Jack Wickens set to retire after 30 years of helping students

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

He was attracted to the woman who would ultimately become his wife when she smacked her head into a pencil sharpener.

At one time, he was a butcher and served as a combat engineer in the army.

A stroke has impaired his speech, but he still thinks he talks too much. He's got a print of a Pablo Picasso painting on his wall, but he thinks some of what the artist did was "just plain crap."

These are just some of the elements that make Jack Wickens one of the most-loved faces in the hallways in Northville High School. A counselor in the school for 30 years, he's finally decided to pack it up at the end of this school year.

Leaving won't be easy for him. though, and it's not just because he's got three decades' worth of papers to clean out of his file

It's because after spending so much of his life to helping students in their final four years of education, he will no longer be surrounded by the faces of teenagers trying to find their way in the world on a daily basis.

"I've loved almost every minute I've spent here," Wickens said. "It's nice to be able to retire, but I'll definitely miss doing what I do."

Wickens attended St. Leo High School in Detroit. Not exactly a hotbed of intellectual activity. Wickens said he was one of three students in his graduating class who went on to college.

*One of them became a monk, and the other one had a boyfriend going to Michigan State, so she wasn't around campus all that much," he laughed.

But college was not his first stop after being given his diploma. He signed on with the army and served for some time before realizing that "there wasn't much you could do in the civilian world with a machine gun."

After getting out of military life, Wickens first attended Wayne State University, where he majored in history. Some graduate classes at the University of Michigan followed that the Initial lobe gan followed that. His initial Jobs included McMichael High School in Detroit and South Redford High School.

What he noticed, though, was that his lectures on American government weren't holding the attention of his students.

"I discovered kids would still fall asleep in my class," Wickens said with a droll tone 'I knew it couldn't possibly be anything I was doing.

At that point, Wickens said he

Local police investigate Gold Coast allegations

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH

The stories about business dealings with Steve Newton seem to sound the same after a while.

Unfortunately, the stories oftentimes resemble a Brothers Grimm tale gone bad.

More people are stepping up with stories about being bilked out of thousands of dollars ever since Newton, who coowned Gold Coast Spas, 126 Main Centre, with Donna Ilitch, closed shop the weekend of April 3.

The company, which llitch said is in the process of filing bankruptcy, also is under investigation for suspected fraud by the Northville Police Department, said Jim Petres, Northville

Some people contacted by The Northville Record didn't want their names used, but confirm losing money to Gold Coast Spas.

Others like Northville Township resident Redecca Stoll, are more than willing to their stories about how they lost money to the smooth-talking car/hot tub dealer.

A BAD TUB DEAL

"He comes across so friendly," Stoll said. "He uses all these stories about his personal life, almost like he's building a web to trap you in."

Stoll said she was looking to buy a hot tub last fall, but couldn't find a company that could install the necessary porch in her backyard. During the Victorian Festival, Stoll said she walked through the doors of Gold Coast Spas out of curiosity.

She told Gold Coast personnel of her situation, and Stoll was told by company employees that the business was willing and able to arrange for the porch installment and a subsequent tub installment, which would be purchased through Gold Coast.

Additionally, Stoll was told she would be given a free gazebo if she paid cash for the hot

"I kind of felt sorry for (Newton)," she said. "He told us a story about his family and how he was just getting his business going. I believed every word he said."

Vicky Berishaj is back to serving customers at Joseph's Coney Island, after returning from a harrowing trip to her home country of Yugoslavia, which is under attack by NATO forces.

For Vicky Berishai, a trip to her homeland of Yugoslavia turned into a chaotic ordeal when NATO troops began dropping bombs miles from her home. Stuck in the middle of the conflict for weeks, Berishaj managed to flee the bombings and today she's...

Just glad to be HOME

n a busy day at Joseph's Coney Island. Vicky Berishaj scrambles from table to table, scrawling orders on a small notepad. She's not much on casual conversation, mainly because there are lunches to be served and hungry diners waiting for

There's a faint smile that purses her lips when she takes orders and scurries back to the gnil. It's the same vears when the tuna melts and bowls of chili are hustled to the patrons. Yet behind that smile is a woman who's had an experience few in the United States. let alone Northville, have ever had.

Berishaj came face-to-face with the bombs and missiles that have rained down in Yugoslavia.

"It was one of the scariest things I've ever dealt with in my whole life," she said. "It was awful."

PRELUDE

Berishaj is not an American citizen - yet. She's an Albanian from Yugoslavia who's still trying to jump through the Immigration Department's hoops of full citizenship. She's spent five years on this side of the Atlantic, most of which have been here in Northville, along with her co-worker and husband, Nick.

But Berishaj still has relatives aplenty in eastern Europe. Up until two months ago, one of them was her uncle, Peter. Berishaj said she received word that Peter

Four candidates in race for school board

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH

One of the five candidates vying for two open Northville board of education seats has dropped out of the race.

Carol Poenisch announced April 16 that she would not run in the race and decided to support two of the other candidates.

"This was a very hard decision because I really care about the schools," Poenisch said. "But I feel like I can work in other ways for the schools and the communi-

Poenisch said she decided to drop out of the race after she learned that Gregory Pelc and Jerry Rupley also would be running for the spots.

I could go out and fight like I did in the senate campaign and to me that was worth it because I didn't thin' my opponent was a good candidate," she said. "Here, I don't want to fight against someone who I think is equally as good

Among other things, Poenisch said she was giving her support to Rupley for his experience with past school issues and to Pelc because of his technical work experience in the Dearborn schools.

The Northville Record met with each candidate during the past week to further discuss background information of each candidate. The background capsules are as follows:

Teen court celebrates first year

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

The jury is still out, but the verdict is clear: 35th District Court's teen court program made waves its first year in operation.

Judge Ron Lowe said the future of the teen court was still under consideration, but that it appeared as if the justice system overseen by the high school set would live on for another school

The program has involved students from both the Plymouth-Canton and Northville school districts. Specially-trained students determined the sentences for misdemeanors commonly associated with younger offenders.

"We think it's gone pretty well," Lowe said Monday. "I'd really like tó think we'll have the teen court operating again next year."

Bringing the system to 35th District was an 18-month process that involved probation officers and other court staff. Launched last fall, it was one of the first such courts to operate in the metro Detroit area.

But that wasn't the only benchmarks for the quality of the program, Lowe said.

"I'm not aware of any teen court that operates during the day...and actually brings the (students) into the court for an education," Lowe said. "It's been an inconvenience in some regards, but the end result has been a real positive, as far as we're concerned.

Northville youngster Karlee Kage, 11, was one of dozens of students who painted murals at the Sports Club of Novi.

Kids paint a mural for the Sports Club

By JAN JEFFRES Staff Writer

Laura Hirshfield, 12, estimates as much of the colors ended up on her as on as on the wall when she painted a castle and a snail as her share of the new masterpiece at the Sports Club of Novi.

She's one of 18 budding muralists trained by Northville resident Sandy Banks, who teaches art classes in her backyard studio. The Creative Cottage.

The young students were asked to fashion an undersea theme for a 20-foot stretch in the club's Kids Center and spent much of last weekend in a frenzy of creativity.

"It was a lot of fun. I used just about every color," said Laura, a Novi Meadows student.

As thanks for their work, the budding artists will get a treat Leonardo Da Vinci, Diego Rivera and other great painters who used walls as their canvas might have enjoyed - a pizza party around the club pool.

Connie Sabol, director of the Kids Center, said her charges love their new decor, especially the fish.

"It's great. Everybody who comes in comments on it. It brightens up the room," she added.

This is the second mural Banks' students have painted; another was completed two years ago at the Baby, Baby store in Northville.

This spring, they crafted a paper sculpture display for the window of Rebecca's On Center restaurant, also in downtown Northville.

Some 60 kids, from first graders through high school students. take private art lessons from Banks, an artist and former advertising agency designer with a degree from the Center for Creative Studies.

After staying home with her own children for a few years. Banks sketched out a dream career for herself helping other people's chil-dren realize their potential in the visual arts.

Sometimes the kids will say, 'is this what you do for a job?.' Banks laughed.

Seven years ago, she and her husband converted an old garage at their Seven Mile Road home. Her classes have grown by wordof-mouth, no advertising. While kids who love sports, music or dance have plenty of opportunities to pursue their interests, youngsters who enjoy painting, drawing and sculpting don't have as many opportunities, Banks said. She tries to offer the kind of instruction she would have loved in her own youth.

ten to 12. Banks believes giving her students right from the start high-quality art supplies, including, charcoals, acrylics, pastels, pen and ink. water colors in tubes and all the proper brushes.

No stock school paper and newsprint. The kids are just thrilled. They produce the most beautiful things, she said. You can see them grow through the year."

Kids choose their own subjects. When they leave here, they have something unique to them selves. And they don't have to look across the table and say, 'I'm not as good," Banks said.

For the Sports Club mural, the young artists first sketched out the castle, treasure chest, fish and other marine critters. Then, Banks transferred it onto the wall with carbon paper.

Not only is the public exposure for their talents good for the art students, but in learning how to paint a mural, each acquires a new skill.

'It's a wonderful way for me to teach them that I can't do over here," she said.

Two assistants helped Banks do the prep work and organize the thirteen-hour, two-day blitz: her

Non-toxic and washable wall paint that would not be damaged when touched by the small fingers of the regulars at the Kids Center was used for the painting.

"It was a lot of hours, but it's definitely worth it when you see the final product. I knew they were kids who were up to the product,

Banks said. There's only one drawback for Banks about the success of her classes. Sometimes it's hard to find time for her own work, which includes commissioned portraits of homes and children executed in pencil and pen and ink, as well as water colors.

Still, she has the satisfaction of helping young people develop a love of art that, with any luck, will enrich the rest of their lives.

Not all kids here are extremely talented in art, but they love it so much and we have such a good time. It's been extremely rewarding." Banks said.

I hope they will look back fondly on their experience here.

For information on The Creative Cottage, contact Sandy Banks at 349-0665. An open house and student art exhibit will be held at the studio at 46920 W. Seven Mile on Sunday, May 16 from 1 p.m. to 3

Police investigate child abuse allegations

Police were called by Amerman Elementary School principal Stephen Anderson on a suspected case of child neglect.

The incident was reported April 16 at about 1 p.m.

According to the Northville police reports, two students who attend Amerman are late to school four to five times a week. One of the students is a 10-year-old boy and the other student is an 11year-old girl. The students live with their 33-year-old mother and 27-year-old step father on S. Ely

Anderson said he offered to even pick up the students every morning but they didn't take him up on the offer. On April 16 Anderson went to the home after calling the home and getting no answers and said he heard noises in the house but no one answered.

Anderson told police he was going to file a report with the Michigan Family Independent Agency and wanted police to be aware of the incident.

Police then went to the house and looked into the windows and saw "chairs turned over, dirty clothes on the floor, empty cereal boxes laying around and generally filthy conditions all through the areas" they could see.

Police are filing a report to the Family independent Agency in Oakland County.

CAR COLLISION:A 43-year-old woman was transported to Providence Hospital in Novi after a car crash between her car and another driver's

The incident happened April 12 at about 4:45 p.m.

According to Northville Police, a 69-year-old man pulled his car into the westbound lane of Seven Mile Road in front of the GoodTime Party Store but stopped. The woman traveling westbound on Seven Mile tried to avoid hitting the man's car by swerving right but couldn't avoid hitting it.

The man received a hazardous driving citation.

OUIL:A 69-year-old Northville man was arrested for drunk driving April 12.

The incident happened April 12 at about 6:45 p.m.

According to Northville Police reports, the 69-year-old man who lives on New Haven Court and drives a 1998 Toyota was clocked at 61 miles per hour in a 40-mileper-hour zone. At first the male driver ignored sirens and lights of the police car but then pulled over near Silver Springs Drive. Police said they could smell intoxicants coming from the car.

The man was given and failed a series of sobriety tests including a preliminary breath test in which he blew a 0.114.

The man insisted the tests were wrong and requested additional tests while on his way to the police station. While at the station the man took two more tests and blew 0.1 each time.

The man was placed in a cell in 35th District Court on May 12. pending sobering and posting of bond. His license was taken and destroyed and he was cited for operating a vehicle under an illegal amount of alcohol.

TOWNSHIP POLICE REPORTS

CRACK ATTACK: Police on stationary patrol the evening of April 14 near Silver Springs Drive on Seven Mile observed a car traveling 44 mph in a 25 mph zone. Police initiated a traffic stop at the entrance to Innsbrook Apart-

Police asked the driver for identification, which he said he did not have. He instead gave his name to the officer. A computer check on that identity returned physical descriptions which didn't match those of the driver. The driver then gave another name, which a computer check revealed was the identity of a driver whose license had been suspended seven times for lack of proof of insurance.

Officers arrested the man at the scene and placed him in the backseat of the patrol car. While searching the man's car, officers recovered a pipe used to smoke crack cocaine and crack vial, as well as several other pieces of drug paraphernalia.

On the way back to police headquarters, the man told police that the needles found in the car were not his. The man posted the $200 bond the following day and will be

TRASH PROBLEM? Employees at City Environmental reported the overnight theft of commercial trash receptacle. The incident was reported to police on April 12 at 12:30 p.m. Officials at the company said the item was not picked up for transfer to another location.

The item was valued at $500.

HOME INVASION: A 69-year-old Lehigh Court woman told police she took her dog for a walk earlier this month but returned home later the same day to find her front door wide open. She said she had closed the door prior to leaving.

At first glance, the woman said nothing appeared to be missing from the home. But while getting dressed Easter morning, the woman said she discovered a $40 watch was missing. The watch was valued at $40.

DOUBLE SHOT: Meiler store detectives apprehended a 17-yearold Novi boy and a 17-year-old Byrne Drive boy after they were seen concealing bottles of liquor on their person.

The incident occurred at 7 p.m. April 11.

Police reports said one boy concealed a $17 bottle of whiskey and the other concealed a $21 bottle of vodka at the scene and attempted to leave the store without paying.

The two were fingerprinted and processed at the scene, and will be in court on May 3.

This guy tells you he can work miracles." said David DuRoss. Redford resident. "And you believe it."

About nine months ago, DuRoss and his girlfriend Chere Woodrow, walked into Gold Coast Spas, not to buy a tub. but to conduct a car deal. DuRoss was put in contact with Newton through a contractor who knew Newton did some business as a car dealer.

In fact, DuRoss was handed a business card that read "Wholesale to the public. Newton: New and Used Cars and Trucks Boats and All Watercrafts."

"He told me that his father has been in the car business forever but he himself wanted to get out of it and go into the spa business," DuRoss said. "And that he would do car deals by appointment only."

In the deal. Newton was to take Woodrow's 1989 Lincoln Continental, sell it and connect DuRoss with a financial institution to finance a new car or find DuRoss a 1996 Chrysler LHS. Also, DuRoss would pay $1,000 to Newton for a "broker's fee."

As a result, he gave Newton the car and title, but didn't sign it. In exchange, Newton agreed to take over the car payments on the $4,000 or so still owed on the car until it was sold.

However, Newton made the $200 car payment once in the last nine months. took the $1,000 broker's fee, along with a $500 fee to clean up the Lincoln and hasn't sold the car yet. DuRoss said he has since bought another new car but he has no idea where his Lincoln is, but is certain that it is still in his girlfriend's name because of the money still owed on it through its original financing.

The bottom line is I'm out $1,500. plus the car payments made since November and one car, DuRoss said.

WHAT NOW?

In addition to DuRoss and Stoll, other people have had problems with Gold Coast Spas. Northville residents Mark and Dawn Bostwick filed suit against Gold Coast Spas in January for more than $10,000 they paid for a hot tub that was delivered last November and has never worked. At least two other people have contacted The Northville Record with reports of bad business deals, but didn't want to be named in the Second hand store has first rate sucess

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Aside from the name of the store itself, there's hardly a thing inside Consignment Clothiers that isn't second-hand. The store is closing in on 10 years of doing business in the Highland Lakes Shopping Center. It's been a busy time for the clothing re-seller, whose merchandise comes in almost as quickly as it goes Consignment sells women's and children's clothing taken from both private contributions and from buyouts of boutiques and specialty shops. Prices are normally 80 percent less than what the same item retailed for in its original home.

Co-owners Sue Ayers and Sherry Gorman got their start in the business from curious beginnings. The two share a friendship dating back to sixth grade, but it wasn't until Gorman worked as a district manager for Meijer women's clothing that the dream of a discount clothing shop for women was born.

A dozen years ago, Gorman said she was in charge of apparel for a number of Meijer locations, including the one in Northville Township. She discovered through marketing reports that the township's Meijer ranked in the top five of all locations for women's clothing sales.
"I was really surprised," she said, "it's no secret that this is a pretty upscale part of the state to be working in, so I knew that Meijer was selling a lot of the clothing that women were wearing."

At the same time. Gorman said she did some shopping on her own at another used clothing shop. There she purchased a suit which retailed for $300, at a cost of $60. She wore it to work the following Monday.

*All day long people were giving me compliments about the suit," Gorman said. "And I got to thinking about how the store that I bought it from could be moving its merchandise so much faster if it only did more with displaying what it had in a more attractive way.

Meanwhile, friend Ayers was wearing a suit of her own — a brown one she donned as a courier for United Parcel Service. Ayers said Gorman approached her about the idea of opening up their own clothing resell shop.

Sherry knew the merchandise better than I did. but I was the better organizer between the two of us," she said. "It just worked out perfectly.

For two years, the women scrimped and saved, buying up display racks, cash registers and other tools of the retailing trade from other businesses that were calling it quits.

Finally, on May 18, 1989, Consignment Clothiers opened up, a few doors down from its present location. Gorman said the very first customer in the store ended up being the very first employee

Gorman said Marge Gleeson bought an item and looked her future boss in the eye, telling her that she "needed help" in the store.

"I definitely needed some extra hands, and Marge has been here ever since," she said."

Gleeson also recruited her friend, Penny Quain. another one of the 28 employees at Consignment. In 1997, Gorman and Ayers decided more space was necessary to keep up with the influx of merchandise and the rate at which shoppers were buying the clothes. Consignment has been located next to Black's Hardware ever since.

"It's super-busy right now," Ayers said. "There are people in here all the time. It's hard to believe 10 years have gone by since we opened. Gorman said the store is particularly well-suited to women who enjoy shopping a lot.

"A lot of people have this impression that it's some dark and dingy place. It's not, and people who have been here before know that," Gorman said. "We keep the store clean, well-organized and carry upscale labels.

The store has also hired on two employees whose job it is solely to make certain display racks are appealing to the eye and also vary the merchandise. "There's never a dull moment around here."

Northville not new to water delivery problems

Detroit water will flow through city of Northville taps this summer.

The decision to convert from over-taxed well sources to Detroit water was reached

Monday night by the city council. Target date for changeover was early summer before hot weather and the peak water demand. City manager Frank Ollendorff pointed out that pumps on the city's two well sources are presently operating more than 20 hours daily. We must have an additional source by this summer," (Ollendorff emphasized, "By then the situation could become critical." -from the Northville Record

April 21, 1966

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Unless you're an apartment dweller or spend your days and nights in a hotel. chances are you get a water bill. And if you live in the city of Northville, the odds are pretty good you cringe when you open it.

But lifelong residents of Northville can probably remember when water and water billing was an altogether different issue. Northville public works director Jim Gallogly said the city has turned the corner on where it gets its water from, and in all likelihood wouldn't be returning to the way it was.

"It's no secret we've got an old system, but things are getting better every year," Gallo-

Records suggested that Northville's water system dates as far back as the early 1900s in many locations. Though many portions of the system have been replaced, many areas are still working off of the original cast-iron pipes, Gallogly said.

Up until the time Northville opted to sign on with Detroit for its water supply. Northville drew its water from two wells - one located where the Northville District Library now stands, and another on the site now occupied by Treetops Apartments. near the bend at Eight Mile and Novi roads.

When the change in water policy was adopted, the wells were sealed. But the building which housed the pump and well on the now-a-library site was used for many years thereafter as a storage house for police department equipment, Gallogly said.

Being signed up with Detroit for water service has had its ups, but it's also had its share of downs, not the least of which was the neverending battle to fight leaks, as well as the sky-high water and sewer rates paid by residents.

Gallogly acknowledged them both, but said on many instances that the leaks and rates were two entirely different problems.

Suggestions have cropped up from time to time about Northville getting out of the Detroit water system and going it alone again. Gallogly said that while it was technically feasible to do so, tighter restrictions effectively made it an impossibility.

These days, you need at least 200 feet of open space around each wellhead," Gallogly said. "We just don't have that anymore. Our community is about 98 percent developed, and land in that amount just isn't found."

Furthermore, Gallogly said he was reasonably certain that Northville residents would be happier with Detroit's treated water than with whatever water would be drawn from wells.

The water quality from Detroit is pretty good, if you ask me." Gallogly said. "I don't think we'll be going back to Detroit anytime soon."

Beyond the water rates, Gallogly said the greater concern among those in city hall is concern over firefighting water pressure during dry weather, particularly in the northeast section of the city.

There's no problem up there when it comes to just turning on the tap and getting a glass to drink or taking a shower," Gallogly said. "The real concern we have is during summertime and things get warm - will we have the pressure we need to fight a fire up that way?"

point of the Detroit water network, Gallogly said it's not uncommon for pressure to dip during the summer in the city. Detroit officials have been alert to that possibility and regularly notify Northville officials when such a decline may take place, he said.

A portion of the problems with Northville's water come from the age and size of the pipes in the local network. Gallogly said. Those issues are being addressed through a replacement program.

A long-range plan calls for a revamping of much of the existing water system over the next 20 years. For the here and now, a smaller-scale project is taking place now along Center Street, as road construction crews are installing a new 12-inch main under the road before placing new pavement.

Yet another water main-replacement is being plotted for Baseline Street. Because of the young age of the pavement. Gallogly said attempts are being made to see if it is possible to avoid tearing up the young road to install the new pipe.

"If it's at all possible to avoid doing that, we're going to," Gallogly said. "It would be a shame to have to tear up a road that new."

Another major change in Northville's water policy was the controversial approval of allowing dual water meters for residents. Seen by many as a benefit to a privileged few costing the majority more, the city council - save member Kevin Hartshorne nonetheless saw the change as the best of a host of bad options.

The dual meter system is slated to go into effect June 1. Gallogly said approximately 30 residents have signed up for the pro-

"That really doesn't concern me," he said. "What would bother me is if we had, say 100 people signing up."

Internet gains

Bill inspired by Novi mom passes in state House

By JAN JEFFRES Staff Writer

What began with a Novi mom concerned about kids viewing Internet pornography at the public library is shaping up to become a state law.

Last week, the state House of Representatives unanimously passed legislation giving local libraries the authority to restrict minors' use of the Internet, if so desired.

Introduced by State Rep. Nancy Cassis, R-Novi, the bill now heads to the state senate for a final vote. "Fantastic. I hope that legislation will bring other good changes," said Cindy Sheppard, who first voiced her concerns publicly at a Novi City Council meeting in July 1998.

House Bill 4191 balances the constitutional right to free speech, while still permitting a library to be a safe haven for children, Cassis said.

The Supreme Court has held there is a compelling state interest in protecting minor children from pornography and obscenity, she said during the April 15 discussion of the bill on the house floor.

This bill has been narrowly tailored to meet with that purpose...Many libraries, not just in Michigan, but in the United States are struggling with the whole issue."

Supported by the Michigan

Library Association and the Michigan Family Forum. If the bill becomes law, it will permit libraries to limit Internet access to anyone age 17 or younger by providing at least one computer equipped with various levels of restriction, such as filters. A further provision permits a library to require that a youngster under age 18 using an unfiltered computer must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

After Sheppard spoke up last summer, a Novi Library Board ad hoc committee did just that by recommending the installation of 12 "kid-friendly" computers. In addition, the existing, unrestricted Internet stations were realigned for greater viewing privacy.

Sheppard first became aware of the potential problem when walking by the library's computers and noticing a young teen eyeballing what she considered to be hard-core pornography.

I did what I felt needed to be done. There was nothing. I'm glad to have just made people aware of the situation." Sheppard said. But Novi Library Director Brenda Evans said no service can completely filter the content of the Internet, although new search engines now offer greater choices for people concerned about accidentally "hitting" a site they deem objectionable.

Novi Library on its website and through periodic Internet classes acquaints parents with search engines that are suitable for young children, such as Yahooligans and Searchopolis. Children's computers at the Novi library default to these "kid-safe" search engines.

"At this point, because the legis-lation is permissive and because we have gotten a good response to our current arrangement, I don't think that the legislation is going to change what we're doing," she said.

The bill reinforces local library boards' ability to set policy. Cassis contends. The bill is a necessity for our technological age. No one would oppose keeping pornographic magazines or sexually-explicit pictures away from children at neighborhood libraries," she said.

"The ever-growing use of the Internet demands we adapt to con-tinue protecting children from pornography."

But Cassis's legislation won't be the first to address the issue, Evans predicts.

This is one piece of legislation and there will be others. As technology changes, we'll be talking about a different piece of legislation." Evans added.

"It will continue as the general public adjusts to the Internet explosion."

Township, schools near agreement

By CHRIS C. DAVIS and ANDREW DIETDERICH Staff Writers

A general rule: before you appeal something, you must first have something to appeal.

That was the lesson handed down to Northville Township and the Woods of Edenderry by the Michigan state Court of Appeals after it ruled the two parties filed defective appeals.

The problem? They had nothing to appeal.

The township filed its first appeal March 29 and the Woods of Edenderry residents filed their first appeal March 30. But the court order from Judge Kathleen Mac-Donald in the Third Circuit Court wasn't signed until April 12 which meant both plaintiffs prematurely filed their appeals, the court of Bob Lusk, attorney for the district, said the the Woods of Edenderry and Northville Township filed supplementary appeals last week after the order was signed.

"They are continuing with this appeal." Lusk said. "What the courts rule remains to be seen."

The order signed April 12 denies the plaintiffs' claims and dismisses the case of the Woods of Edenderry and Northville Township against the Northville school district. The plaintiffs' complaints stemmed from the fact that the building of schools must follow state building guidelines instead of local ordi-the case lately whereby the district and township officials have been resining an agreement which would put a stop to the lawsuit pertaining to the new Northville High School.

Under heavy pressure from community groups and after marathon meetings with school officials, the township board accepted a letter of understanding from the school. Township supervisor Karen Woodside and trustee Bill Selinsky voted against the measure, saying the language of the letter was not strong enough and that it left too many future school construction issues to chance.

Township clerk Sue Hillebrand said the township's school board subcommittee agreed on the "overwhelming majority" of issues, and

There has been movement on that only fine points remained to be resolved. Both sides, she said, had been shuttling versions of the letter back and forth, each time giving slight modifications to the agreement.

"We're so close on this," Hillebrand said. "It's just some very minor points that need to be worked out."

One of those points involved the installation of decorative fencing around the school's boundaries, or even if such fencing was needed at Hillebrand said it was hoped that a final version of the agreement could be brought before the board by its general meeting on May 20.

Berishaj: 'I'm just happy to be home' had died right about at the time the verbal conflict between Yugoslavia and NATO was escalat-

"I was very close to him." Berishaj said. "It hurt everyone in the family very much when he

While Berishaj and her family dealt with Peter's death and made plans for a funeral and a close on his estate, the war of words between NATO and Serbia was growing more intense by the day. Berishaj said that she, along with thousands of other ethnic Albanians were convinced that Serbian president Slobodan Milosovic would back down and not pursue a course of action that would lead

Believing that Milosovic would take NATO to the brink but then give in to the demands of the allied countries. Berishaj made plans to join 18 other family members in the city of Podgorica, Montenegro. a republic within Yugoslavia. There she would stay with the parents of her husband in a home only five miles from the airport in Belgrade.

"We knew Milosovic had a peace contract, but he never signed it." Berishal said. *Had I known that things were going to get that bad, I would have never gone over there."

THE SIRENS

Following Peter's funeral, Berishaj and her family needed to remain in Yugoslavia for a few additional days. She was slated to leave the country and return to the United States on March 20. Those plans, however, would soon change.

As the days wore on and as NATO and Serbian forces engaged in a military stare-down, Berishaj said she was still convinced that a peace would be found and a war averted. It wasn't just a feeling she had — it was a feeling held by thousands of other residents in

Northville woman caught in conflict

"NATO kept issuing deadlines and Milosovic would keep ignoring them, so another deadline was issued," Berishaj said. "It went back and forth for so long. We had heard that when NATO made its final demand that (Milosovic) could still submit to the demands and avoid being bombed, even five seconds before the missiles would be fired."

But when twilight fell across Podgorica on March 24 - one day before she was scheduled to return home - the wail of air raid sirens pierced the sky over the grassy land. That sound was replaced two minutes later by the thunder of explosions accompanied by a reddish-white glow off in the distance.

No more talk. The time for NATO action had comè.

"It was like a nightmare." Berishaj said. "I couldn't believe this was actually happening to me. No one ever thought Milosovic would try messing with the rest of the world.

Almost as quickly as the attack had come, though, the attack stopped. Within a matter of seconds. Berishaj said the roar of planes and missiles was silenced and people scrambled to their television sets and radios to learn of what had happened.

The news couldn't have been much worse for Berishai. As it turned out, one of the alliance's first strike targets was the airport she was counting on using to get out of the country. Now she would be forced to find another route.

Berishaj was okay, physically speaking, and she wanted to assure her husband about that. Unfortunately, telephone communications were such that she could only receive calls from the United States, but couldn't make an outgoing call. In the days that followed the initial attack, Berishaj said she talked with her husband four to five times each day. It was, for all practical purposes, her only connection to the world beyond Yugoslavia.

IT CONTINUES

The morning following the first wave of allied bombings and missile attacks, life was subdued but nonetheless carried on in Podgorica, Berishaj said.

"Life had to go on." she said. What were we going to do?

What they did was remain fixated on the news, which was mainly CNN altered into local languages. Keeping up-to-date on the progress of the military conflict consumed the community.

As evening approached, the sirens again permeated in the night sky, Berishaj said.

"It wasn't as scary this time," she said. "You kind of got used to it."

As was the case with the first wave of attacks, explosions ripped across the region followed by another 23 hours of silence. This time, the nearby airport wasn't a target. The pattern of sirenbombing-silence continued for the remainder of her stay.

We had plenty of food and water and electricity, but I don't think I slept four hours over three days," she said. "It was so frightening being over there.

Further complicating the matter were growing tensions among residents of Montenegro itself. The republic - similar to a state in the U.S. - kept a "hands-off" policy with regard to the conflict. As time wore on, however, a rift developed between those who supported the allied attacks and those who sympathized the Serbian uprising.

Within a very short time period, Berishaj said it became clear to her that an exodus from Yugoslavia was absolutely necessary. Actually having that happen was another story altogether.

Amid tens of thousands of other refugees on the run, Berishaj was looking for her own way out of the country. Going to Serbia was not an option, as she was of the very ethnicity the Serbs were fighting against. Getting into Croatia was impossible because that government required her to carry a Croatian visa, which she didn't have. (Sixteen other members of her group had such documentation. however.) It was feasible for her to get into Albania, but because of the bombardments, all civilian air traffic had been brought to a screeching halt.

Berishaj was now in the middle of an awful waiting game. She was held up near the Yugoslavia-Albania border, but she had been told that the earliest possible date for commercial air service from Tirana was around April 15.

"There was no way I was going to wait that long," Berishaj said. "I had to get out of there."

ESCAPE

Back in the United States, husband Nick was working the phones with travel agents. To the surprise of no one - including Vicky Berishaj - word had it that all flights from Tirana, Albania to Rome were booked solid for a long time.

But realizing that getting out of the war-torn region was going to be a slow process. Berishaj said she volunteered to have herself placed on an airline waiting list, in the event some passenger would have a change in plans. While she waited. Berishaj said she overheard conversations of refugees fleeing Yugoslavia. One of the saddest involved a pregnant woman who walked for 48 hours to the border crossing, giving birth to twins along the way.

There were families who had become separated making the trip." Berishaj said. "It was so depressing to see."

Finally, a break came. Nick called Vicky on April 3 and informed his wife that planes from Tirana would be getting off the ground earlier than had been expected — the following day, to be exact.

One major hurdle remained: getting across the Yugoslavian border into the neutral territory. Unlike the border between the U.S. and Canada, many European nations are separated by a half-mile-wide international strip.

Whether it was good moods held by border guards or just plain luck, Berishaj got the OK to cross. The final step was to get from the Albanian border to Tirana, some six hours away.

"We hired a taxi to drive us there," she said. "It would have cost someone in Albania an entire month's salary to take the trip, but for us, it was about 100 dollars. American."

When her plane left the next day from Tirana. Berishaj said she felt a wave of relief. Being in Rome wasn't exactly being home, but it was a long ways from the front lines of a NATO bombing operation.

Stops in Rome were followed up with other stops in Zurich and another in Chicago, where she had a four-hour layover before her final flight to Detroit.

"I didn't care at all," she said. When I was in Chicago, it felt like I was already home. It was so nice being back in America."

And though she took an extended weekend to catch up on some heavily-needed sleep and to reunite with her husband and other members of her family, she was back at Joseph's less than a week after her journey to Yugoslavia.

"Northville is my home," she said, the trademark faint smile forming on her lips again. This is where I belong.

How to stay active despite asthma and allergies

Over 40 million Americans are allergic to pollen, mold, foods, animal dander, insect stings and other allergens. And more than 12 million people — including five million children suffer from asthma, a chronic lung disease that narrows and inflames their airways, causing wheezing and coughing.

Asthma attacks can be triggered by allergens, viral infections, tobacco smoke, exertion, anxiety and many other factors. Both allergies and asthma can lead to serious medical problems. But when properly diagnosed and treated, both conditions can be managed so you can maintain an active lifestyle.

For our next Health Night Out in Novi, the University of Michigan Health System will present Breathing Easier with Asthma and Allergies. Leading the presentation from the U-M Novi Health Center will be internist Breton Weintraub, M.D., and pediatrician Jeanne Seyfried, M.D.

During the presentation, you'll learn how allergies are diagnosed...how avoidance therapies, drugs and desensitization are used to treat allergies...why treatment differs between children and adults...what most commonly triggers asthma... which medicines are most successful...how to avoid making symptoms worse...how to participate safely in athletics...and more. A question-and-answer period will follow.

Join us on Wednesday, May 5 for our next Health Night Out in Novi because spring is here—time to get asthma and allergies under control so you can enjoy the great outdoors.

Township police investigate suspect charged with assault

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Northville Township police were continuing investigation into a suspected second-degree criminal sexual conduct against a 34-yearold township woman.

According to police reports, the woman was stirred from sleep in her home at around 5 a.m. April 7 when her alarm clock went off. Her young son was asleep with her. She said she heard unusual noise coming from inside the home, at first believed to be neighbors, but later determined to be the sound of clothing shuffling in the hallway outside her door.

Moments later, the woman said she observed a silhouette in the hall, from which a 25-year-old coworker emerged. The woman asked the man what he was doing in her house. The man responded by saying he needed to speak with the woman before going to work. The woman told the man that she couldn't talk at that moment, as she needed to get herself and her son ready for the day.

The man left the room but returned a few minutes later, this

Bankes enjoyes challenge of county post Library Lines

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH Staff Writer

Lyn Bankes admits she's cheap. But that's a good thing Espe-Gally when you consider the fact it's your tax money with which she is cheap.

Bankes took office as the Northville-Livonia-Plymouth representative on the 15-member Wayne County board of commissioners Jan. 1.

The board of commissioners acts as the legislative body in Wayne County with Ed McNamara, Wayne County executive, as the executive

Tlike to say its the county executive's job to propose and the commission's job to dispose," Bankes

The county receives a certain amount of money every year and it's part of the commission's job to spend the money on what members deem important.

Bankes said she has a quality that makes her perfect for the commissioner job.

Lynn Bankes

"I'm cheap," she said. "But only when it comes to your money."

Bankes first jumped into government in 1980 as part of the Wayne County charter commission. She then went on to serve as a legal aid until 1984 when she quit her job to run her own campaign for a state representative position which

She served as a representative until 1998 when her term limit ran out. Bankes said she decided not to pursue a seat in the state senate because she just "didn't have the fire" it took.

On the Wayne County commission. Bankes has her hands full as part of a number of committees on the commission including the ways and means committee and health services commit-

But Bankes said serving on the different committees plays second fiddle to her main priority.

The thing I put the most priority on is the people that put me office," she said. You always have to remember who brought you to the dance.'

Bankes said she tries to do that by having an open door policy to her office and keeping contact with governmental bodies within her

Since taking office Bankes said she's worked to meet with newspapers. Wayne County department heads, local government officials and chamber of commerces to try and make as many people as possible aware of what she can do for

"I'm trying to let the people I serve set my goals," she said.
Admittedly, Bankes said, townships such as Northville Township and Plymouth Township are more dependent on the county for certain services such a road repair and plowing.

But that doesn't mean she ignores cities like Northville and Livonia, Bankes said.

In addition to serving her constituents and serving on commission committees. Bankes said one of her goals is to totally restore the old Wayne County building in Greektown.

Bankes said such a project is needed because of the lack of historical government buildings in

There really isn't a living historical building in Detroit." she said.

Local man convicted of stalking his wife

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

At a speed that even impressed Northville Township detectives, a Northville man was sentenced to one year in jail after pleading guilty to charges that he stalked his wife.

Detective Fred Yankee said Thomas Burke, 35, pleaded guilty to stalking charges, after playing an extensive game of cat-andmouse with police.

"We needed to stop this," Yankee said. "Someone was going to get senously hurt if we didn't.'

Yankee said Burke became involved with the township police after a verbal altercation came to blows against his wife on March 22. Yankee said Burke's wife did not immediately file a report with the police, but instead waited some 12 hours later after running into her spouse when she went to pick up their daughter at a party.

When the report was taken, Yankee said detectives immediately processed a complaint and warrant to arrest Burke on charges of domestic violence. Before the approved warrant could be executed. Burke checked himself into Garden City Hospital, after which time he was transferred to Wyandotte General Hospital.

Upon his release from medical treatment, police arrested Burke on March 29. He was released on a $500 bond which contained a clause stipulating that no content. either direct or indirect, could be had with his wife.

For about one week after posting the bond, Yankee said Burke managed to stay out of trouble with the law. However, beginning on April 8. Yankee said Burke's wife observed her husband inside of the boundaries prescribed in the clauses of the bond. Yankee said Burke would stand on street corners normally traveled by his wife and watch as she drove by and confronted her at retail stores.

On April 13. Yankee said police again arrested Burke and had him arraigned on April 14. A $10,000 cash bond was set.

Finally, two days later, Yankee said judges in 35th District Court sentenced Burke to one year in Wayne County jail.

Creating Your Vision With Perfect Carpet Installation!

Quality installation. You expect it as part of your carpet purchase, so it makes sense to rely on a retailer who employs craftsmen and women who adhere to the "six criteria for a perfect carnet installation."

1. Subflooring, fastened properly (nailed, screwed or glued) with a smooth surface, free of dust, durt, debris and moisture.

2. Accurate measurements. Leave it to the pros who can get the maximum from every square foot and save on both product and installation.

3. "Just right" carpet. At Mohawk® Floorscapes® style shops, you'll find exactly what you want and need. Our pros will work with you regarding heavy traffic areas, to avoid or minimize seams.

4. Optimum techniques. Our installers explain and recommend the best methods -- cushion and tackless or direct glue-down.

5. Optimum performance. Work with the carpet, not against it, putting it down from a central point and stretching outward.

6. Follow-up. Your team should clean up and inspect to make sure installa-tion is to your satisfaction. If not, contact your retailer, because a successful installation is the retailer's responsibility. At Mohawk Floorscapes, we want to know about problems, and we pride ourselves on

That's why it's worth talking to the fast resolution.

Wayne County announces Six Mile Road paving project

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

If you happen to enjoy the roller coaster-like rumble of driving over a washboard road, you may be disappointed to hear Six Mile Road is about to be paved.

Of course, if you prefer asphalt to hard-packed dirt, you'll have something to smile about.

Wayne County public information director John Roach announced that the span of Six Mile from Beck to Sheldon roads would be paved before the end of 1999. Six Mile was one of 100 road projects being worked on across Wayne County, at a total cost of $63 million. The Six Mile project was expected to run $1.5 million.

The cost of the project is being absorbed by an 80-20 split between Wayne County and Northville Township as part of the Partnership 1998 project.

Chief road designer Mike Darga said that the 1.5 mile project has been designed and will be likely be going out for bid sometime by the middle of May. A two-month waiting period on the return of bids would probably be followed up by the beginning of construction around Aug. 1.

Repaying scheduled for Six Mile Road

The project would pave one of the last unimproved roads in Wayne County. Storm sewer will be laid along portions of the road with open ditching.

Based on the timetable we have right now, we'd probably be very close to completing the grading and having the primary paving done by the time we have our seasonal shutdown," Darga said.

Before a seasonal shutdown, a partial shutdown of the road will be made necessary to complete the project, Darga said. While construction goes on, through-traffic on Six Mile will be detoured to other roads. Residents of Woods of Edenderry would have access to their homes, but would likely need to weave through a few orange cones to do so, he said.

The final two miles of Six Mile in Wayne County west to the Washtenaw County line are being considered for paving sometime in 2000. Darga said doing so would be largely dependent on whether a funding agreement could be worked out between the county and developers of the nearby

Stonewater subdivision. Other road projects near Northville and Northville Township this summer include:

· A complete reconstruction of 1-275 from Five Mile to I-696:

Widening Haggerty from Ford to Warren in Canton Township, Rebuilding Seven Mile Road from Wayne to Farmington roads in Livonia.

Wickens to retire from high school shifted gears from in-class education to pursuit of a career in counseling. Drug and alcohol problems were spreading throughout suburban schools. and Wickens said he wanted to step in and help out.

His original intent was to come to Northville High School. At the time, administrators told him he would be hired on a contingency basis - if the upcoming millage were to pass. Wickens could have the job.

As un-luck would have it, the millage didn't get the votes it needed, and Wickens instead took a position at O.E. Dunckel Middle School in Farmington Hills. A few months later, the phone rang at Wickens' home. A second stab at the Northville millage had succeeded. The job was his, if he wanted it, Oh, he wanted it. And he's continued to want it ever since.

"I've had the chance to counsel around 300 to 350 kids a year since I got here." Wickens said. "It's great, because 99.9 percent of the kids I see are really, really good. And even the ones who aren't so good when they're here turn out good in the end."
Wickens credited a great deal of the joy in his job to the teaching faculty, who he said did a good job of keeping kids on the right track, academically speaking.

For a while, it looked as if nothing would keep Wickens from the job he loved. Unfortunately, something did - a tumor in his throat, which was discovered in the spring of 1998. Doctors were stumped as to why it developed.

Surgery was absolutely necessary, and Wickens knew it. What he didn't know was how he'd have to face two serious setbacks in his life as a result of the opera-

While doctors worked to remove the tumor, they cut nerves affecting his vocal chords and tongue. To minimize internal an option. Through months of bleeding from the operation, doctors introduced a clotting agent around his neck. A portion of the substance accidentally got into his bloodstream and made a beeline for Wickens' brain, causing him to have a stroke.

Now, the man whose life was fairly normal before the operation found himself unable to speak. unable to stand up, and had difficulties using his arms and legs.

With an ample number of years already put in at Northville High. Wickens could have called it quits right then and there, a full pension and all. For him, that wasn't thing he had taken for granted through most of his life up to that point.

*I look at it like this — God tried to get me to shut up, but he couldn't quite do it," he said.

Wickens returned to his office last December, happy to be able to finish out his career on his own terms. It was an opportunity he welcomed with open arms.

Every day is different in this job. That's why I love it so much." he said. The best part is the students. They teach me something new every time I come into this

His family is every bit as varied as his job. Together with his wife, Gloria, they have six children. Jack, Jr., Julie, Bob, Dave, Ed and Carrie have jobs in every field from interior designer to environmental scientist to Blue Cross / Blue Shield manager. Jack Jr., 30, is currently the counselor at Meads Mill Middle School.

And his plans for retirement are not what you'd normally expect a man his is late 50s to do, either. He said he'd like to climb a mountain, go skydiving, and sail across the Atlantic Ocean.

I want to do it on some small boat," he said, smiling. "No bigger than say. 20 or so feet."

In Jack Wickens' life, the saying "Expect the unexpected" takes on a whole new meaning.

Fire, police officers honored at Northville VFW celebration

By CHRIS C. DAVIS Staff Writer

Northville Township and Northville's police and fire departments announced this week the selection of their honorees for the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4012 dinner.

For the township's police and fire departments, it was Captain Philip Presnell and Firefighter Ash Garbia. Public safety director Chip Snider said Presnell is a 27-year veteran with the department. whose career started out in 1971 as a reserve officer. He was promoted to full-time service in 1972. Presnell's selection was special. Snider said, because it was the first time in department history that a superior officer had been selected for the honor by his understudies. "He was selected by his peers for his leadership skills and for what he offers in training to newer officers," Snider said. In addition, Snider commended Presnell for his resurrection of a dated drug investigation, which Presnell was able to help bring to a close. From that case. Presnell netted the department a $60,000 drug forfeiture he's not in a firefighter uniform.

That money has been a tremendous asset to this department." Snider said.

Over at the township fire department, the accolades will be going to Ash Garbia, a stressighter engineer since 1996. Garbia is a certifled emergency medical technician and is a CPR instructor on the staff. Fire chief Bill Zhmendak said Garbia ranks near the top in number of runs attended while Zhmendak also characterized Garbia as "a great family man and a valued member of the force."

"He's always willing to take that extra step," Zhmendak said. "It really wasn't a shock to me when I found out he'd been voted in."

Ash's city of Northville counterpart is Northville firefighter Mark Hanselman, member of the part-time force since August of 1995. City fire chief Jim Allen said Hanselman came to Northville after graduating in firefighting school from Schoolcrast College. Hanselman is an Ameritech cable television technician when

*He's a very dedicated and hardworking firefighter," Allen said. "He gives 110 percent every time he goes out and does his job. It's commendable." And in the city's police department, the top honor was given to patrol officer and Northville native Greg Hannewald. A full-time officer for just over a year, police chief Jim Petres said Hannewald signed on with the department in 1996 and received the VFW nomination from one of his commanding offi-

Petres said Hannewald singlehandedly made nearly one-third of the department's drunk driving and suspended / revoked license arrests last year. Hannewald's father is a science teacher at Meads Mill Middle School.

"He's a local guy and a real go-getter," Petres said.

Tickets to the recognition dinner sell for $5 per person. The dinner is slated for 3 p.m. this Sunday at the VFW Post Hall at 438 S. Main Street. For more information, call the VFW at (248) 349-9828.

OPINION

It's high time we clear up loose ends to this lawsuit

Both the school board and the township insist that the points which almost negligible.

Three weeks ago, we lauded the Northville Township board of trustees and the school board for resolving to end the legal battle regarding the new Northville High School. At the time, it appeared that hard work and common sense displayed by members of both groups, coupled with pressure from fed-up residents had worked to make the lawsuit a thing of the past.

But here we are, some 21 days later, and though a cease-fire has been declared, a lasting peace has yet to be established. Why? Because both sides are now tweaking with the agreement and making remain to be clarified are alterations. In our opinion, this just so small that they're isn't right.

An agreement was in hand, and for the most part, people on both sides of but you don't spend hours agonizthe issue indicated it was a settlement that they could live with. So what happened? Someone wanted a little more of this and a little less of that. On the other side, someone else wanted a little more of that and a little less of this. And on it went, like a chef adding spices to a world-class meal. A dash makes for a better end product. Eventually, though, the spices overtake the trict and the township.

dish and it begins to taste a lot different than what it was originally meant to be.

Therein lies our concern.

We wouldn't debate the idea that time needed to be allotted to have some minor wrinkles ironed out before presenting a completed settlement. Three weeks, however, seems more than a bit excessive to

Both the school board and the township insist that the points which remain to be clarified are so small that they're almost negligible. If that's the case, then either ignore them or have them addressed.

It's sort of like a cobweb in an inconspicuous portion of the house: you either clean it or learn to live with it.

ing over what to do with it.

Not getting the lawsuit's paperwork finished — completely and quickly — only delays the beginning of the healing process in the community. For the sake of everyone involved, we implore both sides to get this done-done and to refocus on other more pressing matters relating to the school dis-

Voter involvement needed in upcoming board election

Then the clock struck 4 p.m. April 12 and five people turned in the necessary paperwork to run for the Northville school board, we were encouraged.

Hopefully, though, that was just the spark of what should be an excitingly explosive campaign and not a tip-off for us to expect a bunch of signs with names on them to pop up all over the Northville area.

Despite the fact that one of the candidates dropped out of the race last week, there are still four candidates left for just two seats.

That's four individuals from our community willing to dedicate a large portion of their time to governing what, from who, and where your children learn.

That's four individuals from our community willing to pour over countless documents dealing with items as small as what color tile will replace old carpeting in a school building to items as large as how to handle a lawsuit broad against the board.

But selecting the right school board candidate goes beyond picking those who demonstrate a willingness to participate.

It goes to the past experience the person has had that could be used to benefit the board and consequently the entire district.

It goes to a willingness to work with others. It goes to a commitment to providing the best education possible for our students.

And while the Northville school board election may not be a gubernatorial or presidential race, the decisions the new school board members make will determine perhaps if a future governor or president will come from Northville

That's why we think it's important to not only vote but for Northville area voters to really get to know the candidates.

Thus we also think it's important that members of the community pull together to organize town hall meetings with the candidates and/or debates between the candidates.

The chances of getting all candidates together in one place are very good as all have told The Northville Record they would be willing to participate in such meet-

And while the potential is there for some great discussions, the potential also is there for the community to drop the ball.

Candidate Jerry Rupley, who has served as a member of the Advocates for Quality Education in the past, admitted a drop in activity on the part of the Advocates. The group in the past has organized school board candidate forums.

Rupley said he would not participate in organizing such meetings this year calling it a conflict of interest.

That leaves a wide open hole for another group or individuals to step up and fill or let the hole remain empty and let the election fall flat on its face.

Trying to make sense of a tragedy

I find myself with very little to say this morning.

That's unusual for me, a person who seems to have an opinion on just about anything, and has no problem expressing it. Writing the words that occupy this space each week is usually the easiest work I

But today, as I stare at the headlines of the world's events. I find myself having trouble putting into words exactly how I feel.

GUNMEN AT SCHOOL LEAVE TRAIL OF DEATH." says the banner headline in the Detroit Free Press. SURVIVORS RECOUNT HORRER AFTER DOZENS SLAIN IN COL-ORADO."

No, I can't bring myself to jump right into my usual fare of sarcasm and criticism this week. Like many of you, I'm simply trying to make sense of the events of the past few days. And like many of you the questions that keep rolling around in my head are simple and straight

Why did this happen? What is it. exactly, that prompts two young men to stroll into a high school and begin shooting people?

Could what happened in Littleton. or Plainsboro, Ark., or Paducah, Ky., happen here?

Robert Jackson

Disturbing questions that provide little or no concrete answers.

This much is certain - the murderous rampage that took place on Tuesday will provide fodder for just about every psychological expert in the land. We will hear that there is too much violence portrayed on television or motion pictures, or in computer video games. There will be a call for more stringent security on the Internet. And undoubtedly someone will point out that the electronic media needs to be more responsible and accountable.

All of those claims have some truth to them. It's scary to think that our children can access information on just about anything simply but searching the World Wide Web.

There is more to it, though. It's not just the television or movies or video games or the Net that breed the type of hatred or disregard for human life that we saw Tuesday.

No, we all are responsible for creating the monsters who perpetrate these types of acts, and I'd like to know when we're going to get around to talking about setting examples for

We need to encourage them to show anger in constructive ways. We need to actually involve ourselves in their lifes. We need to show them how to handle disputes in non-violent ways.

And for God's sake, we need to hug them every chance we get - we need to teach them compassion and

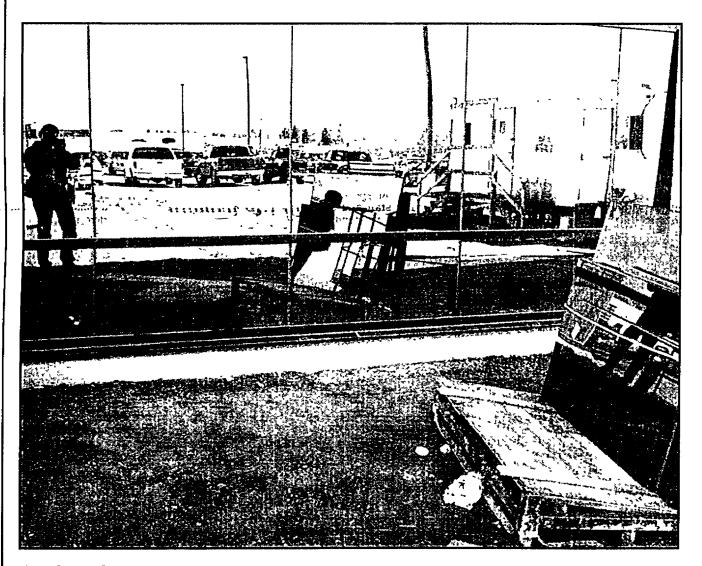

Because in the final analysis we should be holding ourselves accountable for the tragedy in Littleton. We need to remember that before these young men became monsters they had lives of their own. Unfortunately we, society, must have missed the opportunity to leave a positive imprint.

And in the end, I guess that's the saddest statement of all.

More thoughts and random observations on life..

• One of the most disturbing elements of Tuesday's school shooting outside Denver came during President Clinton's brief address to the nation. The president said that a team of federal representatives were being dispatched to Colorado to help, who would join the people from other communities who had been through this sort of thing before Understanding that everyone's heart is in the right place, it nonetheless pains me to think that we've got 'experts" in mass murder at schools. It also pains me to think how such a horrible event could also ccur in Northville or Novi.

• The problems with our state continue...l called up a catalog company to place an order the other day. The operator asked for my zip code. After a short pause (during which time, presumably, she dumped the information into a computer) she came back on the line saying. "Okay, Mr. Davis — that's in Nah-vee, Michigan?"

Exactly. You may also find that some of my friends are living in Marquet and Char-lah-voyx. During the summer, you can forward the catalogs to Mack-in-ack or Sahoolt-Stee-

You've got to love those Michigan

· We've been asking for the longest time to have our roads repaired. We pleaded with our lawmakers to throw an additional four pennies on each gallon of gas we bought to help fix the roads. Now we've got the cash, now the weather is warming up - and people are complaining about orange barrels and road closures?

News flash: you can't fix roads unless you put up some roadblocks. No one likes backups (well, maybe plumbers do) but they're necessary if we're ever going to see an improvement in our thoroughfares.

So let me lead the charge on stopping the complaints, planning ahead, giving extra room to the people around us, and looking forward to the day when the potholes are but a memory.

· Another excerpt from the Newlywed's Guide to Living: what's yours is hers. What's hers is also hers.

• More news - Novi High will have 10 valedictorians at commencement this June. Ten valedictorians? That makes about as much sense has having four kings, or better yet, a dozen emperors.

If a university, with twenty thousand students, can come up with a single top dog, what is preventing our high schools from doing the same? Answer: we don't want to hurt anyone's feelings. Therefore, I hereby announce that effective next year, everyone at every school is a valedictorian. Whether you're headed to Harvard, the Army, or back to flipping burgers, you're an academian in my book. I'm doing this because I don't want to scuff anyone's self-esteem. • The closure of Center Street in Northville is an inconvenience to a lot of people, but not to me. The detour has allowed me to take a quiet spin along the banks of the Mill Pond each day and see the beauty of spring.

Time to up the ante in campus regulations

There were lots of student radicals on college campuses in the late 1950s and early

I should know. I was one of them.

In those days, Tom Hayden (before he became a celebrity) and I were both staffers on the University of Michigan student newspaper, The Michigan Daily. Together with a group of other activists, we launched in 1960 a campaign to get rid of Deborah Bacon, who was then the dean of women.

At that time, deans of women exercised a lot of power at college campuses all around the country. They set rules defining proper non-academic conduct for co-eds: drinking (mostly a no-no), dress (ladylike), dorm hours (in by 11 p.m. on weekdays, 1 a.m. weekends), sex (decidedly a no-no, but routinely ignored).

There were deans of men, too, who set non-academic rules for male students. These were a lot looser - boys will be boys, after all - but you could get in trouble for things like rowdy or noisy behavior or having an unregistered car on campus.

Taken together, the rules governing nonacademic conduct for college students were based on the assumption that university authorities were acting as substitute parents - "in loco parentis" was the Latin phrase while kids were on campus. And it was the notion that somebody - university authorities or anybody else - had the right to set rules for us students that made us mad. In due course we got rid of Miss Bacon at U-M and, as well, the institutions of the dean of women and the dean of men. And over the next 10 years all around the country, colleges and universities gradually ridded themselves of deans and ideas of in loco

By 1980, the idea that colleges had any business trying to govern the non-academic behavior of their students was passé. University boards of trustees amended their rules, eliminating wholesale the authority of their institutions to discipline or expel students for drinking or taking drugs or raising hell or having sex in unauthorized and inappropriate ways.

Some - U-M among them - wound up with no rules whatsoever governing non-academic conduct. If the kids violated the laws of Ann Arbor or Michigan, it was the cops' business to arrest and charge them.

The pendulum started swinging back about five years ago, when folks running colleges realized that students could do all kinds of nasty things and get away with it as long as they didn't break some non-universi-

At the U-M, racist and gay-baiting flyers were occasionally distributed around the dorms. Some women were harassed and a few were raped. Thefts on campus increased.

The administration and the Board of Regents concluded that the safety and civility of the academic community were threatened. Against the vehement protest of some student radicals (not to mention The Michigan Daily, my old newspaper), the Regents in 1990 authorized armed campus public safety officers and later adopted a limited code of non-academic conduct.

A bunch of well-publicized recent events on Michigan campuses suggest there is much more to do, especially with respect to

The alcohol-fueled riot in East Lansing three weeks ago involved not only MSU students but also students from campuses all around the state. Last fall, a MSU student died of alcohol poisoning after he consumed 26 shots during a night of drinking to cele-brate his 21st birthday. At Central Michigan University, another student fell out of his apartment during a party and was killed.

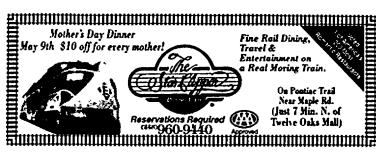

Last fall, Courtney Cantor, a first year student at U-M, fell to her death out of a window in her dorm in Ann Arbor. Traces of alcohol and a date-rape drug were found in

I was on the Board of Regents at U-M when Courtney Cantor fell to her death. A friend whose daughter is a first-year student in Ann Arbor called me, deeply concerned. What can you do to assure me that your university is taking appropriate care of my daughter?" I couldn't fully answer his ques-

I don't think Michigan colleges should return wholesale to the days of in loco parentis. But, equally, I am certain that university officials and boards of trustees have a greater responsibility to their students - and to the parents and families of these students - than merely warehousing them in dormito-ries or fraternities, letting them do what they will and hoping for the best.

There may be protests and pickets. But university officials and governing boards should have the guts and the wisdom to look probingly at their rules of non-academic conduct and carefully re-write them.

In addition to being a student activist while an undergraduate at U-M, Phil Power served for 11 years on the University's board of Regents. The Tooth Fairy hits a snag at the local bank

To the editor:

Four years ago when my daughter lost her first tooth during a fall, the Tooth Fairy had to do some quick scrambling. More than one bank was visited in order to obtained the coveted dollar and half-dollar coins. One of each coin enters our home only through these exchanges with the talented Ms. T. Fairy. She, however, cannot produce these coins with magic that is reserved for reaching under pillows without disturbing young children. She must therefore rely on the help of our neighborhood

Since that time, Ms. Fairy has been better prepared, until today. This time my son lost his first tooth in school. When Ms. Fairy was notified, she flew directly to the bank and was promptly shot

The neighborhood bank did not have half-dollars. They are not common coinage," it was explained. These can be ordered in advance or perhaps the annex nearby might have coins to help. Ms. Fairy should have called ahead of time. (By the way - the local branch numbers are no longer listed in the phone book. nor are they available through information. A customer service number was given which, when dialed, was either busy or left an ear-shattering ringing.)

My point? Ms. Fairy feels that a bank, of all places, should carry all the types of coins minted by the United States government. She does not request a quarter from each state or a true silver dollar. She is not requesting foreign

She does find it annoying when the annex sends her to the main branch and then the main branch to the annex. She also finds it inconvenient when it is suggested that she wait until a third teller returns from lunch (current time 2:10 p.m., closing time 4:40 p.m.) She finds it ludicrous when it is suggested that she return tomor-

It would seem that the amount of business done by the Tooth Fairy does not carry enough clout to be important in our neighbor-

What happened to serving the local people, including the Tooth Fairy, with daily, simple needs? Or is the bank only interested in corporate accounts, IRAs, home equity loans, etc.? So it would seem to the rather frustrated Ms. T. Fairy.

By the way - while the Tooth Fairy was discussing this dilemma with a manager, the teller having luncheon returned. Surprisingly. she had the only half-dollar coins in the bank. Ms. T. Fairy will indeed visit our home this evening with the cherished and expected coins, but she is tired - tired of having to argue for something so simple.

Reading Month was successful

To the editor:

Moraine Elementary School's reading month activities were awesome this year due to the incredible contributions of Northville businesses, the endless hours of work by parent volunteers, and the continued commitment of one Northville High School teacher and his students. The staff and students of Moraine are truly indebted to Pizza Cutter, Chocolates By Renee, and Community Federal Credit Union for their generous contributions. Their support of the children of Northville has been outstanding.

Our team of creative and tireless parents ensured the students enjoyment, excitement and learning. Terry Gruley, Sue Laabs and Kathy Ambler were unbelievable leaders. We also owe a a great big thanks to Mr. Kurt Kinde and his NHS drama students, who once again made reading come alive. They demonstrated the many benefits of reading and writing while thoroughly entertaining us all.

Moraine students not only had fun, but also showed how much they value reading and writing, by reaching out to children less fortunate. They collected and donated nearly 2,000 books, some bookmaking materials, bookshelves and stuffed animals to First Step. an organization that supports families. As a result, reading centers were set up at two First Step

Obviously, this project involved the collaboration, caring and hard work of the entire Moraine community. It showed each and every one of us that if we work together we can accomplish great things for many. It was a privilege for me to be a small part of this effort.

Why did the school roof leak?

To the editor:

In last week's paper, the Big Question was: why does the Thornton Creek roof leak? After the school district has spent $277,412 on repairs, I think it's time for the new school board to agree with the township for local inspections on the new high school.

With the legal fees plus the repairs, almost $400,000 has been poured down the drain. I think I am correct in recalling the school board instead of the township board.

Who in the world would install a roof with an eight to 10-year life span? I can only think of a person who knows nothing about building a building. The most important part of a building is the founda-. tion. The second-most important part is the roof.

If it happened on a small school, can you imagine what a cost would be on a $45 million school? This should be a lesson for the school board, but don't hold your

Is 2000 the year of the woman?

To the editor:

Elizabeth Dole is an attorney with a distinguished career as a high-ranking political appointee. Though she has never run for political office, she has thrown her bonnet into the ring of aspiring politicos who are in the race for the presidential mantle that will be up for grabs in 2000. No doubt, going for the highest elected office of the Republic, shows Dole to be irrepressibly courageous.

Marianne Means (Hearst Newspapers) reports that at this time. the people don't know what her thinking is on the vital issues — domestic or international — that are challenging us as we approach the end of the 20th century.

Not known by many, but Elizabeth Dole is not the first woman that has announced her intention for running for the presidency. According to Ellen Goodman of the Boston Globe, "Victoria Woodhall, a charismatic and eccentric stockbroker, publisher, suffragist and spiritualist announced her intention to run for that exalted position in April of 1870."

The position of women, in that era, was such (it was not until 1920 that women won the right to vote) that she was not even allowed to appear on any of the state ballots, and lest we forget, women are still on the rough road to gain equality with men. The Equal Rights Amendment was defeated in 1982 after a 10-year struggle.

Will the Year 2000 be the real year of the women? Tune in as the gaseous eructations from the myrfad contenders pollute the airwaves for the next 19 months. Be of good cheer — this too, will

Alfred Galli

Karl Marx must be smiling

To the editor:

The responses evoked from Alfred Galli and Irene Piccone were not unexpected. The liberal really does believe that an elitist group can decide that the government can take more money from one taxpayer to provide government services than it takes from a second earner. The liberal maxim. You've got more money than I've got - gimme half suggests that egalitarian conditions for all of us in society is an inalienable right.

There is no inalienable right to food, to clothing or to shelter. One has the right to seek employment and to pursue happiness. There is no guarantee to a Job.

The two respondents suggested that I thought we ought not to pay taxes. Of course, we must pay taxes so that government entitles can provide necessary services. If a consumption tax is enacted, the rich man will pay more than the wage-earner with modest income. But it isn't right to insist a taxpayer pay more in income tax, more at a graduate rate, because he has made too much money, more money than his neighbor. He should not be asked to pay for the food, clothing and shelter of the rest of the people on his block.

All of the above out of the mouth of a rich man. Well, before I retired, I did sign a contract and worked for a year for $34,000. It is not moral, nor ethical, nor principled for one man to covet his neighbor's goods his income or his accumulated assets. Reflecting, I know I could have done other things than teach, and perhaps made a lot more money, but I did what I wanted to do and accepted all that went with the life choice I'd made. Teacher peers who whined about their incomes should have looked for alternative employment.

When income tax rates are modified so the rich many pays $450,000 in taxes rather than $500,000 he paid the previous year on the same income, the liberal will insist that he has taken money from the poor. He has been given nothing, certainly not by the poor, many of whom haven't paid any taxes to begin with, some even getting a "negative tax" from the government. A reduction in income tax rates gives the rich man nothing; he only gets to keep more of his earnings. Graduated incomes can be identified as theft.

If the federal government receives less in taxes because of the tax rate changes, it will not be able to perform all of the services it would like. The Constitution tells us that limited government is responsible for limited services, that the federal government should provide only those services that the state and local government entities are not ready, willing and able to perform.

Yes, I say it again: I find it surprising that one might support the discriminative behavior that would have two workers pay the same price for 70,000 to 80,000 goods and services, but pay different prices for police protection, fire protection, a walk in the park and to drive the state highways. Karl Marx has to be smiling at today's liberals who support from each according to his ability, to each according to his need.

Making the grade

Several local eateries named GOLD Plate Restaurants by Oakland County Health Division

CAROL DIPPLE Feature Editor

Thirteen area restaurants have been named to the Honor Roll - they made the grade for serving healthy food.

Not only did they respond to the Oakland County Health Division's annual survey, but they were selected as restaurants which offer a Great Option in Low Fat Dining.

The Oakland Heart Health Coalition's annual GOLD

Other questions ask whether patrons can order a variety of entree serving sizes, if they can ask that a menu item be prepared without salt or ask for a low fat substitute in place of a fried side-dish item.

The restaurant must also serve two entrees on a regular basis that are low fat which is considered three grams of fat or Jeffrey Michael will perform at the 1999 Michigan International Women's Show.

Dream becomes reality

By JEREMY McBAIN Staff Writer

At 21-years-old, Novi resident Jeffrey Michael has achieved more than most musicians do over a lifetime, and he achieved it all on his own.

Michael is the owner of his own recording business. Fireheart Music. Fireheart Music has a selection of five compact disks of new age music for sale that were all written, recorded, produced and marketed by him. I never wanted to be on a major record label so they could tell me what to do. I wanted my own company so I could maintain my life," he said.

This musical dream that flourished into a self-run business started simply as a self-taught hobby for Michael at an early age. When he was 6-years-old. Michael became fascinated with his family's piano and started fooling around with it.

He became even more interested in the plano after his older brother started taking lessons. Being the Jealous type, Michael started playing more and teaching himself to play tunes by ear. He became so proficient at this.

that by the time he was eleven. Michael had written his first

And soon, this hobby would become more.

When Michael was in high school. like many kids his age, his father wanted him to go out and get a job. But, instead of flipping burgers at McDonalds or selling shirts at the mall, Michael turned to his hobby.

Since he had already written several songs, Michael recorded them to tape and sold them around town. Soon, he found himself pulling in a profit.

This continued throughout his high school career and expanded when he graduated into his own company called JM Music Productions, which has now become Fireheart Music.

Basically I play from the heart, that is why I called it 'Fireheart,"

Michael kept writing and recording music for his fledgling company while taking pre-med classes at Eastern Michigan University. During this time, Michael learned he enjoyed writing and playing music more than learning the intricacles of medical

So. Michael quit school and worked on his music and recording business full time.

The first thing he wanted to do was get his music out to more people thereby increasing his sales. He achieved this by simply visiting Mediaplay, a music and bookstore.

During this visit, Michael made a deal with Mediaplay. If they would sell his CDs on a consignment basis, he would give free concerts at the bookstore.

Under this deal, Michael found himself touring all of the Mediaplays throughout the midwest. He also used this as a way to create similar deals with Boarder's bookstores and Barnes and Nobles bookstores.

Now, Michael is watching as his CDs are being sold in all Mediaplay's, Barn's and Noble's, Sam Goody and Borders.

He also takes part in many area art fairs, where he can be seen selling his CDs and entertaining crowds with his music. More recently, Michael can be seen April 29 to May 2 at the Women's Show at the Novi Expo

KIMBERLEY LANG of Northville is a recipient of the Irvington Scholarship, a renewable award ranging from $3,800-$7,800 per year. Students admitted in the Early Admission Program at Butler University were nominated for the scholarships and evaluated on academic achievement, community contribution and extra-curricular activities. These high-achieving students include valedictorians and salutatorians. Lang attends Northville High School.

Albion College student KELLY M. JANOWSKI, has been selected to join the College's Student Alumni Association. The association is a vital member of the college's office of Alumni and Parent Relations.

The association is most visible at homecoming, working with the Alumni Office on activities for returning alumni. Other activities include Family Day, move-in day for freshmen students, Little Siblings Weekend, Founders' Day, pep rallies and bonfires.

Kelly is a sophomore majoring in psychology. She is the daughter of David Janowski of Livonia and Diane Leyda of Brighton and is a graduate of Northville High School.

Residents and their scholarship include: LAURA BREITENBECK of Northville and a student at Ladywood High School, Federal-Mogul Corporation Merit Scholarship; PRECIOUS SHAH, a Northville resident and a student at Northville High School, Unisys Corporation Merit Scholarship; and KRISTEN VANTUYL, a Novi resident and student at Northville High School, BASF Corporation Merit Scholarship.

Scholars were selected from students in the nationwide National Merit Program who advanced to the Finalist level of the competition and who meet corporate sponsors' preferential criteria. Almost all corporatesponsored Merit Scholarship awards are offered specifically for Finalists who are children of the sponsor's employees or members, residents of communities the company serves, or Finalists who have career interests the sponsor wishes to encourage. Award recipients are the candidates judged to have the strongest combination of academic achievements and skills, extracurricular accomplishments, and potential for success in rigorous college studies.

Most corporate-sponsored Merit Scholarship awards are renewable for up to four years of college undergraduate study and may range from $500 to $10,000 per year. Some, however, are non renewable single payments of between $2,000 and $5,000.

Alma College will conduct commencement exercises on Saturday, April 24. Participating will be Northville graduates CLARK ABEL and MARY SERWICK, who have completed their degree requirements.

Abel, a graduate of Novi High School, will receive a bachelor of arts degree in economics.

Serwick will receive a bachelor of arts degree in communication and Spanish. She is a graduate of Bishop Foley High School.

Author says she 'just writes what comes to her head'

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH Staff Writer

Northville's latest published author doesn't care about getting paid for her work or worry about coming up with another story by a certain date. All Elizabeth Eleanor Gregory knows is that she likes to write. Her love for the craft paid off recently when the second grade student from Silver Springs Elementary School was selected for publication in "Kaleidoscope," a Michigan Reading Association publication. She was selected as part hof the Michigan Reading Association's Young Author Competition after her teachers submitted one of her stories.

The story written by Gregory that will be published in the book is called Timber the Chinese Whale.

"I got the idea from watching whales jumping around together." Gregory said. It was just something I remembered.

Hawaii last year. The story of Timber follows the whale on its tourney to raise a family and ends a real good "I think it (writing) is a real good with a baby whale that resembles Timber being born.

Personifying animals seems to be a common feature in Gregory's stories which also include "King Kang the Interested Panda and a story about a cat named Spiral. Additionally, though, she writes stories about humans, such as Little Somulalex and the Heart of the River. Gregory's favorite classes are music and library because Gregory said she likes to play instruments and read. Additionally, Gregory said, she keeps a journal.

"I usually Just write whatever comes to my head," she said.

Larry Gregory, Elizabeth's father, said his daughter was never pushed into being a writer.

She could always speak and read well." he said. "She comes up with some really great ideas. We're really proud of her.

Elizabeth's mother. Nancy, said Gregory said her family went to she is "real excited" her daughter's hobby," she said. 'She has reams and reams of paper with her writings on them."

'Kaleidoscope" is a book of short stories and poems by students from Michigan. The book was started eight years ago with the purpose of "celebrating the talents of young authors.

About 150 schools submit one outstanding piece of student writing for publication each year. Authors range from kindergarten through grade 12 and the stories they write address a wide variety of

As part of being selected for print in the book, the young authors were treated to a special luncheon March 14 featuring Jon Scieszka, a children's author, in Grand Rapids. Scieszka, author of such literary classics as "The Stinky Cheese," discussed his work, answered questions and commended the writers on their

Organizations can raise money at festival

The Michigan Renaissance Festival has fund raising opportunities for charity and non-profit organizations. During the Festival's seven-week run, Aug. 14 to Sept. 26, local organizations can earn valuable donation dollars by providing volunteers in Renaissance costumes to operate beer, wine and food booths or to serve these items during many special events.

Volunteers may participate in this program by offering their services for one or more weeks during the run of the Michigan Renaissance Festival. There are a limited number of volunteer opportunities available. The Michigan Renaissance Festival is located off 1-75, exit 106, on Dixie Highway between Pontiac and Dance Ensemble West will present "Dance Collection 1999" on Saturday, April 24, at 3 p.m. at Plymouth Canton High School Little Theater.

Northville resident Sarah Carlson will be among those dancers performing in the annual presentation of ballet and modern dance works.

Dance Ensemble West has dancers from Northville, Novi, Plymouth Canton, Livonia, and Farmington Hills who dance in one of three divisions - apprentice. junior or senior company.

Sarah, who is a senior at Northville High School, is a member of the Senior Company.

Sarah has been dancing for 15 years and has been a member of Dance Ensemble West for nine years. She choreographed a dance for the upcoming concert to Fleetwood Mac's "Big Love." This will be Sarah's last year as a performing member of Dance Ensemble West. However, she has been teaching classes at Dance Ensemble's sponsoring studio. Dance Unlimited, and may continue to keep her association with the company in a teaching or mentor role.

This fall. Sarah will be majoring in dance at The University of Michigan. She has also been affiliated with a professional dance company, Jazz Dance Theatre of Ann Arbor, for the past two years. She has developed her abilities as an accomplished dancer, emerging choreographer and well-liked teacher-mentor to her young students through years of hard work and dedication. It was not unusual for Sarah to have dance classes each day of the week, in addition to the company rehearsals and private classes she took to perfect her dance skills.

When anchoring, lower the anchor slowly to the bottom, and then let your boat drift or power back slowly to set it. You need at least five feet of anchor line for every foot of distance from your deck to the sea floor. Wind or waves cause the ratio to increase to 7:1 (anchor line:depth of water). For example, in 20 feet of water, you'll need between 100 and 140 feet of line to anchor, depending upon the weather conditions

"Goodbye, Lover" is set in contemporary Los Angeles, a place obsessed with image and money. A place where outward appearances matter more than inner Sandra Dunmore (Patricia Arquette), is at the center of a storm of overlapping relationships and betrayals.

She's the wife to one brother. Jake (Dermot Mulroney), and mistress to another, Ben (Don Johnson). Sandra's on her way up, but her ad exec husband. Jake, is on ward spirai flailing in a morass of alcoholism.

Sandra and Jake aren't the only people who want things in this city of unfulfilled dreams. Jake's older brother Ben, a spin doctor and high-powered public relations executive, wants to preserve his access to the good life. And there's Peggy Blaine, (Mary-Louise Parker) a seemingly innocent bystander in the charade of power brokers and posers at the brothers high-powered public relations firm.

They're all young, beautiful and openly avaricious. But then it's the '90s; who doesn't feel entitled to having it all, especially when it's all tantalizingly within reach?

These players all scheme and plot to inherit a $4 million dollar insurance policy.

Seeing inrough everyone's agendas is Rita Pompano (Ellen DeGeneres), a heard-it-all-before detective who just may have all their numbers.

"Goodbye Lover" is a wry look at life. It is rated "R."

Solid pitching, timely home runs leave Mustangs 4-0

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

Making nothing look easy, the Northville baseball team ecked out a pair of wins last week on the diamond against Plymouth Salem and South Lyon.

Against the Rocks, Rob Reel and Andy Borda kept the Mustangs in the game, as the bats were silenced through the first four innings. Reel started the game and went 42/3 innings, allowing two runs and striking Trailing 1-0 in the top of the fifth, Northville pulled even on a RBI-double by Bryan Shields. Kevin Justusson, who drew a one-out walk, shd under the tag and tied the game at 1-1.

After falling behind 2-1 heading into the top of the sixth inning. Northville exploded for three runs to take a decisive 4-2 lead. Brian Boyes drew a one-out walk and advanced to 2nd on Tim Edict's single. Reel worked the count to 3 and 1 before launching his third three-run homer of the year.

"He worked the count to his advantage, and sat back. He didn't try to pull it." coach Mickey Newman said. "It was more of a line drive out there about 420

Borda pitched the last 2 1/3 innings to get the win for Northville (4-0 overall). Salem actually outhit Northville 5 to 3.

The Mustangs let the Lions back in this one, but held on to get a narrow 7-6 non-conference victory in the season opener April 13.

Northville scored two runs in the first inning on a Edict double that scored Evan Edwards and Boyes. The Stangs tripled that score with four more in the Shields doubled to get things going, and Matt Zumstein followed with a hard single to left to put nuiners on first and second. Edwards picked up a RBI smgle and Boyes hit a two-run double. Reel completed the scoring with a two-out RBI single that scored Boxes.

South Lyon picked up a pair of runs in the next half inning to pull to within three at 6-3. Northville would add another run in the fifth on a groundout by Tourny

South Lyon scored three in the sexth inning on a three-run honer, but Justin Waineo came in and struck out the side in the top of the seventh to get his first save of the season.

Edwards finished 2 for 2 with two walks, two runs and two stolen bases. Zumstein was 2 for 3. Junior Matt Hare started the game and picked up the win for Northville, going four inmings and allowing just one nur

Soccer team falls to Canton, but plays with ranked Chiefs

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

Optimism is starting to build up as the Northville soccer team continued its strong early-season play this past week.

The Mustangs lost to Plymouth Canton Monday afternoon, 2-0, but were not overmatched against the ranked Chiefs. Canton scored a goal midway through each half, but could not pull away from Northville.

"I think we played one of our toughest games we'll play this year. Northyille coach Doug Lyon said. I was extremely happy because we played extremely aggressive. We took it to them."

The Mustangs had their shots at the goal, but were unable to break through. Larisa Fill had a shot in the first half that hit the crossbar and was cleared out by Canton. Maggie Ossola nearly scored as well in the first. Angela Maile's shot midway through the second half hit the crossbar, but again Northville was denied.

We did the things we needed to do, but we missed a couple of times and we made a few mental mistakes and they capitalized on them." Lyon said.

Sophomore Alex Katona started in goal for Northville, and made three key saves to keep the score close. She kept us in the game, and that's what we need from our goalies this year." the coach said.

NVILLE 7, SOUTH LYON 6

N'VILLE 7. SOUTH LYON 1

Venturing out of conference to take on the Lions sounded offensively appealing to the Mustangs last Freshman Lindsay Dunmead scored four goals to lead the attack. Brigid Bowdell, Fill and Carrie Wasalaski each added a goal in the win.

Defensively. Lyon was pleased with the play of junior defensive halfback Laura Kozub and defenseman Lorianne Blair.

"Laura was hurt before the season, and she's improving everyday. She's really stepping it up for Lyon said.

On April 14, Northville struggled, but pulled out a 3-1 win over Walled Lake Central at home. Fill had two goals and Bowdell added the last goal for the Mustangs (3-1-1 overall).

Yesterday Northville traveled to Westland to take on John Glenn (after The Northville Record's deadline) Monday the team hosts Farmington with the game beginning at 7 p.m.

HomeTown's first, second teams clearly the cream of the crop

HomeTown's all-area team includes (I to r) Matt Nelson, Gary Neighbors, Joe Kofahl, Brett Allen and Dan Bahr.

This year's all-area first team speaks to the fact that one of the biggest turnarounds in the state happened in our own backyard, at South Lyon. For their efforts - the KVC title and a Class A district championshiop — the Lions have been rewarded with two spots on this hon-

That's not the only thing new. Though familiar in the KVC, having played at Brighton, this year Northville's Brett Allen made his move in the Western Lakes, and did it well.

With the exception of South Lyon, the rest of the KVC defined parity. Which shouldn't be confused with mediocrity, as the skills of the two final selections — Lakeland's Dan Bahr and Milford's Joe Kofahl -- can attest.

Brett Allen Northville senior

A senior transfer from Brighton High School, Allen led his team in several statistical categories this past season.

Three games into the season. Allen (6-foot-6) was moved from the post to the point, and responded with Grant Hill type numbers. He averaged 13.5 points, 6.1 rebounds and his 7.8 assists per game was far and away tops in the

"He had never played the point before, so he was kind of hesitant at first," his coach Scott Baldwin said. *But he sees the court better than anyone. He was an emotional leader on the

Allen has received attention from local colleges, but he has kept in touch with two Division I schools in the south (UNC at Wilmington and Tennessee Chattanooga).

"He's a player, no question about that," Baldwin said. He's comparable with any of the best kids we've ever had at Northville."

Dan Bahr

Lakeland senior

Upon further review, it turns out that Bahr was actually the leading scorer in the area, as he averaged averaged 19 points per game. His 379 points were 15 more than Howell's Eric

A strong driver capable of getting his shots off inside, you could depend on Bahr for those 20 almost every night. His high game was 28 points and he only once dipped out of doublefigures. Better still was his knack for coming up with buckets in crunch time, during which a lot of kids aren't so eager to take responsibility.

Bahr's contributions weren't limited to offense, as he was also Lakeland's second-leading rebounder.

Joe Kofahl

Milford junior

It might've taken casual viewers all of a minute to recognize that Kofahl was the most talented and well-rounded player on the Milford squad. He was the Redskins' most consistent offensive threat during a season in which the point-making was sometimes erratic. Kofahl was Milford's leading scorer with an average of 12.9 points per game. He was second on the team in rebounding at 5.6 per game. He shot 73 percent from the foul line (best on the team), including a memorable instance when Kofahl's free throw sent the Lakeland game into overtime, with his team ultimately winning. He was just as good in those teams' first matchup. sinking nine-of-11 in the fourth quarter to secure the win.

Gary Neighbors South Lyon senior

A repeat first-team selection, last season Neighbors drew accolades for his huge scoring performances. He can still score the ball, no doubt, but Neighbors' all-around game made real strides as a senior.

"He's a great pure scorer," South Lyon coach Daren Clayton said. "He has really grown in terms of defense and understanding team con-

Neighbors averaged 16 points, 4.6 rebounds. and 2.6 assists per game, while shooting 45.6 percent from the field and 76.5 percent from the stripe.

Nelson's stats speak to his versatilty and value: 14.8 points per game, three assists and three rebounds a game, 59.8 percent from the floor, 79.8 percent from the line.

Northville remains undefeated after a 4-0 win over Churchill

"Last year that would have us...but this year almost all been a bad thing for

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

Coming off a season that saw the team win just four games, the last thing Northville softball coach Corey Lipson wanted for her young team was a twoweek delay in the start of the season.

But after the first three games of the season, all of that is long-since forgotten. Northville is 3-0 and has allowed just three runs in those wins and posted two shutouts.

The most recent win came Monday afternoon, 4-0 over divirival Churchill. Sophomore Maureen Emaus pitched a complete-game four of the girls are back and hitter to get her third win of the season. She walked just two and Our experience is paying struck out 11.

The Mustangs scored two runs in each the second and fifth innings. Famiko and Makiko Kawamura scored in the second inning on Emaus' triple before Northville put the Chargers away in the fifth. Junior Jenny Caverly led off the inning with a double. After Natalie Wooderson singled, senior Amanda Rice knocked in Caverly with a RBI single. One out later Famiko Kawamura's single scored Jackie Magnusson, who reached on a fielder's choice.

The Chargers made an attempt at a comeback in the fifth inning, loading the bases with one out, but Northville went to home plate on two consecutive grounders to stop the rally.

"Last year that would have been a bad thing for us." Lipson said. "But this year almost all of the girls are back and our experience is paying off."

N'VILLE 2, SALEM 0

With little room for error in this conference matchup. Emaus again pitched a gem for the Mustangs. The sophomore went the distance, allowing just three hits and three walks while striking out 10 Rocks.

"She's been doing a great job for us this year." Lipson said of her ace. "Amanda (Rice) and her have a thing down and are working well together. That's good to see because last year us coaches had to make all the decisions, but Maureen is calling the pitches this year."

Northville scored one of its runs in the first and the other in the fourth. Caverly started off the first with a single. Wooderson sacrificed Caverly to second and one out later Rice came through with a RBI triple to make it 1-0.

It would stay that way until the fourth. With one out, Rice singled and Famiko Kawamura reached base on an error. After an out, Makiko singled in Rice to give Northville an insurance run.

Emaus carried a no-hitter into the sixth inning before the Lions broke free for three runs on three hits. But the Mustangs maintained a 4-3 lead and Emaus rebounded to pitch a scoreless seventh.

Rice had a pair of hits and two RBI to lead Northville offensively.

Northville is 2-0 in conference play and 1-0 in the division. It traveled to Farmington yesterday (after The Northville Records' deadline) and will host Canton tomorrow. Saturday the team will compete in the Plymouth Salem Invitational.

Basketball second team diversified

If parity defined the play of the Kensington Valley Conference this past season, it did not include the list of players below.

The players on this year's second team are pared only within this group. They were still among the best on their teams, and in some cases, the best.

The second team has a guard, two forwards and a center, showing the diversity of talent at all positions.

Here's a look at HomeTown's second team, as selected by HomeTown sports editors with imput from coaches.

Randy Duncan South Lyon junior

What stood out about Duncan's game was his fearlessness. Twice a week he went toe-to-toe with the other teams' big men, sometimes half a foot taller, without once blinking. Duncan averaged 8.9 points and 6.9 rebounds per Jason Maes Lakeland senior Maes really turned it on down the stretch, become perhaps the KVC's best true big man.

Maes was a true defensive presence in the paint, blocking 2.6 shots a game. He averaged 7.5 rebounds per game and shot 65 percent from the field, good for first-team All-KVC honors.

Mike Tobin Milford junior

Tobin made the most of his chance at early playing time, turning the opportunity into secondteam All-KVC recognition at the end of the season.

The junior big man scored 11.3 points per game while leading Milford in rebounds - 6.9 per game — and field goal percentage - 59 percent.

Larry Drury

season for the 11-11 Wildcats. The senior guard played at both guard positions this year, but still managed to score 11.0 points per game.

He led the team in assists and scored a season-high 24 points against Saline. He was an all-KVC second-team selection.

"He was the guy who played 99 percent of the game, because he just didnit come out." Novi coach Pat Schluter said. When he played well, the outcome was usually

Kyle Snearly Novi forward

"Heis a very dedicated player and a hard worker," Schluter said. "His A first-team all-area selection last stats donit tell you just how good season. Druryis role changed this he was. He was our best leader.

Still undefeated... Thanks to the solid pitching of Rob Reel, Matt Hare, Justin Waineo and Andy Borda (above), the Northville baseball team has jumped out to a 4-0 record this year. This past week the Mustangs defeated Salem, South Lyon and Churchill on Monday, 8-1. Results of Monday's game will appear in next week's edition.

Golfers break school record

By JASON SCHMITT Sports Editor

The scores were in mid-season form. Well, actually the scores were in a form never before seen at Northville High School.

The Mustang golf team set a team record by shooting a 190 against Novi last Thursday. defeating the Wildcats 190-215 in their season opener. Three Northville golfers broke 50. Meridian (44). Kate MacDonald shot a 45 and Jennie Church snuck in with a 49. Senior Becky Rankin rounded out the scoring with a 52.

But the team didn't stop there. Although their scores did not count towards the team score. Jessie Mills had a 53 and Heather Rudy added a 55.

Tossing out a 53 and 55 is a good sign," a pleased Northville coach Trish Murray said. "I'm really happy with a 190. It seems like you have to break 200 these days to be able to walk away with year, this score is not a fluke. they're very capable of it."

The score broke a six-year-old team record of 192 set in 1993.

Murray said she thinks her team can do even better.

"I've really been hounding them on their putting," she said. "Even with a score of 190, I had some girls come to me and say they could have putted better."

The rainy-day win was the lone contest for Northville last week. Monday the team played at Plymouth Salem and Wednesday the Stangs were at Livonia Stevenson (both after The Northville Records' deadline). Today the team hosts Grosse Isle and will compete at the South Lyon Invitational Saturday.

experience is important but so is hard work and off-season dedication.

So when the Mustangs took on Novi in the season-opener April 13, the experience factor didn't play a part in Northville's 5-3 win. Novi had 11 seniors in their 12-man lineup. Northville had two seniors, three juniors and seven freshmen and sophomores.

Experience doesn't mean a thing if you're making mistakes," Novi coach Jim Hanson said. "The kids were down on themselves after the loss, but I just think Northville came ready to play and beat us.

And it was the Mustangs doubles crew that took charge in the match. All four teams won in straight sets, reheving some of the pressure put on the outmatched singles lineup.

Kyle Wargo and Brian Wilson took out Novi's Amit Nagar and Tim Torosian at one doubles 6-3, 6-2. The next two flights finished off their Wildcats opponents in similar fashion.

Kris Betker and Mark Thomson topped Tom Messink and Clayton Perry 6-2. 6-4 and Brian Arndt and Dan Drake toppled Sean Henderson and Geoff Wang by the same score at three

Rob Reel - Senior

The senior pitcher/first baseman pitched 4 2/3 innings in Northville's 4-2 win over Salem last week. At the plate he cracked a three-run homer to give his team the lead for good. He had a two-out RBI single in a 7-6 win over South Lyon. For the season, Reel has 10 runs batted in, nine of them coming off three 3-run homers.

Maureen Emaus - Sophomore

With a season under her belt at the varsity level, Emaus has shown veteran leadership on the mound for the girls' softball team this spring.

The sophomore has two shutouts in three starts this season, and had a no hitter through five innings in a 4-3 win over South Lyon April 13. She collected eight strikeouts in that Against Churchill Monday, Emaus collected 11 strikeouts while allowing just four hits and two walks. That followed up a complete-game three-hit shutout of Salem Wednesday.

Can new diet lower blood pressure?

A simple but revolutionary diet can lower potentially deadly high blood pressure without reducing the joys of eating.

Known as Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension (DASH), the eating plan has been shown to reduce hypertension with the same effect as medications used by people with high blood pressure.

One in four Americans has high blood pressure, which is an overexertion of blood flow on the body's arteries. Lest untreated, high blood pressure damages the artery walls and can lead to kidney disease, stroke, heart disease and death. It is a silent killer, with no symptoms and no underlying cause.

The DASH diet is welcome news to both researchers and people battling high blood pressure. It offers a reduction of or alternative to medications, which may cause side effects, while not forcing people to cut out favorite foods from their diets.

"What appeals to people about the DASH diet is that they're not asked to lose weight. They are not asked to increase their exercise. They're not asked, yet again, to decrease the sodium in their diet, which is very, very hard - especially if you eat in a restaurant or cafeteria setting." says Lynn Glazewski, a registered dietitian with the University of Michigan Health System.

"So, this diet appeals to people because it eliminates all the negatives and really focuses on the positives.

Researchers estimate that heart disease cases would drop 15 percent and strokes would plunge 27 percent if the U.S. population's blood pressure was reduced to the levels seen with the DASH diet.

The DASH diet is rich in vegetables, fruits and lowfat dairy foods. it is also low in saturated and total fats. It emphasizes treating meat as one component of a meal, rather than the centerpiece with other dishes added around it.

A diet low in saturated fat, complemented with an increase in fruits, vegetables and dairy products, provides the perfect combination for lowering blood pressure. It offers the benefits of a vegetarian diet, with enough meat to make it an attractive plan for most people.

"The unique feature of the DASH diet is it permits you to eat good foods, and eating good foods in certain combinations we know will lower your blood pressure." says Margaret Scisney-Matlock, an assistant professor of nursing at U-M.

The benefits of the DASH diet can be seen within one week and reach maximum effect after two weeks. Blood pressure remains stable as long as the patient remains on the diet.

The nice thing about the DASH diet is that.

unlike diets prescribed to people in the past. this is not an elimination diet." says Glazewski. "It recommends eating more fruits. more vegetables, more other things; as people pay attention to increasing those foods in their diet, they leave some of the other foods by the wayside.

Not only does the DASH diet lower blood pressure, it also can reduce the related risks of heart disease, certain types of cancer, and

*Untreated, uncontrolled blood pressure, even for as little as six months, can result in increased risk for heart disease, renal failure and stroke, as well as coexisting with diabetes," says Scisney-Matlock. "So the problem is not just one disease, one condition. It's actually systemic - it affects all of our organs."

The DASH diet was originally part of a nationwide research study by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. Others ways to lower blood pressure include reducing salt intake, drinking less alcohol, losing weight and

Second drywall layer will bring peace of mind

By Gene Gary COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. We live in a townhouse with a common wall separating two single-family units. Our problem is noise from the next-door neighbors. It's a very annoying problem. We are wondering if there is anything we can install on the common wall to help soundproof our home?

A. Since I have received a number of inquines lately concerning this widespread problem. I'll repeat some of the information previously covered in this column.

A quick way to improve the sound resistance is to use a manufacturer's recommended adhesive to attach a second layer of drywall over the original (preferably your neighbor's side of the wall as well as yours). If the first layer of drywall is installed vertically, the new layer should be installed horizontally, and vice versa.

If your unit has plaster finish on the walls, remove the plaster finish and install two layers of drywall. You can include the installation of a sound-deadening board under the drywall to gain further noise protection. If you have the room, added soundproofing can be gained by nailing furring strips to the first drywall layer and putting insulation between the strips before attaching the second layer of drywall.

These methods will do a lot to block sound transmission through the wall. However, the best way to achieve sound resistance is to build a free standing wall two inches away from the existing one, which leaves a dead airspace and provides a barrier to traveling sounds. This requires five to six inches of floor space. In construction of the second wall, it is important that there is no connection between it and the existing wall. The framing of the second wall should be from wall to wall and ceiling to floor, leaving one to two inches of dead air space as a buffer for sound transmission. A blanket of insulation between the framing members will provide even more protection.

Additional protection can also be gained by installing resilient metal channels to the studs of the new (second) wall. These channels are installed horizontally and screwed to the studs. The drywall is attached to the opposite side of the channel.

Although builders frequently use these, they are not always readily available in hardware stores or home supply centers. You may have to check with a building supply dealer.

Q. We have textured walls which we would like to convert to a smooth surface. Do you have any recommendations on how to change these walls?

A. It's not an easy task. However, there is a product on the market, "Texture-Off," marketed by the Wm. Zinsser & Co. It works like a paint stripper and will remove most textured materials from walls and ceilings. A wet-on-wet technique is recommended. Roll on one coat of the stripper on using a thick-napped roller. Wait two hours, then roll on another coat. Let this set overnight and then scrape it off. It's a messy. difficult task. Consider the magnitude of such a project before you tackle this job. If you need more information, contact Wm. Zinsser & Co., 39 Belmont Drive, Somerset, NJ 08875, phone (908) 469-4585, fax (908) 563-9774.

IN OUR MAIL

The following letter was received in response to a column on repair of scratches in laminated countertops, where it was recommended that painting and scratch repair was not a feasible option. I am happy to pass along this manufacturer's information on new products. The porcelain repair kit mentioned in his letter is one I have used successfully in past projects of my own.

From Barry Dinetz, president, Kit Industries:
I had the opportunity to read your recent column entitled "Don't Try To Repaint Countertop Surfaces."

In your column you not only address the issue of laminate-plastic counter tops, but also the dilemma of old, chipped porcelain bathtubs. I wanted to make you aware of the products that we manufacture.

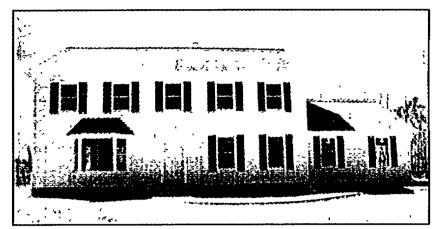

PORC-a-FIX Porcelain Touch-Up Glaze is a product we market today that matches the color specifications of all the major porcelain fixture manufacturers. In addition, we not only match currently manufactured colors, but colors the manufacturers discontinued years ago. We never discontinue a color. So, in the situation where your reader might have a 30-year-old tub that is chipped in one or several places, but otherwise in good shape, they can obtain that color of PORC-a-FIX to repair the chip, and avoid a complete refinishing or expensive liner. This product will work on all porcelain fixtures including tubs. sinks, toilets, washers, dryers and kitchen appliances. It can also be used on tile, and for small repairs, on fiberglass or acrylic tubs and showers.

Our product, LAMINATE-FIX, is designed for plastic laminate surfaces. It is based upon the same idea of providing an exact or close color match to avoid refinishing or replacing. It can be used on countertops, backsplashes, cabinet facings, table tops, vanities, furniture, virtually any plastic laminate surface, to repair nicks, chips, scratches, burns, small cracks and minor imperfections. It comes in specific matte finish and high-gloss finish colors which match major brands of plastic laminate.

Our products are available in hardware stores and departments, as well has home supply centers nationwide. If your reader is looking for a color or dealer in their area, they can call us at (800) 526-3186.

Send e-mail to copleysd(at)copleynews.com or write to Here's How, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 120190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190. Only questions of general interest can be answered in the column.

Nothing tips off that this Hamburg home's walls are concrete rather than the traditional wood structure.

Concrete walls offer many advantages

By Annette Jaworski SPECIAL WRITER

If someone said you could save up to 40 percent on your heating and cooling would they have your attention? And if you heard those same changes would also make the home quieter, sturdier and safer, would you be interested?

There's a unique method of construction that promises just that - savings on heating and cooling as well as safety and durability. It uses concrete to form walls, and occasionally floors.
Rick Gardener of R&G Construction in

Pinckney just completed one of the first homes in the area, a 2.280 square foot colonial, using the Reward Wall System. Here's how it works:

To create the exterior walls, the concrete is poured between eight inch foam forms, three to four feet at a time, to prevent blowouts. (The weight of the concrete gets too heavy, and forms can burst if poured all at once.)

The post and beam construction saves the homeowner about 25 percent on the cost of the concrete, without compromising the strength.

Re-rod also runs through the concrete for added reinforcement. The foam becomes part of the concrete, and adds to the insulation value.

With this type of construction, you end up with an insulation value of approximately R22.

Partner in the project. Leonard LaChance from Hornet Concrete in South Lyon, points out how soundproof the home is.

"It's awful quiet. It's so heavily insulated, the walls are 11 inches thick." LaChance said.

Another reason the material is so energy efficient is because of its dense thermal mass. It takes longer to cool off in the winter, and longer to heat up in the summer, saving heating and cooling

As far as safety goes, the material is unmatched. The material was tested for protection against hurricanes and tornadoes by hurling a two by four piece of lumber at the wall 100 miles per hour.

It remained intact.

The biggest selling points for using concrete, however, are energy efficiency and conservation, says Gardener. Construction costs do run about 10 to 15 percent higher, however those costs are quickly made up in energy savings.

Listing agent Kathleen Layson of ERA in South Lyon says 'homeowners will be impressed that it's not using up all those trees."

Other added bonuses: You don't have to worry about fluctuating lumber prices. The foundations and walls won't rust, rot or burn, and termites will not be a problem.

As far as coordinating with other building trades, there hasn't been a major problem. The electricians use a router or Stanley knife to tuck wires into the foam wall. And there are "slots" in the post and beam construction that can be used to screw and glue on drywall. Any finish can be used on the exterior as well.

Gardener says. They come in skeptical...but it's all been very positive."

Home exchanges are growing in popularity

By James M. Woodard

One little-known benefit of home ownership is the opportunity to exchange homes with another family in an area you'd like to visit.

In other words, instead of flying to a vacation destination point and renting a hotel or resort unit, you simply exchange the use of your home for another home at that destination locale. Typically, no money is exchanged. And sometimes the exchange includes use of a car. boat or other items

Obviously, thousands of dollars that would have gone to a hotel or resort can be saved by such an arrangement. Most home exchanges are for 2 to 4 week periods. Sometimes it's for just a weekend.

Weekend exchanges are becoming increasingly popular. It allows people to enjoy a short getaway stay at nearby places and relax in a nome atmosphere.

All types of homes are being used in exchanges single-family homes, condos, townhomes, villas, cotages, cabins - even boats and mobile homes.

Surprisingly, very few problems result from home exchanges. The vast majority of participants are honest and respect the other person's property. In fact, they often leave a *appreciation gift" at the home before returning to their bwn residence.

In some cases, the exchanging parties become permanent friends, corresponding by mail or e-mail

In addition to the money-saving advantage. many people say they like home exchanging because it provides a "non-tourist experience" of living in someone's real home. They get to know the country and region firsthand. It's like becoming a native, as opposed to a tourist.

Another advantage is enjoying the comforts of home - a real home. Most homes offer many conveniences not found in hotels, such as a VCR, recreational equipment, games, music, separate bedroom and bathrooms, kitchens, microwaves, etc.

Also, the opportunity to enjoy home-cooked meals should be considered, along with the substantial savings compared with restaurant eating.

While few problems have surfaced in home exchanging, it's just good sense to carefully screen and select a co-exchanger. Check references, credit reports and any other information source that might generate significant data. Then construct and sign a simple but comprehensive written agreement, covering all key aspects of the arrangement.

The best way to find a possible home for exchanging is to access one of several home exchanging Web sites on the Internet. Here you will find directories of homes available for exchanging at points throughout the world.

You can, of course, list your own home with one or more of these directories. In some cases, there is no fee required for listing a home. But there are many plan variations offered by home exchanging networks, so it pays to shop around.

To find these Web sites, search for "home exchanging" on any or several Internet search

Interesting reader comment:

"I enjoyed your column on the subject of telecommunities. One issue I would love to see addressed is the problem of CC&Rs (covenants, conditions and restrictions) that prohibit homeowners from engaging in any professional or business activities on the property.

My wife and I are in the process of buying a home in Ventura (Calif.) and discovered the builder's CC&Rs for the tract from 23 years ago has a clause prohibiting 'any trade, business, professional or commercial activity of any kind or nature whatsoever.

"At this point, we see little choice but to cancel our purchase or take our business underground. We thought we might try to change or remove the CC&Rs, but there appears to be no way to remove them. Both the development company and 75 percent of residents must sign off on the changes. Obtaining that many signatures would be next to impossible even if they all were in agreement.

"It seems rather ridiculous that the original partners in the development company still retain control over the neighborhood through an 'Architecture Committee' composed only of themselves. They can resign but cannot be removed, and they are allowed to appoint their own successors.

The CC&Rs vest in this committee the right to enter onto any property without the owner's permission, it even states that they can remove from the property, at the owner's expense, any items they feel are not in compliance with the CC&Rs.

'I'm sure this situation is not unique to this tract, as this CC&R appears to be a boilerplate format.

The writer. Jess Stryker, brings out a very important point. When you're considering the purchase of a home in a development controlled by a homeowners association and subject to CC&Rs, read all documents carefully before signing a purchase agreement - especially if you are among the increasing number of people who plan to work from your new

What's a chifforobe, chifforette and a chiffonier

By Anne McCollam COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. I have enclosed a photo of an old chifforobe that belonged to my grandmother. It is made of walnut and in excellent condition. On the back is a paper label with the words Blackhawk Furniture Company, Rockford, Ill."

I would appreciate any help you can give me regarding its age and

A. It's not unusual for similarsounding terms to be confusing. Chifforobe, chifforette and chiffonier are at the top of the list.

A chiffonier is a tall narrow chest of drawers, sometimes with an attached mirror. It originated in France and flourished in Victorian times. Ladies used them to store needlework and delicate fabrics. The French word for small bits of cloth is chiffon, thus the

A chifforobe is a bedroom chest characterized by drawers behind a door on one side and a space to hang clothes behind a door on the other

A chifforette is also a bedroom chest. As a rule, there are double doors at the top that open to reveal trays that slide out. At the lower portion there are one or two draw-

All things considered, your chest can be identified as a chifforette.

Next, we need to establish the style. The cabriole legs and hardware suggest the design was inspired by Colonial furniture. You have a Colonial Revival-style chifforette made in the early 1900s. Its value would probably be about $245 to $345.

A. Suzy Homemaker ovens were first seen around 1964 and were very popular. It would probably be worth around $50 to $75.

Q. I have a china humidor in the shape of a head of an African-American jockey. My mother told me her brothers saved their pennies to buy it for their father as a gift. The cap can be removed for storing tobacco and he has a white high collar and green bow tie. His cap is multicolored with a white peak. There is no mark with the exception of several numbers.

Although I have seen black memorabilia at antique shows, I have never seen one like this. Can you tell me if there is any value to my treasured heirloom other than sentimental?

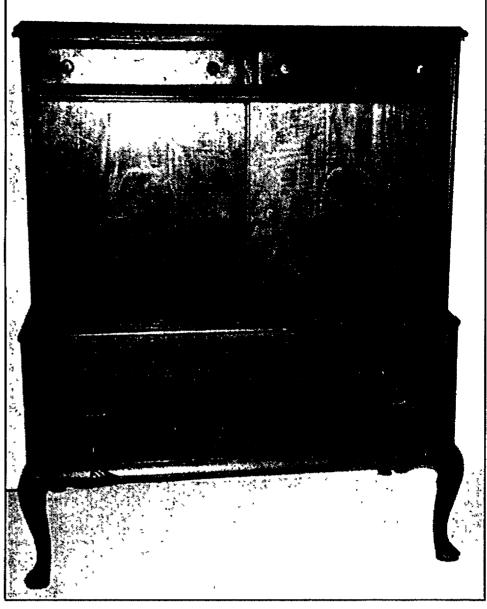

A. Collecting black memorabilia is a rapidly growing field of interest to collectors. Early good examples are becoming scarce. They represent an era of American culture that fostered a shocking, negative and often derogatory attitude.

Many examples from times gone by have ended up in private collections and museums. Some serious collectors are known not to quibble over values. Your early 1900s humidor would probably be worth about $400 to $600.

Check out Marsh Power Tools in New Hudson

By Annette Jaworski

If you're serious about tools, you'll want to check out Marsh . Power Tools in New Hudson.

From contractors to do it yourselfers, customers will find everything, from drill bits to edgebanding machinery used in industrial machine shops for cabinets. Their large selection attracts customers ranging from the handyman to the Big Three Automakers.

A walk through their doors will tell you, this is no home and garden center. There are no paint aisles to go to, or a line up at the cash register.

What you will find are walls lined with tools, and more tools. This includes power fasteners, radial arm saws, and all the basics, like circular saws, drill and rotary hammers. Look for the entire line of quality brands from Bosch. Porter Cable and DeWalt.

But even more important than the selection, is the experience they provide when you purchase a tool. Marsh Power Tools has more than 60 years of experience to back their inventory.

We're here to service the customer." said owner Chris Pederson.

"We want him back. If we don't have the tool he wants, we'll get it

Originally based in Livonia, the company expanded to serve their suburban customers to the west.

Partners Chris Pedersen, Ronald Pedersen and Mark Streicher opened the doors in October last year. They're proud of the selection and product knowledge that Marsh

"We have the depth of inventory (other stores) don't have. We carry all of (a manufacturer's) line, not just a few products. But the biggest advantage we have to offer is our service," Pedersen said.

And dealing with the customer face to face also helps Marsh to battle its second competitor, the mail order companies, where you only get to talk to someone on the phone.

Other important services include repair, sharpening and factoryauthorized services.

We can sharpen anything, saw blades, chain saw blades, lawn mower blades, scissors and knives. You could call us a complete sharpening center." Pedersen said.

Sharpening services take about a week, repair services take approximately a week and a half, depending on availability of parts. Factory authorized service is a big convenience because it saves the customer the hassle of sending back the repair or looking for somewhere to repair it. For the few lines for which Marsh is not a factory authorized dealer, it can arrange to have the repair done for the customer by the nearest dealer.

Air collection and dust collection systems can be found at the business. These collect the sawdust and debris while woodwork. ing, rather than releasing it into the air. Not only is it more healthy, it makes clean-up so much easier.

Streicher points out the location is perfect for one stop shopping for contractors and do-it-yourselfers. with close proximity to Lee Wholesale and New Hudson Lumber.

We complement each other well," he adds. Marsh Power Tools was an exhibitor at the Novi Expo Center during the recent Woodworking Show. Find all the tools you can dream of at 56330 Grand River Ave. in New Hudson, next to the New Hudson Food Market. You can contact them at (248) 437-8000. Or visit the original location at 20579 Middlebelt in Livonia.

Marsh Power Tools is located at 56330 Grand River Ave., in New Hudson. The business has a wide selection of power tools to rent, for contractors and homeowners alike.

The Hilton BounceBack Weekend

When asked about the importance the chance to wind down, relax and of their own needs in relation to others in their lives, only the boss and the family pet ranked lower on the priority scale of Americans.

In fact, in a survey conducted by Hilton, only about one-seventh (14 percent) of people polled put themselves ahead of those they love. With so much attention given to others, there comes a time when people need to do unto themselves. Vacations seem to be one of the few times of the year when people are willing to recognize the importance of free time and put themselves first," said Don Rose, general manager of the Hilton Novi.

To help facilitate this all-tooimportant downtime. Hilton hotels offer the Hilton BounceBack Weekend. The weekend offer gives guests
