canton Center roads.

Jealousy suspected in slashing of tires

A man's tires were deflated in Northville Friday Nov. 21, and police said the man believed his girlfriend's ex-boyfriend was to blame for the damage.

The man, 50, told police he parked his Dodge Intrepid outside his girlfriend's home and sometime overnight all four tires were punctured with what may have been an ice pick.

His girlfriend, 43, told police she suspected her ex-boyfriend had driven by and seen that she had company. She said he has been calling her and asking her out since they broke up about six months ago.

When police questioned the former boyfriend at the station, he denied doing the $590 worth of damage to the tires, stating he was at Northville Downs and the Starting Gate the entire evening.

PHONE STALKER: A Northville man told police last week that he's being harassed by hang-up phone calls and visits by his girlfriend's ex-boyfriend. According to police, the man said dialing *69 showed the prank calls coming from the ex's home. He also said the man has been following him and has recently started showing up at the job site where the couple works together.

His girlfriend told police that her ex is a heavy drinker and is most likely intoxicated when he drives by, police said.

MORE PHONE THREATS: A local professional told police she has been getting disturbing phone calls from an unknown source whom she believes has a grudge against female psychologists. The man, who identifies himself only as Robert, called the woman at work and left a voice mail mes-

According to police, she said the same man later called back and said such things as "What are you going to do for me? None of you give a sh-. Call me when you have more time for me."

She said her partner has received similar calls.

Police said they advised the woman of safety precautions and are monitoring the case.

CHILD NEGLECTER NABBED: Northville police who stopped at Eight Mile and Taft Road to help a citizen in a disabled vehicle Nov. 25 soon found they had a wanted man on their hands.

Police said when they ran a check on the 45-year-old owner of the broken down auto, they found he was wanted in Charlevoix for child neglect, according to the Friend of the Court.

The man was held in jail until he posted a $1,180 bond.

UNDERAGE DRINKING: While investigating a suspicious person complaint, police arrested two teens at West and Randolph Streets in Northville Friday night. After smelling alcohol on the breath of the 17- and 18-year olds, police administered a breathalyzer test.

When one teen's blood alcohol level registered .155 and the other's peaked at .134, both were arrested and taken to the station with their release pending $500 bail each for the misdemeanor charges.

The 17-year-old's parents were called, police said.

DOWNS FALL: A 56-year-old Northville Downs employee filed a police report after she fell down a flight of stairs at work. The Livonia resident said she injured her left knee, right ankle and right rib area after missing the last four stairs when leaving work around 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 27.

According to police, the woman said there were no lights on at the time and she believes the darkness caused her fall.

THEFTS FROM CARS: A 16year-old Abby Circle resident told Township Police an attempt had been made to remove a pair of car stereo speakers from his vehicle sometime during the night of Nov. 29. No signs of forced entry were discovered.

Damage to the speakers was estimated at $100.

In another incident, a 52-yearold man said a compact disc player and pair of hunting knives were stolen from his vehicle when it was parked overnight Nov. 28 in a carport. A hole was punched in the driver's side door to gain access to the vehicle. There are no suspects.

HARLEY HEIST: An Innsbrook Apartments resident told police his $8,500 motorcycle had been taken from his carport sometime between Nov. 26 and Nov. 30.

The 27-year-old man told police he had parked the motorcycle in the same location for the last one and one-half years. Another motorcycle was found parked in the spot adjacent to the missing motorcycle's.

TOOL CRIME: A $150 chain saw and $400 compound miter saw were reported missing from the garage of a 53-year-old Fry Street resident.

Upon inspection, police learned the lock on the garage's overhead door had been drilled out. The man said this was the second time in a month his garage had been broken into. On both instances, the man was out of town when the break-ins occurred.

The man said the items were removed sometime between Nov. 27 and Nov. 30.

MUSIC MAN: Meijer store security spotted a white male concealing a cassette tape in the front of his pants the evening of Nov. 29. The man then exited the front door of the store without paying for the item.

When approached by a store detective, the suspect threw the cassette tape at the store employee and fled. Police were advised of a foot chase, but were unable to locate the suspect. Store detectives did not know if the man had multiple items on his person at the time of his escape. The tape was recovered.

UNDERCOVER UNDERWEAR: A 28-year-old Wayne man was apprehended at Meijer the evening of Nov. 29 after he was caught attempting to leave the store with a concealed package of men's underwear valued at $9.

The man resisted an apprehension attempt made by store detectives. A court date is pending.

OUIL: Four individuals were arrested on intoxicated driving charges this week. One suspect was asked to turn off her car once officers made a traffic stop, to which she replied she didn't know

Another suspect asked not to be subjected to a sobriety test which required him to speak the alphabet on the grounds that he was from Italy and was not yet familiar with the standard English alphabet. All the suspects are scheduled to appear in court Dec. 23.

City agrees to help downtown businesses with decoration buys

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

The Northville City Council OK'd a plan to allocate funding for holiday decoration purchases, but not without first discussing the sorts of ornaments which would be acquired.

Under the proposal, the city will match dollar-for-dollar (up to $10,000) the cost of acquisition of tangible holiday decorations for the downtown area with community business leaders.

The vast majority of money spent on decorations will be allocated to the 1998 Christmas season, city manager Gary Word said.

The money could also be used for holiday entertainment but not for advertising or promotional purposes, Word said.

But before council granted its approval, council member Carolann Ayers voiced her concerns regarding the types of decorations which would be purchased.

Ayers said she was concerned both with decorations which would deviate from the Victorian tradition of the city's downtown area and also the display of religious characters.

The display of nativity scenes ---particularly those on city property have become a hot-button issue in many metro Detroit communities during the last few years. Northville city officials decorate the downtown lamp posts with live garlands and small white lights.

"I'm concerned by some lighting displays being promoted and dis-played in other cities," Ayers said. I feel a little uncomfortable spending city dollars on certain things that could lead us into legal problems or other situations in a Victorian town."

Avers said she hadn't seen any holiday displays in Northville which could be considered questionable, but wanted safeguards in place. So did council member John Hardin.

"From an aesthetic standpoint, we want to make sure things stay in good taste," Hardin said.

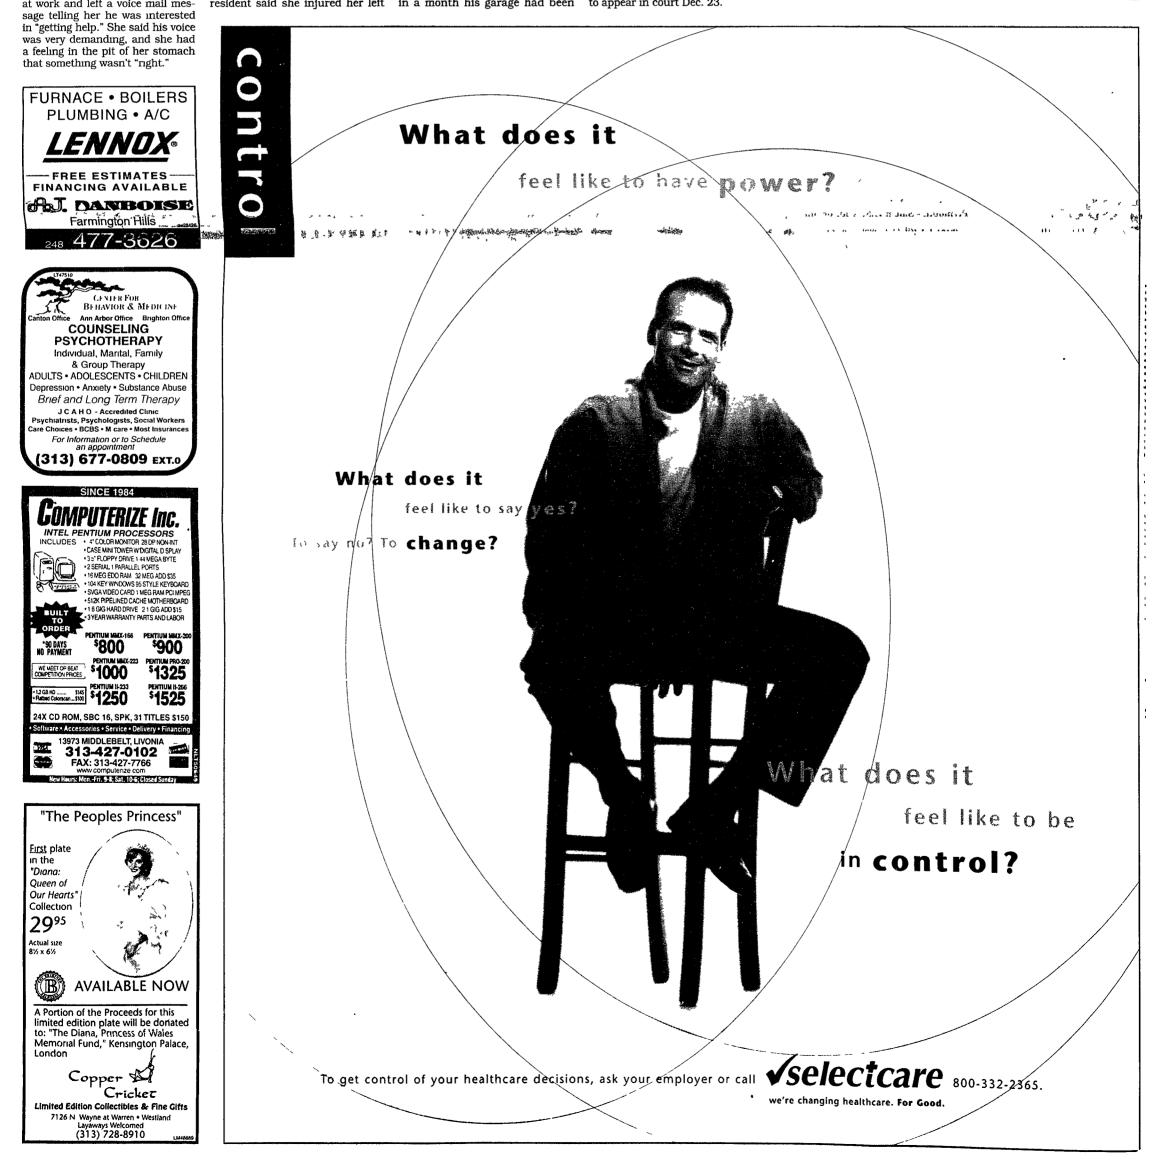

Ayers also acknowledged that while live greens needed to be replaced annually, she questioned the need to purchase new lights so regularly.

Mayor Chris Johnson said that ultimately the Downtown Development Authority and Central Business District make decisions about decoration purchases.

He said some type of review process could be created to verify the decorations being considered would be right for the location. Johnson also said lights are being and would continue to be reused as often as possible.

City prepares for 2000 computer glitch

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Should old acquaintance be forgot, it may be the fault of your computer.

Though families will be celebrating Thanksgiving, Christmas and the new year together, computer experts are getting the annual reminder that the clock is ticking - literally - for what might be a computer crunch of global proportions.

Computers use internal clocks and calendars to help keep track of data. In the early days of computer manufacturing, data storage space was at a premium, so designers found ways to save space whenever possible. One of the methods employed was to use only the last two digits of the dating system, meaning, for instance, that July 9, 1987 would be tagged as 7/9/87.

However, computers can only add, and once the clock chimes midnight Dec. 31, 1999, the processing units will be unable to add one to 99 when only two place values are available.

Signs of the danger have already surfaced at stores where credit cards with expiration dates of 2000 and beyond have tried being used. In some cases, scanners fail to recognize the date and have frozen the store's computer network.

Perhaps no one is more attuned to the seriousness of the matter than White Lake computer systems analyst Roberta Estés. She's been hired by several Michigan municipalities - Northville and Northville Township among them to take a look at the technology systems in place. And what she's found hasn't been pretty.

"It's far worse than people real-ize," she said. "In fact, it's downright ugly.'

Luckily, both the Northvilles are in relatively good shape, Estes said, due mainly to software which is year-2000 compliant. Other communities, however, aren't so lucky.

In one case, Estes said an unnamed municipal client of hers learned they had 900 different programs running the community not one of which was ready to handle the millennium switchover.

"At the rate of discovering, analyzing and fixing one program a day until the year 2000, you won't make it," she said. "It's a very seri-ous problem that people are going to have to deal with.'

Though the situation appears gloomy right now, Estes said the rate of technological turnover currently being experienced should mean that software and hardware manufacturers will have 2000ready materials ready for purchase shortly

Virtually any item which uses a computer to operate could be affected once 2000 rolls around, including electrical service and bank computers.

On the local scene, both township and city officials are trying to get ahead of the rapidly-approaching computer apocalypse, now only 757 days away.

In an effort to help beat the crunch, Northville Township has ordered all new computers for its office, though finance director Thelma Kubitskey said the order wasn't specifically designed with the 2000 crunch in mind.

"We're well-aware of the problem, but we think we got a good jump on it," said Kubitskey.

Bids for new computers are being sought. The computers will be networked for use in the township offices, but Kubitskey said the acquisition of new hardware had more to do with the age of the existing computers - about 18 years old - than the approach of the year 2000.

However, Kubitskey said once the new computers are installed, information which uses the twodigit method of dating won't be downloaded.

"We're going to keep paper records on hand and work from those until we've got everything updated," she said. "So far, we haven't encountered any trouble with the system.'

Over at Michigan Heritage Bank, computer technician Darylle Parker said the Haggerty Road office had an advantage in that its hardware and software was installed with the year 2000 in mind.

"That's really one of our saving graces," Parker said. "Because we're so new, we don't have the same baggage some of our colleagues probably do.'

Parker said banks are recognizing that considerations go beyond the account holdings of the bank's members.

However, Parker said the Federal Depositor Insurance Corporation was beginning to get serious with banks, asking that lending institutions create plans for "2K" ('K' is shorthand for 1,000) upgrades.

Safety can add peace of mind for holidays

Whether the festive sparkle comes from inside or outside the house, a check of electric lights before installation can help give homeowners peace of mind during the holiday season.

Claudia Gabay, Detroit Edison's corporate lighting consultant, said safety should be the No. 1 concern when using seasonal lighting.

"With everything going on around the holidays, it's easy to forget to check decorative lights and other trimmings for safety hazards," Gabay said. "After a year in the basement or attic, cords can crack. A few minutes of checking for potential hazards can possibly prevent a fire or worse.

When lights have frayed wires, missing insulation, they should be thrown away, Gabay said. To reduce the possibility of electrical shock or fires, look for Underwriters Laboratory label before stringing lights and setting up other decorations.

Gabay warned that some light sets may be stamped with bogus UL labels and not designed for safe operation. If you're suspicious about a low price on light sets, she said, compare the UL label with another on a name brand set.

Home decorators also should make sure lights are used as they are intended by their manufacturers - either outdoors or indoors. Gabay noted that a touch test also can help expose potential danger.

the touch, I wouldn't use them," she said.

After the safety checks are completed, you can decorate your home knowing that seasonal lighting is an inexpensive way to put a sparkle on the holidays. Most lights cost from less than one cent to 7.5 cents per string to operate for six hours, depending on the wattage. For lights that blink on and off, the cost is halved.

Gabay said the holidays can be safer for everybody by following these tips:

INDOOR LIGHTING

· Do not overload electrical circuits.

 Use no more than three sets of standard lights on each extension

Do not insert new bulbs or change fuses when light sets are plugged in.

• Keep lights away from carpeting, furniture and drapes.

• Turn off decorative lights before you go to bed or leave home OUTDOOR LIGHTING

 Use only outdoor extension cords with molded plugs and sock-

 Keep all electrical connections off the ground and hang sockets downward to prevent water from seeping into them.

• Do not run lighting cords through door or window openings where they can be damaged. Cover outdoor plugs and connection joints with plastic wrap and seal the ends with electrical tape.

Unemployment bill's fate is grim

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

A House Democratic bill to raise unemployment benefits is probably dead on arrival when the Republcan-controlled Michigan Senate returns to work Dec. 2.

returns to work Dec. 2. The Democrats' gift to organized labor came Nov. 6, three weeks after Republican Gov. John Engler announced that jobless benefit taxes on employers will be cut 10 percent, or $50 million, in 1998.

"Irresponsible," said House minority leader Ken Sikkema, R-Grandville, of the Democratic bill. "In two days' time, House Democrats recklessly undid several years of work fixing a troubled system that was desperately in need of repair."

"This is a major step in correcting the injustice perpetrated two years ago by a callous, mean-spirited, Republican-dominated state Legislature," said Frank Garrison, president of the state AFL-CIO.

Republicans control the Senate 22-16 with the victory of David Jaye in a Macomb County district to fill a vacancy. Democrats have a 58-51 margin in the House with Jaye's departure.

The stalemate means that Public Act 25 of 1995, passed when Republicans controlled both chambers, is still in effect.

House Bill 5303, sponsored by Rep. Rose Bogardus, D-Davison, is aimed at restoring jobless benefits to the pre-1995 level. Her changes: • Restores the benefit rate to 70 percent of after-tax earnings. The GOP (current) law pegs them at 67 percent. • Raises the maximum benefit to 58 percent of the state average weekly wage of $591.18, or $342.88. That's $42.88 more than the current law. The Bogardus bill restores cost-of-living indexing because "the buying power of a $300 unemployment check is less and less each year," she said.

• Allows seasonal workers to qualify for jobless benefits.

• Reduces the amount a worker must earn to qualify for benefits. Ironically, the threshold was raised when the Legislature in 1996 hiked the minimum wage from $3.35 to $5.15 per hour.

Engler announced Oct. 16 that an automatic 10 percent tax cut for employers would take effect in tax year 1998 because the state had a higher-than-anticipated balance in its Unemployment Trust Fund.

"The trust fund owed the federal government a $417 million debt in 1991. Through hard work, we've erased that debt entirely and built a $2 billion surplus," Engler said.

Michigan's balance had to be at least $2.077 billion to trigger the reduction. The U.S. Treasury Department said Michigan's mid-1997 balance was $2.088 billion with no outstanding debt.

Michigan employers pay unemployment insurance taxes are assessed against the first $9,500 of wages of an employee. The maximum tax rate has been 10 percent. In 1998 it will 9 percent.

Jim Barrett, president of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, said a major chamber goal is to "preserve the (1995) reform measures. It would be irresponsible to drain the UI Trust Fund when we've finally built up an adequate surplus to protect unemployed workers during the next economic downturn."

Under an executive order issued Aug. 6 by Engler, jobless benefits are now handled by the Department of Consumer & Industry Services. Job finding services are handled by the Jobs Commission.

The GOP's Sikkema credited the 1995 changes with "prompting record declines in unemployment and welfare cases while expanding job opportunities for working men and women and fueling Michigan's economic expansion."

THE CHARLEY HORSE

While most people associate the popular term "Charley horse" with a cramp specific to the leg, the cramp can occur in any muscle in the body. In fact, the phrase may be used as a blanket term for any type of muscle spasm. What causes Charley horses? They may be triggered by impact injuries or they may arise during activities in which muscle cramping might occur (such as running). Some people can also attest to the fact that Charley horses occur when they sleep in an unusual position that cuts circulation to an area and deprives it of oxygen. Even an electrolyte imbalance, which deprives the body of such important elements as calcium and potassium, can cause muscle spasms.

If you suffer from an unusual amount of cramping or muscle spasms, call Northville Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Inc. at 349-3816 Our team of therapists develops customized programs to treat individual problems resulting from injury, illness, the aging process, or developmental problems. We also work closely with referring physicians and provide timely initial evaluations and routine progress correspondence. Located at 215 E. Host families sought for international exchange students

By WENSDY WHITE Staff Writer

Welcoming a foreign exchange student can be an educational experience for everyone in the home, and an international organization is seeking host families in Northville.

Students from Scandinavia to Spain participate in the International Student Exchange Program (ASSE) in hopes of studying abroad, and the program needs volunteer hosts as well as program coordinators.

"We really need more representatives in the general area. Oakland and Wayne counties are kind Rapids we have five to six representatives and that's what we need around here too," said ASSE spokesperson Pat Hagen Juhl.

Representatives are in charge of screening the host families, interviewing students and monitoring the student/host relationships throughout the school year.

"The representatives act as advocates for the student and provide a support system for the family and school," Juhl said. And though Juhl said it isn't much, reps do get a stipend and are reimbursed for their expenses. Currently, the program has of slim for us. In places like Grand about 2,500 foreign exchange students placed in homes across the U.S., with 109 attending high schools in Michigan.

"We always have over 100 students in Michigan. It's just a very active state in foreign exchange,' Juhl said.

Students stay with a host family usually for a full school year. The hosts don't get compensated but they do have the ability to deduct up to $50 a month from their taxes The students come with their own spending money, and they get insurance coverage through the International Student Exchange Programs.

Their visa designation makes the organization responsible for their welfare.

ASSE provides academic year exchange programs in the U.S. for Scandinavian, German, Swiss, British, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, Czech and Slovak Republic, Polish, Japanese, Brazilian, Australian, New Zealand, Mexican and Canadian students who are 15-18 years old and have met all academic and character qualifications.

That includes having a B aver-mendation from the school, teachers and the community.

The organization doesn't require experience with a foreign language, but students go to a language camp while they are there. ASSE's primary goal is to contribute to international understanding through exchange programs enabling students to learn about other language and cultures through active participation in family, school, and community life.

"It's an experience to live in a different culture and to experience everything in that culture," Juhl time." Juhl has hosted two students herself.

She refers to the two visiting Swedish students as "daughters," and said they maintain a relationship to this day.

"It adds to your whole life experience," Juhl said. "Making that connection makes the world a whole heck of a lot smaller."

For further information about becoming involved with ASSE Student Exchange are asked to contact Pat Hagen Juhl by calling (414) 781-4811 or writing ASSE at 326 South Broadway Wayzata, MN 55391.

City Council Briefs

Notes from the Dec. 1 meeting of the Northville City Council:

PHONE TOWER APPROVED:

Ameritech was granted approval to install a cellular phone antenna under the bell of the Northville city water tower.

An illustration provided by Ameritech spokesperson Steve Wells showed the design of the antenna will be essentially two narrow rings with small vertical pieces of metal jutting skyward.

A utility shed will be placed at the base of the water tower. No lights will be attached to the antenna.

Ameritech will pay $1,650 per month for the first 60 months of the lease with the possibility of lease payment increases after that. Funds generated through the lease will be placed in the city's utility fund.

CALLING ALL YOUNG WOMEN:

Representatives from Farmington were on hand to inform city council that the Miss Farmington Hills contest is expanding the geographic area from which the contest would be drawing contestants

Former Miss Michigan Jennifer Hemke said the pageant was open to all women ages 17 to 24. Hemke said much greater emphasis by judges was being placed on communications skills, intelligence and talent, and less on beauty.

More information on the pageant would be placed at the Northville Chamber of Commerce building, Hemke said.

Police departments would be protected from lawsuits in high speed chases partly shielded from lawsuits resulting from their pursuits of fleeing suspects under a state Senate-passed bill.

The Senate Nov. 13 passed the main measure 34-0, but rejected amendments by Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, to allow more product liability suits.

"It deals with police pursuits," said Sen. William VanRegenmorter, R-Jenison, seeking to shut off debate on Peters' amendments.

"We need to revisit this because we now know that we made a mistake last year," said Peters, pointing to heart damage done to people taking the appetite depressant drug Phen-Fen.

The Senate, on almost party-line

Police departments would be votes, rejected Peters' amendments. Then, at the urging of Sen. Mike Bouchard, R-Birmingham, it passed SB 163 without opposition. Three members, including the hospitalized Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, were absent.

SUITS LIMITED Purpose of the VanRegenmorter bill is to limit lawsuits against police agencies resulting from injuries during chases. Key provisions:

• Non-economic damages (pain and suffering) would be limited to $1 million.

• The $1 million cap could be lifted if the police agency were guilty of "gross negligence," defined as "conduct so reckless as to demonstrate a substantial lack of concern for whether an injury results."

· Economic damages could be fully recovered, but a jury or judge would have to itemize economic losses.

• A person injured while fleeing police could not sue.

A companion measure, House Bill 4039, would establish a panel in the Law Enforcement Council to draft a model pursuit policy. The protections in SB 163 would apply only to agencies that adopted the model policy and used trained pursuit drivers.

No figures were available for total payouts in the tri-county (Wavne, Oakland, Macomb) area. Here are figures from the other 80 counties:

resulting from police chases cost $4 million, according to the Michigan Municipal League Liability Pool.

• In 11 years (mid-1988 to October 1997), 22 deaths and 24 serious injuries resulted from 39 police chases; payouts totaled $22. million, according to the Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority.

PETERS CRITICIZED

Peters, a freshman lawmaker and member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, was criticized by VanRegenmorter for failing to introduce his amendments during committee hearings and in preliminary debate.

Sen. John Cherry, D-Clio,

• In the past years, 11 payouts esulting from police chases cost 4 million, according to the Michi-amendments to be offered on third reading (final passage)," Cherry said, "but sometimes I find that I'm not fully abreast of a situation until it's on third reading. So I see nothing wrong with offering a third reading amendment. The rules provide for it."

Cherry also blistered Republicans for refusing to discuss the merits of the Peters' amendments.

Both police chases on product liability are covered by the same umbrella law, the Revised Judicature Act of 1996. Currently the state law bars an injured person from collecting damages unless the manufacturer "knows or should have known" the product was defective. Peters said that act "gave drug manufacturers absolute immunity if they had Federal Drug Administration approval. We are the only state in the Union that gives absolute immunity if a drug company has FDA approval."

د الم

Minnesota said Peters researchers found significant heart valve leaks in 25 percent of 226 patients taking appetite depressant drugs.

"It's ironic that the majority party (Republicans) is actually attacking the FDA today in Congress," he said, "by cutting funds from the FDA and trying to put in an expedited review process to allow more drugs to get to the market quicker."

Local U-M fans smell roses, make plans for New Year's Day

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Feeling pumped about the Maize and Blue's big game?

Join the club Better yet, join the alumni club.

Northville's University of Michigan alumni are making plans for the New Year's Day affair in Pasadena.

Bars and living rooms will no doubt be jammed for the game, but perhaps no single residence will be quite as devoted as that of Lou LaChance.

LaChance's loyalty to U-M won him a spot on the front page of the Oct. 24 Detroit Free Press and a radio interview on WJR-AM. LaChance said he has plans to make it out to the Rose Bowl, but family obligations may interfere.

In the off-chance the New Year's trip is scrapped, LaChance said he, his family and friends will be packed into the "M-Room," his lower-level rec room where everything - including a miniature Goodyear blimp — sings praises to the Ann Arbor team.

Those paying a visit to the LaChance home are greeted by a doorbell which plays "Hail To The Victors.

"Suffice it to say, if it comes together, we'll go," LaChance said. When asked about Michigan's jinx in the Rose Bowl. LaChance said this year's Big Ten champions aren't the same as the ones which fell prey to the west coast representation.

"There's a difference this year." he said. "The way the defense has stepped up has impressed me. It's going to be awfully tough. I think it's important that they don't get caught up in the hoopla out there.

LaChance said that despite being comparable in viewing capacity, the Rose Bowl's architecture makes it a less intimidating place to play than Michigan Stadium.

Northville alumni group president Martha Nield said she won't be able to bask in the California sunshine Jan. 1, as she and her husband will be skiing the mountains of Colorado.

Still, Nield, a member of the U-M class of 1971, said she's excited ed squad and is looking forward to the Wolverines' date with Washington State.

They did an excellent job this season," she said. "There was none of that prima donna stuff. It was just a bunch of nice guys going out there and playing hard for 11 games.'

Nield is no stranger to Wolverine football excellence. She was in Ann Arbor during the early years of famed Michigan head coach Bo Schembechler and played witness to the last undefeated Michigan season previous to this one.

Nield said the alumni group's main function is to help secure and donate scholarship money to Novi and Northville High School about the success of the undefeat- students. Last year, the group of dead serious. 125 alums raised $5,000 for future students.

Another Northville resident, Barbara Willoughby, said that despite being a Georgia native. she and her family have been following Michigan football for many years.

"They're excellent," she said, and added that the Willoughby clan is trying to make arrangements to get out to the Rose Bowl as part of a mid-winter trip to Houston.

Of course, she still follows gridiron action in the Peach State.

"Down there, the Georgia / Georgia Tech division is just plain nasty," she quipped. "It's not a joke - people take that game

In Service

Getting tickets to the Rose Bowl might prove to be more difficult a task than going undefeated. U-M officials are trying to scrambling to find a fair way to sell the 28,000 tickets allocated to the school. About 12,000 of those have already been set aside for alumni, player families and band members. The Rose Bowl will kickoff at 5 p.m. Detroit time on Jan. 1.

The game will be televised on Channel 7 (WXYZ-TV). It's the last year the Big Ten and PAC-10 champions will be guaranteed spots for the game.

Washington State brings a 10-1 record into the game and is ranked No. 7 in the Coaches' Poll.

Marines, Rotaries launch Toys for Tots

The Northville/Novi Coalition of the Toys for Tots campaign is hard at work again this year. The organization has a lot of new volunteers and now covers the entire area from Livonia west to Fowlerville.

It is now one of the area's largest community groups.

The Toys for Tots program is sponsored by Rotary Clubs and the U.S. Marine Reserve. Generjous individuals are urged to bring a new, unwrapped toy to one of the several drop-off points around the area. The Marines will collect the toys and distribute them to needy families later in the month.

This year, the Toys for Tots program celebrates its 50th anniversary. The organization was founded in 1947 by Major Bill Hendricks, who collected 5,000 toys for distribution around the Los Angeles area. Singer Kenny Rogers is the national spokesperson for Toys for Tots this year.

Last year, the Southern Michigan Toys for Tots chapter ranked fifth in the nation, distributing 250,000 toys to children throughout the region.

In addition to donations, help is needed in several areas. People can become involved by providing a toy collection site or by assisting in the transportation and storage of toys. Especially helpful would be warehouse space of approximately 1,000 square feet or more or one week.

Amerman students view moon rocks form NASA

The rock samples were encased in a disc of plastic about two inches thick, which Wayne had to tote in a locked metal case at all times. "Wherever I go, the rocks go. They do not leave my sight," Wayne said.

But he didn't have to sleep with them under his pillow, thanks to Community Federal Credit Union's offer of overnight vault space.

"As you can imagine, these artifacts are very valuable," Amerman Principal Dr. Stephen Anderson said. "And they give us a chance to use our video microscope."

The video microscope, purchased for the school by the Amerman PTA, magnified the moon rocks onto a video monitor, enabling students to examine them together during science class.

The students saw anothosite rock, taken from the areas of the moon which appear light to the naked eye, and learned to discern anothosite particles in a "High-lands Sand" sample taken from the highest points on the moon, mountains which reach 29,000 feet.

From the dark patches, referred to as the "man in the moon," came a basalt sample. Basalt is formed during volcanic eruptions and is also found on the Earth's surface.

The moon rocks at Amerman were a small sampling of the 843 pounds of rock that were collected by astronauts from 1971 to '73 during Apollo missions 15, 16 and 17.

They came to Amerman via registered mail from a NASA research center in Ohio. The center's holdings include 20 such moon rock samples that are loaned out to teachers in the Midwest who've attended two one-hour training sessions to learn curriculum and handling of the precious stones.

Wayne, who will be a studentteacher in Jeff Lightfoot's fifth grade class through December, used the rocks to launch into lessons about space missions and Neil Armstrong's famous moon walk of 1969.

Although he was only a baby at the time, Wayne told students how his parents propped him up in front of the TV so he could witness the momentous event.

And almost 30 years later, Wayne and his students had their hands on pieces of the distant orb.

"This is an excellent opportunity not only for myself but also for the students. I really enjoy learning about the moon and NASA, Wayne said. "It's made what we've been learning about (in our space unit) the last few weeks really exciting to the students."

Goodfellows hawk newspapers to raise funds for charities cern never hands out cash, but reviews each family's case individually to see how they may best help out, whether it be by paying utility bills or even purchasing musical instruments so children can participate in band classes at school.

Northville Civic Concern was founded in 1983 when the late Charlie Smith started passing out food to the needy from his garage on Nine Mile Road, according to Kunz.

At the age of 88, Smith launched the newspaper drive as a holiday fund raiser, modeling it on the historic Detroit Goodfellows who've traded newspapers for donations since 1914. But what Smith started in Northville as a holiday fund raiser grew into a full-time volunteer organization.

"He was standing on the street corner selling Goodfellow papers with the realization that if children were in need of clothing, food and sundries at the holidays, they would need those things all year 'round," Kunz said.

Thus, Civic Concern was born. The full time organization is now run by Kunz, who has been on the board of directors since its inception. Although she doesn't pay herself a dime in salary, she is in charge of deciding where the charity is best spent.

winter walden

"I'm not putting it all into Christmas toys if that's already taken care of," Kunz said. "The money will be put into the coffers of an emergency reserve fund and used on a need basis all year 'round.'

Although donations have totaled up to $9,000 in past years, Kunz said the drive's success often hinges on the weather. This Saturday, cold weather and light snow are predicted.

But no matter what mother nature dishes up, the Goodfellows will be out in full force from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday at the following locations:

- Main and Center St.
- Dunlap and Center St.
- Eight Mile and Center St.
- Eight Mile and Novi Rd.

Northville Civic Concern distributes food to those in need on the second and fourth Fridays of every month from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 215 W. Cady.

make a lot of changes to the Chesapeake format to bring the bakery up to Northville standards.

Anthony said he ended up doing so much on his own that he began wondering exactly what he was getting when he paid for the Chesapeake name.

"You pay them for professional marketing materials, operational advice and a purchasing co-op, Anthony explained. "But we ended up building the store on our own, we created a lot of the architecture on our own, and the menus. We found if we wanted to look professional, we had to do it ourselves."

Because he hired an architect to come up with the shop's colorful contemporary design, Anthony won't have to change the interior of the shop as he makes the change to an independent operation.

However he has had to order a new sign, get new T-shirts for his staff and hire legal counsel for advice.

Overall he estimates the cost to switch both stores at $20,000.

"That shows you how important it is to us, and we want our name to reflect our market," Anthony said.

Customers who visit Motor City Bagels won't notice much of a difference, even though few subtle changes have already been phased in.

Anthony said the bagels have been increased from four to five ounces, and they're now being seeded and salted on both sides. Bakers have also already begun slipping more raisins into the bagel batches, and the catering menu has a couple of new items.

Soon, a turkey club may be added to the sandwich menu. Anthony asks that customers be patient while the store tests new paper products and menu items.

"If customers have any suggestions we want to hear them. Now that we're not a franchise anymore we can make changes immediately and that's the biggest advantage that I can see," Anthony said.

Motor City Bagels offers specialty coffees, and cooks up a variety of bagels and pastries daily. Also on the menu are bagel and croissant sandwiches, bagel pizzas, salads and homemade soup.

The Northville location is at 250 N. Center St. It's currently open Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., though Anthony said evening and Sunday hours may be Mayor Chris Johnson first thanked Meeker and the residents for their input. He then brought up the advent of a traffic control device which mounts a radar gun above a city street, then photographs vehicles moving at excessive rates of speed and mails a ticket to the offender.

Johnson said state legislators have not granted any municipality in Michigan the right to install such devices, but said lobbying Lansing representatives could help the city secure the equipment.

However, Johnson also pointed out that North Center was not a purely residential street and that the needs of business owners along North Center needed to be taken into consideration, as well. Council member John Hardin

Our Opinion

Do your part to reduce crime during the season

Sad as it is, crime is fast becoming as much a part of the holiday landscape as turkey or colored lights, and Northville area merchants could have helped create a model for a cutback in illegal activities by working with local police. Unfortunately, that didn't happen.

Northville Township police made an attempt last month to assist business owners by hosting a free two-hour seminar to help prepare for the inevitable increase in crime, as well as make merchants aware of the special services police will offer to businesses. Three business owners appeared at the forum, with virtually no representation from the community's big-ticket retail outlets. We view this as a sad state of affairs.

Take the example given by Detective Fred Yankee of the $10 billion in bad checks passed onto the nation's merchants last year. Broken down, that means every man, woman and child in this country bounced over $39 in checks during 1996. Bad checks may seem like a victimless crime, but it's essentially robbery minus a gun which translates into higher prices and more hassle for everyone at the checkout counter.

And that's just the beginning. much easier for everyone.

Government

There's credit card fraud, illegal returns for refunds, mail theft, shoplifting ... the list could go on and on.

We know that no matter how hard businesses try to plug the holes and prevent loss, someone somewhere will come up with a new scheme for cheating. That isn't fair, but it is a fact of life - a fact of life businesses should wake up to. As the old saying goes, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

We hope that if such a seminar is conducted next year, business owners will take the time to listen.

POSTSCRIPT: Shoppers can do their part to help merchants by advising store owners of suspicious activity, carrying identification and by saving receipts for those items which warrant return. It will make a harried time that

Meeting of minds on flag issues

A few random dispatches from the editor's desk:

FLAG FIGHT

It was good to see that veterans and members of the Novi City Council are beginning to reach an understanding.

Vets showed up at the Novi Ordinance Review Committee meeting last week to discuss the city's restrictions on flag flying, contained in the city's sign ordinance. The result was that both vets and council members seemed to understand each other's points of view. Vets, who fought for the country, hold the flag in special regard. So it is understandable that they don't want to see restrictions on the flying of American flags. Yet they do see that some businesses exploit the flag for commercial purposes. AMVET Duane Bell acknowledged that in the meeting.

Council members likewise acknowledged that the American flag should be honored and flown. Several expressed that they themselves have a strong sense of patriotism.

Now, that still doesn't resolve the issue entirely. For instance, there is the huge flag flown by the car wash on Novi Road in the town center area.

Council member Robert Schmid saw that as a misuse of the flag. Bell on the other hand said: "At night when this thing is closed down and all you've got is the light shining on that, it's really something to look

Those are differences in interpretation, but at least they have the beginnings of a meeting of the minds.

BAD BABYSITTING

Did you realize that it is illegal to leave your kids with a neighbor. You can let a relative care for them. Or you can leave them with a licensed daycare operator. But putting your child temporarily into the hands of a friends or neighbor, regardless of how much you know or trust them, is against the law.

It was outlawed in the Child Care Act of 1973, which was set up to license and regulate daycare operations.

People do it all the time of course. It's called babysitting. It's been a standard practice for parents since I can remember. In fact, some local schools offer their students instruction in babysitting.

Now, I have never seen anyone charged or cited for a violation of this law. And I doubt many cops or day care inspectors even realize that is the law. Probably, they would use their discretion and not enforce it if they came across a typical babysitting arrangement.

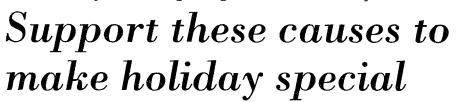

State Rep. Dan Gustafson, R-Williamston, is trying to fix the problem by sponsoring House Bill 5208 that exempts from the regulations what you would normally think of a babysitting.

Nonetheless, this is typical of the occasional overreach of regulations adopted by government. You can almost imagine how the law got to be that way. Trying to bring the daycares under regulation, lawmakers probably were seeking to close possible loopholes.

But that is part of the danger of overreaching regulation - you put normal people doing normal things in the position of being lawbreakers.

This is the season when you hear a -- Northville-Civic Concern, an organizalot of talk about compassion and humanity. There's also a lot of talk about how such thinking is impractical in a society filled with cynicism and selfishness. You can't save the world, the so-called realists say, so why do anything at all?

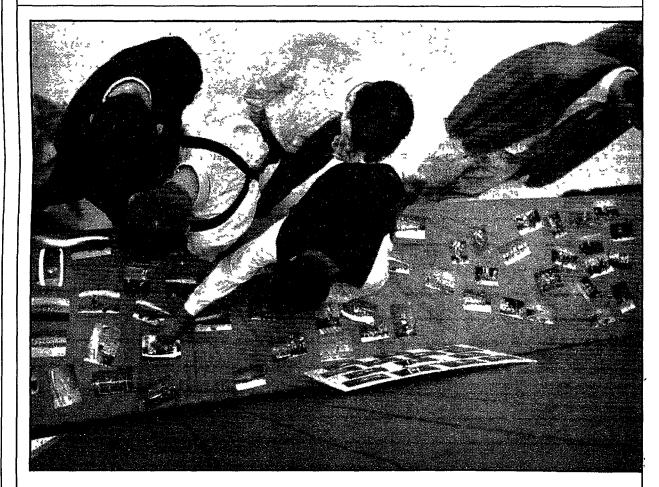

We'll tell you why - because the world isn't some impossible, far-off monolith. It's made up of individuals and each one of us can help at least one person out there who needs it.

We're not talking about donating a kidney or becoming a missionary. You can make a real difference in the life of one of your neighbors just by taking the time to buy a newspaper or a Christmas toy. That might take only a few minutes and a few dollars, but that small effort, when combined with that of thousands of others, can truly work miracles.

tion that lends a helping hand in the form of food and other services to dozens of families right here in the local community.

The Goodfellows drive has brought a lot of help to a lot of people for a long time and it's all based on an uncountable number of small acts of kindness by people who took a little time and money to show they care.

The same is true of the Toys for Tots program, another effort that started small but has done an immeasurable amount of good through the years. A man named Bill Hendricks Toys for Tots more than half a century ago when he discovered that no one was giving poor children a toy to open on Christmas. The group he founded has given toys to more than 100 million needy kids.

And that's a place to start.

Many of our neighbors, some of whom might live right here in Northville, need help. Some food, a warm coat or a Christmas toy for a child who would otherwise get nothing would be a godsend to them.

Here are a few ways in which you can help make it happen:

First of all, be sure to buy a special edition of The Northville Record as part of the Northville Rotary Club Goodfellows newspaper drive this Saturday. Volunteers will be positioned at intersections all over town for much of the day seeking your donations, which is anything you'd care to give.

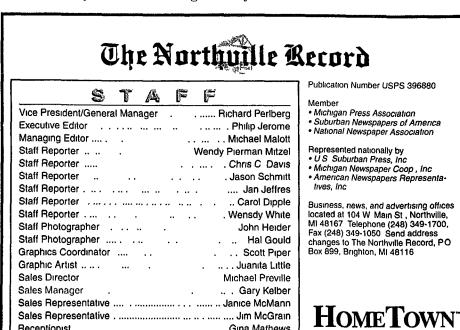

The money raised will go to you,

Receptionist Gina Mathews

Toys for Tots is now collecting donations in the Northville/Novi area. Look for the list of drop-off points elsewhere in this edition and take a new, unwrapped toy to one of them.

Then, of course, there are the Salvation Army red kettle volunteers who will be stationed at store fronts all over the area this holiday season. The small change and loose bills they'll collect will help fund the many charitable programs the Army dedicates itself to each year.

Your support can make this Christmas one that someone will treasure for a long time. Come to think of it, so will be out Christmas shopping then. I wanted to find out what what the everyone was doing and why.

I was hoping to be brought back to the mainstream, because although I purchase sooner, I come back with the kind of stuff most likely to go straight to the dustbin.

Unfortunately, no one was talking. I just heard one conversation that even touched on the topic.

Young mother: What do we buy grandma? Preschool daughter: I want a diamond.

Dad: Your husband will buy you that.

Then I started asking people, what are the worst gifts you've ever given? The idea was I'd find out what not to do.

exotic for my mother and saw - in a glass case - an old wooden milk jug, formerly belonging to a member of the Turkana tribe in Kenya. In the case, it looked rustically attractive, a real conversation piece.

Then, I got this prize home. The jug had been used to store unrefrigerated, unpasteurized milk in Africa for how many years? The thing reeked. I sprayed it with Lysol. That had no impact. For a month before Christmas, I hid it in a box full of cedar chips, room deodorizers and more shots of Lysol.

On Christmas day, it still had a rancid aroma. This little treasure spent a few more months back in the box before my mother could actually put it in her living room.

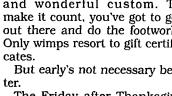

But nobody else had any stories about the crummiest gifts they've ever foisted on the unwary, maybe because their friends and relatives are too polite to tell them when their selections are out there in tackyland.

Next, I asked people about the worst gifts they've ever received. Now, that's a conversation starter. Apparently, it's better to give dubious goods than receive them. Underwear. Socks. Flashlight. Hot, chocolate mix. A hair brush.

Kathy Kimble, who works at the Art Source in downtown Northville, is the only person I've ever met who actually got lumps of coal in her stocking. Don't imagine Santa Claus did this to her, it was her dad, who loved practical jokes. Also when she was a kid, he served her rocks with gravy for Thanksgiving.

"I think we were just kind of awestruck and never said anything," she explained.

New way to fill educational boards

For decades, political insiders have been shaking their heads in wonder at Michigan's odd and virtually unique system of selecting members of major

The usual result is that those so selected are virtually unknown and largely ignored by a news media preoccupied with other, sexier races. In turn, this lends a certain random quality to the outcome of elections, with winners generally riding on the coattails of Democratic or Republican candidates for governor or president.

That's too bad, because these boards, although largely unknown, have a considerable impact on Michigan public policy and shouldn't be selected merely on somebody else's coattails. The State Board of Education, for instance, oversees the contentious charter school experiment, while the U-M Board of Regents is at the center of the far-reaching lawsuit challenging the university's practice of using affirmative action in admissions decisions in order to achieve a diverse student body.

For years, however, this system has worked pretty well in practice. The key to making the process work has been sensible and far-sighted board members who, well in advance of their party's conventions, have recruited able candidates and worked to wire the conventions by selling their candidates to the party leaders and interest groups.

Sometimes the system doesn't work. Absent good early candidates and a pre-wired convention, the urge to play ticket balancing or interest group politics becomes uncontrollable. I remember sitting in on the Democratic Party's "Midnight Caucus" some years ago when people started talking seriously about how important it was to find a female Pole from the Upper Peninsula to run for the MSU board.

In recent years, the Republican Party has experienced considerable trouble with educational nominations, in large part because the political litmus test required of all candidates by Right to Life, the predominant interest group in the GOP, is an unquestioned antiabortion position.

Two years ago, for instance, Judy Frey, an experienced civic worker from Grand Rapids, was recruited by Gov. John Engler to run for the U-M board. Engler even gave her nominating speech. But Frey lost the nomination to Mike Bishop, an unknown lawyer from Rochester Hills whose main claim to fame was serving as president of his fraternity while an undergraduate at U-M.

The issue was abortion. Frey was pro-choice; Bishop, whose late entry into the race was orchestrated by Right to Life and the religious right, was pro-life.

Sen. John Schwarz, the leading legislative authority on higher education, is angry about it. "Judy Frey was treated shabbily, shamefully, by my party," Schwarz says, arguing that it is not only wrong but absolutely wrong" to choose university trustees solely on the bases of their ideology on abortion or the services they have rendered to powerful party interest groups.

And Schwarz, who chairs the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on higher education. wants to do something about it. It's tough, he admits, to change the Michigan Constitution, which specifies that university boards shall be elected statewide.

But at a recent meeting of the Michigan Association of Governing Boards of State Universities, Schwarz proposed a legislative statute specifying primaries rather than conventions as the means of nominating candidates for state university posts. Legislation to that end could be passed to take immediate effect without going through all the trouble of amending the Michigan Constitution.

Schwarz's idea received a mixed reception. Carl Pursell, a veteran Republican legislator and now serving as (an appointed, by the governor) regent of Eastern Michigan University, predicted "his bill won't fly."

But Sen. Schwarz has performed an important public service by bringing into sharp focus an important aspect of the soft underbeily of Michigan politics. His ideas deserve a fair and robust hearing.

Traffic upsetting to local parents

To the editor:

There is a major problem at Northville High School upsetting many parents and students. In the morning, many students are dropped off by their parents, causing a lot of traffic on the front hill.

When parents finally reach the top of the hill, there is no place to turn around so parents stop in the middle of the entrance to the parking lot and let their kids out. Then they try to make a U-turn and head back down the hill. This results in a lot of traffic build up making many students tardy for their first hour class.

What is going to happen when the middle school students come up to the high school for grades six through eight? There will be even more students getting dropped off because none of them will be able to drive themselves to school. This is why we feel some kind of turn-around system is needed to relieve a lot of stress on narents and students along with helping students get to class on time.

Right now the front hill is a zoo in the morning and establishing some sort of drop-off system could help control this problem. Marc Olin

A transportation expert told me low speeds, so accidents are usually minor. Therefore, the cost of seat belts is not justified. There is also an expert who helps children grieve, but I pray we

As a physician in Geriatrics, I do many things in the hopes of preventing problems in the last decades of life. We give thousands of vaccines in the hopes of saving one life. If we are willing to pay for a chicken pox or hepatitis vaccine for our child(ren), surely we should be willing to invest in seat belts for school buses. The magnitude of any loss in the first decades of life is so great that it cannot be given a monetary weight in a cost-effectiveness analysis. I won't drive until everyone is buckled. My first grade son lets me know if he hasn't successfully buckled. Children learn the importance very quickly, and reinforce this with others. Why this is no longer "important" on a bus is difficult to explain. This inconsistency dulls the fear of motor vehicles dents being a leading cause of death for teens and young adults. Northville should be a leader in putting the safety of our children first. New school buses should be equipped with seat and shoulder belts, with only these buses allowed on expressways. The expense of air bags for private vehicles makes basic belts/harnesses on buses seem a small investment for our precious cargo.

In this time of financial challenge, I am certain that others (in addition to myself) would be willing to donate our time and our money to this effort. If we save the life of even one child in the next century, our investment would be well worth it.

Classical music lost on air waves

To-the editor: Tim Richard's column of Nov. 27, expressed the feelings of many of us who prefer classical music to rock and roll. With the new owners of WQRS changing that station from being part of the art scene of the city of Detroit to rock and roll so they could make more money, the local airwaves are now the exclusive property of those who prefer agitated, undeveloped 'music" sung by mediocre voices.

The highest expressions of Western Civilization - Beethoven's Fifth, Shubert's Unfinished Symphony, Verdi's operas, etc. - have no place in this area. The philosopher Spengler warned that we are entering the winter of Western Civilization. Local radio is right in step marching while worshiping its god, the mighty "Dollar." And a word to the businesses who blast rock and roll into our ears at every corner of their stores. I am not the only one who has walked out in disgust at such abuse.

The state Court of Appeals .ecord doesn't indicate whether they fired at anything or anyone. Nor does it indicate whether Jim and Chris had been problem kids where this incident could be called "the last straw." "After an investigation and a disciplinary hearing," said he court, the boys were expelled.

Their parents and guardians sued. A trial udge issued an injunction prohibiting Hillsdale School District from enforcing the expulsion. The school district appealed and, last month, won in the Court of Appeals.

There are some intriguing points.

Whoa, said the parents and trial court. The school policy is lifted mainly from state law, but the law doesn't include a B-B gun on the that is a little more weapons list. Hillsdale School District added chilling, stemming the B-B gun sentence itself.

The appeals court upheld the school. "School boards enjoy broad discretion in fashioning rules ... Indeed such power is basic to the operation of schools ... Thus, it is beyond question that defendant had the authority to prohibit B-B guns on school property ..

So the rule seems to be that a school district, a creature of the state, may fashion a local rule more restrictive than state law.

Second, the punishment. The policy says the board "shall permanently expel a pupil from attending a school in the School District ... if the pupil possesses a weapon in a weapon-free school zone. Such expulsion is mandatory.

Here, I think, we run into trouble. It's the same kind of trouble we as a state have run into with the Legislature's incessant cry for 'tough new laws" and mandatory life sentences without parole.

A kid who violates the policy is booted not just from Davis Middle School but any school in the district. Permanently. He can't transfer to another building. As a practical matter, his parents must pay for a private school, make travel arrangements for him to go to another district, or move out of town.

Now, suppose an adult had brought a B-B gun onto school property. He would not be violating MCL 380.1311, the law on which the school policy is based. Maybe the local cops could nail him under the disorderly conduct ordinance; the judge would have some discretion in punishing him.

The points are 1) the punishment against the kid is harsher and 2) the kids' judges have no discretion.

Something is amiss. I seem to recall a U.S. Supreme Court appeal, In Re Gault, in which a minor was punished more severely than an adult for the same transgression.

B-B guns can be dangerous. I would fault the makers of A Christmas Story for failing to have Ralphey's dad, played by Darrin McGavin, show the kid how to make a backdrop with a stack of newspapers or straw so his shots wouldn't ricochet. The movie dad lets Ralphey into the yard with no instruction whatsoever. Ralphey fires at a metal target, and he does get hurt.

Meanwhile, it would behoove local school districts not to copy Hillsdale's mandatory permanent expulsion policy. Someone may take a case beyond the Court of Appeals - and win.

lawmakers unhappy over pay off

By TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

As the Durant case battle sputtered to a close, some lawmakers still were unhappy about the way state government paid off 84 school districts that won a 17-year lawsuit to recover special education funds.

Gov. John Engler signed the pair of bills, calling it a "win-win" proposal for public school K-12 students. "The bills will add an additional $1 billion to help children learn," he said.

That amount includes $211 million for the plaintiff districts, which will get lump sums next April; $640 million over a decade for 400-plus other districts which could have filed claims; and the rest in line items for at-risk pupils.

The Senate passed the bills 34-0 with three absent, including the hospitalized Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion.

A band of House members filed formal protests as the bills sailed through 99-7. Among them:

• Unequal treatment - Rep. Mike Goschka, R-Brant: "It does not treat all special education children the same." Plaintiff districts get Headlee amendment (requiring the their money immediately, but "the rest of the school districts will receive only half of the money that is due them immediately, and the balance will 'supposedly' be paid in equal increments over the next 10 years. There is no guarantee that this will actually happen, as no legislature is bound by the agreements of a previous legislature.

• Money source - The payoff came from the budget stabilization fund, the so-called "rainy day" fund, instead of the year-end surplus in the general fund, Goschka said.

• Inequity - Rep. Alan Cropsey, R-DeWitt: "When Proposal A was voted by the people ... the Legislature promised to work toward equitable funding of the public schools ... The poorest school districts are penalized under this scheme, and the wealthiest school districts are the beneficiaries."

• Shortage of funds - Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti: "It is unconscionable to me that this state can continue to ignore the will of the people as expressed by ... the state to pay for all services it mandates from local government). Now, to add insult to injury, this government seeks to deny the guarantees. . . by at least an inflationary increase in state financial support for their public education.

• No refund - Rep. David Jaye, R-Utica: "This Legislature and the governor rejected Jaye amendments which would have 1) returned $983 million to the property taxpayers, just like a utility overcharge; 2) require a vote in each school district in November 1998 on whether the money should be returned to the property taxpayers or spent on school teachers and bureaucratic perks; 3) any school spending programs should be approved by the voters."

'STATE A MODEL'

Meanwhile, the battle over special education costs - the biggest chunk of money in the Durant lawsuit - continued in the State Board of Education.

The board, during a special meeting Nov. 13, said it will make "significant revisions" to the special education delivery system, but indicated it will support Michigan's higher and costlier standards.

"Our laws served as a model for the first federal laws passed back in 1975," said Dorothy Beardmore, R-Rochester Hills, vice president of the board. "We continue to be the only state educating students with disabilities from birth to 26 years old."

"It is our intent to enable, rather than constrain, local efforts to service children with disabilities." said Jacquelyn Thompson, acting director of the state's office of special education services.

But many suburban K-12 school officials are worried about two things: 1) the rising cost per-pupil of special ed and 2) the growing numbers of kids whose parents demand special ed.

Suburban officials, such as those in MAISL (Michigan Association for Improved School Legislation), fear special ed will eat up general ed funds. No longer do they have the power to go to voters and ask for more property taxes.

CHILD SUPPORT UNIT

Ten Michiganians have beën appointed by the governor and chief justice to a Child Support Coordinating Council, created last month to improve the child support system. Among the members are:

• Denise Chambers, Rochester Hills resident and director of the Genesee County Family Independence Agency - appointed by Gov. John Engler.

• Kirsten Frank Kelly, who will be presiding judge of the new Family Division of Wayne County Circuit Court - appointed by Chief Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. In an unusual step, the group was formed jointly by a gubernatorial executive order and a Supreme Court administrative order.

LOCAL COUNCIL

Two Oakland County residents have been appointed to the new, 17-member Intergovernmental Coordinating Council by the state Supreme Court. The group will give local units a forum to discuss problems in court administration and budgeting. Local appointees are Lynn

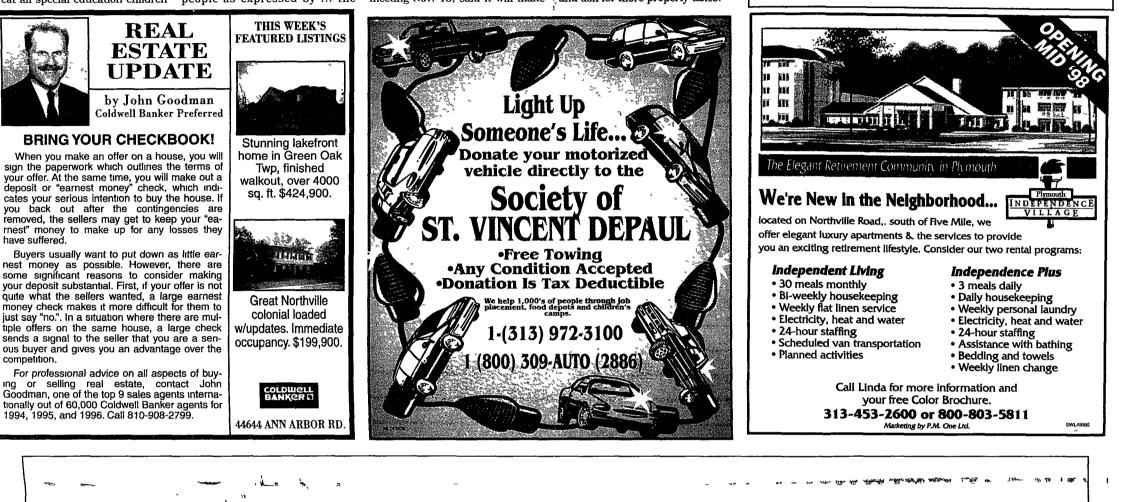

Allen, Oakland County clerk, and Aldo Vagnozzi, mayor of Farmington Hills. The advisory council will meet four times a year. Topping its agenda: implementing the new family division of circuit court. NO RATE HIKE

State officials say Michigan owners of sport-utility vehicles shouldn't be hit by insurance rate hikes occurring elsewhere in the U.S.

Reason: Michigan has a nofault law. "In most instances, the driver responsible for the accident cannot be sued for medical expenses," said Gov. Engler. "The injured person's own auto insurance policy will pay all necessary medical and rehabilitation expenses as well as three years' replacement services and wage loss benefits."

Acting insurance commissioner D.A. D'Annunzio said the two large insurers who announced premium hikes for sport-ute vehicles in other states haven't done so in Michigan.

Novi mother given two years probation for striking daughter

By WENDY PIERMAN MITZEL Staff Writer

"Seventy-five percent of that was lies," said James Herren last week after a judge lectured his wife on her irresponsible behavior.

Kathi Herren, 32, was at 52-1 District Court Nov. 26 to be sentenced for her conviction on misdemeanor assault and battery charges earlier that month. A jury found Kathi Herren guilty of slap-ping her 14-year-old daughter on July 19, although she maintained she was trying to discipline the unruly girl for smoking and disobeving

Kathi Herren was placed on two year's probation by Judge Brian MacKenzie, ordered to attend family and outpatient substance abuse counseling, forbidden the use of alcohol and other drugs, required to submit to random drug testing, and ordered to place any money earned from telling her story to the media in an escrow account for use for counseling fees or her daughter's education.

But MacKenzie first gave Kathı Herren a sermon, questioning her use of alcohol and marijuana in front of her child and pointing out previous decisions to decline family counseling when police have been called to the home.

The night in question was not about discipline, MacKenzie said.

"The evidence ... establishes without question that on the night of July 19, 1997, you were intoxicated and while under the influence of alcohol, you battered your daughter," he explained.

You told my probation officer you had no idea why your daughter was acting out in this way," MacKenzie said. "... Ms. Herren I believe the answer to your question about your daughter's behavior can be found in your behavior that night. Exposing her to your for (your daughter) when you are uncontrolled, intoxicated demeanor combined with your unwillingness to consider the consequences of that behavior is a substantial part of the reason (she) behaves the way she does.'

But while Kathi Herren refused to comment during or after the sentencing, her husband James was clearly angry.

"This was not a fair trial," he said, while standing outside the courthouse. "There was so much reasonable doubt in that trial it wasn't even funny.'

James Herren maintained most of what MacKenzie said about his wife was false. "What it amounts to is harassment," he said.

He also said their new lawyer plans to pursue an appeal, a request for a new trial and other court action. If his wife would have testified on her own behalf, things would have been different, he contended. But they had no idea her former lawyer wasn't going to put her on the stand.

Kathi Herren's new attorney, Frank Yiannatji, tried to explain to MacKenzie the mother was doing the best she could.

"Ms. Herren raised this child for the first ten years of her life on her own," Yiannatji said.

But a soured relationship between Kathi Herren and her daughter's father, an alcoholic, upset the young girl who began to take "umbrage" with her mother, he said. Although she tried to help her daughter, the two formed an ongoing "combat."

This is a mother who attempted to get this child on track." Yiannatji said.

MacKenzie said he didn't feel Kathi Herren was an evil or malicious person "I believe that you wish the best sober and not acting emotionally. I believe that there is genuine love between you and your daughter,' MacKenzie explained.

The case made news last month throughout the state and on national television news programs. It called into question a parent's right to discipline a child.

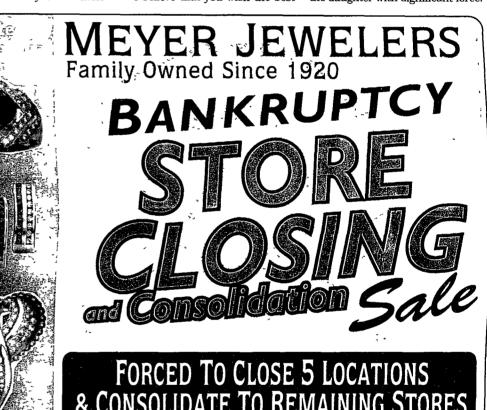

"The issue was about did she have the right to discipline her child and that's 'Yes.' God gave her that right," said Dan Wilson of Parents for Children, a 120 member group backing Kathi Herren. Several members of the group were on hand sporting buttons in support of the mother.

"They turned it into her personal life and used that against her ... Everyone that comes before Judge MacKenzie is an alcoholic," Wilson said.

Rosemary Davis of Ortonville was in the courtroom for another case, but said something needs to be done to allow proper discipline to take place without the threat of police stepping in.

"The whole system is out of control, the way it allows parents to sue children and children to sue parents. There needs to be limits set," she explained. "You pick your fights. This certainly can't be a consistent way of dealing with behavior."

The case began July 19 when the mother of a friend of the girl called Novi police to report a domestic violence incident. But Kathi Herren told police she sent the girl to her room for stealing cigarettes and went into the room when she heard her daughter punch the wall. She claims the girl called her names, then struck out at her, she told police, so she hit the daughter with significant force.

Northville's Brickscape Gardens also offers a wide selection of artificial trees for the Christmas season.

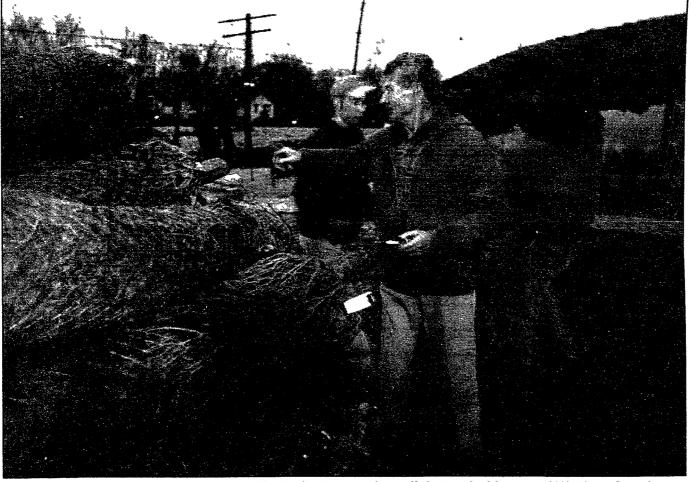

'Tis the season when families pine to spruce up their home for the holidays

e was a cement worker who emigrated from Italy in 1955. Two years later Paolo DiRado got into the Christmas tree business with a few of his Italian buddies. They all did cement work together and would go in on a tree lot," Joe DiRado said of his father's seasonal business.

Joe estimates that his father has sold well over 20,000 trees in the more than 40 years he has operated in Dearborn and Detroit. "I decided to make an extra dollar," the elder DiRado said in broken English. "I buy for $2 each and sell for $7 to $9. Most of the time, DiRado said problems arise because people don't think the trees look that big on the lot. Once home, it's a different story Sometimes, the customer will come back and ask him to cut the tree down. Once, a few years ago, DiRado had three young women come in to buy a tree. They picked out the biggest, bushiest tree on the lot. DiRado tried to tell them it would never fit through a regular-sized door, that they'd have to have double doors to get it into the house. A short time later the girls' father came back with the tree and exchanged it for a smaller one. "We got lots of laughs out of that one," DiRado said. In the four decades that DiRado has sold trees, he's found that the best days are the cold ones. In fact, the colder the better.

"People buy quicker," he said.

It seems most people come from a mall or store directly to the tree lot and are not dressed appropriately.

"Sometimes they look at the trees from the greenhouse and point at the one they want, said Joe.

When DiRado first started selling trees, they were more natural and untinted. Tinting, which contains a preservative to help with needle retention and adds a more seasonal shade of green to the tree, didn't start until about 1965.

"It took a while for people to get used to it," DiRado said.

There is a wide range in the shades of green among the many varieties of trees available and most are not what Veteran Christmas Tree salesman Paolo DiRado checks out a just-off-the-truck shipment of Michigan Scotch Pine and Norway Spruce trees which arrived at Brickscape Gardens this past week.

A Christmas tree in the making

Once upon a time, all Christmas trees were cut from natural stands (or straight out of the forest). These wild trees looked nothing like today's professionally-grown and sheared trees. Today, of the 33 million trees sold every year, over 90 percent are shipped or sold directly from U.S. Christmas tree farms.

Typically, the growing process begins in a nursery where seeds are planted and the trees are grown till they become 2-year-old seedlings. The seedlings are then transplanted to Christmas tree farms.

Growing Christmas trees is a year-round job. It takes an average of seven years for a tree to people consider to be Christmas green.

reach sale height. During that time, the tree must continue to be shaped and pruned to produce the fully shaped trees that are delivered to retail lots.

The Christmas tree also may face many haz-ards during its growth period - too much or too little sun or rain; destruction by insects, disease, hail or fire; overgrowth of brush, vines and weeds; even theft.

Finally, selected trees are tagged, cut, bundled and loaded onto a truck or railroad car for the journey to a retail lot.

Joe said.

One of Joe's tips on buying a tree from a lot is to get to know the people who are selling the trees

"You really want to trust the people you are buying it from," Joe said.

Bending a needle or two is still a good way to tell if a tree is fresh, but Joe also suggests pinching a few bud tips.

"Sometimes there's an indication there how much water is still in the tree," Joe said.

Once you've selected a tree and brought it home, keep it someplace cool, not in the sun. "Right before you put it in water, make a fresh cut in the bottom and put it in the receptacle," Joe said. "There are also additives you can get (to put in the water).

The program will feature "Christmas Cantata" by Daniel Pinkham and a variety of seasonal compositions by Brahms, Rutter and Britten. There will be a Christmas carol sing-along intermission with audience participation encouraged.

The 50-voice ensemble is directed by Livonia native Donald Stromberg, who is in his seventh year as conductor.

The traditional holiday program will be presented on Sunday, Dec. 7, at the First Presbyterian Church, 701 W. Church Street in Plymouth, at 4 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door for $4 each.

A second performance will be held on Saturday, Dec. 13, at St. Matthew's United Methodist Church, 30900 Six Mile Road in Livonia at 8 p.m. Donations will be accepted during intermission.

For more information, call the choir president Shari Clason at (248) 349-8175.

MADRIGAL DINNERS: Schoolcraft College's 21st Annual Madrigal Dinner will be held on Dec. 11, 12 and 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the College's Waterman Center, 18600 Haggerty Road in Livonia.

Members of the culinary arts department will prepare the wassail feast, while the Madrigal Singers under the direction of Steve SeGraves, the Good Neighbors All and members of the music⁴ department will provide entertainilder, enamel, paper, sculpture and more.

For more information, call (313) 662-3382.

HOME TOUR: The Milford Garden Club will host its annual Christmas Home Tour on Dec. 5 and 6 from 6 to 10 p.m. Tickets are $6 and are available at In Your Dreams on Center Street in Northville.

For details, call (248) 685-9281.

MADRIGAL CHORALE: Novi resident Virginia Fallis and the Madrigal Chorale of Southfield will perform their annual Holiday Concert on Friday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m. at the Southfield Presbyterian Church, 21575 West Ten Mile Road, and on Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m. at Old St. Mary's Church in Detroit's Greektown.

Musical highlights will include Berger's "Magnificat," Dawson's "Mary Had a Baby," Rutter's "Candlelight Carol" and traditional caroling

Tickets are $10 per person, $8 for students and seniors.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT: The Plymouth Community Chorus will present its annual Christmas Concert at 8 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 5, and Saturday, Dec. 6, and at 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, at Plymouth-Salem High School, 46181 Joy Road in Canton. Selections will include many traditional Christmas favorites.

'Midnight' features unusual mix of characters

Academy Award-winner Clint Eastwood directs Academy Awardwinner Kevin Spacey and acclaimed talent John Cusack, as well as an outstanding ensemble of supporting actors, in the filmed adaptation of author John Berendt's best-selling novel about a sensational murder trnal in the genteel town of Savannah, Georgia, and the havoc it plays with a subtle and intricately structured way of life.

, In "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil," John Kelso (Cusack) is a young writer from New York who has been sent to Savannah on behalf of Town and Country magazine to cover a very prestigious Christmas party. This elegant, lavish and stylish event is given each year by Jim Williams (Spacey), one of Savannah's most prominent and colorful citizens.

Williams is an antiques dealer, collector and restoration specialist who has built his wealth through the reconstruction and sale of the numerous 18th- and 19-century homes which elegantly frame the city's historic squares. His own home, Mercer House, is located on the corner of Monterey Square and was built in 1860 by General Hugh Mercer, whose great-grandson was popular songwriter Johnny Mercer. The house is an elegant, stately Southern mansion.

John Kelso's assignment seems straightforward. He will simply immerse himself in Savannah's gracious Southern atmosphere and describe the colorful history of Mercer House. He will highlight the party preparations and Jim Williams' exclusive guest list. -Finally, he will attend the elegant black-tie event and report on the festivities.

Unfortunately, things don't quite work out that way.

In a sequence of events set in motion following his courtly 'Christmas party, Jim Williams is arrested for murder Claiming selfdefense, Williams has shot and killed his live-in lover, Billy Hanson (Jude Law), who, it seems, had a history of irrational, often violent behavior.

John Kelso's Town and Country magazine article soon evolves into a book about a startling murder trial in an unexpected setting, with Kelso the outside observer, though not quite the objective eye he hopes to be.

Williams, now jailed, sets up his office in his cell and calmly continues to do business. He is certain that a jury of his peers, aware of Billy Hanson's explosive, unconventional behavior, will find Williams innocent on the grounds of self-defense. But Savannah is wrestling with the question of who Williams' peers might actually be. Are they the neighbors who hoped each year for the richly engraved invitation to Williams' annual Christmas source, or are they a far less conventional group?

Over the coming months, Savannah provides the stage for a morality play generated by Wilhams and reflected through some of the city's more eccentric inhabitants. The situation becomes increasingly entangled, as gossip and Savannah's unique approach to social disorder and problem-solving leave their stamp on events

Williams' attorney, Sonny Seiler (Jack Thompson) is the man leading the defense. The case is 'a daunting proposition for Sonny during football season, since Seiler is a rabid fan and the proud owner of Uga, bulldog mascot to the University of Georgia football team. University of Georgia victories and losses on the gridfron have a way of influencing Seiler's effectiveness in the courtroom; fortunately, a win over Notre Dame comes at a pivotal moment in the trial.

Joe Odom (Paul Hipp) is a freespirited ex-attorney who enjoys house sitting for absentee Savannah homeowners, charging tourists to walk through the period properties he's temporarily occupying and celebrating the process at all hours of the day and night with liquor, song and lodging for his friends. Odom is an observer of Jim Williams' life, friends and behavior, both before and after "The Incident," as it comes to be described.

Mandy Nichols (Alison Eastwood) helps Kelso sharpen his perspective on Savannah's social climate and wildly divergent citizens.

One of the tenants in Odom's parttime residence, Mandy meets Kelso in a quest for ice at 2 a.m and invites him to the party. She is an independent, clever girl, whose honesty, attractiveness and downto-earth advice are a great help to Kelso as he trues to unravel the many layers of Savannah's social structure.

Then there is Minerva (Irma P. Hall), a voodoo priestess brought in by Williams to help bolster his defense. John Kelso discovers that Minerva conducts her business just before and after midnight in Savannah's Bonneventure cemetery, all of which somehow seems appropriate. What better place to influence the outcome of a trial than the cemetery's mysteryshrouded garden of good and evil?

And finally, there is The Lady Chablis, a transvestite singer-performer whose completely unique viewpoint on Savannah's social and personal activities forms a startling counterpoint to everything else that John Kelso hears and sees. Through the flamboyant chatter and occasional pungent, witty truth told by The Lady Chablis, Kelso comes to understand more than he'd expected about the souls of men and women — and what will by Jim Williams' fate. "I read the John Hancock script," director Clint Eastwood explains, "before I read the book. It was an interesting, well-written script which I thought would make a good film project.

"I haven't ever done a film like this, which is part of its appeal to me. I think it's an unusual mix of characters and I've always been drawn to character-driven stories.

"Savannah is a unique location and the people in 'Midnight' are very eccentric," Eastwood concludes. "The story goes in a lot of different directions, but the characters give you an insight to a lifestyle and an attitude which I think most people would find both interesting and entertaining. I certainly did."

Improvements abound

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Edito

' A year ago Northville wrestling coach Garnett Potter was looking for mild improvements from a team that struggled in 1995-96.

This year, if his team doesn't contend for every title, it will be a mild disappointment.

"I think it would be a letdown if we didn't make it to regionals or at least make a run at it." Potter said. "If we don't continue to make strides this year, it'll be a letdown."

But Potter refuses to look at the downside of the issue, especially when optimism is in the air.

"I'm just excited. I'm overwhelmed. For once we have kids who can teach other kids how to wrestle," he said.

That hasn't always been the case. Northville struggled to a sub-par season two years ago with a youthful, inexperienced squad.

But the year is 1997, and the story is much different than a year ago. Potter lost just two starters, and returns a slew of guys with wrestling experience. led by all-state co-captain Ricky Torrence.

Torrence finished 36-5 last year and placed sixth in the state at 112. Two of his five losses came to teammate and eventual state champion Nick Sriramin. This year the senior is expected to anchor the team at 119.

Keeping the big guys in line will be the other captain Bryan Grider. The senior compiled a 28-10 record last year and will hold down the 189pound spot, at least to start. Ryan Giles (171) and Mike Livanos (215) will both share time at 189 with Grid-

"I figure these three will switch around, depending on who we are wrestling," Potter said. "It's nice that we have the luxury to move kids around this year."

Also expected to start is junior Matt Tarrow at 103 and Kevin Arbuckle at 112. Potter said he is expecting good things out of Tarrow, who was 3-3 on varsity last year and from Arbuckle, whom he called the best junior varsity wrestler in the state last year. With Suramin and Torrence at his weight class, Potter let Arbuckle develop at the JV level.

"This is his chance," Potter said. "He is a tremendously hard worker who just doesn't quit. I just wish I had 10 of him."

Anant Saran (125-pound junior) finished 28-12 and went on to the regional

"If I had to say who made the most improvement over the summer, it would be Anant," Potter said.

Ryan McCracken at 160 and Ted Bowersox in the heavyweight division also have the early jump to start at their weights.

McCracken was 17-17 last year, but a strong work ethic and attitude has Potter believing this kid will be heard from.

Bowersox, a two-year varsity member, was 20-15 a year ago whom his coach expects to improve this season.

"He's got some things to learn, but I think he can win eight out of every 10 matches for us this year," Potter said.

With 45 kids out for wrestling this year, the most ever, Potter hopes his team shares the same enthusiasm as he does.

"I think that (the record number of kids) has a lot to do with the kids' attitudes. It just builds and builds,' he said. "We've just got to keep health on our side and if we get a little luck, who knows what we could do."

Potter will get his first chance to see his team in action today at Novi. Last year the Wildcats beat the Mustangs 39-30 to open the year.

Saturday the team is at Ypsilanti.

Senior Ricky Torrence is back to improve on his sixth-place finish at the state meet last year.

Although there weren't any district championship trophies handed out to any of the area teams, there was by no means a lack of talent.

Novi had one of its best seasons ever, going 16-4 in the regular season and finishing runnerup to Howell in the Kensington Valley Conference (KVC). The Wildcats went on to defeat Churchill and Northville in the district tournament before bowing out to eventual regional champion Plymouth Can-Northville boasted an impressive 13-7 regular-season mark in a very deep Western Lakes Activities Association conference this year.

Milford ended the year with an overall record of 15-8, its best season since 1990 when the Redskins went 15-6.

Compiling a squad whose playing days may extend on to the collegiate level, Hometown's East and Central offices came up with the as Milford went on to its best finish first-team all-area squad. It looks something like this:

ing her stats in almost every other category.

Houck led the Eagles with 14.0 points per game and scored double digits in 15 of 20 games. Her high game of 27 points was accomplished twice.

Houck led the team in rebounds from the guard position with 5.7 per game and averaged more than two assists per contest.

"She's just an all-around very good player," Lakeland coach Paul Gmelin said. "She's just one of those special players who comes around once in a while. She's extremely dedicated. She's the first one to practice everyday and the last one to leave."

Houck also led the team in steals with 3.3 per game.

CHRISTIE SCHUMACHER MILFORD SOPHOMORE

Milford coach Don Palmer said the stats could speak for themselves when it comes to talking about Christie Schumacher.

The sophomore forward led the Redskins with 15.7 points a game and had more than 200 rebounds

LAKELAND JUNIOR

While Lakeland has a somewhat disappointing season, Houck was able to maintain her scoring average while at the same time increasin seven years. Schumacher shot 39 percent from the floor and 75 percent from the line for the Redskins.

"When she got the ball in the scoring area she usually scored and when she played well we usually won," Palmer said. "When she wasn't on the floor our chances of winning were minimized."

Next year it will definitely be her team to orchestrate," Palmer said. "We're going to ask her to do more and we have confidence in her.'

LAUREN METAJ NORTHVILLE SENIOR

One of the best point guards in the state, Metaj returns to the allarea first team for the thirdstraight season after leading her Mustangs to a 14-7 record. The numbers don't lie, Metaj led the area in points (14.9), steals (4.2) and assists (4.3) and ranked high, in all-other categories.

HomeTown Newspapers' all-area second team provides quite a supporting cast for our first team members.

Beth Quiney's athletic ability provided the Redskins with a heavy one-two punch along side Milford's leading scorer Christie Schumacher.

Lakeland's sonhomore Martha Digsby was given a great responsibility on the floor, bringing the ball back on the floor and calling plays for the Eagles.

After losing its best player. South Lyon needdd someone to take the reigns and lead a young team of juniors and Wendy Jacobs did a fine job filling that position as the lone senior on the team.

Novi's Kristen Sullivan played a strong role in the Wildcats' run for a district championship.

Stepping forward and playing a vital role for Northville, Julie Fhs surprised many, even her ooach, enroute to earning a spot on this team.

These five girls have proven they could take on most any opponent on their own with the performances they've given with their respective teams. Here is a closer look at HomeTown's second team talent:

MARTHA DIGSBY LAKELAND SOPHOMORE

Lakeland's most improved player scored 4.7 points per game this season. Digsby accepted the point guard position even though it isn't her natural position and, according to coach Paul Gmelin, by the end of the season Digsby was holding her own.

"She finds the open man and handles the ball better than average," Gmelin said. "I wish she'd get a little more confidence because right now that's all she's lacking. She's got all the Godgiven talents to be a successful basketball play-

"She's the kind of player who will take the shot at the end of the game when the game's on the line," Gmelin said. "A lot of kids will shy away from that but she seems to want the responsibility and I really like that in her."

BETH QUINEY

MILFORD SENIOR

Quiney was second in scoring to Christie Schumacher but Quiney has been the best athlete on the Milford basketball team for the past three seasons in terms of quickness, running and jumping.

Quiney scored close to 200 points, averaging 8.3 per game and brought down over 100 rebounds. She shot 14 3-pointers and was 34 percent from the floor.

"She did a lot of things for us," Palmer said. "She's been a real versatile athlete for us. When she played well and Christie played well we were real tough to beat."

JULIE FLIS

NORTHVILLE SENIOR

This senior complemented the outside presence of Lauren Metaj with a strong inside game. Flis averaged 10.4 points per game while pulling down nearly four rebounds per contest.

Coach Pete Wright said before to the season started he didn't know who would step it up and handle a bulk of the scoring. But Flis surprised her coach and continued to improve as the season went on.

"She offered us an option to score and she really shot the ball well," Wright said. "She worked extremely hard over the summer. There were some other girls I thought would step up and score, but Julie really did a nice job for us."

Flis was also honored on the all-division team in the Western Lakes' Activities Association.

KRISTEN SULLIVAN NOVI SENIOR

With each member of the 1997 Wildcat basketball squad playing a vital role in the team's success, Sullivan's role was crucial.

The senior shooting guard posed an outside threat which opened up the inside for Katie Copp and Kristen McGlinnen. An improved drive to the basket made her a bigger threat for opponents.

The speedy Sullivan helped Novi break the press. She also had the unappreciated task of guarding the opponents' top players.

"This was her best season," coach Dennis Cichonski said. "She really worked hard on her drive and that was one of the areas she wanted to work on so she wouldn't be just a perimeter threat.'

WENDY JACOBS SOUTH LYON SENIOR

South Lyon took a major blow when Brooke Raths was put on the sidelines for the season and Jacobs was there to lead the seniors through the trying season.

Jacobs led the Lions with nine points per game and eight rebounds. She also led the team with 37 blocked shots and 60 steals. She hit 42.7 percent from the floor and 64 percent from the line.

"Lauren's going to be hard to replace," said her coach Pete Wright. "She does everything for us and I think she makes everyone else around her better."

Northville skaters grab first win in school history

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

The Northville hockey team won the first game in school history Saturday night, defeating Walled Lake Western 5-3 at the Lakeland Ice Arena.

"It was exciting for the guys. They were real anxious to get the first win of the sea-son," Northville coach Brad O'Neill said. "Each game that we've had, we've seen real improvement. They are becoming a lot more responsible and hopefully we can string together a few wins now."

The Mustangs jumped out to a 4-0 lead discouraged a late Warrior surge that saw Western score a pair of goals in the waning moments.

"We had some keys to beating Western and the guys did the things we needed to do," O'Neill said. "Defensively we have improved. I've been telling the guys we need to score goals, but we also need to limit them as well. I was real pleased that we did."

O'Neill said his team shot more than it has the first three games, and in turn, had more scoring opportunities. The defense also did a good job of shutting down Western's big guns.

Don Strauch got the win in goal for Northville.

"He came up with some big, key saves for us, especially in the last four or five min-utes," O'Neill said.

Offensively, Kevin Boone paced the Mustangs, scoring a pair of goals and assisting on another.

Brian Shields, Nick Yaris and Steve

LaRiche also put a puck in goal. Justin Waineo, Kevin Morrow and Tom Nappo each had an assist. O'Neill also pointed out strong performances from Evan Edwards and Chris Schneider.

Two of the Mustangs' five goals came on the power play, where the team has had great success this year.

"It seemed to work really well," O'Neill said. "After a few games the kids are getting used to where they are supposed to be and where to find their teammates on the ice.

The win moves Northville to 1-3 overall and in the Suburban League.

JESSICA KENNY NOVI SENIOR

The most valuable player on a team full of most valuable players, Kenny has been here before. She is a three-year member of Hometown's first team and repeat member on the KVC first team.

Kenny, a 5-foot-10 guard, played a big role in the Wildcats' success this year. She averaged 10.2 points per game, and ranked second on the team in assists and steals.

But it was the small things that made her so valuable to her team.

"Defensively she was a leader by example," said Novi coach Dennis Cichonski. "She has earned the recognition of her teammates, coaches and other players throughout the league.

Kenny led the 'Cats in minutes played this year.

"Because she could do so much on the floor," Cichonski said. "She is a great decision maker for us."

KATIE COPP

NOVI SENIOR

Statistically few others compared to Copp on the hardwood. She led the team in scoring, assists, steals and rebounds.

Copp stepped it up when center Kristen McGlinnen went down with an injury early in the season. Although only 5-foot-10, Copp played like the biggest player on the court and often manhandled opponents on the boards.

She averaged 10.6 points and 6.7 rebounds per game this year. She earned all-KVC second-team honors both last year and this vear.

"Katie has developed into an excellent player," Cichonski said. "She's very hard on herself and is probably her own worst critic.

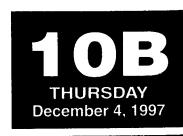

"She made a comment that she wanted her senior year to be her best year yet, and she has followed through with that."

HIV children suffer in more ways than one

2 . 2 .

1 . 5. 2.

Health Column

Since 1981, more than 8,000 individuals infected with HIV, the 87 5 infected individuals per 100,000 persons, Michigan ranks 34th in the country. This low rate reflects the fact that AIDS was late, and slow, to come to Michigan.

а

Although the majority of infected individuals are adults, a few are children; 54 HIV-positive infants and toddlers between the ages of newborn and 4 years old have been reported in Michigan, 32 between the ages of 5 and 12, and 50 between the ages of 15 and 19. Children become infected in a variety of ways. Most of them are born to HIV-infected mothers and acquire the virus around the time of birth. Others are recipients of HIV-contaminated blood products. Very few children or adults have been infected by this route since screening of donated blood began in 1985. Children also may acquire

HIV infection through sexual abuse by HIV-infected adults. HIV-infected children often live in complex social situations. Their virus biologic parents usually are infected themselves and live fairly disorganized lives characterized by unemployment, poverty, unstable housing and single parenthood. These parents may also suffer from drug and/or alcohol abuse, and the may be unable to care for their children. A fairly high proportion of HIV-infected children are placed in either foster or adoptive families. Irrespective of the social situation, many families living with HIV experience a significant amount of social isolation.

In spite of widespread educational efforts, a considerable amount of fear continues to exist about the potential spread of the HIV virus.

Because this virus is spread primarily by sexual contact or by significant blood exposure as may occur through the use of shared needles during illicit intravenous drug use, the probability of the spread of the HIV virus from a child to either another child or to an adult is extremely small. Unfortunately, the children of HIVinfected persons often suffer from the social stigma that is targeted toward their parents.

HIV infection affects children in unique ways compared to adults. For reasons that are not entirely clear, some infected children experience severe immune system fail-ure very early and may develop the appropriate dose of these newer symptoms of AIDS - including growth failure, central nervous system disease, or opportunistic infections such as pneumocystis pneumonia - as early as 4 months of age. Other infected children may remain either totally or relatively asymptomatic with only minor immune system failure for up to 10 years. In general, however, children usually manifest the symptoms of AIDS sooner after they acquire the infection than adults.

HIV-infected children are more likely to develop severe infections from the viruses and bacteria that cause only minor infections in healthy children. Compared to adults, children are less likely to develop either AIDS-related blindness from cytomegalovirus infection or Kaposi's sarcoma, a common malignancy among HIVinfected adults. These children, however, commonly have poor growth and either fail to meet the normal developmental milestones -such as sitting, walking or talking - at the appropriate ages or they may lose these abilities as their central nervous system infection progresses.

The treatment of HIV infection in children is more complicated and fraught with more unknowns than is treatment of adult patients. Many of the newer antiviral drugs, which hold promise in slowing the progression of HIV infection for adults, have not been adequately drugs is not known for very young children.

In spite of all the questions about therapy, there are many important things that can be done for children infected with the HIV virus. Many of the opportunistic infections such as pneumocystic pneumonia, toxoplasmosis and mycobacterium avian intercellulare may be prevented through prophylactic antibiotics.

Furthermore, other childhood infections may be prevented by the use of routine immunizations, although vaccines containing live viruses such as oral polio, mmr (measles, mumps and rubella) and chicken pox are either not used at all or used only cautiously in HIVinfected children.

In addition, optimal nutrition for HIV-infected children reduces the probability of growth failure. The progression of HIV diseases may be slowed through the use of new combinations of antiviral drugs, although information on this for children is minimal so far.

Finally, families may be given social, emotional and economic support as they struggle to provide comfortable and meaningful lives for their children who are living with AIDS.

You' need to be more informed on health

Your health care team may include your family physician, a specialist, a nurse, a nutritionist, and a pharmacist. But the team has one more player - you. When you are well and when you are sick, you will play a vital role in maintaining your health.

It is now generally accepted that the patient who is informed becomes empowered to take responsibility for personal health and will be an active partner in the health care train, which is the train the spital Association formalized this concept in 1973, when it published the Patient's Bill of Rights, which states: "The patient has the right to receive from his physician complete, current information concerning his diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis in language the patient can reasonably be expected to understand.

The way to make informed decisions is to obtain all of the facts. But information comes from a variety of sources including your physician or the other health professionals involved in your care. In addition, any large bookstore or library today has a collection of consumer health magazines and books. The media also lay a role in attracting the public's interest in of sites containing a wide variety of medical information, including descriptions of diseases, wellness sites, and health support groups. A recent search of the topic diabetes using the Alta Vista search engine resulted in a listing of 50,000 sites on the World Wide Web.

But given all the sources of information, how do you as health consumers determine which source is offering quality information? Of course, that in the source should always be your health professional. But what about all the printrand electronic forms of health information?

If you are planning on purchasing your own book or magazine, or you are surfing the Internet, always check the source of the information. Government agencies or university sources are generally good sources of health information. If it is a person, check his or her credentials for letters which indicate they have an appropriate health related degree such as D.O., M.D., R.N., etc. Remember, anyone can make information available on the Internet, whether they are qualified or not.

Another way to obtain information is through your local library. Some public libraries offer health information sources in their collections. In addition to traditional sources of health There are also a few consumer health libraries sponsored by hospitals in southeastern Michi-

The materials housed in these libraries are selected by trained librarians based on specified criteria so you can be somewhat assured that the information provided is qualified.

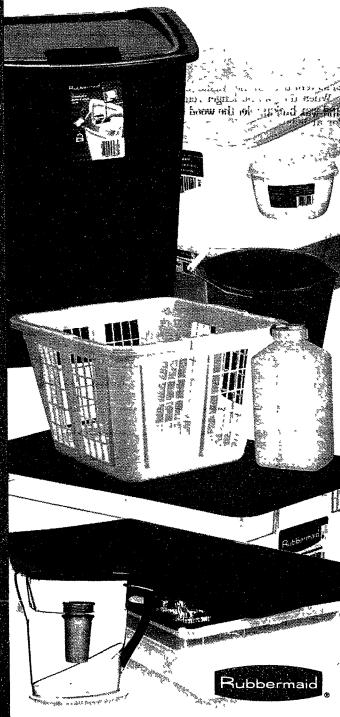

The Consumer Health Library at Botsford General Hospital consists of about 500 books, 30 videos and a full-text database of health information from pamphlets, books and articles written in or an articles in addition, the Botsford Library has computer access to the Internet.

The consumer collection is backed up by a large medical collection which is housed in the same facility. The library is staffed by medical librarians who are trained to assist you in finding information from the most appropriate source to answer your questions. The Botsford Library is open Monday through Thursday 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., and Friday 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Regardless of where you get your health information, always discuss it with your doctor or other health professional. It's your life - and good decisions are based on good information.

BLOOD DONORS WANTED

Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital, in conjunction with the American Red Cross of Oakland County, is recruiting donors for its holiday blood drive on Friday, Dec. 12, from 6:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the hospital's Conference Center.

Some areas of the country use more blood than they collect and Southeastern Michigan is one of those areas.

Hospitals of Southeastern Michigan provide some of the most advanced medical procedures in the country.

As a result, blood and blood product needs of patients in Southeastern Michigan is greater than our inventory. Therefore, our blood supply must be supplemented by other Red Cross regions.

During the next several weeks special circumstances will interrupt our blood supplies from other regions. We need blood donors to overcome this deficit.

Blood donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh more than 110 pounds and be in good general health. The donation process takes a little more than an hour.

Community members can pledge a blood donation by calling the office of Community Health at (248) 360-3314. Walk-ins are welcome, but appointments are encouraged to prevent lengthy waits.

Marty Agents, Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital blood bank group leader, urges area residents to become donors. "The importance of donating blood during this critical time cannot be stressed enough. We need your blood donation to overcome a blood shortage. Collections from O donors must increase to meet our needs," he said

REAL ESTATE CREATIVE LIVING

HOW-TO Ridding furniture of wax buildup

By Gene Gary Copley News Service

Q. Over the years, a fine cherry-wood buffet and dining table have become dull and dingy. The finish is sticky to the touch. What causes the sticky feeling? Is it a buildup of wax coatings over the years? How can I successfully clean this furniture and restore the original luster? A. Some products used for furniture care maintenance, particularly silicone-based furniture polish, build up layers that attract dirt and grime. Combine this with moisture from your hands or arms coming in contact with the wood surface, and the result is a grimy, sticky residue that is often difficult to remove. If this condition is not dealt with, the finish will deteriorate.

There are a number of good furniture cleaners on the market that can remove the buildup of wax and furniture polish. However, there are some easy homemade preparations and cleanup steps that can remove the residue if the finish has not been damaged.

If the softened layer is light, remove it with hand dishwashing liquid. Make a pad of cotton material, like a clean old terrycloth towel. Soak it in hot water and squeeze to remove the surplus water. It should be damp, but not wet. Excess moisture will damage wood.

Add a drop or two of the detergent on the pad's face. Go over the surface in small circles, a small area at a time. Remove the remaining dirt with a clean, lint-free cloth.

If the soil is stubborn, try anall-purpose household spray cleaner. Spray the cloth, never the furniture surface - doing so may cause steaking. Move the pad constantly, or else the cleaner could remove the finish as well as the dirt.

If the dirt film is still stubborn, use paint thinner. Work carefully, using a small amount of thinner applied to a cloth pad and lightly working the pad over the surface. You want to remove only the grime, not the finish (which can be damaged if the paint thinner is the same type of solvent used in the original finish).

When the pad no longer removes grime and wax buildup, let the wood surface dry for at least a day. If after any of these treatments, the original finish is left too thin, you will need to strengthen it with one or two coats of clear finish.

When the surface is restored to your satisfaction, maintain the finish with a wax/silicone-free furniture polish that will protect the finish without causing a harm-ful residue buildup.

If the pieces of furniture you are dealing with are valuable antiques, do not try these home remedies. Cleaning and restoration should be handled by a qualified professional.

Q. We have a very frustrating problem. The up and down lever on our toigled, often repeatedly, to flush the toilet. Is this a problem in the tank or with the lever?

It's a wrap

Spruce up the presentation of your holiday presents

By ANNETTE JAWORSKI Special Writer

If you're one of those lucky people who have all of your holiday shopping done, it's time to finally wrap it up - gift wrap it, that is.

Wrapping presents is usually one more item to include on a seemingly endless holiday list. Lorie Wyant, the owner of Salutations in downtown Northville, says your presents deserve a little attention

"The whole thing is people put so much effort into looking for just the perfect gift. They need to spend a little time and thought with the wrapping as well," Wyant said.

"I equate it to an invitation, it sort of sets the mood," she said. "The way you present a gift sets its mood. The outside should be every bit as pretty as the inside.

The good news is that being creative doesn't have to be expensive or time-consuming. Wrapping a present beautifully may take a little planning and some inspiration, not necessarily a lot of time.

Paper is the obvious choice when it comes to wrapping. Select the paper you find attractive or that fits in with the theme of your tree or holiday decor.

"When it comes to choosing paper, I like to look for quality paper, and then color," Wyant said. Bright and wivid colors are what catch her eye, and quality papers and foils make a statement. However, paper is only one option for gift wrapping.

If you're looking for a simple solution, gift boxes can do the wrapping for you. Many of the new boxes come in sturdy reusable cardboard. All you need to do is pop the gift inside.

Salutations carries a series of colorful boxes by Mary Albreit that actually become part of the gift. Just stack the boxes and add a bow to complete an attractive present.

A. Worn and corroded levers on flush toilets are a common problem. Replacement of the lever mechanism is the answer.

Remove the lever and internal mechanism of the toilet tank and take it with you to the plumbing supply section of a hardware store or home center so you can match the replacement parts.

Another option would be to purchase a new product on the market that makes the replacement relatively simple. Fluidmaster's Toilet Tune-Up Kit features a Sure-Fit Flush Lever that is designed to fit almost every type of toilet-tank style. During installation it bends and trims to fit varying tank designs. You simply slide it in, thread it on and hook it up.

The product is available in a variety of handle finishes (white, chrome, polished brass) and features a choice of flapperchain hookups; at 4-, 6- and 8-inch positions. The flush lever is part of a kit that provides an easy, quick-to-install, fourstep overhaul of the toilet tank's vital components. It is available in hardware store and home-improvement stores.

G. We have plastic laminate counters in our kitchen. I am not happy with the color and I would like to have them painted. Is this feasible?

A. It is best not to paint plastic laminates. The surface is too slick for paint to adhere well. Some paint dealers will recommend one of the epoxy paints, especially the two-part epoxy paint systems for this type of application. It can be satisfactory on cabinet surfaces.

However, I would not recommend paint for countertops. Such surfaces get too much wear and tear for paint to hold up well over a plastic laminate. You can have a new plastic laminate applied over the existing surface. This is a fairly easy application for someone with carpentry skills and general know-how.

For tiny gifts (jewelry maybe?) add an element of suspense and put it inside a small box that doubles as a ornament That way, the gift will be on the tree, not under the tree, and the ornament is reusable.

Ornament boxes come in various shapes and sizes. Salutations has a stockings in Winnie the Pooh, star and tree shapes and all you need to do is drop the gift in bath and beauty aids. Salutations carries and top it off with tissue paper or shredding.

For a custom-made look, mix and match tissue colors, patterns with solids, and buy only the amount you need. Salutations carries tissue paper by the sheet, in solids and prints - everything from the most feminine pastel to a masculine print Metallic tissue can add a sparkle to a gift, or use the tissue paper itself to wrap the package Two metallic colors can be used. one to wrap the gift and the other to scrunch into a bow for a real dramatic finan elegant fabric, chiffon bag in sheer gold and black with tassels.

For large children's gifts such as bikes and sleds, you can find garbage-sized bags printed in different colors.

Fabric can also be used to wrap large bulky gifts Wyant suggests using lighter fabrics like cotton, chiffon, or silk rather than wool and corduroy. Many presents are too pretty to hide under a wrapping And there's no reason you can't use sheer fabric like a chiffon or organdy.

Once your gift is wrapped, it's time for the finishing touches. Start with ribbons and bows. There's an array to choose from such as cords. satin cords, or gross grain ribbon Instead of the obvious stick-on bow, try a raffia bow, or make a bow out of tulle or wired ribbon.

Wyant is partial to fabric ribbons because they can be used over and over and add a bit of sophistication to the package. You can pull them out of the sewing box, iron them and they're all set to go.

"Depending on the kind of ribbon, if it's wide, a simple shoe lace bow satin or organdy ribbon is elegant. Wired ribbon makes beautiful, elegant bows," she said.

For the finishing touch, Wyant likes to add something extra to embellish a package, a theme gift, or a grouping like a sprig of evergreen or holly. A colorful ornament can also make a great topper. A personalized ornament can double as a gift tag. Home-made and home-baked goods can use the new colored cellophanes. A variety of bags and cellophanes in different colors and designs are approved for use.

"Raffia looks great," Wyant said. "It's a natural look to home-made breads or gifts.'

And if you're really feeling like Ebeneezer Scrooge, Salutations will gift wrap for you if you buy your paper and ribbons there. They're located in downtown Northville at 115

The width of the bowl is about 6 inches. On the bottom is a circle with the word "Germany."

What can you tell me about our treasured gift?

A. ABC bowls were popular from around 1820 to the early 1900s. They were made by English, German and American potters. Early examples featured moralistic themes in contrast to the later scenes of engaging children at play.

The letters were often in relief. Braille bowls made for the blind are a rare and desired find.

Your bowl would probably be worth about $125 to $150.

Q. I recently bought a reamer at a garage sale for $25. It was made by Fenton and is jade green. The reamer sets on top of a pitcher, and both are in perfect condition.

My husband said that I paid too much for it. What do you think?

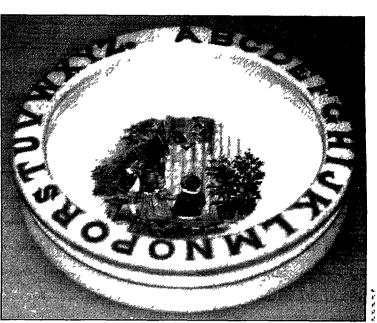

A. I think you got a bargain. A jade glass pitcher and reamer set made by Fenton is listed in Kitchen Glassware of the Depression Years" by Gene Florence in the $750 to $850 range, in mint condition.

BOOK REVIEW

"Hobbs, Brockunier & Co. Glass" by Neila and Tom Bredehoft (Collector Books) is a valuable guide to 19th century art glass. The main section provides information on patterns, colors, dates and decorations. The second part is devoted to lighting fixtures, lamps and globes.

In addition to an extensive company history, there are more than 280 luscious color photos and a value guide Also discussed are reproductions and confusing pieces. The Bredehofts have written an outstanding resource book on this beautiful art glass that will surely be indispensable to serious collectors.

Homes which have just been placed on the market and offer the most value for the money, often sell in the first few weeks. There isn't time to get them in the paper before buyers begin to see them and make a purchase decision. Why do they sell so quickly?

Real estate agents have access to virtually every home on the market at all hours. They can place computer inquiries and get instant printouts of homes in a specific location or price range - long before they are advertised. Because agents work with many gualified buyers, some homes may be on the market less than twenty-four hours before being

Mercedes comes to Novi Growth attracted area's second dealership to the Haggery/Grand River location

By JASON SCHMITT Staff Writer

Numbers may mean a lot to accountants, brokers and the IRS. but numbers have also meant a lot to brothers Lee and C.J. Ghesquiere.

The brothers took a long, hard look at statistical figures when looking for an area in which to open a pair of car dealerships. And what those numbers showed was that the booming population of Oakland County, Novi in particular, would be a prime area to offer their products.

Manor Motorcar Co., a Mercedes-Benz dealership located on the corner of Haggerty and Grand River in Novi, opened up just over a month ago and had its grand opening Nov. 13.

Lee Ghesquiere is the president of the dealership and C.J. is the vice president. They also own a Cadillac dealership in Rochester where C.J. is the president and Lee is the V.P.

Ghesquiere said Novi's popula-tion growth (32 percent since 1990) was one of the biggest fac-tors in the decision to open Manor Motorcar in its current location.

We had an opportunity to locate anywhere we wanted to, but we chose Novi because of the demographics. the census numbers and the number of current Mercedes owners out there." he said. "This is "The important thing about Mercedes is the value factor. They retain more of their value than any other car on the road. It's a more sound, financial move." Lee Ghesquiere where the growth is."

While Mercedes has long been known as a high-class vehicle, Ghesquiere said the company's image has changed over the years. Safety is still absolutely number one. Coming off the line the quality of these vehicles is almost perfect," Ghesquiere noted. "But the image has changed from the old, stodgy, somewhat unapproachable car to a young, hip and affordable luxury vehicle

In 1996, there were 85,000 Mercedes-Benz autos sold in the United States. In 1997, that number has already surpassed the 115,000 mark. Mercedes' projections show that over 200,000 vehicles will be sold here in the year 2000. Ghesquiere said one of the main reasons for the growth in sales is the price range of Mercedes-Benz vehicles. The majority of the new models are between $30-45,000, with the average price around $40,000.

"Most people were of the assumption that Mercedes started at $50,000," Ghesquiere said: "Really, if you look around and price other vehicles from other companies, you'll spend nearly $40,000. The important thing about Mercedes is the value factor. They retain more of their value than any other car on the road. It's a more sound, financial move."

Ghesquiere said his staff of about 25 includes five experienced Mercedes-Benz technicians. There is only one other Mercedes dealership in metro Detroit, located in Bloomfield Hills.

"It's important for current Mercedes owners to be able to bring their cars in to be worked on and not have to travel a great distance," Ghesquiere said.

Manor Motorcar is located at 39500 Grand River Avenue. The showroom is open Monday and Thursday from 9 a.m.-9 p.m. and Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. The service department is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m.

Thanks to you, all sorts of everyday products are being made from the paper, plastic, metal and glass that you've been recycling.

But to keep recycling working to help protect the environment, you need to buy those products.

BUY RECYCLED.

So look for and buy products made from recycled materials. And don't forget to celebrate America Recycles Day on November 15th.

It would mean the world to us. For a free brochure, call 1-800-CALL-EDF or visit our web site at www.edf.org

Santa's Holiday Gift show Novi Expo Center December 12, 13 & 14

Produced by: North Pole Productions, Ltd. (The Show Elves) Sponsored by: HomeTown/Observer & Eccentric Newspapers Great Lakes Marketing & Promotion, Inc. Glenda's Garden Center

Even Scrooge would love it!

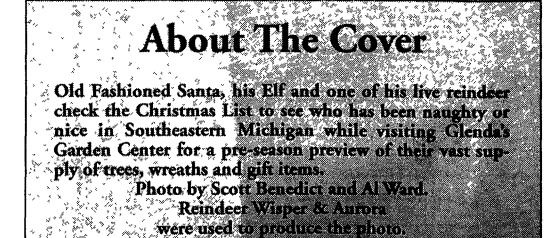

Fast becoming one of the best Holiday programs of its kind in the Detroit metropolitan area, Santa's Holiday Gift Show at the Novi Expo Center (December 12, 13 and 14) brings together a variety of exhibitors, retail merchants, artists, jewelry makers, quality crafters and hobbyists offering thousands of holiday gift ideas, home decorations and, of course, a medley of food and beverages certain to light up the taste buds of your guests during the holiday season.

No Holiday program is complete without a parade. Local marching bands, several characters and Santa's Elves will arrive daily in a short parade. His Elfness, the one and only, Old Fashion Santa Claus will follow the entourage pulled in his sleigh by his team of live trained reindeer. The live reindeer performance is marvelously entertaining, adding an utterly charming touch of realism to the legend. It will excite the child in the young and young at heart.

The traditional photo opportunity with Santa will be available in the special designed and professionally landscaped Christmas Tree Park, complete with a reindeer corral, constructed by Glenda's Garden Center of Novi. Glenda's went all out for this show bringing in more trees and decorations than you'll see anywhere else this season.

The Park, housing Santa and his reindeer corral, extends into the exhibitor areas. Many of the exhibitors are located on a winding pathway allowing patrons a break from the boring aisleways normally found at shows of this sort. The entire show begins to give you the impression of a small Village set inside the Novi Expo Center. Aisle-ways become streets named after many of Santa's reindeer, Donder Drive, Comet's Trail, Prancer's Pathway, etc.

A brick paver walkway guides you past the reindeer corral to Santa's house. Set near the reindeer corral and surrounded by decorated Christmas trees, a piano player, Jeffrey Michael, plays a mixture of popular holiday tunes on a regular basis for the group waiting to visit with Santa. High School senior J. R. McAtee will perform his magic at 12:00 Noon and 3:00 P.M. on Sunday, December 14. Face painters and strolling entertainers are featured hourly to keep the atmosphere pleasantly festive. Many of the exhibitors will be dressed in festive costume in keeping with the holiday tradition. Gift wrap services are available and you can even mail your wrapped packages from the Novi Expo Center via Mail Boxes, Etc. A Pizza with Santa program is scheduled within the facility's concession area so Mom (or Dad) can shop instead of preparing the evening meal.

Proceeds from the show entrance fees benefit Junior and High School Marching Bands.

The show is both refreshing and entertaining for holiday shoppers looking for a one-of-a-kind gift or entertaining idea and a break from the typical holiday season rush. It is certain to add a touch of cheerful Christmas spirit to even the most dedicated Scrooge.

EDITOR'S

Letter

Dear Readers,

Il of us are interested in achieving a full life span with the maximum possible health, energy and well-being throughout our years. We want more than to merely prolong age or relieve some age-related disabilities. We are reaching for a remarkable extension of vigorous, active, enjoyable living.

Well, it looks like our dreams may come true.

In this century, the average life span has risen from 47 to 77 years and those past age 65 are making up the fastest growing segment of the population. This leads us to discard the notion that bodily aging processes are all breakdown and deterioration. Many people are physically more comfortable as they grow older, mostly because they have learned to take care of themselves; they understand that physical well-being is the single most important key to rewarding, worthwhile living. And, many find a growing intensity and sense of adventure, from the maturing years right into advanced age.

All of the research we reviewed and all the sources we consulted left us with one conclusion: Age is inevitable; aging is not.

This is why in the December issue, we celebrate maturity.

Also, this month we celebrate the holidays with ideas on how to enjoy the traditions without sabotaging your diet, how to keep the kids busy during their school break, and how to be a responsible host if you are serving alcohol.

Relax, enjoy and take care (especially knowing that you're likely to have a lot of years ahead to do so!) as part of their efforts to care for themselves and their families.

Our editorial policy endeavors to feature timely and appropriate solutions to health care concerns in a format that makes information immediately useful and relevant to our readers.

While we espouse no particular health care philosophy, brands, products or providers, we do report a variety of ideas, encouraging readers to access whatever information they need to complement their own health care regimes.

There will be no advertisements in this publication that represent products that we consider to affect adversely an individual's or family's health and well-being.

CELEBRATING MATURITY Healthy tips for the young at heart ime waits for no one," so the saying goes. But, according to a Duke University demographer, time's march may not be so relentless. Dr. Kenneth Manton, one of the country's top demographers dealing with health and disability of the elderly, has found that Americans are not only living longer, but also may be living better. And, he expects us to continue to push the outer limits of life expectancy in the years to come. In his most recent study, published by the National Academy of Sciences, he reported that long-term disability rates among the elderly dropped by almost 15 percent from 1982 to 1994.

In addition:

- The fastest growing segment of the American population is the 85-plus category.
- Between 1980 and 1990, the number of centurions doubled.
- From 1960 to 1990, death rates from heart disease were more than halved, and stroke deaths plummeted by 65 percent.

THE BAD NEWS: OUR BODIES ARE PROGRAMMED TO AGE

Gerontologists have been grappling with the mystery of aging for as long as the discipline has existed. Aside from normal wear and tear, they have identified three main mechanisms — one genetic and two chemical — that lead to the body's breakdown.

Genetically, they say, the cells in our bodies seem programmed to have a finite life span, and are able to reproduce themselves only a certain number of times.

"We are now beginning to better understand why cells age," said Alan Dengiz, M.D., director of geriatric medicine at St. Joseph Mercy Health System. "Every time a cell divides, there is some damage to the chromosomes by free oxygen radicals." When free radicals bind to membranes, they weaken tissues and internal organs. Another chemical process that contributes to aging is glycosylation, where sugars in the blood stream bind to cells causing them to stick together in places where they normally wouldn't. This can stiffen joints, block arteries and cloud clear tissues, such as lenses in the eyes.

In response to these aging mechanisms, scientists are investigating at least two medical treatments that may extend life: drastic caloric restriction and hormone replacement therapy.

In all of the animals they tested, gerontologists at the National Institutes of Aging found that reducing food consumption by about 30 percent below normal levels, while maintaining adequate levels of vitamins and trace minerals, can lead to a 40 percent to 50 percent increase in life span. This is probably due to the decreased production of free radicals because less fuel is burned.

"When they studied rats, they found that those who were kept at a lean body weight (almost no fat), lived considerably longer," said Dr. Dengiz. Rats are good models for humans, Dr. Dengiz explained, so scientists are extrapolating these findings to the human population. The reduced calorie theory hasn't been proven on humans, but the connection may exist.

The problem with such a radically reduced diet is getting people to eat less, especially a 30 percent reduction in calories. Here, scientists are trying to discover drugs that mimic its effect.

Hormone replacement therapy is estimated to increase life expectancy by about eight years, with the greatest benefit among women who have lost estrogen through menopause. This therapy may protect women from osteoporosis, heart disease and Alzheimer's disease, as well as help stave off colon cancer, reduce wrinkling and keep teeth sound.

Estrogens are not for all women, however. Those with a family history of breast or ovarian cancer increase their risk by taking hormones. In other women, prolonged hormone replacement therapy can raise the risk of breast cancer.

Here too, chemists are working at developing synthetic hormones that provide the protective effects of estrogen without increasing the risk of cancer.

THE GOOD NEWS: WE CAN AFFECT HOW WE AGE

Medical science has made such significant advances that in many parts of the world — certainly in ours — many diseases have been virtually eradicated. Others, like respiratory problems, heart disease and even some cancers have been rendered reversible or controllable. Investigators are finding that many body conditions attributed to aging — and neglected because they have "The truth is that there is no secret or complex trick to optimizing your chance of living a long and healthy life. All is takes is following such simple habits as avoiding smoking, drinking in moderation, eating a well-balanced diet, controlling weight, reducing stress and exercising regularly.

By understanding the basic principles of healthy living and applying them with sense and moderation, people can vastly improve the quality — and may well increase the length of their lives."

The Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons been considered inevitable — are instead highly treatable, often reversible. They may also be largely preventable.

And, these findings aren't a secret. Everywhere you look these days — from your hospital's community event calendar, to magazines and newspapers, to the vast capabilities of the Internet — you will find an impressive array of health care information. However, the most important determinant of how we age, according to our sources, is how we use this knowledge.

"People are largely responsible for their own aging, " reports Dr. John W. Rowe, director of the MacArthur Foundation Consortium on Successful Aging. "Only about 30 percent of aging is genetically based; the rest is not." According to his research, it's early in life that genetics play the greatest role in health characteristics.

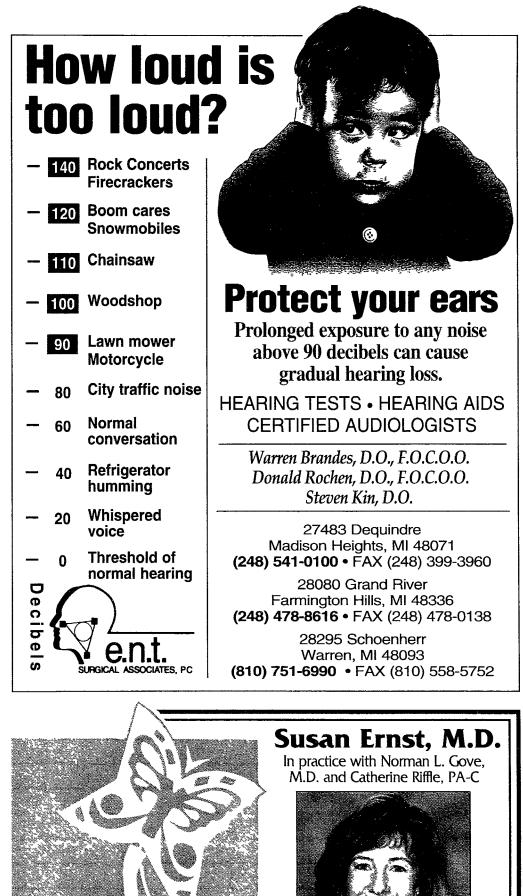

Rowe and the MacArthur research team have found that staying active both physically and socially contributes to successful aging.

"People are younger longer," said Dr. Dengiz. "Genetics certainly plays a role, but how people take care of themselves is a huge factor in health and well-being. You can counter bad genes with a healthy lifestyle."

Dr. Dengiz explained that the four components of age are genetics, the presence of disease, physical fitness and environmental stresses. The most important factor in feeling young is exercise, he says, and makes the following recommendations:

- People should participate in some kind of vigorous aerobic exercise for 30 to 40 minutes four days a week.
- People should perform strengthening exercises (like lifting light weights or working on weight machines) three days each week.

"It's been proven that even people in their 90s and up to 100 can benefit from strength training," he says. In addition to exercise, people can offset the other factors of aging by:

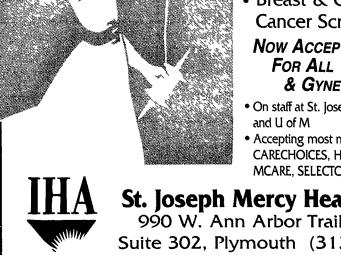

- SPECIALIZING IN:
- Perimenopause
- Menopause (Hormone Replacement Therapy)
- Osteoporosis Prevention
- Breast & Gynecological

- Eating a diet low in fat and preservatives and high in complex carbohydrates (especially fruits and vegetables). He suggests also taking "modest amounts of meat and fish protein."
- Creating a healthy environment for yourself: quit smoking, drink in moderation, maintain a healthy weight.

"My idea of the elderly has changed over the 15 years I've been a physical therapist," said Lisa Bechard from St. Mary Hospital. "I've seen so many 90 year olds who are healthy, I feel that if I can maintain that level of fitness, I have a chance for a healthy life up into my 80s and beyond."

FRIENDS MAY BE THE KEY TO BETTER HEALTH

One of the biggest problems older people face is loneliness, and this condition could affect their health. Research suggests that friendships help reduce the risk of colds, the flu, high blood pressure and heart disease. This means making and maintaining friendships a health must, right up there with exercising and eating right.

"People do poorly when they are very isolated," Dr. Dengiz said. "Social supports are extremely important to how well we age."

Scientists still don't know why love and friendship cast such a healthy glow. One theory is that they act as a buffer against stress, which itself can take a toll on the body. Or, people may be less likely to take unhealthy risks if they feel loved. In a study of more than 3,000 people, Clifford Broman, Ph.D., a professor of sociology at Michigan State University, observed that those with good friends were less likely to smoke and that those who belonged to a church, professional group or parents' association were less likely to smoke or drink heavily.

At the University of Michigan, researchers analyzed variables affecting health and dis-

"NET" WORKING WITH SENIORS

One way for seniors to communicate with each other in a safe, but lively forum is through the Internet. ThirdAge.com, a Web site for active older adults, offers a collection of services, information and bulletin boards that focus on such topics as spirituality, travel and health care. Designed by Mary Furlong, a University of San Francisco education professor, and founder of SeniorNet, a nonprofit schooling program that has helped senior citizens adapt to the computer age, the ThirdAge "chat room" invites interested members (30,000 and counting; membership is free) to serve as forum leaders, sharing the considerable knowledge and wisdom they've accumulated through the years.

covered that people with strong ties to family, friends, colleagues and community had a significantly longer than average life span than isolated individuals did. They reached the conclusion that the lack of supportive relationships is a factor that is almost as dangerous as well-known risks such as smoking, high blood pressure or obesity.

MYTHS AND REALITIES OF AGING

TRUE OR FALSE

 Most older people will become senile if they live long enough.

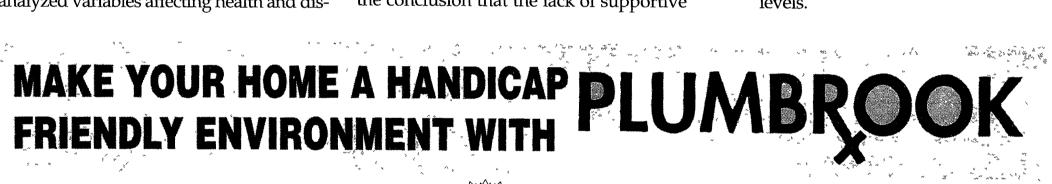

False: Approximately 5 percent of persons over 65 are diagnosed as senile. This number increases to 20 percent for people over the age of 80. Senile dementia is not a process of normal aging.

Reaction time begins to slow at approximately age 25.

True: While the slowing of reaction time varies from individual to individual, it generally begins to occur in the mid-twenties and continues gradually into old age.

Most symptoms of disease in mature adults are not caused by aging at all. They stem from physical inactivity, poor nutrition and overeating.

True: Some will also include environmental pollution and higher stress levels.

At least 10 percent of the aged are living in long-term care institutions such as nursing homes.

False: Studies show that only 5 percent of the people over the age of 65 reside in facilities such as nursing homes.

However, this figure increases to 22 percent when addressing the 85-plus population.

Aged drivers have fewer accidents per person than drivers under the age of 65.

True: Older drivers have about the same number of accidents as middle aged persons, but have a much lower rate than drivers under the age of 30.

■ The ability to learn declines significantly by the age of 50.

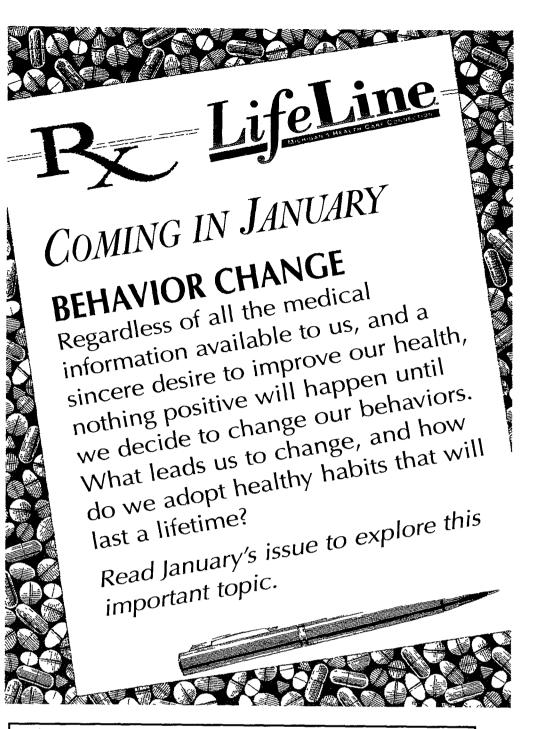

False: The process and rate of learning changes with increased age. Learning ability does not decline. Sometimes, it takes an older person longer to learn something new, but studies have shown that often older people want to get it right and will take the time necessary to make that happen.

- The majority of older people are socially isolated and lonely.
 False: About two-thirds of the elderly report that they are never or hardly ever lonely. Family, friends and activities provide them with many socialization opportunities.
- The leading causes of death for older adults are heart disease, cancer and stroke.

True: Heart disease, cancer and strokes account for 20 percent of doctor visits, 40 percent of hospital stays, 50 percent of all days spent in bed, and over 75 percent of all deaths.

The health and socioeconomic status of older adults compared to younger people in the year 2000 will probably be about the same as now.

False: Measures of health, income, occupation and education are rising among older people. As a result, in the year 2000, the es, yes...you've heard and read about all of the good reasons to exercise, especially as you get older. But according to the Journal of the American Medical Association, there are two more reasons: Scientists have recently found that exercise not only helps older people sleep better, but it reduces the pain of arthritis as well.

Researchers at Stanford and Emory Universities and at the University of Oklahoma reported that seniors who exercised four times a week fell asleep faster at night than their inactive peers. They studied 43 sedentary but otherwise healthy men and women ages 50-76 who experienced some of the sleeping problems associated with aging (such as taking a long time to drift off into sleep, then waking in the middle of the night).

Those who engaged in brisk walking and low-impact aerobics four times each week reported that they fell asleep quickly and slept almost an hour longer than they had before. The sedentary folks said their sleep patterns were unchanged.

Meanwhile, researchers at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest University looked at exercise's effects on more than 300 healthy people aged 60 and older who had osteoarthritis of the knee. Those who walked briskly or worked out with weights for an hour three times each week were able to climb stairs, get out of cars and perform other activities more easily and with less pain than their sedentary cohorts. Lisa Bechard, a physical therapist with St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, sees senior patients whose ages range from about 65 to 100, and who are suffering from serious conditions such as congestive heart failure, stroke, respiratory problems and arthritis, which can cause extreme pain and result in fractured bones.

Exercise in its purest form is how she helps her patients heal. "Our aim is to get them up, walking around and returning to their daily activities," she said. "The quicker they're up and functioning, the better they feel."

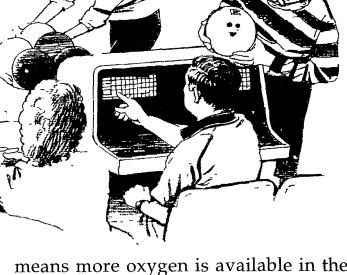

The therapy program depends on the nature of the disease, Bechard explains, but most prescriptions involve general exercises that promote correct body mechanics — improved posture and alignment, regaining or maintaining strength and flexibility, breathing correctly, walking and even resistance walking (in water).

"If a person has maintained a certain level of fitness, he or she will do better in therapy — they will move more easily and experience less pain," Bechard said. "Exercisers have been educated about the importance of muscle strength, and they help themselves, even while still in bed by moving their joints and muscles."

AND, EXERCISE MAY HELP OLDER WOMEN LIVE LONGER

recent study conducted by the University of Minnesota School of Public Health found that regular exercise reduced the risk of premature death by as much as 30 percent in postmenopausal women. This study followed the workout habits of more than 40,000 women between ages 55 and 69 over seven years. It concluded that those who engaged in the more vigorous activities — jogging, swimming, tennis — lowered their risk of premature death the most, but even taking long strolls, playing golf and gardening paid off with health benefits.

Another study of 16 postmenopausal women at Indiana University found that exercise reduced the severity of hot flashes. The women who worked out three times each week (for 40 to 60 minutes) on a three-month long conditioning program reported both a decrease in the duration of hot flashes and a lessening of such symptoms as insomnia and headaches. "We now recognize that exercising has far reaching effects on many body systems, especially as we age" said Barry Franklin, Ph.D. Aging causes muscles to atrophy, muscle mass and 'joint flexiblity to decline, bone density decreases aerobic capacity declines, 🔩 metabolism slows down and weight may increase. All of these effects can be reversed, Franklin says. "With exercise, the aerobic capacity increases, which means more oxygen is available in the blood to help the heart pump efficiently; it improves muscle tone and increases strength and flexibility."

In addition, he says, studies show that exercise can enhance well being and combat anxiety and depression. "Some people believe that exercise releases chemicals called endorphins that result in that good feeling some describe as an exercise 'high,'" he explained.

How much exercise will achieve these benefits? "I recommend following the American College of Sports Medicine guidelines," Franklin said. "Men over age 40 and women over age 50 who plan to embark on a vigorous exercise program (fast walking, jogging, recreational sports) should do two things:

- 1) discuss these exercise plans with their doctors;
- 2) take an exercise test to determine how the heart responds to exertion. If there are problems, these need to be attended to before starting a vigorous program."

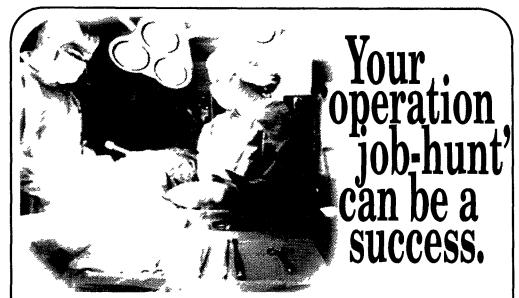

"You can't just go out there and start running a mile," Bechard adds. "You need to know physically how you are — your cardiac capacity, how strong your bones and joints are — so I recommend my patients check with their doctor first."

"The women's programs at St. Mary Hospital meet all my needs."

My doctor said I needed a few tests, and told me about St. Mary Hospital's new Marian Women's Center. It's close to home, and the staff is committed to keeping women healthy. I found a warm, caring atmosphere designed to help women feel comfortable.

Sir JI

We're planning to start a family soon, and all the programs I need are now available close to home. My mother was interested in the Marian Women's Center menopause support group, which educates women and removes some of the mystery about this time of life. And, if I want more information about health topics concerning women, I can attend specialized seminars throughout the year.

STRENGTH TRAINING: MAXIMUM BENEFIT, MAXIMUM SAFETY

s we discussed in our April issue of LifeLine, strength training has Inumerous benefits: It can build or restore strength in both muscles and bones; it helps prevent weight gain, heart attack, and diabetes in ways that other exercises don't; and it may cut the risk of colon cancer. Those benefits make strength training using free weights, weight machines, elastic bands, or the resistance of your own body weight--an essential part of any exercise program, particularly for older people.

If your goal is mainly to stay strong and healthy rather than to reshape your body or boost your athletic performance, strength training doesn't have to take much time. For example, you can get substantial benefits from as few as four to six exercises that work the major muscles in the arms, shoulders, chest, back, and, if you do all six exercises, the legs. Further, doing the exercises just three times a week, with at least one day of rest between sessions, will yield maximal gains; doing them twice a week will yield up to 90 percent of the maximum; even once a week will at least slow muscle loss and possibly stop it entirely. And for the average person, one set of 8 to 12 repetitions of each exercise seems to be just as effective as multiple sets.

Whether you choose a simplified regimen or a more ambitious program, these guidelines will help ensure a safe, effective workout:

- See a physician for special guidance before starting if you haven't had a checkup in more than two years and are over age 45 or have been physically inactive for many years; if you have high blood pressure, coronary heart disease, or a chronic illness; if you're at increased risk for coronary disease; or if you take medications.
- Warm up by marching in place, swinging your arms back and forth, and rolling your shoulders for a minute or two. After the workout, stretch.
- Bend from the knees, not the hips, when you pick up or put down a dumbbell, barbell, or weight plate.
- Exhale during the exertion phase of any maneuver, inhale while returning to the starting position. Don't hold your breath; that can cause lightheadedness and even fainting.

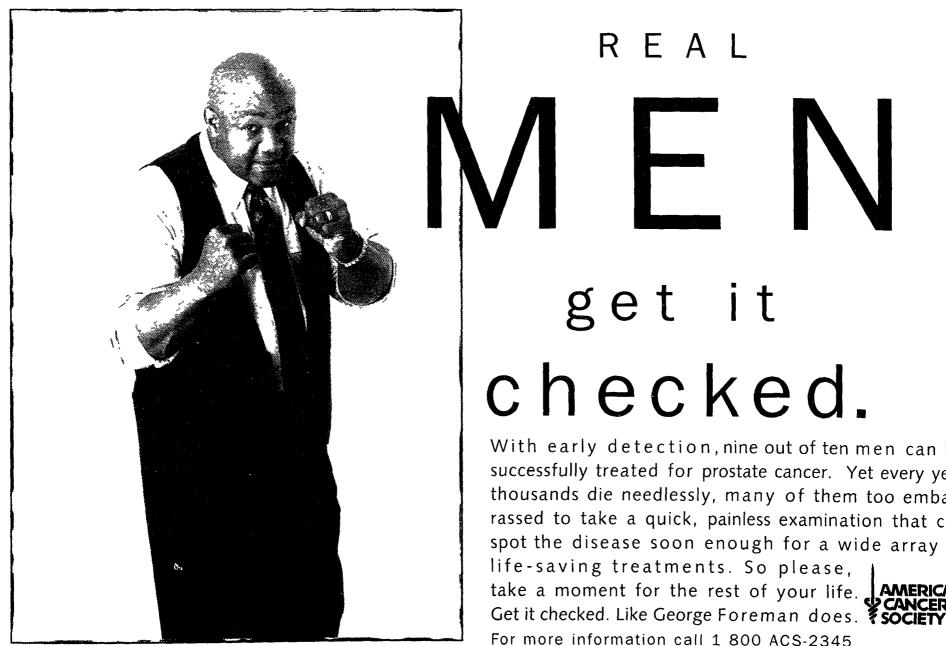

Exercise slowly. Each repetition should take four to six seconds, two for the first half of the maneuver, two to four for the second half. (Rushing allows gravity, momentum, or the elastic band or machine to do some of the work for you.)

Move only the part of the body being exercised. For example, keep your upper arms stationary during biceps curls, your neck stationary during abdominal crunches. Don't wiggle, squirm, or rock back and forth; and don't lean forward or backward, particularly by arching or rounding your back, unless the exercise instructions require such adjustments.

Avoid excessive pressure on your joints. Don't lock your elbows or knees, and don't bend them more than 90 degrees during certain exercises, notably squats, leg presses, and parallel-bar dips. Don't let your knees jut out in front of your toes during squats and other exercises that work the legs or buttocks. And don't bend your wrists except during forearm exercises.

Keep your neck and shoulders relaxed when you're exercising other parts of the body, to avoid straining the neck and shoulder muscles.

EATING Well

EATING DURING THE HOLIDAYS: HOW CAN WE FEAST WITHOUT GETTING FAT?

he holidays are here, brimming with good cheer and great food. With the office party, the family celebrations, and the gifts filled with homemade cookies, candy and salted nuts, the time between Thanksgiving and the new year can feel like one long, uninterrupted meal. Inevitably, we find that we often can't enjoy all the great food without getting stuffed.

"Holidays mean traditions and memories that are often focused on food," said Michaeline Raczka, R.D., community education coordinator with Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital.

Food is everywhere and there's lots of it. Your friends and family try out their most delicious recipes; and, if you are doing the cooking, your time is preoccupied with shopping and other preparations: Finally, Raczka says, you may feel stressed by all the activities and expectations of the season and use food to reward yourself.

Overeating can result in a "food hangover." You may feel tired, plagued with heartburn and bloated after a big meal. Often, people use this as an excuse to slip in a little nap, then you wake up hungry or thirsty and you set off a cycle of more eating and less physical activity. An occasional big meal may make you a little uncomfortable, but an entire season of indulging could make it difficult to get back to a balanced eating routine.

"People tend to look at this as a challenge: 'Can I get through the holidays without gaining weight?'," Raczka says. "We feel like we've failed if we give in and enjoy some treats. This can lead to a binge cycle." How do you eat your way through the season, while minimizing the consequences of too much food? Here are some tips:

- Plan activities where food isn't the primary focus. "This may involve changing some traditions and asking friends and family to help," Raczka says. Organize a party around physical activities, like skating or tobogganing. Instead of picking at the leftovers after a big dinner, take a walk and gaze at the festive decorations in your neighborhood, or get the group to go Christmas caroling.
- Set a good eating plan before the holidays, concentrating on three balanced meals a day, lots of water and healthy snacks to keep up your energy. Don't diet: a better goal is maintaining your current weight without gaining. Skipping meals and saving up calories could back-fire if you get to an event feeling hungry and temptation is everywhere.
- Stay aware of what you're doing so you don't end up noshing without thinking about it. "Station yourself far away from the hors d'oeuvre table," Raczka says. "So, if you want a snack, you have to think about walking across the room to get it."
 Remember the last time you stuffed yourself? Consider whether eating too much is worth that uncomfortable feeling afterward. Slow down, enjoy your food, drink lots of water and vow to stop when you're full.

- Watch your alcohol intake. In addition to the calories included in alcoholic drinks (especially the eggnog at 350 calories and about 19 grams of fat per cup), drinking can lessen your commitment to watching what you eat.
- Set realistic goals. The holidays may not be all fun and good cheer. You may have days when you feel tired, irritated and antisocial. You'll be less prone to stuffing your frustrations with food when you can accept these reactions in yourself. Find healthy ways to relieve stress; such as talking to a friend, writing in a journal, getting adequate rest and exercising. "It helps to plan ahead so you're not doing everything at the last minute," Raczka says. "Maybe you don't need to do everything (buy cookies instead of baking them), and don't forget to delegate."
- Pace yourself and save your indulgences for one or two favorites. "Make a list of your favorite holiday treats and sample only two or three things you really like, "Raczka says. You don't have to eat everything offered in one sitting. If several kinds of pies are served for dessert, choose one, or a half serving of both.
- If you do overeat, don't lie down. This will only make you feel worse. Drink a glass of water, take a walk and wait until you feel hungry again before you eat more food.

"I just try to enjoy my family and friends and not focus too much on the food," Raczka says. "I like to enjoy holiday foods, but I stick to small portions. I think if you do these things, you can get through the holidays without sabotaging your weight."

COOKING WITH YOUR KIDS: A HEALTHY HOLIDAY TRADITION

S easonal treats are an important part of the holidays. They can represent family traditions, and they can be as festive as wrapping gifts or decorating the tree. Why not share the preparation with your children? It's a great way to spend time together and help them learn about nutrition. Even very young children can make faces on the cookies, or add chocolate chips to the brownies. The following are two festive and healthy treats you can make with your children.

Pumpkin Cookies

(Makes about four dozen)

- Continue your regular exercise routine. Exercising will help you regulate your appetite and it's a great way to beat stress.
- Take the edge off your hunger. Before attending a party, have a low-fat snack such as yogurt, cut-up-vegetables or an apple. They really will help you avoid grazing on the party fare.

1 1/2 cups cooked or canned pumpkin
1/2 cup margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 16-ounce package butterscotch chips

1 cup finely chopped pecans

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Spray cookie sheets with nonstick spray. Blend together the pumpkin, margarine and sugar. Mix in the salt, vanilla and egg. Then add the flour, baking soda, baking powder and cinnamon, and mix together well. Stir in the butterscotch chips and pecans. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto the greased cookie sheets. Bake until brown, about 12 to 15 minutes.

Let the kids be creative about making faces on the cookies. (You can use the raisins, butterscotch chips and pecans or other ingredients you have.)

Chocolate Chip Cocoa Bars (Makes about 15 servings)

1 cup all-purpose flour (not self-rising)
 2/3 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
 1 large egg
 1 large egg white
 1 teaspoon instant coffee dissolved in

1 teaspoon hot water stir until dissolved. Fold in flour mixture and chocolate chips until dry ingredients are just moistened. Pour batter into a lightly sprayed 8x13 inch pan and bake for 30 minutes. Cool on a rack and cut into 2x2 inch squares.

NATURAL WAYS TO AVOID COLDS AND FLU

any humorists have said that a cold untreated lasts seven miserable days. Treated, it goes away promptly in just one week.

Despite this well-known adage, Americans spend billions of dollars annually on over-the-counter drugs for colds and flu.

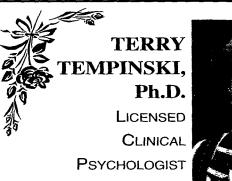

Vegetarian Times magazine recommends the following natural remedies for preventing colds and flu. These basic tactics, while no guarantee of a cold-and-flu-free season, may go a long way toward preventing or at least shortening the lifespan of your next bug.

Garlic--Raw garlic has been shown to kill several types of bacteria and viruses, and it boosts immunity. If you're worried about "garlic breath," deodorized supplements contain the equivalent of many cloves of garlic in each pill.

*Vitamin C--*By far the most popular cold and flu preventative is vitamin C, which has the wide-ranging effects of being a potent antioxidant, boosting interferon (a natural antiviral substance), raising antibody levels, and maintaining a strong immune system. Eating five generous servings of fresh fruits and vagatables and day according and vegetables each day, especially citrus fruits, bananas, berries, greens, peppers, tomatoes and potatoes, will ensure you get your recommended daily allowance of vitamin C.

Zinc--Non-meat sources of zinc include whole grains, beans, nuts and nut butters, and pumpkin and sunflower seeds. Zinc lozenges are extremely popular weapons on the prevention front, and have been shown to dramatically reduce the lifespan of colds and flu.

4 ounces mini semisweet chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a medium bowl, whisk together flour and cocoa. Set aside. In a large mixing bowl, whisk egg and egg whites until combined. Add dissolved coffee, vanilla and applesauce, and stir until combined. Add sugar and Echinacea--Herbalists use echinacea to jump-start the immune system; it is recommended that you take courses of echinacea, three weeks on, followed by one week off.

A Stress-Free Life--Working too hard and not getting enough sleep exhaust the body and leave it more vulnerable to infection. Living a sane, stress-free and balanced life makes you less likely to catch colds, flu, or anything else.

hat may be wonderful for your children — holiday vacation may be difficult for you, as you try to manage your child's time off from school while balancing your own responsibilities. To help you cope, here are some tips from the American Academy of Pediatrics' parenting book Caring For Your School-Age Child: Ages 5 to 12.

- * Plan ahead. You and your children will be more relaxed if you know beforehand what arrangements will be made for their vacation time. Check out alternatives and make plans as early as you can.
- * Match vacations. Once you know your children's vacation schedule, you may be able to block out your own vacation time. If you do get a chance to be home with your kids, don't feel the need to plan elaborate events. Time together is precious; relax and enjoy it.
- * Share. Share. Share. And, this doesn't mean gifts and goodies. It means dividing the holiday chores equally among family members. Also, flexible work schedules may allow you and your spouse to divide the time spent at home, along with domestic duties. You can also share child care. Call on family members to help, or work out a schedule with several other families for trading baby-sitting time.

- # Hire college students. Their terms often match holiday schedules, which means they are home when you need them. Often looking for ways to earn money for gifts, they may be a perfect solution to your child care needs. If you know students who will be home from school, make arrangements with them before they leave for school, so you're not scouting around at the last minute.
- * Look into special programs. Local community organizations, such as the YMCA, may offer special holiday programs for kids on vacation.

TIPS FOR CHOOSING SAFE TOYS

The right toy can help children develop imagination and coordination. But the wrong toy can do more harm than good.

Prevent Blindness America[®] reports that last year, there were more than 17,000 eye injuries to children 14 and under that were associated with toys and sporting equipment. Ninety percent of these injuries were preventable.

While many toy manufacturers follow mandatory and voluntary safety guidelines for their products, several do not. Your challenge is to find a toy the child will love and one that you know is safe.

How do you select a safe toy? Prevent Blindness offers these tips:

- * Avoid toys that shoot or include parts that fly off. Slingshots and even water guns are dangerous because they invite children to target other youngsters. BB guns should not be considered as toys at all.
- Inspect toys for sound construction. Products given to young children should be made of durable materials with no sharp edges or points. The toys should also withstand impact.
- * Avoid giving toys with small parts to young children. These youngsters tend to put things in their mouths, increasing the risk of choking.
- Read instructions carefully and follow suggested age levels. Is the toy appropriate for the child's ability and age? Age labeling is provided not just for developmental reasons, but for safety as well.

Look for the letters "ASTM." This indicates the product meets the national safety standards set by the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM).

ONCE YOU'VE PURCHASED THAT SPECIAL GIFT, KEEP THE CHILD'S SAFETY IN MIND

- ✤ Explain how to use the toy.
- * Repair or throw away damaged toys.
- * Keep toys intended for older children away from younger ones.
- * Don't let the child misuse toys in ways that could be dangerous.
- * Store or give away toys that a child has outgrown.

Harmful toys are not the only cause of injuries. Children who play in unsafe areas in the home increase their risk of accidents. Make sure the child plays in an open area and, if appropriate, under your supervision. Make a list of safety rules and share them with your child. If a youngster is playing with friends, remind everyone of your safety rules. For more information, call 1-800-331-2020.

POISON PATROL

When the holidays and snow days upon us, kids are indoors more than usual. And in every home there are potential dangers in every cabinet and on every shelf that parents and child care givers need to be aware of. The following is information on how to avoid potentially dangerous situations for your children:

- * Tossing a briefcase or purse where a child can get into it can be unwise if the purse contains medicine, cigarettes or cosmetics.
- * Poison centers report that calls come in between 5 p.m. and bed time, when families are especially busy. Also, kids get area. If a toxin has gotten into the eye, flush it with water that is room temperature. If your child becomes unconscious:

* keep his airway open, and call an emergency squad.

* Give cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) if needed.

Do not give fluids to an unconscious child. If the child is vomiting, turn the head so the material drains out. If the child is having convulsions, call the emergency squad. Do not restrain the child, but position them away from objects that might cause injury. Loosen clothing at the neck and waist. Give CPR if needed.

If your child gets into poisons, remain calm, call your local poison control center, doctor, or hospital. Save the label or container of the suspected poison for identification. HEALTH ehavioral problems people face that I throughout the year may become worse during the holidays. Such is the case with alcoholism. The National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence reports a 70 percent increase in calls to their help line the day after New Most seasonal Year's. events are planned around food and drink, and it is incumbent upon holidayparty hosts to be atuned to guests struggling with drinking problems — indeed all guests who imbibe. Here's how you can be a responsive and responsible host.

Matters

BE A RESPONSIBLE HOLIDAY HOST

* If you know that one of your guests has a drinking problem, let them know before the party that alcohol will be offered and ask them what alternative beverage they would like.

BE AN INFORMED HEALTH CARE CONSUMER

A new book may help you make wise choices about the kind of health care you receive. Health Care Choices For Today's Consumer: Families USA Guide to Quality & Cost offers information ranging from consumer rights to women's health care issues and hospital treatments. If you're concerned about hospital or doctor bills, you can read through the chapter on health insurance. If you're searching for a doctor, the book has extensive lists of health care providers. Written by leading medical experts, this book may help you become more involved in managing your health and the care of your family. It's available at local bookstores, or by calling (800) 225-5945.

- * Be supportive if they decide not to attend.
- * Always have non-alcoholic beverages on hand, including sparkling water and coffee, and offer them as readily as you do liquor.
- * Take the focus off alcohol consumption by entertaining guests with music, dancing and other lively activities.
- * Limit bar service to one area so people won't be tempted to drink wherever they turn.
- * If you see guests drinking excessively, two people should gently approach them and suggest that they have something else. Never let them drive if you suspect they've had too much to drink. You could be held liable if they're involved in a car accident.
- * Stop serving alcohol an hour or so before the end of the party, and offer gourmet coffee rather than after-dinner drinks. Remember that coffee will not sober up someone who is intoxicated. If a guest has had too much to drink, be sure to find them transportation home or extend an invitation to spend the night.

HOW TO COPE WITH SEASONAL MOOD CHANGES

In addition to the stresses the holidays may bring, many people (an estimated five percent of the population) suffer from Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD). Those affected feel their moods get darker as the days get shorter, and in many cases can find themselves faced with severe depression.

"One theory behind Seasonal Affective Disorder is that there is a disturbance in the brain's 'biological clock' that regulates hormones, sleep and moods. This disturbance causes this clock to run slow and sparks feelings of sadness and depression," said Richard Balon, M.D., a psychiatrist at The Detroit Medical Center. Dr. Balon says extreme fatigue, lack of energy, an increased need for sleep, food cravings and weight gain all are signs of SAD. He has the following tips for those trying to cope:

Institute For Health Studies is now studying investigational medication for depression in adults 18 and older. All research care is provided at no cost to those who qualify. Individuals experiencing poorly controlled medical problems cannot be accepted for research. If you are interested in this research, please call.

* Try to take a vacation in the winter.

✤ See a psychiatrist if severely depressed.

Dr. Balon adds that spending as much time in the sun whenever possible along with daily exposure to bright lights may help reset the body's clock and help to restore normal function to those who suffer with SAD.

HEARING AIDS— TWO-CHANNEL TECHNOLOGY

ard-of-hearing people often complain that hearing instruments don't restore "normal" hearing in the same way that eyeglasses correct most visual problems.

Normal vision is often restored when corrective lenses focus light properly on the back of the eye. But hearing loss is much more difficult to correct than most vision problems. For example, if the back of the eye itself were damaged, it would be difficult to completely solve the problem with corrective lenses. This situation closely resembles the problem faced by most people with hearing loss.

Why? The inner ear or cochlea contains thousands of haircells necessary for hearing. When sound pressure reaches the tiny "hairs" or filaments, located on the tips of the haircells, it causes the hairs to bend. This changes sound into electricity, which is the "language" the brain understands.

Most people with hearing problems suffer from a condition called presbycusis, in which haircells that amplify and sharpen these electrical impulses are damaged. This means that soft sounds cannot be heard, but loud sounds are "too loud."

Another little-known fact is that different people experience hearing loss at different pitches. Some people cannot hear bass sounds like a car's engine but have no difficulty with mid-range or treble sounds. Many people with presbycusis have hearing in the low pitches but are not able to hear high pitched sounds like a child's voice--unless they speak louder. This means they can hear vowel sounds in speech but have trouble hearing consonants such as s, f, ch, and k. If this is the case, they may think people mumble a lot. They can hear people talking but they may have trouble understanding what they are saying. Recent advances in hearing instrument technology have gone a long way toward restoring more "normal" hearing. Part of the problem with conventional hearing instrument technology is that while these products amplify soft sounds, they also amplify loud sounds by the same amount. This can create uncomfortable, often distorted sound levels and an "unnatural" sound quality. Many people who use these traditional products must adjust the volume of their hearing instruments for different listening situations.

A new hearing instrument called Sound F/X meets both challenges of amplifying the intensity and frequency of sound in a more natural way. Developed by Unitron, a company with more than 30 years experience in hearing and hearing instrument research, the Sound F/X was designed with two channels of amplification, a low and a high frequency channel. It's like having two hearing instruments in one.

Using this two-channel technology, the hearing instrument can be set to amplify low pitches, high pitches or both--depending on the nature of your hearing loss.

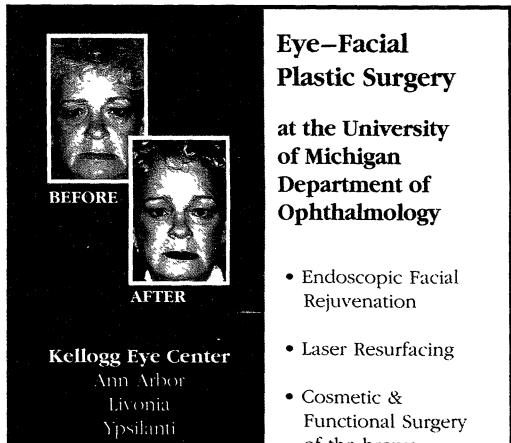

Through an additional feature known as wide dynamic range compression, these sound devises amplify soft sounds significantly and loud sounds only a little or not at all.

This new hearing device overcomes some of the limitations of traditional hearing instruments, and creates more natural hearing. This innovation is welcome relief to all hearing instrument users and has given new hope to hard-of-hearing people who have resisted the use of hearing instruments.

Two-channel hearing instruments are available in a variety of models from tiny and discreet, completely-in-the-canal instruments to more powerful, behind-the-ear products.

Recent developments in hearing instrument technology do not promise to cure hearing loss. But they do offer the hard-of-hearing an opportunity to hear in a more natural way so they can enjoy more than ever the quality of life they deserve. Consult with your physician about these two channel devises available in your area.

PUBLIC NOTICE UNCLAIMED SCHOOL ORDERS

NECCHI SCHOOL MODEL SEW & SERGE SEWING MACHINES

The Necchi Sewing Machine company (Manufacturing Quality Since 1835) Ordered the production of large quantities of their 1997 Sew & Serge Sewing Machines anticipating large orders for this model. DUE TO ECONOMIC CONDITIONS THESE ORDERS WERE NOT RECEIVED!

THEY MUST BE SOLD !!!!!!

These heavy duty School Model Sewing Machines ARE MADE OF METAL AND HAVE METAL HOOKS & GEARS. THEY ARE BRAND NEW and have the Necchi Company's 25 year warranty. They are designed to sew all fabrics (without tension adjustment) such as Levi's, Canvas, Upholstery, Nylon, Silk, Stretch Materials, Vinyl, AND

THEY EVEN SEW LEATHER!!!!!!!

With the built in Professional Serging Stitch, You sew the Seam and Serge the edge of the fabric at the same time (Eliminating two seam operations). With an optional cutter you can trim the seams as you sew. But unlike the factory style sergers, this machine also makes Buttonholes (any size), Invisible Blind Hems, Monograms, Applique, Decorative Patterns, Satin Stitching, Corsetry Stitching, Double Seams, Sews on Buttons, Rolled Hems, Quilting Stitching, Leather Glove Stitch and More!! WITHOUT THE USE OF OLD-FASHIONED CAMS OR PROGRAMMERS, Just turn the dial and see Magic Happen!!!

NOW YOU HAVE IT ALL IN ONE MACHINE THIS FACTORY AUTHORIZED SALE IS FOR ONE DAY ONLY
