Nanovation reconsiders township move

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Expected tax breaks for a company with plans to relocate to Northville Township and bring more than 500 jobs and millions in investments will unfairly shift the tax burden to taxpayers, one group said.

According to a predated July 12 press release draft obtained by the Northville Record from Northville Township through the Freedom of Information Act, "Nanovation Technologies ... has selected Northville over Richardson, Texas for a development, manufacturing, and distribution facility." The release came from the Michigan Economic Development Corp.

For coming to Northville, the release said, the Michigan Economic Growth Authority (MEGA) will grant more than $9.7 million in tax breaks over 11 years to the Florida-based company for meeting certain requirements. That's in addition to a six-year tax abatement granted by the Northville Township board of trustees in June.

An official from the authority said she couldn't comment on "projects that may or may not be in the works."

But an analyst with the Mackinac Center for Public Policy said the breaks are unfair.

"No one can blame companies for taking the credits when they're

Report: school officials succeed

Students aren't the only ones getting report cards this time of year.

The school district released the results from Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski's annual review, June 27.

The school board spent two nights in "closed session" meetings discussing various aspects of the Superintendent's job and rated how well he is doing. The board works with a five point scale with five being the highest rating. In addition to the superintendent, they also rate the rest of the district's central office staff.

"This is the most important work the board does," said review committee chairperson Martha Nield. "It's not only an evaluation of the superintendent, but the whole district."

The scale the board used during the evaluation went from 5.0 which was outstanding to 4.0.

At 90 years old Dr. Russell Atchison is doesn't practice medicine — he perfects it, said those who know him best this week.

There are few Northville lives not touched by this living legend, said patient Jeane Mattetal. In the breadth of his career which began in 1938, he has ushered many a screaming babe into the world and has been around long enough to see many of them start their own families and has even outlived some of them. His calm demeanor and modest speech belies the many near miraculous procedures he has performed during his career many have said.

Nothing is impossible and no patient hopeless as far as Atchison is concerned.

And he still sees patients twice a week at his downtown clinic.

He still looks at each new case as a chance to save, heal and give comfort, said long time nurse and friend Roslyn Carbutt.

"Working with him was a religious experience," she said. "It was

Who do you hate the most? site asks

Hatred in Northville hits the Internet and local authorities still don't know who's responsible.

Northville High School students have been voting on everything from the best body parts of NHS students to most hated student at NHS on FreeVote.com.

The Internet site is intended for people to vote on issues and voice their opinions on current events by setting up "booths." However, students from Northville have set up areas on the site to talk about their classmates.

One young woman whose name appeared on the site went to township police this week and filed a complaint. Police have no leads as to who is responsible for the booths.

As of June 30, at least three of the booths created by Northville students have been banned or suspended for misuse by FreeVote.com. Spokesman for FreeVote, Erik Husted said they also no longer allow full names to be posted on the web site.

"We know that anytime there is a forum for people to voice their opinions and attitudes, there will be an immature, disrespectful minority

At long last, court opens its new doors

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

The folding chairs and tables used to conduct court in the 35th District "courthouse" for the last three years can be put back in the storage room.

The new permanent courthouse for the district located at 660 Plymouth Road opened this week, almost exactly three years after the Dunbar Davis Hall of Justice was destroyed by fire. That means no more folding tables or chairs to help conduct court for one of the most rapidly growing areas of the state. The court handled more than 44,000 cases last year, up 8 percent from the previous year.

The three-story, four-courtroom building replaces the modular trailers used since the fire to keep up with the number of cases coming from the growing communities of the city of Northville, Northville Township, the city of Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton Township.

"I don't think anyone is going to shed any tears because we're out of the trailers," said Judge John MacDonald, chief of the 35th District court. "They served their pur-

NORTHVILLE AREA POLICE BRIEFS

Fountain meant for city hall stolen from area neighborhood

A copper fountain valued at about $3,000 that was being made for outside of Northville City Hall was stolen from a city neighborhood. The incident was reported June 30.

According to a city of Northville police report, the man making the fountain set it out in a wooded area so it would be naturally treated for two weeks. When he went back to get it, he discovered it was missing. Police and the artist searched the entire area and didn't locate the fountain.

The fountain is made of copper and about 28 inches high and 36 inches round. Anyone with information on the fountain may call city of Northville police at (248) 349-1700.

Northville man arrested after being stopped without helmet

A Northville man was arrested for a misdemeanor traffic charge after he was pulled over for riding his motorcycle without a helmet.

The incident happened June 30 at 8:23 p.m.

According to a city of Northville police report, an officer on bike patrol saw the man riding his motorcycle without a helmet while westbound on East Main Street. He was stopped. A background check of the man revealed a warrant for his arrest out of 35th district court for a traffic offense.

He was arrested and released on a $100 bond.

Rippling Lane man picked up on warrants for arrest

A 25-year-old Northville man was arrested for two warrants in Northville Township after drawing attention to himself by being in Hines Park after hours.

The incident happened June 30 at 2:24 a.m.

According to a city of Northville police report, police were on routine patrol in the Hines Park area and saw the 25-year-old man sitting on a bench in the park. They approached the man because the park was closed.

A background check of the man revealed he had two outstanding warrants for arrest out of Northville Township. The man was arrested and turned over to township police at the scene.

Southfield man arrested after trying to speed through town

A 21-year-old Southfield man was arrested for driving with a suspended license after he was pulled over for driving 55 mph in a 40 mph zone.

The incident happened June 30 at 1:21 a.m.

According to a city of Northville police report, city police on routine patrol on westbound Eight Mile Road near Horton clocked the man driving 55 mph near the overpass near Hillside Middle School.

He was stopped and told police he didn't have his license, however, he said his license was suspended.

A background check of the man revealed his license had been suspended for driving with the suspended license. Because he was a repeat offender, his license plate was taken and destroyed and his car was impounded.

He was released on bond.

Bike patrol officer nabs illegal solicitor in the city

A 30-year-old Michigan City, Ind. man was arrested for soliciting without a permit.

The incident happened June 30 at 3:13 p.m.

According to a city of Northville police report, an officer on bike patrol was dispatched to the area of Orchard and Grandview in reference to a male selling magazines. Officers approached the man who said he was selling magazines in the city door-to-door. He told police he had sold several subscriptions. However, he also told police he didn't have a permit to do so, as required in the city of Northville.

He was arrested and released on a $100 bond.

Man drinks one beer and gets arrested by township police

A 20-year-old Livonia man told police he only had one beer to drink but then had a blood-alcohol level of .194 and was arrested.

The incident happened July 1 at 1:57 a.m.

According to a Northville Township police report, police watched the man roll through the flashing red light at the intersection of Five Mile Road and Haggerty Road and then proceed to quickly speed up to 54 mph in a 45 mph zone. He was stopped on eastbound Five Mile Road.

When police questioned him, a strong odor of intoxicants was discovered along with red, glassy eyes on the driver. He was given a series of sobriety tests, including a preliminary breath test, with which he had difficulty. His blood test revealed a blood-alcohol level of .194. In Michigan, .10 is considered to be operating a vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

He was arrested. A background check revealed a prior similar conviction so his plate was confiscated and destroyed. He was released on bond pending sobering.

Police nab naked man in lobby of Wendy's restaurant

An 18-year-old Livonia man will undergo psychiatric treatment after he was arrested for being naked in Wendy's restaurant on Haggerty Road.

The incident happened June 28 at 6:40 p.m.

According to a Northville Township police report, they were called and responded to find a naked man in the lobby of the Wendy's. The report said the man seemed very disoriented and confused.

Police asked him several questions and didn't get a response until the man started swinging his arms. They subdued the man and put him in soft handcuffs.

The man's father said the 18-year-old had recently been on new medication and that he would be receiving additional psychiatric treatment.

Garden Walk blooms into town

By ANNETTE JAWORSKI
Special Writer

Northville garden lovers, get ready to don your sunbonnets and head out to the seventh annual Northville Garden Walk.

This spring's warm weather provided a number of lush gardens for this year's event, scheduled for Wednesday, July 12, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Garden selection committee members Pat Zielke and Zo Chisnell selected seven different gardens for the Country Garden Club of Northville, each with its own personality.

"Each person has their own idea of what a garden should be," Zielke said.

Beginning right in the heart of downtown are two compact gardens where space is used creatively. The Albrecht garden has a Victorian look, which complements the elegant home on the property. Think light pastels and cool colors in white, mauves and pinks, including the petunias flowing out of the window boxes. A back yard terrace has an exotic look to it being swathed in white netting to create a tent-like effect.

The Dreger's garden has a more rustic look to it. Traditional accents and flowers are featured alongside contemporary looking sculpture pieces. The feeling is intimate and inviting, with a comfortable porch and a relaxing back yard terrace. Several cozy seating areas allow the Dreger's to appreciate the view from more than one vantage point.

Three gardens clustered together comprise another group of garden stops. The three properties share a common setting. Zielke notes. They're all located high above Phoenix Lake and in the springtime, there's an abundance of wildflowers covering the steep slope, leading to the woodland floor and ultimately to the water's edge.

The Andrus garden is precise and pristine and contains a number of artifacts from the Orient.

The Kekhoua garden is almost a specimen garden, very neat and interesting, she notes. Visitors will also find a huge front garden containing islands of flowers.

The last of the group, the Van Dyke garden makes unique use of their landscape space. The grounds contain a small stone waterfall with a variety of water plants. Zielke notes there is a strength and ruggedness to the property, heightened by massive trees and deep ravines.

The Thom's garden is a credit to his previous career in engineering. The beds are precise, and perfectly planned in their layout. There's not a petal out of place, or a weed in the grass.

Bob and Linda Smith's garden hearkens back to summer days spent in grandma's garden. Their spacious country area sets old-fashioned flowers against a background of mature evergreens. A white picket fence encloses a small vegetable patch and keeps out the furry critters.

With credit to all the gardeners, Zielke notes that they're all created through the sweat of their owners, not produced by landscapers.

"These gardens are made by hands-on gardeners," she notes.

The tickets are $8, and available at Gardenviews of Northville and the Northville Chamber of Commerce. The tour ends with a stop at the Cady Inn at Mill Race Village, where complimentary homemade cookies and lemonade will be served. Live music will be featured on the green and visitors can enjoy browsing through a selection of garden items offered by local vendors. The tickets provide a detailed map of all the stops, and can be purchased at Gardenviews and Mill Race Village on the day of the walk.

DIOPSIDE UP

Consumers can certainly be forgiven if they are unfamiliar with the green gemstone diopside. Mined from the Siberian tundra and available in the West for only about the last two decades, this gemstone ranges in color from bottle green to brownish green to light green. The more iron-rich and magnesium-poor the gemstone, the darker its green color. When the chromium is present, the color goes to very bright green (chrome diopside). One of the few natural gemstones available in a deep green color, Russian diopside gives lovers of green gemstones another option besides emerald, peridot, demantoid, and the like. It is one of the many interesting colored gemstones that most people only come to know through an association with their jewelers.

Visit us for the finest in Gemstones, including diopsides. Here at WEINSTEIN JEWELERS OF NOVI located at 41990 Grand River Ave. (248-347-0303) you can count on us for fine jewelry as well. We are here for all your jewelry and gemstone needs. With 3 generations of experience, we are "The name you know." Most major credit cards are accepted. Hours: Tue., Wed. & Thurs. 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Fri. 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Sat. 10-5 p.m. We are now licensed by the city of Novi to offer loans on jewelry.

Local hearts deliver needed guidance

Changing the world by bettering the life of one child at a time is the goal of the mentors in the Adopt-a-School and mentoring program.

Northville resident Jim Bosscher by day is a button-downed assistant treasurer at Ford; by night he can be spotted playing basketball with one of his three mentees at Dixon Elementary School on the border of Dearborn and Detroit at Tireman and Evergreen.

For the past 10 years, Bosscher and over 80 volunteers from the First United Methodist Church of Northville and the Second Grace United Methodist Church of Detroit have been partners in the first ever coupling of urban and suburban efforts to adopt a Detroit school. Since then, over 50 other Methodist churches have joined with other churches to help students after or before school with homework, taking them on outings or helping with school improvement projects.

Bosscher said it has proven to be the most frustrating and most rewarding thing he has ever done.

"Mentoring is the most effective way to make progress on an issue or to help, really. You have to get involved with the individual and take a very grass roots role. That's the only thing that ever works," Bosscher said.

The school chooses the children for the program who are "at risk," Bosscher said. He said these are children who are borderline. They are not the best students nor are they the worst but there are circumstances in their lives which could make it go in either direction at any time. Bosscher said this is where the mentor comes in. The idea is if the children have a positive influence in their lives to keep them aloft and give them the extra help they need, he said the mentor may just save this child from a negative outcome.

Bosscher also practices what he preaches. He has acquired three mentees ages 10-12 and has lived as friend and big brother to them over the past few years. In that time, he has not only grown closer to them but their families as well. He said this is essential to a good mentoring relationship.

"I want to know what is going on and there is usually a lot that is going on. And if I get to know them, they can tell me if he's not doing well. They are so important and without them, I couldn't help him," Bosscher said.

He said one of the most challenging aspects of this sort of volunteerism is the sense there is always more that could be done. He said most new and old mentors want immediate results. They are encouraged by surface improvements and dismayed when something their mentee does takes them a step in the opposite direction.

For example, he said one of his mentees was expelled from school. However, while he said he felt a sense of disappointment at the loss of progress he thought he made because of the relationship he had with the boy and his family, he was able to help him get back into school. He said one night the boy's father called him and asked him to appear at a hearing

First United Methodist Adopt-a-School and Mentoring Program
What: Partnership between First United Methodist Church of Northville and Second Grace United Methodist Church of Detroit. The two churches provide tutoring, role modeling and advocacy for children at Dixon Elementary School. They also hold fundraisers and improvement projects.

Activities: Mentoring which includes cultural educational and recreational activities as well as tutoring. The groups have also done gardening and clean up at the school. Additionally they have raised money and gathered supplies for the school.

Dues: None, but does require at for the boy.

"This is where we get to be an advocate for these kids," Bosscher said. "Just having another person there saying 'this is a good kid who made a mistake.' Ultimately, he was reinstated."

Bosscher said there is always the frustration of realizing there is only so much a mentor can do in an hour. However, the reward he said, is learning about the child and getting to know what kind of person he or she really is.

"Are we going to fix the problems of the Detroit Public School system overnight? No. But if we can impact one or two or three of its children, we've got a great start to a change in the whole system," he said.

Bosscher said other groups including businesses are beginning to get involved with other schools. He said they are always looking for volunteers, especially young people. Bosscher said the children tend to respond better to younger people but all are welcome. New mentors go through an orientation as well as a background check. Further, he said as a mentor begins the process, the volunteers have monthly meetings to air concerns and give advice to new mentors. Additionally, mentors set up their own schedule for visits with their mentee.

"Anybody is welcome to join our partnership," Bosscher said. "We are hoping our group goes from being unique to one of many."

Atchison approaches landmark in birthday, career

a gift in my life to work along side of him and to see him minister each patient to see the love, kindness and goodness of this man. He is truly all soul."

Atchison was born in Northville and went to school in the heart of the city. At an early age, he had the urge to help and understand people and even flirted with the idea of joining the clergy, said his sister Jeanne Adler.

"When he was a senior in high school he wanted thought about becoming a minister. But Dad was a doctor...after dad became ill he took over the practice," Adler said.

Atchison was a surgical resident when his father was diagnosed with Parkinson disease. He had already graduated from U of M and was in his first year of residency when he decided his father needed him more, Atchison said. Without a word he came back to Northville and took over the Dunlop St. practice when his father died in 1936.

Atchison never looked back to his surgical studies he said.

"This was more of a challenge," he said, "and I embraced the challenge."

As his proof he took out an enormous ledger bearing the names of hundreds of babies delivered and less men and women he lost during World War II.

"That's why it's more challenging," he said.

It turned out to be the best thing he could have ever done. Atchison practiced alone until after the war. The closest hospital was Henry Ford, Old Grace or University of Michigan Hospital. Atchison was it.

he said. During the war years he was in a whirlwind of performing physicals in Northville for munitions factory workers, crossing town to check on a patients in Ann Arbor, running till all hours of the night delivering babies at Grace, returning home only to make middle of the night house calls.

After World War two he even built a hospital over his office on Dunlop where a bed and breakfast is today.

And this didn't stop after he met the other love of his life, "Ruthie."

"I saw her walk into the room," he said, "it was love at first sight I guess."

Ruth Atchison (Baldwin) Atchison was the daughter of one of the former owners of the Northville Record, Richard Baldwin. In 1938, Baldwin was walking up the stairs to his office on Center St. when a freak accident sent him to into the caring hands of Dr. Atchison. Ruth Atchison Atchison said at the time across the alley from her fathers office was a shooting range. Someone taking target practice there had loaded his rifle with too high powered a bullet. As he shot the bullet went through the target out a window across the alley through the alley wall and into Ruth Atchison Atchison's father's chest as he went upstairs to his office.

Little did anyone know this would turn out to be cupid's arrow, though a little misguided.

Since he was the only doctor in the area, Atchison was quickly called to the scene.

"I was a young doctor and every young doctor at the time carried surgical scissors with him. But being a young doctor I cut off his tie as I was inspecting the wound. It didn't really help anything but it was the dramatic thing to do," Atchison said.

Later at the hospital, Atchison found the bullet had entered into his back under the collar bone and ricocheted around to the front of his chest cavity missing his heart.

Atchison seeing Baldwin was going to be alright sewed him up and left the bullet in, finding it would do no harm. As he did Baldwin's daughter walked in to thank the hero. But as it turned out he was something of a familiar face. They had seen each other a few years earlier and even lived in the same town but they never met, Ruth Atchison said.

"This time I met him," she said, "I thought he was quite outstanding."

Though Ruth Atchison was impressed and Atchison had saved Baldwin's life, Ruth Atchison's mother needed a little convincing.

"This was during the depression. And it turned out Ruthie's mother had saved up all her money to buy that tie that I had just cut off. So she was pretty angry at me," Atchison said.

In the hopes of courting Ruth Atchison and making peace with Mrs. Baldwin, Atchison picked out a "big beautiful primrose," and left it at the Baldwin house.

"When I came back the next day to pick up Ruthie her mother answered the door and her eyes were all red and swollen shut," he said, "she was allergic to primrose."

Eventually all was forgiven and 62 years later Ruth Atchison and Russell Atchison are still together.

"Nothing I've done in my career could have been possible without her," he said, "I could never have done it without her."

This is quite the sentiment for a man who according to his wife doesn't know the meaning of the word impossible. Ruth Atchison said there was no one Russell Atchison wouldn't help. She said there were times he would be gone for four days straight between delivering babies and making house calls. Though Ruth Atchison got her degree in Journalism from Albion college when asked what her career was Dr. Atchison quickly replied: "She had a career by marrying me."

Ruth Atchison answered phones, made sandwiches, ran local clubs, raised their four children, choreographed appointments for the good doctor and even got to see him on occasion.

It was Atchison's driving need to doctor and Ruth Atchison's belief in her husband which kept the two going.

"Medicine should never come down to money," he said, "seeing a patient survive that's your pay. That's much more valuable than money. We've been very fortunate to see these people survive"

A highlight of Dr. A's career

Atchison's nephew was found unconscious in his home due to carbon monoxide poisoning from a faulty heater. As his nephew's doctor, he was called in to look at the young man. Atchison saw there was radically high levels of CO2 still in his system, even after doctors had tried giving him oxygen. Because of the amount of time his nephew had spent exposed to the poisonous gas and the amount still left in his system, the other doctors said he would sustain severe brain damage and there was nothing they could do for him.

But Atchison hadn't yet given up. He told the doctors he wanted the boy to be put into a hyperbaric chamber. This high pressure device would push the carbon monoxide out of his blood stream and then oxygen would be administered to replace it. The doctors argued back and forth. The attending physicians felt it was too late, while Atchison said, "what do we have to lose." Finally, they allowed him to take the boy to the University of Michigan for the treatment. There again they met roadblocks. However, time was running out and so Atchison went straight to the head doctor. After some convincing, he allowed the procedure.

The still unconscious nephew was placed in the chamber. A quarter of the way through the boy turned over. Half way through he opened his eyes, three quarters of the way through, "he said." Hey, uncle Russell."

The boy who wasn't supposed to make it now is married and has children of his own. He never sustained brain damage.

SURPRISE!

Don't spill the beans, but a surprise community birthday party is in store for Dr. Atchison the afternoon of July 13. For more information, call Casterline Funeral Home at (248) 349-0611.

Northville teens earn their keep in summer jobs

By MELISSA LEGGIERO
Special Writer

School is out and Northville is booming with kids out and about. Most students are just hanging out with their friends or working. Making money to spend on things for themselves or someone else. Other kids who maybe need that money for school, put it in the bank and save up. Some jobs that kids work at are: Best Buy on Eight Mile Road, Papa Vito's on Haggerty, Mailboxes Etc. in downtown Northville, and many other places around the area.

Adam Jones works at Mailboxes Etc. in downtown Northville and here is what he had to say about his job.

"I do everything from help customers to restocking the shelves," he said. "On some days, it's really crazy like the holidays, so we get really busy with packages and other things."

Angie Banks is a recent graduate from Northville High School. She, along with her sister Katie, are currently employed at Rebecca's on Center Street in downtown Northville. She waits tables, buses the tables, and manages the restaurant while Rebecca is away. Banks enjoys having her sister working with her. They don't spend much time together at home but while at work, they always have fun.

Banks absolutely loves working at Rebecca's and couldn't think of a better place to work. From working at the restaurant, she has learned responsibility, good people skills, how to manage time and money.

"I think having a summer job teaches teenagers how to be responsible and gives them insight into being an adult," she said. "I love working here and I think all teenagers should be taught responsibility. Having summer jobs is the best way to learn it." Banks is one of many students who work at Rebecca's. She earns her money working from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and has made friends with her co-workers.

Just down the street is Eric Crute, also a recent NHS graduate, who works at Mackinnon's. He works in the back of the kitchen doing the dishes. He, too, works long hours although not as many days. He works on Mondays and Thursdays from 4:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.

What is your child getting into at the playground?

Last year, a half million kids were seriously injured at their neighborhood playgrounds. Many of these injuries could have been prevented by the supervision of a knowledgeable adult. Make sure your child knows how to use the equipment safely and follows playground rules at all times. Never allow him or her to play on equipment that is installed near concrete, hard-packed dirt, fences, or any other hard object. For more information, call 1-800-824-BONES, or visit www.aaos.org.

Arrowhead Alpines

With Michigan's largest selection of.....

Perennials, Woodland Wildflowers, Unusual Ferns,
Rare Alpines, Dwarf Conifers, Unusual shrubs
and plants for butterfly gardens

The summer gardening season is upon us and for once, the weather is cooperating. Perfect rainfall and moderate temperatures, ideal for filling in a few spots of extra color, or brightening up your shade garden (the best gardens are planted incrementally from spring until fall, which is by far the easiest way to achieve continuous bloom). All you need are plants. We have lots; unlike other nurseries, our selection continues to improve through out the summer in preparation for next years catalog. Our elves have been busy and we have by far the largest selection ever out on retail display. Indeed they shovelled 100 tons or so of potting mix to bring you the best collection of flowering shrubs and dwarf conifers that we have ever potted out. The selection can be a bit overwhelming, and many of our regular customers show up looking a stack of reference books. Of course we are available to answer questions and tell you where to find things but there are no obvious salespeople to follow you around, and we try not to impose our taste, or lack thereof, on your garden. The year our Fern collection is out of control; dig out your copy of Ferns for American Gardens by Michel and prepare to be blown away. We have acquired cloned plants from the author's private collection; and to keep them company a few thousand of W.I. McEwen's finest Hebebons Orientalis hybrids. Non-fanciers can simply wander and shop for whatever catches their eye, we have a load of cool new rock and everything you need for a fantastic trough garden, including some spectacular dwarf conifers.

Open Wednesday through Sunday from 11:00 AM to 7:00 PM
Closed Monday and Tuesday

MEET THE CANDIDATES: NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP ELECTION 2000

MARV GANS

NAME: Marv Gans
AGE: 68
ADDRESS: 40138 Bexley Way
FAMILY: Wife, Ricki; three grown children.

OCCUPATION: Assistant Dean of Continuing Education Services at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Also facilitates several school-related programs including non-credit, community-type activities.

BOARDS: Current member of Northville Township board of trustees; board liaison to the planning commission; land acquisition committee chairman.

HOBBIES, SPECIAL INTEREST: Design of fitness centers and recreational facilities.

Gans: experience is the key to success

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

A person don't spend more than 20 years involved in local government operations without getting a true understanding of community needs and desires.

Marv Gans, current Northville Township board of trustee and candidate for reelection, said he is a good example.

He is one of five republican candidates running for one of four seats on the board of trustees this year. The term of the entire seven-member board ends this year. The board consists of four trustee positions, a supervisor, treasurer, and clerk.

All candidates are running as republicans so the Aug. 8 primary will decide who will be on the next board unless there are write-in candidates. In that case,

With his election will decide. With his extensive planning commission experience and past four years on the board of trustees, Gans said he's primed to help guide the township.

"I feel I can make a difference in the community," he said. "I'm creative, forward-thinking, yet flexible enough to adapt to change. I've been a longtime resident of the community and I've seen the transitional growth and I want to make sure we grow in the right directions and we can help provide the services residents need."

Gans said his professional experience as an Assistant Dean at Schoolcraft College and governmental bodies provides him with the necessary skills to better the community.

"I work closely here (Schoolcraft College) with people of people — I have 70 people I work with," he said. "I think that gives me the ability to work with different kinds of people in different kinds of situations."

"Having been on the planning commission for a stint before the board has given me a perspective of how the planning commission operates and the things we should be doing as we protect the interest of the community," Gans said.

Gans' work on the boards has given him the inside track to the important issues Northville Township faces in the coming years.

The top issue is managing growth, he said.

"We need to try and put an infrastructure in place to handle the complexity of the kinds of things we're going to see happening because of the numbers of people we're going to have and the kinds of services we're going to offer," he said.

Gans said the township has no way to limit the amount of growth in the community, but it can be managed.

"You manage it by making sure the projects planned are as good as they can be in terms of fitting in from an architectural perspective as well as from an overall design perspective and manage traffic as best as you can in that pattern," he said. "You manage the growth, you direct the growth, but you can't necessarily limit it."

Additionally, Gans said other important issues the township soon will face include: establishing good relationships with other governmental bodies; develop a diversified base of the township; manage bond issues well; and be an advocate with county and state to get grants for projects such as bike paths.

"I look at the board as a policy-making body to look at the big, broad perspective of things," Gans said.

In addition to policy-setting and planning, Gans said working on positive relationships with other governmental units is important.

"I'm an advocate for partnering," he said. "Whether it's with the school district, developers, or whatever; I think we get more by doing that (than) by developing adversarial roles so that's how I approach it."

Hillebrand seeks another term as clerk

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Simply put—Sue Hillebrand loves to be the clerk for Northville Township, she said, which is exactly why she wants to keep doing it for four more years.

Hillebrand is running unopposed for the position of township clerk.

The entire seven-member board, which also consists of four trustees, a supervisor and treasurer, is up for election this year. Since all are running either as republican or unopposed, the Aug. 8 primary will determine the next board.

Hillebrand, who has been on the board of trustees as clerk since 1992, said she still continues to learn and grow as township clerk — without any complaints.

"I love the work that I do here," she said. "I know that when I first ran for office two terms ago, I thought certainly after eight years I would accomplish everything I wanted to do. I haven't accomplished everything; there always seems to be new things to accomplish."

For example, Hillebrand said she looks forward to overseeing the installation of new voter technology.

"My job, by state statute, is not as political as the supervisor's or trustee's," she said. "My job is very clearly defined as administrative and I like the day-to-day work. I like dealing with the public and elections matters, I like dealing with the public and public records and information."

The clerk has duties unlike that of any other board member. For example, the clerk is statutorily responsible to act as the secretary for the board of trustees which means taking minutes and preparing agendas for the rest of the board. The clerk also is responsible for record keeping, acting as a public information officer, overseeing the budget and all elections.

The clerk is paid for 20 hours of work a week and even though it keeps her busy, Hillebrand said there is a reason she works hard like she does.

"I look at this community like one of my children growing and I'm very concerned with how it's going to be when it's an adult," she said. "I want to have some connection to how that all turned out."

Hillebrand said she tries to apply what she learned in the private sector to her job as clerk.

"I dealt with a huge budget, I had 300 employees indirectly under me," she said. "I try to apply the professionalism and practices I learned in the private sector with day-to-day operations here."

As an active participant in government, Hillebrand said she continues to learn more all the time.

"I continue to learn," she said. "Even after eight years, there's so much I still don't know. It's a continual learning process and that's what's so fascinating about public service."

Hillebrand said there are several issues she sees on the horizon for Northville Township including growth; development of the west side of the community; maintaining the quality of life and services; seeing taxes remain low; and traffic and road management.

Hillebrand said growth will be managed by improved use of ordinances and procedures.

"Developers like things done yesterday and sometimes boards have given conditional approval if they do this or that," she said. "If you look back through the records, I'm usually the only no vote and it's because I'm too detailed oriented. I want papers signed, I want procedures in place. I want everything that's supposed to be done when it's supposed to be done before I give my vote - yes."

She said the board has improved in that regard.

"Had I not seen a change in that in the last couple of years, I don't think I could have tolerated the fastness and swiftness with the way things were going," she said. "But I have seen a very positive change and I'm encouraged that it will continue and I think me being up here helps that."

Community parade dazzles downtown crowd

By KELLY COOLEY
Copy Editor

Patriotism doesn't even seem to be fitting enough to describe the enthusiasm and jubilation shown at the annual Fourth of July parade in Northville.

Where many other communities no longer have parades or lack the kind of patriotism it takes to put one together, the community of Northville has shone — with this year being no exception.

City of Northville and Northville Township presented its finest in Police, Fire and Rescue departments, trucks, and local board trustees and councilmen.

Bands from Northville High, Plymouth Fire and Drum, Creole Kitchen and the 5th Michigan Regiment came out to play in the midst of floats by local businesses, community clubs and organizations.

Clowns threw candy, the Order of Alhambra drove around in their go-karts, and our veterans marched with regality and pride.

A regular fun event for kids was also entertaining for the audience as the children of the area dressed up their bikes and paraded down Main Street with flags, streamers and red, white and blue garole.

"It was great. I've come here a lot of years and this year had great variety. Plus, they kept everything flowing," said Maureen Zeleznik, Northville resident.

The parade lasted approximately an hour and a half with the crowds lined on all street within viewing range. Out of town guest even came to catch a glimpse of the Northville parade.

"It was very Fourth of July," said Danny Santibanez from Toledo with Connie Crawford from Northville. "I come every year and it was delightful. Everyone was really well behaved," Crawford said.

Old Navy was a major sponsor of this year's parade along with the Northville Community Foundation that organizes the event each year. Old Navy furnished the kits for the children to decorate their bikes and also had a car in the parade.

"I enjoyed it, especially the candy," said Sean Decker, 10, from Ann Arbor.

"I just liked all of it," said Andrew Kallaher, 8, from Northville.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING FOR STREET LIGHTING FOR THE MAPLE HILLS SUBDIVISION SAD

TO: THE RESIDENTS AND PROPERTY OWNERS OF THE CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF NORTHVILLE, WAYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN, AND ANY OTHER INTERESTED PERSONS:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that as a result of petitions of property owners within the Township signed by the record owners of land whose area constitutes more than 51% of the total area of the hereinafter described Street Lighting for the Maple Hills Subdivision Special Assessment Districts, Capital Installation and Energy Costs and the Township Board believes the project to be in the best interests of the Subdivision and the Township and to create a special assessment for the recovery of the cost thereof by special assessment against the properties benefited therein.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the District within which the foregoing improvements are proposed to be made and within which the cost thereof is proposed to be assessed is more particularly described as follows:

Lots 1 through 173, Maple Hills Subdivision

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the Township Board has received costs for the improvements and energy costs in the approximate amount of $62.00 per parcel per year (see attachment), has placed the same on file with the Township Clerk, has passed a resolution tentatively declaring its intention to make such improvement and to create the aforementioned Special Assessment District and has further tentatively found the Petitioners for the improvement to be in compliance with statutory requirements.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the Supervisor has further reported that the assessment against each parcel of land within said district is such relative portion of the whole sum levied against all parcels of land in said district as the benefit to such parcels bears to the total benefit to all parcels of land in said district.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the Township Board will meet at the Township Civic Center, located at 41600 Six Mile Road, Northville, Michigan, on July 20, 2000 at 7:30 p.m. for the purpose of reviewing said special assessment roll and hearing any objections thereto. Said roll may be examined at the office of the Township Clerk during regular business hours of regular business days until the time of said hearing and may further be examined at said hearing. Appearance and protest at the hearing held to confirm the special assessment roll is required in order to appeal the amount of the special assessment to the Michigan Tax Tribunal.

An owner, or party in interest, or his or her agent may appear in person at the hearing to protest the special assessment, or shall be permitted to file his or her appearance or protest by letter and his or her personal appearance shall not be required.

The committee consisted of people with expertise in finance, building and construction, city management and the court administrator, Kerry Erdman. The two judges were non-voting advisors to the committee. Northville area representatives included Thomas Swigart, Northville city council member, Gary Word, city of Northville manager, Dick Henningsen, Northville Township supervisor, and Thelma Kubitsky, Northville Township finance director.

The group was charged with two goals: to find a temporary home for conducting court and; determine a need of the communities for the next 20 years. In doing so, the group worked to determine needs through various methods including surveys, reviewing available property, interviewing architects and developing a budget.

Swigart said he was involved in the building decision on a broad level.

"We wanted an up-to-date courtroom that is current for today not only in terms of capacity but in terms of features as well," Swigart said.

Where to build the facility was part of the initial discussions. The committee decided to build it in the old location, which is central to all communities in the 35th District.

"There were several issues that were carefully scrutinized including insurance reasons and being able to use part of the old foundation," he said. "The committee determined it was usable so we thought that was an appropriate and responsible way to go."

Swigart said through the planning process items were dropped that didn't fit the plan, but that most requests were met.

"We had a lot of healthy interaction and there were some items that fell out of the process," he said. "But I think we gave fair consideration to all requests and that we'll have a good building for quite a while."

The group also decided to build the courthouse in a colonial style with four courtrooms, lock-up facilities, security parking for police and judges, a jury assembly room, probation offices and clerical workstations.

"We wanted to plan for the next 20 or 30 years," MacDonald said.

The court cost more than $8 million and was funded through the establishment of the 35th Judicial District Building Authority and the sale of bonds backed by excess court revenues sold in March 1999. The court had enough to cover about half the cost of the building, according to a report released by the court.

"Obviously it's a big change," MacDonald said. "So far things are working very well and we're very satisfied with the new building."

Administrators earn high marks on board assessment

While most scores landed in the excellent and even outstanding ranges, on the whole, scores were lower this year than last. Nield said it is very difficult to score the reviews because everyone in the district does a good job but there is always room for improvement.

The lowest score of 3.3 went to the newest category this year of Technology. Nield said the board added the category because of the number of technical problems the district had in the fall. Further, they said technology is becoming more abundant and complex in the district and deserved its own category. Nield said she thinks the score will improve once the district has their new technology director in place. This director will be in charge of the entire network for the Northville Public Schools, Nield said.

However, there were a few areas the board felt needed no improvement and gave perfect scores. These include boundary changes at the middle school level, and networking with county, state, and national organizations. Director of Finance John Street received a perfect score for budget and financial management.

According to the board's report, Street provided "accurate, user-friendly, and fiscally-conservative information for board decision making." They also said they were pleased the district established the Education Foundation as well as lowered the debt mills earlier than anticipated.

Assistant Superintendent Dave Bolitho missed the highest score by one tenth of a point. The board

"The superintendent has to take control in (certain) instances and guide and lead rather than let things take their course."

Martha Nield
member, Northville school board commended Bolitho and Bob Sharrar for the progression of the three moves from the old high school to the new high school, Cooke Middle School to the old high school, and Bryant Center to Cooke.

The district's score went up in the community relations category. Assistant Superintendent Linda Pitcher received a score of 4.2 in the instructional program category. The board said many "outstanding" new initiatives were completed this year under Pitcher's direction. Further, they said staff development for existing and new staff continues "successfully."

The board also said Curriculum Facilitator Janice Henderson's skills were an asset. However, they said the board would like continued efforts to include "parental involvement," in general curriculum development and the review process. Additionally, the board said they would anticipate data and analysis on student performance and "the guidance from the administration which will allow the board to address curriculum and instructional issues at the policy level."

According to the report, the Superintendent and the district continue to improve relationships with several city, township, and civic organizations. However, they said there needed to be some improvement in communication with parents.

"Better and earlier communications with parents may have resulted in better decisions and helped to decrease emotions in the class size and health course situations. The district should strengthen its efforts to communicate news and information to the community," the report stated.

This related to another category, Nield said. The superintendent received a 4.3 for providing effective leadership and management

Northville candidate proposes gas tax relief for future crises

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

State officials could be doing more to keep outlandish gas prices from being as high as they are, a candidate for the 20th district state house said.

Matt Cowles, Northville resident and candidate for the seat being vacated by Rep. Gerald Law (R-Plymouth) made the claim as part of his unveiling of a plan to reduce costs at the gas pump when prices skyrocket.

Under the plan, if the price of gas ever increases to more than 20 percent in 30 or fewer days, the legislature would be required to "take up a bill that would suspend the gas tax for a length of time determined by the specific economic conditions."

"Had a law like this been in place a month ago, the legislature would have been required to at least examine a proposal."

representative candidate

"Had a law like this been in place a month ago, the legislature would have been required to at least examine a proposal."

Cowles, a former aid to former Sen. Bob Geake and Sen. Dan DeGrow (R-Port Huron) is one of four candidates in the running for 20th district candidate. Others include: Northville resident Teresa Folino; John Stewart, a Plymouth attorney; and Dave McDonald, Plymouth mayor.

The state currently has a tax of 19 cents per gallon of gas sold that goes to the department of transportation. Cowles said the department would be hurt beyond repair by losing the tax.

"The department of transportation is the only department affected by such a proposal," Cowles said. "Education would not suffer because we are not touching the six percent sales tax. Just the 19 cent gas tax."

According to Cowles, the U.S. Department of Energy estimated the average price of a barrel of oil this summer would have been $11. However, the price has since risen to almost $33 per barrel.

Cowles said relief is available though.

"Despite the fact that this is due to multiple extenuating circumstances, there is action the state could take to offer relief," he said. "And the price gouging we have witnessed in the last two months is inexcusable."

New education savings plan to be tax free

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

Michigan lawmakers have launched a new tax free education savings plan they say will be within the reach of all state residents because the accounts can be started with as little as $25.

Previous state sponsored education savings plans, like the Michigan Education Trust, required substantial down payments.

Governor John Engler has signed into law a bill creating the Michigan Education Savings Program, proposed by Sen. Mike Rogers, R-Howell, allowing Michigan families to save tax-free to provide college and technical training for their children.

The accounts can be started for as little as $25 by anyone interested in saving for college or technical school; are tax-exempt — both principal and interest — in Michigan; and taxes on the interest are deferred at the federal level. The money can be used to cover all costs associated with enrollment, including room and board. Further, the money can be used for any college or technical training institution nationwide.

Total contributions made on behalf of any one beneficiary may not exceed $125,000.

"Even if a family can afford to save only a small amount, the power of compounding can turn that account into a substantial sum to pay the costs of an education, including tuition, books, and other fees, or room and board," Rogers said.

"Families who start early in making contributions can turn even small, regular contributions into substantial savings," Engler said. "In its first year alone, this program will save taxpayers $4.6 million."

Rogers pointed out that families can put away as little as $10 a week over the first 18 years of a child's life and have about $20,000 by the time he or she is ready for college.

The education savings program will be administered by the Michigan Department of Treasury, which will contract with a private firm to manage the investments.

The sites from Northville still in operation include "Northville's most well equipped guys," "Northville's cutest couples," "Northville's biggest stoners," "Northville's hottest girls," "Northville's girls you don't like," and "Ghetto thugs of Northville." Those suspended or banned by the site include "Northville's biggest b—," "Northville's sickest couple," and "Northville girls with the best breasts."

"I think it's pointless," said junior at NHS Karen Simon. "I saw my name on there and I just kind of had to brush it off. It's hard to see your name and friends' names on there."

FreeVote.com is a free service and is designed for anyone to use, according to the site's mission statement. It allows people or "webmasters" to create virtual voting booths where others surfing the web can vote on things. The web master makes a link to the voting booth they create from their web site.

The rules of the site prohibit the creation of booths to degrade others or vote on overly offensive issues. The rules also discuss not using the site to spread rumors from school and says the booth owners and not FreeVote are

The penalties for violating these rules according to the site is an informal e-mail explaining the rules, suspension of the offending booth, or the system administrators will ban the offensive user from the system. Once a booth has been suspended, it is not deleted from the system and can be reinstated once it has been cleaned up. Hustad said.

Hustad said there are two ways a booth can be suspended. When new booths are created, they are put through a program which scan for "bad words," he said. A complaint from an outside source is the other way a booth can be revoked.

"The 'bad words' that don't get suspended are ones that, unfortunately, slip through both filters," Hustad said. "No program for finding offensive material is flawless, but we believe ours is very good.

certainly as good as any found on another web site."

According to the web site, volunteer staff maintain the booth categories but a man known only as "Brad" started the project in 1996.

The biography for Brad on the site said he is a computer science student at the University of Washington in Seattle. The site said he started the project as a hobby to learn about building web based applications. Brad oversees the site and maintains all the servers.

However, according to their legal disclaimer, the staff and owners of FreeVote.com "do not hold claim to any information placed by our users and found within FreeVote.com." It further said they will remove any material found during their daily screening process or from outside complaints. This includes anything containing excessive profanity, racial, sexual, or religious discrimination, is of a graphic or sexual content, pornography and degradation or abuse of others.

"I think it's kind of mean," said junior Matthew Sebastian. "because I know one of the girls on the list and she's the kind who cries about stuff like that and it really upset her."

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

Our fundamental purposes are to enhance the lives of our readers, nurture the home towns we serve and contribute to the business success of our customers.

In the end, all parties win in Nanovation deal

Maybe after deciding to test the waters to see what else was out there, representatives from Texas-based Nanovation Technologies discovered Northville Township wasn't so bad, after all.

We don't know that for certain, of course, but it was learned this week that the manufacturer of optical devices would be choosing our backyard over the Lone Star State to set up shop. This, only a few weeks after the company was denied a tax abatement from Northville Township authorities and officials walked out more than a little steamed about the way they believed they had been treated by the township board.

Fast forward to today, and suddenly the light is shining down on the township again. We doubt it was solely Northville's charm that caused the change in heart for Nanovation. After all, the company is in the business of business, meaning that tangible incentives need to be in place before any major decisions are made.

In this case, the deal was sweetened with breaks given to Nanovation by the state.

To the casual observer, benefits handed to a company are okay, so long as they don't come from the local pocketbook. That's the money that's nearest and dearest to the hearts of locals.

But at least one state think tank isn't quite so certain that this was the best way to lure Nanovation to town. The Mackinac Center for Public Policy couldn't comment specifically on the Nanovation case, as it made a habit of not assessing projects that may or may not be in the works. At the same time, representatives at the Center spoke on special benefits given to companies in general.

"No one can blame companies for taking the credits when they're offered," said Michael LaFaive, an analyst for the Center.

In other words, don't make the special lemonade for the person who comes up to your stand with a wallet full of money. Rather, make a decent drink for everyone who's thirsty.

"But the breaks are unfair and counterproductive economically. They should cut taxes across the board and not favor a few well-connected firms."

In other words, don't make the special lemonade for the person who comes up to your stand with a wallet full of money. Rather, make a decent drink for everyone who's thirsty.

Nanovation needs to be aware that Northville Township is always in search of new business to add to the community, particularly ones in the high-tech realm. At the same time, expecting the red carpet treatment, regardless of what sort of business is being considered, shouldn't be part of the equation, either.

Even if the economic policy is in question by the Mackinac Center, we think both the township and Nanovation win in this case. The township reaps the benefit of a multimillion-dollar company, and Nanovation gets a great place to set up shop.

Dr. Atchison's birthday: a cause for celebration

Dr. Russell Atchison will turn 90 this week. What's unusual about this celebration is that the good doctor may be a little late in getting to his birthday party because he may have to spend extra time with a patient.

In an era when age 65 is the magical target date for retirement, Mr. Atchison has set a new standard. No one would fault Mr. Atchison if he decided to call it quits, but to see him still getting up in the morning and treating people is solid evidence of his resolve to continue his practice.

We wouldn't even try to speculate how many persons have come and gone through his doors since he began working in 1938, but we do know that during his time as an M.D., Mr. Atchison has been witness to the finding of a cure for polio, the creation of blood banks, the discovery of DNA, in vitro fertilization and now the mapping of the human genome.

There aren't many physicians still working who can claim to have worn the white lab jacket during all that time. Mr. Atchison, however, has.

And all the while, he's asked people to breathe deeply, cough, and found out where it hurts while using that personal touch that isn't as easily seen among many doctors. He has gone well beyond the Hippocratic Oath of "first, do no harm." To "second, put a smile on someone's face."

And he's done it for 62 years. In other words, he's been a physician since Franklin D. Roosevelt was in the White House. That's a long, long time.

We wish Dr. Atchison a happy birthday.

Now — have two slices of cake and call us in the morning.

Freedom of speech doesn't stop here

More random thoughts and observations on life...

I received in my mailbox today an invitation to a reception to celebrate the first edition of the Northville Journal, a new newspaper that will apparently be making its presence known in Northville in the weeks to come. I've dealt with competition before at other newspapers I've worked at, so I'm familiar with what life is like in a two-newspaper town. This should be interesting. (Note to party organizers: I'll try and get down to your soler to make my presence known.)

There is a dark side to freedom of speech, and it's evident in what some truly twisted people have created with their "vote for who you hate the most" website, which features (?) some Northville High School students. Yes, these people are entitled to their sentiments, regardless of how spiteful and mean-spirited they can be. If I'm going to stand up and fight for this newspaper's right to print controversial material, I need to do the same for those who have opinions with which I don't agree. Classic example: our letters to the editor page. Some pretty rough things have been said about yours truly in this paper in the past, and I'm the one who put those words out there for others to see. It's only fair.

Exactly what do you say to a doctor whose medical career has lasted longer than most marriages? How about "congratulations" and "thank you?" Sounds good to me.

Chris C. Davis

More congrats, this time to the Northville school district administrators. We have a very, very talented pool of people running the schools in our community, and the evaluation given them by the school board members is one more indication they're doing the right things.

Nanovation is looking back in the township's direction, and apparently is pretty intent on setting up shop in our neighborhood. I can only assume that the company couldn't find a better place to do its work than Northville Township. Maybe those warm and fuzzy feelings were there all along, but they were smothered by the perks set out for Nanovation by other governmental agencies.

In any event, I wish the new company all the best.

I got a phone call last week from a Novi city council member who acknowledged the relatively slow progress that has been made in remedying the Quail Ridge drain situation. In the member's words, it was as frustrating for the member as it was for me. I recognize the red tape any governmental project runs into, but I cringe every time the rain starts falling now, worried that as meetings are arranged and papers are overnighl between parties that Mother Nature will Deep Six someone's backyard. Or worse.

Election Day isn't far off, and neither is the candidates debate forum for Northville Township. Make your plans to be at the event at 7:30 p.m. July 24. It'll be democracy in action. (Sorry if that sounded a bit hokey.)

How do you like the new look of the Record's section fronts and editorial pages? It took me a little getting used to, but it's just the latest in a string of changes that affect every facet of our operations here. If you don't like what you see now, wait a month, then ask yourself again. Faced with change of any kind, most people resist early on but gradually accustom themselves to it.

Northville's July 4 steeped in rich history

Northville's Fourth of July parades are so popular that a few years ago a television crew came to town and staged a mock parade for nationwide commercial viewing.

July 4, 1776, of course, started it all. While Detroit was celebrating its 75th year of existence, the 13 eastern colonies declared themselves independent from England.

The first celebration of this historic event came one year later. In 1777, Congress also adopted the flag featuring the stars and stripes that still represent the United States.

Detroit, still under British rule, however, did not participate in the festivities. On July 11, 1796, the British finally evacuated the city and turned it over to the United States. One year later, the new American city of Detroit was finally able to celebrate its first Independence Day along with the rest of the country.

Freedom continued in Detroit until the War of 1812 when, in August of that year, the city was once again surrendered to the encroaching British. It remained under the British flag for one year. The city has celebrated its independence from foreign rule ever since.

One July 4 occurrence in 1871, combined the dedication of the new Detroit City Hall.

The Centennial celebration was widespread throughout the country. Detroiters enjoyed a procession, street decorations, tions, boat races, fireworks, and more.

In Northville, "the Centennial Fourth of July was observed in our village in a very satisfactory manner," declared the Northville Record of July 1876, "although the program which had been advertised could not be carried out by reason of a severe storm, which continued until afternoon. As soon as the storm abated, the people began to come into town so that by 2 p.m., several hundred had collected."

The festivities included a 13-gun salute at midnight, "...and a general din of lesser noise was kept up through the day..." A parade also marked the event.

As the years went by, the day began to get less political and more recreational.

"A large crowd witnessed the sports" on July 4, 1893, in Plymouth.

The Northville Record reported on a number of sporting events that took place that day, including a ball game against the Northville team (Plymouth won, 15 to 11).

Races of all forms took over the rest of the day, including horse races, a footrace, and even a bicycle race, where Plymouth's Thad Knapp was the fourth-place winner.

The patriotic flavor of the day, however, seemed to be missing. The Record commented, "the decorations were very scant and one had to hunt a long time to find a flying flag...there were a few, a very few, one cent flags scattered here and there about the village."

Patriotism was to return with world unrest in the 20th century. Large public-spirited ads in the Northville Record throughout the 1940s promoted patriotism, freedom and safety. "Be alive on the 5th" was a common phrase.

A day of sports, games, picnics and races was still the order of the day during those war-torn years.

The annual parade, however, did not make a regular appearance until 1947, with a "pet and costume parade" for youngsters.

By the next year, the Northville High School band led the procession and the tradition that still continues was on its way.

Adamany: Detroit's loss, Temple's gain

"There is a natural aristocracy among men. The grounds of this are virtue and talents."
— Thomas Jefferson, 1813

David Adamany left Michigan last week. He spent the holiday in Toronto, where the art galleries are plentiful and the living is easy, certainly a lot easier than he's been accustomed to. He then went on to Philadelphia to take up the presidency of Temple University.

The folks in Philadelphia are lucky. Since he arrived here in 1983, newly appointed president of Wayne State University, Adamany has by virtue and talent built a remarkable record of service to the people of Michigan.

When he took over at WSU, the place was OK but nothing to write home about. Under Adamany's presidency, Wayne State became a serious research university with a precise focus on the needs of urban communities like Detroit.

When he retired, instead of taking his cudgels as the interim CEO of the Detroit public school system.

Recognizing that his job was to do the heavy lifting that would allow his successor some freedom to operate, Adamany cut costs, outsourced a range of services, removed principals and central managers from unions and pushed for accountability.

In both jobs, he was abrasive, relentless, intelligent, suffered fools badly, kept his eye on the main purpose and got the job done. We all owe him, big time.

I first met David Adamany at Harvard in 1956, when he and I were both undergraduates. Slim, passionate, ambitious, astonishingly well informed, he was the sort of upperclassman that I (a freshman) thought could rule the world. He went on to a career in law and politics in his native Wisconsin before coming to Michigan.

We took together on a range of issues from time to time, mostly having to do with our shared passion for higher education. We once testified before a legislative committee; he was poised, persuasive, supremely articulate.

In addition to admiring his accomplishments, however, reflecting on David Adamany's career gets me to another place: There are important limits on institutions that are too political, too democratic and therefore too badly managed to achieve their purposes. Direct democracy is not necessarily the best way to run a railroad.

Take the Detroit schools. It is now perfectly clear that the fundamental cause their deterioration was a succession of shamefully political and remorselessly meddling elected school boards, members of which considered various parts of the school system little more than private fiefdoms to be micromanaged for pleasure and profit.

Central staff administrators were hired at the insistence of individual school board members. Contracts to provide services to the system were let to political cronies or campaign contributors. Incompetence was tolerated — encouraged, for God's sake! — as long as the personal political objectives of board members were achieved.

Wisely, Governor John Engler and the legislature finally recognized that the longstanding political culture of the elected Detroit School Board made successful schools impossible. When the elected board was abolished and an appointed CEO set into place, the air was filled with screaming about the violation of Detroit voters' rights.

Nonsense! What had been violated were the rights of the kids of Detroit to a decent education. Does anyone for a moment believe that a school CEO chosen by the elected Detroit School Board could have cleaned up the system as effectively as David Adamany has?

Sometimes democracy doesn't work very well. It doesn't work when elected officials use their election to justify micromanaging, as in the case of the Detroit schools.

It doesn't work when elected officials are so inexperienced and so ambitious they can't do their job properly, as in the case of the term-limited Michigan House of Representatives. It doesn't work when elected officials don't understand the difference between policy making and hands-on management, as in the case of many city councils around Michigan.

Electing folks doesn't necessarily make them competent. David Adamany, never elected but appointed by wise elected officials, makes the point compellingly.

The MEAP discriminates — it should!

Yes, the Michigan Education Assessment Program test "discriminates."

It's a test, and so that's its job, to "distinguish, separate and differentiate" students who know the stuff from those who don't.

What the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union alleged when it filed a lawsuit last week in federal district court was that the test discriminates inappropriately on the basis of race and ethnicity.

For the answer to that question, I will — as they say in legal parlance — leave the ACLU "to its proofs."

When the ACLU leveled the charge in its action against Gov. John Engler, the Michigan Merit Award Board and the State Board of Education, it offered some compelling numbers. One in three white test takers scored well enough on the test, meeting or exceeding state standards in all four segments of the test — mathematics, reading, science and writing — to receive a scholarship. But only one in five Hispanic test takers did as well. Only one in five Native Americans got the scholarships. And only one in 14 African Americans earned the money. Further, wealthy suburban school districts consistently produced higher test scores than those in large urban or smaller rural districts.

So the ACLU is asking a federal judge to put an end to program of passing out money for college based solely on the results of this one test. Rather, it is asking the scholarship fund be distributed based on other factors, like grade point average and other achievements.

The problem with all this is that the ACLU has filed the wrong case. Evidence of this is can be found in the fact the civil rights organization also argues that the test discriminates against the "educationally disadvantaged."

I quote from the brief filed with the court: "Furthermore, the scholarship program has had a substantial discriminatory impact on educationally disadvantaged students, defined as those who attend unaccredited public high schools."

Only 5 percent of those students taking all four MEAP tests in 1999 who attend unaccredited schools qualified for scholarships. Thus, while they represented 10.1 percent of students taking all four tests, they were only 1.6 percent of the 20,138 students who qualified under the scholarship program.

It's the wrong case because it never addresses the question of how a student in Michigan today can go through 13 years of public schooling, K through 12, to turn out "educationally disadvantaged."

Sure, $2,500 — the scholarship test takers stand to earn if they pass the High School Test of the MEAP — is a lot of money. Perhaps enough to be worth fighting over.

But it still pales in comparison to the value of an education.

Mike Malott

It has long been apparent to me that we've come to take public schooling for granted precisely because it is "free." Of course, it really isn't. We pay for it through taxes. Although it is hard to put an economic value on it, you can start by considering that the state allocates "foundation grants" of $5,700 per pupil per year. One only has to multiply it up to see that a K-12 education is worth at least $74,100 in today's dollars.

Now if folks were paying that out of pocket and getting less for their money — be it because they were attending unaccredited schools, urban schools or rural schools, or whether they were Hispanic, Native American or African American — it would be clear to the ACLU, I think, what lawsuits should be filed.

Of course, that is exactly what the state is trying to achieve through its MEAP test, to make schools accountable for delivering the kind of education they should be delivering.

Gov. Engler and the State Board of Education have been attempting to reform schools by using the MEAP as a proficiency test. Although it should be compulsory, the legislature has decided not to go along with that. And Engler proposed the Merit Awards to encourage more participation by students.

That was my original complaint with the Merit awards, that it could change the goal from learning to learning enough to earn a little bit of money.

And the ACLU has gleefully fallen right into the trap.

Letters to the Editor

Story, column were biased and inaccurate

To the editor:

This letter is in regards to the articles in the June 15 Northville Record, "Advisory Group Discusses Future of Health Class," "Pitcher's Interview Idea is Far From Good Business," and "Why Would Parents Want to Know?"

In the first article Melanie wrote, "Pitcher said she has not been able to find anyone in the Life Skills department to replace Tibble, but must do so before they can meet again in accordance with the law." What in fact was said, "I have not found another high school health teacher to serve on the committee." Since this is a high school health class, we would like to recruit a high school health teacher because we need their input. I gave Melanie a copy of the law and it clearly lists who should serve on the committee. The law states the committee must be composed of at a minimum the following:

- parents of children attending the district's schools;
- pupils in the district's schools;
- educators;
- local clergy; and
- community health professionals.

Melanie stated, "Though the letter is public record, Pitcher, the spokesperson for the Citizens Health Advisory Committee, has refused to release it for publication and has not returned the Record's phone calls." I have returned every phone call from the Record. Before releasing Carla Tibble's letter, I telephone Ms. Tibble (a professional courtesy) and told her I had to release her letter and asked her if she preferred to release it herself. Ms. Tibble said she wanted the weekend to think about it and would get back to me on Monday. On Monday when I heard from Ms. Tibble, the secretary for the office of instruction called Melanie and told her she could pick up the letter. Melanie did not pick up the letter until after the article appeared in the Record.

In terms of the article, "Why Would Parents Want to Know?" This title is not accurate and was taken totally out of context. Melanie asked me what we planned to do about what we felt was a statistically insignificant decline in the MEAP scores. As normally performed on a yearly basis, I told her each school would conduct an item analysis and we would also conduct a district-item analysis. This analysis would give us an indication of our curriculum strengths as well as indicate areas of concentration. This analysis then becomes part of the curriculum which is shared with teachers, parents and is a normal topic at PTA meetings. If we should find that we must add some vocabulary to the curriculum guides, then we do it. If we need to move curriculum around, then we do it. If we should find a better way to teach a concept, we in-service the teachers. The principals and teachers share what is going on in the building at the PTA meetings. Curriculum is a living document. Three years ago, we shared our first Long Range Curriculum Review and Revision Plan with the Northville Council of PTA/PTSA's. In the past three years, the following curriculums have been written or revised:

- Grades K-5
- Art, foreign language, health, mathematics, media curriculum, science, and social studies.
- Grades 6-8
- Applied technology, art, foreign language, human growth and development, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.
- Grades 9-12
- Applied technology I and II, entrepreneurship/e-commerce, visual basic programming, AP English, broadcast writing, college prep composition, creative writing, modern thought and literature, novels, now poetry, reading short stories, speech, CAD architecture I, CAD engineering I, introduction to engineering/architecture, celebrations, integrated algebra I and II, integrated geometry, advanced placement music theory, Bel Canto, advanced conditioning, biology I and II, physics, advanced placement psychology, ancient history, economics, medieval history, social psychology, and United States history.

This does not include all of the textbooks that have been reviewed and purchased.

We have placed a curriculum binder in every school; so parents can review the K-12 curriculum to be aware of what we are teaching.

In terms of teaching teachers how to teach, we hold ongoing inservices for teachers after school in several subject areas. We have a very ambitious summer staff development program every year, for example, last year 59 workshops with attendance by 752 staff.

I never said parents are not entitled to know why student scores are going down or whether they are getting the basic fundamental knowledge they need. The MEAP scores are sent home with each child as soon as we can get them in the mail. When the district scores arrived, I sat down and created a chart of the results covering the last five years and a summary of how we intended to analyze the data. The Northville Record was called and told they could pick up the report for publication.

The image that was portrayed of me in the Record was a gross exaggeration, misrepresentation and a complete disregard of the truth. These articles are a sad commentary of responsible factual journalism.

The Mackinac Center for Public Policy is a Midland-based research and education institute.

Nanovation Technologies formed in 1998 from the former U.S. Integrated Optics. The company, with facilities in Evanston, Ill. and Burlington, Ontario, designs and develops integrated optical devices. The company has partnered in research and development with Northwestern University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Stanford University. The Northville location will serve as its manufacturing building.

As a result, the company plans to invest $41.6 million in the project initially, which includes land and building costs, machinery and equipment.

Additionally, the move will fill the empty building once occupied by Optical Imaging Systems near the intersection of Five Mile Road and Beck Road.

MEGA was housed in the Michigan Jobs Commission until April 1999 when it was transferred to the control of the Michigan Economic Development Corp., a semi-public entity.

The criteria for receiving breaks from the authority include creating at least 75 new full-time jobs with the average wage of the new jobs equal to or exceeding 150 percent of the federal minimum wage.

crosstown rivals who must pay the single business tax and haven't gotten the same favors," LaFaive said.

He said the process comes close to corporate welfare but not quite because of the criteria established.

But Marv Gans, Northville Township board of trustee, said the move will "work out OK."

"It's nice to have a similar-type business that is going to make use of some of the things in place at the building already," Gans said. "It's a unique situation in a sense because they're going to be using an existing building that's been empty for quite a long period of time."

The board approved the tax abatement by a vote of 4-3. Gans voted in favor of the six-year abatement on initial capital investments.

Mark Abbo, township treasurer, Dick Henningsen, supervisor, and Sue Hillebrand, clerk, opposed the deal.

Trade with China equals Cuba, too?

To the editor:

Now that the U.S. House of Representatives voted to give China "Permanent Normal Trading Privileges" — soon to be approved by the Senate — believing that this will be an entering wedge in exposing the Chinese people to democratic values, is it not about time that we open trade & tourism with Cuba? Are we more afraid of 11 million Cuban Communists than of 1.2 billion Chinese Communists who, we must note, also possess intercontinental missiles?

My guess is that the United States, having invested heavily in the training and financing of the Cuban exiles living in Florida, and when the "Bay of Pigs" invasion failed in overthrowing the Castro regime, we ended up with egg on our face and, an overload of hurt pride.

In my opinion, allowing U.S. citizens to enter Cuba as tourists cannot help but show the Cuban people how other people, living in freedom, are better off; with the end result that they would come to realize that they would be better off in a free society.

The Castro-hating Cuban-American community, with the help of the likes of Senators Jesse Helms (R) and Robert Torricelli (D), among other Castro haters who are preventing trade, cultural, and other relations with Cuba.

There must be an element of ugly Americanism that still yearns for a few communists to kick around. Although, it sure is easier to kick Cuba around than China.

Lawmakers prepare tax-free education plan for state

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

Michigan lawmakers have launched a new tax free education savings plan they say will be within the reach of all state residents because the accounts can be started with as little as $25.

Previous state sponsored education savings plans, like the Michigan Education Trust, required substantial down payments.

Governor John Engler has signed into law a bill creating the Michigan Education Savings Program, proposed by Sen. Mike Rogers, R-Howell, allowing Michigan families to save tax-free to provide college and technical training for their children.

The accounts can be started for as little as $25 by anyone interested in saving for college or technical school; are tax-exempt — both principal and interest — in Michigan; and taxes on the interest are deferred at the federal level. The money can be used to cover all costs associated with enrollment, including room and board. Further, the money can be used for any college or technical training institution nationwide.

Total contributions made on behalf of any one beneficiary may not exceed $125,000.

"Even if a family can afford to save only a small amount, the power of compounding can turn that account into a substantial sum to pay the costs of an education, including tuition, books, and other fees, or room and board," Rogers said.

"Families who start early in making contributions can turn even small, regular contributions into substantial savings," Engler said.

"In its first year alone, this program will save taxpayers $4.6 million."

Rogers pointed out that families can put away as little as $10 a week over the first 18 years of a child's life and have about $20,000 by the time he or she is ready for college.

The education savings program will be administered by the Michigan Department of Treasury, which will contract with a private firm to manage the investments.

What are other Novi or Northvilles like?

THE MYSTERIES OF NOVI

The name of Novi, Mich. is still under debate as to how the name for the city was chosen. Although the city was the sixth stop on a toll road from Detroit to Lansing which some scholars believe could have been the reason for the name, the city of Novi was on maps years before the toll road.

The name and city itself can still claim to be unique since Record and News efforts to find another city of Novi came up moot.

If you know of any other Novis, please e-mail Novi News Editor Jan Jeffres at jjeffres@ht.homecomm.net.

To most of us, Northville and Novi refers to the areas you are in right now — the areas located on the west side of the metropolitan Detroit area and the places you live or work.

However, Northville means something completely different to people in places like New York, South Dakota, Connecticut, Illinois, Ohio and Massachusetts among other places, all of which have a township, village, or city with the name Northville. It's enough to make one wonder, which Northville is tops?

As for Novi, the city can claim another unique item to its list of city greats: as far as the Record/News could find, no other city of Novi in the United States exists.

For Northville, it could be the one in New York, situated in the Appalachian Mountains. It could be the Northville in South Dakota, just a short drive from the Badlands. It might even be the one in Ohio, which is close to Michigan.

Some of the Northvilles are so tiny, finding any information about them is next to impossible. Many don't make it into detailed state maps and Internet searches can yield no results.

But the Northvilles in New York and South Dakota definitely can step up to the plate with our Northville. Although the South Dakota Northville is small with a population of 105, at least it makes it on to most maps.

Clearly, Northville, N.Y. gives Northville, Mich. a run for its money in being the best Northville in the United States.

"I don't know any areas that are more beautiful than right here. Through the years, it's kept its natural elegance. We have a forested area that is hugely untouched and there isn't a stop light in the whole community,"

"I don't know any areas that are more beautiful than right here. Through the years, it's kept its natural elegance. We have a forested area that is hugely untouched and there isn't a stop light in the whole community."

Ann Hirvonen
Northville, N.Y. resident on why their Northville is better

City of Novi's new mayor, Richard Clark, addresses the public at his first 'state of the city' address at the DoubleTree Hotel in January.

from the area of New York's capital Albany. It's located about 43 statute miles from Albany in a northwest direction.

"The whole village has begun to grow, especially artistically," she said. "But it's retained its quaint sense and I think people who come here appreciate that quaintness."

But who can deny our Northville doesn't have its own share of things to brag about? From top police, fire, and government services to unique things like the incredible new high school, the Northville Downs, Hines Park, or Maybury State Park, Northville, Mich. appears to be doing quite fine.

Chris Johnson, Northville mayor, said our community may not be set in the mountains, but it does have different positive aspects.

"First of all, there are the people," he said. "There is a strong sense of community that is due mostly to the people who live here." Additionally, he said the area, especially downtown Northville, has managed to keep its charm despite being surrounded by growth.

"Even though we're in the suburbs, we're still a small town with small town values," Johnson said. "We still have a real old-fashioned downtown community."

Johnson said Northville has its own unique qualities too. For instance, not many cities have a miniature version of Greenfield Village as Northville does with Mill Race Village. Other highlights include the Victorian Festival, holiday celebrations, a stellar school system and historical buildings like the old Ford plant.

"Plus, we are one of only a few communities where you have new houses going up and still have ones that are 140 years old," he said.

There is one name close to Novi's: that is Novi Sad, a city in the province of Vojvodina in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. In Novi Sad, one can find Gibraltar on the Danube river, a fortified structure; Fruska Gora, mountain range; and a national park with 15 monasteries erected from the 15th to 18th centuries.

This beautiful older city has a population of 300,000 and is the second largest port city in Yugoslavia.

WHICH NORTHVILLE IS BETTER?

What Northville is the best one? You be the judge.

Northville, N.Y.
They have a small downtown area. We have a small downtown area.

They have the Appalachian Mountains, we have the water tower, which is the highest spot above sea level in Wayne County.

They were home to Miss New York 1997, Lisa Esler. We are home to state of Michigan Attorney General, Jennifer Granholm.

The X-Files was filmed there once; Chuck Gadicca, a local weatherman, did a live feed from Santa's house on Main Street last December during a weather segment.

They are relatively close to good baseball and mediocre hockey, we are close to good hockey and bad baseball.

Many quaint bed and breakfasts for vacationers there. Joseph's Coney Island here.

They have cross-country skiing trails, we have the toboggan hill in Hines Park.

Northville, South Dakota

They have a half-day's trip to the Badlands, we have a half-day's trip to Mackinac Island.

Their population is 105, our horse population during racing season is about 105.

Coyotes are the norm there. Capt. Norm Kubitsky warns residents about coyotes here.

Workers reinstall the Northville downtown clock after an accident brought the clock down. Especially in the downtown area, the old clock is a symbol of the community and its homey, residential feel.

Thank you cards still a must

There is something to be said for good old-fashioned etiquette.

Sure, your kids probably know how to send an e-mail to a friend or complete a PowerPoint presentation for school, but do they know how to write a thank you note? More importantly, do they ever send one?

I've noticed lately that not all the gifts I've given to kids have been answered with a thank you note in the mail. It's not so bad when you've at least been there to see the gift opened. But after sending a gift in the mail, I've wondered if the person has ever received it because I've never been thanked. Incidentally, according to Emily Post's Etiquette book, when that happens you should follow up with an inquisitory phone call after a period of three months to ensure the gift was received.

While growing up, I was taught to always send a thank you after receiving a gift. I love to write so it wasn't a big chore for me to do so. However, I understand many kids and even adults are wary of their writing skills and avoid letters at all costs. But let me reassure you, it doesn't have to be difficult.

According to Post, "the most

important qualifications of a thank you letter are that it sound sincere and that it be written promptly."

In addition, she says: "Never think because you cannot write a letter easily, that it is better not to write at all. The most awkward note imaginable is better than none."

Contrary to my belief, thank you notes to a person already thanked verbally aren't obligatory and only optional in most situations. That includes birthday gifts, dinner parties, and shower gifts. However, wedding gifts require a written thank you. Also, when you have not verbally thanked someone for a gift. And, thank you notes are necessary for when you've stayed as a guest at someone's home.

Post says you can use printed thank-you notes but should always include the person's name and a small sentence or two personalizing the card. In addition, you should always reference the gift and if it's money, you should indicate how the money might be spent.

I think those are good rules to live by and I've got another hint for you, although I'm not sure Post would approve. A website called www.bluemountain.com will send electronic postcards, birthday cards and thank you cards for free. Some even feature singing, dancing, or talking characters.

So for those kids who can't seem to tear themselves away from the computer, there might be an easy solution. For everyone else, just take a few minutes to write out a card and put a stamp on it.

As Post says: "This is a habit that cannot be learned too young."

Botsford Pediatric Urgent Care Center

It's 9:00 at night, your child is running a temperature... what do you do?

Our Pediatric Urgent Care Center was developed with just this situation in mind. Your child can be seen after your doctor's regular office hours by a board-certified pediatrician, in a comfortable setting...and you avoid the emergency room!

Appointments are Not Necessary, Walk-ins are Welcome!

However, we encourage you to contact your physician for a referral to our Center. For some insurance plans, a referral from your physician may be required within 24-48 hours after your child is seen at our Center. You or your child's physician may call ahead to alert our staff regarding any special needs that your child may have during their visit.

Sunshine sets too early in this Szabo melodrama

MPAA Rating: R

By Ken Marten
STAFF WRITER

Academy Award nominated Ralph Fiennes (Schindler's List, The English Patient) is overcast playing three roles in Sunshine, Hungarian director Istvan Szabo's three-hour "epic" film. Using Hungary's twentieth century triumphs and tragedies as a backdrop, Sunshine attempts to show how three successive generations of the Sonnenschein family adapted to nationalism, world war, anti-Semitism, and ever-changing politics. The film plods along and drips with melodrama that tries the patience of the most casual filmgoer.

Sunshine is narrated by Ivan, the youngest of the three Sonnenschein men played by Fiennes. It begins in the late nineteenth century with the story of how the family fortune is based on a cure-all potion called "a Taste of Sunshine," developed by great-grandfather Emmanuelle, played by a jovial David de Keyser (Golda, Yentl).

The family moves from the country to Budapest, where Emmanuelle's son, Ignatz (Fiennes) rises to prominence as a judge. In the process, power hungry Ignatz changes his Jewish surname to the empire-friendly Sors, quarrels frequently with his socialist-minded brother, and marries his cousin, Valerie, played by Jennifer Ehle (Wilde, Backbeat), who was raised as his sister. Ignatz' life parallels that of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Ignatz' son, Adam (Fiennes), converts to Christianity in order to open doors in the world of fencing. He goes on to lead the Hungarian fencing team to victory in the 1936 Berlin Olympics, but neither conversion or gold medals are enough to save him from the horrors of the Holocaust.

Enter Ivan, the storyteller, who emerges from a concentration camp after World War II and exacts his revenge on Fascists by rising in the ranks of Hungary's Communist party. But Ivan becomes disenfranchised when the revolution begins to eat its children, including his early mentor, Comrade Andor Knorr, played by William Hurt (The Accidental Tourist, Children of a Lesser God). The film comes full circle as Ivan embraces patriotism, like grandfather Ignatz in the days of the monarchy, during the famous Hungarian Revolution in 1956 against the Communist rulers.

The costumes are lavish and the sets are beautiful. The film's prospectus is great. But the family characters are weak, their behavior predictable.

For instance, there is a pronounced lack of emotion during Adam's conversion to Catholicism, almost as if changing faiths is as simple as changing a flat tire. And why do so many of the Sonnenschein family members have English accents?

Fiennes clearly bit off more than he could chew by taking three different roles in one film. This ploy sometimes works well in comedies—Peter Sellers and Eddie Murphy come to mind—but seldom, if ever, in dramas.

There are also gaping historical gaps in Sunshine. The worldwide depression of the 1930s, which historians closely link to the rise of Fascism in Europe, is removed from Szabo's chronology of the twentieth century. And speaking of Fascism, except for a glimpse of a newspaper headline, there is no mention of Admiral Miklos Horthy's regime, which lasted from 1920 to 1944 and allied Hungary with Nazi Germany, introducing anti-Semitic policies.

Director's career spans 40 years

Director and screenwriter Istvan Szabo was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1938, and is a graduate of the Budapest Academy of Film Art.

He began making short subject films in the 1960s, and blossomed into prominence a decade later.

He has won over 60 major international film awards, many for his trilogy Mephisto, Colonel Redl, and Hanussen, that examine how individuals function in societies that don't accept their personal religious or political beliefs. For Mephisto, he received an Academy Award for best foreign film and the best screenplay award from the Cannes Film Festival in 1981. Sunshine, starring Ralph Fiennes in three separate roles, is Szabo's latest film.

Academy Award winner Szabo has created some masterpiece films in the past, most notably the trilogy Mephisto, Colonel Redl, and Hanussen. But with Sunshine, he appears to have attempted an epic film just for the sake making one. Perhaps this film should have been made as a trilogy as well.

William Hurt as Knorr and Ralph Fiennes as Ivan discuss political matters in post-WWII Hungary in Sunshine.

Five Mustangs named to All-Area soccer team

Carbott, Dunmead, Thompson, Katona, and Fill are best kickers

The state of soccer in the Western Wayne and Oakland Counties is just fine.

In fact, the number of area players playing elite soccer is on the rise, and much of that talent has found its way onto the high school scene. Novi started six and sometimes seven freshmen this season, proving that high school soccer will be thriving for many years to come. Northville's sophomore class, along with its juniors made major waves this season, leading the team into the state semifinals before bowing out to perennial powerhouse Madison Heights Bishop Foley.

In all, the select group of girls to follow either have made some noise over the past few seasons, or will continue to bring soccer recognition this way.

Here is the 2000 HomeTown Newspapers all-area soccer squad.

Kristi Arrington (HomeTown's player of the year)

Novi senior

A pure offensive weapon, Arrington leaves Novi as the school's all-time leading goal scorer (151). This season she scored a record 48 goals en route to "Dream Team" honors. In which the coaches association name the top 11 players out of all the divisions.

Other honors which came along with the above include: all-state, all-region, all-district and all-Kensington Valley Conference. Her conference honor was her fourth-straight. Novi coach Larry Christoff said Arrington was one of the top three or four players ever to come through his program.

"Different girls have different attributes, but if you're talking top players, I'd say she's one of the top two players I've coached, along with Lydia Reburn (Class of 1998)," he said. "She's a terrific player who's unselfish and has a knack of knowing where she was on the field."

Emily Carbott

Northville junior

Goals are important to a team's success, but just as important is sound defense which prevents goals. Emily Carbott was not just Northville's answer on the defensive end, but she offered her tremendous leadership to a team which was a game away from playing for it all.

She had 103 defensive saves, which are accumulated when a player diffuses another team's scoring opportunity. She started 22 of Northville's 23 games at the sweeper position, quietly gaining notoriety as one of the best in the state. She was an all-state first-team selection and earned all region, all-district and all-Western Lakes first-team honors. She was the only junior defenseman selected to the all-conference team.

Offensively the junior had four goals and six assists. "Emily's the heart and soul of the team. She directs the play of the team, even though she's our sweeper," coach Ron Meteyer said.

Lindsay Dunmead

Northville sophomore

If she's marked by two or three players next season, it's her own fault. The sophomore had a breakout season with 20 goals and six assists and earned all-state second team honors. So she'll have a big X on her jersey next season.

An all-region, all-district and all-division selection in the WLA, Dun-mead started 19 games in the mid-field.

"She really forces the play out there," Meteyer said. "She demands the respect of the other teams. But now she can't hide anymore."

Alex Katona

Northville junior

Another player whose talents were brought to the states attention, Katona was a second-team all-state selection. Those honors made her one of the top two goalies in Division II.

She allowed 20 goals the entire season, making 135 saves in the process. With Katona between the crossbars, Northville had eight shutouts in their last 12 games. In that span the team went 10-1-1 and earned a ranking as high as No. 3 in the state. A field player when needed, Katona contributed four goals and four assists this season.

Larisa Fill

Northville sophomore

If it wasn't Dunmead doing the scoring, it was her teammate Fill. She was second on the team with 16 goals and added nine assists.

A total team player, Fill earned all-division honors in the always-tough WLA. She was also a third-team all-state selection.

"She's real quiet, an unassuming player," her coach said. "If they doubled up on Larisa, Lindsey (Dunmead) would hurt them. And if Dunmead drew the attention, Larisa could score. There was never a negative comment out of her all year."

Sarah Corless

Novi senior

A good compliment to Arrington up front, the senior scored 11 goals and assisted on eight others this season. Corless was one of five Wildcats to earn all-Kensington Valley Conference honors.

"She worked awfully hard and none of her goals came easy for her," Christoff said. "She hustled her tail off and earned all of them."

Jen Fagin

South Lyon senior

Playing center midfield, Fagin — a team captain — was the focal point of South Lyon's offense, setting up the wings when she wasn't scoring herself. Fagin was the Lions' Most Valuable Player and a first-team all-conference selection. She was the team's leading scorer.

Colleen Thompson

Northville senior

There were many times where the team would push Carbott up the field to help out offensively. It was then that Thompson asserted herself as a vital part of Northville's defense.

The Mustangs began to count on Thompson's consistency on defense, where the senior had 45 defensive saves this season. A defensive-minded defenseman, Thompson was a hard-nosed, tough player, according to her coach.

Sarah Clark

Novi senior

As exciting as soccer was to Clark, her graduation from Novi High School will now lead her into her real passion, hockey.

Clark will play Division I hockey next season, but she finished out her career at Novi as one of the best goalies in school history. The senior was an all-KVC and all-district selection after turning in nine shutouts in 2000. She made 152 saves for the Wildcats this year as the team allowed just 19 goals all year long.

"What can you say about her?" Christoff said while sighing. "She made some phenomenal saves for us this year. Most of the goals that went in on her, she really didn't have a chance."

Heidi Osborn

Novi junior

This senior co-captain gave the Redskins whatever they needed. Milford coach Malia Sauer called Osborn an according to her coach. She played wherever her team needed her this season, collecting two goals and nine assists.

She was an all-conference selection and also earned all-district honors.

Often times, it was Cooley who marked the other team's best players. She will be a co-captain on the 2001 Novi squad.

Smarts, not bragging, will bring home the biggest fish

Often, when a fisherman takes to the water in search of a good day of fishing, he may not be hoping for just a nice mess of panfish to be cleaned, fried and eaten later in the day. Sometimes there is that underlying hope that today might be the day he finally hooks onto that big, bull bluegill that grabs the attention of the other fishermen when he returns to the dock and calls it a day.

Call it the need to brag if you like, but inside all of us there is a little bit of desire to be the best at something, even if it may only consist of being the guy that caught the biggest fish on a given day. Or perhaps the largest catch of the day — consisting of more above average sized fish than the other fellows who were on the water at the same time you were.

If some of you fishermen out there think you are the exception to this rule, think about it. Don't you always throw back the smallest fish you catch, and return to the landing with only the nicest ones hauled in that day?

Another habit most of us have, is to kind of shuffle the fish around in the pail containing the days catch, until the biggest ones are on the top, just in case someone wants to compare your catch with that of their own. No sense in letting them see the smaller ones if there are a couple of big ones in there, right?

Jerry Posey
Fishing

Enough about the games we play. Why don't we just go out there and catch only big ones and not mess with the smaller specimens? That sounds good, but there is more to it than that.

The biggest bluegills in the lake did not get to their present size by being stupid, so they will probably be a little harder to catch than your average 'gill.

It often seems that the bigger bluegills tend to associate with other fish of about their same size. The average sized 'gills and the smaller ones can be found at almost any time of the day in the shallower waters, where the weeds provide cover for them and the food sources that they find there. They may move into the deeper areas as the water warms later in the summertime, but they will still spend most of the daylight hours feeding where the shallower water puts them closer to the surface.

The larger bluegills spend more of their time in the deeper waters, and this is where you will have to fish if you are serious about catching them.

Some of the lakes I fish may have depths of only twenty or thirty feet at their deepest spots and I have found that this is where the biggest ones are usually found. Being familiar with the lakes you are fishing is a big help and can save you a lot of time if you know where these deep spots are when you first get on the lake. If this is not the case, you may have to do a little moving around and depth checking before you can settle down to some serious panfishing.

I like to start out early in the morning, since that seems to be when the bigger fish do most of their feeding, and it is easier to get a fish to take your bait when it is in the feeding mode. Later in the day, when the big ones are resting near the bottom, that is just what they will continue to do, rest, while you send down numerous offerings, hoping they may find one they like.

As a rule, the bigger the 'gill is, the lazier it seems to be. When these big fellows are hungry they will snatch a bite now and then, but it won't be with the fervor often shown by the smaller fish who seems to think that every potential meal must be grabbed up quickly before the guy next to him gets it.

When fishing for the bigger bluegills, I find that using a type of line that most closely matches the water conditions at the time, seems to work best. When the sun is bright some lines tend to show up more in the water than others and this is what I try to avoid. You want your bait to look more like it is free floating as it drops in front of the big guy, not just hanging there on the end of a piece of string.

The old fashioned cane pole, whether it is made of real bamboo cane or the more modern version made of telescoping fiberglass, works well when fishing for the big bluegills in the center of the lake. It is easier and quicker to smoothly lift and swing the fish back to the boat than it is to jerk and crank 50 feet of line every time you get a bite. I know it's a lot of fun cranking with a light action spinning outfit, but I prefer the cane pole when fishing the weed-free center of the lake in deeper water.

When the big 'gills move into the sandy shorelines during the bedding season, they become easier to catch, and this is when some of the biggest are taken. The males, or bulls, move in first to choose a site and prepare a nesting depression. During this time the male will fiercely defend this nesting area from all other males and any other intruders that may enter his personal zone, and this includes all insects and critters not to his liking.

This defensive action has been the downfall of many nice, braggable size bluegills, since the spider or tiny popper that you cast into his area will be grabbed with gusto. As the spawn progresses, the female will deposit her eggs and then move on. The male will remain to protect the nest until the fry hatch out, then he will move back out to the deep water.

If it is biguns you are looking for remember:

- Get on the water early when the big ones are feeding, just before daylight is best.

- As the weather warms up, fish deep where the big ones go to stay cool.

- Move around a bit, and if they aren't biting in one spot check out another, they are down there but they won't come to you.

- And use fresh bait, not something that has been sitting in the sun all day and smells like my sons dirty socks.

Bringing home the hardware

The Northville Broncos 10-year-old travel baseball team won the Washtenaw Amateur Baseball Association tournament June 23 through 25. Pitchers Marty LaRouere and Steve Anderson pitched a combined two-hitter against Dexter, while Tyler Scott, Matt Pape, Jeff Chesalik and Case Moerman added runs for the Broncos. Northville clinched a spot in the finals, courtesy of strong pitching from Nathaniel Zeff and Joe Mitchell. The bats of J.D. Daul and Kyle Asher helped score baserunners.

Bob Thom tends his beautiful garden, a favorite neighborhood attraction

Engineering A Garden

Northville resident, Bob Thom, incorporates beautiful precision in his gardening

By Annette Jaworski
SPECIAL WRITER

With the precision honed from a lifetime of engineering, Bob Thom begins planning his garden in February and March. The result is a garden view that is the highlight of many evening strolls in Northville's Colony Estates.

Most neighbors recognize the Thom's yard by the landmark - four perfectly shaped quadrants on their corner lot, where the flowers stand at attention like little soldiers. This is the first year that Bob decided to duplicate the pattern. Last year's design was so popular he agreed to a repeat performance.

"It's the most formal part of the garden," Bob Thom notes. "It's very pastel, or as a friend would say, very Laura Ashley-ish" he chuckles.

Each quadrant is a perfect pattern of blue salvia, mini-milliflora, dusty miller and light pink geraniums.

The overall appearance relates closest to the old-fashioned English gardens, according to Bob Thom, where there's no mulch or weed killer used, and no trim to edge the beds. It's not needed here, where there's not a petal out of place. In fact, unless you look closely, you might miss another unique aspect of the Thom domain - their perfect grass. Each blade is identical and a dandelion wouldn't dare show its face here. The Thom's grass is so uniform because he still uses an old-fashioned push mower instead of today's gas powered clippers.

The back yard holds its own treasures among the flowers with sundials and statuary. An Armillary sundial, which was a special gift to Bob on his retirement, is a focal point.

"The one area (to the south) used to be an English garden, where the only colors that were allowed were purple, blue and white," his wife, Shirley said.

For now, they've decided to put in a splash of yellow with stella d'oros.

Nearby is their "green garden" with an oriental look to it, containing miniature shrubs and oriental ornaments. It's the most recent addition to their impressive layout.

The flowerbeds against the front of their home pay tribute to Bob's Scottish heritage with 15 different types of heather, perfectly manicured. A rock garden anchors the corner of their lot featuring colorful coleus. A tall evergreen behind a park bench marks the opposite border of their large and well-groomed yard.

Bob's enthusiasm for gardening has rubbed off on his wife, Shirley, who now joins him.

"We both enjoy it. We have to. I couldn't do it all myself," says Bob.

The wife is an eager helper and student.

"I have learned under his tutelage and have learned to enjoy it," Shirley adds.

She laughs when she says that the exercise from gardening is like a free Vic Tanny membership. In fact, so labor intensive is the care of their garden in season that they can only spare the time to go on mini-vacations or long weekends. For three days in May, the couple planted 2,000 annuals.

Retired engineer's garden featured on this year's garden walk

Edging the back yard terrace is a lovely rose garden. In a variety of colors including coral and light pink. The Thom's are content to leave them outdoors. Instead cutting them for a vase. They find that they're outdoors much of the time anyway. And that way there's always time for this busy retired couple to smell the roses.

Years of experience have given this gardener a natural instinct on what works: he's willing to share some of his secrets.

Trees are beautiful and are great for shade, but not so great for colorful blooms. The brightest colors in the garden thrive on direct sun, according to Bob Thom.

Vary the height of your flowers for interest. For a beautiful garden, stagger your blooming seasons so that you have color all year long.

Use a journal to record your yearly garden records. It can help you with planning and will also give you some background information if you want to make improvements. It can be helpful with budgeting as well, since you'll know exactly how much you'll need to buy.

Visit the Thom's garden during the 2000 Northville Garden Walk featuring 7 different gardens on Wednesday, July 12, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Tickets are $8, and can be purchased at Gardenviews or the Northville Chamber of Commerce. Complimentary refreshments will be available at the Cady Inn as well as a variety of garden plants and accessories for sale. Tickets will also be available at Gardenviews and Mill Race Village the day of the Garden walk.

GARDEN TIP

Proper pruning makes gardening a blooming success

By Jeff Rugg
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. Recently, you mentioned pruning out one-fourth of the oldest branches on spring blooming plants like lilacs. How should I properly prune summer blooming plants like spirea, potentilla or crepe myrtle?

A. Small blooming shrubs like these can be planted for several different effects. They can be used as small specimens in flower beds, as low hedges or multiple plants can be used together to create a mass effect. Each use of the planting methods can mean a different pruning technique.

Summer blooming shrubs can bloom on the ends of completely new growth that comes up from the ground or base of the plant in the spring, or on the ends of short-side branches that grow off of long branches left from the previous year. Some plants will do both.

Watch the plant when it blooms to see if it goes only one way or both ways at the same time. If it only blooms on the ends of the new growth, you can cut it down to the ground each year so that everything on the plant is new growth. This can be done right after it blooms or during the dormant season.

If it only blooms on side branches of existing wood, you must leave some older branches until the next year. Branches that are three or four years old can be cut off at ground level to keep the plant young and blooming its best on young wood.

If it is a biennial bloomer, you can use either method to prune it, but you may lose some blooms by not leaving the proper amount of young or old wood. Only time will tell.

If the plant is being used as a hedge, use plants that bloom on existing wood, since you will always have existing wood. Prune after it is done blooming so you will not prematurely cut off the flower buds while trimming.

If the shrubs are planted in groups, they were probably intended to be allowed to grow into a single unit. Pruning them as individuals with gaps between them will ruin the intended look, so taking out one-fourth of the older growth may be difficult. They should be pruned as one or they should be cut down to the ground at the same time.

Unfortunately, it is difficult to tell you, species by species, which plants to prune which way. I cannot list every species all over the country and many species mix things up. For example, climbing roses flower on two-year-old wood while hybrid tea roses bloom on the ends of new growth.

Village of Milford, nestled in a wooded cul-de-sac with Huron River views. Only 3 years new, but decorated to perfection. Neutral decor - NOT! Short with through park to town. Immaculate, better than new construction. Custom decorator touches throughout, unfinished w.o. oak basement in waiting for your choice. Tiled ceramic entry, balcony off master bedroom painted w/real Italian countryside scene and wrought iron balcony, an 8 ft. bay window from MBR looking into wooded yard, no neighbors can be seen out the back. This show place will not be able to resist also features a stone fireplace. Not a subdivision, this is a private neighborhood! Professional landscaping and rounded brick paver terrace in front welcomes guests. Windows, doors, pergola over garage, private road access to river across the street, huge deck overlooks natural wooded backyard, and grounds are simply...

Proper estate planning is a must for everyone

EVERY DOLLAR LOST TO ESTATE EXPENSES IS A DOLLAR LESS FOR YOUR FAMILY

Without such a plan in place, a substantial portion of your estate may be consumed by estate expenses, leaving only a fraction of what you had intended to pass on to your loved ones. Taxes, fees, debts and administration expenses must all be paid before an estate can be settled, and before any money reaches your family. These expenses can eat away at your estate, reducing it by 50 percent or more.

It's a sad fact that many estates lack sufficient cash to pay estate settlement expenses. This often results in the forced sale of securities, real estate or business interests - sales that usually occur at an inappropriate time, resulting in still more losses.

WHAT AN ESTATE PLAN CAN DO FOR YOU

Estate planning is the logical next step to the careful financial planning you've done over the years. With the help of a qualified team of experts that includes your attorney, insurance advisor, trust officer and accountant, you can plan for the distribution of your assets and significantly minimize taxes, expenses and probate costs. By carefully planning now, you control how much property your family receives and when they receive it.

Your estate plan can be as simple or as complex as your needs dictate. What's important is that you coordinate all of the tools that are available to accomplish your goals, taking into consideration your will, contracts, property ownership arrangements, trusts, charitable gifts and life insurance policies.

A GOOD ESTATE PLAN SHOULD OFFER

- An organized and timely distribution, assuring that all of your assets are distributed according to your wishes.
- Income for your survivors, so they won't face the added strain of a cash-flow problem at your death.
- Liquidity to meet expenses so that your family isn't forced to sell valuable property or assets at a heavy loss.

Michael Wagner
Personal Finance

- Reduced taxes and costs, by settling your estate quickly and efficiently, minimizing the money your heirs pay to the government or courts.
- Effective management of your estate, an important benefit that makes sure your estate will be managed prudently with the expertise of competent professionals.

WORK WITH A TEAM OF PROFESSIONALS TO KEEP YOUR ESTATE INTACT

After considering your estate planning goals, you should rely on a team of experts that includes your attorney, insurance advisor and accountant, to help you develop a creative, customized estate plan that meets your unique financial and personal needs. These experts should be able to accomplish the following for you:

- Illustrate the likely results of your current plan if it's insufficient, or the consequences of no plan at all.
- Create a personal financial profile to help you identify your specific goals.
- Estimate the total cost of settling your estate, based on the facts you provide.
- Find creative alternatives that satisfy your objectives and provide a written analysis that makes specific recommendations.

After agreeing on the best course of action, your estate planning team should draft the necessary documents to implement your plan. And that's just the beginning. You should also expect these professionals to keep you informed on changing tax laws and make sure your estate plan continues to meet your objectives, long after you're gone.

Don't leave a lifetime of careful financial planning incomplete. Preserve and enhance what you've created over a lifetime with an estate plan.

Lowe's is the Only Home Improvement Warehouse With a Complete Selection of Major Appliances!

*The companies that make the appliances Lowe's and other appliance retailers sell set an industry-wide "Minimum Advertised Price" for many of their products. This means that appliance retailers—Lowe's included—can only advertise such items at that price or higher. So, if you see the "Below Any Advertised Price You'll See" symbol next to an advertised appliance item, we are confident that our price is less than any other advertised price you'll see on the same model. If you happen to find a lower price, we'll match it PLUS take off an additional 10%. Why do you think we're called Lowe's!

Special Buy

Special Buys are products that we have been able to obtain at an unusually low price from our supplier for a specific quantity or for a limited time, and we pass the savings on to you. We make every effort to have sufficient quantities on hand to meet reasonably anticipated demand. Special Buy price no longer applies once those quantities are exhausted.

For single receipt purchase, on your Lowe's Credit Card, of $2,000 or more that qualify for the Big Buy Program the APR is 13.9%. Minimum monthly finance charge is $1.00 except in IA. In IA the minimum monthly finance charge is $.50. Your Big Buy purchases will be maintained as a separate balance on your Lowe's Credit Card Account. Purchases under $2,000 will be subject to the regular terms and conditions of your Lowe's Credit Card Agreement. Offer is subject to credit approval by Monogram Credit Card Bank of Georgia. Business Accounts excluded.

Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however every item shown can be ordered.
