Welcome back

Parents, kids excited as new school year begins

By MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Some of life's greatest sensory memories happen within the first few days of school.

For instance, the smell of a fresh box of Crayolas as pudgy fingers proudly mash their points into a new smooth sheet of paper. The gooey glee that Elmer's produces when mixed with the right amount of imagination and construction paper.

For Northville's youngsters, Monday was their first taste, touch, smell and sound of a brand new school year.

The Kindergarten class at Moraine stood at the door of the school with a mix of anticipation and anxiety for what lay beyond the doors. The big kids on safety patrol, veterans at this first day of school thing, tried to put the little ones at ease by offering to play games with them before they went in. However, it was the parents who were having the hardest time with the first day.

"I told my son that when he goes away to college I hope that he has a nice dorm room so that I'll be comfortable," joked Debbie Lockey with a tear in her eye. "You get kind of attached to the little boogers."

Nancy Raynes, principal at Winchester Elementary said that her experience, the first day of school is harder on the parents than it is on the kids.

Bankes ends inquiry into Nield charges

Prosecutor claims investigation of Nield was launched based on a rumor of wrongdoing.

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

A Wayne County board of commissioners member said she has no choice but to end her investigation into possible abuse of power by the prosecutor's office.

Lyn Bankes, Wayne County commissioner who represents Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township, said a letter she received from John O'Hair, Wayne County prosecutor, puts an end to her investigation. She was trying to determine whether or not employees of the prosecutor's office had abused their office and caused an unneccary five-month investigation into Northville businessman Jim Nield.

Many questions still remain unanswered though.

"He's a reputable person who feels he's conducted a thorough investigation," she said. "I have no choice but to take his word in this case."

Bankes received the letter after she questioned O'Hair at a Wayne County Ways and Means Committee meeting about the possibility that a member of the Wayne County Prosecutor's office was possibly abusing his office.

Township prepares for Y2K emergencies with response plan

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Huge celebrations and parties undoubtedly are in store for the upcoming New Year's Eve.

However, some Northville Township employees will bring in the next century on the clock, ready to battle any emergencies that may or may not happen.

The on-call workers are part of Northville Township's Y2K contingency plan, which was recently released by the township board of trustees.

"It's anyone's guess what's going to happen that night," said Thelma Kubitskey, finance director of the township. "But we want to

Y2K READY

The township Y2K plan is as follows:
Administration: in the event of a critical emergency there will be personnel available to answer questions on the (248) 348-5800 telephone lines.
Public safety strategy: there will be three patrol cars and two dispatchers on duty. The department will upgrade to storm readiness stand-by for the fire department. Station No. 2 will house four paid-on-call firefighters.
Water and sewer: two water and sewer personnel will be on duty at the command post from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m. The remainder of the staff will be on call at their homes.

Yearly school report released by district

By MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

It's out with the old and in with the new for Northville Public Schools.

Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski as well as the rest of the central office administration released their annual end of the year report at the Aug. 24 school board meeting.

Rezmierski had nothing but praise for the way his staff handled the often-trying and always-challenging tasks of the previous year.

"There is no question where the buck stops," he said. "They are glue that holds us together."

The superintendent was happy to see the year end with the settling of the three lawsuits plaguing the District. In the first, Zaas vs. Northville Public Schools — which Rezmierski believed was one that should never have taken place. — a parent accused a member of the faculty of abusing a student at Amerman Elementary School. The court found in favor of the district on all counts.

Rezmierski commended the Township fire officials expect rise in activity

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

All the training in the world couldn't prepare Northville Township Fire Department for two explosions - of population and traffic.

Rapid population growth coupled with more traffic flow due to construction on surrounding highways in the township has led to a higher-than-expected increase in the number of runs made by the township fire department and rescue squads. Additionally, the township is conducting more inspections on buildings than ever as they continue to sprout up around the township.

Chip Snider, Northville Township director of public safety, said projected allocations of money from the township board of trustees should adequately fund fire department needs.

But there are other problems the increased activity creates, which puts more and more of a strain on department workers and equipment, said Bill Zhmendak, Northville Township Fire Department chief.

"Three years ago we made the projection we would hit 2,000 runs a year in 2001," he said. "But that was just based on population. We didn't know so much road work would be going on around us."

EVELYN R. GRONKOWSKI

Evelyn R. Gronkowski, age 86, died Aug. 16 in Plymouth. The Northville resident was born April 6, 1913 in Manistee.

The homemaker will lovingly be remembered for her devotion to her family.

She is survived by her children Judith (Ernest) Buckly of Quartz Hill, California and Christine (Vaughn) Zecman of Northville; grandchildren Ann, Jeanne, Christine and Sean; great grandchildren Christine and Tyler; sisters Clara Domanski and Virginia Zinluk. She was preceded in death by her husband Casimir.

Visitation for family and friends was held at St., Kenneth Catholic Church in Plymouth and a memorial service was held Saturday, Aug. 28 at St. Kenneth Catholic Church with the Rev. Father Joseph Mallia officiating. Memorials can be sent to the Plymouth Court Nursing Home Activities Fund at 105 Haggerty Road in Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

Local arrangements by the Schrader-Howell Funeral Home in Plymouth.

ETHEL M. JARVIS

Ethel M. Jarvis, age 98, died Aug. 26 in her residence in Northville. Mrs. Jarvis was born in McEwen, Tenn. on May 13, 1901 to the late Addison B. Christian and Minnie E. Deck.

Mrs. Jarvis retired in 1965 from Detroit Plastics. She has been a resident of Northville since 1972.

Services were held August 28 at 3 p.m. in the Northrop-Sassaman Funeral Home in Northville. Monty Ocha will officiate. Interment will be in Parkview Memorial Cemetery in Livonia.

Mrs. Jarvis is survived by a daughter Dorothea R. Ocha of Northville; three grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren.

Memorials to Arbor Hospice would be appreciated.

JIM THOMPSON

James Francis Thompson died May 7 at St. Joseph Hospital in Orange, Calif. from cancer at the age of 67.

Mr. Thompson was born May 21, 1931 in St. Joseph Hospital in Ashland, Wis. His father was awarded the position as foreman of Crawford, Neb. Federal Fish Hatchery in 1935. Mr. Thompson was four years old when he, his mother Marie, brother Richard and two sisters Lois and Rita came to Crawford in September of 1935 from Mercer, Wis.

He attended school in Crawford until January of 1947 when his father was transferred to Northville's Federal Fish Hatchery. Mr. Thompson graduated Northville High School in 1948. Mr. Thompson and his wife attended his 50th class reunion.

He was in the Korean conflict serving in the Army in Korea. Upon his return he graduated from Cleary Business College in Ypsilanti. Then he enrolled in a Detroit Business College.

He was married to Carolyn McIntosh of Walled Lake on June 16, 1956 in Our Lady of Victory Church in Northville. The couple moved to Orange County, Calif. shortly afterwards where Mr. Thompson finished his college studies. Two daughters were born to the couple: Jennifer and Veronica.

He was successful in his accounting business career and soon married again to Leanne Stewart. Two sons — Steve and Mike— and a daughter, Michelle were born.

Mr. Thompson was the vice-president of a California Cities building firm and was living in Woodland Hills. The firm sent him to Albuquerque, N.M. and Colorado where he and his family lived for a few years. In the 1980s he resigned and founded Thompson Business Services in Orange.

Mr. Crawford's funeral was held in Holy Family Cathedral of Orange on May 14. He is survived by his wife Leanne; daughter Jennifer Thompson from Phoenix; son Steve (Debbie) of San Jose, Calif.; son Mike of Orange; daughter Michelle (Steve) Rowe of Corona, Calif; brother Dick Thompson of Las Vegas; sister Rita Brehmer of Adrian; mother-in-law Marilyn Steward of Launa Niguel, Calif.; brother-in-law Douglas Steward and wife of Huntington Beach, Calif.

Also in attendance were sister Lois's children and spouses: Drew and Corinne Lucas of Highland, Calif; John and Mary Lucas Helbig of Anaheim Hills, Calif.; Chrystal Hurst; granddaughter, of Prescott, Ariz.

Mr. Crawford was preceded in death by his sister Lois Lucas Smith and parents Oscar and Marie Thompson.

John Helbig, a son-in-law of his sister, Lois, was one of the pallbearers. A high mass was celebrated with five priests and a monsignor. He was very active in the parish and was involved in bookkeeping, bereavement committee and teaching.

Funeral services were arranged by Shannon-Donegan Mortuary in Orange. Burial was in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery in Orange.

ARLENE FOGLE

Arlene A. Fogle, 58, died at her home in Northville on Aug. 30.

Ms. Fogle was born Jan. 11, 1941 in Detroit. A lifelong homemaker, she was an eight-year volunteer with Angela Hospice. She is survived by her husband, Michael; daughters Stacey (Jeffrey) Laho of Canton and Kimberly (Michael) Skoglund of Williamsville, Ky.; Sister Phyllis Cole; brothers David and Paul Raben; and three grandchildren.

Visitation is scheduled for today at Vermeulen Funeral Home in Plymouth from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. A memorial service will take place Sept. 3 at 11 a.m., Rev. Neil Ellison of Ward Evangelical Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment will be in United Memorial Gardens in Plymouth.

Memorial contributions to Angela Hospice or Karmanos Cancer Institute would be appreciated.

Johnson, Ayers to seek reelection, Swigart undecided

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

One seat on the Northville city council may be up for grabs in the upcoming November election.

Thomas Swigart, current council member who has one of two seats that have terms expiring in November, hadn't decided one way or another as of Aug. 30 as to whether or not he was going to seek reelection.

However, he said he was leaning more towards seeking reelection.

"I think I'm going to do it," he said Aug. 30.

The other seat with a term that expires in November is held by Carolann Ayers. Additionally, the mayor's position, currently held by Christopher Johnson, expires in November.

Ayers and Johnson have pulled the necessary petitions to seek reelection.

Those interested in running for city council have until 5 p.m. Oct. 1 to turn in the necessary paperwork to run for city council. The paperwork includes getting nominating petition papers signed by at least 50 people and not more than 75, said Dianne Massa, Northville city clerk.

Also included in the paperwork are affidavits that must be filled out.

Those who intend to run for city council must have been residents for at least two years prior to Oct. 1 and registered to vote by Oct. 1. Additionally, he or she may not be in default on any payments to the city and can't be an incumbent of one elected position and run with the intention of holding two public offices.

Residents eligible to vote in the election must register to vote by Oct. 4 and can do so at the Northville city hall.

Andrew Dietderich may be reached via e-mail at adietderich@ht.homecomm.net.

Arthur Fischer, new Supervisor of Old Village School is excited to be starting the new school year.

Old Village School welcomes new director

By MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Not only does Arthur Fischer have a new school year to look forward to, but he also has a brand new position.

Fischer is the new supervisor of the Old Village School in downtown Northville.

With a week and a half to his credit, he is already inundated with challenges, from building renovation projects the daunting task of moving his special education students from Moraine Elementary to the Early Childhood Center, due to overcrowding.

However, Fischer barely bats an eye at such things.

"There are lots of things to do," he said calmly as he went to answer the phone that had interrupted him several times already.

After 29 years as an educator and administrator, Fisher's mettle has been more than tested. He has taught at all three education levels for the first 16 years of his career and spent 13 years in administration to both general and special education students.

Allen said he is driven by the dichotomy that is intrinsic to special education.

"It is the challenge and the sense of personal fulfillment," Allen said. "The needs of special education kids are greater . They need more support and intensity of involvement."

But Allen also said that the work, however demanding, meant something special to him.

"I wouldn't be doing this for 29 years if it wasn't personally rewarding," he said.

The program at Old Village School is what drew Allen from his former administrative position in Waterford. He said that while the programs were similar, he was impressed by Northville's established reputation for quality special education programs.

OVS houses 115 special education students from 14 districts in Wayne County. These students are referred to Old Village School after they have been diagnosed with a mental, emotional, or combination of impairments.

Furthermore, Fischer said he was impressed by the amount of parent involvement and sites this as a key factor in reaching their goals.

"Parents are the biggest allies," he said. "I want them to be a part of the goal-setting for this year."

LET'S TALK Jewelry WITH GARY S. WEINSTEIN GEMOLOGIST
PEARLS...FOR MEN
One can be forgiven for associating pearls solely with women. The fact is, though, that pearls have shown up in men's jewelry for centuries, from the courts of Europe to the Mogul Empire, to symbolize power and wealth. In more modern times, pearls have been utilized in pieces ranging from cufflinks to tie tacks and stickpins. Pearls are particularly popular in gentlemen's dress sets. And, no pearl generates as much interest in this respect as the natural black pearls from French Polynesia. Men who may balk at the thought of incorporating pearls into their jewelry wardrobes need only see the elegant statement that a black pearl dress set makes against the background of a formal white tuxedo shirt.
We invite you to come into WEINSTEIN JEWELERS OF NOVI at 41990 Grand River Ave. (248-347-0303) and to browse around through our magnificent selection of jewelry for both men and women, sure to meet your particular tastes as well as your budget. We are extremely proud of the reputation we have earned as the "Number 1" jeweler in this area. We are now licensed by the city of Novi to offer loans on jewelry. Open: Tue. & Thurs. 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Wed. & Fri. 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Sat. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Most major credit cards accepted. We are "The name you know, the name you trust."

FRAGRANCE OF THE MONTH

Police Reports

Man arrested for OUIL running red light

A 39-year-old Northville man who lived on Doheny Drive and owned a 1992 burgundy Ford was arrested by Northville Police for drunken driving.

The incident happened Aug. 29 at 12:22 a.m.

According to Northville Police, an officer was on routine patrol watching the intersection of Eight Mile Road and Novi Road when he saw the driver run through the red light at the section. The man took a right on to Eight Mile from Novi driving about 25 mph the whole time.

Police stopped the man and detected an odor of alcohol and glassy eyes. When questioned he admitted to having "seven or eight" beers at a wedding.

He had difficulty with several sobriety tests including a preliminary breath test of which he blew a 0.176. In Michigan, 0.10 is legally intoxicated.

The man was arrested pending sobering and posting of $100 bond.

Construction sites burglarized

Two construction sites in Northville Township had items stolen from them recently.

The first theft occured Aug. 25 during the early morning.

According to a Northville Township Police report, a thief or thieves broke into a larger trailer storage box at a construction site on Fox Hollow. The thieves made off with a $3,200 power vibrator.

There are no suspects.

The second theft happened Aug. 30 also during the early morning.

According to a Northville Township Police report, a thief or thieves broke into the rear door of a masonry trailer at a Shelly Pond construction site. They stole a masonry saw worth $1,800.

There are two suspects: one was a dark-haired and complected white male in his mid-20s, about 250 pounds and about 6 feet 2 inches; the other was a dark hair and complected male standing about 6 feet and weighing 200 pounds. They were seen driving a white Camaro.

Woman arrested after fighting with husband

Northville Township police followed up on a complaint of a reckless driver and ended up arrested a township woman.

The incident happened Aug. 24 at 9:35 p.m.

According to Northville Township police, a 39-year-old woman driver who lived on Waterfall was driving her 1999 Ford Mustang erratically in the area of Waterfall and Pon Valley and was stopped by police. When they approached the car she was visibly shaken and crying and told police she'd been arguing with her husband and left. Additionally, she said she had two glasses of wine to drink.

She had difficulty with several sobriety tasks but blew a 0.072 on a preliminary breath test after she was arrested and taken to the police station.

She was given a citation for reckless driving.

Woman arrested for driving with suspended license

A 24-year-old Canton woman was arrested for driving with a suspended license in Northville.

The incident happened Aug. 30 at 2:48 a.m.

According to Northville Police, the woman was driving southbound on Center Street near Main Street with a tail light burned out. The woman was pulled over in her 1996 Dodge and a background check revealed she had two suspensions on her license.

The woman was arrested and released on a $100 bond.

Colonial Festival set for Oct. 9-10

Forget all that stuff about the new millennium.

Turn away from such newfangled concepts as the Victorian era, to be celebrated this month in the Northville festival of that name.

Join Novi resident Dan O'Connell in looking straight back to the 18th century. O'Connell – a historic reenactor who specializes in the British military once stationed in the Great Lakes – is organizing the first Colonial Festival in this neck of the empire.

Also sponsored by Wayne County Parks, the event will be held Oct. 9 and 10 in Cass Benton Park on Hines Drive in Northville and will offer festival-goers a look at local lifestyles from 1700 to 1796, when Michigan was inhabited by Native Americans, French and British colonials and even some of those upstart new Americans.

O'Connell said that since Greenfield Village has canceled its Colonial Festival, the time was right to muster the troops of reenactors here.

The free festival will include a display of antiques, fashion, historic crafts, housewares, customs and culture, encampments of soldiers.

Hours will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on both days.

For more information, or if you're interested in getting involved, don't pull out that quill pen. Either write the Colonial Festival at P.O. Box 901, Northville, Mich. 48167 or contact festival organizers via the Internet at: 8britbrig@ameritech.net

Torn From Their Homes, Separated From Their Families.

They're people just like us...that have been torn from their homes and families...in need of food, clothing and a safe place to rest...

This is the plight for thousands of refugees who have been forced to flee the Kosovo province of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia during the latest phase of a bitter internal conflict that has torn the country apart.

There will be no quick solution to this crisis. In the weeks and months to come, the Red Cross will be there to meet the basic needs of the refugees. Your help is needed now.

The fastest, and most efficient way to help these victims is through cash donations. With your help....We'll be there.

School district releases yearly report

school board for its efforts in the so-called "Durant II" case to pursue the way the state funds special education programming. Currently, more than 200 school districts have joined the class action suit against the state.

Finally, in the controversial Northville Township/Woods of Edenderry vs. Public Schools, Rezmierski said he believed that all parties involved are in a position to move forward. The district reached a settlement with the township after the case was twice dismissed by the court. Though an appeal by the Woods of Edenderry is still pending, Rezmierski said he anticipated its completion in the upcoming school year.

On other fronts, Rezmierski applauded assistant superintendent David Bolitho for supervising the completion of several of the bond projects by the start of the school year. The district is now preparing for the move of the present high school to the new high school, Cooke to the present high school (which will be known as Hillside), and the Bryant Center to Cooke Middle School.

Rezmierski also delighted in the fact that the teachers came to an equitable contract for both the district and themselves. He said he was especially impressed with the fact that the contract extension will go through the year 2004.

"This new contract will provide stability and enable us to forecast our financial picture and ensure a significant measure of labor peace as we move forward in the millennium," Rezmierski wrote in his report.

The superintendent also discussed school violence and the districts' newly-revised crisis plan.

"We were motivated to reexamine what we're doing to offer an effective communication process and safety plans for students, staff and parents," Rezmierski wrote.

Rezmierski shared his concerns with the way the Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests are conducted and encouraged the board to follow up on a letter board members had written to the state Superintendent, the MEAP Department and the Governor. Further discussions with all of these parties will take place later in the autumn.

Perennials, Woodland Wildflowers, Rare Alpines, Dwarf Conifers, and unusual flowering shrubs

It's no longer spring but don't despair you can still garden, it's the perfect time to add some late summer and fall color to the garden or get a jump on the fall shrub planting before it cools off and the mosquitoes return. You just need to watch the rains and water if it's hot and dry until new plants are established. There are thousands of potted perennials to choose from, old favorites to rarities found nowhere else, we have it all, (enough to leave curators from major botanical gardens speechless). Be sure to check out the dozens of new Clematis, Gentians, Iris, Hosta, Helleborus, Ornamental Grasses and pond plants this year. We also have a fine collection of dwarf conifers and an incredible selection of flowering shrubs, and lots of new plants for troughs, as well as the largest selection of Primula species in the U.S. The current spectacle is Monarch butterflies drunk on pheromones from the Liatris ligulostylis.

Janice Henderson holds a replica of the Apollo 11 spacecraft in her office. Henderson recently took part in a NASA workshop.

Exploring the final frontier

Janice Henderson shares NASA experiences with students

By MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Janice Henderson's feet may be on the ground but her head is in the stars.

Henderson, the new curriculum facilitator for the Northville school district, was one of 25 people who recently in a two week workshop at the NASA Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, Calif. where scientists, develop satellites and other technology that have for use in space and here on Earth.

All transportation, housing, meals and administrative expenses for the program were provided by NASA. Henderson said the reason for the conference was to help NASA renew interest in its programs.

"It's not just about space and astronauts," Henderson said. "We couldn't even say the word 'astronaut' at JLP."

According to Henderson, some of the scientists' sensitivity comes from the dwindling interest and funding that NASA is receiving as of late. She said NASA chose the teachers that they did in an effort to get the word out about their programs to school age children.

Henderson learned of several new projects that NASA is currently working on.

"We learned about the kinds things that you don't hear about in the news," she said.

One such project is called the Casini probe. It has been sent to what scientists believe is the edge of our solar system. So far, it has sent back heat images of what looks like at least 18 new planets.

"It's amazing how much we don't know, and every time we go out we come back with ten more questions," Henderson said.

She also said that scientists have already discovered frozen water on the moon and that there may even be water on one of the moons of Jupiter.

Due to lack of resources, Henderson said NASA has been quite crafty in developing smaller technology to save money. She described digital cameras no bigger than quarters and entire weather stations that could fit in the palm of a hand.

"They can go so far away from our solar system but the budget keeps getting smaller," Henderson said.

But Henderson stressed that many of the new technologies coming from NASA are very practical on the ground. She explained that they have developed a working relationship with school age children of all levels from all around the world. The children are responsible for several different projects geared to their education level and include taking soil samples and measuring rainfall.

From there, the data is logged into the Internet and sent to a lab where it is disseminated and applied to prove or disprove theories about our world. Henderson describes the process as "land confirmation of what the satellites can see."

"It is one thing to get satellite data, it is quite another to prove it on the ground," she said.

Henderson plans to add these types of activities to Northville's curriculum.

"We want to make this real to kids," she said. "Who knows what interest this will spark in them?"

In addition to new ideas and a slew of NASA toys, she brought back several new plans for Northville curriculum. In fact, part of Henderson's acceptance into the program was that she had to develop a way to apply what she would learn in her district. So she helped create a database in which all the activities, subject matter and experiments that she would learn at the workshop could be matched to grade level and existing curriculum.

Henderson said she was very confident that the materials would be successful and useful tools in the classroom once they had been put in place.

"It still excites people," she said. "We want to get the kids outside of these four walls. That's what education is all about."

Parents, kids excited about first school day

She said that for the child the day is about first bus rides and new adventures. For the parents, however, their babies are taking the first steps towards growing up.

"It's about holding on and letting go," said parent Donna Melucci as she waited to pick up her son, Nicholas, at Thornton Creek Elementary. "It's sad because you know they're growing up and going away."

And go away they did, wide-eyed and ready for everything, down freshly painted and newly postered halls. Signs of welcome and strange but friendly faces greeted them once they got into their new homes away from home.

From here the teachers took over. For many teachers, this week was the first time they were expected to answer the questions, bandage the knees and calm the jitters of a classroom full of kids.

Take Ann Armitage, the new first grade teacher at Silver Springs Elementary. Until now, teaching was a lot of theories and limited practical application. Thus, the first morning found her looking a little nervous but overall excited.

"I'm really looking forward to meeting the kids and getting to know them," she said.

Armitage's first task was to make the kids feel welcome and comfortable. She asked them if any of them were nervous and most were reluctant to admit it. But after Armitage took the initiative and raised her hand high in the air, many others followed suit.

"I'm really looking forward to meeting the kids and getting to know them."

"This let the kids know that we're all nervous the first day and that it's okay," she said. Armitage also said that between the opening talk and story time there was a collective sigh of relief.

"Story time was something that they were familiar with from kindergarten and so I think it made them more comfortable," she said.

The kids spent the day making flowers and other decorations for the class. Armitage says activities like crafts are selected is so that the students have a sense of ownership in the classroom.

"I really want them to feel like this classroom is theirs," she said.

As the last bell rang and the kids put their books away the parents were already milling about waiting to pick them up, anxious to hear all about their first day.

Granholm addresses Northville Public School District employees

By MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Squishing paste in your hands.

The itchy smell of chalk dust in your hair.

Just to be a kid.

These were the hot topics of discussion in attorney general Jennifer Granholm's speech last Friday. Granholm skipped the formalities of talking policy to the teachers of the Northville school district and instead went straight to the heart of the matter and just talked about the kids.

Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski introduced Granholm, discussing her accomplishments at Yale and Berkeley University. Granholm, however, said her resume's contents were not the reason she was on hand.

"The real credential that I have is that I am a parent," she said. "That's the most important thing in my life."

Granholm commended and thanked teachers for caring for her "little treasures." She reminisced with the teachers about her school mentors and how they helped her through everything from raging hormones to the isolation of adolescence.

"It was Mrs. Hagan who showed me how marvelous the English language was and who enabled me to put the words of my imagination on paper," Granholm said.

However, Granholm was not there to offer advice. She said that she would not be so presumptuous as to think she could educate them on how to do their jobs.

"I don't know the first thing about the challenges that you face," she said.

Whether she was speaking to teachers, custodians, bus drivers or cafeteria staff, Granholm reminded staff members that each person was charged with the responsibility of educating children.

"What you will do in a day is so magical to our little treasures," she said.

She also reminded the room of educators that they had the power to shape how children see the world and what they would do with the knowledge they are given.

"You have the power to invoke cynicism or to inspire hope, to uplift or we can demean," she said. "We can live and breathe an ethical example or we can teach them to cheat. You can tell them that they can make a difference."

Granholm's speech was apparently effective, as one teacher responded to Granholm saying that she thought Granholm "walked on water."

That sentiment was shared by others, when applause that filled the room.

"We have all become so critical," said school board vice president Martha Nield. "She reminded us that we need to be more gracious an thankful for what we have."

Diane Costlow, a counselor at Northville High School, was moved by Granholm's speech and said educators needed to be a light for children to follow in this day and age. She said Granholm's speech helped to renew her commitment to counseling.

"I am excited about what I do as a counselor," she said. "Now I want to find what (children) can be excited about."

A Northville Township firefighter talks to a Consumers Power gas technician at the scene of a gas main break Thursday afternoon. A backhoe, center, ruptured the gas main.

Township fire activity increases

Increases in the number of accidents have helped bolster emergency response numbers already rising from population growth.

From 1997 to 1998, the number of runs in the township increased 24 percent to 1,736 runs. From 1998 to 1999, the number of runs already is up 15 percent with 1,436 runs.

"I don't think we'll see increases less than 10 percent annually through at least 2010," Zhmendak said.

Additionally, the department did 370 inspections in 1998 with no signs of slowing down.

But township fire department resources aren't commensurate with the increase in activity.

First, getting firefighters to work for the township is tough and employee turnover is high, Zhmendak said. The department lost two full-time workers last year and recruitment for paid-on-call firefighters is mediocre at best.

Currently, there only are 19 paid-on-call workers – the lowest Zhmendak said he's ever had.

"It just gets harder and harder every year to get paid-on-call people to come in," he said.

The department has enough funding for eight full-time members. Those are firefighters whose main occupation is fighting fires.

That means the department is highly dependent on its paid on-call firefighters. Those are paid firefighters who work other jobs but respond to fire calls as needed.

"Ideally I'd like to have 12 full-time employees and 40 paid on-call workers," Zhmendak said.

Part of the reason for the shortage problem, he said, is that many view the department as a training ground. The department provides free training to be a firefighter, but rarely is able to offer full-time jobs to those who complete the program.

Zhmendak said a new firefighter training class starts soon and he hopes at least 15 people will sign up.

People aren't the only things put under additional stress because of the increase in activity.

The increase in activity puts a extra strain on department equipment as well, Zhmendak said.

The department has four fire engines and two ambulances at its two stations.

However, at one point last week, two ambulances the township owns were in need of repair. Additionally, the township was forced to purchase a new fire engine, but that won't be delivered until later in fall.

Zhmendak said eventually a new fire station will be needed and a likely location will be on land the township owns on Sheldon Road between Five Mile Road and Six Mile Road.

But even with the not-so-positive effects the increase in activity has on the department, Snider said the department should be able to handle itself well enough.

"For the last two years we've had a dramatic increase in activity and we've worked jointly with the board (of trustees) and planning commission to look at a fiscal plan that accommodates our growth for the next five years," he said. "I believe our data collection and projection are accurate enough to accommodate the increased demand for service."

Township prepares for Y2K

reassure the community that we're prepared as best we can be for it."

In the report, the statement reads "the township has been working diligently in identifying those areas of operation that are Y2K-sensitive. We have devoted the manpower and expertise to ensure that we will enter into the new century with minimal disruption of township provided services. First and foremost, we are committed to the safety and well-being of our residents and employees."

The committee that put the report together includes Karen Woodside, township supervisor, Chip Snider, director of public safety, Bill Zhemendak, township fire chief, Don Weaver, director of public services and Kubitskey.

Work started on the report in January with township employees identifying equipment that was possibly non-Y2K compliant.

The committee found all Ameritech, heating and cooling, 911 equipment, generators, fire equipment, booster stations, wastewater lift station, tractors and trucks to be Y2K-compliant.

Only a small amount of equipment was found to be non-Y2K compliant with the largest item being a recorder in the police dispatch center that records all calls.

Kubitskey said once all equipment was examined, the committee began work on its contingency plan for midnight Jan. 1, 2000.

"We needed to come up with a plan in case something does go wrong," she said.

The plan calls for additional personnel in public safety departments and in the township hall as well as additional personnel in the water and sewer department.

From now until New Year's Eve, township officials will work to educate the community on steps the community has taken to ensure Y2K compliance and what it will do New Year's Eve through a series of meetings and a brochure available at the township hall.

"We're being very proactive in making sure everybody will be OK," Kubitskey said.

More information, including the brochure, may be obtained from the township hall.

Bankes concludes Nield inquiry

Wayne County Commission, you approached me and asked if I would review and report to you on the circumstances attendant the Michigan State Police investigation of a complaint against a Mr. James Nield, a constituent in your district. I did review the matter with my staff, an investigator of the Michigan State Police and Chief James Petres of the Northville Police Department."

Also in the letter, O'Hair mentions the fact that "a rumor circulated that Mr. Nield had improperly used school board facilities and personnel to make a mailing supportive of a particular position."

"The rumors were brought by telephone callers to the attention of Deputy Chief Raymond Walsh of the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office. Mr. Walsh was given at least the name of one person possibly having personal knowledge of Mr. Nield's alleged improprieties," O'Hair said in his letter to Bankes.

However, Walsh initially told the Record in early June that his office was contacted with a letter complaint.

Richard Padzieski, Wayne County Prosecutor's office manager, said in the early summer that complaints that result in investigation must come from a written source that provides as much information as possible and is not anonymous.

And O'Hair said that his office "certainly" would keep such a letter on file.

However, no letter has ever been found or seen and no explanation has been given as to why a five-month investigation into Nield's background was conducted.

Additionally, key information from Walsh's interview with Michigan State Police such as who witnessed the alleged crimes has been left out of the report.

The report took five months to complete after some people allegedly called the prosecutor's office accusing Nield of using Northville school district property for personal use.

The use allegedly was for his involvement with Families for a Better Northville, the group that threatened to recall Karen Woodside, township supervisor and assistant Wayne County Prosecutor, and other board of trustee members if they didn't work toward a settlement with the district over disputes related to the new Northville High School.

Nield was cleared after he produced receipts for mailings paid for by himself and 14 people were interviewed.

The question was then raised by Bankes as to if the investigation was a case of intimidation on a private citizen, who asked both Walsh and O'Hair about the investigation.

"It is my conclusion from all available information that there was no abuse of discretion or position on how the investigation was initiated or conducted. The investigation was complete, objective and resulted in Mr. Nield's vindication," O'Hair said in the letter.

She said there is nothing more she can do with the investigation.

"I can't make them come up with a different opinion," she said. "It's like going to court and getting a verdict you don't agree with. You have to take it to the next level."

Bankes said the next step would be to take the case to the state attorney general.

OPINION

So...how did O'Hair, Walsh and Woodside respond to our questions? Simple — they didn't

No response

No, that blank space is not an error

Robert Jackson

Now before anyone thinks that we have lost our collective minds, let me explain that the blank column you see to the left is not a mistake.

Remember my column two weeks ago. The one that asked all those questions of Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair, deputy prosecutor Ray Walsh, and assistant prosecutor and Northville Township Supervisor Karen Woodside, regarding the investigation into township resident Jim Nield.

Remember I said I'd be willing to give the three all the editorial space they needed to answer those questions and respond to concerns. Remember I gave them two weeks to respond (and just to be fair I mailed a copy of the column by registered mail to all three, just to be sure they'd read it).

Well, two weeks have come and gone and we haven't received one word of explanation from O'Hair, Walsh or Woodside. The silence brings us no closer to answering the question: was a private citizen investigated simply because he questioned his local elected officials?

Henceforth the empty space. The fact that they didn't respond speaks volumes. It also concerns me, as it should concern ever taxpaying citizen in Wayne County.

What's that old adage..."Silence is a deafening sound."

Now, don't think for a moment that just because the Wayne County Prosecutor's office is staying mum on this one means we're going to just forget about it. Don't think for a moment that just because Lyn Bankes says that she's concluded her investigation, which consisted of a conversation with O'Hair, that we're not going to continue asking those questions.

Don't think for a moment that just because we've reported this story for the past 14 weeks that we're tired of getting the runaround and are going to drop the story out of frustration.

I promise you this — we will continue to ask those very simple, yet important questions. We'll continue to call O'Hair, Walsh and Woodside for comment. We'll continue fighting the state police for the release of ALL of the information filed in their report.

The reason is simple. The prosecutor's office and the state police need to be held accountable to the tax paying public. We need them to answer those questions so that when we all go home at night, we are secure in the knowledge that the prosecutor's office won't be sending the state police to our front doors without just cause.

We need them to answer those questions because our constitutional rights are at stake here. If criticizing one's government has become a crime, then maybe it is time to consider moving to a different country.

Plenty of doubt has surfaced the past few months regarding the investigation into Jim Nield. We're more than a bit suspicious as to what motivated that investigation, from missing letters to the withholding of important information, we've every reason to be skeptical.

So all that we're asking is for a detailed accounting of what took place and why. It's that simple.

Because if Ray Walsh did nothing more than his job, if Karen Woodside truly had nothing to do with any of this, if John O'Hair believes his office carried out it's responsibility, than why on earth are they staying silent? Wouldn't you think that they'd be more than willing to open up the books for public inspection?

Ah, another question to be asked. Maybe one day soon, someone will start giving the public some answers.

In Focus by John Heider

A trout in the hand...

Former Brighton-area resident John Speiss III shows of a chunky brown trout he caught in nearby Spring Mill Pond.

Don't look now, you're on mall camera

Jeremy McBain

Abandon all privacy, ye who enter Twelve Oaks Mall.

Perhaps this should be the sign above every entrance to Twelve Oaks Mall, because as soon as you walk into the building you are being watched electronically and in person.

Throughout the mall, cameras are posted. Their electronic eyes can zoom up onto us in an instant. You should remember this the next time you are in the mall and happen to scratch your nose.

This is expanded in some of the department stores. Every customer who walks through the door must realize there are undercover "agents" around them and high-tech cameras recording them everywhere in the store.

In Hudson's and Lord & Taylor, "everywhere" includes the dressing rooms that you thought were private as you struggled to get on those pants that were too tight.

Last December, I wrote a story on security measures in dressing rooms. The idea came about as I was reading some police reports and discovered shoplifters were being caught as they were in the dressing rooms.

Employees for the department stores, who call themselves "loss protection agents" and not employees, were actually watching people in the dressing rooms. In Hudson's, they were watching them from a platform above the room, in Lord & Taylor they were watching them through the slots in the door.

While I do not condone shoplifting and I encourage department stores to capture these criminals, I also do not condone someone watching me as I try on clothing.

Many other ordinary shoppers in the mall that I spoke with also did not like this fact and said they would not shop at these stores anymore.

Some people working in the mall and department stores also did not like that I was telling people about their tactics. In trying to get this story, I was escorted out of Hudson's by security and almost escorted out of the mall by mall security. Also, I was questioned by mall security when I tried to talk to regular shoppers to get their view on the matter.

In the end, I got the story and mall shoppers discovered they were not alone in the dressing rooms.

But innocent shoppers do have some protection. According to a state law, it is a federal offense to observe anyone in a private place, including a dressing room, without their knowledge.

The key here is "without their knowledge." In Hudson's, a label is placed on every mirror that tells the occupants of the dressing room they may be being watched. According to Oakland County Prosecutors office, this makes the dressing room a public place.

But in Lord & Taylor there is no sign. They just go and watch you without warning as they did in two arrests indicated in this weeks police log.

According to the prosecutor, the design of the slots on the door and the way it opened was reason enough to make the dressing room a public zone. So, Lord & Taylor escaped further persecution.

Then I learned there were some stores in the mall which did not believe in this tactic and called it "a potential invasion of privacy."

These stores felt it was just too invasive to watch customers in the dressing rooms.

I agree and I think J.C. Penney and Sears should be commended for they were the department stores that trust their customers enough to refrain from watching them in the dressing rooms.

I think it is tacky for a department store, or any store, to engage in tactics which invade the privacy of its customers, shoplifters or no shoplifters.

J.C. Penney and Sears prove that you do not need to watch every move of your customers. Lord & Taylor and Hudson's really have no excuse and should stop.

But, in reality, there is nothing I or any of my readers can do. These stores will continue to watch us throughout this back-to-school shopping season and upcoming Christmas season.

We, however, can choose to not try on clothing while shopping there. That's the beauty of a return policy.

With friends like Spencer Abraham...

Phil Power

When Michigan Sen. Spencer Abraham and his fellow Republicans passed the $792 billion tax cut last month, they thought they had a winner.

After all, there's nothing better than trumpeting your support for a tax cut, especially if you're a first-term GOP senator facing a tough campaign for reelection. And Abraham didn't waste a minute after the final vote, going on a 13-day bus tour through 27 Michigan communities and attacking his opponent, Rep. Debbie Stabenow, as a liberal whose support for outrageous spending and high taxes led to lost jobs and big government.

Abraham claims the big tax cut will lead to an even bigger government surplus, as lower taxes stimulate economic growth that leads to more tax receipts. And he argues that the government surplus, estimated by some to be as high as $3 trillion over the next 10 years, ought to be returned to the taxpayers.

Stabenow, who favors the more modest $295 billion tax cut, claims the GOP tax cut incorporates a windfall for the rich, threatens destruction of Social Security and Medicare, and risks going back to the billion-dollar deficits of the 1980s. She argues that we have a once-in-a-lifetime chance to get our economic house in order, and we shouldn't squander it.

At this point, Stabenow appears to have the advantage in the argument.

On economics, the Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy estimates the GOP tax bill would bring a $157 average annual tax reduction for the bottom 60 percent of taxpayers, while those earning more than $89,000 a year — the top 10 percent — would reap annual savings of $7,520.

Politically, Ed Sarpolus, vice-president of EPIC/MRA, a Lansing polling firm, says his polls show that voters do like the idea of a tax cut. But when given a choice between a big tax cut and protecting Social Security and Medicare or paying down the national debt, most voters change their priorities.

The risk for Abraham is that, contrary to the usual political calculus, he may wind up being placed by the tax cut argument in the worst of all possible worlds: Financially irresponsible; a threat to the stability of Social Security and Medicare; a political panderer out of touch with the feelings of most voters. Getting on the wrong side of an emotional issue like this early on could haunt the rest of the Abraham campaign, even though it will have the support of Gov. John Engler and an enormous war chest.

For months, I've been wondering just how the Senate Republicans got stampeded into supporting such a big tax cut.

After all, the country's big national debt was incurred largely as the result of the big military build up when President Reagan essentially challenged the Russians to compete with the world's biggest economy. "We put a mortgage on our future to bankrupt the Soviets," is the way one of my Washington-based Republican friends puts it. And we did exactly that.

Now, with the Russians bankrupted, we have the opportunity to pay off the mortgage by cutting down on the national debt — in effect, paying us all back for the deficits we accepted in order to beat the Russians. Moreover, the benefits for everybody of reducing the national debt are considerable, running from lower interest rates produced by a reduced national debt to greater flexibility to deal with the problems facing Social Security and Medicare.

There's an old line that provokes musing about the difference between friends and enemies: "With friends like that, who needs enemies."

I wonder if Spencer Abraham ever thinks about that.

How will courts rule on U-M lawsuits?

Mike Malott

I'm notoriously bad at predicting how the courts will rule in any given case, so I should be listening to that little inner voice telling me to keep my mouth shut. Here goes anyway ...

Don't be surprised if the two lawsuits pending against the University of Michigan over the use of affirmative action in its admissions policies reach different, even opposite, conclusions. The admissions procedures — one used for undergraduates applying to the College of Literature, Science and the Arts and the other by the U-M Law School — are very different. That, of course, has everything to do with how affirmative action is applied. And it could have a significant impact on how the courts will view those practices.

Race relations has never been my issue. I got tossed cold into the midst of a very hot debate when Chuck Stokes invited me to appear on Channel 7's "Spotlight on the News" to question U-M Law School Dean Jeffrey Lehman along with Trevor Coleman of the Detroit Free Press. The segment aired Sunday, Aug. 29.

The Center for Individual Rights, a Washington-based advocacy group, has filed the suits on behalf of three white students who were not admitted, they say, due to affirmative action. According to CIR, less well qualified minority students were admitted and took their slots.

Although both cases were filed in federal district court, they have not been combined. The first of the trials was originally scheduled to begin this week, but both suits have been delayed so additional parties can prepare their cases.

Lehman is eager to get this matter before a judge because he strongly believes it's a winner. He puts up a convincing argument for the need to continue affirmative action programs. Race is still a factor in American society, he says, and it still impacts how minority students do at school and in their lives.

I'm willing to accept that. Those who argue against it forget the history of our country's uniquely bad treatment of African Americans. It is hard to imagine that 30 years of civil rights legislation could erase the stain of 300 years of segregation, discrimination and slavery. I can find no objective measurement by which the argument can be made that Blacks have caught up to the mainstream of American society. Are catching up, yes; have caught up, no.

As Lehman says, it would be a shame to stop the process now. There will be a day when affirmative action can bite the dust. But we're not there yet.

Most importantly, the U.S. Supreme Court has endorsed it, concluding that quotas are illegal but affirmative action is valid if it encourages diversity and redresses past discrimination. So the school's general undergraduate policy appears to pass muster. It converts each applying student's information to a 150-point scale. For instance, straight As in high school will get you 80 points. Other factors are considered, including tests, essays, community involvement and leadership. The suit comes from the fact that in some cases 20 points can be added for "under represented minorities."

What bothers me is that at the Law School, there is no point scale, no attempt to quantify the admissions process at all.

Lehman defends that. The number of applicants to the Law School is small enough — 3,500 each year for a total of 340 seats — so that administrators can review each file individually. The selection process is more a matter of judgment. Administrators look not just at grade point and test scores, they also consider the difficulty of classes taken, leadership, involvement and essays, which are important since lawyers must be articulate. Letters of reference count for a lot, Lehman said. And yes, race is considered.

But much of that is also accounted for in the university's general admissions policy. Perhaps this makes me the only person in the state for whom race is less the issue than the lack of an objective measure.

It may be all right for a private club to select members that way, or even a private sector company choosing employees, but this is a public university operating on taxpayer dollars. We all have an interest in making sure fairness and consistency are applied, whether race is considered or not.

A system based on individual judgment like that is ripe for abuse. I'm not saying it is, only that it could be. How could an outsider, be it an applicant or just a taxpayer, ever tell?

And how will the judge be able to tell?

'The Record seems in love with A-frame signs'

To the editor:

The Northville Record seems in love with A-frame signs. On Aug. 17 at 8 p.m. I was trying to walk the streets of downtown Northville and it was necessary to walk in the street to get past Tuscan Cafe due to tables and chairs on the sidewalk and the A-frame sign blocking the rest of the walk. Sparr's A-frame sign was laying on the sidewalk.

On previous occasions, the Sparr's sign has been seen laying half on the curb and half in the gutter. One person told me that they like to shop downton Northville, but it is impossible to push a stroller down the street due to the number of signs blocking the walks.

I don't think this is the way to attract customers.

Richard Allen

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Allen is chairman of the Northville Township planning commission.

A-frame signs are good selling tool

To the editor:

I have owned Your Michigan Connection / Downtown Baskets for the past 15 months. I've attended meetings about our sandwich signs almost as long.

I feel these signs are a good selling feature. They allow the customer at a glance to recognize the type of business I operate, that I am open and also it offers a quaintness to our lovely community. All this is an important part of my advertising tools, as well.

I hope you will consider this in your analysis of this ongoing controversy. If you're in doubt of why any of (the downtown Northville businesses) have delayed in replacement of our signs, it's because of the expense of having another sign designed to find out that our signs will be done away with.

Please consider what we as merchants of your community feel is important to help keep our business operating.

Santa display is offensive

To the editor:

Am I the only one offended by the massive display of Santa Clauses in the window of Genitti's Restaurant?

It is four months before Christmas. Small children attending the Marquis Theater across the street are sure to think he's visiting soon. And parents have to feel resentment as the early commercialism of the holidays. And I surely wouldn't take my child to the inside of the restaurant which has a lavish display of items which one needs to celebrate this special time of year, but not before Halloween or Thanksgiving.

I realize the malls are leading to that end. However, this is the town of Northville. It is unique and people visit here because it is not a mall atmosphere.

Also — the Victorian Festival is near. What kind of an atmosphere will we, as a town, project? Those numerous Santas peering down at the parade and paraders will project a commercialism unknown at that time. Surely Genitti's must be aware how distasteful their display will appear.

Perhaps I'm the only one sensitive about this, but I felt compelled to voice my opinion on the tackiness of Genitti's eagerness to exploit the holiday and fearful that other businesses along Main Street will follow suit.

Rapid Rescue receives praise

To the editor,

I would like to let the people of Northville know what a great "Rapid Rescue" team we have in the city of Northville. Due to their quick response and capable handling of my heart attack I am able to write this thank you note.

The three men I know that were there within minutes are Jason Jordan, Al Zielinski and Jim Allen. My heartfelt thanks goes to their expertise in my emergency call.

All I can say is thanks and "God Bless Them."

When my children came into my life, I realized how important it is to eat well—not just for them, but for me too. After all, I'm not doing them any favors by taking chances with my own health.

Food can be powerful medicine, and the best prescription is to eat more low-fat vegetarian meals. The more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains you eat, the more your body will thank you. For a tasty way to help prevent illness, try some black bean chili, Jamaican jerked tofu with vegetables, or pasta marinara with broccoli.

RECORD

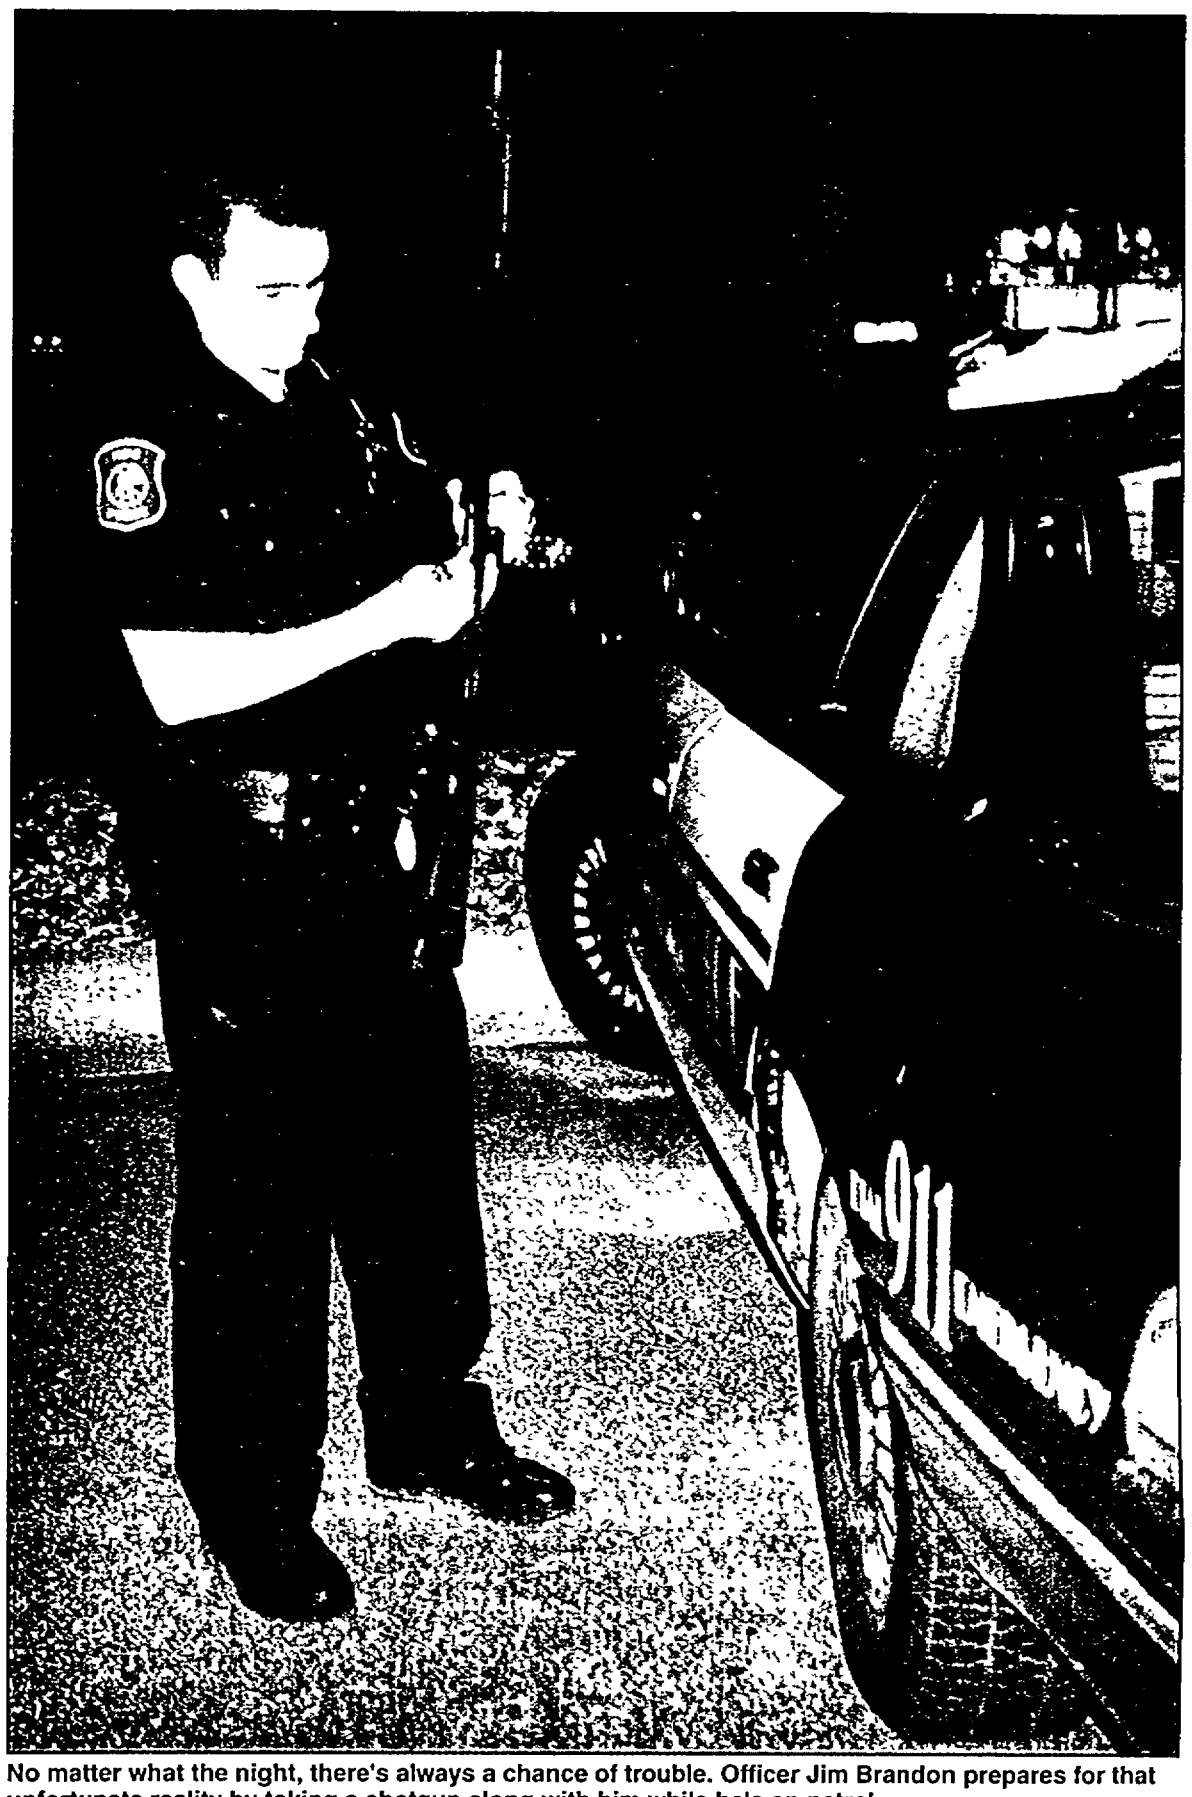
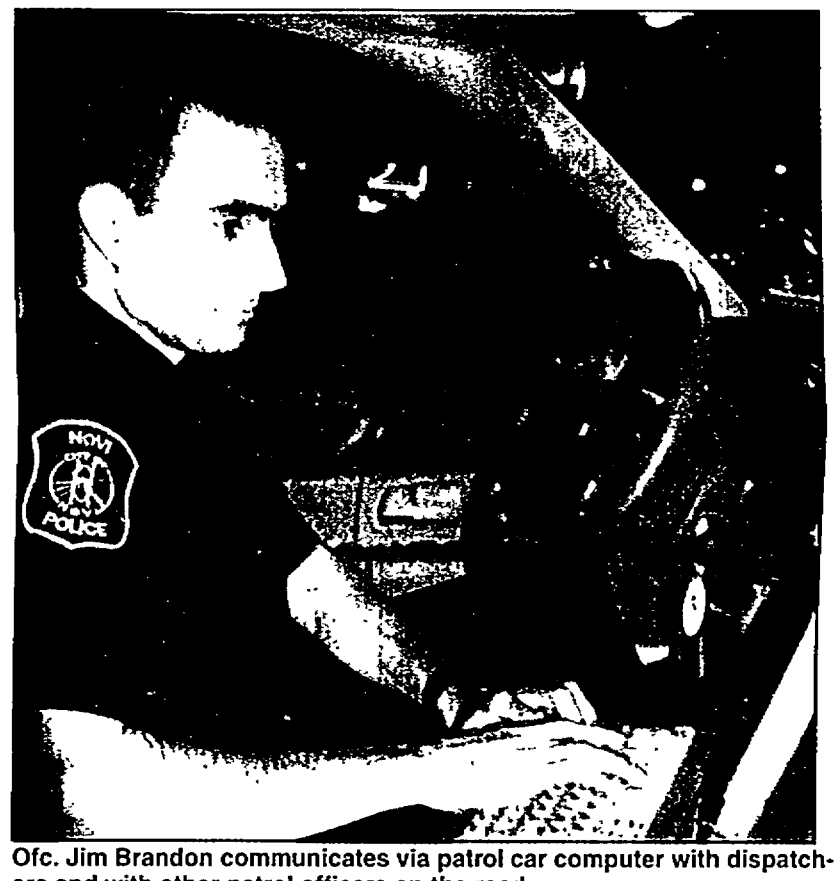
AA
THURSDAY
September 2, 1999



No matter what the night, there's always a chance of trouble. Officer Jim Brandon prepares for that unfortunate reality by taking a shotgun along with him while he's on patrol.

Preparing for a night out on Novi's roads, Brandon selects a flashlight from the stockroom.

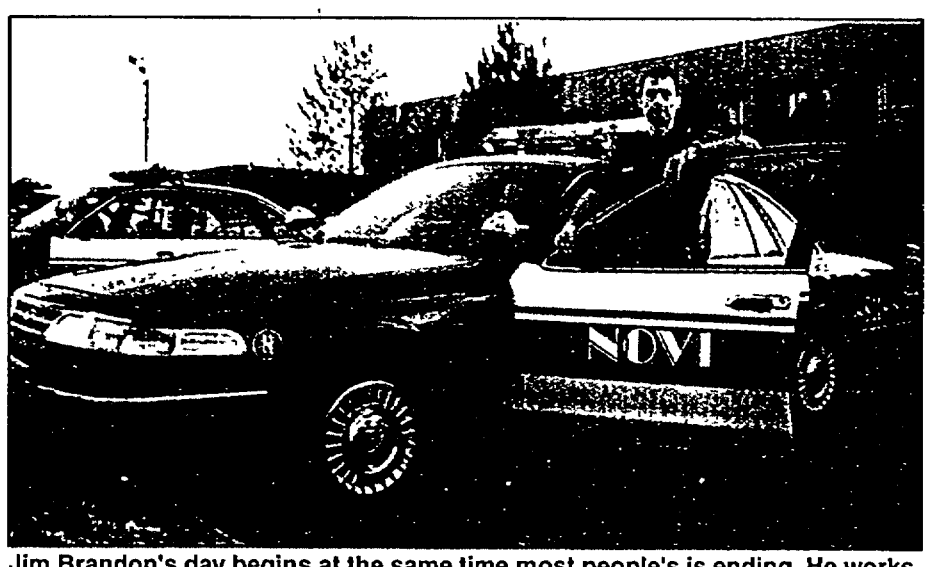


Ofc. Jim Brandon communicates via patrol car computer with dispatchers and with other patrol officers on the road.

A night in the life...

Our reporter spends the evening with the Novi Police

Story and photos by Jeremy McBain



Jim Brandon's day begins at the same time most people's is ending. He works the night shift for the Novi Police Department.

Not much is true on television.

I quickly learned this, especially with regards to television police.

The real life of a police officer is extremely varied. Some nights, the officer could find himself running from one call for help to the next. Other nights could be extremely quiet, without even a speeding driver to contend with.

This was the case Aug. 20, when I accompanied Novi Police Officer Jim Brandon from 7 to 11 p.m. as he patrolled the southwest corner of the city.

The evening started with a meeting with Sgt. Matthew Conquest, who explained what the start of an officers shift was. Since I was coming in during the middle of a shift, I would not get a chance to see this.

When an officer comes into work, they must first be briefed on what has been happening in the city that day. Conquest said this briefing takes anywhere from five to 15 minutes.

After finding out the latest news from the outgoing officers, Conquest said the officer then prepares his assigned car for duty. The officer checks the fluid levels, lights and general running of the vehicle, as well as stocks it with equipment such as his shotgun and paperwork.

After getting my own little briefing from Conquest, I met Brandon, who had just found out I would be riding along with him

The officer had come back into the station from his patrol to work on some brief paperwork for a crime he was investigating.

"Paperwork is a big part of the job," he said.

But thanks to the latest in computer technology, Brandon was able to write all of his reports inside of his patrol vehicle. Getting us out on the road where he could keep an eye on his assigned section of the city.

"It's nice. It keeps us on the roads in Novi and saves time," Brandon said.

Getting into the car, I was amazed at how much equipment could be fit inside one vehicle. On the dash was the radar detector, a laptop computer sat between both front seats and various types of radios and other electronic equipment took the place of an arm rest between the front seats.

To top all this equipment off was the placement of a menacing black shotgun, on a Plexiglas wall behind our heads that separated the front of the vehicle from the back.

The back seat of the vehicle was a cold sight. Instead of the cushioned seats in the front, the back seats were made of a hard black plastic. There were no locks and no handles on the inside back doors and the door could only be opened from the outside.

The backseat was basically a traveling jail cell.

After I took a look at what I would be riding in for the next four hours, Brandon started up the car and we were off, patrolling the city.

Instantly, I noticed the behavior of other vehicles on the road. As soon as they saw the police car, drivers immediately slowed down, even if they were already traveling at the speed limit.

"I'm not going to stop them if they are going a little over the speed limit," Brandon said as he clocked the vehicles traveling around him.

Each time a vehicle passed his patrol car, the radar issued a loud alarm and gave a reading of the vehicle's speed. The faster a vehicle was traveling, the louder the radar alarm was.

This evening, the vehicles were not traveling too far over the speed limit.

Brandon's evening is spent basically driving around his section of the city looking for trouble and stopping it. He tries to drive every road and visit every subdivision, even the subdivisions under construction.

"I never though anyone could steal big construction equipment, until someone stole a bulldozer from a construction site in Novi," he said, half laughing. The thief was captured as he tried to sell the bulldozer to an undercover officer.

Brandon's patrols also make him more visible to the residents and any criminals that may be lurking in Novi. If the police are highly visible, there is a chance that this could stop a crime before it even happens, he said.

During this tour-of-duty in Novi, I also had a chance to talk to Brandon and learn a little about a Novi police officer.

Brandon has been with the Novi police for three years. Before that, he was an officer in Detroit.

During his service in Detroit, Brandon saw the darker side of crime. He saw the aftermath of drive-by shootings and the death they caused, the effects of drugs and half-decomposed bodies in alleyways.

On a lighter note, he said saw the weirdest sight of his career while on patrol in Detroit. It happened when he came across a stolen Mustang convertible parked in an alleyway.

The entire car had been stripped. Its tires, its engine, the doors — everything was gone. Except for the steering wheel, with the anti-theft device "The Club" still attached. Brandon laughed.

While he saw a lot in Detroit, things are definitely different in Novi, he said.

The first difference Brandon said he noticed was people actually waved at him.

"I though that was strange," he said.

He also pointed to the large amount of wildlife that roams through Novi, saying it is not uncommon to have three or four deer cross the road in front of his patrol car.

But by far, the biggest difference is the Novi police department gives its officers better equipment. For example, in Detroit, Brandon had to sign out a shotgun and supply his own shells for it. Plus, he could never be sure he had a fully charged radio.

Sometimes, when an officer was called to a scene by dispatch, the officer never arrived, because the batteries in his radio were dead and he never heard the call, Brandon said.

Brandon and I continued to patrol the southwest corner of Novi, stopping only for his brief dinner break.

The night remained quiet and we only saw the large luxurious homes in Novi and smiles from residents strolling through their subdivisions.

Brandon was quick to point out that it is not always like this. Sometimes it seemed that everything happens a hour before his shift is over, he joked.

FARM STORIES: September's storytime topic is "Barnyard Birds." The story group meets in the farm demonstration building Sept. 4 at 11 a.m.

SEPTEMBER BIRD HIKE: The monthly bird identification hike group meets Sept. 11 at 8 a.m. at the concession building. The group seeks resident and migrating birds in the park. Binoculars are recommended.

ANNUAL HONEY HARVEST: Maybury will present its annual honey harvest on Sept. 11 and 12 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Meet at the farm demonstration building for presentations of honey extraction and beekeeping.

HORSEDRAWN HAYRIDES: Hayrides at the farm are back. For a nominal fee, rides through the farm's fields and trails are available. Trips are available each weekend beginning Sept. 11 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., weather permitting.

There will be a special Novi Chamber of Commerce program for persons interested in a home-based business network on Sept. 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. Representatives from several phone systems, including Excel Communications, Omnipoint, and Wavetech, Inc. to explain their systems, with a question-and-answer session to follow. Those planning to attend are asked to RSVP the Chamber at (248) 349-3743.

There is no charge to Chamber members, but there is a fee of $5 for non-members.

Another meeting sponsored by the Chamber with the city of Novi is the Economic Summit III on Sept. 15 at the Novi Civic Center's conference rooms A,B,C and D. A reception is scheduled at 5:30 p.m., with the actual summit taking place from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Topioc will include the Novi Expo Center, the Ramco-Gershenon project, Providence Park Place and M-5, the Beck Road interchange, and a celebration of Novi's successes. Reservations are required to attend.

The business education committee of the Chamber has made arrangements for a small business employment forum on Sept. 16 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Novi Expo Center.

The theme: "Is It Time To Make A Change In Your Staffing Strategies?" The seminar will discuss information on attracting, hiring and retaining quality employees.

A $15 registration fee is required, which includes a box lunch. The deadline for registration is Sept. 10. Topics will include recruiting on the Internet, contract employees, college placement offices, the application process, effective interviewing, legal questions and retention.

Another important Chamber date is Sept. 22 from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m., when the chamber will host a morning mixer at the Tollgate Educations Conference Center. The cost for the event is $5.

Novi Highlights

CHARTER HOUSE OF NOVI

A very successful ice cream social was held on Aug. 29 by the community council of the charter house for residents and their families. It was an opportunity for both residents and caregivers to tour the building. Residents of Charter House were guests of the youth group of Holy Family Catholic Church when the groups sponsored a social exclusively for Charter House residents.

Residents' requests for a card-game party were honored as groups had the chance to play rummy and euchre, among other games. Other activities included making Christmas ornaments.

Paul Kemp stopped by Charter House for his cooking time and made "Depression burgers" for the residents, many of whom said the food brought back memories for them.

David Henning, formerly with The Red Garter Band played the keyboard at Charter House's monthly birthday party, and took requests from audience members who tried to stump on being able to play the songs they wanted to hear.

The resident council, along with activity director Heidi Yost and other staff members discussed conditions at Charter House. Campaigning was heavy this month and Barbara Turpin was elected as president, while Bernadine Urban was elected vice-president.

The Knights of Columbus and Tom Mahon contributed a new keyboard to Charter House, which is used daily by many residents — among them, Forrest Woodworth.

Charter House has a number of birds that the residents enjoy. Three baby birds were born to a set of Lovebirds in the home and seem to be doing well. There is a need for a canary to be matched with another canary in the home's activity room. Persons interested in donating a canary should call (248) 477-2000.

NOVI PARKS AND RECREATION

The new autumn brochure outlining programs available to the community was made available. Residents can start planning activities for themselves or their family members. The brochure is especially helpful for those who have recently moved to the community, as it described many services available through the Novi Civic Center.

Special programs are available, starting with the Punt, Pass and Kick Competition on Sept. 18. The event begins at 10 a.m. at Novi Community Park near Eight Mile and Napier roads. Another special event is the mother-son dance, "1960's Blast From the Past," on Oct. 1 from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tickets are available now, but none will be sold at the door.

A Halloween trip to Cedar Point for teens has been scheduled for Oct. 9. Registration is being accepted (44 slots are available) for persons in grades seven through 12.

For children ages 12 and under, a Halloween festival is being planned on Oct. 30 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Novi Civic Center. Those attending will participate in carnival games, face painting, a candy scramble and pumpkin decorations.

Another section of the brochure offers information on music, art and theater, including information on the Center for Creative Studies and other clubs in Novi for those with special interests. The brochure has a pullout section giving information for seniors on tours, flu shots, mini-concerts and a Thanksgiving luncheon. Sports league information is outlined for floor hockey, basketball and volleyball.

MEADOWBROOK CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

It will be a busy day at Meadowbrook Congregational on Sept. 12 with Rally Day activities, including the introduction of new minister of music Patrick Kuhl. He has held similar positions at Fort Street Presbyterian Church of Detroit and Royal Oak Congregational Church for the past 22 years. Minister of music emeritus Ray Ferguson expressed happiness with the new of Kuhl's selection, as he had been Kuhl's organ instructor.

The 11th annual Meadowbrook Jim Brown Memorial Chickenfest is scheduled for Sept. 12. The dinner is open to the public and tickets are available at the church office, which can be reached at (248) 348-7757. The cost of the dinner is $7.50 and will be served from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The menu includes roasted chicken, au gratin potatoes, coleslaw and desserts. Carry-out food will be available.

The deadline for those wishing to be a part of the church's pictorial directory is Sept. 15.

Other activities at Meadowbrook Congregational include the first meeting of the Co-Weds on Sept. 24 at 10 a.m. The board of social services will be serving food at the Coalition On Temporary Shelter in Detroit on Sept. 25. Food preparation for the serving is slated for 6:30 p.m. on Sept. 24. Eighty-five persons were served at the June service day.

Also coming up: the Oct. 3 Novi-Northville CROP Walk. Pledge sheets will be available beginning Sept. 19. The church wakers raised $882 of the $18,000 in 1998 for the Novi-Northville area.

An autumn rummage sale is scheduled for Oct. 22 and 23, while the annual Road Rally is set for Oct. 16.

Novi Highlights is written by Novi resident Jeanne Clarke.

The Golden Rule governs etiquette

Margrit Mandi Erickson

Etiquette!

Does that word scare you or turn you off? It shouldn't, because whether you realize it or not, you are performing acts of etiquette every day without even knowing it.

The bottom line of etiquette is tact, common sense and consideration for other people. Therefore, every time you take a shower or brush your teeth or use a deodorant, you are practicing a form of etiquette. You are being considerate of those who will be around you. If you were a hermit and lived miles away from another human being, you would probably not be so fastidious.

It all goes back the Golden Rule: do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

Beginning with this column, I'll be answering your questions on social and business manners that you always wanted to have answered but were afraid to ask. Here are three I was asked recently:

Q: I have several shirts with wide collars and wear them to the office. However, I've noticed that most of the men in the company wear the traditional pointed collar.

The early part of next year, I am due for a promotion which will put me in line for an executive position. I know how important the right wardrobe can be and I'm anxious to dress in a way to give me an advantage. Are pointed collars more appropriate?

A: I agree with you that the widespread collar is attractive and I can understand your partiality toward it. However, your co-workers are correct. Widespreads are the most formal of all daywear collars and send out a message of glamour and elegance.

Replace your shirts with ones that have either straight-point or button-down collars and save your widespreads for more dressy occasions. Just be sure whenever you wear them that you wear a Windsor know in your tie so there is no gap between your tie and the shirt collar.

Q: I work in a large office tower and during the rush hours the elevators become quite crowded. Is it necessary for males to step aside to let female passengers unload first even though we get off on the same floor? This seems a bit awkward and necessitates a bit of juggling. Also — is it proper to reach in front of people to push the button for your floor, or should you call out your floor and hope someone pushes it?

A: In this day and age, men are no longer required to do "a bit of juggling" or perform some type of contortion necessary for women behind them to exit from the elevator first. He or she who is nearest the front of the elevator exits first. As to who pushes that elevator button? The person closest to it.

Q: I am having a dinner party for 12 people, all of whom will be seated at my dining room table. I have inherited my grandmother's beautiful heirloom tablecloth and am anxious to use it for this special occasion. However, I'm concerned that it will become spotted by someone spilling wine or food on it. Would it be proper if I covered the tablecloth with a fine, clear plastic so the beauty of the lace can show through but still be able to be protected?

A: Never! Not even if 10 people took two years to make the lace, not even if it was brought over by your ancestors on the Mayflower, not even if the face value of your cloth is in six figures.

Covering the tablecloth with plastic tells your guests "I think you're a slob and can't eat properly," whereas leaving it uncovered says "She must think we are very special to use this lovely cloth for us."

With so many cleaning methods available today (even plain table salt works wonderfully on many stains), you should use your cloth for all to admire. It is a shame to keep such beautiful workmanship languishing in a drawer.

For Novi police patrol officer, the night is a way of life

He was almost foreshadowing the night, because almost exactly one hour before his shift was up, Brandon was called to the scene of a disturbance.

Apparently, someone called dispatch to report a man was outside of his home drunk while several minors were inside drinking.

Brandon calmly drove down back roads to the scene. I, on the other hand, was not calm inside. Questions kept popping up in my mind: What's going on? Who is it? What will we find? Should I duck if shooting breaks out or just run like crazy?

I asked Brandon what he thought of. He replied by saying he does think about the situation, but the situation is usually exaggerated.

"Sometimes you wonder what they are doing when you get inside. Are they going to be (upset) when the cops show up? Chances are this guy is going to think it is his own business what happens inside his home if his kids are going to drink," he said.

"Are they going to be (upset) when the cops show up?"

Ofc. Jim Brandon
Novi Police Department

Upon entrance to the trailer park where the incident was reported to be taking place at, Brandon slowed his vehicle to a near crawl. He did not want to pass the home and tip off its occupants.

Once he was near the home, Brandon turned off his vehicle's lights and stopped to wait for his back-up, Ofc. Tim Harper.

Everything was quiet, except for the occasional crack of the police radio. Soon, we heard the quiet voice of Ofc. Harper over the radio, saying he was in the area.

We waited for a short time until Harper was directly behind us before Brandon inched his vehicle forward, with Harper's in the rear. Both traveled without their lights on to avoid detection by the residents of the home.

When we arrived at the home, I stayed in the patrol vehicle, while Brandon and Harper approached the door. After the officers knocked on the door, an older man approached and spoke with them.

Soon, several younger occupants of the home came out. The officer checked each of their identifications and after a brief chat, all of the occupants went back inside.

Brandon and Harper informed me it was an exaggerated call. Apparently, all of the occupants in the home were over 21 and very few had been drinking at all. Those that did were not even intoxicated.

After talking with Harper for a bit, Brandon and I got back into his patrol vehicle. By this time, Brandon's shift was almost up so we drove back to the Novi police station after a very quiet night in Novi.

But for Brandon, he could not foresee what the next night would bring. He only thought of going home and getting some rest. He would tackle the next night when it came.

Weddings

Couzens-Knutson

Jennifer Scott Couzens and Carl Frederick Knutson were united in marriage on July 17 in a double-ring ceremony at St. John's Episcopal Church in Plymouth. Fr. William Lupfer officiated the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Jack and Susan Couzens of Northville. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick Knutson of Birmingham.

The bride wore a classic satin gown with braiding around the neck, waist, hem and train. The veil was fingertip-edged in satin attached to a headband which was covered in braiding matching the gown. She carried a bouquet of white longstemmed roses.

The best man in the ceremony was Thomas Cochill III. Groomsmen were Edward Honos, Andrew Frey, Kyle Wusenich, Nat Stanton, Alec Thompson and James Wild. The matron of honor was Shannon Frey, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Michelle Schultz, Kathy Mitchell, Amy Story, April Hyman, Chrissty Honos and Cherita Bell.

Ushers were Timothy Story and Steven Podolinski.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Northville High School and earned a master's degree from Oakland University earlier this year. She is employed as a teacher at Windy Ridge Elementary School in Orlando, Fla.

The groom earned a master's degree from the University of Michigan in 1997 and is employed at VOA Architecture Firm in Orlando.

The couple honeymooned in Bora Bora, Tahiti. They now reside in Winter Park, Fla.

Art fit for a queen

Scenes like this are a sure bet in just two weeks, when the 11th annual Northville Victorian Festival returns to the downtown streets. Above, patrons take in some of the arts and crafts in the gazebos set up by artisans who bring their wares to the three-day festival. The Victorian Festival runs Sept. 17, 18 and 19.

Anniversaries

Toth 45th

Stephen and Arliss Toth will celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary on Sept. 4.

The two were married Sept. 4, 1954 in Toledo, Ohio. They have lived in Toledo, Dearborn and Northville since being married.

Born and raised in Toledo, Stephen Toth is a retired Ford Motor Co. employee, while Arliss Toth — a Glasston, N.D. native — is a retired registered nurse. The couple are members of Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church in Northville. They have two children — Stephen Toth of Northville, and Valerie (John) Church of Woodstock, Ga. The Arliss's have two grandchildren.

The couple will be taking a vacation in celebration of the anniversary.

Church News

A seminar for men on "success that matters" has been scheduled for Ward Evangelical Presbyterian Church of Northville on Sept. 10 and 11. The seminar will discuss life pressure and discovery of that "something" missing from a person's life. The program is $30 and runs Sept. 10 and 11, beginning at 7 p.m. on Sept. 10. For more information, call (248) 374-7400.

Also at Ward — an informal drop-in support group for those struggling with blended family issues will meet the second Tuesday of each month beginning Sept. 14 in room C309 of the church from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. There is no cost for the seminar. For more information, all (248) 374-5912.

Finally, a multi-denominational Bible study class will resume at 10 a.m. Sept. 7 at Ward in the church's chapel. The class guides participants through the Bible, chapter by chapter, over a course of eight years.

The class is lead by Dr. Pam Dodge, a graduate of Trinity Evangelical Divinity School. Child care can be arranged.

For more information, call (248) 349-7258.

Flu shots will be made available through the parish health ministry of Holy Family Catholic Church in Novi on Oct. 3. The shots are strongly recommended for seniors, particularly those age 65 or older. The shots are $10 (cash or check) or free if a person has Medicare Part B. Flu shots will not be given to persons under age 18 or those with an active neurological disorder or allergies to eggs, egg products, chicken feathers, thimerosal, gentamicin, streptomycin or sulfites. For more information, call (248) 347-3046.

Also at Holy Family — clothes for the needy are accepted every Monday from 9 a.m. to noon and then from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. On Thursday, the church accepts donations from 9 a.m. to noon. Drop-offs outside of the prescribed hours cannot be accepted. Low-income persons needing to shop for clothes must call to schedule an appointment.

For more information, call (248) 349-8553.

An adult education class on the tenets of the Roman Catholic faith will be offered at Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church in Northville beginning Sept. 15. The class will run every Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Established Catholics will be given a clearer understanding of the religion, while those interested in becoming Catholic will be told about the basic beliefs of the faith. For more information, call (248) 348-8650.

First Presbyterian Church of Northville will be hosting its seventh annual "Sharing the Gift" juried art show from Oct. 2 through Oct. 8. Submissions for entries into the show are due by Sept. 17. Entries of painting, drawing, sculpture, collage, graphics, photography, clay and fiber are welcome. For more information, call (248) 348-2678.

A ladies' Bible study is slated to begin Sept. 14 at First Church of the Nazarene in Northville. The study, a part of the Creative Living series, will focus on the book of Acts. The group will meet at 7 p.m.

There is a $15 registration and materials fee. For more information, call (248) 473-5449.

It's all about kids at Victorian Fest

Northville's end-of-summer celebration has activities galore for younger set

By B.J. HAMMERSTEIN
Staff Writer

Once upon a time, there was an era when video games, Teletubbies and television didn't encompass the means of entertainment for children.

In an attempt to rekindle the old spirit of imagination and creativity, the organizers of Northville's 11th annual Victorian Festival are promoting the weekend's events around the old-fashioned children's games.

"The three-day weekend is going to be filled with so many activities for children that if they spend every moment doing something they want to be doing, they still won't be able to do everything," said Laurie Marrs, executive director of the Northville Chamber of Commerce. "Main Street is going to be entirely filled with children's activities."

The fun begins with the the annual Victorian Festival parade through Main Street.

Marrs said the parade will include children from different organizations like the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and school groups.

"The entire street is going to be decorated," Marrs said. "There will be a giant slide, jousting and a moonwalk castle and moonwalk pumpkin."

Marrs said the popular little red wagon carrying prizes will again be part of the weekend's festival.

"Centered around the children, there is going to be all kinds of entertainment and fun for the family," Marrs said. "The festival is old-fashioned and Main Street will be full of old-fashioned fun."

Marrs said some of the traditional fun will include a balloon artist, jugglers, a magician, puppet shows and a ventriloquist.

A pie-eating contest is one of the favorite activities of kids big and small at the Northville Victorian Festival, slated for Sept. 17, 18 and 19.

"Dr. Rudy Medicine Man will be back performing for the kids," Marrs said. "Dr. Rudy is very popular with the children. His performance includes healing children with their ailments by supplying chocolate roundies. It is a lot of fun."

And fun will be theme of this year's event.

Some of the ongoing action throughout the weekend include juggler and unicyclist Ken Krakat, the strolling minstrels of J.G. and Marlee, Clark's Punch and Judy Puppet Show, Victorian storyteller MaryEllen Clark, clowns and dulcimers.

As time rolls back, children will be able to travel through town like people did in the Victorian days with free horse and carriage rides. Children will also learn more about the history of the Victorian Era by participating in games popular from the period.

Marrs said many of the events are interactive, allowing children to actively learn more about the era through experience.

She said there are swings throughout the street, hoop rolling and top spinning, which were popular kid's games during the Victorian Era, a wooden nickel hunt and a bubble gum blowing contest.

The popular pie eating contest will also make its return, she added.

"There is going to be non-stop fun for the entire family," Marrs said. "There are lots of free prizes for the children and plenty of fun things for the parents to do also. Downtown Northville is a safe and beautiful town. The weekend is always a lot of fun."

"Give me one good reason to contribute to the Red Cross."

• The American Red Cross helps people prevent, prepare for and respond to emergencies. • We unite families and loved ones separated by war and disaster. • We're in your neighborhood every day, providing disaster preparedness information and teaching classes in first aid, lifesaving and water safety, to help keep families like yours safer. • We're not a government agency, but an independent organization that depends on donations from people you to survive. • Our volunteers give their time to help others.

There are many reasons to contribute to the Red Cross. Then again, one reason is all it takes.

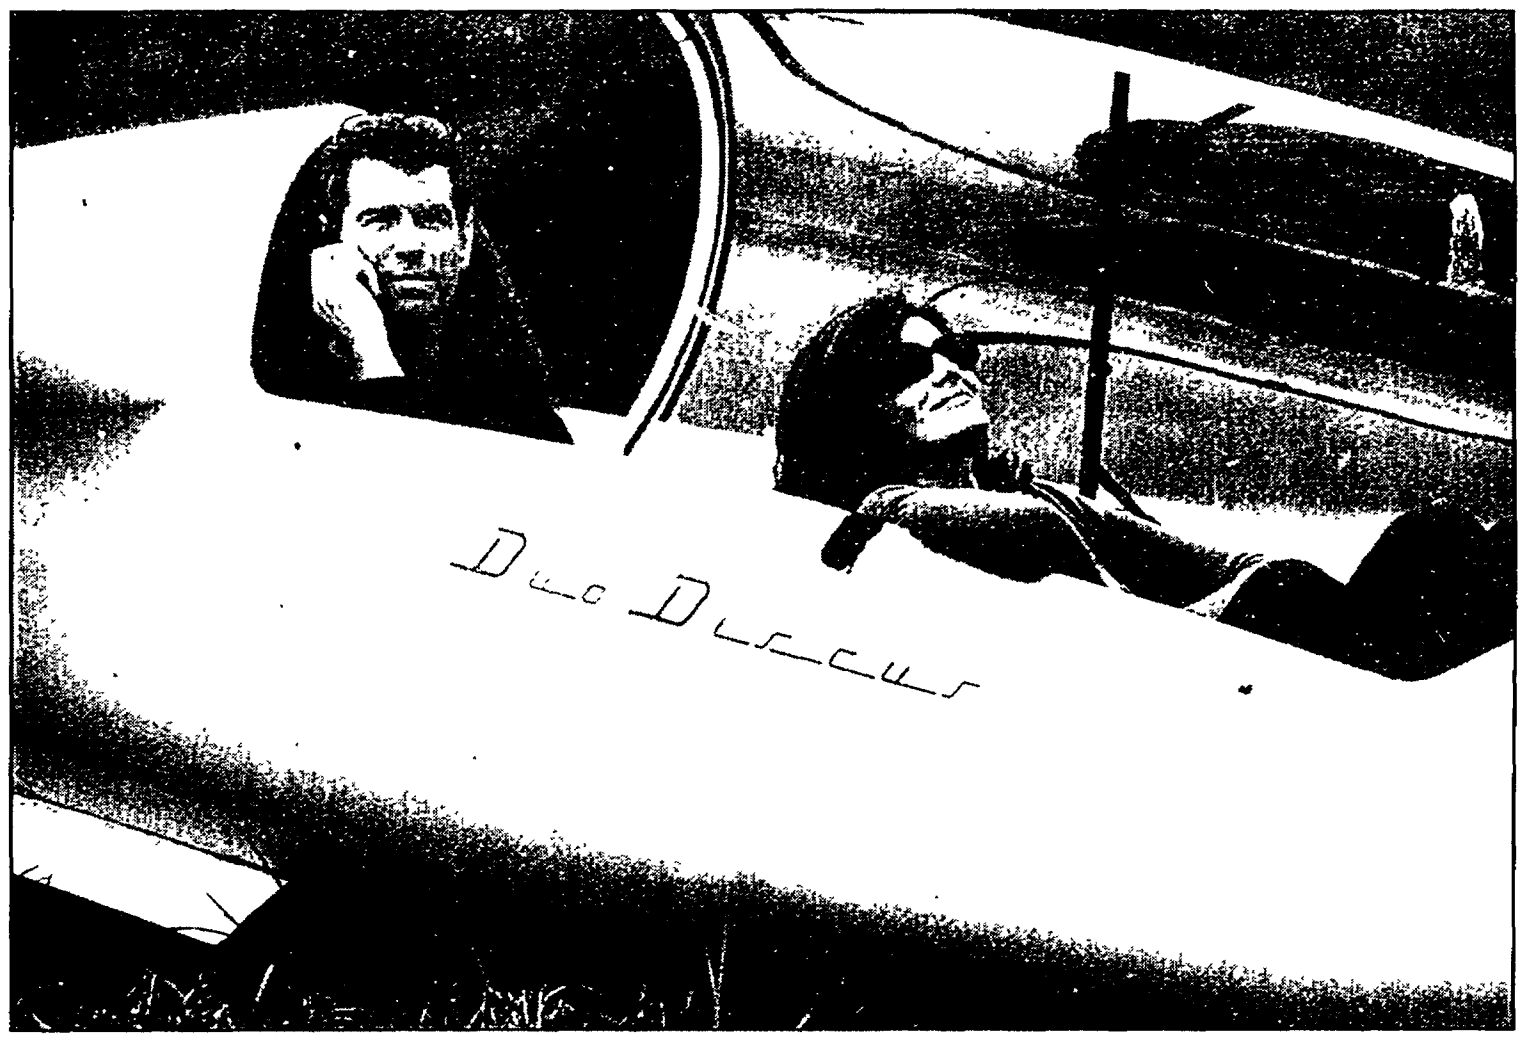
'The 13th Warrior'

"The 13th Warrior" is an exciting and unforgettable adventure-thriller based on Michael Crichton's best-selling novel, "Eaters of the Dead." When an important emissary (Antonio Banderas) enlists with a band of warriors, he is forced to join their battle against mysterious creatures legendary for consuming every living thing in their path. The Touchstone Pictures' release is distributed by Buena Vista Pictures Distribution. "The 13th Warrior" is rated "PG-13."



Pierce Brosnan and Rene Russo star in "The Thomas Crown Affair."

Slick, tricky "Crown" is a modern gem

By Jon Gibson
GUEST REVIEW

Money, seduction and foreplay are all present in "The Thomas Crown Affair," but does this remake of the 1969 Steve McQueen/Faye Dunaway classic live up to its vintage competition? Indeed, it does.

Exhibiting the same chemistry, but with different plot devices that both of the original characters had — exemplified by confident and realistic performances by Pierce Brosnan and Rene Russo — this high-society drama is a must-see.

Director John McTiernan ("Die Hard," "Medicine Man") translates this recreation into the '90s, changing only a few things to make it more adept and alluring to modern movie-going audiences.

However, the original story is left a bit scarred, transforming the relentlessly slick Thomas Crown (Brosnan) into a brilliant business man that moonlights as a part-time art thief. Previously, Crown was a high-scale bank robber.

Catherine Banning (Russo) remains similar as the insurance company employed manhunter who seeks to throw Crown a bone and catch him in the act.

But the unexpected, mutual seduction of both Crown and Banning turns into a tale of morality and crime, ultimately leading up to a very absorbing, slick and eye-opening conclusion.

The poetic license taken with the film's plot only furthers the allure of the film, making the hidden attraction between Crown and Banning a much more prominent part of the story.

Though the one modern liberty that enthusiasts of the original might quibble about is the film's explicit sexuality.

Presented much more conservatively, but still controversial for its day, director Norman Jewison managed to exchange nudity with a simple, yet strategically shot, chess sequence that magnified the character's carnal appetite with certain excellence.

Without any touching or open dialogue, the massaging of a pawn creates the same atmosphere that the remake does with five minutes of sweat. Rene Russo's highly publicized nude scenes were a strong marketing point, but McTiernan manages to craft the film into more than just physical heat.

The film most closely stays true to the original with its diverse and often jazzy music score, a trademark of the historic Jewison feature. The soundtrack keeps "Crown" on pace, never offering a dull or unused moment to lighten the mood. And strategically, the score usually drops out of an emotional scene, leaving the actors dependent on their dramatic abilities to touch the audience with tragedy.

Faye Dunaway is even intercut into the film in a special appearance, portraying Crown's eclectic advice-offering psychiatrist. As for the film's other supporting cast members, Denis Leary and Ben Gazzera — they offer depth and humor to the film that it could not survive without.

Judging from this new remake, I now have a little bit of confidence in Hollywood when it comes to reorganizing classic films. Where recreations of "The Haunting" and "Psycho" failed, "The Thomas Crown Affair" succeeds.

Jon M. Gibson is the editor of the entertainment web site, the Digital Bayou (http://www.digitalbayou.com).

Like they did the entire game last Friday, Brighton defenders gang tackle a Northville runner on a kickoff return.

Bitten hard

Bulldogs put the smack down on Northville in season opener 31-3

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

It was ugly, disappointing, unenviable and scary.

And that was before they played the game.

Northville struggled both offensively and defensively in a 31-3 opening-season loss to Brighton last Friday night on the road.

The Bulldogs, ranked second or third in the state in most polls, racked up 370 yards on offense, with most of that coming during a first half in which they built a 24-0 lead.

Northville looked overwhelmed, being blown off the line on offense and unable to penetrate Brighton's big offensive line. The Mustangs first two plays of the game resulted in negative six yards. Brighton's first five (pass-5 yards, run-5, run-5, run-4 and run-16) put them in position to kick a 35-yard field goal to take a 3-0 lead.

Brighton added touchdowns on their next two possessions.

Jim Reese's four-yard touchdown run to give them an 9-0 lead and he added a seven-yard scamper for a 15-0 lead. The two-point conversion attempt was good and Brighton led 17-0 with 10:12 remaining in the second quarter.

"I think on the first play for us when they sacked Cooley — that set the tone for the game," Northville coach Darrel Schumacher said.

Northville put together a 12-play drive which began at their own 26, but ended with a missed 41-yard field goal attempt by Tim Kelleher. Quarterback Eric Cooley completed a pair of third-down passes to Aaron Redden to keep the drive alive and tailback Ryan Anolick carried the ball three times for 13 yards and a first down.

Brighton would continue their flawless play by adding another score with 2:31 left in the half. Quarterback Cullen Finnerty hit wideout Greg Landry Jr. on a crossing pattern. Landry had his man beat by two yards and outran Northville's defensive backs to the end zone and a 24-0 lead. The play covered 81 yards.

After Brighton scored on its first possession of the second half, the game played pretty evenly. Northville was able to move the ball against the Bulldogs' second-string defense.

Northville's score came on its second-to-last drive. Starting from their own 39 yard line, they moved the ball upfield quickly. Brandon Langston broke loose for a 21-yard gain and Anolick followed that up with another 35 yards down to the Brighton eight.

But a false start penalty and a fumbled option attempt led to a 35-yard field goal by Kelleher.

"I was a little disappointed with the outcome there," Schumacher said. "We had them in a good position, but penalties

Golf team needs someone to step up this year

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

This year's golf team won't have a problem finding a top golfer, or depth that can be counted on seven or eight deep.

But Northville will have to have one or two guys step up and take responsibility for one or two top spots on the team. The Mustangs return several golfers with varsity experience, including No. 1 golfer Tom Borda. But the team has six other golfers who, depending on the day, can finish second through seventh on the team.

"We feel that we have a real balanced team," coach Brad Stedry said. "We've got six or seven guys that can shoot the best score on our team on any given day."

Borda returns after averaging 39.9 per nine holes a year ago. He was team medalist in about 75 percent of his team's competitions and made HomeTown's all-area first team. He earned all-division honors at the Western Lakes meet with a round of 80.

So far this year he's been shooting in the high 30s after spending the summer competing in various amateur events.

"He's better this year than last. I think he's going to be in the upper 30s pretty consistently this year," Stedry said. "It's hard to improve on his game a ton because he's already got all the tools. We're just going to try and cut down on errant shots he may have."

So far, there have been a few golfers step forward with great practice rounds and consistent play. Among them is freshman David Oljace, who fired a team-best 74 in tryouts a few weeks back. He also carded a 34 in practice Monday afternoon.

"He's definitely got some promise," the coach said. "It says a lot for him to shoot that low at tryouts."

Co-captains Kris Betker and Brian Arndt plan to be consistent scorers this season. Both competed on the varsity last year and both have improved by two or three strokes each.

"You can definitely tell Kris worked on his game this summer, and Brian is in the same boat as Kris. I know he played a lot because he worked for me (at Tanglewood)," Stedry said.

Along with Arndt, Mike Heyer and Justin Temple are two other seniors who plan to be in the mix. They and junior Dean Conway will challenge for a starting position and can break out with a great score at any time

Stedry's most improved player from a year ago is back. Junior Bill Montgomery dropped his average by seven strokes and has an outside chance to score for the team this season.

Sophomore Kyle Dehne saw time in varsity matches at the end of 1998 and could improve enough to play this year. Junior varsity fixture, junior Bill Salliote may play the same role as he did last year or may step up and compete for the varsity.

Seventy kids tried out for the team and 20 made the varsity and JV squads.

Northville opened up its season Tuesday against Novi at the Links of Novi. Yesterday the team hosted South Lyon at Tanglewood.

Mustang runners hope to get a jump on their Novi competitors in last week's meet at Cass Benton.

Runners open with the best

By JASON SCHMITT
Staff Writer

Northville boys' cross country coach Chris Cronin described his team's first week of the season as a "roller coaster" week. He couldn't have been more right.

The Mustangs had the unenviable task of taking on the defending state champion Novi in its first meet of the season last Thursday. The Wildcats took it to them, taking the first five places before Brian Bilyk helped his team avoid a shutout with a sixth-place finish.

The junior finished the Cass Benton course just ahead of Novi's Mitch Erickson and Matt Harsha-Strong.

But he was the lone Mustang to crack Novi's top seven. Teammate Phil Santer was the next Northville runner to cross the line in ninth place overall. Eric Nadeau was 10th and Mike Gabrys and Nick Moroz were 12th and 15th, respectively.

"Opening the season against the defending state champions was rough," Cronin said. "But I like the way the team rebounded for the Pinckney Invitational (the next day). If you told me we'd put five runners in their top 15, I'd have taken it."

No scores were kept at the Pinckney Invitational, but Cronin said he saw vast improvements in his team and felt this was a better test of his team's talent.

Northville is off until the team competes in a quad mee Sept. 9. Their next home meet is against Farmington Hills Harrison Sept. 18 at Cass Benton.

Swimmers hope to make a splash

With several key members back, swimmers hope to stand tall

By JASON SCHMITT

It's not so much how his team competes against the competition this year that concerns girl's swim coach Bill Dicks, it's how they're able to compete against themselves.

"We're not here to see how they do against other teams, we're here to see personal improvements from these girls," he said. "I've always told them to measure their success against themselves. Most of these girls are here to participate in a sport for 12 weeks. We do have some who swim year round who may have a shot for scholarships, but most are here for the fun."

The team will be led by a good balance of upper and lower classmen this season. Senior captain Jackie Salliote and fellow senior Stefanie Nurmi will both compete in the backstroke, but Salliote will focus on the individual medley and distance freestyles. Nurmi will also swim some butterfly.

Another senior, Stephanie Sabo, returns with state finals experience, and will swim primarily in the 50 and 100 freestyle.

Junior Jessica Hrivnak also swam on the state relay team and will help out in both the butterfly and freestyle events.

Five sophomores stand out early on. Ali Stewart and Laura Sheppard will both compete in the 200 and 500 freestyles and Allison Greenlee will also swim the freestyle.

Deirdre Schwiring is a breaststroker and will swim the individual medley and Kim Veres will handle the diving responsibilities.

Three freshmen have stood out and should be good enough to compete in most of the meets. Amy Black is a distance freestyler who will also compete in the backstroke. Jenny Carr is a butterflier and will also swim the individual medley. Erin Schubert is a freestyler.

"They're right in there with that top group of swimmers," Dicks said. "They are standouts at or near the top for us."

Those will be the girls Dicks is relying on to score most of the points, but three more names stood out as girls who will add depth to the team and could step up and score as well. Senior Nicole Sprader, junior Erica Mohacsi and freshman Lisa Longeway are on deck, so to speak.

Forty-four girls are on the team after Dicks had to make an initial cut from about 50.

"I won't be making any more cuts," he said. "I've never done it before so I wasn't sure how to handle it."

Boy's varsity coach David Wayne will again assist Dicks.

"Overall we're stronger than we were last year," the head coach said. "But our biggest asset is the camaraderie amongst our girls. After two days of practice it looked as if they'd practiced together for years. They're an extremely close group."

Northville opens up the season Tuesday at South Lyon.

Again their only home contest will be Oct. 14 against Franklin.

killed us. We should have been able to score a touchdown there and take away some momentum."

Northville finished with 182 total yards, 96 on the ground and 86 more through the air. Brighton's balance showed, with 161 yards coming on the ground and another 209 in the air.

Cooley finished 8 for 14 passing for 86 yards. Redden caught six of those passes for 82 yards. Anolick led the ground game for 55 yards and Langston added 42.

On defense, Bob Baker led the way for Northville with six first hits and four assisted tackles. Both Steve Jameson and Brandon Bueter had five first hits and three assists. Mike Peters had three and three. Travis Bliss caused a fumble and Jon Campion made the recovery.

"They really have a nice outfit out there," Schumacher said of Brighton. "I felt Eric (Cooley) did a good job of keeping his composure, considering that they were sending the world at him. In general we found out a lot about our football team."

The Mustangs play North Farmington this week at home. The Raiders won their first game this past week and are comparable to Northville.

"I was afraid this would happen," Schumacher said. "They'll be coming in here on a high. They've got a new coach now and with a win under him, they may have confidence already. On paper we're very comparable."

The game will begin at 7:30 at the Northville High School football field.

Hot Picks

The second season of football picks has begun, and everyone will be trying to top the defending champion, Jason Schmitt. This year we've even given the coin a chance, so hopefully, everyone has at least a 50 percent chance of finishing out of last place we hope!

Harriers face tough field

Girls take on Novi, Stevenson in tough scrimmage

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

Some coaches kept scores, some didn't.

The main thing was getting the opportunity to see the girls run in a competitive atmosphere early on in the season, before the real season gets underway.

The Northville girls' cross country team ran against two top teams, Livonia Stevenson and Novi. The Spartans finished ninth in the state a year ago and Novi has been a top-10 team four of the last five seasons.

Northville's Alyson Flohr had a top 10 finish, running the Cass Benton course in a time of 21 minutes, 56 seconds. The team's next three times were well packed, 18 seconds apart.

Kelly Driscoll finished second on the team in 23:30 and Anna Schovers and Allison Loeffler clocked in at 23:36 and 23:48. Hillary McCrumb was the Mustangs' fifth runner (24:14).

Finishing sixth and seventh for Northville were Julie Ecclestone and Laura Elsesser. Julie Bozyk, Kailein Krizanich and Jennifer Sykes rounded out the top 10.

The team came back to Cass Benton this past Saturday to compete at the Marian scrimmage. Times were down a bit from the Novi scrimmage, but scores were not kept.

Flohr's time rose to 22:34, but she still led the team. Driscoll was a solid second on the team in 23:34. Lorianne Blair was third in 24:16 and Elsesser (25:20) and Ecclestone (25:22) were fourth and fifth.

Northville's next five runners were Julie Bozyk (25:35), Christy Delano (25:44), Sykes (25:55), Emily Shebak (25:56) and Ramona Maza (26:48).

Colts teams open up new season with varsity win

The Northville-Novi Colts opened up their 1999 Suburban Youth Football League season by winning one of three games against the Lapeer Steelers.

The varsity Colts (12-14 year olds) picked up the lone win as both the junior varsity and freshmen teams lost.

"It was a great start for our young competitors," said Bob Baum, commissioner of the Northville-Novi Colts. "This is our first year in a new league and our kids played aggressively on the visitor's field."

The varsity team scored early in the first quarter on a Kevin Cislo touchdown reception from quarterback Charlie Thomas and never looked back in a 41-19 win.

Sean Costello caught two touchdown passes and Brendon Buff returned an interception for a touchdown.

Leading the defense were Alex Baum (five tackles, one interception) and Joshua Szatkowski (interception). Brad Spisich and Joe Prain kicked extra points and Dennis Berry scored on an extra point reception.

Junior varsity

Looking for the same outcome as the varsity squad, the junior varsity team was in no such luck.

The Steelers took it to the Colts early and often in a 38-0 win.

Freshmen

Hoping to build on last year's Super Bowl championship appearance, the Colts got off to a rough start in 1999.

Their only points of the game came on a safety by Joe Kinville, who tackled his Lapeer opponent in the end zone.

Starting quarterback Brian Bagian and running backs Sam Knolton and Keenan Hart tried to get things going offensively, but couldn't.

On defense, Daniel Young and Andrew Gorley kept the Colts in the game, coming up with timely plays.

But in the end the Colts fell to the Steelers 7-2.

The Colts open their home season up this Sunday at 11 a.m. against the Multi-Lake Gators from Walled Lake. All the Colts games are played at Northville High School at the corner of Eight Mile and Taft roads.

"We hope to have a lot of parents, neighbors and friends come to our home openers," Baum said. "We are expecting three exciting battles with the Gators."

Who's the best?

Now that 1999 is upon us, and 2000 is nearing, The Northville Record asks the questions; what was the best team and who were the best football players ever to don the Northville 'N'? We're asking our readers for help us in our search for the best football players in Northville High School history. If you've got a memory, a thought or an opinion you'd like to share with us, please return this slip to the Northville Record office at 104 W. When my children came into my life, I realized how important it is to eat well—not just for them, but for me too. After all, I'm not doing them any favors by taking chances with my own health.

Food can be powerful medicine, and the best prescription is to eat more low-fat vegetarian meals. The more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains you eat, the more your body will thank you. For a tasty way to help prevent illness, try some black bean chili, Jamaican jerked tofu with vegetables, or pasta marinara with broccoli.

Tennis team looks to find itself

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

Northville tennis coach Uta Filkin learned a lot about her team as they competed in the Rochester Invitational last weekend.

She learned she has more to learn.

Struggling to find the perfect lineup, Filkin made some changes after the first week of practice.

"I had a lot of new combinations that haven't had too many opportunities to play with each other because of the rain we had last week," Filkin said. "So because of that I was really pleased with our finish."

The team took second out of four teams, battling it out with Rochester for the title. The Falcons kept the championship at home, scoring 19 points to Northville's 17. Port Huron earned seven points and Brighton scored two.

In the end, both teams won four championships, but Rochester was able to finish second in every other flight. Northville wasn't.

Junior Kerry Woolfall finished 3-0 and took home the first title of the day for Northville at second singles. She beat Rochester in her first match 6-1, 6-4 and then went on to beat Port Huron 6-1, 6-2 and Brighton by default.

At third singles, Lauren West had an easy route to the championship. She beat Port Huron in the opening match 6-2, 6-4, but then won by default over her next two opponents. Her Rochester opponent defaulted after dropping the first set to West 1-6.

Sarah Poirer and Lauren Farris went on to win the title at second doubles, defeating Port Huron 6-0, 6-4, Brighton 6-2, 7-6 (1) and Rochester in a three setter.

At fourth doubles Jamie Lindholm and Emily Krywko beat Rochester 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, Brighton 6-1, 6-4 and Port Huron 6-3, 6-2 to take home the title.

Three of the four flights that didn't win their flights took home second place, including Jessie Mills at first singles.

The senior was leading Brighton 6-3, 5-3 when her opponent retired in the opening match. She then topped Port Huron to set up a match with Rochester's top player. Mills fell to her nationally-ranked opponent, Lauren Demeyer, 0-6, 0-6.

At first doubles, Nicole Lindholm and Joanna Lee fell to Rochester in their first match 1-6, 6-7 (7). They did bounce back to top Port Huron 6-1, 6-0 and Brighton 6-0, 6-2.

Rachel Huang and Emily Stevenson topped Brighton 6-1, 6-4 and Port Huron 6-2, 6-1 but lost to Rochester in a tough three-set match 1-6, 7-6 (6), 3-6.

Allison Long played fourth singles for Northville but didn't register a win.

"If you look at the flight winners, we would have tied them," Filkin said. "They just got some help from the other teams, and we didn't."

Northville is off until Sept. 8 when it squares off with North Farmington on the road.

Coaching a major league team is a full-time job and so is my responsibility to my family. That's why I eat plenty of healthy foods like veggie burgers, spinach and bean burritos, and vegetable lasagna. The more vegetarian meals you include in your routine, the better. So play it safe for your team.

"Tell a Friend" program is growing

Weight Watchers has joined with the American Cancer Society in an exclusive tri-state breast cancer screening initiative. The effort, called Tell-A-Friend, is a proactive attempt to reach women in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan who do not currently get annual mammograms.

Michigan and Indiana make up the Great Lakes Division on the American Cancer Society.

Weight Watchers staff members and members will share important mammography and other breast cancer information with their respective female friends and relatives during the month of May.

Weight Watchers leaders at locations throughout all three states will encourage members to call at least five of their friends, which could multiply quickly.

"Tell-A-Friend" is an expansion of last October's nationwide "Tell-A-Friend Tuesday," which successfully reached more than 21,000 women in one single day, throughout the Great Lakes Division of the American Cancer Society.

Weight Watchers president and chief executive officer Florine Mark said she was happy to involve her company because she believed the campaign was a important one.

"I wanted to give our employees and clients an opportunity to participate because breast cancer is a disease that affects nearly every American," said Mark. "It's easy to tell friends about the importance of checking their breasts every month. This is a natural partnership, since healthy living is what Weight Watchers is all about, and it gives us an opportunity to give something back to the community."

Tell-A-Friend is simple. Women (or men) simply call at least five female friends, age 40 or older, with information on breast cancer screening guidelines and encouragement to get a mammogram. The American Cancer Society estimates that it takes roughly 20 minutes to make these important, life-saving calls.

The American Cancer Society breast cancer guidelines call for monthly breast self-exams and clinical breast exams every three years for women 20-39. Women 40 and over should follow the same guidelines and add annual mammograms to their health-screening regimen.

In 1997, a reported 65 percent of women 40 and older received mammograms throughout Michigan; 61 percent in Indiana and 62 percent in Ohio. Through the partnership's continued efforts, Weight Watchers and the American Cancer Society hope to see the number of women having mammograms in all three participating states increase by at least 800,000 by the year 2000.

The American Cancer Society provides the information and caller kits to all participating companies. For more information on state-specific statistics of breast cancer, mammography or the "Tell-A-Friend" campaign, call (800) ACS-2345.

HOW TO

Ceiling fans can cut cooling costs

By Gene Gary
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. I read an article that recommended ceiling fans to help cut energy costs. I looked at the selection of fans at a home-improvement center, and now I am thoroughly confused. They range in pricing from around $40 to nearly $500. The clerk tried to sell me one of the more expensive models. If I spend too much money on a fan, I doubt that I will be saving that much on my energy bills. Do you have any information on what to look for in ceiling fans and how practical they are?

A. A ceiling fan can supplement or replace air conditioning and make a big difference in both the comfort of your home and your energy bill. With sufficient air movement you can feel comfortable at higher temperatures. For instance, a fan that runs as a complement to your air conditioner can make a room whose thermostat is set at 78 degrees feel like it's 72 degrees. These means you can turn the thermostat up and save significantly on your cooling costs. Some studies show that a ceiling fan can cut electricity used for cooling by up to 30 percent.

It's not wise to buy the lower-priced models. Within a year the fan may wobble excessively and the motor may hum. However, this doesn't mean that you have to invest in the most expensive models for durability and efficiency. Sometimes the most expensive fans are more cosmetic than efficient.

Things to look for in fan construction are motor housing material, bearing type, motor size, blade pitch, range of speeds, automatic speed and lighting controls, and sound/vibration isolating features.

Die-cast or cast-iron housings are best. These are made to close tolerances. This heavier metal, as compared to a thin steel stamping, dissipates heat better, is more durable and provides longer motor life. A larger, more powerful motor also runs cooler and quieter. Double-shielded, permanently lubricated bearings are most durable and quiet. When fan bearings are shielded on one side only, they're exposed to dust and can wear prematurely. Look for other motor or fan housing elements that reduce wear. Corrosion-free parts and a housing that promotes thermal conduction mean the fan will run cooler. Direct-drive motors have fewer moving parts, less friction and less wear. Look for sound-and-vibration-reducing components between all metal parts.

A steeper pitch angle (twist) of the blades is better and moves more air at a lower speed. Most better-quality fans have a blade pitch of 13 to 14 degrees. Moisture warps inexpensive or improperly sealed fan blades. The best fan blades are made of laminated or solid hardwoods, which resist moisture and warping.

Fans can wobble when cheaply made rotors get out of balance or blades are unmatched in pitch and weight.

Be sure the manufacturer of your fan has a network of repair or replacement-parts facilities. Some of the major brands have toll-free numbers for service and information on centers that provide service and repair for their products. Manufacturers' limited warranties run from five years to the lifetime of the fan.

Q. I have a large ceiling fan that is poorly balanced, so that it can be operated only at the slowest speed. Otherwise, it wobbles badly. Can you explain how to balance such a fan?

A. There are a number of factors that can cause a ceiling fan to wobble excessively. To troubleshoot the problem, start by inspecting the installation of your fan. Since there is no one way to install a ceiling fan, consult the installation instructions that came with your model. Read them carefully and double check every step.

Your fan may not be secure on the hanger assembly or the mounting screws may require tightening. The blade brackets may not be attached to the proper locations. The fan could be installed too close to a vaulted ceiling.

If your ceiling fan has a light fixture, check with a fan outlet store or the manufacturer to make sure your light fixture is suitable for your particular fan. If the improper light fixture has been installed, it will disrupt the balance of the entire unit.

If your fan still wobbles after this type of check up, you will have to look further for the vibration problem. Accumulated dust and dirt can disrupt the fine balance of a ceiling fan. Clean the blades and during the process check for loose blades or blade brackets and tighten all screws. If any of the blades are cracked or warped (they should lay flat when placed on a flat surface), replace the entire set, not just a single blade.

Examine the blade irons. The irons are manufactured to sit at a 12-degree angle. If one of them becomes bent, this disrupts the balance. Stack the blade irons on top of each other to assure that they all match. If one is out of alignment, have it replaced.

With the blades and irons removed, check the motor by turning the fan on to its fastest setting. It should not wobble. If it does, have the motor checked for repairs by an authorized repair center for your brand of fan. If the motor doesn't wobble, and the fan still vibrates when you reassemble the unit, you can use small weights to fine-tune the balance of the blades.

Balancing kits are often included when you purchase a fan. They are also available at home centers or from your local fan dealer. These kits include weights which can be placed on top of the fan blades. The balancing process can be tedious, but it is not difficult if you follow manufacturer directions.

Miniature trains can be an entertaining addition to most any garden.

GARDEN EXPRESS

Trains help bring a new dimension to home landscaping projects

By Annette Jaworski
SPECIAL WRITER

It's okay to play with your train, even when your all grown up. Serious hobbyists of gardening and trains, know that the combination of the two seems to be a marriage made in heaven.

"Gardeners and trainers are constantly fiddling. If you've got a garden and a railroad, you're in hog heaven. There's always something you can change," said Art Schouw, sales associate at Sparr's in downtown Northville.

Imagine a train operated by a computer, or a car with a camcorder to give the engineer a virtual reality trip. These are all possible in the world of hobby trains. And the combination of trains and gardening creates a realistic look that is unsurpassed.

"Of course, the scenery is superior, it's the real thing," points out owner of Sparr's and Elite Landscape, Jared Sparr.

One secret to creating an authentic looking garden railroad is the use of real plants. Sparr said it's important to select varieties of plants that stay small. Certain grasses, or ground covers like Irish moss and perennials, work well. For a southwest look, hens and chicks are great.

There's many ways to use outdoor landscaping. For example, a rock garden can suddenly become boulderous mountains, with a tunnel. A pond becomes a lake, with the track spanning the water underneath it's trusses. The most popular size of train used outdoors is the LGB/1/24 scale or a size one. It's generally a bit larger than the indoor models.

Specialty companies offer all the accessories you can dream of such as buildings, people, landscape and trusses. The layout can be as simple or as complicated as you want, Sparr said. A good layout takes a lot of space. The longer the train, the wider curves you need for turns to prevent stalling or wheel sliding.

Using the outdoors often gives the designer more room for his layout. Some train lovers go as far as snow blades on the front of the engine for winter time, or trap doors where the train can retreat into the indoor comfort of the garage. Railroad fanatics often build their own accessories, such as buildings, to create the effect they want.

A good garden train will usually focus on a theme. It makes sense that you don't want a train to just go around in circles, it's got a job to do such as mining, logging or commercial hauling. Or, the theme may be an era, such as the 1930's or the late 1800's, one of Sparr's favorites.

One common mistake some trainers make is leaving the engine shiny and clean. Schouw points out that the only time a real train is clean is when it's brand new.

Presently, Sparr does not stock an open inventory of railroad products, but can special order as requested. They do offer professional set up and landscaping through Elite Gardening. Many people start by having a professional set up the layout and then let their imaginations take over.

For more information on garden railroads, call Jared Sparr at Sparr's of Northville located downtown on 156 North Center Street at the corner of Dunlap and Center. Call (248) 247-0088.

Basic tips to assist prospective home buyers

By James M. Woodard
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

An increasing number of first-time home buyers are entering the current real-estate market. Some are successful in finding the right property and needed financing. Others are still desperately seeking that coveted objective.

In some ways, new technology has made it easier for those fledgling home buyers. They can quickly obtain information about the market and available homes with a few clicks of their computer mouse. And they can determine their qualifications for a mortgage loan with a few more clicks.

On the other hand, purchasing a home in today's market has become an increasingly complex procedure in recent years. Prices are higher, and there are a confusing mix of mortgage plans to choose from.

It's time to tick off some basic tips that will help prospective home buyers find their way through the maze of steps that lead to successfully finding the right first home and closing the transaction.

Make a list of your personal housing needs and desires, prioritizing them in order of their importance. Also it's a good idea to make two separate lists, titled "must have" and "like to have."

Access several of the leading Web sites on the Internet that provide listings of available homes in all areas of the country and up-to-date information on home-selling transactions.Example sites: www.realtor.com, www.homeadvisor.com.

Access a home-mortgage Web site to quickly determine about how much of a loan you are qualified for. Example: www.mbaa.org (the site maintained by Mortgage Bankers Association of America).

Save enough money to cover 20 percent of the purchase price as a down payment plus closing costs, if possible. This will save considerable money that would otherwise be needed for higher mortgage payments and "private mortgage insurance" premiums. However, there are plans available for lower down payments.

Check your credit rating and correct any errors you see that might be a problem in qualifying for a mortgage loan. Also, hold off making any other large credit purchases until after your mortgage loan is funded.

Select a local Realtor to represent you in your search for the right home and counsel you through each step in the transaction. Be sure the Realtor is experienced and capable to provide productive, professional service. Ask friends and business associates for referrals.

Check out the neighborhood of any home being seriously considered. Talk to a few neighbors. You might discover things good or bad that you otherwise would not know.

Check county records on the property or development being considered. Especially note any deed restrictions that might apply to the property.

Insist on a professional home inspection, and make your offer subject to approval of the inspection report.

It's always a good idea to have the property covered by a one-year home-warranty plan to lessen the chances of unexpected problems surfacing.

Nodders are inclined to increase in value

By Anne McCollam
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

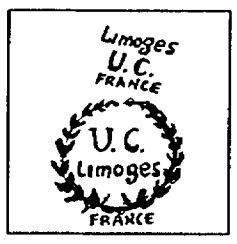
ANTIQUES

Q. Enclosed is a photo of a pair of bisque Oriental figures that belonged to my husband's grandfather. We believe they were made in the early 1900s. Each head is balanced on a pin and nods when touched. They are hollow inside and stand about 6 inches tall. There is no manufacturer's mark. Could you tell us what their value is?

A. Your figures are nodders. The very earliest nodders represented Chinese deities and were usually made of brass. They were ceremonial bells, and, when rung, the heads nodded. European manufacturers borrowed the idea in the 1700s and made porcelain and bisque nodders. Most seen today were produced during the Victorian era. They are still being made today. Your nodders are circa 1900, and each would probably be worth about $125 to $175.

Q. I would like some information on a set of china that I received from my grandmother. It is a service for 12 and includes serving pieces. Each dish is decorated with a geometric border with a butterfly and flower motif. The mark I have enclosed is on each piece.

How old is the set and what is its value?



A. Union Ceramique in Limoges, France, used the mark you provided. It made porcelain from 1900 to 1950. Your set was made in the early 1900s and would probably be worth about $75 to $125 for each place setting.

Q. I have a Pepsi-Cola tray that has been in our family since the 1950s. It is 13 inches in diameter and in perfect condition. On it are the words "Have A Pepsi."

What can you tell me about it?

A. Pepsi-Cola was the invention of North Carolina pharmacist Caleb D. Bradham in the 1890s. He named it "Brad's Drink." Around 1898, he changed the name to Pepsi-Cola. By 1910, there were 250 bottlers in 24 states. Two major financial setbacks occurred, one after World War I and the other in 1931. A significant turning point came in 1933 when Pepsi-Cola doubled its bottle size but kept the nickel price. Outstanding leadership and innovative marketing provided by Walter Mack from 1938 to 1951 kept Coca-Cola looking over its shoulder. In the race for the No. 1 spot, Pepsi-Cola was often successful in the foreign market.

Unseasoned collectors beware! There is a plethora of reproductions. Your 1950s tray would probably be worth about $75 to $125.

BOOK REVIEW

"Antique Trader Books American & European Art Pottery Price Guide" is edited by Kyle Husfloen.

Over the past 25 years, art pottery has maintained a solid hold in the marketplace. Some extraordinary pieces have sold in the thousands. The "American and European Pottery Price Guide" is an exceptional reference. More than 2,000 listings are described in detail along with detailed background information on manufacturers. More than 300 photos, prices, marks and shapes make identification easy. Also included is a fascinating history of the American art pottery movement by expert Don Treadway, an informative glossary and helpful appendices. This easy-to-use guide is a must-have for art pottery collectors.

The earliest nodding figures, whose heads balance on pins, were made in China and represented deities. These circa 1900 nodders are each probably worth $125 to $175.

El Dorado: a country club setting for the public

By ANNETTE JAWORSKI
Staff Writer

There's always an open invitation at El Dorado Country Club in Commerce Township. Owner, Wade Lorang, sees his family owned golf course as a facility that welcomes everyone.

"We're you're Country Club. We give the private amenities with public access," Lorang said.

With the hopes of providing an even higher level of service, Lorang planned improvements to the course in recent years and the construction of a 20,000 square foot club house, which was finished in November, 1998.

The new clubhouse features banquet facilities, headed by Kathy Nelson-Winnicki, Events Manager. Their capacity ranges from 25 to 500 guests for any events such as golf outings, weddings, business meetings, reunions, shower, holiday or retirement parties. Menus can be tailor made for any occasion, he said.

Lorang notes that with the proposed completion of the Haggerty Connector nearby, clientele from neighboring communities such as Livonia, Westland and Farmington area can reach the destination in a matter of minutes.

In addition to the banquet facilities, they also feature a new restaurant called the Mesquite Grille, which is open to the public. The Grille has seating for 140. Steaks are a favorite as well as the ribs, Lorang points out. The menu features Angus beef. Crab Legs are a popular menu item, and customers also enjoy the dinner salads served in tortilla shells.

The new patio is also a great asset in the summer months. There's seating for 64 under the new umbrella tables overlooking the course.

"People really enjoy sitting out there and relaxing," he added.

Another addition to their new clubhouse is a full service pro shop. Men's and women's locker rooms are available with showers.

El Dorado opened it's original nine holes in May 1967, and the second nine was completed in May 1991. Improvements in recent years have added about 500 trees, new white sand to the bunkers and water systems in the rough.

"We've rebuilt quite a few tees to make them bigger," Lorang said.

Wade Lorang is happy to carry on the tradition of his father, Walt Lorang, Sr. With admiration, he relates that his father worked most of his life to buy the property for the golf course in 1964, working in the tool and dye industry for 30 years. Walt Lorang caught the golf bug caddying at Oakland Hills Golf Course in the 1930's. He is currently enjoying both - his retirement and the golf course.

Other family members have contributed to the success of the course, including Wade's wife, Leslie, who landscapes, his son, Joshua, who is cart valet and daughter, Megan, who pitches to help mom.

El Dorado Country Club is located in Commerce Township on Pontiac Trail, just west of Haggerty Road. For information on the course or to reserve the banquet facilities, call (248) 624-6238.

Renter's: don't overlook insurance

Renters shouldn't overlook the need for insurance to protect their personal belongings.

"Unlike the owner of a house, who needs insurance coverage for both the dwelling and its contents, the renter needs a policy to protect just his/her personal belongings," Leanne Snay, executive director of Insurance Information Association of Michigan said.

If the renter's building is destroyed, the insurance policy purchased by the landlord or property owner will cover the structure only. To recover for the loss of personal effects, including furnishings, the renter must have his/her own policy.

However, it is estimated that less than 20 percent of all renters nationally purchase insurance to cover their belongings.

There is a policy tailored to fit the needs of renters, according to the insurance industry spokesperson. The renter's policy or HO-4 covers damage to possessions which result from perils such as explosion, fire or lightning, windstorm or hail, riot or civil commotion, theft and vandalism. It is similar to the package policy which is purchased by an owner of a house.

Generally, the renter's policy reimburses losses on an actual cash value basis. This means that the insurance company will pay replacement cost, less depreciation. For an additional premium, many insurance companies offer an endorsement to the policy which will cover contents on a replacement cost basis.

Although the renter's policy covers personal belongings such as furniture, appliances, clothing and jewelry, there are limitations on the amounts of coverage for certain types of personal property which are especially susceptible to loss. For example, coverage for cash generally has a $200 limit. Other valuables, such as jewelry, furs, firearms, silverware and computers vary between $1,000 and $5,000. For an additional premium, the consumer can purchase a policy endorsement which specifically describes each item and includes its dollar value.

The YMCA Youth Sports leagues are designed so every child plays half of every game. At the Plymouth YMCA, the word "winning" means a lot more than a score at the end of the game. Winning means working towards the realization of personal goals, which might include improving a particular aspect of the game, learning to work as a team, or just having fun and making new friends! For information on the YMCA Youth Sports Leagues or to become a volunteer coach or official, call the Plymouth YMCA at (734) 453-2904.

Y PRESCHOOL

Y PRE-SCHOOL

September 20, 1999 - June 15, 2000

"Y" Pre-school was established at the Plymouth YMCA in 1976 to provide a quality program for children ages 3 to 5 years. A caring staff will offer a structured program designed to develop cognitive skills. Each day includes free play (exploration time), social, and physical development time. "Y" Pre-school maintains that children must be cared for in a stimulating, safe environment in which the child's ideas, feelings, and development are nurtured and guided by competent, caring personnel. The Plymouth-Canton school calendar is followed.

BALLET & JAZZ COMBINATION (6 weeks)

Session I: September 13 - October 18
Session II: October 25 - November 29

Ballet is a method of theatrical dance that serves as a foundation for all other dance training. This class will teach the basics of this discipline with a focus on proper technique, alignment, and terminology in a fun and relaxed environment. Jazz dance is a mixture of African and European dance styles that stretches, elaborates, and even breaks the rules of ballet. Often set to popular music, it is the dance form of MTV and the musical theater, which explains its popularity. This class will explore the different kinds of jazz disciplines and performance using high energy music and choreography. Because its foundation is ballet, concurrent enrollment in Ballet 1 is recommended.

Have you ever pictured your children as athletes?

They can be, you know. All they need is the chance to play. In YMCA youth sports programs, everybody gets to play in every game. Because rather than putting the emphasis on winning, we emphasize character development. There are a variety of sports to choose from. So this year, give your children the chance to enjoy some great moments in sports at the Plymouth Community YMCA.

The YMCA office will be closed:

Publisher's Letter

Everything changes in September. It's not spring easing into summer where everything just gets greener. That's a quiet change. It's not like the first of the year. Sure you'll write the wrong dates on your checks for a month but your life isn't any different.

You can feel the shift to September. No matter how warm or sunny it still is there's a November nip that brushes against your bare arms. You make a mental note to get the sweaters out and find last year's boots.

Maybe it has something to do with younger days when school was such an easy way to mark time. You see the yellow buses turn onto your street and you remember finding yourself in strange new classrooms with new teachers and friends.

But it's more than school. You close your pool, the cottage. You box up your shorts and your sandals. Your favorite show starts another season.

And you adjust. You help friends wrap their lives carefully in boxes so nothing breaks. You jot down your's child's new soccer/Girl Scout/karate schedule or your eldest's new address.You shift with the season.

The shift from "Oh, Mom!" to "Gamma!" is, for me, the most wonderful change of all. Preparing for a new baby is challenging from a new mother's perspective but simply delightful from a new grandmother's view. Change can be good.

This month's Lifeline deals a lot with change: preparing for a new baby, seniors going back to school, sun worshippers repairing summer skin damage. Do yourself a favor and read it outside. Take yourself to the porch, prop your feet up and say, "There won't be many more nights like this." And while the days are still long, enjoy the green and the birds in the trees knowing the crunch of leaves isn't far behind.

Hot Bod Or Hot Air?

by Amy Kuras

What if someone told you that you don't need to sweat, work out or even get out of your chair to lose weight and tone up?

You'd probably buy whatever they were selling.

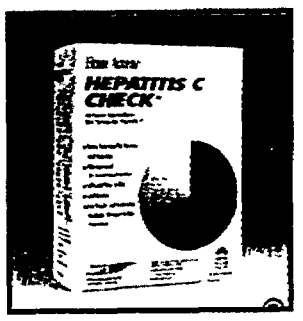
Well, that's the idea behind Oxycize, a system of 15-minute workouts that appears to be another quick fix. Its major premise? By going through a series of body positions for 15 minutes and breathing the "Oxycise basic breath" the pounds will peel off. Basically, you stand or sit still and stretch for 15 minutes at a time, while breathing very deeply.

The problem is that this flies in the face of every bit of exercise science out there. Press materials state that founder Jill Johnson discovered the method in a library book on ancient Chinese medicine. Johnson's claim to fame (other than hawking her products on QVC) is that she says she lost and kept off 45 pounds. The program materials claim Oxycise will do all the things an actual aerobic workout program will do: boost metabolism and your resting heart rate, improve circulation, lower your setpoint weight, and increase strength and endurance. But their only claim to legitimacy is a study done by one doctor at USC on a whopping two subjects.

The good news? Oxycise probably can't hurt you and might even help people who have trouble moving through other exercise programs. But as far as burning fat or gaining strength? According to what we've read by experts, you've got to put out the effort to get the reward.

For more information contact Oxycise International, Inc. 303-838-0512, www.oxycise.com.

First At-Home Test Identifies Hepatitis C



It's the leading cause of cirrhosis (scarring of the liver, liver cancer and liver transplantation) in the U.S. It's hepatitis C and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved the first at-home test to check for it—the Home Access® Hepatitis C CheckSM Test Service.

Home Access Hepatitis C Check Test Service is a confidential, simple-to-use, at-home test that allows a user to painlessly collect a blood sample and mail it to a certified laboratory for analysis. Results are available within five days of the lab receiving the sample.

The Home Access Hepatitis C test employs the same tests used by physicians and hospitals to identify hepatitis C antibodies in the blood sample. Test kits, healthcare counseling and referrals to medical professionals are available 24 hours a day, except holidays.(NAPSA)-

Preparing for Baby

By Amy Kuras
Photos by Carolyn Carleton

Gail Sharp and husband consult RN Shirley Breil.

So you're thinking of having a baby. You know it will change your life forever in a way nothing has before. You know it will require a lot from your body, mind and your relationship with your partner. And you still think you're ready. So what should you be thinking about before you get pregnant, during and after your pregnancy?

Before baby

Westland obstetrician/gynecologist Rainna Brazil, DO, suggests it's a good idea to see your physician for a pre-conception consultation. She can look at your medical history and lifestyle to advise you about potential risk factors and recommend changes you may need to take.

Brazil advises that you forgo alcohol, stop smoking, follow a healthy diet, and get plenty of sleep. If your doctor recommends it, it's a good idea to start taking in extra folic acid either through a supplement or through food. Studies have shown getting the recommended dietary allowance of folic acid each day is highly effective in preventing spina bifida and other neural-tube birth defects. Most neural tube birth defects are formed in the first six weeks of pregnancy, often before you even realize you're pregnant. Most multivitamins provide the RDA and so do many enriched products—take a look at the label.

If you're carrying around a lot of extra weight it's a good idea to drop some before you start eating for two, because dieting during pregnancy isn't recommended. Larger women tend to have smaller babies, Brazil says, and are at higher risk of more difficult delivery and gestational diabetes.

Genetic testing may be an issue for you if you're over 35 or if you will be when your baby is born, if you have a strong family history of genetic diseases or if you lost a previous pregnancy due to genetic factors.

And if you don't like your gynecologist, it's time you find a new one. You and your doctor will be spending a lot of time together once you become pregnant. One of the most important things an expectant mother can do to ensure a healthy baby and uncomplicated delivery is to make and keep regular appointments with her OB/GYN, Brazil says. You'll be visiting your doctor every four weeks up until the 28th week of pregnancy, every two weeks up until the 36th week and every week up until delivery.

What if you've been trying for a while and the little pregnancy test won't turn blue? Don't worry. Brazil says that 85 percent of couples get pregnant within a year. Infertility treatments aren't recommended before six months of trying for women over 35 and a year for younger women.

Morning (noon and night) sickness

Hurray! You're pregnant! you're thrilled—or would be if you could stop feeling so rotten. Morning sickness is a very common problem for women in the first trimester because a key hormone peaks in the 10th week of pregnancy causing nausea until it drops, Brazil says. She cautions her patients to get enough fluid—water or juice, not caffeinated beverages, which can be dehydrating. She also recommends small, dry, frequent meals. If that doesn't help, you may need to see your doctor for medication to keep you from vomiting. If you're still having a tough time, you can try intravenous hydration. It doesn't help the nausea but keeps you from getting dangerously low on fluids.

Midway through

The second trimester is a good time for many pregnant women, Brazil says. They're starting to show, are generally feeling good, and the baby will start moving around and you'll be abe to see it in a fetal ultrasound. The most common problem may be tiredness as the baby starts to grow more and require more of the mother's energy.

The home stretch

During the third trimester, the baby gets much bigger and extra weight really starts to pile on. Daily activities get more difficult and anemia can set in because the fetus is using more of your body's extra nutrients to grow. Back pain also becomes an issue as the baby gets bigger and your usual body alignment gets thrown off.

Women can and do work right up until the day they deliver, and Brazil says there's no reason they shouldn't as long as they feel good and their doctor gives the okay. Computer use isn't dangerous, but you should avoid any bending or lifting and make sure you get a few breaks. "It makes the pregnancy go faster," she says. "You're not sitting around worrying about what might go wrong."

At this point, it's also important to know if something could be going wrong. Call your doctor immediately if the baby isn't moving, if you have cramping, contractions, vaginal bleeding, or if your water breaks (this holds true in all three trimesters, not just the third).

Game time

So you're feeling good, you are dealing quite well with the fact that you're carrying around the weight equivalent of several full water jugs, you've painted the nursery and have started thinking about names. That's when it hits you—you're actually going to have a baby. A little person who needs care and clothing and feeding and bathing. And whether you've barely dealt with children before or are the experienced caretaker of little brothers and sisters and half the neighborhood kids, the prospect of being The Mom can be a little daunting. And that's after you've actually given birth, which you've heard is no joyride.

Well, knowledge is power. Most hospitals offer childbirth education and baby care classes to expectant parents. It can make the whole process a lot less scary.

Michelle Verbick cradles new daughter Samantha.

Breil recommends a childbirth education class before you have the baby. You'll learn about things like lead dangers, protecting your baby from sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) and how to dress your baby (wrapping them in that fetching little coat from Baby Gap on a 70 degree day isn't the best call). A lot of advice handed down from your mom or your boss might not be the best for baby as child care has changed. For example, babies should always be placed on their backs when sleeping to lessen the chance of SIDS.

You should also decide whether or not to breastfeed and look into a breastfeeding class. The American Academy of Pediatrics suggests that babies be breastfed for one year. Taking a class or seeing a lactation consultant can help ease the way.

Shirley Breil, a childbirth educator, lactation consultant and registered nurse, leads childbirth classes at Garden City Hospital. She recommends expectant couples register for the classes as soon as they know they are pregnant. Although you won't take the class until your third trimester, most run six weeks or so and tend to fill up quickly. This is one class where you really don't want to take the final without being completely prepared.

A typical class will discuss topics like the anatomy and physiology of childbirth, terminology used by medical staff and pain management techniques. Garden City's classes, along with most hospitals, teach the best of Lamaze and other methods, Breil says.

Choose your labor coach if you haven't already and have that person take the class with you. Women without partners or those whose husbands may not be the best choice (his work requires unpredictable travel or he faints at the mere suggestions of blood) should pick one person they can count on to be there for them through labor and delivery.

"We always say a good coach is worth two or three shots of Demerol," Breil says.

Taking a childbirth class can clear away a lot of the misconceptions and old wives tales surrounding pregnancy. Breil notes that pregnant women seem to be a magnet for advice and horror stories from other women. This can be confusing and scary—what if your pregnancy is not normal? Breil says it important to remember that this pregnancy is about you, your partner and your baby, no one else.

So now what do I do?

You've brought your new little son or daughter home, and are spending a lot of time staring adoringly at this new person (inbetween feeding, changing diapers and trying to catch just a little rest).

Remember to keep your sense of humor and love for your baby throughout the whole process. Parenthood isn't easy. But as most moms and dads will tell you, it's well worth it.

That is
State-of-the-Heart

St. Mary Hospital

State-of-the-heart is St. Mary Hospital's unique combination of modern medical technology and the attentive personal care you've come to expect from us.

Our Miracle of Life Maternity Center's labor, delivery, recovery, and postpartum rooms, or LDRPs, are fully equipped to help you have a safe delivery. Afterward, the room changes to a homelike bedroom. You rest and recover in the same comfortable, cozy room. And our LDRPs are private, so your loved ones can even stay overnight.

Miracle of Life education programs help you prepare for your infant's needs. And, of course, 24-hour neonatology coverage is available for your peace of mind. At St. Mary Hospital, you'll get what you need most to prepare you for life with your new baby — care and rest.

MIRACLE OF LIFE
maternity center

Miracle of Life Maternity Center at St Mary Hospital

The premier place to have a baby

The birth of a child is truly an affirmation of life. It's a time of caring, celebration and change. That's why at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia families are offered the flexibility to choose their own birthing options. The staff appreciates each family's individuality and unique needs. "St. Mary offers superb maternity care," said Marja Sprock, M.D. "The maternity center provides a high level of care and is also well equipped for neonatal emergencies," she said.

Sprock, an Ob/Gyn on staff at St. Mary Hospital, recently had her own birthing experience when she delivered twin boys at St. Mary. When the time came for her to give birth, her doctor was in surgery and unavailable. So Sprock called her partner, Sylvia Simon-Jones, M.D. and asked her to deliver the babies. Two healthy boys, Egan and Trevor, were delivered on June 29.

"I deliver all of my patients at St. Mary; they have an excellent staff working there," said Sprock. Simon-Jones and Sprock, Ob/Gyns with Henry Ford Hospital, also practice at St. Mary Hospital with offices in Livonia, Plymouth and Dearborn.

Family centered care

As a community hospital marking its 40th anniversary this year, St. Mary Hospital provides state-of-the-art medical care to the area and has become known as the premier place to have a baby. The Miracle of Life Maternity Center, providing true family centered care, has attracted new mothers from across metropolitan Detroit and births have almost tripled at the hospitals since the new maternity center opened in 1997.

All private rooms

Throughout their stay, families enjoy the privacy of their own personal room, called an LDRP. The LDRPs (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Postpartum) allow mothers to labor, deliver, recover and receive postpartum care without moving to another room. With 20 LDRPs every new mother has a private, beautifully decorated LDRP with amenities such as refrigerators, comfortable furniture for visitors, private restrooms featuring large showers with back massagers, heating lamps and built-in hair dryers. All medical equipment is out of sight until needed for the birth.

Neonatology support

Specialized obstetricians, midwives and nurses provide care 24 hours a day, and 24-hour neonatology support is available on site for babies requiring special assistance through U-M Hospital. Through the program, neonatologists from U-M Hospital provide care weekday mornings and are on call 24 hours a day for newborns who require special medical assistance. In addition, U-M clinical nurse specialists in neonatology provide care in the maternity center.

Education and classes

New parents receive an abundance of childbirth education, including breastfeeding support by certified lactation consultants. Newborns also receive a hearing screening test within 24 hours of their birth. Specialized classes and programs available through the Marian Women's Center include childbirth education, breastfeeding, mother-baby support, sibling class, pre-postnatal exercise and infant care and safety, among others.

Tours

Couples planning to start a family will want to visit the Miracle of Life Maternity Center at St. Mary Hospital. Tours are held on a regular basis or by personal appointment by calling the St. Mary Hospital Marian Women's Center at 800/494-1615. To find an Ob/Gyn on staff at St. Mary, call physician referral at 888/464-WELL.

The Birthing Suites at Garden City Hospital

Garden City Hospital provides five Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Postpartum (LDRP) suites for use by expectant parents. The entire birth experience can take place in these rooms which foster the intimate atmosphere of home but have all the latest in medical technology quickly available to insure that Baby's delivery goes as smoothly as possible.

The hospital was originally founded by six physicians as a maternity hospital in a building formerly used as a house for wayward boys. They pooled their resources and rented the second floor of a small brick building which was originally constructed by community volunteers. It became known as Garden City Maternity Hospital. This facility provided a delivery room, ten postpartum beds and fifteen bassinets. Even though it was a maternity hospital it also provided treatment, care and relief of sick and injured persons. It grew to the modern medical teaching facility it is today from these humble roots.

In addition to the facilities at Garden City Hospital, a whole range of services for the expectant family are also offered. Convenient Childbirth Education, Breast-feeding, Parenting, Sibling and Infant Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) classes are offered at the hospital.

During their stay in the hospital baby can live in with mom for the entire time, or mom can take advantage of the highly skilled nursery staff to care for the baby while she prepares to go home. The birth experience at Garden City Hospital is designed to make lifetime memories.

Kid's Stuff

As the bold, beautiful crimson yellow and fiery orange leaves decorate the trees for a picturesque fall setting, they also remind us that winter is fast approaching. Amidst shopping for fall clothes, school supplies and delicious after school snacks, how can you manage to pack in a little fun?

With a little planning, imagination and creativity, fun activities can be a snap. Here are some ideas to get you started onto the road to fun (based on your five senses).

TASTE – This is a great opportunity to sneak in teaching kids good nutrition and getting them involved in preparing, menu planning and possibly growing some of the food for your meals. Michigan has an abundance of fresh apples in the fall at local cider mills and farmer's markets as well as grocery stores. Why not encourage your children to pick out the apples and each prepare something different with them. On a cool fall night nothing tastes better than apple pie for dessert!

Pumpkin patches made notorious from Charlie Brown's television Halloween specials can be a fun project for the whole family. Not only do these bright orange balls provide natural beauty and are fun to watch grow, they are also very tasty in pie and soups (not to mention the seeds toasted in the oven with a little salt and olive oil, YUM).

Planning a family dinner party can be a fun way to teach children how to prepare food and enjoy it together. Just use your imagination. Choose a theme like Italian and have everyone contribute something in addition to food such as music, tablecloths, recipes, etc.

SMELL–Smell and taste often hand in hand. Wouldn't it be fun to teach your kids about aromatherapy? Take a trip to a local farmer's market and learn about some herbs and what they are used for in cooking or beauty products or cleaning, for example.

Or take a quick trip to a florist and learn about fresh cut flowers and let each child pick out their favorite flower to take home. Often times, a quick trip to the florist gets everyone out of the house and can really lift spirits when Michigan weather sets in and we have to be indoors more.

Go to a pastry shop and inhale the delicious aromas of fresh baked goodies. This is a great after-school trip for everyone. Let everyone pick one thing but enjoy it when you get home in a peaceful setting instead of devouring them before you get into the car.

SIGHT – Fall is a great time to pick some unusual leaves and preserve them in a notebook. Just take a trip to the local craft store and pick out some posterboard and glue. It's really that easy. Encourage each child to create their own fall scene and then use them for fall decorations.

Remember the old days when we just got regular mail and not faxes e-mail and federal express? Build a special mailbox for each child and encourage him/her to seek out a pen pal (from school or a foreign exchange program or a nursing home resident). This is a very special way to teach your child about establishing relationships and about using different visual effects for hand-made cards and stationary.

Rent a comedy at your local video store. A great way to sit back and enjoy each other's company without having to "to do" anything.

TOUCH – Grab some gelatin, flour, oil and other foods that have specific textures and play around with feeling their unique textures. Or get everyone to a fabric store and have everyone find examples of soft, scratchy, smooth, etc.

It's never to early to learn the benefits of a hug, holding hands or a gentle massage. Grab some lotion and show your child how to massage their hands and feet. They may think it's silly, but will learn to appreciate it as adults.

Personal care can also be a fun way to introduce touch. Hair styling for boys and girls is a big part of growing up. Let each child pick out their own brush and styling products like gel and let them create their own hair styles (within reason, of course).

HEARING – Music is the best vehicle to introduce your child to their hearing. Just pop in any music store and listen to the music playing and peek around at all the various types of music. They are endless: country, rock jazz, new age. You can even learn some songs together.

Take a little field trip to a toy store and purchase a few instruments and form a band with your children and their friends. You never know—you could have professional musicians on your hands.

Have everyone listen to the radio and play a game where whoever guesses the type of instruments that are playing gets the prize. This can be a lifesaver for long trips and keep everyone laughing in the middle of road construction.

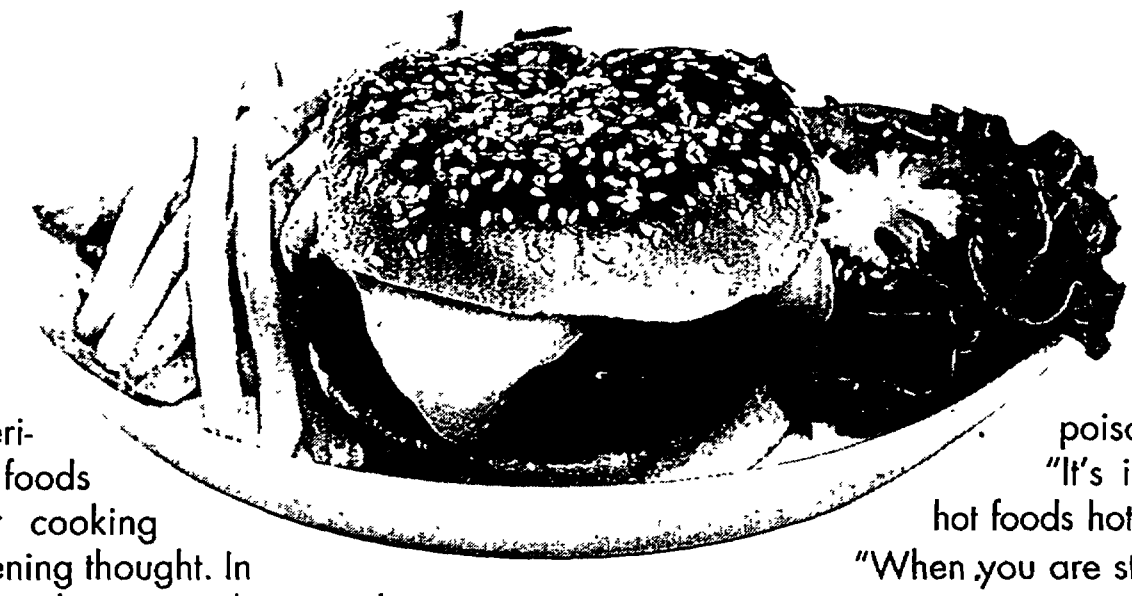
Beware Of The Bad Burger: Food Poisoning



There's nothing like the taste of a juicy hamburger or a succulent steak cooked over a grill on a warm summer night. But imagine the wonderful experience of eating these tasty foods ruined by not handling or cooking the food properly. It's a frightening thought. In the past few years, we've heard more and more about food poisoning and illnesses related to undercooked or mishandled food.

Food poisoning or foodborne illness is a very common problem and many times can be avoided simply by handling food properly. Outbreaks of food poisoning that have caused death and illness in other parts of the country underscore the importance of proper food handling.

"Each year, thousands of people become ill because of mishandling food," says Susan Ryskamp, MS, RD, director of medical nutrition therapy for Oakwood Healthcare System. Ryskamp says food illnesses occur because bacteria develop, which at the right temperature can multiply in very large numbers in a few short hours.

"These bacteria are tricky because you cannot see, taste or touch them," says Ryskamp. Food which is left unrefrigerated, particularly in the summer, can produce the dangerous toxins which cause food poisoning, Ryskamp says.

"It's important to remember to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold," she says. "When you are storing foods you can keep them safe by refrigerating them."

Foodborne illness happens when a person gets sick by eating food that has been contaminated with an unwanted micro-organism or bacteria. Many cases go unreported because their symptoms often resemble the stomach flu. The most common symptoms include stomach cramps, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and fever.

Most food infections and illnesses can be fought off in a few days without having to see a doctor, James Sunstrum, MD, says, but if you are very ill you should see a physician. It's time for a doctors' appointment if you have frequent diarrhea, a high fever, diabetes or other medical problems. A food-borne illness can cause a host of complications if combined with other medical problems.

The word to the wise is caution: treat preparing your food like serious business and you won't have serious complications.

Ryskamp offers the following tips to ensure that you are aware of what leads to food poisoning:

- When preparing food, keep everything clean. "Make sure that you keep everything that touches food clean, including your hands, utensils, bowls, and even countertops," says Ryskamp. "Make sure to use separate platters, cutting boards, trays and utensils for cooked and uncooked meat, poultry and fish." She also advised using warm, soapy water on surfaces and utensils immediately after preparing certain foods, such as ground beef, steak, poultry or fish.

- Cook food thoroughly. "Ground meat contains more bacteria that lives inside of the meat, therefore it should be thoroughly cooked so that the meat is no longer pink," says Ryskamp. "Also, use a meat thermometer for certain meats and don't leave meat out overnight, because it doesn't take long for bacteria to grow on meat."

- Safe microwaving: Stir and rotate food to avoid cold spots where bacteria can thrive. "It's important when you use the microwave to avoid partially cooking the food and then finishing it later," Ryskamp says. "Partially cooked food may not reach a temperature to sufficiently destroy any potentially harmful bacteria."

- When you serve food, never leave it out for more than two hours. Food has the potential to spoil if you leave it out at room temperature for more than two hours. "Make sure to use those extra plates or platters to keep food from touching each other," Ryskamp says.

- When in doubt, throw it out. "If you have some food left in your refrigerator that you think may be old or you can't remember when you originally had it, it's probably best to throw it away," she says. "You're better off ordering a fresh, piping hot pizza than to take a chance of getting sick from old food."

Retirees Become Perpetual College Students

By Mike Madias

You don't stop learning at 18 or 21 so why should your education?

Even after retirement, education is something that can enrich a person intellectually, socially and even financially. And, as if to accommodate for the limitations that aging inevitably brings, universities are making it easy for seniors to become undergraduate and graduate students.

"People don't really retire into quiet and isolation any more. They have completed a section of their life, doing something, and then they want to progress into doing something else," said Dr. Barbara Roseboro, assistant dean of the College of Life Long Learning at Wayne State University. "They enroll in a community college and take courses."

"Others will opt for a new part-time career, and they will take courses in creative writing or social work," she said. "Still others have academic ambitions that they could not complete earlier in life. These retirees might go to a graduate program."

Seniors have fixed incomes, and cannot work in the school cafeteria or get athletic scholarships to offset tuition bills. Central Michigan University, in Mt. Pleasant, Michigan offers free tuition to students 60 years old or older. Western Michigan University offers the same deal, zero tuition, for students 62 years or older. There are eleven universities in Ohio, including Ohio State, Bowling Green and the University of Toledo who offer free tuition to seniors.

Some universities give deep discounts to senior citizens. Macomb Community College, the University of Michigan; and Wayne State University offer seniors a 50% discount on tuition. These institutions have extension courses all over the Detroit Metropolitan area where seniors can meet back-to-school retirees close close their homes.

Mobility is also a problem for retirees. The answer there, is that some universities that offer free tuition also offer courses that can be taken on-line, via the Internet. Distance is not a factor in such classes. They can be taken and completed at home.

Such courses can be found in abundance by directing a web browser to this address:http://dir.yahoo.com/Education/Distance_Learning/Courses_Online/. Your local librarian should be able to help you do this.

Home computer systems that can access the Internet and these classes need not be expensive, especially if the buyer is willing to forego some of the latest bells and whistles.

No matter how you choose to study experts in adult and senior education suggest that you pursue college level training a little bit at a time. It is easy to learn how to garden. It is harder to study botany. It is even harder to learn organic chemistry. Don't get over your head and the whole process will be more fun.

The Only Skin You've Got: Repairing Sun Damage

By Linda Lacina

It's simple. If you have skin and you have been in the sun you should be concerned about sun damage. The sun's radiation changes the collagen in your skin and therefore your skin's architecture. After years your face starts to droop and sag, becoming leathery. Fine lines become etched near the eyes and mouth and spider veins appear. Precancerous moles might even surface.

Whether you want to slow the sun's aging process or you would like to take care of your skin, you need to minimize the sun's damage to keep you looking good and healthy throughout the year.

Laser resurfacing, Chemical Peels, Dermabrasion, Microbrasion

Skin resurfacing, dermabrasion, peels and laser surgery will all work toward the same result. They eliminate damaged top layers and stimulate the production of collagen beneath the skin for healthier tissue. Each varies in price and degree.

Lasers can get rid of precancerous tissue and the entire top layer of skin, allowing 'baby' skin to emerge, according to the American Academy of Dermatology. Lasers provide the most exact, dramatic improvement, but they also require the most down time. Patients spend about 10 days recovering and their skin may look pink for three or four months afterward. It's not recommended for everyone since you may not regain a uniform skin color. Cost? Around $3600.

Things everyone should do all the time to take care of the body's largest organ.

Stay out of the Sun

You're used to reading this in the summer right? Well, the sun still shines and you're still exposed to UV rays. Try to avoid the outdoors especially between 10am—4pm, or at least cover up and use a 15+ SPF sunblock.

Moisturize

Moisturizing is especially important in fall and winter months when the air indoors starts drying out. Moisturizer will not eliminate the damage the sun has done. However, moisturizing will making sure that the replacement layers of skin are nice and moist, promoting the growth of new skin.

Dermatologists can recommend specific cleansing and moisturizing products as part of a daily skin regimen. These could cost you between $7 and $100.

If you would rather just choose something from Rite Aid, plastic surgeon Dr. Michael H. Freedland recommends that you only buy a couple of products (a gentle cleanser and a moisturizer) and that you choose ones with vitamin E rather than added scents and colors. The Skin Rejuvenation Institute's Dr. Steven Grekin suggests that you apply it while your skin is wet to better seal in moisture.

Peels will reduce some of the signs of aging, including wrinkles, age spots and freckles. They can vary in strength from very weak to very strong, cost about $60 each and both the results and recovery depend on the type. The results will last from a few months to 10 or 15 years. According to Dr. William Sabbagh, a plastic surgeon at the Straith Clinic in Bingham Farms, you will need to stay out of the sun initially after this procedure but it does not make you more vulnerable to sun damage.

With dermabrasion the dermatologist moves a tool over the patient's skin to sand away superficial layers, producing a smoother looking complexion. This sometimes can cause bleeding so many opt for gentler micro-dermabrasion technologies such as the Power Peel, according to Dr. Mune Gowda, of Cosmetic and Laser Surgery in Troy and Southfield. The Power Peel takes a half hour and costs $150-200 dollars per visit (between 3-12 visits necessary). It's recommended for people with slight lines; deeper wrinkles should try the stronger dermabrasion.

Plastic Surgery

A facelift will not help promote new collagen or make your skin healthier, according to Gowda. However, it can eliminate fine wrinkling. There are some risks of scarring, but the greater risk lies in the patient expecting too much from the results. Plastic surgery can cost thousands and the results can last up to ten years. Do your homework: research procedures, get second opinions, etc.

No one treatment will solve your aging problems. As Gowda said, "There's no one shot treatment for skin...Maintenance is the most important thing." All adults should receive an annual skin cancer screening by a dermatologist and find out what regimen is best for their skin. Skin care is an ongoing process, not just something to think about while squirting lotion on your hands.

NOW I'M NOT AFRAID TO SPEND THE NIGHT AT MY FRIEND'S HOUSE

SAY GOODNIGHT TO BEDWETTING PERMANENTLY

"I will be forever grateful to you for your help."

Susie, 14

"I am so happy to wake up in a DRY BED!"

Marie, 10

"Thanks for everything!"

Scott, 7

Barbara Moore, founder of the Enuresis Treatment Center.
" 'They'll grow out of it' is the worst advice parents can receive".

Bedwetting is definitely a curable condition, according to Barbara Moore, Director of the Enuresis Treatment Center in Farmington Hills. Using a drug-free, non-invasive program that combines sleep retraining with exercises that increase the bladder's capacity, the Center has achieved a 95 percent success rate in helping its patients stay dry at night–for good!

More than 20 million children and adults in the United States suffer from bedwetting, or enuresis, as it is technically called. Yet, while these bedwetters must deal with constant humiliation and fear of discovery, they really have no control over their problem, which is caused by an inherited, abnormal, deep-sleep pattern.

"Simply put," Moore explains, "the bedwetter falls into such a deep sleep that the brain can't control the normal hold and release function of the bladder. Children who wet the bed sleep so deeply that they don't get proper rest. They do not get enough of the dream sleep that's associated with R.E.M. (Rapid Eye Movement). These children generally wake up grouchy, slow moving and sluggish."

This sleep deficit can contribute to a lack of attention and comprehension skills in the classroom, which is why many bedwetters are misdiagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) .

"After becoming dry and getting good, quality sleep, they show the improvements in behavior and their self esteem improves," Moore says. "Teachers begin to notice a difference academically."

Bedwetting can continue into adulthood if left untreated, and each year of bedwetting causes further physical underdevelopment to the bladder and needless embarrassment and emotional pain for the bedwetter.

Call for Enuresis Treatment Center today and put an end to your child's sleep disorder and bedwetting.

PRICE GUARANTEE & RAINCHECKS

Price Guarantee & Rainchecks: If, within 30 days (14 days for computers, monitors, printers and notebooks, camcorders, digital cameras and radar detectors) of your purchase from Best Buy, you find a local competitor offering a lower price on an available product of the same brand and model, we'll refund the difference plus another 10% of the difference. Bring us verification of the lower price, plus your original Best Buy receipt to claim your refund. Does not apply to special, bonus or free offers, and in California cellular phones and pagers. Does not apply to products with special financing offers. For complete price guarantee details, please see a customer service representative. Some products in this ad may be slightly different from illustrations. Correction notices for errors in this advertisement will be posted in our stores. Rainchecks are available on most items specifically advertised in this insert, except where noted. We reserve the right to limit quantities. See store for complete details.

IMPORTANT CONSUMER FINANCING INFORMATION

Not valid on previous purchases. Subject to credit approval on the Best Buy Card. Offer is for individuals, not businesses. As of 7/26/99, the Annual Percentage Rate (APR) is 22.40%. APRs may vary. Minimum finance charge of $1.00 may apply. Credit is provided by GE Capital Consumer Card Co., or Household Bank (SB), N.A. For complete financing details please refer to your cardholder agreement, billing statement, or Best Buy in-store customer information. For the Same as Cash with Payments until January 2001 Plan, if the purchase advance and any charges due relating to this purchase advance are not paid in full by January 3, 2001, finance charges will be assessed from the transaction date. You will be required to make minimum monthly payments during the deferral period on this purchase advance. The following qualify for January 2001 Financing: all purchases totalling $299 and up. 6-Month Financing and 90-Day Financing: Financing is a No Payment, Deferred Interest program. If balance is not paid in full by the plan expiration date, interest will be assessed from the original date of purchase on the average balance. Minimum total purchase of $299 is required for 6-Month Financing. No minimum purchase required for 90-Day Financing.

Protect Your Family From Fleas

Prevent needless itching, scratching and irritation for your entire family. All it takes is a few simple precautions to stop the onset of a flea infestation before it gets out of control. Just follow these tips from your VetSmart family Veterinarian:

- Determine if your Pet has fleas by parting their hair and looking closely at their skin. On a dog, the best place to check is its back and tail. For a cat, check its face and stomach.
- Check for tiny breaks in the skin in a concentrated area. Small brown spots of digested blood indicate the presence of fleas.
- Know that the fleas that you find on your Pet are usually part of a bigger problem. In fact, the fleas on your Pet represent only about 5% of the total flea population throughout your home and in your yard.
- If your Pet shows signs of fleas, consult your VetSmart veterinarian immediately. A veterinary team member will be happy to perform a flea exam on your Pet.

Remember, fleas can cause serious medical problems for your Pet, including skin irritation and infection, tapeworms, and possibly anemia. Your VetSmart family veterinarian can help you determine the best treatment method for your pet.

FREE Flea Exam at any time for all Pet owners.

No cash value. Offer valid through 9/11/99
Please present certificate at time of service.
Veterinary services available at Commerce, Northville and Roseville locations.

PET PICKS

Where PETsMART Associates and Customers talk about their pets' personal passions.

The Door Cattie —
"I am Pooh Kitty Warrior Princess and you will fear my wrath! A mere toy does not stand a chance against my lightning reflexes and incredible beauty!" The Door Cattie takes its daily pummeling from our heroine. For hours on end she will bat and pounce until she is a "Pooped" Kitty. Meanwhile, the worthy opponent stands by to battle another day. The Door Cattie is a proven sparring partner. Besides, Pooh would never stand for a sidekick.
— Jay L.

The Buster Cube —
Hadji is no daft doggy. He requires lots of stimuli, and "The Cube" delivers. It's like a puzzle for dogs. Just fill it with his favorite food or bite-sized treat...and batter up. Hadji knocks the Buster Cube around the living room, then retraces his path to see what's been dislodged. Too easy? I can adjust The Cube to be more or less difficult. His whole body wiggles when we take it out to play, and it's well worth it.
— Sean R.

Did You Know?

Chewing rawhide helps prevent bad breath and keeps your dogs' teeth and gums healthy.

A farmer who was tired of his dog chewing on his leather boots thought of the idea of rawhide to keep the animal from ruining his expensive shoes.

PETsMART has an entire Rawhide aisle at dogs-eye-level so he can pick his own.

Reptile Facts

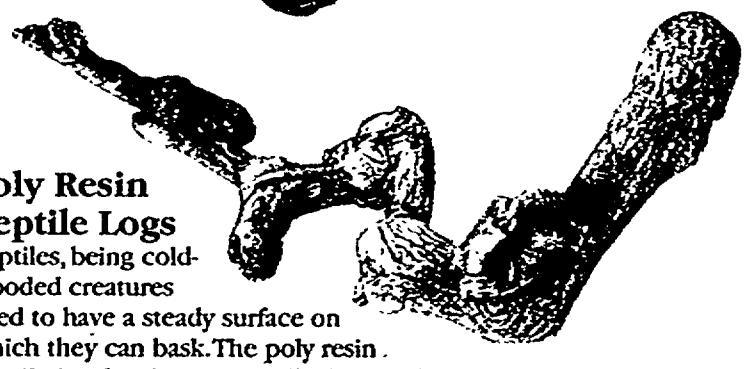
The word "reptile" means "creeper"

The temperature at which some reptilian species eggs are kept during incubation determines the sex of the entire brood.

Reptiles require a light cycle of 12-14 hours per day.

All snakes are carnivorous.

Reptiles see in color.



Poly Resin Reptile Logs
Reptiles, being cold-blooded creatures need to have a steady surface on which they can bask. The poly resin Reptile Log has been specially designed to stand upright and provide basking surfaces in nearly every configuration. Plus, realistic coloring and surface texture makes your reptilian friend feel right at home! They're a great addition to any reptile environment. Get yours at PETsMART today!

PET PICKS

Where PETsMART Associates and Customers talk about their pets' personal passions.

The Sleep Sack —
Although Finnigan and Rio seem to prefer empty grocery bags and dirty sock over store-bought toys; there is one thing they couldn't live without— their Sleep Sacks. Whether they're curled up together in one, slung across both like a hammock, or haphazardly hanging head first, it is the place of choice for needed naps. I think they sleep more comfortably than I do! If they made a human size, I know I'd be sleeping in one too!

Thompsonized WOOD

Waterproofing That's Built-in Before You Build!

Thompsonized™ Wood is appearance grade lumber, pressure treated to the core, which dramatically reduces warping, splitting and cracking. Surface waterproofing doesn't reach the heart of the lumber and will not offer the unsurpassed protection of Thompsonized™ Wood!

- Select, premium-grade wood
- Pressure treated to 3-times the industry standard for water repellence
- Stainable in 30 days: use oil based stain
- Protection designed to last a lifetime

Waterproofed to the Core!™

It also protects against termites and fungal decay, while saving the initial expense of a surface coating.
