800 new jobs may be heading this way

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

A office development potentially worth more than $20 million and 800 jobs may be headed to Northville Township.

Bingham Farms-based Burton-Katzman Development Co. will go before a Northville Township planning commission public hearing Aug. 29 to receive feedback on the proposal for the area where the Oasis Golf Course is located on Haggerty Road.

The project plan calls for the development to include three single-story office buildings totaling more than 239,000 square feet. The 22-acre course is located on the east side of Haggerty Road between Five Mile Road and Six Mile Road.

"We are excited about becoming involved in a fine community that has a fine reputation like Northville Township," said Chuck DiMaggio, vice president of project development with Burton-Katzman. "We're looking forward to being a part of the Northville community."

But the project has some hurdles to overcome before it's a reality.

The proposal requires a special land use review and permit from the planning commission. Many planning commissioners said they hadn't even seen a plan for the development yet.

"I know they had submitted something and were about to come before the board, but they asked to table it for some reason," said Marv Gans, Northville Township board of trustees member and planning commission member. "We haven't seen anything since."

Additionally, Dick Henningsen, Northville Township supervisor, said he is concerned about a high influx of traffic caused by the complex and other new developments in the area.

"When I look at the buildings, they look very nice," he said. "But the whole development is awfully large. We would need some other resources to deal with the amount of traffic, otherwise, it could be a disaster."

If everything goes as planned, work could begin as early as next spring, DiMaggio said. The entire project could take as long as five years to be fully-built, he said.

"It all depends on customer demand," he said.

Right now, customer demand for office space in the area is high, DiMaggio said, and there is a lack of the real estate in western Wayne County.

"The demand is so strong in western Wayne County and we are trying to meet that demand," he said.

Burton-Katzman is a privately-owned development company that has several developments in the metro Detroit area including as far north as Auburn Hills and south as Romulus. Developments include office space, shopping centers, apartments, and residential facilities.

The office complex in Northville will be the first development in the community for the group.

DiMaggio said he expects this season to be the last for golfing on the Oasis course.

County GOP under suspicion

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

An area republican group faces serious problems after what appears to be a major donation snafu — brought to light by other republicans.

The 13th Congressional District Republican Committee has sent a letter to the Wayne 13th Congressional District Republican Committee asking the chairman of that group to resign and for it to cease operations.

The two groups are separate, but the 13th Congressional District sent the letter to the Wayne 13th for the good of the party, one official said. The issue at hand is whether the Wayne 13th spent campaign money inappropriately.

"I was part of the committee that spearheaded full-disclosure on every penny of campaign finance last year," said Sen. Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia. "So to have a republican group that appears to have gone against something we were for is counterproductive."

The problem stems from a $30,000 donation the Wayne 13th received from a Grand Rapids donor of which $20,000 was spent on four republican candidates running for trustee positions in Ann Arbor Township. The Wayne 13th is specifically supposed to support the betterment of republicans in the Wayne County communities in the 13th congressional dis-

Northville's Granholm speaks in L.A.

BY MIKE MALOTT

LOS ANGELES — Jennifer Granholm wouldn't say as of early this week what her speech Thursday before the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles would be about.

The Northville resident, Michigan delegate and state Attorney General declined to leak early any tidbits from her talk to the press – because she couldn't.

Her address was still in the typewriter.

"We're not sure where they want us to focus," she said. "They are still sending us some information. It is still being drafted."

Granholm, like a number of other prominent Michigan Democrats, was added to the speaking list just as the convention was getting underway in the Staples Center Aug. 14-17.

Originally, the only Michigan official that had been included on the list by the Democratic National Committee and the Gore campaign was Congressman David Bonior.

On convention eve, additional Michigan names began popping up — Granholm; Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer and Congresswoman and Senate candidate Debbie Stabenow, both spoke Monday night; and state Representative Kwame Kilpatrick, well known in Democratic circles for his oratory style.

Granholm is scheduled to talk today at 2:37 p.m. Los Angeles time.

"My three minutes of fame," she said.

"Michigan is one of just a handful of states that are considered the battleground" in the presidential election, Granholm explained. "They want to highlight us because we are so critical to tipping the election one way or another.

"There will be a heightened emphasis on the

Julie Fraser and her sister, Tricia, (not pictured) will be welcoming guests to their Fraser Inn, a bed and breakfast and the former Atchinson House, at 501 West Dunlap in Northville.

Historic home becomes site of realized dream for two sisters

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Not many people in Northville probably can claim to have spent last week knocking down a garage, hanging out with Frasier and Niles and making breakfast for actress Geena Davis.

But the Fraser sisters can.

After all, it's just another week at the Fraser Inn, formerly the Atchison House, 501 W. Dunlap Street, for the two sisters, Tricia, 33, and Julie, 38, who bought the bed and breakfast in May.

"It's pretty wild to be able to say I've retired at 38," Julie Fraser said.

Her and her sister both decided to trade in things associated with the corporate work life, such as a daily commute and rushed lunch hour, for aprons, casual chats with guests in their bed and breakfast and hanging out with their dogs, Frasier and Niles.

The Fraser sisters are originally from Livonia. Julie used to work for Sprint PCS and Tricia lived in New York but, "grew tired of corporate America." Two years ago, they said, they decided to buy a bed and breakfast and began the search for the perfect one.

"Originally, we were looking on the west side of the state, in more resort-oriented places," Tricia said. "We never dreamed the perfect place was right in our own backyard."

The Fraser Inn was built in 1882 and has gone through several owners since. It was converted into a bed and breakfast in 1987. The owners of the bed and breakfast then allowed members of the community to assist with decorating the house including the delicate flower mural painted in the dining room.

"The house really was in great shape when we bought it," Tricia said.

The house has four rooms including a suite with a jacuzzi, porch and private refrigerator. Each room has its own restroom. Additionally, the house has a main living room and a library complete with books, a TV, space for a computer hook-up and video games for the kids.

The sisters made some relatively minor changes including new furniture in every room and some minor decorative alterations. The garage was knocked down in the back to make way for a driveway that will go around the entire house and some of the floors were redone.

> "We never dreamed the perfect place was right in our own backyard."
> Tricia Fraser
> Co-owner of Fraser Inn

Julie Fraser said about half of the guests are from the metro Detroit area and the rest are visitors from out-of-town, such as Geena Davis, who stayed at the bed and breakfast all last week when she was participating in an archery competition in Canton.

It is a rare occasion when there isn't at least one person staying at the facility.

"I think the only time we didn't have anyone was around the Fourth of July, but that was OK because we had some friends visiting," Tricia Fraser said.

The cost of the rooms range from $80 to $150. More information may be obtained by calling (248) 449-6699.

No tricks just treats

Holloween Trick or Treat hours will be 6-8 p.m. in the city of Northville October 31.

According to city manager Gary Word, the early hours are to ensure the safety of children going out Holloween night.

As in the past, the Northville City Fire Department will host the Halloween Open House including a Halloween costume contest at the Community Center.

The Northville City Council approved the hours as part of their consent agenda Aug. 7.

Sign of the times

The city will allow the Northville Cider Mill to post temporary signs to advertise their business.

Every year, the city receives a request to place temporary signs within the street right of ways giving directions to the Northville Cider Mill. The signs are approximately 2' x2' in size and read "Northville Cider Mill," with an arrow pointing towards, what else, the cider mill.

According to a proposal by Gary Word regarding this matter to the city council, members of the city staff have discussed the possibility of working with the Northville Cider Mill to professionally design and construct a higher quality sign in the future. However, this issue would come before council for approval at a later date.

The signs will be allowed from Sept. 2 to Nov. 19 for the seasonal operation located at 714 east Baseline Road.

Because of its location, this business requests to place directional signs at critical locations along the roadways to inform the public on how to find the cider mill.

In the past, the city has approved such signs in limited quantities. Last year, the city allowed the mill to put a directional sign as well as a sandwich board sign up on Eight Mile and Novi Street. Other signs will be located on Old Baseline Street and Novi Street, Griswold Street and Main Street, Seven Mile Road and Center Street, as well as Center Street and Old Baseline Road.

All of these locations were again approved with the addition of signs on Eight Mile Road across from Novi Road and Seven Mile Road and Northville Road.

Wasting away

The Northville City Council waived the second reading of and adopted an ordinance which would amend the wastewater discharge ordinance amendment.

This amendment would allow the city of Detroit to have direct enforcement authority over those industrial users who discharge to the city of Northville wastewater collection system.

On July 17, the amendment was introduced for first reading. The amendment is necessary to respond to the federal pretreatment regulations adopted in 1988 and 1990 and Michigan Administrative Rules adopted in 1995.

The ordinance amendment also includes changes and revisions resulting from Detroit's work with the Environmental Protection Agency and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

The amendment will be effective Aug. 17.

LET'S TALK Jewelry WITH GARY S. WEINSTEIN GEMOLOGIST

COLORED DIAMONDS

While the majority of the public focuses its attention upon white diamonds, collectors categorize colored diamonds as the most valuable gemstones on earth. Why? Colored diamonds, which come in all colors of the rainbow, combine the unbeatable virtues of extreme rarity and unsurpassed beauty. The words "fancy" and "intense," used to describe these gemstones, only begin to tell of their magic. Their uniqueness is steeped in the fact that even stones in the same color group are not necessarily formed by the same natural phenomena. Scientists cannot even say with any measure of assurance how or when these colored gemstones were created. All these factors contribute to make colored diamonds far more valuable than their white counterparts.

The important thing to keep in mind when it comes to buying jewelry and gemstones such as tanzanites, is that one should choose a true professional, one who knows and loves his art. Northville resident Donn Bosquet has won a number of Emmys for his work as a director for WXYZ-TV Channel 7 in Detroit.

Golden

Northville resident winner of five Emmys

BY MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

If Donn Bousquet is not Northville's golden boy, he brought five of them home with him from work.

Bousquet, earned three of his five Emmy Awards this year for his work at WXYZ Channel 7 news.

As one of six directors, Bousquet mainly does the nightly news with some special projects thrown in the mix. How this translates is Bousquet is responsible for bringing the real life images of the streets of Detroit and its suburbs to the screen and making it look effortless.

But it was his unique perspective on the Woodward Dream Cruise in Detroit for 1999 and his 11 camera view of the 1998 auto show which earned him Emmy's fickle nod.

It is the constantly changing nature of the news and the spontaniety of anything and everything going wrong at any second which draws Bousquet in, he said.

"It's all fly by the seat of your pants and I thrive on that," he said. "I really think my days as a short order cook prepared me the most. You have 15 things going on at one time and I'm always two stories ahead of what you see on TV." However, the 34-year-old television director and Northville resident didn't start at the top. His career began as any great television news director might.

"I went to Alpena," he said, "and I stayed for 14-very long-months."

At 19, Bousquet left his career as a short order cook at the Dandy Gander, formerly the Wagon Wheel, and traversed Michigan and took a position in the newsroom at the Alpena station. Where he said he took a $.50 pay cut from his job as a cook.

"I knew to break into television you had to start in the smaller markets," he said. "Everything in news is eased in markets. Detroit, for instance, is number 9, while Alpena is 210. There are only 211 markets."

Disenchanted with his first news choice, Bousquet soon went to Kalamazoo to do the news. This at least was a 37, he said.

Here he did a little bit of everything as one of a staff of 10. For four years he said he earned his stripes working behind the camera doing audio, video, stage managing and eventually ended up as a director. It was this experience, he said, which helped him land an internship at Channel 7.

"I was asked to intern as a stage manager which was a step down from what I had been doing," he said. "But I figured it was a good way to get into one of the bigger markets."

Bousquet's break came when one of the senior directors retired and a directing position opened up.

As a director, Bousquet's day starts around 10:30 in the morning. He spends the entire day preparing for one hour of air time at 6 p.m. every night. He first makes a run down of all the stories coming up for the evening's newscast. From there, he said he will proofread the scripts and tell his production team where to add video taped clips or graphic or audio elements into the live broadcast.

By 6 p.m., Bousquet has taken his position behind the camera and is already half way through the newscast in his mind.

However, it was his work on special projects which earned him the Emmys.

In 1998, he won for the his all encompassing camera coverage of the Detroit Auto Show. He and his crew set up 11 cameras throughout the show in order to capture as many angles as possible.

The 1999 Emmy, given out in May of this year, he earned for his coverage of the Woodward Dream Cruise. Bousquet said he wanted to do something different for last year's cruise and wondered what it would be like to film Woodward from a dream driver's perspective. However, he said this was no easy feat given the tremendous amount of equipment attached to the camera.

" So we decided to set up the camera inside the car and bounce the signal off a chopper hovering overhead," he said.

After winning the Emmys, Bousquet said he is ready for some new challenges and would eventually like to get into a managerial or producer position.

However, the nature of his job has prepared Bousquet for whatever comes next, he said.

"The news is a crazy competitive business," he said. "It is constantly new and constantly changing, and that's what I love about it."

Republican committee probes Wayne GOPs for wrong doing

The chairman of the Wayne 13th, Thomas Hickey, didn't return telephone calls to the Northville Record.

In a letter to Hickey, Carl Berry, chairman of the 13th Congressional District Committee board, alleges a "clear appearance of a violation of the Michigan Campaign Finance Act" and that Hickey has "breached the by-laws of the Wayne 13th Congressional District Republican Committee by endorsing and spending money in a GOP primary in Ann Arbor Township."

"How else could anyone interpret your having given $20,000 to four GOP primary contestants and only $1,500 to three state house candidates in a year where their elections will guarantee our party's control of that chamber heading into reapportionment?" Berry said in the letter to Hickey. "In short, we cannot but conclude you are acting either irresponsibly or illegally."

As a result, the board has decided to disavow all of Hickey's actions and ask for his resignation as chairman, and "request the Michigan State Republican Committee suspend the bylaws...and all of its operations until further notice."

Folino said she expects "several meetings" will take place to determine what, if any, course of action will be taken.

Whether or not any wrongdoing was committed is still being investigated, she said.

"I want to ensure if there was any wrongdoing that it is addressed and the proper people are made accountable," she said. "We still don't positively know if anything was done, but based on the allegations we definitely have cause for concern."

The 13th congressional district includes the Wayne County communities of Northville Township, Northville, Plymouth Township, the city of Plymouth, Canton, Garden City, Westland, Inkster, Wayne, Van Buren, Belleville, Romulus, Sumpter Township and Huron. The Washtenaw County communities includes Ann Arbor, Ann Arbor Township, Augusta Township, Pittsfield Township, Salem Township, Scio Township, Superior Township, Ypsilanti and Ypsilanti Township.

"I totally support Carl Berry and the 13th Congressional District Republican Committee," McCotter said. "Something has to be done to correct the problem."

Fun to be had at Victorian Festival

BY MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Talking dummies, flying feats of wonder and Dr. Rudy's "remarkable roundies" will abound at this year's Victorian Festival

Web coordinator with the Northville Chamber of Commerce Linda Temple said there won't be many changes to the festival's entertainment line up. She said the combination of acts seem to have the right mix of activity for the whole family.

"There really is something for everyone here," she said. "The acts help create a real family and fun atmosphere."

Returning to the festival this year will be Northville's own Dr. Rudy's Medicine Man Show. This will be the tenth year for Dr. Rudy whose act is a mix of magic and mayhem with special prizes for young volunteers. And there will be ample opportunity to see him according to a statement released by the Festival Committee. He will be performing Friday evening, all day Saturday, as well as, all day Sunday.

Also for the children will be Jasen the Magic Magician. This is Jasen's sixth year performing at the festival. His fast flying fingers form feats of magic as well as balloon animals for kids to take home as souvenirs.

"The jugglers and magicians are great for the young children," Temple said. "It's great. They just can sit there for hours just eating their ice creams and enjoying the shows."

However, if the parents have left the kids at home, there are many events for adults to enjoy as well.

Saturday evening during the festival there will be a Victorian Country Dance open to the public. Attendees dressed in casual Victorian attire will dance to authentic music of the Michigan Ruffwater String Band. The dance will be located under a tent where the public can either watch or join in the festivities.

Further, there will not only be the Big Brass - 30 piece band, but also a Dixieland quartet. There will also be horse and carriage rides available throughout the historic section of Northville.

But even if the kids did come along, there are several events which involve both parents and children. For example, Mary Ellen Clark the Victorian Storyteller tells stories which children and adult volunteers use puppets to act out.

"They're all really good for different reasons," Temple said. "It's a really inclusive atmosphere."

More information regarding entertainment at the festival or sponsoring any of the acts may be obtained by calling festival spokesperson Lori Marrs at (248) 349-7640.

Millennium Park to have groundbreaking tonight

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Millennium Park has been under construction for several months, but Northville Township and Toll Bros. representatives make it official tonight.

A formal groundbreaking event will be held at the park entrance, across the street from the new Northville High School on Six Mile Road.

And while much of the excavation and "earthwork" has been completed, Glen McDonald, senior project manager for Toll Bros., said work on the park has reached an apex.

"The park will be ready to play on in the spring," he said.

Toll Bros. is donating the work and equipment on the more than $1 million development of the park, which is owned by Northville Township. Toll Bros., a publicly-traded company, also is developing the Northville Hills Golf Club subdivision and Arnold Palmer-designed Northville Hills Golf Course.

Work already completed in Millennium Park includes the "mass excavation" to establish proper draining and where park amenities will be located.

Work on paving the entrance road and parking lot is scheduled to begin this week, McDonald said, with the planting of grass and "sodding" to begin next week.

During the fall and winter months, McDonald said, the concession/storage facility will be constructed along with the playground equipment.

Once open, the park will include three soccer fields, three baseball fields, a picnic area with a pavilion, a playground area, bike and walking paths and a concession and storage area.

"The park is going to be second-to-none," McDonald said. "So it's taking a little bit longer than a typical park may to get up and running."

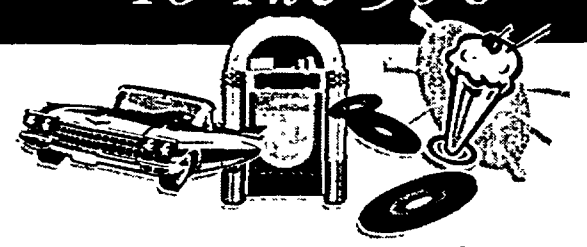

Marv Gans, Northville Township board of trustees member, said the park is sure to become a major gathering spot for community members.

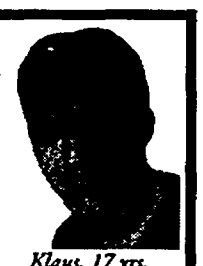

"It's a complete facility," Gans said. "With the fields, concession area, bike paths, parking and even the underground drainage and irrigation, it'll be better than anything we currently have. It's especially nice because it's the only thing we have that's really been put together all at one time."

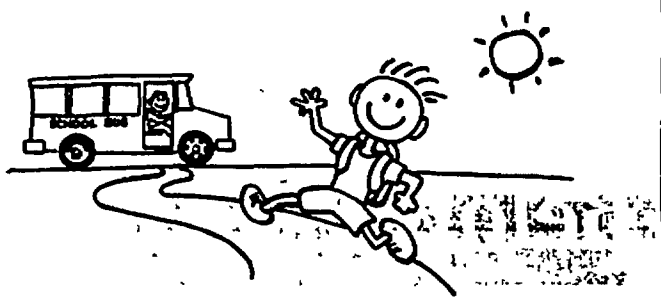

Andrew Dietderich is a staff writer at the Northville Record. He may be reached at (248) 349-1700 extension 109.

Kids eat out, prices go up

Assistant Superintendent Dave Bolitho said district food service prices will be higher this year. The issue was discussed at the Aug. 1 Administrative Services Subcommittee meeting and forwarded to the August 8 Board of Education meeting for full board consideration.

The school board unanimously approved the increase in the lunch programs.

Prices for the early childhood breakfast and lunch will go from $.90 and $1.75 to $1.10 and $1.80. Further, grades 6-12 will see an increase in the option one lunch from $2.05 to $2.25. The option 2 lunch will be $2.50, up from $2.30 and the option 3 lunch will go up to $2.75 from $2.55.

The increase is due in part to the hiring of new staff in the food management department at the new high school, Bolitho said. Further, he said last year's numbers showed the early childhood center's food program did not do well. Bolitho said, this year the prices need to go up to offset a $59,358 deficit projected in the Food Service budget this year.

District makes the grade

The school board authorized the purchase a new computerized grade book program for a total of $12,500 to be used in all schools.

The actual program only costs $12,000, however, Assistant Superintendent Linda Pitcher said she "always adds a little extra just in case."

The garbed committee consisted of technology director Barbara Fife, technology facilitators: Bruce Ricketts and Gary Gondolfi, Steve Sutherland, and Donna Shannon. Teachers Carla Tibble and Thomas Silak were also on the committee.

The committee recommended The GradeQuick program, Fife said, because it was very user friendly and resembled the format of the spiral gradebooks teachers already use. She said these would be the easiest of programs tested by the committee to teach to the entire staff and requiring the least amount of inservicing.

Further, she said there were many other benefits to this program including the district license which allows teachers to use the program at home, schools, or through the network. Additionally, the program has cross-platform capability which allows the same disk to be used with IBM or Macintosh computers, she said.

For parents, the program has a web based feature allowing them to view their students grades from the web. Also she said this helps get parents updated student information.

Fife said the program is powerful enough to upload grades and download class rosters. She said this means teachers will not have to perform this function with bubble sheets which can be time consuming and can increase inaccuracy.

Additionally, professional reports can be customized for both content and layout. She also said statistical information is available for each test, student and class.

Microsoft Office for all new computers

On August 8, the school board approved the purchase of 300 licenses for the Microsoft Office program, for $20,000.

The district has purchased new computers, each of which require a license purchased separately for the Microsoft Office program as well as the Microsoft Office Pro program. This is standard software installed in every computer in the district, technology director Barbara Fife said, and recommended the district approve the purchase.

Assistant Superintendent Linda Pitcher said the programs should all be installed by the start of school.

More new technology

District technology director Barbara Fife recommended the school district purchase 30 licenses for a program which would upgrade the multimedia class computers.

For many years, the multimedia class has been using the MacroMedia director program, Fife said. There are currently 10 copies of the sixth version installed.

The district approved the purchase of the licenses for version 8 on August 8.

Fife said the program is a segment of the total program of producing multimedia web pages, business and personal presentations.

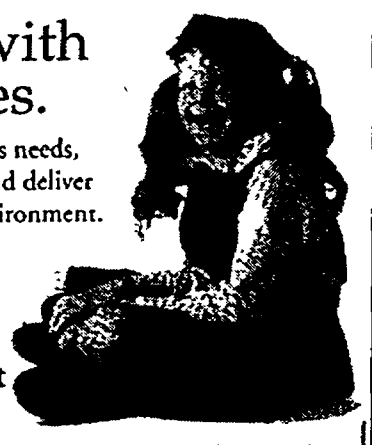

The upgrade allows students more options in mixing their metaphorical media by allowing the incorporation of sound; graphics, animation, text and video into a presentation for tape, the web and CD among other things.

Further, Director 8 is a standard in the technology industry for multimedia production, Fife said, and is the core of the multimedia courses at Northville High School.

Additionally, she said each student would have to have access to the program to learn it effectively.

Trailer lover goes to court

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

A Northville Township man who wants to store five monstrous trailers on his Gerald Avenue lot has run into a major hitch.

As a result, the man has sued the township with hopes a court will overturn an ordinance and allow him to store the mobile home trailers on his property.

The lawsuit came after the man was ticketed for recently adding two trailers to the three already on his Gerald Avenue property.

"We issued him a ticket after he added the trailers because we felt he had violated zoning guidelines and expanded inappropriately," said Don Weaver, Northville Township director of public services.

Leon Bonner, 547 Fairbrook, has owned the property for more than 20 years at 19265 Gerald Avenue. He didn't return telephone calls to The Northville Record.

Since the 1970s, he has used the property to store mobile home trailers. However, Weaver said, in the 1970s the township passed an ordinance that sets up specific guidelines for storage of trailers including they must be in fenced or shielded areas. Because Bonner already had the three trailers on his property, his situation was grandfathered and he was allowed to keep his trailers provided there were no changes.

However, Weaver said Bonner recently added the two trailers.

"We have aerial photos that indicate the trailers were not there until very recently," Weaver said.

Bonner made no attempt to get a site plan approval and only attempted to get a zoning change after the trailers were already in place.

When the zoning board of appeals denied the request, Bonner sued the township.

Weaver said Bonner should have gone to the township with a plan of what he intended to do and worked with staff to plan for changes.

"We wouldn't have to spend as much in township resources to defend ourselves then," Weaver said.

20th State House race still undecided

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

It'll be five days or longer before the winner of the republican primary for the 20th district house race held Aug. 8 is known.

The Wayne County board of canvassers will make a ruling Aug. 22 on who the winner of the close race is, but either candidate will have the right to request a recount.

Different counts of the Aug. 8 primary put either candidate John Stewart or Teresa Folino on top.

"I feel because there are so many discrepancies we need to see this through to ensure the vote totals are correct," Folino said. "And that the person who received the most votes is the one who wins the district."

Stewart couldn't be reached for comment by the Northville Record before press time.

Stewart and Folino, Northville resident, were two candidates of four vying for the republican nomination. The others were Northville resident Matt Cowles and city of Plymouth Mayor David McDonald.

The winner of the primary faces democrat David Grey in the November election to replace Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, who leaves due to term limits.

Several sources predicted Folino or Stewart the winner with the only constant being the race was close. As a result, the board of canvassers is looking at the precinct votes and absentee ballots to try and determine a clear winner. The board will make its final ruling Aug. 22.

Andrew Dietderich is a staff writer at the Northville Record. He may be reached at (248) 349-1700 extension 109.

Granholm gives convention address

state," Granholm said, noting that the symbolic passing of the torch from Bill Clinton to Al Gore was scheduled to take place in Monroe, Michigan this week even while the convention was underway in California.

"It certainly puts the pressure on us to get our people out to vote, and I'm sure the Republicans feel the same way. Hopefully, it will mean more Michiganians will go to the polls," she said.

If Al Gore and his running mate Joseph Lieberman can pull out a win in November, that may be further good news for Michigan Democrats. The party is targeting a number races it views as critical this fall — Stabenow's challenge of incumbent Senator Spence Abraham, Dianne Byrum's contest against Mike Rogers in the eighth Congressional district, the contest to take control of the Michigan House, and the attempt by Democratically-sponsored Supreme Courts justice candidates to oust three Republican-appointed incumbents.

"I don't think the coattail effect is mythical," Granholm said. "If they are coming out to support Gore, they are more likely to vote for Democrats further on down the ballot, and same is true on the other side, although Michigan has that large block of independent voters who will cross over and vote based upon the person."

Granholm predicted the Gore-Lieberman ticket will play well in Michigan.

"Gore has helped to preside over this fabulous economy. Secondly, Lieberman brings so much value, substance, soul to this ticket," she said. She called the line-up a "fabulous one-two punch."

Granholm has only been to one previous national party convention, four years ago in Chicago.

And this time, she gets to address the party from the podium.

"Pretty cool, huh," she said.

Local student emerges herself in culture

BY STEPHANIE FORDYCE
Staff Writer

While most kids only dream about traveling to Europe, sophomores Gina Thomas of Novi and Lauren Brackel from Northville lived out that dream as they embarked on a month long journey through the CISV (Children's International Summer Village) student exchange program.

While the friends did not travel together, they both experienced the same sense of appreciation of different cultures, as well as gaining the understanding of diversity.

"It was really life-changing," Thomas said. "You see the world in a whole new light and realize that there is a lot more out there."

Thomas, 15, spent her summer in Florence, Italy with the Casini family and their daughter Giiullia. She added that she's looking forward to having Giiullia come to stay with her family in Novi. Thomas explained that during the day, some 30 kids including other exchange students from Michigan and their host siblings would do some sightseeing and at night would all go back to their host families.

While in Italy, Thomas traveled to Venice, Verona, and Siena, seeing the leaning tower of Pisa, the Uffizi Gallery, the Salvador Dali museum and the Boboli Gardens just to name a few landmarks.

"It was amazing to me how much history and heritage was there," she said. "It was everywhere."

Thomas said while the Italians may have been better dressers, the youth culture in terms of music taste and style was very much the same as in the states.

"They like Eminem and Blink 182," she said. "It seemed like they looked up to American culture."

Thomas said the only difference was that the Italian teenagers were surprised to see the American teenagers interact among different sexes.

"The guys and the girls there are more separated," she said.

"They don't marry until they're 30 years old."

Meanwhile in Denmark, Brackel was surprised to learn that the Americans were viewed unfavorably.

"Because of Columbine, they thought America had a lot of crime and stuff, but it's true compared to them," she said.

Unlike Thomas who stayed with a host family, Brackel engaged in what CISV calls a "seminar camp", in which 36 kids from Denmark, Germany, Jordan, Turkey, Israel, Spain, Finland, Sweden and the U.S. were brought together to learn about each others cultures.

"I really learned how to accept people who are different and how to be a better communicator," said Brackel.

During their stay, Brackel said they also sang songs, performed skits, and engaged in a number of other group activities.

CISV was formed in 1951 by Dr. Doris Allen, a psychologist at the University of Cincinnati, who believed that children brought to live together as friends could create true and lasting global peace. It is an independent, non -political, volunteer organization promoting peace education and cross-cultural friendship

The youth exchange organization now has over 134,000 participants representing 100 countries.

"The goal for the organization is to develop international relationships and friendships among teenagers and help children promote world peace and harmony," said Thomas's mother Judie who also participated in CISV as a child.

Both girls say they would definitely encourage other kids to get involved in an exchange program like CISV because it is not only fun, but an unforgettable learning experience as well.

"You learn that we are more alike than we are different," said Thomas. "You also realize that we share the world with a lot of other people. Plus, it's cool to see how others live."

"You really come back a different person," added Brackel.

"I just thought the whole ball of wax was great, the culture, the people, being in another country- it was awesome," said Thomas.

Higher ups will decide Quail Ridge dispute

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

A third party organization consisting of state and county officials will solve a dispute between the city of Novi and Northville Township.

An augmented board made up Wayne and Oakland County and state officials has made a number of decisions regarding the Quail Ridge drain, which is rapidly eating at the backyards of several Northville Township residents.

Among the decisions were:

- petitions filed on the part of Wayne County and Northville Township requesting formulation of an intercounty drain are acceptable;
- correction of the drain is practical;
- the drain should be reconstructed;
- the city of Novi, Northville Township, Oakland County and Wayne County will share the cost.

"It's a good thing," said Don Weaver, director of public services in Northville Township. "The main reason is that we were not getting any cooperation from the city of Novi until we initiated this."

The Quail Ridge Drain flows south through Northville Township from the city of Novi through the backyards of several township residents on its way to Mill Pond.

Weaver said the problem has worsened over the years as development in Novi has led to water draining more quickly in Quail Ridge. The large amount of paving around the drain means less barriers water must encounter before reaching the body of water.

As a result, the faster moving water slices through earth at a rapid pace.

The Novi City Council and the Northville Township Board of Trustees met last month to discuss the issue and agreed to split the $6,000 price tag of a grant application and preliminary engineering plan to fix the problem. The Clean Michigan Initiative Grant could pay for about 75 percent of the drain fix, which is estimated to cost up to $418,000.

Officials also agreed if the grant is secured, Novi would pay for 59.5 percent of the estimated 25 percent of the matching funds needed at the local level. Northville would pay the rest.

Funding for the project is uncertain if the grant is not secured. As a result, a Chapter 21 Committee may solve the problem. A Chapter 21 Committee, consisting of representatives from Oakland County, Wayne County and the Michigan Department of Agriculture, solves the problem for the two communities and sends each a bill for doing so.

"We can control our own destiny or we can pay the bill," Novi Mayor Richard Clark said to the Novi News after that meeting. "I always felt you can get more accomplished working together than being at loggerheads."

Weaver said the township requested any Chapter 21 involvement be delayed until the design and engineering and grant status had been determined. However, the augmented board decided to continue with its involvement after several residents affected by the drain asked the board to stay involved.

Weaver said the design and engineering now being conducted can be used by the Chapter 21 Committee, along with the grant that the city of Novi and Northville Township will apply for by the end of the month.

Making residents feel at home

BY MELANIE PLENDA
Staff Writer

Members of the Northville Newcomers Club don't have to be new or even from Northville for that matter.

The Northville Newcomers do have one thing in common. they all know what it's like to be a stranger in a new town and strive to make the adjustment easier.

Through social and civic activities and a monthly newsletter keeping everyone in the know, the newcomers welcome new people to Northville wherever they are from.

"When you move to a place, you don't even know where to get a haircut," said activities chairperson Natalie Dwyer. "But everyone in the club has been in the same boat and they are wonderful people to be in the same boat with."

Outings to the local bowling alley or wine tasting nights are typical for club members, Dywer said. Each activity has a committee who sets up the roster of events. The schedule of events is then distributed to members through their monthly newsletter. Members can then decide which activity tickles their fancies and sign up for it.

Cheryl Fant, head of the ladies daytime activities committee, said though many of the activities the club engages in are for women and during the day, they do try to incorporate spouses in the night time activities.

"It's hard for some of our members to get to the daytime activities, so we try to accommodate that by having a couples wine tasting," she said. "Also, we are always open to new special interest groups that members want to start."

For example, Dwyer said once or twice a month the light gourmet interest group will host a heart healthy dinner party. But the dinner party is more than this, Dwyer said. Anyone who signs up gets a copy of the menu designed by the committee and signs up for the healthy delicacy they'd like to try and bring it to the party.

"There's a little something for everyone," she said. " I'm in the mom and tots group and it's nice to talk to other mothers who have children my kids age, but then again it's nice to go to the couples bridge night and talk to people who are older."

Dwyer said the mom and tots group was how she was introduced to the club. In December, her family was uprooted through a job transfer from Minn. to Mich. Once here and far from the comfort of her lifelong friends and family, Dwyer said the club saw her through the transition.

"They are just a great support system," she said. " It's so diverse and I've met people that I would consider real friends."

Fant moved from Ohio two years ago. She said the club was indispensable for getting to know the area and the people. Given the transient nature of society these days, she said, it's nice to know there is a place to go where people are going through or have been through the same things she has.

Fant said because of all the club offered her when she moved here, she began helping on the club's community service group.

"It's important to give back to the community and businesses in the area. They do a lot for us and support us and we want to reciprocate," she said.

Last year, the club helped raise money for the Plymouth battered women's shelter through several fund raisers.

Sally Bettes, head of membership, said their club is open to anyone in the Northville community as well as the surrounding communities. Further, she said not all newcomers are new. Many have been around for years but enjoy the club and tend to stay.

" Our club is open to anyone," she said. "We have people from Novi, Plymouth, South Lyon. All are welcome."

Bettes said anyone interested in joining is welcome to come to the clubs kick off August 30 starting at 7 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, 777 W. Eight Mile Road. Membership dues are $20 for the year.

More information may be obtained by calling Bettes at (248) 735-0192.

Wayne County approves polluter ordinance

The Wayne County Commission recently approved a Municipal Civil Infractions Ordinance that for the first time makes it possible to fine polluters.

"This ordinance gives us another tool for enforcing that protects the environment and quality of life for residents," said Commissioner Edward A. Bolke, chair of the Committee on Environment, Drains and Sewers. "In the past with polluters, the county would have to try to negotiate a settlement or take criminal action. Having the ability to assess fines gives the county a better way to make polluters comply and more quickly correct problems."

The new Municipal Civil Infractions Ordinance is designed to address repeat offenders of the county ordinances that cover air quality, sewers, illegal dumping, and solid waste or littering. Among other things, the ordinance sets fines for violations and establishes the Wayne County Municipal Ordinance Violations Bureau to issue citations and collect fines. The bureau will be part of the existing Department of Environment.

The fines range from $250 to $5,000 depending on the type of violation and the number of times the polluter has been cited.

"This ordinance makes the Department of Environment better equipped to resolve the problem of repeat offenders," said Bolke.

Our fundamental purposes are to enhance the lives of our readers, nurture the home towns we serve and contribute to the business success of our customers.

Quail Ridge needs to be fixed by Novi

One of the fundamental lessons we learn early in life is the importance of sharing.

However, somewhere along the lines, the past officials in the city of Novi threw that concept right out the window – at least in its latest dispute with Northville Township.

The dispute is over the Quail Ridge drain. It's a body of water that flows south from Novi under Eight Mile Road through the backyards of several Northville Township residents. The drain, sometimes called a stream, leads into Northville Township's Mill Pond.

The drain has been there a long time. In the old days, the drain lazily drifted southward through the wooded areas of Novi and meandered through the backyards of newly-developed subdivisions in Northville Township for all to enjoy.

This isn't a new problem. Northville Township officials have been trying for years to work with the city of Novi. Novi didn't like the game, took its ball and left.

These days, though, the merciless rapid pace of the water races through Novi, under Eight Mile Road, and enjoys a healthy feast of backyard as it slices through Northville Township. Some residents already have seen substantial damage in the form of structure and flooding.

So what changed? More land was developed in the city of Novi. Development equals more pavement. More pavement equals less natural barriers. Less natural barriers means clear sailing for the water. This puts to rest any thoughts that there is more water today – there isn't, it's just moving faster, and that creates a problem. A problem that may cost up to $500,000 to fix.

Oh, and by the way this isn't a new problem. Northville Township officials have been trying for years to work with the city of Novi towards a solution. Don Weaver, director of public services in Northville Township, said the city totally was uncooperative. In other words, Novi didn't like the game so took its ball and went home.

But the Quail Ridge problem has only become worse. As a result, we support Northville Township's decision to initiate Chapter 21 proceedings in the matter. Chapter 21 proceedings establish the drain as an intercounty project and set up a three-member board consisting of a Wayne and Oakland County drain commissioner and a member of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. In other words, Novi can take its ball, but the teacher says you have to share and not only that, here's what you're going to share.

In all fairness to Novi, once Chapter 21 was started, Novi officials suddenly decided they wanted to work with the township and became very willing to meet with Northville Township officials.

Sorry, too late, you may have taken your ball but that didn't signal the end of the game.

Now, it may appear as if everyone is picking on Novi, that the developer of the township subdivision should be responsible. You can say that all you want, but if that were a good argument, don't you think Novi would have made it years ago when first approached? Wouldn't Novi want to make sure they had a say in where they had to spend taxpayer money instead of a third party?

Novi planned poorly for the development of the area around the Quail Ridge drain and knows it. Soon it will know how much its going to have to pay too, regardless of if it wants to or not, and we think it's about time.

It may be late - but at least it's right

You didn't see anything about the hotly-contested republican primary for 20th State House last week and for good reason. There wasn't really a story.

You didn't see anything about hotly-contested republican primary for the 20th district house seat in The Northville Record last week and for good reason.

In our opinion, there wasn't really a story.

Our deadline is in the afternoon on Wednesday and Wayne County candidates Teresa Folino and John Stewart and the Associated Press all had different stories about who won. We waited though, until 7 p.m., for a clear answer, which remains to be given.

At the time, there were two routes we could have gone.

First, we could have had a story saying the counts aren't done yet and there is no clear winner. By doing so, we would have acknowledged the election and the fact no one really knew who the winners were. Basically, a story saying something happened, but we don't know what. Not exactly Pulitzer Prize-winning material.

Or we could have got out our crystal ball (which, by the way, we are still wondering where to get one) and written a story about who we thought the winner would be. Basically, take an irresponsible gamble on what one or two close sources tell us and hope we wouldn't have to have an incorrect story staring us in the face for the next week.

Sorry, though, but we would rather have Northville Record readers correctly informed on what happens, even if in cases like this it's a week later. And even if it means having less copy to put in a newspaper. Have you ever heard the phrase "quality not quantity?" It applies here.

When there is an actual story that happens in the community, though, expect to see it in the Northville Record – sometimes later than sooner, but always accurate.

■ Candidate thanks voters

I want to extend my appreciation to the residents of Northville Township who supported my candidacy for the position of township trustee during the recent primary election. I am particularly grateful for the many hours of assistance that I received from a group of individuals who used their valuable time to distribute my literature to all areas of our community. I am also quite pleased that all of my campaign signs were removed within hours of the election, a task that I could not have completed alone.

In my campaign literature, I suggested that more Northville Township residents may want to consider becoming involved in various committees and commissions as a service to our community. I know that my experiences as the co-chair of the Township Manager Study prompted me to consider what more I could do for Northville Township. We do need more participation from younger residents; of course, most of you can be considered younger through my frame of reference at age 71.

Thanks again for your support. I look forward to serving you as your trustee.

■ Vouchers unfair to children left behind

Sam Kunst's rejoinder to Phil Power's article on vouchers, in the Aug. 10th issue of the Northville Record, is indicative of our democratic freedom: the freedom to express one's opinion openly and freely. Too bad that there are not many like Sam Kunst who willingly joins the political fray on matters that affect us all.

Nothing wrong with disagreeing with another's point of view, as long as one doesn't become disagreeably partisan!

Like oil and water, politics and religion don't mix well.

History is proof positive that this is so. Even to this day, Religion-based conflicts abound around the world. James Madison's eloquent statement, found in his,"Memorial and Remonstrances", voices his strong conviction in favor of a complete separation of Church and State.

Then too, Vouchers would mostly benefit the tens of thousands of parents who now can afford to send their children to a private or Church-related school. State set-aside money would not be enough to allow low-income families to enroll their children in a private or Church-related school, because of not being able to pay the tuition costs of the private schools that are over and above what the State's set-aside money would allow.

Subsidizing the cost of sending a child to a private or Church-related school would do harm to the interests of the 90 percent of students who remain behind in public school systems.

What to do? 1) Set achievable Federal curricula standards that would allow an easy transition of students from one State to another--in recognition of the great mobility of people. 2) Provide a well-paid, well-trained, and dedicated teaching staff; 3) Reduce class size so that each student's educational needs are met; and 4) Guarantee a safe and pleasant school environment.

■ New high school evokes community pride

The citizens of the Northville School have much to be gratified about as the dedication and opening of our new High School approaches. As residents of this district, we can be proud that we recognize the value of the education our children will be receiving at this facility, and our willingness to tax ourselves to provide it.

Many thanks go to the citizen committees who studied this need, the Northville Board of Education, and the many hours they spent in further study and Superintendent Rezmierski, and his leadership to bring this project to fruition. Also special thanks are due David Bolitho who "ram rodded" this construction and made sure we received our money's worth.

We should also be aware of the Superintendent and Board of Education, who served this district over 30 years ago, and had the foresight to see the future need of a new high school at this time.

The purchase of this valuable piece of property was hotly debated and the Board took a great deal of flak for their action at that time. There were even numerous talks about a re-call of that board.

Finally, what a wonderful and exciting time for the students who are entering this new building. They will never forget that they were the first class. It is their responsibility to set the tone for the thousands who will follow them. I know that with these great students and the outstanding staff - we can all be proud of our district.

■ Editor's column unnecessary

Mr. Davis, you choose to publicize Dick's frustration with the candidate forum. I feel you showed poor judgment in your belief that "it was only appropriate to relay that information to you now, in this format". Why? What good can possibly come of your article? If you want to change Dick's behavior towards you, then follow up with him in person. Most people, hopefully not Dick, would be angered by your article and work to avoid or attack you. I trust that is not what you want.

If you want people to know their trustees, then focus on their record of community service, their answers to the forum questions and their frustrations in proper proportions rather spending 25 column inches on a ten minute interaction within a 3 1/2 hour forum.

Remember this is just one forum among hundreds of meetings Dick has attended in working to make Northville Township a great community. You have a platform for free speech. Please put it to positive use.

■ Firefighting union handles fundraisers

Fire fighter Dan Dipple was quoted as saying "...due to technical union rules, the department could not take donations from Ponder". This is not completely true. Our Union, the Northville Township Professional Fire Fighter's Union, International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) Local #3961 can and does accept donations within our Fund Raising Program. It is the Department, Northville Township Fire/Rescue, that has the long standing rules which prohibit accepting donations on the departments behalf.

Our Union, the IAFF, has a long history of fund raising in this country.

For instance, the IAFF is one of the single largest private donators to the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA). Local #3961 intends to put part of the proceeds from their Fund Raising Activities back into the Northvile Community. Union Members (Local, State, or International) will never profit from these activities, as a matter of fact, our Local's members donate their own time to these events.

If you or anyone reading this, has any questions, please feel free to write us at: NTPFFU, PO Box 701428, Plymouth Mich., 48170b or E-mail us at: local3961@juno.com

■ Reflections of a valuable education

With the hustle and bustle of the end of the school year and graduation behind us, I now have time to reflect.

It seems like just yesterday I walked my daughter into her first day of kindergarten at Winchester only to be greeted by a banner that said, "Welcome Class of 2000." To be honest, I never thought that time would come. Well, any of us that have been through it know that the school years go by in a blink of an eye. Just a few comments on the Northville public school system.

We should all be so lucky to have completed 12 years in such an excellent school system. Our daughter, Natalie has had the best of the best through the years, starting with Carol Van Soest to Ms. Minch to Carla Tibble, Susan Couzens, Darrel Schumacher, Emily Serafa, and with the high school years under the leadership of Dr. Tom Johnson. What can I say about this man except we are very blessed to have him at the helm as principal of the high school in our district.

I've worked closely with Dr. Johnson for the past few years as chair of the transition to the new high school committee. I've learned that Dr. Johnson is the most approachable, fair, respected, knowledgeable, capable leader in our district. In addition to Dr. Johnson, Dennis Colligan our assistant principle goes above and beyond the carry out his duties. I doubt that Dr. Leonard Rezmierski, the school board or the community at large hears all the positive things about our superintendent, school board, curriculum, principles, teachers and staff.

Our children are in the very capable hands of our schools and I would personally like to thank all the professionals that have helped teach and mold my daughter into the wonderful young lady that just graduated with the Class of 2000. Keep up the great work, and I am pleased to send two more in this direction.

Help with naming feature appreciated

Chris C. Davis

What's on your mind?

That's a question we ask fairly frequently here at the Record, and we're sincere when we say it. Readers' opinions are heavily valued, if not for our sake, then for the sake of others in the community. We've believed for a long time that the healthiest democracy is one in which a free exchange of communication takes place.

Beginning soon, we're going to take that belief one step further by debuting a new facet into the editorial pages of the Record. In it, we'll formulate a topic being discussed by community members, then ask a question relating to that topic of four or five folks from around town. We'll print their responses and a snapshot of the respondents.

But before we begin this endeavor, we need to ask another question: what shall we call this feature? Ideas for project names have come to mind in the newsroom, but nothing really jazzy. We want it to involve the community and have it be representative of Northville.

That's where you come in. Give us a call, drop us a letter or e-mail message, or just stop by our office at 104 W. Main with your thoughts on what our "question of the week"-type part of the paper should be called.

We think this is a great opportunity to hear from people about town. It's an easy, quick way to find out what people are talking about, and what's on their mind.

What shall we call this new feature? Ideas for project names have come to mind in the newsroom, but nothing really jazzy.

We hope to hear from a lot of readers. This is your Northville Record, and we want you to have connections to it.

FOOTNOTE: (Even if you don't have an idea for a name, be looking for our reporter and photographer out in the community in the coming weeks. You may be asked an out-of-the-blue question for the Record.)

Reunion brings up haunting adolescence

Melanie Plenda

High school reunions were invented by sadists. I'm convinced of this.

I recently went to mine under extreme protest and the promise of significant cash prizes from my friends.

As I have said before, high school was not the best of times in my life. Much like any adolescent, I went through that awkward phase. That phase where nothing you say is right, no one understands you and you're a big geek to everyone but your friends. A phase revisited in my adulthood only on deadline days and at this reunion.

It started with one of my dearest friends from high school, Mari, e-mailing me simply, "You going?"

I knew exactly what she meant because just the night before I had received the peppy baby blue and white invitation to the Stevenson High School Reunion.

I really was hoping she hadn't gotten one because I knew if she went I'd have to go. And since Mari's not afraid of anything and had this knack of simply ignoring the awkwardness of high school, I knew she would go. I would have to go then as we were best friends in high school and just had to go together.

You can see the high school logic was already beginning to seep back in to my subconscious.

At any rate, I e-mail her back that yes I would go to the stinkin' reunion but I wouldn't like it.

So like any good friend, I quickly called my friend Jamie, who also went to high school with us and forced him under penalty of death to go with us.

After he stopped laughing, he said he would go but he, too, would not like it.

All right, so I knew at least I had a few friendly faces there so I could at least talk to them.

The other thing I had going in my favor was it was on my turf. The reunion was held at Cass Benton in Northville.

Hah! Those suckers didn't have a chance of trying anything in my town. I was going to go equipped with my trusty pen, notepad and plenty o' business cards.

I would be armed and ready to write at a moments notice should any hyjinx occur. Plus, I would be able to show them my prowess, my absolute dexterity at being one of Northville's reporters. Their watch dog on the world. A bastion of truth in a sea of treachery. A raker of muck, a slinger of mud. (Of course I'm embellishing, but they wouldn't know that. They don't understand the importance of school briefs.)

But when the day finally arrived to go, it was like I was right back in high school. I had the knot in my stomach the size of Cuba and a pounding in my head.

On the way there, my friends were all chatting and laughing while I was trying to figure out if it would really actually hurt to jump out of a car going 45 mph.

Then I started to doubt that anyone would think my job was really that great. In my head, I'd show up, tell them what I'd do and they'd all laugh and say, "oh that's nothing we all own newspapers," or something.

Absolute panic set in by the time we reached Northville Road and I subtly suggested to my friends we, "turn back now for the love of God."

But they just laughed and pressed forward.

I suggested to them maybe we could lie just a little and tell them I discovered a new element in the trunk of the car on the way here or a cure all for disease hidden in the cooler carrying Mari's Coronas.

But they wouldn't go for it.

Well, the ending of this story does not have the shrinking violet standing tall or being the life of the party. The truth is the people who didn't talk to you in high school still weren't talking to you and it is true the most popular boy in school will start to go bald and get fat.

But I did realize this. Sitting there looking at the people I was stuck with for four years - the ones I had no choice but to see and listen to every day - whose opinions meant everything to me, for the first time I saw how things really were. I realized none of it was real.

It was all a necessary evil of growing up but now, it just doesn't matter. Their opinions don't matter. What they or I do for a living doesn't matter.

We are who we are now by choice and not to impress the people who tried to impress their friends at your expense years ago.

Even though I still think they would have bought that I was a physicist.

High school reunions were invented by sadists. However, those suckers didn't have a chance of trying anything. I was going to go equipped with my trusty pen and plenty o' business cards

Convention marred by lack of organization

Mike Malott

Monday afternoon, I strolled out of the Marriott hotel into the surreal landscape that is downtown Los Angeles during the Democratic National Convention.

First of all, the mixture of palm trees and skyscrapers is just a bit incongruous to this Michigander's eyes. Add to the scene the throngs of protesters just a block away, peaceful enough, but carrying signs and shouting slogans for all manner of causes. Somehow I can't get over the feeling that they should limit themselves to one cause per demonstration.

Otherwise it's just too difficult to figure out what they are for, or against as the case may be.

Adding to my Dali-esque impression of this town was the tremendous contingent of law enforcement, hordes of police officers of all jurisdictions and colors — LAPD in blue, California Highway Patrol in tan, National Guard in green, and more. I hope neither party had this in mind when they decided to play up the issue of diversity this year.

I understand the cops were there for the protection of delegates, especially since some of the protest groups present were the same ones that had been in Seattle for the World Trade talks. Police were determined to keep the streets opened and the convention running smoothly.

But more than one delegate echoed my sentiments that the police presence was so extensive that it became intimidating in and of itself.

Still, it was my next conversation with a Democratic National Convention Committee staffer that would have served as inspiration to Salvador himself.

I was just at the Marriott to pick up media credentials and then grab the next shuttle bus to the Staples Center, where the convention was about to kick off. A small group of reporter-types were gathering around our DNCC staffer looking for transportation to the arena when he noticed a problem, we were all wearing "press" credentials.

Sorry, no media on this bus, he informed us. Delegates only. Several of us politely tried to make the point that we'd been assured our press passes would get us anywhere delegates could go, especially on the buses. But he stuck to his guns. His job, he'd been told, was to put delegates from the hotel on that bus and delegates only. No media were going to get on that bus.

About that time, one crusty old veteran journalist turned around and chimed in softly. Better tell him that there are no delegates staying in the Marriott. It's press only. He's going to have some pretty empty buses.

About the time our staffer decided to get on the walkie-talkie to his boss, he discovered there was another problem. Of the six buses scheduled to arrive, one every 15 minutes, only one has shown. Number two was more than 45 minutes late, which meant two more had gone missing.

More walkie-talkie talk concluded there were no buses coming.

Just a glitch, I admit, and on opening day. But it wasn't the only one. There were other missing buses. And inside the convention center accurate information was hard to come by. Where was the press area? Where were floor passes available? Such questions at the information desks just lead reporters in circles. In the media rooms, reporters without assigned workspace grabbed for chairs in the hall because the information desk did not direct them to the general "filing center" that only about a quarter occupied at the time.

All were symptoms of poor organization, and poorer communication. It was a mistake the Republicans didn't make. But it also was performance the Michigan Democratic delegation's press handlers didn't repeat. The information handed out by state party chair Mark Brewer and Democratic Communications Director Dennis Denno was flawless.

Not so for the DNCC. Now, it has often been said that the art of campaigning has little to do with the art of running a country. I wonder if that's true. What is governance but organization and communication? For as big of an organizational job as running a convention must be, it pales by comparison to the federal bureaucracy. And the national party clearly needs work on its organizational skills.

Democrats may feel they have the right candidates and the right issues for this election, but what good will all these high-minded policy debates do if they can't get the buses to run on time, or show up at all.

Megan Goodman says Lacy is the best pet "because she's such a sweetheart, loves to cuddle, and has the most beautiful face." The Goodmans say they are also proud to be the foster family of kitten Julie "because she's so curious, full of personality, and absolutely in love with people."

2ND PLACE: (tie) ABOVE

This is 5 month old Gibson- a Tri-color English Setter, who was named after former Detroit Tiger Kirk Gibson. Gibson is a member of the Blackman family in Novi. His owners say Gibson is the best pet "because not only was he was potty trained in three days, but he has a wonderful personality and loves all the kids in the neighborhood."

3RD PLACE: ABOVE

"And the Lion shall lie down next to the Lamb." The Lion is Jake- a Golden Retriever, and the Lamb is Langston- a Dachshund. Both are members of the Perry family in Novi.

Last month we asked residents to grab their cameras and enter the first ever Novi News/Northville Record Pet Photo Contest. We received lots of entries and the competition was immense. After a lengthy vote, we finally chose the winners. We had pictures of cats, dogs and even ferrets. And not only did we receive incredible photos, but heart touching stories about the lives of these adorable animals. Two in particular, were Bejing Fatt (pictured with Robin Hood costume) an 11-year-old pug and Mikie Prevost (picuted with Harley Davidson hat) a 15-year-old mixed breed dog, both from Novi. Fatt was born with shallow knee sockets and kept falling over when he'd bend over to eat his food. He was also born with hip dysplasia, a disorder where the hip sockets are very shallow. When he was three years old, he was running up the stairway to meet his mom coming in the door. He lost his footing and bashed his eye into the edge of the stairway. He lost most of his sight. Prevost has also been through a lot. In his 15 years, he has had three cancer scares. He was severely abused as a pup by his previous owners, but has lived in a loving home ever since with Ellen and Eric, who picked him up at the humane society. He is an only "child," so he's spoiled crazy. While Mikie is spunky for his age, he still has health issues. He has his own surgeon, optometrist, oncologist, and dietitian, but he still gets a long just fine because he's showered with love.

Thanks again to everyone that entered.

'Wash and Wax' may be best method

Jay Densmore

Quite often an old piece of furniture is so dirty it looks as if it needs refinishing. However, bringing a piece back to life may be as simple as a good "wash and wax." The methods for bringing an old piece back to life is mainly for clear finishes such as lacquer, varnish, shellac and oil and wax. Unless the tree is still growing in the woods, water and wood are natural enemies. So you'll be restricted to enamel and varnished pieces. Veneered pieces are an absolute no. Always test in a small inconspicuous spot. Pieces finished before 1920 are more likely to have a shellac finish and water will turn them white. If you have water rings in spots, you can be sure it's shellac or lacquer. Determining what type of finish you have is absolutely essential before you proceed. Here's an easy test using a soft cloth or cotton ball: apply some denatured alcohol (shellac solvent) to a small part of the piece. This should soften the shellac and spread it out. It might take a while, but gently rub a small spot. If it isn't shellac, some lacquer thinner will determine whether its lacquer or varnish. Remember, you're using solvents, so be careful. Lacquer is harder than varnish and will soften and smear, varnish does not. If the finish cracks or comes loose, you have varnish.

Now repair methods depend on both the nature of damage and type of finish. Once we know the type of finish, it's time to proceed. Most home centers carry a variety of wood cleaners. These will usually remove most grease and dirt build-up. Look for ones that contain mineral spirits as their base. Avoid products that contain oil and claim to be a wood conditioner. Remember, the object is to remove the oily waxy build-up, not add to it. Once you've cleaned your piece (providing you've been successful), it's time to rejuvenate the surface. One of the best method a nice coating of wax. Wax protects and is easy to apply. It can look like a shellac finish, is harmless, and can be easily removed. You'll find the professional wood finisher will have their own recipe for the fine wax finishes. But for the novice, here are two premixed products I endorse. Bri-wax is a combination of bee's wax (soft and penetrating) and carnauba (a hard sealing wax) that comes in a paste form. Many museums use Bri-wax because of its easy use and beautiful luster. It does require some elbow grease, but the results are wonderful. The second is a liquid and somewhat easier to use. "Finish Feeder" is a combination of turpentine and bee's wax. Simply wipe it on and let it dry for ten minutes and polish to a fine luster. Remember, these remedies are not for every piece of furniture. Consult a professional if you have any questions or doubt. Happy waxing.

Cancer Services

"Just recently, I was diagnosed with prostate cancer, the most common cancer found in American men. My doctor told me about the options for my early-stage cancer. There were a lot of treatment options, like surgery, external radiation or brachytherapy.

"Brachytherapy is a procedure that implants permanent tiny 'seeds' in the prostate to irradiate the cancer cells. It's simple enough to be done as an outpatient procedure. Most importantly, my doctor said it has produced excellent results. After reviewing all of the options, we decided to go with brachytherapy. I'm already back in the swing of things — without ever missing a tee time!"

HEALING GARDEN QUILT SHOW

Currently on exhibition in the Nancy A. Fox Gallery in the Center for the Healing Arts of the Assarian Cancer Center, 47601 Grand River Ave. in Novi is the Healing Garden Quilt Show.

The 27 quilts were created through the dedication of Walter E. Parham Ph.D., members of his family, and the Northern Virginia Quilters. It began as a way for a grieving husband and a quilt group to remember a woman whose passion was quilting.

Following the death of his wife, Lenore, Dr. Parham approached his late wife's quilting group with samples and botanical illustrations of plants used in pharmacology. The quilters were then invited to submit proposals interpreting these specific plants used to treat cancer.

The 27 resulting quilts are the result of this collaboration and the plants are now used against cancer or currently under investigation as a potential source for cancer fighting drugs. Some quilts are excellent examples of classic quilting where the artist interpreted the image literally. Some are artistic interpretation and both techniques of hand stitching and machine stitching are used.

Kay A. Lettau and Gayle P. Ropp's depiction of sweet potatoes show orange circles with details in varied patterns in earth brown and leafy greens and yellows bursting above the ground. Sweet potato is currently in clinical trials for use against lung cancer.

Several quilts feature the rosy periwinkle, a common ground cover and a precious warrior against childhood leukemia and Hodgkin's disease.

Judy A. House's design for the May apple is a mix of color and pattern. The greens, yellows and mottled browns are pierced in places with fine metallic threads. The May apple grows in clusters on the forest floor and each spring its leaves unfurl like cafe umbrellas against the rain. It also may offer protection against leukemia, lymphomas and lung cancer.

Walter Parham said: "Some of these plants that they use are common ornamental plants and quite pretty. I just kept thinking if people say these plants and related to the beauty, they might feel it is a natural thing and less intrusive. So much better that thinking that they were coming from a great big drum at a chemical plant someplace."

The exhibit is intended to: raise the awareness of the close relationship between science, nature and the patient; relate our healthcare experience to the greater world around us; and serve to remind us of the natural healing practiced by other ages and cultures before the advent of modern medicine. It is hoped the exhibition will soften the frightening news of chemotherapy and show that the natural world has application in healing.

The Center for the Healing Arts of the Assarian Cancer Center, 47601 Grand River Ave., is open Monday through Friday, from 7:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. For information, please call (248) 449-4300. The exhibition will remain in the Nancy A. Fox Gallery until Aug. 28.

Stream MAP of Michigan

Why every fisherman and boater needs this map

LOST STREAM MAP FOUND AND RESTORED

The recently published STREAM MAP OF MICHIGAN resembles another map--known to Pennsylvania anglers as the "Lost Stream Map."

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible ..a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well-- until it was lost several years after it first appeared in print. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates, declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Then, by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology--the STREAM MAP OF MICHIGAN was created.

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into...there's a sure way to up your odds...simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fisherman ever fish.

Michigan is loaded with great fishing waters... many of them overlooked. From the AuSable River to all of the Great Lakes tributaries to the Pere Marquette River...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Michigan is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This new 4 foot by 4 foot color map shows virtually all of the 35,000 miles of Michigan streams & lakes.

Winchester Disaster Day - At the end of the school year, Dens 3 and 4 of Winchester Cub Scout Pack No. 903 staged a mock disaster. The purpose was to have the boys put into practice the skills they had learned about first aid in order to earn their Readyman pin.
They prepared for this night by reading about first aid in their Webelo books and visiting the Northville Township Fire Station on Seven Mile for a training meeting.
In each mock disaster scenario, the boys came upon a "victim" and had to figure out what to do for them. The medical problems included shock, severe burn, serious arterial bleeding (complete with spurting blood), choking, broken bones and a heart attack.
The fourth grade boys that participated were: Alex Peterson, Daniel Ketchum, Gavin Blunk, Nathan Hanovich, Ben Maguire, Mark Maquire, Trent Clarkson, Peter Ehlert, Robert Bell, Ryan Conn, John Williams, and Alex Webb.
Despite some very realistic make-up effects, the boys showed a lot of poise and demonstrated proper first aid for the injured victims.

Gibson holds the fort in The Patriot

The Patriot
MPAA Rating: R

Must See

By Jennifer Norris
Staff Writer

Mel Gibson has done it again.

Don't miss this summer's heart wrenching and poignant recreation of the American Revolution War.

The Patriot offers viewers an intense experience as Mel Gibson, Heath Ledger, Joely Richardson, Jason Isaacs, Rene Auberjonois and Lisa Brenner depict tales of human courage, sacrifice, honor and America's quest for freedom.

Gibson gives an award worthy performance as a single father of seven in South Carolina who is initially very much against the idea of fighting more battles and participating in a cause. Gibson's feelings of anti-war likely stem from his previous bouts in battles and tales of his past war engagements leave the townspeople mesmerized and his children anxious to know more about their own father's past.

Heath Ledger (Ten Things I Hate About You), who plays the role of one of Gibson's sons, defies his father by choosing to follow his own personal convictions of fighting for freedom and enlists to serve.

Ledger goes off to war, leaving his father frantic and his siblings teary-eyed. Even though one son has left home to fight, the family can still see soldiers fighting and bombs exploding as they look out the window of their South Carolina home.

Realistic shots of the enemies gunfire pull viewers into the storyline and emotional tugs are included in several portions of the film to add further drama and viewer appeal.

One of the most riveting scenes in the film involves Gibson and his two youngest sons as they scramble to save Ledger from being hung. Quickly grabbing muskets, pistols and a tomahawk from his home that the British have just torched, the three race into the woods, hide behind trees and wait for the opportunity to ambush the British troops.

With amazing shooting accuracy for elementary age children, the two young boys assist their father in killing the British soldiers, and narrowly escape their own death as the enemy sends bullets whizzing past their heads. Gibson also has perfect aim and wipes out the rest of the soldiers. After Gibson rescues his son from the last British "redcoat" he takes his tomahawk out and thoroughly mutilates the soldier long after he is dead. Because Gibson fought so hard and was victorious in killing a large number of British soldiers, he earns the nickname of "the ghost."

The two youngest sons excellently portray frightened youths as they quickly but somewhat clumsily load their weapons.

Gibson also does a commendable job of portraying the loss he feels at his death of his son. At one point Gibson begins sobbing and shaking uncontrollably leaving viewers spellbound and sympathetic. Gibson's acting also makes an emotional appeal on the audiences as he looks up with his face was literally covered with the blood after killing one British soldier.

Other interesting scenes include Ledger and Gibson dueling British soldiers in battle, complete with cannonball explosions and realistic-looking gunshot wounds on the soldiers.

Battlefield scenes, though they are bloody and graphic, are well filmed and reveal the hand-to-hand combat of the British troops under Gen. Charles Cornwallis and the American armies fighting alongside Gibson's militia team.

Also appearing in The Patriot are Joely Richardson (Event Horizon), who plays Gibson's widowed but well-to-do sister-in-law, who helps the family after their home is burned down. Rene Auberjonois (Inspector Gadget, Batman Forever) also has a significant role as the Rev. Oliver, who joins Gibson's militia team. Also, Lisa Brenner makes her film debut as Anne Howard, a courageous young woman who encourages men to enlist to fight for freedom and has a special connection to Gibson's family.

The Patriot was directed by Roland Emmerich and was produced by Dean Devlin. This is not the first time that these two men have worked together to create popular films. Devlin produced and co-wrote with Emmerich the Tri-Star release "Godzilla." In addition, Emmerich directed the movie hit "Independence Day," which he also executive produced and co-wrote with Devlin.

This intense movie will leave audiences on the edge of their seats as superior acting leaves viewers with a touching outlook on the strife and passion that former patriots had in ensuring their cause would not die.

In the emotionally-charged Columbia Pictures adventure The Patriot, Academy Award® winner Mel Gibson (center) stars as Benjamin Martin, a reluctant hero who must draw on his courage and patriotic fervor when he is swept into the American Revolution.

Little could save misguided Saving Grace

Saving Grace
MPAA Rating: R
Now Playing
Not Recommended

By Ken Marten
Staff Writer

The latest British comedy to make it's way across the Atlantic, Saving Grace is the wicked hybrid of a film, a patchwork monster of inspirations and ideas spliced from the genes of Cheech and Chong, Benny Hill, and Quentin Tarantino.

The mad scientist in this case is director Nigel Cole, who has experience directing music videos, wildlife documentaries and plays, but none in directing feature films, or turning down nightmarish scripts. The film's Igor is Craig Ferguson (The Big Tease), who co-stars as Matthew the gardener, and is credited as co-writer of the screenplay.

In the midst of the mish-mash plot are a host of fine British actors whose talents are wasted, with the Academy Award winning Brenda Blethyn (Secrets and Lies, A River Runs Through It) on top of the bill.

Grace leads a pleasing life of tea parties, roast beef on Sunday, and all things pleasantly English. When her philandering husband dies leaving Grace with a mounting debt, Matthew the gardener convinces her to toss out the orchids and turn the green house into a marijuana farm. Since Grace herself is a master gardener, they manage to harvest lots and lots of pot. With the idea of making one big score to get her out of debt, Grace travels to London in search of a drug buyer, and recruits her late husband's lover to help. And in case the audience isn't laughing, Grace encounters some dangerous gangsters for film suspense, and starts a romance for film passion.

The additional elements don't help the plot any, and thanks to the supporting actors, they don't hurt it, either. Nothing can kill the monster, after all.

Too many films often try to be too many genres of film. Comedies necessarily don't need action or suspense or romance, but they do need comedy. In absence of laughs, writers and directors try to include plot surprises instead of going back to the drawing board to create more comedic situations. The result of so much filler is often a lukewarm film.

Saving Grace does cause sparse spurts of laughter, again often from its supporting actors. Martin Clunes (the BBC's Men Behaving Badly, Shakespeare in Love), with his rubber face and Orson Wellesian voice, plays pot smoking Dr. Bamford with comic panache. Veteran actor Leslie Phillips (Out of Africa, Empire of the Sun), who has appeared in over 100 feature films, is funny as the sympathetic village vicar. And while not exactly comedic, Tchecky Karyo (The Patriot, Goldeneye) makes the most out of Jacques, the French drug smuggling gangster.

The old crack that Americans don't "get" British comedy may be true in the case of Saving Grace, but then again, there isn't much comedy to get. Lock this monster in the castle, fill the moat with petrol, and set the whole thing on fire. Lock up the mad scientist and Igor as well, until they promise not to make another snoozer like this one.

Viewers in search of recent British Isles film should skip this one and see the animated Chicken Run. Or, head for the video store. Recommendations? I Went Down, The General, Breaking the Waves, or Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels.

A CLOSER LOOK AT . . .

Tcheky Karyo

One of France's foremost international stars, Tcheky Karyo has a supporting role in Saving Grace as Jacques, a drug smuggling gangster. Karyo's commanding screen presence has allowed him to star in French, British, Brazilian, and American films. He can also be seen on the silver screen with Mel Gibson in The Patriot. Karyo's French film credits include Full Moon Exposure, La Femme Nikita, The Bear and Nostradamus. He has also starred in several other American films, including Wing Commander, The Messenger: The Story of Joan of Arc, 1492, and Goldeneye.

Freshman Sarah Price returns a backhand during tryouts for the varsity tennis team Monday morning at Northville High.

Tryouts underway as season nears

By JASON SCHMITT
Sports Editor

There wasn't a lack of participation when the fall sports season began at Northville High School this past Monday, many coaches will attest to that.

The dog days of summer are coming to a close as a few hundred potential athletes showed up at tryouts Monday morning and afternoon. Although football teams were allowed to begin official practices on Aug. 7, the rest of the fall programs had to wait until Monday to make it official.

Northville has eight fall sports programs, four for both the boys and girls. Each saw their share of kids trying out, hoping to make the cut for their respective teams.

The numbers were impressive too.

The golf team, for instance, had about 70 boys try out for the team. Coach Brad Stedry had about the same number out last year, when he cut down to 20 players on the varsity and junior varsity teams.

"I don't know what I'd do with 70 players out," said girl's tennis coach Sandy Woolfall, who is taking over head-coaching responsibilities while head coach Uta Filkin is on vacation. "I mean we have 44 girls out here and it's very difficult to see everyone."

To make matters worse, with the school's move to Six Mile and the city's recreational programs finishing up, coaches have had to deal with a lack of practice space.

"We had a nice day Monday, under the circumstances," basketball head man Pete Wright said. "We're having to share space in the gym because the utility gym is packed with furni-

Northville's U-12 travel softball team placed 3rd in the upper division of 11 teams in the Western Wayne County League. The team also competed against top flight teams in several tournaments. Members of the team include (standing, l-r) Kristen Zawacki, Evonna Karchon, Carly Forsthoefel, Laura Zima, coach Bob Seaman, Kristen Hayes, Lisa Mueller, Jenna Dumbleton, Katy Marshall, coach Dick Dumbleton, Emily Doren, Jane Kruszewski and Brooke Ziomak. The front row consists of (l-r) Meredith Ponder, Megan Monticciolo, Lindsey Blair and Christy Baden. Not pictured is coach George Kruszewski.

Salem Hills makes way for big hitters

To say Salem Hills golf course is wide open would be a stretch.

But not by much.

The long course located at the corner of Six Mile and Currie roads lures golfers into invincibility, safe to hit the ball wherever they choose. But just as you make the turn after the first nine holes, the course opens up its jaws and takes a giant bite out of the scorecard.

Well at least it doesn't hurt.

Salem Hills' front nine holes are as wide open as golf courses come, offering wide fairways and very little water. It's a nine where big hitters can come out and play. It's safe to say you can take your driver out of the bag on each of the par fours and fives on the front.

But despite the fact that you can play out your Tiger Woods' fantasies on the front nine, the course does have a way of making a golfer humble. Both of the par-three holes measure in excess of 200 yards.

The number three hole, which reads a hefty 232 from the tips, isn't the most scenic par-three hole you'll come across. But it may just be one of the funnest. Even the middle and front tees, which are 202 and 172 respectively, force the use of a fairway wood or long iron. There's a small creek about 20 yards in front of the green and a mini sand trap on the left side of the green. Neither should come into play, but considering the length of the hole, they very well could. The green has plenty of landing room, but not much give if you miss on any side. If you miss right, it's a tough downhill chip onto the green. Miss in back and you're visiting someone's back yard. Miss left and you're in a trap and any drive short of the green gives you an uphill chip onto the green.

From the tee, golfers are challenged by the hole itself. "Go for it, I dare you."

Salem Hills' signature hole is the par-four 13th. This beauty brings all elements of the game into play.

It's the shortest of four-consecutive par fours to open the back nine, though it still measures 392 from the middle tees. Golfers must avoid water on the left side of the fairway, which may come into play with a good drive.

JASON'S SEARCH FOR "THE PERFECT HOLE" SEE PHOTO B-2

The beauty of the hole can be seen from the approach shot. Water lines the front of the green and rolls into a pond with two running fountains to the rightside. Between the water and the green, however, is a pair of bunkers to complete the scenery.

For at least a hole you can feel like you're at the Treetops Resort up in Gaylord. It's truly a beautiful hole.

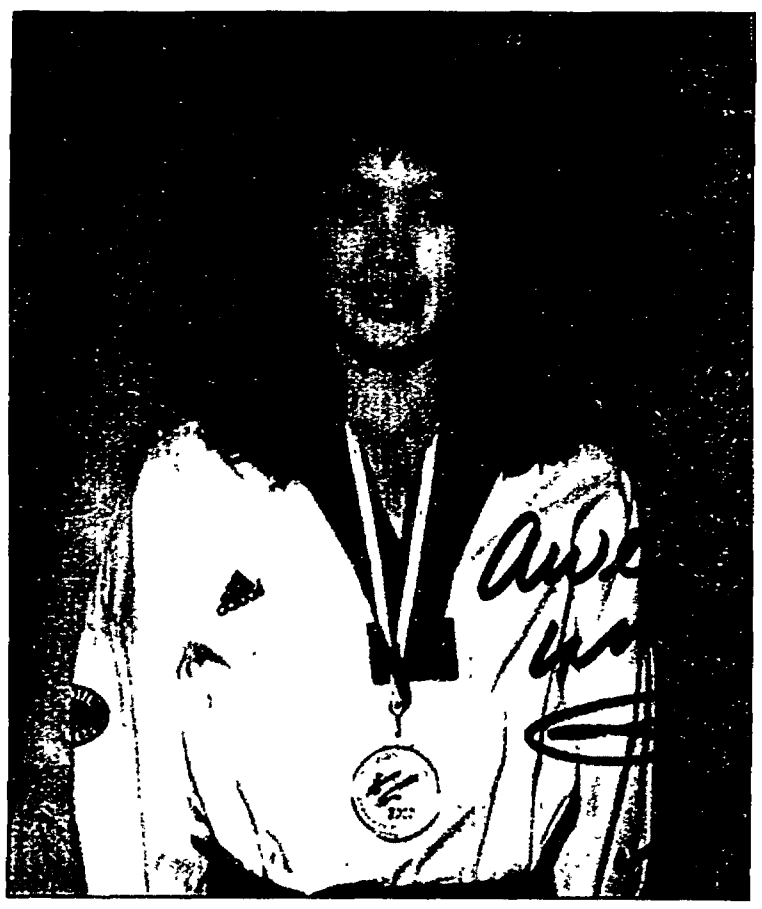

Salem hills is a fairly wide open course, but there's no lack of yardage. From the tips, the course measures 6,966 yards, which makes it one of the longest courses in the state. The middle (6,497) and women's tees (5,874) are also long. The women's par is 76.

Perhaps the best part of the golfing experience at Salem Hills is the peace and quiet the course offers. Unlike many other metro-Detroit courses, Salem Hills is away from many high-traffic areas.

Peace, quiet, big clubs and open fairways. What else can a big-hitting, bogey golfer ask for?

For more information about Salem Hills or to set a tee time, call the pro shop at (248) 437-2152.

Bivens wins again

Northville High School freshman Erica Bivens recently brought home a pair of golf medals to go along with a silver from the Amateur Athletic Union's Junior Olympic Games in Orlando Florida.

Bivens competed at the games from Aug. 4-6 and won both the Olympic sparring and point sparring competitions. She won her silver medal in forms. Having trained with South Lyon's Steven Wegener prior to the games, Bivens competed in the 13-14 year old lightweight, black-belt division.

Among her wins at the games were victories over European girls from Great Britain and Ireland.

She also competed at the USTU 2000 Junior Olympic Games in San Antonio, Texas back in mid-July. Competing in the 13-14 lightweight, black-belt division, Bivens won a gold medal in Olympic style sparring.

Quite tight...

Although the front nine holes at Salem Hills is wide open and custom made for the big hitters, the back nine is a bit tighter.

The par-four 13th hole (shown above) proves that by offering an array of challenges for golfers. The green is surrounded by woods to the left, sand to the right and water that wraps around the hole from the front to the right side. Two fountains add beauty to a hole that resembles those of Northern Michigan.

ture right now. But we're so excited about the new gym that we're dealing with what we have."

Woolfall said she had hoped the Fish Hatchery tennis courts would be available for her team to practice on when tryouts started. But they were taken by the time her team arrived down there."

Despite the good turnout for football coach Darrel Schumacher and his assistants, he wishes he had some more.

"We were hoping for a bigger turnout, but we're still beating the bushes and we'll get some freshmen who wander in here before the season starts," he said.

Schumacher and soccer coach Henry Klimes are having their usual bout for good athletes. On occasion an athlete will participate in both, like Brandon Bethell and Tim Kelleher did last year.

"You may not lose your MVP to another sport, but what you do lose are the kids necessary to make up a complete team," Schumacher said. "They're the essential parts of the team, even if they don't get all the recognition.

"There's so many different things for the kids to choose from now days."

Officially, both cross country teams, the tennis squad and the golfers could begin competition Monday, but they will wait until at least this upcoming Monday to start their seasons. The Soccer team can begin their season on Aug. 25, the swim team on Aug. 26 and the first football game will be played on Aug. 28, against Farmington.

You don't have to feel old

Chris Klebba

How old we are versus how old we feel and look are becoming hotter and hotter issues as the baby boomers begin to hit that mid-life crisis point. In the next 30 years, the group of people over 50 will increase by 74 percent, while the under-50 category will grow by only 1 percent. Unfortunately, the future picture in terms of health and fitness is not all that bright for this "young at heart" group and for our senior population in general. (Breaking the 40-year age barrier myself last year, I am definitely a little more sensitive to these facts and predictions). We need to begin to take more responsibility for our own fitness. Too many of us rely on the medical industry to fix us when we have a problem versus applying a little upstream health care to assure a better quality of life. As the legendary Jack LaLane puts it, "Getting out of shape is an insidious thing. It sneaks up on you. You get a little more out of shape, you don't really notice, you adapt and live with it." We often write it off to the inevitable aging process. But as Mr. LaLane and others have proved, aging is not totally out of our control. With the latest technology, you can gather and input a series of components such as a person's body fat, heart rate, etc., and apply the technology to arrive at a fitness age to compare against one's chronological age. You may have read that Jack LaLane tested at a level of 29 years of age in fitness terms, versus his 85 years of chronological age. Others have found their bodies are aging ten or 20 years ahead of their chronological age. In other words, a 45-year-old can have the body of a 55- or 60-year-old. This technology is another wake up call to help arm us in the battle of aging.

More and more fitness facilities are prepared to help you win this battle. You decide what winning is, but certainly it is to enjoy the best quality of life we can and to at least keep our fitness age in line with our chronological age. More and more of our fitness industries' efforts are going into meeting the needs of today's busy baby boomers and seniors. At our recent IHRSA (International Health Racquet and Sports Club Association) conference, many clubs shared successful programs to meet this specific market need. Franco's Athletic Club in Mandeville, La., was this year's winner of an award for these type promotions. The staff and members believe in having fun, and applying and enjoying humor that's involved with growing older. I wanted to share with you, in fun, their "You might be a Geezer" list that had the crowd laughing at the conference.

You might be a geezer if...

- Everything hurts and what doesn't hurt, doesn't work anymore;
- Your knees buckle but your belt doesn't;
- You try to straighten your socks and you find you are not wearing any;
- Your back goes out more often that you do;
- You just can't stand people who are intolerant;
- You sit in a rocking chair and can't get it going;
- All the names in your little black book end with M.D.;
- You know all the answers but no one asks you the questions;
- Cardiovascular exercise is nighttime strolls to the rest room; and
- Hereafter is entering a room and wondering what you're here after.

The point of this story is aging is inevitable. How we age is up to us. Seek out a lifestyle program that is right for you that includes the following: Proper cardiovascular activity; proper resistance training; and proper nutrition.

There are mountains and mountains of scientifically proven benefits from applying these steps consistently at any age. The benefits range from fighting depression to arthritis and just about every other disease known to man.

As Jack LaLane said, "if you don't work out on a regular basis, it is like going to bed with a rattlesnake. It has to kill you eventually. I'll keep saying it: you don't get old from calendar years, you get old from inactivity." Jack goes on, "Exercise is king, nutrition is queen, and together you have a kingdom."

Create your kingdom. Enjoy every drop of life at every stage of life. You deserve it. Good luck.

A TASTE of the ORIENT

Couple's Japanese heritage inspires their Milford garden

By Annette Jaworski
SPECIAL WRITER

There's a taste of the Far East in one Milford back yard. Dave and Beth Halt designed their gardens with an oriental flair. Behind the family home is a tranquil pond area that's the focal point of the focal point of the yard. We like to come out here and relax - it's like having a house outside of the house." Beth Halt notes.

It's part of her heritage - "My mother is Japanese and she inspires me. I have a little bit of the Asian in me."

The pond is unique because its construction is made of tons of loose stone, not of fixed cement or concrete. This allows them the flexibility to move and change the configuration and shape of the pond as it suits them. Having the free rocks is sort of like using building blocks.

"We love to change without disturbing the environment." Beth Halt said, who's environmentally conscious. She didn't want to use any pond chemicals for maintenance. Their desire to have a natural pond influenced much of their design. For starters, they decided to use sandstone, which wouldn't pollute the water.

Beth researched as many pond books as she could, while Dave calculated the math flow of the water. Together they created their back yard haven. In fact, the entire project was constructed by the Halts, except for the contractor who excavated the hole.

In one corner off the deck is a Japanese maple that's over 70 years old. It shades a bamboo bubbler that is the source of cool well water for the pond. Three separate pumps provide the continuous flow of water. The pond is well stocked with goldfish and koi, which fascinate the Halt's two daughters, Ariel, 9 and Cassie, 8. Cassie also enjoys catching an occasional frog. Feeding the fish is one of their favorite pastimes. "I like to put my hand in and pet them." Beth Halt comments. The two large koi are their favorites, named Crystal and Casper. The little ones eat the mosquito larvae, she said, so they don't seem to have as many mosquitoes.

The fish have no trouble surviving the winter as the pond is four feet deep and doesn't freeze entirely. As long as there is some air room, it allows the gasses to escape.

The girls inspired a major contribution to the pond area - the 14-foot bridge that spans the

Toucan-shaped pitcher migrated to America

By Anne McCollam
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

ANTIQUES

Q: Could you please tell us something about our jayhawk (or whatever bird it is) pitcher? It has been handed down in the family from the early 1900s and is in very good condition. On the bottom are the words "1796 - Est. 1866 - Erphila - Czechoslovakia." I think it is made of pottery, and it has a smooth glaze. The bill and wings are red, the eyes are blue, and the accent trim is blue and red.

Thanks so much for any information you might be able to provide.

A: Your figural pitcher represents a toucan. American importer Ebeling and Reuss Co. of Devon and Philadelphia, Pa., used the mark you provided. It was a major importer of porcelain and pottery from Czechoslovakia and other European countries. Ebeling and Reuss has imported objects from 1866 to the present. The word Erphila probably stands for the first letters of Ebeling and Reuss and the first five letters of Philadelphia. The number 1796 is a design number.

A similar pitcher can be seen in "Czechoslovakian Glass & Collectibles, Book II" by Dale and Diane Barta and Helen M. Rose. Your pitcher would probably be worth about $85 to $90.

Q: My grandmother gave me a set of stoneware dishes decorated with blue fruit in a blue and green pedestal bowl. I have enclosed a drawing of the blue hand-painted mark that is on each dish.

M.A. Hadley

I would appreciate any information you can give me.

A: Mary Alice Hadley started out hand-decorating pieces of pottery at home. When demand increased, she found it necessary to hire decorators to help. By 1944, business was doing so well that she began looking for a small pottery to purchase. Her husband, George, finally quit his job and worked full time at the pottery. Although Mary Alice died in 1965, the pottery continued to use the charming patterns she created.

Hadley Pottery also made figural pieces, kitchenware items and lamp bases. Kenneth Moore purchased the pottery in 1979. It continues to operate today.

Your mid-1900s dishes would probably be worth $25 to $75 each.

Q: I have a footed carnival-glass spoon holder that is in mint condition. It is yellow and is decorated with butterflies and grapes in a raised pattern. The top edge has a saw-toothed scalloped design.

Can you identify the pattern, the name of the manufacturer, the age and the value?

A: Judging from your description, the pattern is Butterfly and Grapes, also known as Butterfly and Berries. Fenton Glass Co. in West Virginia made this pattern between 1911 and 1925. The color is also referred to as marigold. Some pieces of this pattern have been reproduced over the years. Your spoon holder would probably be worth about $125 to $135.

Q: I don't know how many times I have tossed an old galvanized watering can in the trash, only to have it reappear in the garage. It didn't take long for me to realize that whenever I pitched it, my husband rescued it. Although it's in good shape, I never use it and it just takes up space. My husband told me it's worth something and suggested I write you and find out once and for all. So what do you think? Is it antique or junque?

This figural pitcher from Czechoslovakia represents a toucan. It is probably worth about $85 to $90.

A: Quit your pitching! It was made in the 1940s, making it not quite old enough to be an antique. It is quaint and holds a certain appeal to many collectors, making it not junque, either. It could be a good vase for summer flowers, or you could just tell your husband to use it or lose it.

Your collectible sprinkling can would probably be worth about $25 to $75, depending on the region and condition.

Address your questions to Anne McCollam, P.O. Box 490, Notre Dame, IN 46556.

Gardening with a Japanese flair water. Husband, Dave, built the structure that allows them to cross the length of the pond. Miniature lights are strung across the bridge and low voltage lights surround the exterior of the pond.

Other lovely accents include water lilies in vibrant colors, including yellow and hot pink. Japanese wind chimes ring in the breeze. They're a gift from Dave to his wife.

Cement statuary with an Oriental flair accents the pond area, including a fountain fish. Another feature is an enclosed cedar gazebo where the family enjoys a hot tub.

Beth notes that people shouldn't shy away from a pond because of the work that's involved. If you set up a natural environment, it won't require as much care, she believes. In fact the major requirement is cleaning out the filters once a year.

Several aspects of their design help to keep it low maintenance - a slow and steady flow of cool water from the well. The biggest factor in keeping the algae down is to keep the water cold, according to Dave. The addition of the bridge as well as evergreens and some shrubs help provide shade to the pond, which helps slow the growth of algae. In an area that gets more sunshine, they occasionally wire brush the sandstone rocks. The algae is a gourmet treat for the goldfish.

Although the Halts have put much of themselves into the home and gardens, they're on to bigger and better things. They've made plans to build a new home in Highland that will host a dramatic waterfall from a cliff's ledge. "We'll do this again in our next house," Dave notes.

Their current home is being offered by Cindy Sharp, ReMax Elite at (248) 684-665

Dr. Rekha Kostecke has opened up her pediatrician practice in downwtown Milford.

New Milford doctor treats children with compassion

BY ANNETTE JAWORSKI
Special Writer

There's a lot to do at the beginning of a new school year. Aside from shopping for supplies and clothing, Milford pediatrician Dr. Rekha Kostecke, M.D., suggests another important step - checking your child's health records.

This includes making sure that all immunizations are up to date, or that sports physicals are ready for fall activities. And, it might be just the right time to get a yearly physical as well.

Dr. Kostecke is a new addition to the medical community of Milford. With brand new facilities at 450 Huron Street, near Johnson Elementary School, the pediatrician enjoys her location in the village. She chose Milford because of her husband's roots in the area.

"It's a brand new practice, we've had a very good response from the patients," she notes.

A board certified pediatrician, she knows that children don't always fall ill on a schedule. Her goal is to provide flexible scheduling for parents. This availability helps put parents more at ease, she believes. As a practicing physician, she believes in prompt service and accessibility, serving patients rather than filling the waiting rooms.

Many parents decide to take teenagers to other practices, but Dr. Kostecke believes it's beneficial for those children to see a pediatrician until they're 18 years old. It's vulnerable period of time for some types of illnesses, like strep throat.

"They're not really adults or children. We're trained (pediatricians) for that period in life with puberty and adolescence," she notes.

In fact, they're trained for three years in their area of expertise, which is dealing with children.

She also welcomes expectant parents by providing free visits. She offers this as a way to become familiar with her and the practice before their new baby is born. It allows them to be more comfortable when they bring in their precious newborn.

Dr. Kostecke firmly believes that although she is medically trained, she respects the mother's intuition on what may be going on with her child.

"I definitely respect and trust the mom's instinct. They know their kids more than I do. It's very important for me to listen to them."

Respecting the parent's intuition and getting to know the families are an important part of her patient philosophy.

"It's important to take time to talk to them, and ask a question, more towards getting to know them," Dr. Kostecke said.

With today's increased problems with asthma and allergies, Dr. Kostecke also offers respiratory care and education as well as allergy shots.

To care for those back to school needs, sports physicals are offered at a greatly discounted fee, and also public health immunizations are available.

These are offered with an administration fee.

"A lot of new immunizations are out there. It's very important to get children immunized," she said.

The brand new and attractively decorated offices provide both a well and sick child area for the patient's protection.

Dr. Kostecke is located at 425 W. Huron St. Ste. 140 in Milford. Call (248) 676-0991 for appointments. She's affiliated with Huron Valley-Sinai Hospital and North Oakland Medical Center. Hours are Mon. from 9:30 to 4:30, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 1:30 to 7 p.m. and Thursday and Saturday from 9:30 to 12:30. Emergency calls will be forwarded to her pager.

Learning the language of mutual fund investing

Talking The Talk: Learning The Language of Mutual Fund Investing

It sounds like an overheated discussion in the hat department:

"Is that a small-cap value?"

"No, it's a mid-cap blend."

"What I really need is a large-cap growth."

But the caps in this conversation aren't worn on heads, and the term "blend" doesn't refer to the combination of cotton and polyester. No, this is the language of mutual fund investing, a distinctive dialect where a three-word description can summarize a fund's approach to investing.

By learning the lingo, investors can get a better understanding of the funds they are investing in. Even more important, they can develop a keener understanding of how different types of funds can work together to create a well-diversified portfolio.

The three-word characterizations (small-cap value, mid-cap blend, etc.) so common in the world of mutual funds give investors two key pieces of information.

The Fund's Investment Philosophy. Many funds take either a "value" or "growth" approach to investing, or adopt a "blend" of both.

The Size of the Companies in the Fund's Portfolio. The term "cap" is short for market capitalization, a measure of size based on the market value of a company's outstanding shares of stock.

• A Philosophical Difference

The terms "value" and "growth" refer to distinct approaches to investing.

Value investors look for deals, stocks that are underpriced for one reason or another. They're like the shopper who scours the discount racks in hopes of coming across designer clothing.

Michael Wagner

Growth investors, on the other hand, look for companies that are showing significant growth opportunities for the future. Because growth stocks historically have demonstrated the potential for positive performance, they tend to be higher priced than value stocks.

These are funds which have adopted a neutral stance, buying value or growth stocks as they see fit. These funds are typically labeled as "blends."

• And The Winner Is...

So who's right?

Fortunately for individual investors, both are. At times, growth stocks tend to outperform value stocks. At other times, value stocks come out ahead.

For fund investors, it doesn't come down to swearing allegiance to either the growth or value school. A well-thought out portfolio based on asset allocation principles will include both value and growth stocks as a way of diversifying investments. By understanding the terminology, investors can make sure that they've covered their bases with the funds they choose.

• Taking Size Of Your Investments

Mutual funds also are differentiated by the size of the companies they invest in small, medium and large.

Where a company fits depends on its market "cap," short for capitalization. To arrive at a company's market capitalization, multiply the number of shares of common stock by the stock's market price. For example, a company that has issued one million shares currently valued at $8 each would have a market capitalization of $4 million.

Small companies are generally defined as firms with market capitalization of $300 million to $1 billion. Medium companies, such as Woolworth's and Hormel Foods, fall into the $1 billion to $5 billion range. Large companies - the Coca-Colas and Microsofts of the world - have market capitalizations of $5 billion and up.

Companies of different sizes perform differently in the economy's various stages. Large company stocks typically don't fall as far in a down market. Small company stocks typically roar ahead at the beginning of a recovery.

For the smart investor, the trick is not to try to choose the correct company size. It's to make sure the portfolio includes funds that invest in companies of varying sizes. In the case of mutual fund investing, it's not a matter of one size fits all, but of all sizes fitting one. The one in this case being you, the individual investor.

By understanding some of the key terms of mutual fund investing, investors increase the odds of a good fit between their needs and the funds they choose.

Will your bones live as long as you do?
Osteoporosis threatens 28 million American men and women, causing their bones to deteriorate and weaken. The scary part is, the disease can develop unnoticed over many years - so the time to prevent it is now. Include an abundance of calcium and vitamin D in your diet. Avoid smoking and excessive alcohol use. And perform weight-bearing exercises like walking, jogging or dancing, every day. CELEBRITY COACH'S CORNER™

"An effective serve keeps your opponent guessing. Guessing keeps her off-balance and allows you, the strong server, to control the match."

LINDSAY DAVENPORT

5-Time Grand Slam Winner &
Olympic Gold Medalist

What Lindsay says...

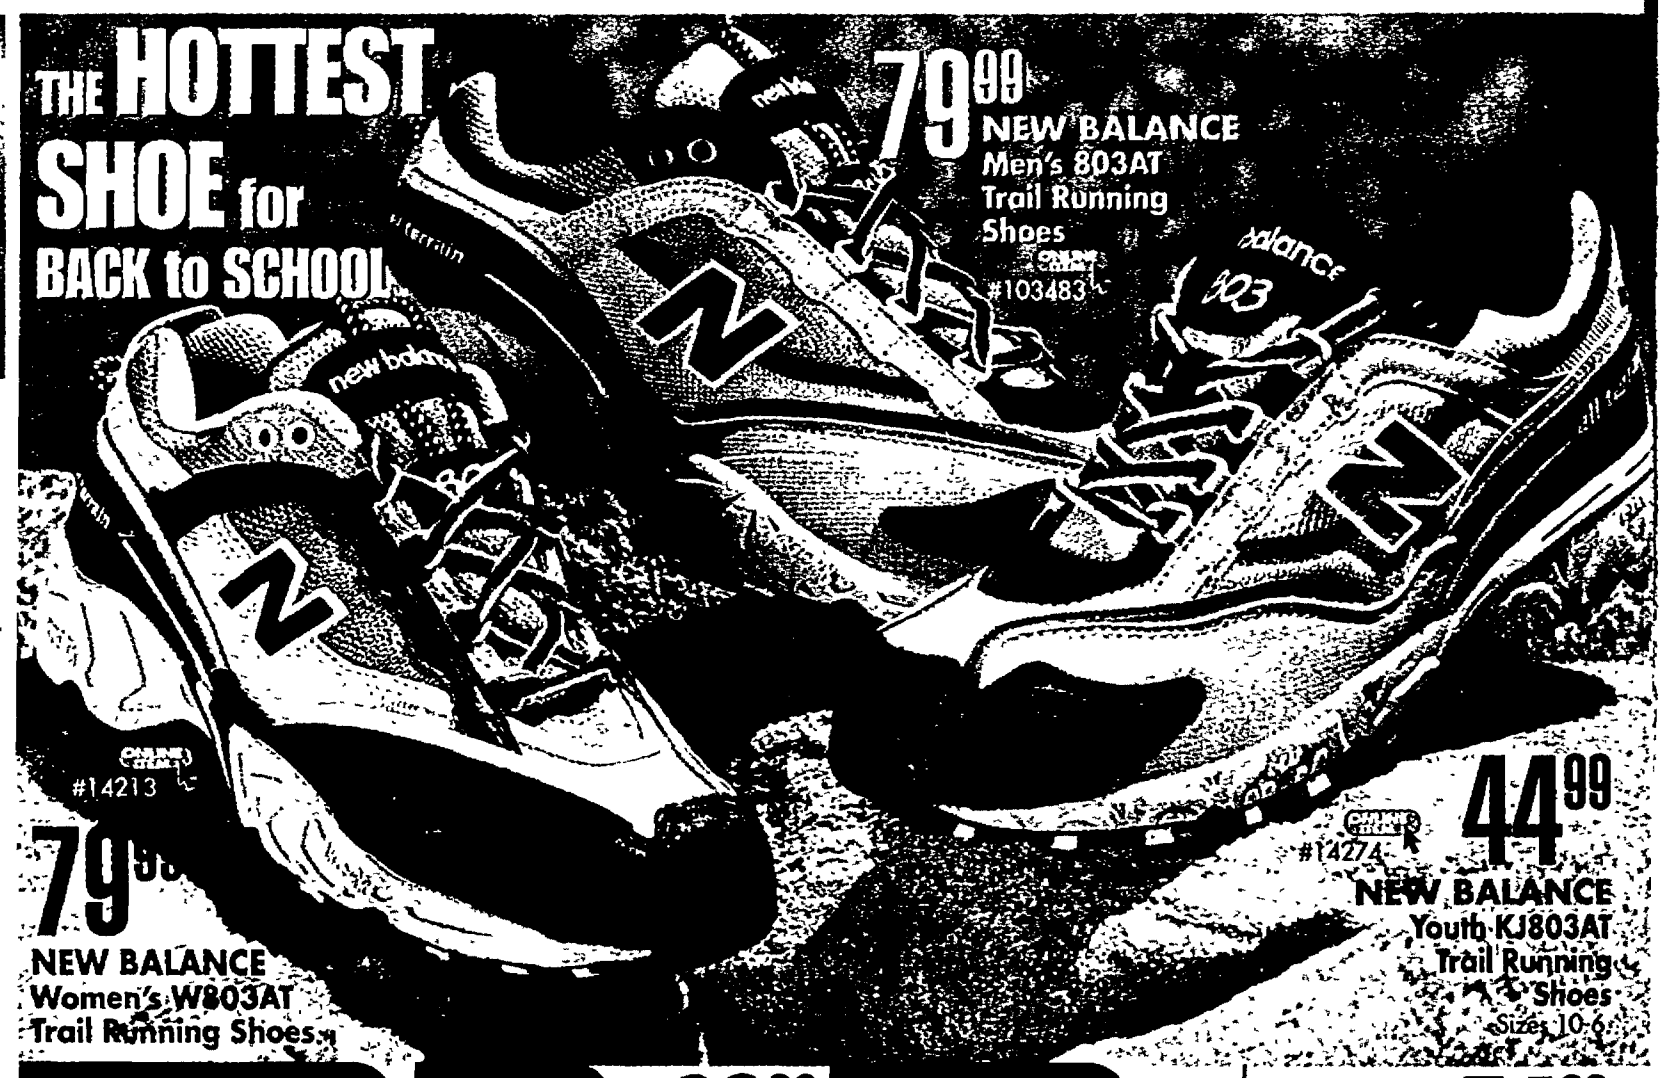

"I began playing tennis when I was 7 years old. I enjoyed hitting ground strokes, but I really liked serving. The combination of power and spin on the ball kept my opponents on the defensive. A good, penetrating serve set the tone for the entire match. In the final of a match in 1999, I enjoyed one of the rare moments when my serve was "on". I could spin the ball in toward center court, out toward the stands or hit fastballs in all parts of the service area. My opponent could not establish any rhythm. In fact, I didn't lose a service game on my way to winning my second Grand Slam singles title, Wimbledon in 1999.

Lindsay's best tips...

Executing an effective serve:

1. Keep the toss high and in front of you.
2. Keep your head up.
3. Keep your arm up and follow through across your body.
4. Practice hitting all the corners... this allows you to hit anywhere when you need to.

Lindsay Davenport, 24, has won 28 singles titles, 29 doubles titles as well as an Olympic Gold Medal in the 1996 Summer Olympic Games. Included in Lindsay's many victories are five Grand Slam Championships and prize money approaching $10 million.
