Residents seek relief from city, township on water line issue

By WENSDY WHITE Staff Writer

WAYNE COUNTY'S OLD

THURSDAY, I

For five families on the cusp of the township, maintaining water service has become a sea of confusion that has led them to believe unless they come up with thousands of dollars, their taps will run dry.

Their homes are physically located in Northville Township, just 300 feet from the city line.

The city estimates that the Department of Public Works is called to fix busted water mains there about twice a year, the most recent occurring last Saturday night. City officials have determined made some 50 years ago, however, the City of Northville has provided that it's time to upgrade the sys-tem to ductile iron lines measuring eight inches in diameter.

Also planned is the installation of two fire hydrants to service the neighborhood, which is located on the south side of Seven Mile Road. west of Sheldon Road and next to Fish Hatchery Park.

The estimated cost of the project is $70,000, half of which the city has volunteered to pay.

"It appears to us sometime many years ago the city allowed those homes to connect the city system." Gallogly said. "It doesn't serve anyone in the city but they are our customers so we're willing to go halfway. These breaks are going to keep happening because it's cheap pipe. It wasn't the quality we put in the city."

Local merchants enjoy brisk sales before Christmas

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Though a tally hadn't been made. downtown Northville merchants were expecting brisk sales heading into the final days before Christmas.

Chamber of Commerce director Laurie Marrs said 1998 was shaping up to be the most lucrative in history of downtown Northville, due in no small part to a bullish economy.

Tve talked to a number of merchants in the downtown, and most of them are telling me this could be the best year yet." Marrs said. Bonus checks are coming in around this time of year and people are shopping with confidence."

Marrs also said the hiring of a Chrisimas shopping coordinator by the city of Northville has helped promote downtown Northville as an alternative to the malls.

That was particularly good news for Marrs, who said small businesses in downtown Northville are the most heavily solicited for contributions to civic functions, but are usually not the stores sought out to shop when December rolls around.

*People have to learn to shop the downtown." she said. "My question is this: when you need to buy a gift, do you always do your shopping downtown?"

Marrs said shoppers should make downtown businesses their first stop for purchases. Only if a gift can't be found (a tough task in Marrs' mind) should other large-scale retailers be sought out,

It's a small service, but one that's appreciated by neighbors like Terri O'Brien, who met McGuire at the curb last week to give him a gloves and a hat for Christmas.

He's a great guy. Despite his challenges he still finds a way to help the community and put a smile on our faces every week, when we don't have to go and get our trash cans,' O'Brien said.

The Grandview Avenue resident is just one of perhaps hundreds of neighbors who benefit from McGuire's unsolicited kindness and sense of responsibility.

McGuire, 42, was born with Down's Syndrome, the 13th child of John and Elise McGuire, the Northville residen Guernsey's Dairy on Novi Road.

Backed by 35th District Court judges, their decisions were imple-

'It was a real world experience I like a lot," Church said in a presentation to the Northville Board of Education this month. "When you actually go into the court and see the judge you realize how important it is and how your going to affect a person. You learn more about the court system than I think you ever would in a class-

Scheckel said the Teen Court experience enhances a class unit on crime.

The McGuire's said they think Paul's community service all began back when his brother bought the house next door in 1967.

McGuire started to pull Jim's trash cans in with his own.

He soon added the neighbors on the other side of his Orchard Drive home, then expanded his service to include the priest and nuns from Our Lady of Victory Church across the street.

Over the past 30 years, his route has continued to expand.

In his spare time, McGuire enjoys music, basketball, swimming and bowling.

Fond of routine, he attends special education Bible school at Saint Clare of Assisi Church in Farmington Hills every week.

On Saturdays, he takes collection and hands out bulletins for evening mass at OLV. Paul shares his parent's deep Catholic faith, which they said has been enhanced through raising a special son like Paul.

When he came into the world that way. the doctor said 'Don't take this child home. Take him to the state hospital and drop him off," John explained. "I said 'Hey, baloney. He came to us, we'll take him home and make him ours." And we brought him in with all the kids and treated him like the rest of them.'

The couple, who have raised 14 children, said having Paul was challenging only when other people didn't understand him and his condition.

Stilec legacy celebrated at red ribbon ceremony

By WENSDY WHITE Staff Writer

The memory of the late Charlie Stilec was cemented into the future Northville High School when students and peers buried symbolic ribbons in the building's foundation Dec. 17.

About 30 people followed up a short ceremony in Stilec's honor by tossing handfuls of orange ribbon into the earth where his office would have been.

They were the same memorial ribbons that were posted throughout the community after the death of the well-liked and admired Student Assistance Coordinator.

We made loads and loads of ribbons last year after he passed away. Everybody wore one," said senior Holly Qualman. *I didn't think that many people knew him but he affected everyone."

School superintendent Leonard Rezmierski, assistant superintendent David Bolitho, school board members Martha Nield and Mike Poterala, Northville Parks and Recreation director Tracy Sincock and Northville Youth Assistance director Mary Ellen King, joined about two dozen students for the 2:30 p.m. event.

When it came to the Holiday Light Decorating Contest, we decided we were going to interview somebody different this year. spread the fame around.

Then, Novi resident Bob Jackson told us not to miss Antler Drive in Deerbrook - it's too spectacular. This is the street for seasonal drive-by gawking. Contest winner Gary Vartanian, an Antler Drive homeowner, was contacted. And Vartanian said, yes, his house looks great, but don't photograph his place --- go to the Kohl residence. It was even more spectacular.

John Kohl, 16, takes charge of his parents' yard each year and turns it into a winter wonderland.

The thing is, it's not gaudy, it's well done," Vartanian explained.

. So here the Novi News is for the second year in a row, featuring John Kohl, Novi's own teenage Spirit of Christmas. New in 1998, he added 150 more strands of lights. He estimates that he may have as many as 50,000 lights out there and his family's Detroit Edison is up by $500 a month during the holiday season. Plus, the generator's running, but luckily, gas prices are low this season.

We have our generator maxed out, plus all other circuits. The generator takes five gallons of gas a night," Kohl said.

In June, he began planning his masterpiece for this year. For two months in advance, he and some friends are out there stringing lights and putting up holiday figures.

'It was fun'. We were out working and had music playing," he said. This season hasn't been an easy year for those who decorate their yards. High winds have torn down decorations. Kohl had eight reindeer on a pole taking off over his rooftop, but those were blown off.

Even worse, because of the warm weather, destruction by the human element has increased.

really good money," he said.

HOLIDAY LIGHTS

Novi's annual Holiday Light Decorating Contest seems to spur people on to greater endeavors. This year, each homeowners' association had the option of selecting their own winners. Members of the City of Novi Homeowners Association selected the winning businesses.

In addition to teaching students about government and the judicial system, program enthusiasts hope that teens who have to sit in judgment before their peers, maybe even teens they know, will be more impacted by the consequences of their illegal actions.

Other teen court programs are being implemented across the country but this one is unique because the judges actually carry out the sentences imposed by the students.

Several bills OK'd by state lawmakers

BY TIM RICHARD Staff Writer

It wasn't prom night, but the Michigan Legislature was up until 3 a.m. Dec. 11. cleaning up work that many members said should have been done last June.

These bills made it through both chambers and are being signed by Gov. John Engler:

Assessment cut - Township residents who pay special assessments will get a break under bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Bullard Jr., R-Milford. It requires that such bills be based on the "taxable value" of property, which tends to be lower than the state equalized value."

Townships and villages use special assessments to pay for specific purposes such as water, sewers, lighting and street paving. Under the 1994 Proposal A package, increases in property valuations were limited to 5 percent or the rate of consumer price inflation. Thus, "taxable value" is capped, but the old "state equalized value" is not.

But Attorney General Frank Kelley ruled that the law applied only to taxes, not special assessments. Bullard's Seriate Bill 428 applies taxable value to assessments, too.

The Senate passed it 37-0 on May 28, but the House waited until Dec. 11 to pass it on an 89-1 vote Biliboard ban - Tobacco ads would be banned from roadside billboards beginning Jan. 1 of 2000, under House Bill 4343. The Senate approved it 28-9 after a sharp debate.

"It is foolish - stupid - idiotic to smoke," said opponent John J.H. Schwarz, R-Battle Creek, "but it's a legal product made by legal companles. I suggest we read the first amendment (to the U.S. Constitu-tion, guaranteeing free speech)." Schwarz and George Hart, D-Dearborn, were the only area senators opposing the bill. The House passed it 76-10 in September.

- The American Cancer Society supported the bill. Opposed were the Michigan Chamber of Commerce and the American Civil Liberties Union.

$5.000 reward - The Senate gave 37-0 approval to a Housepassed bill that would require the Department of Natural Resources to offer $5,000 rewards for information leading to the arrest and prosecution of anti-hunters who interfere with lawful hunting and fishing.

The person who was interfered with would be ineligible for the reward. Money would come from the Wildlife Resource Protection Fund. Currently, only poaching is subject to reward money.

State costs would be increased a minimal amount, depending on the number and type of rewards for reporting harassment," according to the Senate Fiscal Agency. All area senators voted yes except John Cherry, D-Clio, who missed the vote.

Snowmobile safety - The Senate voted to establish civil and criminal penalties for the reckless operation of snowmobiles, whether operated on a highway, trail, frozen lake or parking lot.

Reckless operation would be punishable by a misdemeanor fine of up to $250. A snowmobiler who recklessly caused death or serious injury could be imprisoned for two years and fined up to $2,000. The House passed the bill earli-

City Police Reports

DRUNK AND DISORIENTED: Police spotted a car in the driveway of Northville Gourmet and Wine Shop around 1:30 a.m. Dec. 19, that failed to proceed into the road even when traffic was clear.

Police pulled into the parking lot to see if the driver was lost or having car trouble, but the motorist failed to respond to the officer's flashlight. When police opened their window to talk to the 28year-old Detroit woman, she pulled onto Eight Mile and proceeded to drive directly over the center line, then swerve to the right and straddle the road's shoulder.

Police proceeded to make a traffic stop, and found two passengers appeared to be passed out in the ackseat.

The driver said the group had been at a Christmas party in Plymouth, where she admitted to having "two drinks."

After snielling alcohol, police put the woman through a series of field sobriety tasks that she failed. A portable breathalyzer test revealed her blood alcohol level at .25 percent, two and a half times the legal limit in Michigan.

She was arrested and released pending sobriety and a $100 bond. ecause the passengers were unable to drive, her car was impounded.

STRUCK DOWN: A 71-year-old Northville woman was struck by a car while crossing at Wing and Fairbrook roads around 1 p.m. on Dec. 16.

The 75-year-old Northville man that hit her was driving a 1998 Toyota.

He told police he failed to see the woman as he turned northbound on Wing St.

She was treated for injuries at Providence Park and released.

He was ticketed for failure to yield to a pedestrian.

THE GRINCH WHO STOLE CHRISTMAS: Frosty the Snowman and Santa were swiped from a front yard on the 400-block of Grace Street sometime overnight Dec. 20.

A 40-year-old Northville resident reported the theft of the lighted, 4foot-tall decorative figures, which vere valued at $35 each.

Police are still searching for the scrooge(s) but have no suspects at this time.

LIGHTS OFF: A lamppost on Dunlap just east of Center broke when it was swiped by a delivery truck around 7 p.m. Dec. 15.

The Detroit driver was cited for an improper left turn after he misjudged the size of the truck from P.

Olender and Co. in Hamtramck. The top portion of the lamppost was recovered from in between the truck and its trailer.

FIRED UP: When a 35-year-old Southfield man was fired from his job at The Lawn Butler the morning of Dec. 2, he didn't take the news lightly.

Instead, he punched his boss in the mouth as he was leaving.

The 30-year-old owner of The Lawn Butler had blood and bruises on his face and cuts in his mouth by the time police arrived to the scene. He refused medical attention.

When police phoned the suspect at his Southfield residence, he claimed he never hit the man and that, in fact, his boss had pushed him.

After police failed to get a hold of the suspect again, they issued a warrant for his arrest for assault and battery.

ATTEMPTED BREAK-IN: A resident on the 300-block of St. Lawrence Blvd. called police to report that someone had tried to break into his garage sometime between Dec. 10 and 12. Police examined the roll-up garage door and found that a 10-inch section of weatherstripping had been damaged. Police said it appeared someone had tried to pry the door open with a blunt tool. The damage was estimated at $100, but the husband and wife. both in their 70's, confirmed that nobody had gained entry to the garage and nothing was missing.

"X" MARKS THE SPOT: Vandals left a large X on both passenger side doors of a Lincoln Navigator the evening of Dec. 18.

A 44-year-old Northville woman said she had parked the SUV on the north side of Amerman Elementary School while attending a Christmas function, and came out to find the damage.

No suspects or evidence remained at the scene.

TAILGATING: Police stopped a 23-year-old Romulus man after they spotted him following within 10 feet of a car and tailing it through the red light at Eight Mile and Taft roads around 2 p.m. Dec. 18.

They soon found the man had a suspended license for failing to comply with a judgment in Mason. Police arrested and released him on a $100 bond.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: In the midst of reporting the theft of a cell phone that he'd left on a table at the Northville Downs. a 57year-old Southfield man wandered off.

Police valued the phone at $200 but declared the case inactive because they were unable to explain the prosecution procedure to the man.

The theft occurred on the second floor of the clubhouse between 8 and 10 p.m. on Dec. 17.

Residents seek relief from township officials asked the township to kick in the rest. The township refused, leaving residents with three options.

Homeowners can either get together and pay the city $35,000 "up front," run individual water lines to the city limits to connect with the city lines, or arrange to install private wells.

These options were outlined in a letter mailed in March, which also notified residents that their water would be cut off on October 1.

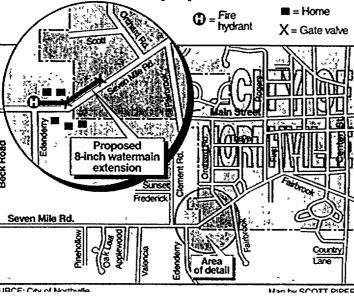

More than two months later, the neighborhood is still receiving water from the city as they try to resolve their water woes.

Some residents. like Ola and Kathy Kvalvaag, were willing to install their own water lines to the city line but said their neighbors living farther from the city limits didn't agree.

The Kvalvaags also found that securing permits to install their own well would be difficult for environmental reasons.

And as for paying their share of the cost up front, they said they didn't even consider that an option.

Watermain extension proposed for Seven Mile front, out of our pocket. That was a very bold statement," Kathy Kvalvaag said. "It was extremely shocking. The Kvalvaags have owned their Northville Township home for 10 tion. years and have paid their water Seven thousand dollars up bills to the city all along.

They dispute that they are responsible to pay for such a marked upgrade to their lines.

They have this big huge future plan and they re trying to make us pay for it," Kathy Kvalvaag said. This is a utility. Any other company would take care of it and fix these lines. They knew this was coming. They should have budgeted for it."

The Kvalvaags have joined their neighbors in petitioning the Northville Township Board of Trustees to pay for the replacement of the water main service to their neighborhood.

They expect to speak in front of the board at an upcoming meeting.

According to Don Weaver, director of public service for Northville Township, residents are always billed for upgrades to their water systems or for the installation of hydrants that will service their neighborhoods.

He said he is trying to create a special assessment district to include the five homes, so that they may pay their shares of the remaining $35.000 over time on their tax bills.

The city has determined that their line is a maintenance headache and they need to replace it." Weaver said. "I will meet with the residents to talk about this matter further. I can't tell you how we'll handle this whole thing."

she said.

Ultimate Toys N' Gifts owner Lou LaChance credited the unseasonably mild weather as one of the principal reasons for brisk sales at his store.

Sales have been outstanding." he said. The better weather seems to have given us a notable increase over last year. If you ask me, people have had the tendency to do their shopping outside and going door to door versus heading to the malls."

Ultimate Toys doesn't normally carry, mass-marketed items, such as Furby, this year's gotta-have-it toy., However, LaChance said Yomega yo-yos and the ever-popular Beanie Babies are also in heavy demand. In addition. LaChance said dolls from the story "Madeline" have been big, as have collectables from TV's "Teletubbies.

"It's been very, very good for us this year." LaChance said. "As we get closer to Christmas, it almost doesn't matter about what the weather is. People will have to do their shopping. regardless of what's happening outside." The early shopping season wasn't terribly robust for Pam Carter, owner of In Your Dreams. However, Carter said the week of Dec. 20 had the makings of a lastminute onslaught of patrons, particularly the younger set. The store which specializes in custom-made pillowcases, coffee mugs and keychains was becoming popular for children who wanted to make their own gifts, especially for grandparents, Carter said.

"We're just starting to pick up." Carter said. "This week, we've been extremely busy."

The biggest mover? The Bed Buddy pillowcase, which provides a sleepy home for those addictive Beanle Bables.

"Beanies are still popular," Carter said. "Just when I think they're going to die off, they keep coming back. Kids keep asking for the pillowcases to put them in."

Carter said In Your Dreams' location -- at the northern limit of the downtown portion of Center Street - may have played a role in sales figures.

For Bon Loot, advertising proved its worth, but extended business hours weren't having quite the effect hoped for, according to manager Phyllis Urban.

"With all the things we did this year - participating in the Christmas Walk and Moonlight Madness - it helped bring people in the stores," she said. "But I don't think a lot of people are aware of the fact we're open until 8 p.m.*

Urban said she didn't mind keeping the doors unlocked later than normal, provided that shoppers continued trickling in during the evening.

Urban said sales appeared to be about on the same level as a year ago, when Bon Loot was in operation for its first Christmas in Northville. However, Urban said she still periodically has customers in her store asking for information about Williamsburg Inspirations, the former tenant of the building Bon Loot now occupies.

"Some people come to Northville just for that and wonder what happened to the old store," she said.

as the group struggled to reach the location of what would have been Stilec's office.

"Charlie's up there laughing his head off at us right now. Nothing with Charlie was ever boring. Everything was an event, like this is an event," said Judy Cavanaugh, a Northville High School art teacher who partnered with Stilec for Students Against Drunk Driving and other causes. "One thing about him was his spirit. He made everything special just by doing it."

The group gathered around the hole where a steel wall beam would be installed.

After a few brief words by Cavanaugh. the students dropped hundreds of ribbons into the ground, then watched a truck pour cement over the pile.

Aside from continuing his fight for drug and alcohol free youth. Conat said students try to keep Stilec's spirit alive by rekindling his lighthearted zest for life and penchant for practical jokes.

She remembers kidding with other SADD members about what Stilec would have done with the last piece of pizza leftover at their Victorian Festival fund-raising booth.

We were cracking up. He would have put it on the spatula and flung it in the middle of the street. We didn't do it though because we couldn't have gotten away with it," Conat said.

The mood of the ribbon memorial was upbeat as the participants shared stories about the Stilec also led church youth groups, was involved in the Early Bird Kiwanis Club and ran Make A Difference camp.

He died of a heart attack Dec. 7, 1997 at age 48.

"I think it's a very nice tribute that Charlie's memory is so strong with these kids," said school board trustee Martha Nield. "We all miss him. We think about him all the time."

New Student Assistance Coordinator Carolyn Miranda will continue Stilec's work when the new Northville High opens for the 2000-2001 school year on Six Mile Road between Sheldon and Beck.

Holiday season: a time to make special memories

So much may change over the decades, for-holiday memory?

Perhaps it was a special gift. the one you didn't expect to get. Then came Christmas morning and you searched under the tree in vain for the box that could be "it." Each time a present came out, you hoped it would be the one. And when all the presents were gone and there seemed to be no more hope, Dad pulled "it" out from behind the couch.

Perhaps it was the anticipation of the holiday. Kids look forward to Christians, but all cultures and relithat one day of the

Everything heightens the atmosphere - the ornaments, the cold tunes won and lost, but weather, the smell of pine needles, the the holiday is always smell of cookies bak- there, rolling around once ing in the kitchen. Santa seems to be a year, always the same, everywhere. Every always a magical time. place you go, there are more and more preparation, shopping and wrapping. Even looking through a frosty win-dow at the glow of Christmas lights reflected off a gentling falling snow can bring one's childhood to mind.

Maybe it was just special times with special people. A lot of youthful time gets spent playing with all those toys in the hours and days after they're unwrapped. It all creates

And dinners. Sitting down to a turkey or ham supper on the big day brings everyone, all generations, to one place at one time.

Children of course are best at bringing back old memories. How can anyone watch a child's face light up at the opening of a present and not recall a flood of scenes of that favorite morning?

Christmas, obviously, is very special holiday with great significance to gions have great holidays that serve in many ways the same purpose - to bring generations the together in traditions that never change. For each of us individually, they can serve as a touchstone in our lives. So much decades, fortunes decorations. All the rushing and won and lost, but the holiday is always there, rolling around once a year, always the same, always a magical time.

Here's wishing you and yours the best for the holidays, whatever your holiday may be - a Merry Christmas, a Happy Hanukkah, a Joyous Ramadan, a Happy Kwanza and a wonderful New Year.

From all of us at the Northville special moments with, perhaps, a Record, we hope you make a memory.

The trials and tribulations of teaching

Imagine being a bug in the middle of the stage of a Riverdance concert.

That aptly describes the experience of many new teachers. They are excited by their new careers and enjoy working with children.

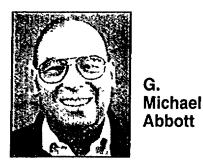

But they are usually utterly exhausted after working with a class full of sometimes uncooperative children, hour after hour.

I facilitate two new teacher support programs. My job is to help induct new teachers into their careers as teachers. I tell them early on that they are not alone.

The need to know that we've all made mistakes. I tell them about my exasperation with my eighth graders within my first month of teaching. when I threw a chalk eraser over their heads into the back wall. Not a good career move. Later that year, during a picnic with the class, I opened a pop bottle for a student who didn't have an opener - remember openers? I placed the lid of the bottle against the edge of a concrete bench and punched down. Pop erupted and the boy jammed his mouth over the gyser. Foam and blood then poured from his mouth. The neck of the bottle had broken off.

Luckily the boy wasn't badly hurt. I tell them of a principal who tells this one on himself: One day in his first year of teaching he told the class that no one would leave for lunch until the room was picked up. he stationed himself by the door to emphasize his intentions. When the bell went, he said, every one of the kids bailed out the windows.

A superintendent told me that his biggest mistake as a new teacher was in handing his keys to a couple of ninth graders to get something out of his car. He looked out horrified to see his car scooting around the parking lot. The new teachers who are desperately trying not to make mistakes seem relieved to know that veterans made mistakes, too.

High on the list of concerns is classroom discipline. I never know where to begin with a subject so broad that it takes in such things as how the procedures of the class are introduced, how the teacher moniters the class, the relations within the class and with the teacher, the feelings of safety in the class, the way lessons are approached, the structure of the class, and so on. They are still on a "what do I do when ... * case by case level, which is where we usually begin.

A high school teacher recently asked. "what do you do when you ask a question and no one answers?" She added, "I know they are alive because I hear breathing."

New teachers usually panic when this happens and end up answering the question and often end up delivering a monologue. Veterans use several strategies.

If it's an open-ended questiion, they may wait, and wait, and wait. I find that if I wait long enough the kids will feel sorry for me and someone will eventually answer. Once one answers, others follow. Sometimes teachers rephrase the question to help students see different dimensions of it. The also look for expressions on the faces of their students. "Linda, you look puzzled. What are you thinking?

Sometimes they get commitment first by asking for a show of hands: "IF you are really in favor of the death penalty, raise your hand and shake it around. If you really oppose capital punishment, put your hand all the way down and shake it around. Those who are less extreme in your views, put you hand somewhere between the extremes to shwo where you are.

Now the teacher asks, "You really oppose capital punishment, Karen. Please tell us why." That usually opens up the discussion.

Classroom discussions like these serve some purposes, but teachers who use small groups effectively will engage more students than a large class discussion can. I form small problem-solving groups of new teachers. The teachers come up with more ideas than I can, and more of them are able to participate. They experience a strategy that they should find useful in their own classrooms.

The flying feet of Riverdance troupe keep pounding. Today we may have dodged one or two of them. Thein in five teachers leave the profession in frustration, often our best and brightest, stomped under the relentless pressure.

What a waste!

It's my first Christmas in the big city

This will be the first year I have ever sang "Christmas in the city."

Having just moved to metro-Detroit from northern Michigan last June and then getting married in September, my new-bride and I decided to spend our Christmas together, alone and in the city.

I have never spent a Christmas in Detroit. This will be new.

Christmas back home always seemed to be such a special time of the year. Everyone seemed to act a little funnier, sing a little more and feel a little warmer.

I think it was the Norman Rockwellesque view of Christmas my family created.

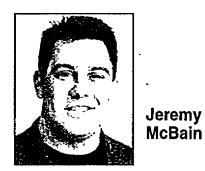

In the days leading up to Christmas, my family would take my grandpa's car and drive down the street to the Christmas tree farm.

Instead of buying a tree in some corner lot, we would trudge through the snow - yes, we had snow there - and cut down the perfect tree.

Usually the "perfect tree" was whatever one my grandmother liked best, my grandfather's choice seemed to always be vetoed by her.

After the tree was in place the next big day was the day all children look forward to, the first day of Christmas vacation.

This was the start of the annual seehow-much-stuff-you-can-do-outsidein-the-cold games. These usually consisted of grabbing some sleds and heading to the sledding hill to see who can beak the sound barrier by leaping off of huge cliffs that ended in a homemade snow ramp. These ramps sent the rider through the air and into an icy snow bank, usually bruising the butt.

Then I would head home to unthaw my toes and get the frozen snot of my nose over a cup of hot chocolate. All of this led up to the grand old night, Christmas Eve.

During this time, family members from across Michigan would come to my grandparents home tucked away in the middle of the wilderness.

It started out as my grandparents cabin, so even after they turned it into their regular home, many family members loving referred to it as "the cabin.

So, they would arrive, all throughout the evening. They would be greeted by hot drinks and a lot of food.

In the early evening hours, my grandfather would rev up his tractor and give everyone rides through the forest. And my uncles would pull groups of giggling children through the woods on sleds tied behind their snowmobiles.

The entire evening ended with the family gathering in the living room of "the cabin." Each one would have a favorite drink, as they sat around the Christmas tree singing carols or having me play "Silent Night" on my bagpipes. Somehow the song "Silent Night" seemed to be more of an oxymoron when played on the bagpipes, but I would do it anyway.

After this the grandkids would hurry up and go to bed. Each one suffering the worst case of insomnia they would ever have.

I would usually sneak out around 2 a.m. into the living room, to see if Santa came. But, instead of Santa, I would be greeted by the loud growling snores of an uncle sleeping on a foldout coach and the crackling wood of a fire in the fire place.

After a while I would go to bed, anxious to see what Santa brought.

Now, I am an adult living in the city. The mystery of Santa is gone, but not forgotten and the warmth of childhood has past.

Instead of spending my Christmas in the cabin in the woods, I find myself creating new traditions to give to my new family in the future.

All things change. In that change comes a new beginning with new memories.

However, this Christmas - perhaps for just one last time - I secretly wish was could lie on the floor of my grandparent's living room, listen to the sounds of an uncle's snores and watch the glowing embers in the fireplace all the while dreaming of Santa Claus. Merry Christmas.

Municipalities should prepare for Y2K to be it at at at attended at a second at a second

Here's a Christmas present countless Michigan communities ought to be giving their residents: Clear and forthright information about what's they're doing to anticipate the Year 2000 problem.

Often called the "millenium bug." the Year 2K problem arises from the fact that most computer programs have been written for years so that they record the year by the last two digits and, thus, can't tell the difference between 1900 and 2000.

My wife. Kathy, for example, was born in 1944. The computer might tell her she was -44 years old, not 56. Credit card bills might show they had not been paid for 100 years.

Because the computer bug is so pervasive it can lurk in little chips embedded in toys or cameras as well as in your ordinary desk top PC or big main frame systems - nobody really knows what problems will crop up at the stroke of midnight of December 31, 1999.

Some experts are very pessimistic; they imagine the entire electric power grid going down, the banking system in paralysis and the U.S. and Russian ICBM fleets suddenly and unexpectedly going into action. Others are less worried; they expect disruptions, but nothing catastrophic.

A tremendous amount of money is now being spent by the federal government and big businesses to sniff out "non-compliant" computer systems and fix them. This newspaper company, for example, will spend in excess of $500,000 installing new software and searching out problems.

What is not so certain is how active and focussed local communities will be in anticipating problems. Will computer-assisted traffic lights fail to function? Will local court records self-destruct, thus losing track of petty criminals?

A conference held last month at the University of Michigan urged local officials to make public employees aware of the situation, list all possible problems and design and test solutions. One consulting firm found that some 35 percent of all institutions and 29 percent of governments hadn't even started preparations. Less than 10 percent had tested their equipment.

Moreover, most local governments are scared to talk about the problem. If they make promises they can't keep, they might be exposed to taxpayer lawsuits.

be exposed to taxpayer lawsuits. I'd suggest folks write letters to mayors and members of city councils and township boards. Turn up at meetings. Ask questions. Bug people. Push for answers. For example, do they have cellular phones and mobile radio backups for emergency services? Ask them if they've had a look at "The Year 2000 Toolkit for Local Governments and School Districts," just put out by the Michigan Department of Management and

Budge

And, Just in case, clip out this checklist, prepared by the GartnerGroup, a firm that has specialized in consulting about the year 2000 problem all over the world. • Don't panic. Prepare for localized fail-

• Don't panic. Prepare for localized fallures for limited periods of time, like the aftermath of a really bad snowstorn. Don't take all your money out of the bank or liquidate your investments.

• Have a week's worth of necessities stored in a safe place: medications, non-perishable food, jugs of water, batteries, flashlights and lanterns, household supplies.

 Obtain hard (paper) copies of essential financial records: Social Security, pension and savings plans, maybe even a reconciliation of your check records for the past year.
 Withdraw enough cash from the bank to sustain your family for a couple of weeks.
 Fuel up your vehicles. Have an adequate

• Fuel up your vehicles. Have an adequate supply of home heating fuel delivered. If you have a fireplace, make sure you have some dry wood.

• Have your medical and dental checkups well in advance.

• Send mail and packages early. Pick up your e-mail before midnight.

• Stay away from hospitals, elevators and airplanes at the stroke of midnight.

And don't forget the bottle of champagne. It won't help fix the millenium bug, but it may help you feel better.

Revenue Sharing: looting the treasury

On no issue are Michigan lawmakers at each other's throats more ferociously than the annual local looting of the state treasury called "revenue sharing."

They can't agree on what spreading out $1 billion of state taxes is supposed to accomplish. Hence, the looting is willy-nilly.

A One side argues: Detroit and the older clies have been abandoned by the wealthy and middle classes and are stuck with the poor folks who need more social services. Detroit et al. already have taxed themselves heavily and deserve state consideration for their "relative tax effort." Detroit et al. have major costs of replacing infrastructure, but its socially more economical to help them with repairs than to sink water, sewers and Streets into "greenfields."

It goes on: Sending more to rural townships will encourage "urban sprawl," the paving over of farmland with no population increase. Besides, rural townships levy only a mill or two, often have volunteer fire departments, and find their wells and septics_are adequates. If they want to expand services, they should either vote more taxes as we cities have done or incorporate as cities with charter authority to tax 20 mills – no need to share state revenue.

The other side argues: Detroit is losing population but continues to have its aid protected; Detroit has 10 percent of the state's people but soaks up 25 percent of the shared revenue. Every service in the state gets cut in a recession except Detroit's revenue sharing.

It goes on: People vote with their feet. Rural townships are experiencing normal, market-driven growth. The money should follow the people. Township residents shouldn't have to shoulder the full cost of new infrastructure while we perversely reward Detroit for levying sky-high taxes.

There's no way to reconcile the opposing views.

How did we get into this mess? In the early 1970s, the Legislature replaced eight business taxes with a "single business tax." Wiped out were the corporate income tax, franchise fee ... and the local property tax on business inventory and equipment.

So the rationale became: Since the state wiped out a local tax, it should replace that money by sharing some of its own revenue. Thus, 14.5 percent of the SBT is allocated to counties, cities, townships and villages.

Who deserved to get the lion's share? Obviously, units that lost the most business property taxes – for example, the "golden mile" industrial corridor emanating from the west side of Detroit, through Redford Township, Livonia and Plymouth Township. Rural townships lost little and therefore got little shared revenue.

Times change. Detroit has imploded its last major department store and has lost much of its industry, which has scattered across the state.

The 1998 eight-year renewal of revenue sharing is a boon for rural townships. despite some compromise on the part of the Grand Rapids crowd. Detroit is held flat at $334 million a year.

But Clinton County's Eagle Township will see its share rise 34 percent over eight years; Eaton County's Carmel Township, 47 percent and Kalamo Township 55 percent; Ionia's village of Portland, 39 percent; Livingston's Unadilla Township, 41 percent, while the city of Brighton creeps up just 6 percent.

In Oakland County. Orion Township will leap up 32 percent over eight years while Pontiac rises 7 percent and South Lyon 6 percent.

In Wayne County. Sumpter Township will soar 69 percent over eight years while the charming cities of Northville and Plymouth rise just,6 percent aplece.

Revenue sharing today is a bad idea. Get rid of it. Phase out the statutory part of it and save the state $1 billion. Then give the people a $1 billion tax cut, and let their local governing boards decide whether it's necessary to ask a local millage to facilitate "growth."

No one in our diverse state can justify any revenue sharing scheme. It's just looting the treasury. Scrap it and start over.

Northville has plenty to be thankful for

When Christmas season comes around, I find that I am drawn to reflect on the events of the past year, to sift through the details of what seems like an ever more hectic life. This is probably a natural occurrence for many of us, as we find that our pace at work and home has slowed down dramatically. albeit temporarily. At our house, the kids might enjoy being able to keep their pj's on awhile longer each day, but their parents get just as much pleasure out of not having to get them dressed and out the door for a few weeks. These are prime conditions for pondering life.

One of the things that has struck me lately is how much we enjoy living in Northville. There may appear to be some obvious reasons for this: nice homes, good schools (I'm biased - I'm on the School Board), solid property values. Those are the kind of things we cite to people who don't know Northville when explaining its appeal. (My wife always adds great coffee shops, but mentioning them here might make the bread store, Beuter's, Ultimate Toys, and numerous other fine merchants feel left out.

These factors are all important, but what distinguishes Northville are the generous and selfless efforts of its residents and leaders to maintain and improve the quality of life in our community. My School Board service has given me the privilege to get to know and work with many people, and has made me appreciate that quality of life doesn't just happen; it results from the deliberate and often voluntary efforts of many groups and citizens over a long period of time.

One of my most vivid memories from this year is of walking through downtown during the Victorian Festival and seeing so many community groups raising money for good works: the Rotary Club. Northville Youth Assistance, the Friends of the Northville District Library, and countless others. The broad scope of civic volunteer activities that are conducted in Northville all year round was literally on display all up and down Center Street. Where out-of-towners saw only food and drinks, I saw an abundance of concern for others, a desire to make things a little better, a little more pleasant, a little more beautiful.

This scene also made clear how many people give their time freely to the community. Leonard Rezmierski, our Superintendent of Schools, and Dave Jerome, a local attorney with his own practice in town, were both out, in very good spirits as always, hawking hot dogs to raise money for the charitable works sponsored by their Rotary club. I will never forget seeing our Fire Chief, Jim Allen, roasting some huge turkey legs for sale in support of another group. Mary Ellen King and her crew were raising money for the Northville Youth Assistance program. These were but a few of the folks out in force during those hot afternoons in September who gladly gave of their personal time to help make things better for the rest of us.

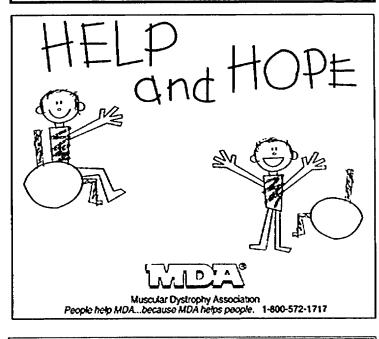

Other examples of selfless acts of goodness and kindness appeared throughout the year. Our boy's varsity basketball coach, Scott Baldwin (who also runs his own business). organized his players and put on a great series of clinics for many of the youngsters throughout the community. Our local businesses answered the call for donations, as they always do, from local school, church. and other civic organizations. Our beautiful library continues to offer cutting edge services to the community, and stands as a very tangible example of what a group of committed volunteers can accomplish. A community-minded newspaper editor and a committee of dedicated volunteers saved our Victorian Ball. (Bob, I know in retrospect that your life might have been considerably easier if you had just returned the dress, but a lot of us are glad that didn't happen.) And there were some people who seemed to help out everywhere. If you went to a community wide function.

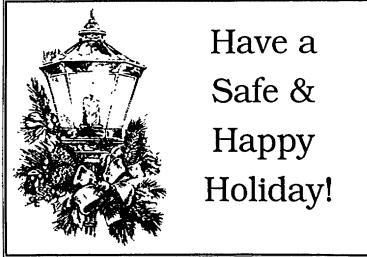

You went to a community wide function, you certainly ran into Sue Egan, Joan Wadsworth, Martha Nield, Laurie Marrs, Traci Sincock, Anna Sarkisian, or Sonia Swigart.I don't pretend to know everyone in Northville, so the foregoing are only examples of the many people, and groups who help make Northville a very special place to live.

As I count my blessings during this holiday season, I am thankful to live in a community that cares so much, and I am mindful not to take this state of affairs for granted. Merry Christmas, Northville. And thanks.

Small ones, tall ones, fat ones, and skinny ones, Ursula Kasenow has 130 Santas of all sizes.

The Victorian looking ones are my favorites," the Northville resident said

Kasenow has picked up Santas while vacationing in Traverse City, Peniwater, Mich., Vermont, and New York

"If there's a Christmas store in that town, I'm in it," she said.

From two inches to two feet tall, there is a Doctor Santa with a medical bag, and Uncle Sam Santa, animated Santa, golf club carrying Santa, and a Skiing Santa.

Maybe It's the twinkle in his eye that lugs at Kasenow's heart, she's just not sure.

There's something about the face that just gets me, that's all it takes." she said. "Every one of them. even the stern ones, have a twinkle in their eye.

about 10 years ago. She makes about two or three a year for herself and to give as gifts, among them an African and a Chinese Santa.

A handful of Santas are displayed on Kasenow's coffee table.

Through three children and two grandchildren, she hasn't had one break so far.

Others Santas are store-bought or gifts from friends and relatives.

"it's a way of remembering peo ple." she said.

She recently picked up a small cobalt blue Santa at an antique show.

Likenesses of the jolly old man are on throws, and can be found in ceramic, wood, and paper mache. During the two days it takes to set up the display on shelves, and coffee and end tables, pictures come off the wall to make way for a cross stitch Santa and other holiday displays. There is also a Santa lamp, tray and tea pot.

Although she has not been able to unpack one of the boxes this year because of a shortage of display space, she said she is definitely not done collecting yet.

Somewhere I'll find the room. When I see a Santa that catches my eye. I've got to have it."

Kasenow began collecting Santas

Finding love helps writer release creative powers

"Shakespeare in Love", a witty, fast-moving romantic comedy set in London in 1593, follows the trials and tribulations of Will Shakespeare (Joseph Fiennes), a struggling young playwright suffering from a dreadful bout of writer's block. No matter how hard he tries, he just can't seem to make any headway with his latest work. "Romeo and Ethel, the Pirate's Daughter." Somehow, even the title doesn't sound quite right.

But then. Will meets and falls instantly in love with the startlingly beautiful Viola (Gwyneth Pal-

From acclaimed director John Madden ("Mrs. Brown"), "Shakespeare in Love" also stars Academy Award winners Geoffrey Rush ("Shine") and Ben Affleck ("Good Will Hunting) in fabulously comic roles, Academy Award nominee Judi Dench ("Mrs. Brown") as Queen Elizabeth I and Colin Firth ("The English Patient"). "Shakespeare In Love" opened Dec. 11.

'You've Got Mail'

Once upon a time there were two bookstore owners. One was a passionate young woman who ran a small children's bookstore. The other was the owner of Manhattan's largest book superchain, a man whose enterprise could put every independent bookstore out of business. The man and the woman were natural enemies. But when they coincidentally — and anonymously — meet in cyberspace, they accidentally fell in love. "You've Got Mail" is a romantic You've Got Mail" is a romantic comedy set in the age of e-mail. Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan star as Joe Fox and Kathleen Kelly, two booksellers who face off against each other in real life even as they unwittingly romance each other via modem. Fox and Kelly find themselves confiding everything to their unseen computer correspondent — everything except their actual identities.

As friendship warms into affection on the Internet, Fox opens his superstore, the latest in the national chain of Fox Books, a few blocks from Kelly's store. The Shop Around the Corner. With its discounts. huge inventory and espresso bar, Fox Books seems certain to put Kelly's cozy neighborhood store out of business.

Kelly inherited her shop from her mother, and it's been a community landmark for more than 40 years. Now, with her legacy and livelihood about to be destroyed, she confides in the faceless friend she has come to trust and value. And Fox, who unexpectedly learns the identity of his unknown confidante, also discovers an unmistakable attraction to Kathleen in real life as well as on the computer screen. How can he reveal himself without losing her?

"You've Got Mail" re-teams director Nora Ephron with Hanks and Ryan. The movie is rated "PG-13."

Swimmers look to float

Tankers hope to make a splash behind strength in breast

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Edutor

If swim meets were determined on the strength of one event, Northville would challenge for every meet on its 1998-99 schedule.

But the breaststroke is not the only event, so the Mustangs will have to rely on its overall depth of talent to improve on last year's solid season finish. And with four proven seniors and veteraned juniors and sophomores throughout the lineup, coach David Wayne feels confident they can.

We've got four good breaststrokers who are going to score for us." the coach said. "We also have a lot of guys who are versatile, and I like their versatility and the fact that they have their own specialized areas

Northville will be captained by a trio of seniors: Brett Johnson. Adam Melvin and Matt Schlanser. Joining that group of captains will be fellow senior Mark Kowalski. the team's best breaststroker.

Kowalski was a state qualifier in the event last year and has already improved on his times from last year in the team's first relay this past weekend. Wayne said his senior will also swim in short-distance freestyle events as well.

"He's going to score quite a few points for the team this year." Wayne said. "I would expect him to qualify for the finals at the conference meet this season."

Melvin is a distance freestyler who will compete in the 100, 200 and 500 freestyles as well as take part in the relays. The coach thought Melvin's versatility could be used in different situations throughout the season.

Johnson and Schlanser are also breatstrokers by trade. and Johnson will join Kowalski as a sprint freestyler at times. Wayne said Johnson and Schlanser are two others who could qualify for the finals at the Western Lakes (WLAA) meet.

"I'd like to see Matt crack the top 12 this year. Last year he really worked on his technique and it all came together at the end of the season," the coach said. "Now he's got the technique, we've just got to do the training." Wayne said he expects a lot of leadership from these four seniors. "Not only leadership in the pool. but out of the pool leading the team," he said.

Northville returns two of the three Whitbecks this season. juniors Dave and Scott. Both were intrical parts of last year's team. and offer the team tremendous versatility this season.

Dave specializes in the butterfly. but will be moved around the lineup. He'll be the butterflier in the medley relay team. Scott used his versatility to secure a 200 individual medley spot and will also swim the 100 and 500 freestyles.

Other juniors helping out the team this year will be Valerian Jone, Jost Matysik (a German exchange student) and Steve Yutzy.

Sophomores Anthony Serge. Jason Ballou and Kevin Hagedorn return to this year's team. Serge has an upper hand in the backstroke, and Wayne said he is fast approaching his end-of-season times from last year. 1 plan on him moving up this season." said the coach. "He's close to last year's times and I'm hoping he will place in the top 12 at the conference meet.' Hagedorn is a distance freestlyer and will join Serge in the backstroke and will also compete in the IM and 200 freestyle. After the team's first meet. Wayne said he thinks this sophomore will be able to help the team out.

Sophomores Bobby Gulewich and Adam Sinkus will handle the diving responsibilities and Mike Mueller and Dan Myers will add to the team's depth in the pool.

The team will also feature four freshmen. Derrick Malizia, Ben Maxim, John Morrs and Jeff Jones hope to see time in the pool this

"We have a younger team this ear, and it's going to be a big jump for some of the freshmen, Wayne said. We've just got to balance out where we're going to swim our people. It will take time getting to know the kids personalities and techniques." Last year the 'Stangs finished fifth at the WLAA meet, and this season the team's goal is to improve on that position. Salem and Stevenson are the favorites to win the league championship this year with Canton, North Farmington and Walled Lake standing in Northville's way.

NORTHVILLE 5TH AT WLAA RELAYS

In the season's first meet, the Mustangs finished right where they were at the end of last year, fifth place. Northville accumulated 177 points, trailing Salem (244), Stevenson (233), Canton (224) and North Farmington (207).

The 200 breaststroke relay team was the lone winner of the day for Northville. Kowalski (:28.94 split).

Ballou (:29.90), Schlanser (:31.45) and Johnson (:31.92) combined for a winning time of 2:02.21.

The 400 medley relay team of Serge, Kowalski, Dave Whitbeck and Scott Whitbeck were second at 3:57.77.

The Mustangs als grabbed a pair of fourth-place finishes. The 500 (crescendo) relay team of Johnson, Melvin, Hagedorn and Scott Whitbeck finished fourth in a time of 4:50.11.

Serge, Schlanser, Dave Whitbeck and Morrs combined to finish fourth in the 200 medley relay (1:52.86).

It gave me a chance to see what the new swimmers can do and 1 think it gave them some confi-dence," Wayne said.

Northville is now off until Jan. 7 when it takes on South Lyon

Junior Scott Whitbeck (above) will compete in the IM and freestyle events.

Gymnasts hope to build off last year's state championship run

By JASON SCHMITT ports Editor

Expectations are one notch lower this year for the Northville/Novi combined gymnastics team, but they are still high. The defending state champions lost a solid nucleus from last year's team, but coach Laura Moyers feels her team is still strong and returns another solid corps of performers capable of big things. 'I didn't expect (a state championship) last year, so I don't expect it this year either." she said. "I don't have the depth I had a year ago, but I think we have the potential to be at the state meet." The team features just two seniors, co-captain Julie Glock of Northville and Liezl Switzer of Novi. Both are all-arounders who specialize in the vault. Glock is also strong on the beam and floor exercise. The other co-captain will be Northville junior Jennifer Rohlfs. The defending Division II state champion on the vault and in allaround, Rohlfs will shoot for the same titles and also looks strong on the bars.

Sophomore Monica Fink of Novi returns with state experience. qualifying for the finals last year on bars. She is much stronger this year, according to her coach, and will be one of four strong allaround performers for Moyers this year.

But after Fink, Northville/Novi lacks a lot of returning experience. In fact, the last of the two top allaround girls are freshmen.

Lindsey Carlson and Andrea Ledbetter, both from Northville. have a lot of club experience and will compete at the Division I level this year.

Both will compete in the allaround, with Carlson's specialty being the vault. Ledbetter specializes on the bars and beam.

has shown consistency in all four events and Stefaniak will also compete all around.

The rest of the lineup has mostly Northville flair to it. Junior Tina Wild, sophomores Allison Gillette, Heather Proper and freshmen Alaina Brock, Shawna Roby, Jessica Seacord and Kim Vecres made the team. Novi sophomore Heather Kotylo is the other member of the squad.

"I think we'll be good." Moyers said. We have the potential. it's just a matter of how well the girls are able to handle the pressure. The younger girls have to be able to handle the high pressure situations. Right now it's too early to tell.

Northville/Novi will open up their regular season at the Salem Invitational Jan. 9 at Plymouth Salem High School.

Mustangs fall to Wildcats

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

Northville's Achilles heel was exposed and exploited by Novi in the Mustang's 51-46 loss to the Wildcats Dec. 15.

Coach Scott Baldwin's team has tremendous height, but lacks team speed, something the Novi cagers do not.

"We were matched up equally talent wise," Baldwin said. "We just got off to a poor start. We fought back and played well in the crunch, but came up short."

Novi used its slow, methodical style of game to frustrate the uptempo Mustangs. The 'Cats held an 8-4 lead after one quarter, and maintained a 22-19 lead at the half.

They are traditionally a walkit-up, deliberate club." the coach said. "We have not been.

"We need to eliminate that style. We need to be more patient ourselves.

After both teams traded early baskets in the third quarter. Novi took control of the game. The Wildcats drove to the basket with authority and forced Northville to foul. The 'Cats went to the line 34 times in the game, connecting on 22 of those attempts. The Stangs hit 11 of 16 from the line.

Northville made a run midway through the final quarter, drawing to within one point. But Novi continued to take the ball to the hoop and implemented a zone defense which caused Northville some problems.

"We are 180 degrees from where we were last year," Baldwin said. Last year we were small and had good perimeter shooters. This year we're big, but we're slow.

By ROBERT JACKSON Editor

The Northville Mustang hockey team outplayed the Farmington Flyers but only found themselves up one goal late until the third period.

That's when Mustang defenseman Justin Waineo let a bullet shot fly from the blueline that found its way into the net to give the Mustangs some breathing room. Seconds later Marc Olin put the game out of reach with an unassisted goal of his own to give the Mustangs a 5-2 victory last Friday at the Novi Ice Arena.

The Mustangs outshot the Flyers 36-14 for the game.

Senior forward Rob Ryan scored the first goal for the Mustangs, with assists from Sean Nappo and Connor Sedam, at the 7:56 mark of the first period. Forty-three seconds later Brandon Caverly made it 20 after taking a great no-look pass from Scott Schuler on a 2-on-1 break.

Farmington cut the lead to one with a goal at the end of the period. The Flyers only managed four shots to the Muslangs 15.

At 8:32 in the second period Jason Wilchowski put the Mustangs up 3-1, on a pretty passing play from Ryan and Nappo. The Flyers squandered an opportunity to tie the game on the power play when Waineo managed to clear a rebound with goaltender Josh Block down on the ice.

The Flyers did score on a breakaway at the 9:50 mark of the third period to make it close, but goals by Waineo and Olin closed the door for good. Waineo's tally was assisted by Wilchowski.

The win brings the Mustangs record to 5-2 with a game scheduled against Livonia Churchill at Eddie Edgar Arena in Livonia.

Keeping your resolution this New Year drops at 12 a.m. January first 1999. and kicks of the new year. what New Year Resolutions will kick off for you?

For many of us, it will involve our fitness. health or appearance in some way. Get in better shape, tone up, get more energy. fit Into certain clothes. lose weight, the list goes on and on. In my opinion, nothing happens until this self-realization takes place and a goal. resolutions or whatever you want to call it happens. My hat is off to those of you that do set resolutions. Like the old saying goes, if you keep doing the same things you did in past years, you will probably get the same results. In other words, if you want different results, do something different this new year.

Now for the bad news...despite our best intentions, unfortunately by February or March over 65 percent of us will have abandoned these improvements for yet another year. Too busy. problems, pet problems, that list goes on and on as well.

What really happens? What can you do to improve your odds of improving your fitness in 1999? When you examine the recent American Sports Data Inc. study on why people quite health club programs, almost half of the over 9000 people interviewed states loss of interest. motivation or not enough time as the number one answer. Since these reasons really point to priority, it certainly pushes us to look deeper and

When the big ball broader than the typical motivators to help ourschres maintain whatever program we decide is for us long enough to see results and thus make it a part of our lifestyle. It takes about 60 to 90 days in a proper fitness and nutrition program to really see a noticeable physical difference, and the majority of us do not make it to that point, the motivators and techniques we have tried to use in the past such as lowering the risk of heart disease, cancer, depression, etc. on its own has not and does not work. This information has been known for years and yet over 65 percent of us fail. Dr. David M. Connell, who has been practicing clinical psychology and psychotherapy for over 30 years, suggests we take a broader holistic, mind, body, spirit approach to affecting healthy changes long-term.

We need to get in touch with the small child found in each of us. As parents we normally see to it our children get what they need, exercise, nutrition, etc. to assure their health, yet when it comes to us we tend not to place the priority." Dr. Connell said. "So look to that small child to get what he or she needs, the one inside you, and that includes the proper balance of exercise. nutrition, rest, fun, etc. Strengthening our instrument (body) allows more of the force, the spirit to move through us."

Along with Dr. Connell's input, we offer the following fitness pointers:

•Self Forgiveness: Let go of any guilt you may have from starting programs in the past and maybe not succeeding. come back and start over. We are entitled to good things in life and it is difficult to experience all that is there for you if your body is not capable or in poor physical shape.

•Don't let cultural images of beauty stop you from becoming your best. Today's media messages project an emaciated, adolescent look as the aesthetic ideal. What most people do not realize is most of these models have been airbrushed to remove any flaws, such as wrinkles or visible pores in the skin. They are also photographically elongated to maximize thinness, and in some cases entirely generated on the computer.

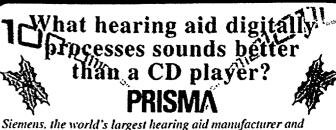

•Find the right fitness program for you. First off realize there are some critical ingredients to reaching your true goal. Food intake is usually 75 percent factor in reaching most people's goals. Cardiovascular and strength training are also essential. Using these factors find what is right for you. Is it a health club? What type? Is it home programs? Is it a combination? Explore different options to find the right prescription for you. If you need help seek out a fitness professional. Most time the most successful programs involve different ingredients or cross-training.

•Set a realistic goal? Many people are so excited to start they set a very high goal, such as five or six days a week. Remember consistency, not only frequency, will get you where you want to Start with two or three day a week, set this in your planner or schedule and just do it! Even if you don't feel like working out, showing up at the club on your scheduled day will help you cement this pattern in your lifestyle.

The bottom line is to get to know you and what it will take to find, implement, and stick with a fitness program long enough to begin to see the rewards and that will keep you on track and focused long enough to make it a lifestyle change. Good luck!

REAL ESTATE CREATIVE LIVING

HOWTO

Don't have a meltdown over wax buildup

By Gene Gary COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. We purchased a secondhand piano. It's in good shape except for one problem. Everything sticks to the surface. Apparently a lot of furniture spray was used while it was being dusted over the years. Can you suggest something I can use to remove the stickiness safely at home?

A. Wax and dust buildup on fine wood furniture can become unsightly over time. With continued use, moisture is deposited on the surface through our skin and hands. This softens and turns sticky the buildup of protection provided by furniture-care preparations used during routine maintenance. If this condition is not dealt with, the finish will deteriorate. The stickiness and discoloration can be cleaned off at home on most good furniture, but if the condition becomes a blight on valuable antiques, it should be taken care of professionally.

If the softened layer is light, remove it with hand dishwashing liquid. Make a pad of cotton material, like a clean, old terrycloth towel. Soak it in hot water and squeeze it to remove the surplus water. Add a drop or two of the detergent on the pad's face. Go over the surface in circles, a small area at a time. Remove the remaining dirt with a clean, lint-free cloth.

remaining dirt with a clean, lint-free cloth. If the soil is stubborn, try an all-purpose household spray cleaner. Spray the cloth, never the furniture surface; doing so may cause streaking. Move the pad constantly, or else the cleaner can remove the finish. If you still have no success, use paint thinner. Work lightly, for the thinner may have been the solvent in the original finish. When the pad no longer removes any grime, let the surfaces dry for at least a day.

Cleaned surfaces can be protected with your favorite furniture-care preparation. Avoid application during hot, humid summer weather when moisture tends to re-create the problem. When it's cooler and drier, apply the product of your choice sparingly. If after any of these treatments the finish is left too thin, strengthen sit with one or two coats of clear finish.

Q. I have a couple of white rings on my wood end tables from cocktail glasses placed there during a recent party. What do you recommend for removal of these unsightly blemishes?

A. There are numerous at-home treatments which vary in success, depending on the penetration of the moisture and type of wood finish you are dealing with. White rings caused by water on fine wood furniture usually can be removed by rubbing with a very fine abrasive or one of several oily products. "Fine" is the key word if an abrasive is used, since a harsh abrasive will scratch and damage the finish.

Jim McDonald, owner of Portable Spas Plus in Novi, has hot tubs you can take with you if you move.

Hydrotherapy may be just the ticket for melting away that holiday stress

By ANNETTE JAWORSKI Special,Writer

It might be cold and wintry outside. but there's a toasty way to get warm all the way down to your bones.

Now that old man winter is on the way, many people are taking the plunge – into their spas that is.

Although hydrotherapy is a new buzz word, long-time spa owners have been enjoying the experience for years. Not only does it feel good, says Jim McDonald, owner of Portable Spas Plus in Novi, there are also a lot of health benefits. "There's nothing comparable to it...We've seen people with a sad, mean or angry disposition.] After the spa, it changed. One couple that came in said that the spa came close to saving their marriage." McDonald said.

Spas are great at bringing people closer to their children and loved ones, according to owners, Jim and Lill McDonald.

A display sign in their showroom could entice even the grumpiest Scrooge - "Here's how we soothe the mind body and spirit." The heat dilates capillaries to increase blood flow to enhance the delivery of oxygen and nutrients throughout the body.

r According to Jim, therapeutic benefits include:

- lowers blood pressure
 accelerates tissue repair and pain
- relief • stimulates the release of endor-
- phins, the body's natural pain killer
- relieves tight muscles
 relieves pressure on surrounding nerves

Some home centers and hardware stores sell special white-ring removers because many white stains are rings caused by the bottom of a damp drinking glass.

There are at-home preparations that can be just as effective. If the finish is lacquer or oil, dip 0000grade bronze wool (available at home centers or marine stores) into natural vegetable oil and very lightly rub in circular direction, following the ring. Work vegetable oil into ring, a little at a time.

An alternative remedy for water stain removal is a little toothpaste squeezed onto a moistened soft cloth, then rubbed gently over the stain in a circular motion. If this fails, mix the toothpaste with baking soda, and the two buffers will work to remove the ring.

Other substances that will sometimes remove white stains from furniture if gently rubbed over the surface include mayonnaise, camphorated oil or`such formulas as a little salad oil containing some ashes from a cigar or cigarette, rubbed over the stain with a soft cloth. An alternative is to rub with rottenstone and oil.

These treatments can also work on varnish finishes if moisture has not penetrated the finish. When moisture penetrates the varnish, treatment methods vary. First, try spot removal with denaturered or rubbing alcohol. Moisten a small wad of cotton with the alcohol and dab the stain until it disappears. Do not use too much alcohol and do not rub, or you may disturb the varnish.

Water penetrates the varnish and attacks the shellac undercoat, turning it white under the varnish. The alcohol will also penetrate the varnish and re-dissolve the shellac underneath, restoring its original transparency. If discoloration remains after the surface is throughly dry (several hours), sand the varnish finish very lightly with 400-grit open-coat sandpaper dipped into dab of mineral spirits. Use light touch and very little solvent.

If the finish is polyurethane, you'll probably have to remove the entire surface finish, then try to remove the stain by one of the following five methods: First, try rubbing with chlorine bleach into stain, then rinse. Repeat several times. If regular bleach fails to lighten the staining, use oxalic acid crystals dissolved in hot water and applied with a nylon brush. Neutralize with borax and water. If this method fails, try commercial strength wood bleaches available from a paint store. Follow manufacture's directions carefully. As a last resort you can try sanding - ever so lightly - with 320-grit sandpaper.

In days past, every hostess had a game plate set

By Anne McCollam COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q.Enclosed is a picture of a dinner plate my mother gave me that was made in Bavaria. It is in perfect condition.

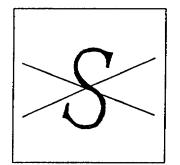

Can you tell its age and value?

A. Since your dinner plate is decorated with a partridge, it is reasonable to suggest it was once part of a game plate set. Fish and game sets consisted of a large platter, dinner plates and a sauce dish. They were intended to serve fish, fowl and game and were decorated appropriately.

Your dinner plate was made around 1900 and would probably be worth about $125 to $150.

Q. Could you identify the mark that is on a cake plate that I inherited? The plate is decorated with a scene of a young woman sitting on a garden bench and holding a basket of pastel flowers. Each handle and the scalloped edge of the plate are trimmed in gold.

A. A.W. Fr. Kister Porcelain Manufactory in Scheibe-Albach, Thuringia. Germany. made your plate in the early 1900s. Its value would probably be about $100 to $135.

ANTIQUES

G. I have a matching brush, comb and hand-mirror dresser set. My father gave it to my mother before they were married in 1932. It is made of a marbleized green plastic type material and in very good condition. Could you tell me anything about the set and its value? A. Judging from your description, your dresser set is made of celluloid, an early plastic. It was used to make a variety of objects from toys to jewelry.

The value of your set would probably be about $125.

Q. I have a complete service for 12 set of Dirilyte flatware. Can you tell me where to buy cleaner and how to care for it? I wrote to the Dirilyte company and my letter was returned.

Also, I would like to know what the set was worth in 1946 when it was given to me and what it is worth today.

A. Dirilgold, a bronze alloy, was the creation of Swedish metallurgist Carl Molin in 1914. He was encouraged to market his product in the United States, and in 1926 set up operations in Kokomo, Ind. The company suffered during the Depression and was forced into receivership. In 1935, it was purchased by a group of Indiana businessmen. In 1937, the name was changed to Dirilyte after a suit was filed by the Federal Trade Commission. The commission charged the name Dirilgold misled the buying publie because the product contained no gold. In 1971, Dinlyte became part of Hand Industries. Production ended in 1984.

Regarding care, always rinse immediately after each use, hand wash in warm water. rinse and dry thoroughly. Store in untreated flannel rather than plastic. For inforination on Dirilyte polish, write to Hand Industries, 315 S. Hand Drive, Warsaw, IN 46580.

Originally, your set cost around $600 and would probably be worth about $800 to $1,200 today.

9. I wonder if you could please tell me the value of a cast-iron doorstop that I have. It is a black-and-white Boston Terrier and is very old and very heavy.

Cast-iron figural Α. doorstops were popular in the early 1900s. Today, collectors have been known to pay $200 to $250 for the Boston Terrier doorstops.

Q. Are Swanky Swigs of any value? I must have a couple dozen that I have saved over the years. Most of them are around three inches tall and decorated with red-and-green tulips.

A. For those who don't have a clue what Swanky Swigs are. they are glass tumblers that were filled with cheese and distributed by Kraft Foods.

Collectors are interested in both the perky glasses and also the original lids. Each small tumbler is in the $5 to $10 range.

Address your questions to Anne McCollam. P.O. Box 490. Notre Dame, IN 46556. For a personal response, include picture(s). a detailed description, a stamped, self-addressed envelope and $10 per item (one item at a time).

This decorated plate, part of a fish and game set, is worth about $125 to $150.

The taste of the Mideast Aladdin's Cuisine serves up fare to Northville area

By JASON SCHMITT Staff Writer

The wait was almost a year, but for Ray Diab and Mike Ahmad the wait was well worth it.

- The owners of Aladdin's Cuisine in downtown Northville recently received their liquor license, allowing them to better serve their customers needs.

"We had a lot of our clientele come in and a lot of them were asking for alcohol, be it wine, beer or other mixed drinks," Diab said. Obviously with the demand, we want to please our customers. We want them to come in, have a nice dinner and have a drink.

beers, 12 different types of bottled wine, five by the glass and other mixed drinks. Due to the limited number of liquor licenses given out and the long application process. nearly 10 months went by before Diab and Ahmad could receive theirs.

"It's been a long process," Diab said. "The Liquor Control Commis-sion does a very thorough background check on the individual. They make sure he has a clean criminal record and a good background.

"It's a lot of responsibility and liability."

Ahmad said there were only a

Avoid errors when filing tax return

Mistakes on your tax return can result in processing delays, costly penalties and even unwanted Internal Revenue Service inquiries. That's why it's important to review your tax return thoroughly.

Ron't know where to begin? Here's a checklist of items the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants suggests you review before mailing your return to the IRS. Take the time to check it twice, and you may avoid some of the mistakes hundreds of taxpayers make every year.

· Use correct Social Security numbers. It's easy to transpose a number or leave one out altogether. That's why you should make sure you list the correct Social Security numbers for you, your spouse and your dependents, as well as your child-care provider if you are claiming the dependent care credit. Incorrect numbers may prompt inquiries by the IRS.

 Check the tax tables and your filing status. Using the wrong table means you've incorrectly calculated your tax bill. Determine whether your filing status is single. married filing jointly, married filing separately or head of household. Then be sure you refer to the correct tax tables.

Make sure all 1099 forms are correct. These forms are provided by institutions or individuals who pay you interest, dividends and freelance income. Check the forms for accuracy and be sure they correspond with amounts listed on your tax return. If there are any inconsistencies, it's your responsibility to resolve them - preferably before you submit your return.

• Check all withholding statements. Make sure you have received W-2 withholding statements from those who provided you with employment income and that the statements are accurate. If they are not, ask your employer or other payer for a corrected copy.

 Get credit for your tax withholdings and estimated payments. All tax withholdings and estimated payments should be correctly entered on your return so they can be credited against your tax liability. Otherwise, you risk overpaying your tax bill.

 Determine taxable Social Security benefits. Make sure that in calculating the amount of taxable Social Security benefits, you use the base amounts applicable to your filing status.

• Claim the right number of dependent exemptions. Here's an opportunity to save money that many people overlook. You may claim a dependent exemption of up to $2,650 for children, parents and other dependents whom you support, provided you are not subject to the phase-out of exemptions for high-income taxpayers. Generally, you must provide more than 50 percent of the support for the dependent, and the dependent must have 1997, gross income of less than $2.650. This grossincome rule does not apply if the dependent is your child and either is under age 19 or is a full-time student under age 24.

If you are divorced, make sure you and your ex-spouse agree who can claim the dependency exemption for your child. Generally, the parent who has custody of the child for the greater part of the year is entitled to claim the exemption.

• Report all nondeductible IRA contributions. If you made a nondeductible Individual Retirement Account contribution for 1997, be sure to fill out Form 8606 and attach it to your return.

· Don't overlook the earned income credit. The earned income credit, which can directly reduce your taxes, is frequently overlooked by qualified taxpayers. Generally, you may claim the credit on your 1997 return if you had earned income and you fall into certain low-income categories. You can have the IRS calculate the credit for you by checking the appropriate box on your tax return.

· Check all your math. Make sure there are no math errors in computing any tax balance that is due or refund owed you.

• Attach proper documentation. You should have received your W-2 form from your employer earlier this year. Be sure this form, which lists your annual wages and the amount of taxes paid during the year. is attached to your tax return, along with other relevant forms.

Also, check that the forms are attached in the proper order. Form 1040 should always be on top. Put the rest of the forms in the order of the attachment sequence numbers, which are generally listed in the top right-hand corner of each form. Behind those come any other statements or other unofficial documents you submit.

• Be sure you sign your return. Unsigned returns will be returned to you and may be treated as if they have never been filed. As a result, you could be assessed a late-filing penalty and have your refund delayed.

Finally, if after filing your return you have a problem that can't be resolved through normal channels. you may contact the IRS Problem Resolution Office located in your district.
