Strip mall occupants close up

Vacant Farmer Jack angers Chamber, fellow businesses

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

The Northville Chamber of Commerce usually wants businesses in the community to succeed and thrive, but not this time.

Laurie Marrs, director of the Northville Chamber of Commerce, said she is telling everyone, "don't go to Farmer Jack and shop." She said it's the kind of treatment the grocery store deserves considering some of its past actions — most notably the closing of its Seven Mile Road store in Northville Plaza more than three years ago and what she calls subsequent efforts by the company to keep any food-related store from moving in.

She said it's to blame for the financial suffering of other businesses.

Aid and the Baby's Room — are pulling out. A spokesman for the Rite Aid said the Northville Plaza store is scheduled to begin liquidation of the store in January and it will close in March.

The pharmacy already is closed, hours have been cut from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and customers are being referred to CVS pharmacies. An employee of the Baby's Room said the store is relocating to Novi near Twelve Oaks Mall.

Marrs said she is frustrated because she believes Farmer Jack doesn't care what happens in Northville.

"They could care less about the community as long as they are getting all of the shoppers they need," she said.

Golf area deal gets closer in township

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Northville Township has about 120 days to determine if a piece of property they have a $1.4 million purchase option on is up to par.

The board of trustees voted 6-1 to enter into the agreement for the Bushwood Golf Course and Northville Manor banquet facility.

Per the agreement, the township has 120 days to do a needs assessment of the township and property assessment of the land in question. Additionally, the township has 30 days to close on the property if the decision to buy the property is made.

The purchase option gives the township the opportunity to back out of the deal if needed, but does not offer the same thing to the owners of Bushwood.

"The ultimate decision may be that the township does not wish to acquire the land," said Jim Tamm, Northville Township attorney. "The terms of the agreement allow the township to do an analysis."

Health ed class will be elective

BY MELANIE PLENDIA
Staff Writer

The controversial Northville High School health class will be an elective, said Citizens Health Advisory Committee spokesperson Linda Pitcher.

The CHAC, which is a recommending body designed to create the curriculum for the health courses including human sexuality in the district, decided recently high school students would not be required to take the health course.

In April, 400 parents came out to voice their opposition to the class and specifically the sex ed portion of it. After some discussion, the Northville School Board sent the CHAC back into session to revise the course, determine whether it would be required or whether it would be an elective class and what age groups would be allowed into the class.

Though they will be designing the curriculum, the school board has the final say on the final course.

Pitcher said there were several reasons for the decision including scheduling conflicts and public opinion.

"Parents were afraid making the class a requirement would be too controversial for people in the community," Pitcher said. "Also, it was too difficult for college bound students to find room for it in their

The CHAC resumed meeting shortly after the school year began this year. Though the first four meetings produced little or no tangible progress, Pitcher said the Nov. 8 meeting was very productive.

She said they decided on several key areas of the curriculum. These included components dealing with date rape, sexual harassment, HIV, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases and the emotional impact of early sexual activity. Further, the class will be absti-

Count: district has 83 more students than anticipated

BY MELANIE PLENDIA
Staff Writer

The final student counts are in for the district and the numbers are surprising even the top administrators.

At the Northville school board's Nov. 14 regular meeting, assistant superintendent Dave Bolitho said that while the numbers for kindergarten went down, the rest of the school district was experiencing significant growth. He said the district is currently 83 students over its highest projection for the current school year and 121 students over last year's total number of new students.

Each year, the district takes a head count of students to send to the state to receive its funding. The fourth Friday — or Wednesday counts, as it was this year — also act as a way for the school district to gauge its growth.

"We are at capacity in all of the elementary schools," Bolitho said. "[The facilities review committee is] looking into it and hope to have at least a short-term solution to this by January."

The facilities review committee is a group of staff members, parents and Northville residents who have been charged by the school board to look at the space available in the district. They then make a recommendation to the board as to whether the district needs to weather the growth without changing the buildings, renovate and expand existing buildings or build a new elementary school.

Hardest-hit by the growth in the district this year, Bolitho said, has been Silver Springs Elementary, the school serving what is called the "Six Mile Corridor" where the most significant growth is happening.

Bolitho said the review committee will look closely at Silver Springs and come up with some temporary solutions by January.

However, Bolitho said he didn't know the reason or meaning yet to

No tricks — candy-seekers will haunt township Oct. 31

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

Ghouls, ghosts, and goblins who traditionally grasp for goodies on Halloween will have to wait until Oct. 31 to do so in Northville Township.

The Northville Township board of trustees voted 1-6 against entering into an agreement with the city of Northville that would make the Saturday before Halloween the "official" day for trick or treating in the area.

"The city council discussed the possibility of designating future trick or treat nights to be on the Saturday evening prior to the real Halloween," said Gary Word, city of Northville manager, in a letter to the township. "This would help avoid family schedule disruptions associated with the hyperactivity of the event during the school week."

The city of Northville closed some streets in the historic district to vehicular traffic from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Halloween this year. According to the letter to the township from Word, the Northville City Council requested the Northville Public Schools and Northville Township board of trustees be contacted to see if there was any interest in making the change. The change was proposed to commence Oct. 27, 2001 and occur on the last Saturday of October every year thereafter.

However, the Northville Township board of trustees had concerns

LARCENY:

A 15-year-old Belleville boy will face a court date after he attempted to leave a Northville Township retailer with unpaid merchandise.

Township police reports said the boy entered Meijer at around 7:30 p.m. Nov. 17 and put on a $50 pair of athletic shoes and a $15 cap and then exited the store without offering to pay. Meijer store security personnel observed the boy and stopped him. Township police were called to the scene. The incident was processed and the boy was later released to his father's custody.

HELLO...HELLO?

A 47-year-old Nottingwood resident man told township police he had been receiving regular hang-up telephone calls dating back to August. The man purchased a caller ID unit and traced the source of the calls to a Georgia business. Police attempted to contact the listed telephone number but were unable. The case remains under investigation.

IN A JAMB:

A 63-year-old Deep Hollow Circle man reported his garage door had been pried open. Investigators observed that the door jamb had been shattered in the apparent attempted forced entry. Damages were estimated at $300. There were no suspects or witnesses, the township police report said.

BURGLARY:

Two Northville Drive residents, a 24-year-old woman and a 30-year-old woman, reported a break-in at their apartment sometime in the late afternoon hours of Nov. 18.

A township police report said the 24-year-old woman left the apartment at around 1 p.m. to visit family. Her roommate left the building a few hours later. When the pair returned just before midnight, it was discovered that someone had apparently been in the house and taken several items.

Police found footprints in the snow around the house leading to a window and then to a porch. The tracks then made off in another direction, which police could not follow successfully.

Officers also inspected the apartment's sliding door, which was not damaged, but was able to be picked up off its tracks.

The roommates reported several pieces of jewelry, compact discs, DVDs, and undergarments had been taken in the heist, totaling an estimated $960.

Police timed the break-in due to a power disruption and later power resumption to a digital clock in the apartment, which one of the roommates had inadvertently shut off prior to leaving.

Michigan politicians, pollsters agree — no Constitutional crisis

By MIKE MALOTT

HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

There is no "constitutional crisis" as a result of the Florida recount, say Michigan politicians and pollsters. There is no need for nervousness that the elections process or our democracy is breaking down.

"What I see is a Constitution and a people that are working," state House Associate Speaker Pro Tem Judith Scranton, R-Nighton, said. "President Clinton isn't saying that the election wasn't fair, so he is going to keep the presidency for the next four years. He's not calling the generals to have the troops take over. I don't see a junta or a coup d'etat happening here, do you?"

Wall Street investors may be nervous about the recount in the race for president, but the stockmarket always goes down, she said. Government services to citizens will continue unaffected.

There may indeed be lingering suspicions about the election after the recount is all settled, according to State Senate Minority Leader John Cherry, D-Clio, but presidents have had to operate "under a cloud" in the past. And the country has continued to function just fine.

The most likely impact, Cherry argued, would be a reaction at the polls four years from now. Voters who wind up believing their candidate should have won — regardless of whether George Bush or Al Gore eventually takes office — will campaign even harder in the future.

Ed Sarpolus, vice president of the Lansing-based polling firm EPIC/MRA, would agree. He said the issue could linger long after all the ballots have been recounted and any possible legal action has been settled. The loser, if he feels he was "robbed" of the victory, could begin campaigning for the next election four years from now immediately after the inauguration.

That's actually happened before, Cherry said. Andrew Jackson's loss in a close contest to John Quincy Adams in 1824 propelled Jackson to victory four years later. With circumstances similar to the situation in Florida, Cherry said, Grover Cleveland's loss to Benjamin Harrison in 1888 led to a Cleveland victory one election later. In the meantime, the country continued to function without a problem, Cherry noted.

Chris Achen, professor of political science at the University of Michigan and researcher for the Center of Political Studies, agrees there is no constitutional crisis yet.

"There is nothing magical about the first Tuesday in November and if it takes a week or so to count all the ballots, it is doing no one any harm," Achen said. "But the people do have a stake in some kind of a decision being reached by about the first of December. Whoever the winner is has to get a transition team in place. Our enemies overseas are not going to wait for us to settle a lawsuit."

At some point, one of the candidates will have to put the interests of the country ahead of their political goals and "accept a loss by a squeaker, but a loss nonetheless," he said.

Achen was a member, the only one from Michigan, of the 12-person Decision Team that advised ABC News on how to call the presidential election last Tuesday evening. He was among those who urged the network not to project Gore the winner of Florida at 8 o'clock that evening, and urged again that it not be put in the Bush column at 2 o'clock the following morning.

Cherry and Sarpolus both argue that in fact, the networks got it right that night the first time. Exit polling, they contended, correctly gauged voter sentiment in Florida. What those exit polls could not measure was the irregularities inside the polling places that would cause some 19,000 ballots to be tossed out in Palm Beach County.

Achen isn't so willing to excuse the mistakes. There were actually three errors in tabulations of the polling numbers, he said. And he believes the review being launched by ABC to find out what went wrong with projections is appropriate. He also believes the congressional hearings that have been called for over the way networks issued their estimates "could be useful."

Politicians and pollsters alike say the issue will linger a long time. Cherry said he believed there would likely be a good deal of public debate and discussion about the integrity of the elections process over the coming year. Making sure ballots are easy to understand and that voters are not disenfranchised by confusion at the polls should be a high priority for policymakers in the year ahead, he said.

Scranton agrees.

"In my district, some communities have the scan-tron ballots and others have paper ballots, the punch cards," she said. "But even the smallest restaurant may have its menu on a touch screen. A small restaurant may not have a lot of money for infrastructure, but they can afford to have touch screens. Why don't we have that for elections?"

Scan-tron systems automatically check ballots to determine whether voters have filled them out correctly and reject them if they are not. Scranton explained that scan-tron machines would detect problems, such as voting for two candidates in a single race, the problem that caused so many ballots to be tossed out in Palm Beach.

She believes the voting process needs to be reviewed.

For peace of mind,
look to the stars.

Fantasy of Trees raffle returns

Thursday, November 23, 2000—THE NORTHVILLE RECORD—3A

Gorgeous, playful and nostalgic: There is a tree to delight every reveler in this year's "Fantasy of Trees" in Northville.

Fanning last year's fun, 25 Northville retailers are teaming up with the Friends of the Northville District Library to offer artfully decorated, high quality, artificial trees for the Fantasy of Trees Holiday Raffle.

All proceeds will go to the Northville District Library. Each year, Friends of the Public Library get together at the beginning of the holiday season to decorate the trees for the raffle. Each year seems to be more elaborate than the next with their themed decorations.

The trees are decorated with 100 white lights per foot of tree and with themes such as "Polar Express," "Old Fashioned Christmas," "Hockeytown," "Bewitched Christmas" and "Go Blue!"

There will be 25 lucky ticket holders who will have the tree of their dreams delivered to their homes on Dec. 11 and 12. Contestants may be from Northville or neighboring communities after Santa Claus draws the winners on Dec. 10 at 4 p.m. in the library.

The unique three-foot, six-foot and eight-foot trees will be displayed in businesses throughout Northville and in the Northville District Library. Merchants and Friends of the Library anticipate that shoppers will enjoy touring the circuit of stores to admire the trees.

Raffle tickets will be available at each store displaying a tree and the Northville District Library. Tickets will cost $3 each, two for $5 and five for $10.

Shoppers will indicate on their tickets which tree they would like to win. A brochure, available at participating stores, describe all 25 trees and helps

Record still seeking advisory board help

In an ongoing effort to improve the quality of the Northville Record, new members of the Record's community advisory board are being sought.

The group will be comprised of approximately six Record readers who will meet with editor Chris Davis and the newspaper's advertising representative about once a month to discuss the newspaper's content and appearance. Though the advice given will be strictly advisory, comments and suggestions provided will help steer the Record to further improvements. Community input is vital to our goal of being the essential tool for readers in Fenton to lead the good life.

Persons interested in volunteering for the advisory board should send a brief letter of interest to the Record by Nov. 31. The letter should provide a biographical sketch of the interested person, as well as a paragraph or two indicating why the writer wants to participate on the panel. Elected officials are not eligible to participate.

The board must include a true cross-section of the community involving participants of all ages and backgrounds

The Record needs to speak to as wide a range of readers as possible.

The Record staff will notify those selected for the panel Dec. 15 and schedule the first advisory board meeting shortly thereafter. Dates and times of the advisory board meetings will be flexible based on the panel's availability.

Those interested in the community advisory board should send applications to The Northville Record, 104 W. Main Street, Northville, Mich. 48167. They may also be faxed to (248) 349-9832 or e-mailed to Davis at cdavis@ht.homecomm.net.

Mothers' Club Life Members host benefit event

By CHRIS C. DAVIS
Editor

It's been said that college is the best four years of a person's life. Some women who've spent 10 good years of their own want to help those starting out on their own Four Year Nirvana.

That's the aim of the Life Members branch of the Northville Mothers' Club, who will be hosting a benefit party next month to aid college students. The benefit party got its start when Mothers' Club members decided to sponsor other projects. The Lifetime group inherited the charitable project, which donates scholarship money to Northville High School students.

Attendance to the party is open to anyone, and general chairperson Pat Wright said the event was the major community outreach event for the club.

"It started out as a get-together with the thought that we could use this as an opportunity to make some money for charity,"

Wright said "It's become our one money-making event and is very important to the organization."

Three houses in the Northville community will host the party, Wright said.

Money raised from the event helps underwrite the cost of college expenses, Wright said. Students who ultimately receive money from the club have gone on to several Michigan universities. Disbursement of the funds is determined by the club's scholarship committee.

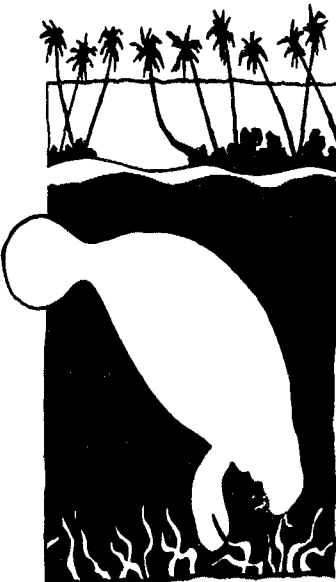

"It's a fun evening for a great cause," Wright said. "We're hoping for a solid response."

The Life Members Mothers' Club party is slated for Dec. 2 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $12.50 each and may be purchased by calling (248) 349-1726.

Chris C. Davis is the editor of the Northville Record. He can be reached at cdavis@ht.homecomm.net

"FUNGUS NAILS" or ONYCHOMYCOSIS

Onychomycosis is a fungal infection of the nails that is difficult to cure. It is commonly acquired as part of an athlete's foot infection. Trauma to the nail may predispose a person to developing onychomycosis. Mold infections cause little or no symptoms. Our older citizens with diabetes and circulatory disease are particularly at risk for development of ulcers and bacterial infections beneath the nails. In serious cases, the nail becomes discolored, thickened, and detaches from the nail bed, and debris usually collects under the nail. Treatment depends on the severity of symptoms. Simply removing the nail does not cure onychomycosis. Proper treatment and management of the fungal infection can play an important role in your overall health.

At Novi Footcare Associates, we are pleased to offer the most current therapy for the care and management of fungal nail infection. We are proud of our ability to provide comprehensive evaluation and management of your foot and ankle problems, and prevent other before they start.

NEW YEAR NEW SCHEDULE

The Northville City Council approved its meeting schedule for 2001 at the Nov. 20 board meeting.

In compliance with the Open Meetings Act, each year the city is required to post all of the regular City Council meeting dates/times in a prominent place in City Hall. All meetings are open to the public.

On the occasions when the regularly scheduled meeting dates fall on a holiday or if city hall is closed, the meeting date will be changed to a Tuesday or a Wednesday, if appropriate. All other meetings are the first and third Mondays of the month. They are held in the City Hall Council Chambers at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting dates are as follows:

MORE PARKING OPTIONS FOR NORTHVILLE

Various streets near Hillside Middle School will allow parking during the early morning hours.

In the past, drivers were not allowed to park in the areas of East Baseline Road, West Baseline Road, Carpenter Street, East Street, Elm Street, Grace Street, High Street, Lake Street, Larry Drive and Walnut Street from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m.

According to a communication from Northville City Police Chief James Petres, those areas were posted at the request of residents due to the overflow of parking from the former high school.

However, now that the building is no longer serving as a high school, the problem no longer exists.

SCHOOL CROSSING GUARD LOCATIONS

Northville will have designated school crossing guard locations and times, due to a traffic control order approved by the city

The city is responsible for providing school crossing guards for the school district. In the past parents, have shown concern for the lack of enough crossing guards near the schools particularly near Eight Mile Road by Hillside Middle School and Amerman Elementary.

The city council, along with police chief James Petres and Northville Public Schools superintendent Leonard Rezmierski, designated the following areas as established locations for crossing guards. The group established times for the guards to be on duty.

They are as follows:

Study reveals much about voting systems in Michigan

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service

mmalott@homecomm.net

Of the various voting systems in use today, punch card ballots appear to be the most susceptible to problems, but all can be misused by both citizens and elections officials.

Oakland County Clerk G. William Caddell conducted a study back in 1993 of the balloting systems then available and found that as many as one in seven votes can be lost when punch cards are used. As the public has learned through the recounts in the presidential election standoff in Florida, chads — "hanging chads," "swinging chads," and "pregnant chads" — pose unique problems during vote tabulation. Additionally, punch card counters can jam.

Hand recounts of punch card ballots are uniquely difficult, because elections workers must hold them up to the light to see which hole was poked, Caddell said.

Secretary of State spokesperson Elizabeth Boyd said her office has found that most "spoiled" ballots occur with punch cards. Although the state does not keep statistics on the number of ruined ballots, the most frequent problem occurs in primary elections on punch cards when voters incorrectly crossover, voting for candidates in one party for some positions and for candidates in another party for others. By the rules, such crossover ballots must be tossed out. It happens most with punch cards, Boyd said.

because other systems actually prevent crossover voting.

Boyd and Caddell agreed however that bad ballots can be cast on any system. Oakland County uses optical scanning equipment, Caddell explained, in which the optical readers will reject ballots spoiled by crossing over or casting ballots for more than one candidate for a given office.

"That's the ballot where voters have to connect the lines to complete the arrow," he said, "but what happens if the voter circles the name instead. Then the vote isn't going to count."

Even the old mechanical lever voting machines could be misused. One voter told Caddell that she always made sure to push the voting levers back up before pulling the handle to open the curtains, based on the belief that voters behind her in line would be able to see how she had voted as the curtains opened.

"I asked her how long she had been voting, she said '40 years.' I hated to tell her that she had never actually cast a vote. I almost couldn't tell her," Caddell said. In those old machines, the votes were only tabulated if the levers were down when the handle was pulled.

The difficulties seen in Florida in the presidential race have government officials everywhere questioning how they run elections. Secretary of State Candice Miller last week said Michigan should look for ways to improve its voting systems and she announced she will soon be asking the state Legislature for changes.

Her call for an election day holiday, to encourage Michigan residents to vote by avoiding possible conflicts between work and their civic responsibility, was only the best publicized part of her plan. Also in the announcement, Miller said she planned to ask the Legislature to adopt a uniform voting system statewide.

"There would be a tremendous advantage to election officials and voters if every community used the same type of voting equipment and the same style of ballot," she said. "Adopting a uniform system statewide would eliminate confusion among voters moving from one precinct to another."

Miller did not advocate which of the various systems available should be used. According to Boyd, that would have been the subject of some future study. And while elections and voting equipment are currently purchased by local units of government — townships, cities and villages — Boyd acknowledged that if a statewide system were mandated, the state would have to pay for the equipment.

Right now, there are many different ballots, ballot formats and voting systems in use in Michigan. Of the 5,376 precincts in the state, 3,006 precincts used optical scanning equipment in this past presidential election, according to the Secretary of State's office. Another 1,443 precincts used punch card systems, 97 used touch-screen computers, 137 used paper ballots, and 693 used other types of voting machines including the old style mechanical lever machines.

State Rep. Judith Scranton, R-Brighton, said that most communities in her eastern Livingston County House district have already moved over to optical scanning election equipment, but a few still use punch cards.

Oakland County too has moved over mainly to optical scanners, Caddell said, but not all. Ferndale and Pleasant Ridge are still voting on the old mechanical lever machines. Novi Township and Lake Angeles, which are small communities, actually still use paper ballots.

Only one Oakland County municipality still uses punch cards, Caddell said — Southfield. That city invested in its punch card system just before the county launched a program to help communities purchase the optical voting equipment, Caddell said. Switching now for Southfield would be an expensive proposition, he explained. Optical balloting equipment runs at a cost of about $6,000 per precinct. With some 50 precincts in town, the changeover would be pricey, he said.

So would a change for the entire state.

"Secretary Miller acknowledged that her proposal for adopting a state election holiday and a single voting system will carry a hefty price tag," the department's official announcement read. "However, she believes the state has an obligation to preserve the integrity of the process and that can only come about through substantial changes in the manner state elections are conducted in Michigan."

Should a uniform system be adopted, the choices would be limited. Lever machines are no longer being built. First constructed in 1892, communities that still use them today must buy old discards to cannibalize them for parts. Punch card balloting is a 40-year-old technology.

Optical scanning equipment is the most popular today, and Caddell said he is very pleased with how well the system works in Oakland. Whenever a recount has been requested, he said, he's never seen a change in vote totals resulting from a machine error.

"If there was a discrepancy in the numbers, it was because some ballots were left in the bottom of the box, or something like that," he said.

The newest systems on the scene are computer touch screens, which have been in use only an election or two. Boyd explained that if a hand recount is required, those computer voting systems could produce a printout over every vote cast in the election.

None of the changes Miller is calling for are new. Even her proposal for an election day holiday is a proposal already in use among auto unions, which won an election holiday in their last set of negotiations.

The remainder of Miller's proposals have been suggested before, but have received little attention from lawmakers in Lansing up until now. In fact, the plan for a uniform statewide balloting system comes from a Special Advisory Committee, which was appointed in 1995 and completed its work in 1997. The committee then included Livonia's city clerk Joan McCotter and Farmington Hills city clerk Kathy Dornan.

At the time, the committee proposed a number of revisions to Michigan's elections system, including uniform balloting equipment, consolidation of election dates, establishing a vote by mail system, and taking the requirements off absentee voting to allow more constituents to use that option.

Legislation has been introduced in Lansing to implement virtually every facet of the committee's recommendations, but little has moved.

Sen. Beverly Hammerstrom, R-Temperance, has already proposed legislation establishing a "preferred voting system." Her bill would have counties select the preferred system for municipalities within their borders, which was one of the options offered by the Secretary of State's Special Advisory Committee. But the bill has never even moved out of the Senate's Government Operations Committee.

State Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, has introduced a bill to require that new elections equipment be field tested in order to determine what instructions voters must be given to properly fill out their ballots. Again, the bill has not moved from committee.

Election Day ushers in new faces in township

BY ANDREW DIETDERICH
Staff Writer

The outcome of the 2000 election for Northville Township board of trustees may not have been the most anticipated numbers Tuesday, but the next board was elected.

Five members of the seven-seat board return along with two new faces. All of the board members ran unopposed and as Republicans. They'll be sworn in at the Nov. 16 meeting.

Mark Abbo, former board treasurer and trustee, was elected supervisor. Richard Henningsen, the most recent supervisor, was elected treasurer; Sue Hillebrand was reelected as clerk; and Marv Gans was reelected as a trustee.

Bill Pomeroy, who was appointed by the previous board to fill a vacant seat in February, was elected as a trustee along with new trustees Brad Werner and Shirley Klockenga.

"When I was offered the position of full-time manager, I took into consideration the board for the next four years," said Chip Snider, Northville Township manager. "I felt confident the next board will allow the manager to function well and satisfy the demands placed on this office."

An August primary whittled the field of eight Republican candidates to seven. Candidate and incumbent Russ Fogg didn't receive enough votes to get reelected and incumbent Bill Selinsky did not seek reelection. There were no Democratic candidates so the primary unofficially decided who would be on the seven-member board.

Supervisor-elect Mark Abbo said he is excited about the next four years.

"I'm very excited about the new board and the abilities they bring to the table," he said. "We're going to have a lot of great opportunities in the next four years and I'm hoping we're going to capitalize on them." Abbo said he's also excited about the township staff.

"The personnel that we have in place in the township is, and has been for a long time, very strong and committed. I expect a lot of good things to happen in the next four years."

Werner said he is looking forward to being a member of the board and hopes to use his experience as president of the Northville Parks and Recreation commission to the community's benefit.

"I'm looking forward to seeing some of the actions in regard to parks and recreation through," he said. "Whether that will be things like equipment for our current parks and keeping an eye on the future."

Werner said he also is excited about being involved in projects new to him, such as the expansion of the Ypsilanti Communities Utilities Authority plant.

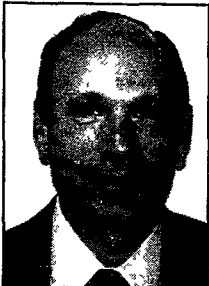

"It's a challenge," he said. "I'm nervous but excited."

Pomeroy said there are several items he hopes the board addresses in the next four years, including trash collection and street maintenance. Additionally, he expects to encounter items previous boards started, such as growth of the community.

He feels his professional experience and political experience will help the board and Northville Township.

"In my own case, I've been involved in the township manager study committee for two years and with the Northville Township Foundation," he said. "I bring some good stuff to the board."

ANYONE WHO'S WHO

Several local teachers were recently ranked outstanding by former students in the book Who's Who Among America's Teachers 2000.

All of the approximately 114,000 teachers being honored were selected by their former students who themselves are currently listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students or The National Dean's List, publications which recognize 5 percent of the nation's high school and college students respectively.

Paul Krouse, publisher of Who's Who Among America's Teachers said "there's no greater honor teachers can receive for their excellence and dedication. In this publication, we clearly have the best teachers in America selected by the best students."

The students were requested to nominate one teacher from their entire academic career who "made a difference in their lives," by helping to share their values, inspiring interest in a particular subject and/or challenging them to strive for excellence. Many of the students commented about the enthusiasm and knowledge their teachers demonstrated in the classroom and many praised their teachers for their ability to relate to youngsters on a personal as well as professional level.

Local educators in Who's Who Among American Teachers include Jennifer Beagan, Amerman Elementary

DISTRICT HIRES THERAPIST AND RESOURCE FACILITATOR

The Northville School District added two new names to their roster last week.

The school board approved Physical Therapist for Old Village School Mini Joseph and Curriculum Resource Facilitator Lucie Reno Ginsberg at their November 14 regular board meeting.

Joseph comes to Northville from her long standing position as a physical therapist at Sinai Hospital in Detroit. She worked with inpatient rehabilitation and acute care for two years while at Sinai and with out patients for four years.

Since her position with the district is part time, she will continue her work at Sinai on a part time basis. Further she currently works part time with Severely Multiply Impaired Children in Wyandotte.

She will earn $13,830 this year from the district.

As for the resource facilitator, the position was posted May 11 with interviews held July 25. There were a total of eight applicants. According to a memo to Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski from Director of Personnel Roy Danley, no applicant was identified as acceptable.

The position was re-posted on September 5 with an interview held on Oct. 30. The committee which included Curriculum Resource Facilitator Janice Henderson, Assistant High School Principal Gail Weeks, Assistant Superintendent Linda Pitcher and Danley.

Reno Greenberg comes to Northville from her two year position as assistant to the social studies chair at Michigan State University. Earlier this year, she also began teaching at Clague Middle School in Ann Arbor.

Her career includes holding a position as a creative writing lecturer at the University of Michigan.

a British Literature teacher in Howell and instruction positions at Eastern Michigan University and Washtenaw Community College. She will earn a base salary of $31,099 this year.

AND THE AWARD GOES TO...

The Northville school board approved two improvement projects for the district at their regular board meeting Nov. 14.

Assistant Superintendent for Administrative Services Dave Bolitho recommended the board award a contract for window trim replacement at the Main Street School to the Hewett Company.

The district received one other bid for the project from Curtis Glass company. The Hewett Company proved to be the low bidder for this project which will cost the district $55,500. The money for the project will come out of the remaining bond money.

Bolitho also recommended the board approve a contract to modernize the elevator at the Main Street School.

The bid of $47,900 was awarded to Elevator Technology. Bolitho said there were seven bids sent out and only two were received. The other bid came from Kune Elevators. However, Elevator Technology proved to be the lowest bidder.

THE SEASON OF GIVING

Old Village School received $1,000 from the civic organization, the Order of the Alhambra of Northville.

Old Village caters to the needs of children with mental, physical and emotional challenges.

According to a memo from Old Village Supervisor Art Fischer, the money will be used to help fund their trip to the Festival of Trees as well as assist with their music therapy program.

He also said it is donations such as these which help make important improvements to students education.

More information concerning making donations to OVS can be found by calling Fischer at (248) 344-8460.

Seminar connects violence in office, home

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

Robbery is the most frequent cause of violence in the workplace, not surprisingly. But domestic abuse, spilling over from the home to the job site, causes twice as many problems for employers as disgruntled employees.

Discontented workers are responsible for 8 percent of workplace violence incidents, compared to 18 percent resulting from spouse abuse, according to statistics offered by Lynda Mance, director of corporate education for Michigan State University's "Safe Place" program.

But employers, including private sector businesses, can address the problem by creating a policy on how domestic violence incidents will be dealt with, establishing a response team, and training managers and employees in what can be done.

That was the purpose of a seminar, entitled "Every Workplace A Safe Place," hosted Monday, Nov. 20, at the Hotel Baronette in Novi by the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, Blue Cross Blue Shield and the Accident Fund Company. Four experts in the field were brought together for a day long seminar to instruct business managers about what they can and should do to address domestic violence, and why they should.

For one, employers may incur liability if they don't, according to Farmington Hills attorney William Pilchak. The Rochester Hills resident and partner in the firm Charfoos, Reiter, Peterson & Pilchak said that among the legal claims that can be made against employers when a domestic violence incident has occurred in the workplace are negligence, negligent hiring and premises liability. Further, businesses have a "general duty" to provide a safe work environment, he said.

Businesses have the tools to deal with domestic violence, but what was "the best tool"—Michigan's anti-stalking law—was declared unconstitutional earlier this year, on the grounds it might restrict First Amendment rights. Pilchak explained the case has been appealed to the federal Court of Appeals, which was asked in October to reinstate the law. That decision is "due out literally any day now."

Dr. Kenneth Wolf, managing partner of the Incident Management Team, a private company in Southfield that helps businesses cope with workplace violence, said he believes the law will eventually be restored. If the courts do not reinstate the act, the state Legislature can restore it after the addressing the constitutional flaws.

There are other areas of law that need to be addressed in Lansing, Pilchak said. Immunity for employers from lawsuit should be provided when they are dealing with domestic violence. At present, businesses have "conflicting legal duties." For example, a company that fired an employee over a violent incident might be sued for defamation if that fact is revealed in a reference check. On the other hand, failing to tell a potential new employer of the incident might run afoul of "duty to warn" provisions in law.

Overall, Pilchak said, when an employee has been dismissed for violence, and if the incident was documented in personnel files, then the information should be given out. "When the call comes in, you need to say something that puts them on the right track," he said.

Marilyn Knight, CEO of the Incident Management Team, said the most important thing employers should do is adopt a policy prescribing what actions can be taken when domestic violence crops up on the job. Usually, it is a co-worker who first becomes aware of spousal abuse. They must be comfortable knowing that if they take that information to management, that managers "will deal with and will deal with it in an appropriate and sensitive manner."

Knight suggested that there are many actions a company can take. If the employee is the abuser, that worker can be directly disciplined if the incidents occur on the job. The employee can also be referred to counseling and anger management classes.

When the employee is the victim, employers can secure the premises, warn the abuser not to come to the workplace, and even refer the employee to shelters and domestic abuse services. The business can go so far as to obtain a personal protection order to keep the abuse from entering the work site, Knight said.

Pilchak said private security firms can be hired to provide safety too, one of the best ways to address safety concerns.

When domestic violence spills into the workplace, it can have many impacts.

For one, many workplace shooting have been linked to spousal abuse. But even when it doesn't reach that point, the business can suffer in terms of lost time from the job, lost productivity, employees that are not at their peak performance and increased medical expenses as a result of abuse at home.

These experts will work directly with private sector employers to help them design appropriate policies and action plans for dealing with domestic violence incidents. The MSU Safe Place program can be reached at (517) 367-1890. The Incident Management Team in Southfield can be reached at (248) 569-6200.

about possible confusion on the part of residents as to when the right time to trick or treat would be.

Dick Henningsen, township board treasurer, said he had been in contact with officials from other communities who said portions of those trick or treating would recognize the Saturday before Oct. 31 as the day to go door-to-door and some would go on Halloween and some would go on both.

the decline in kindergarten enrollments, or the increase in enrollment in grades 6-12. He said this is something they are going to monitor closely. He said each year the district typically loses a certain percentage of students, particularly ninth graders, to private and parochial schools. But this year, he said, the district not only didn't lose students, but gained them. He speculated that the change may have had something to do with Northville's new high school but said he wouldn't know for sure until they get this information from the middle and high schools schools in the district.

"We really won't see the effects of this for a few years but with projections we can get a better idea of what's coming through the pipeline and plan accordingly," Bolitho said.

plans to construct a new building was because although the district had enrollment projections from Stanford statisticians in Lansing which showed an increase in growth, Bolitho said the numbers go down after the fifth year of projecting. He said the district needed to further study the projections given the new data from this year and learn if the decline was a trend or merely a blip in an otherwise growing district.

According to the districts numbers, the district was enjoying low class sizes, despite the growing numbers and shrinking available space.

changed from 25 students to one teacher at the kindergarten level, from 28-to-1 for g rades one through five and from 29-to-1 to 26-to-one for grades six through 12.

This year the ratios, remain low and hover between 19-to-1 and 22-to-1

In some of the elementary schools, holding that ratio was made possible by rotating specialized teachers to various rooms throughout the school day and renovating classrooms.

The facility review committee will meet at Old Village School in the board of education meeting room Nov. 30 at 7 p.m.

Township cuts path toward Haggerty Road sidewalks

Soon there will be two paths travelers on Haggerty Road can choose and hopefully - for safety's sake - they'll take the one less traveled by vehicles.

The Northville Township board of trustees approved a plan at its Nov. 16 meeting to pay $22,000 for the engineering phase of a pathway on the west side of Haggerty Road between Five Mile Road and Six Mile Road. Currently, bikers and walkers are forced onto grass easements or into the road along certain sections they've been required to," she said. "But some of the older developments weren't required to and that's left some gaps."

Maureen Osiecki, Northville Township director of planning, said having a pathway between the two mile roads is a township priority.

For example, she said, Hiller's Shopping Center at Haggerty Road and Five Mile Road and the Mobil gas station at Six Mile Road and Haggerty both have pathways. However, other areas, such as in front of the Bushwood Golf Course and Country Club Village subdivision, lack them.

Osiecki said filling the gaps in the pathways is part of the township's master plan.

"The township has certain priorities and this is one of them," she said.

Another of the township's main priorities was to finish the path on Six Mile Road between Haggerty Road and Northville Road. That project is wrapping up and should be completed by the end of the year.

Funding for the pathway on Haggerty Road mostly will come from the township and Woodside Village, which has an escrow account dedicated to the pathway. Osiecki said and pregnancy Additionally, the class will have a parent participation component.

Construction is expected to begin next spring.

Pitcher said the course will include all of the components mandated by Michigan law with some additions agreed upon by the committee

She also said the committee decided the class would be open to students in grades 9-12, however, it will be recommended to students in the ninth and tenth grades

"We wanted it to be more of a preventative class rather than a cure," Pitcher said

When asked whether she thought this was the best curriculum for the students and whether this was the best way for them to get information on sexuality, Pitcher said only "this is what the community wants"

She added, however, that she feels the committee has put a lot of work into it and have gotten input from many professionals so it will be an excellent course

Pitcher said she is optimistic they will have the recommendation

If You Have

Ask Your

If you live with diabetes, you're more likely the 30,000 people with diabetes who died of flu or pneumonia complications. Then ask your doctor for a life-saving flu shot for you

Republicans rack up big victories throughout state

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@ht.homecomm.net

The stakes are often high in elections, but when the hands were dealt for the general election in Michigan last week, the prize in the kitty was simply this — political control of the state for the next decade.

Already in the GOP's stack of chips was the executive branch, held by Gov. John Engler and Secretary of State Candice Miller, and the state Senate.

In the center of the table for the election were three more important trophies — the state House, the state Supreme Court and reapportionment.

Michigan voters handed the entire pot to Republicans.

Interestingly, Michigan voters seemed to swing to the other side of the spectrum on national level politics. They handed the state's 18 electoral votes to presidential candidate Al Gore. They turned out incumbent Republican Spencer Abraham from the U.S. Senate to replace him with Democrat Debbie Stabenow. And despite giving Stabenow's old congressional seat to Republican Mike Rogers by a narrow margin, they will send a delegation off to Congress next year that is weighted in favor of Democrats nine to seven.

"Michigan voters are Republicans on state and local issues and Democrats on national issues," said Ed Sarpolus, vice president of the Lansing polling firm EPIC/MRA. "State issues are pocketbook issues, tax and spend issues. National issues have more to do with who we are as a people and how we want government to treat us."

State Representative Judith Scranton, R-Brighton, agrees but puts it more succinctly — the difference was "choice." Many of the issues that confront the state and federal governments are the same, improving education and tax breaks. But the major difference is abortion rights, pro-life versus pro-choice. Scranton said she can find no other reason why conservative Oakland County, long a Republican stronghold, handed its presidential votes to Gore.

State Representative Bruce Patterson, R-Canton, sees it differently. He believes the election was mainly a victory by incumbents. Voters are happy with the way the government is operating, for the most part, and by and large returned incumbents to office. Within his district, he noted, local races produced wins for incumbents on both sides of the political aisle.

Representative Gilda Jacobs, D-Huntington Woods, isn't willing to go along with the idea that voters align with different parties at different levels of government, but she doesn't have a theory to offer about what Michigan voters split their decision.

"I've been asking myself the same question," she said.

Gov. Engler, ever the political strategist, sees the election as a victory for the GOP all around. Although Michigan's electoral votes went Democratic, "we occupied enough of Al Gore's time that the vice president was not able to be in a lot of other places that perhaps he should have been," like Florida and Tennessee.

"Michigan voters are Republican on state and local issues and Democrats on national issues."

Ed Sarpolus

State Senate Minority Leader John Cherry, D-Clio, takes issue with Sarpolus' analysis.

"He forgets that the base vote in Michigan is 51 percent Democratic," Cherry argued. "If you want to know what the base party vote is in this state, you have to look at races like the State Board of Education." Because candidates for State Board typically are not able to run statewide campaigns, and so individually are little known to voters, those seats are usually decided by voters who cast straight party ballots. In Michigan this year, State Board of Education seats fell to Democrats John Austin and Kathleen Straus.

Despite the party's marginal lead in base voting power, Cherry argued, the GOP has gained control of the Michigan House and Senate because of the way legislative districts have been drawn. By drawing some districts with heavy Democratic margins and spreading Republican-controlled areas over a number of districts, the boundaries can be drawn in ways that produce a GOP majority in the Legislature despite a smaller overall base vote. And that explains GOP dominance in Michigan, Cherry said.

It is also very bad news for Democrats who face another round of district "apportionment" in the coming year while Republicans hold all the cards in state government.

District boundaries are drawn once every ten years, immediately after conclusion of U.S. Census counting. It will be the GOP-controlled state House and Senate that draws those district boundaries in the coming year, under rules adopted by the Legislature and signed into law last year by the governor.

The process of drawing boundaries had been assigned to an eight-member committee by the state Constitution, but that provision was tossed out in 1992 as a violation of the U.S. Constitution. Not that it matters. The committee had never completed its work since the state Constitution was written in 1963 and all previous district plans had to be settled by the state Supreme Court. Still, with that provision out of the Constitution, the job of drawing boundaries falls back to the Legislature itself. The rules adopted last year followed the standards the state Supreme Court has set for apportionment plans in the past.

That's exactly why the state House and Supreme Court were such major prizes in this election. Had Democrats taken the House, they could have negotiated with a Republican Senate for districts more favorable to the Democratic Party. And any lawsuit over the district plan would go to the Supreme Court for a final decision.

With both in Republican control, Democrats have "no hope" of getting districts favorable to their candidates, according to Sarpolus and Cherry.

The best Democrats can do is assure Republican district plans don't violate standards set in state law or by the U.S. Constitution and don't diminish the voting strength of ethnic minorities.

Patterson argues the plan will be fair because of the rules already put in place.

Scranton, on the other hand, is unabashed that the GOP will have control. Since voters put Republicans in the majority, that means they are happy with the Republican agenda and the party should act to assure continued control, she said.

What it all means for the Democratic Party is that it will be relegated to minority party status in the Legislature for next few state elections, although shifts in population and the issues themselves may give Democrats a fighting chance to recover eventually.

Cherry noted that the governor's office will be up for grabs two years from now when Engler leaves. With no incumbent in office and if that base vote holds, Democrats have a chance to grab the executive office.

Until then, there may be dangers in single party control of state government, said Sarpolus.

"They may attempt to overreach," he said, "just as Newt Gingrich attempted to overreach" when Republicans gained control in Congress. "Overreaching" would just push voters away to the Democratic side.

Patterson disagrees. "That assumes the Republican Party is monolithic in its views, and I can tell you, it is not," he said. "The margins are slim and Democrats are needed and have a role to play. I'm a great believer in the two-party system. They challenge me and sharpen my game. They make us think things through."

Jacobs believes there may actually be improved relations between the two parties in the state Legislature. Much of the partisan wrangling of the past term, that left Democrats grumbling that they had no input into the bills that got passed, was the result of posturing in preparation for this recent election, she contended. With that political maneuvering out of the way, Republicans and Democrats might just find ways to be more cooperative in the future.

In any case, Cherry and Jacobs said Democrats aren't planning to fold their tents and head home.

"We'll be there to keep them honest," Jacobs said.

Novi elementary students sing about the age when reptiles ruled the planet

Brontosaurus, stegosaurus, tyrannosaurs rex. Parkview Elementary's gymnasium was packed with family and friends last Thursday, as the second graders presented their Dinosaur Musical.

"The children have been studying dinosaurs for the past three weeks, and this is just a fun way to end the unit," said second grade teacher Peg Rauhen.

Eight-year-olds David Sparling and Matt Bonnel said as part of their dinosaur unit, they had the chance to visit the dinosaur museum in Ann Arbor.

"We got to see all kinds of cool things like dinosaur bones and dinosaur poop too," Bonnel said.

Aside from fossilized feces, the students had to write reports and make a life-size painting of a dinosaur of their choice.

Directed by music teacher Suzanne Korzyn, the musical was jam-packed with joyful dinosaur tunes, as well as a number of interesting facts on the distinct beasts.

Songs included "Let's Sing About Dinosaurs," "Counting To 100," "What Happened To The

With T-rex headgear, students of Parkview Elementary School sing about dinosaurs during their Thursday afternoon show for their parents and siblings.

Dinosaurs?" and "Where Did They Live."

The children brought down the house with one catchy song where half the students asked how big a dinosaur's brush would be to comb their curls, in which the other half chanted "dinosaurs don't have hair!"

The second graders didn't even have any problem pronouncing all the dino-names either.

Seven-year-olds Ashley Aljadah and Dylan Good agreed that their favorite dinosaur was the Brontosaurus because he is the largest and most fierce of all the dinosaurs, while second grader Kevin Powell said he liked the T-Rex best for Rex was one of the last non-avian dinosaurs to walk the earth before the great extinction.

Northville Twp. Briefs

TOWNSHIP CABLE COMPANY TO CHANGE TO COMCAST

The Northville Township board of trustees has approved a request from Media One and its parent company, AT&T, to transfer the cable franchise in the township to Comcast.

According to a memo to the board of trustees from the township's attorney, AT&T plans to exchange several of its Michigan cable systems with Comcast for Comcast systems in other geographic areas.

The township must approve the transfer if the proposed transferee "has submitted reasonable proof of its financial and technical capability and character qualifications."

TOWNSHIP BOARD SUPPORTS HILLSIDE SCHOOL RENOVATION

The Northville Township board of trustees has approved a resolution in support of the renovation of portions of Hillside Middle School for community recreation uses.

The same resolution has gone before the Northville School District Board of Education and the Northville City Council. The resolution gives the township support of authorizing the investigation of financing options related to the Hillside Middle School concept plan. The plan includes renovations to Hillside and the existing community center on West Main Street.

PLYMOUTH LIONS CLUB PLANS TO SOLICIT IN COMMUNITY

The Plymouth Lions Club has received approval to solicit contributions Nov. 24-25 in Northville Township.

During the fundraising event, Lions Club members will solicit contributions on various streets in the community and in front of some retail stores.

According to the request by the club, "the funds collected at these activities allow our club to continue support of the Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville, and Northville Township communities with vision, hearing, and other community projects and services for youth and adults."

DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION STANDARDS AMENDMENT READ

The Northville Township board of trustees has approved the first reading of an amendment to the township design and construction standards.

The amendment changes two particular items.

The first pertains to sanitary sewer pipe. The amendment deletes the use of vitrified clay pipe, requires PVC pipe to have a stiff wall and allows the use of corrugated PVC pipe.

The second pertains to footing drain sewer pipe. It permits the use of corrugated PVC sewer pipe.

LIST OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS FOR TOWNSHIP APPROVED

The Northville Township board of trustees has approved a list of financial institutions it may or may not use during the 2001 fiscal year.

The township must have such a list under Michigan Public Act 20.

The list of institutions includes: Comerica Bank, Bank One; Standard Federal, Old Kent Bank; U.S. Bank; Franklin Bank, Michigan National Bank, Community Bank of Dearborn, Edward Jones; Republic Bank, MBIA/Municipal Investors.

Adult entertainment faces new foe

State Senate forges ahead with bill to help fight porn shop lawsuits

By MIKE MALOTT
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@ht.homecomm.net

The state government would join any lawsuit brought against local governments by adult entertainment establishments — pornographic bookstores or strip clubs — under legislation approved by the state Senate Judiciary Committee.

That approach is the Senate's answer to proposals made in the House to crackdown on porn shops by setting up a licensing system. Senators feared the licensing scheme would tantamount to approving of adult entertainment.

As a compromise, the senators put together a four-bill package giving local government the authority to regulate adult entertainment and requiring that any lawsuits brought against such regulations would have to name the State Treasurer as well as the local municipalities. Villages would have the authority as well as cities and townships.

Senate Bills 1293, 1295-97, are sponsored by Sens. Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, Bill Bullard, R-Highland, Ken Sikke-ma, R-Grandville, and Dale Shugars, R-Portage.

The package is a substitute for a seven-bill package sponsored in part by Rep. Mike Bishop, R-Rochester, Eileen DeHart, D-Westland, and Laura Toy, R-Livonia, and already approved by the House. The package had proposed licensing as a way to give local governments added leverage in dealing with porn shops, allowing them to pull licenses for establishments that failed to comply with local rules.

The Senate version limits the hours of operation for adult establishments to between 6 a.m. and midnight, requires employees and customers be at least 21 years of age, and requires dancers to maintain at least a six-foot distance from customers.

The bills now move to a vote in the full senate.

Township inches forward on deal to buy Bushwood

vision Northville Manor, a banquet facility, is located on the property. Both are owned by Tywebb Properties Inc.

Mark Abbo, township supervisor, said details of how the property would be used and by whom still have yet to be determined. However, initial ideas include turning Northville Manor into a senior citizen center and possibly selling the golf course to the residents of Country Club Village.

In addition to compiling township needs and property assessments, the township will seek to involve the city of Northville and residents of Country Club Village into the purchase.

The city is being asked because the senior program is a shared service between the city and township. A new senior citizen center is being considered because an expansion of the post office in the downtown area would require the razing of the current center on Cadz Street.

The residents of Country Club Village are being asked to determine if they are interested in having a role in the operations and maintenance of the golf course.

No decisions have been made on the part of the city of Northville or Country Club Village residents.

Residents have had problems in recent years with the owners of Bushwood and Northville Manor and what they referred to as a 'dissatisfaction' with the care and maintenance of sections of the property. More than 150 residents signed a petition asking the board to acknowledge the dissatisfaction a few weeks ago.

Andrew Dietrich is a staff writer at the Northville Record. He may be reached at (248) 349-1700 extension 109.

Urban sprawl tops Novi's agenda

SEMCOG study enough to propel some city leaders into course of action

BY RANDAL YAKEV
Staff Writer

The Novi City Council has begun to look at their long term and short term goals for the new year and found not all council members were all on the same page.

Top priority for Council Member Michelle Bononi and Mayor Pro-Tem Laura Lorenzo seemed to be addressing urban sprawl, which the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) has reported will continue to be a problem well into the 21st Century, according to their 2025 projection study.

Lorenzo agreed that establishing a fund so there would not be a need for local road bonds is a good idea, but with the city already strapped for cash and with the Sandstone Vistas decision in waiting, the city needs to prioritize its needs 'realistically'. Lorenzo also said that taking a harder look at ordinances and zoning should be something council needs to look at, especially with federal mandates for storm water run-off coming in the next year or two.

"The biggest issue is funding," Lorenzo said. "And we just don't have enough to go around. Sure funding for future roads is interesting that should be upheld. But if we save up $500,000 what else doesn't get done?"

Council Member Louis Csordas did not necessarily agree with Lorenzo or Bononi that urban sprawl was an issue and would prefer for the council to turn its concentration on other areas.

"Urban sprawl isn't an issue in Novi," Csordas said. "It's past us to Howell and Livingston County. We need to focus on our master plan."

Csordas said that evaluating staffing needs inside the police and fire department were high on his list. Unlike Lorenzo, Csordas said that the city should attempt to save money for future needs, such as roads. He also said that emergency medical response (EMS) ambulances should be given more priority.

"We can contract out (EMS) and it could cost us less," Csordas said. "If we can add one or two fire or police personnel a year, that would be better than lumping it all (on the public) at once."

Council Member Craig DeRoche agreed with both Csordas and Lorenzo that the safety issues were a priority and that he'd like to take a longer look at the internal workings of the city administration, fire and police services.

"It's all a matter of natural progression," Council Member Craig DeRoche said. "We've already got a new city manager and now it's time to look inward, to how things are run.

DeRoche said that long term priorities would include the fire and police department operations but, for the short term, the main priority would be roads.

"With the road bond passing, we need to establish a principle," DeRoche said.

According to DeRoche, the council will need to prioritize which road will be done at what time. Though council did seem to agree that Beck Road from Eight Mile Road to the I-96 should be at least one of the major works done before the new road working season begins in March.

The next step for council is to make a consolidated list which will prioritize what projects are to be dealt with first.

Vacant Farmer Jack store has other stores packing up

return several telephone calls to the Northville Record by press time.

Farmer Jack moved out of the Seven Mile Road location about three years ago. A new Farmer Jack opened on Haggerty Road between Six Mile Road and Seven Mile Road shortly thereafter.

"They don't want the competition and as a result is the main reason for an area of total blight in our community," Marrs said. "They are causing a true eyesore in our community. That whole mall is dying because they are being so selective of who they let in."

Jody Cook, spokesman for Rite Aid, said there is a connection between the number of storefronts in a mall and the amount of business stores like Rite Aid receive.

"It's true that in busier areas our stores will be busier themselves," she said. "That store was not doing as well as we'd hoped it would."

Cook said pharmacy records were sold to CVS and all employees were given jobs at other Rite Aid locations.

Marrs and others like business neighbor Bruce McKenzie said they believe Farmer Jack officials are sitting on the lease to prevent any other food businesses from opening in the mall - at the expense of the others.

McKenzie owns Knightsbridge Antique Mall, 42305 Seven Mile Road, which is in the same mall as the vacant Farmer Jack.

"It doesn't really affect my business because we are a destination spot," McKenzie said. "But it makes the whole shopping center look bad. When I heard Rite Aid was closing I thought 'enough is enough, we've got to get something done.'"

McKenzie said he would like Farmer Jack to give up its lease in the shopping center so another interested party may move into the space. He said he isn't concerned for his business as much as he is for his neighbors, Chi Am, 42265 Seven Mile Road, and others in the mall more dependent on traffic and visibility.

The mall is owned by Waterford-based Franklin Properties.

William Hahn, spokesman for Franklin, said he couldn't discuss details of the lease for the 30,000 sq. foot store.

"We are aggressively looking to fill the vacancy in the center," he said. "We want to increase the value of the property overall."

Hahn said he wouldn't discuss lease details of any of his tenants.

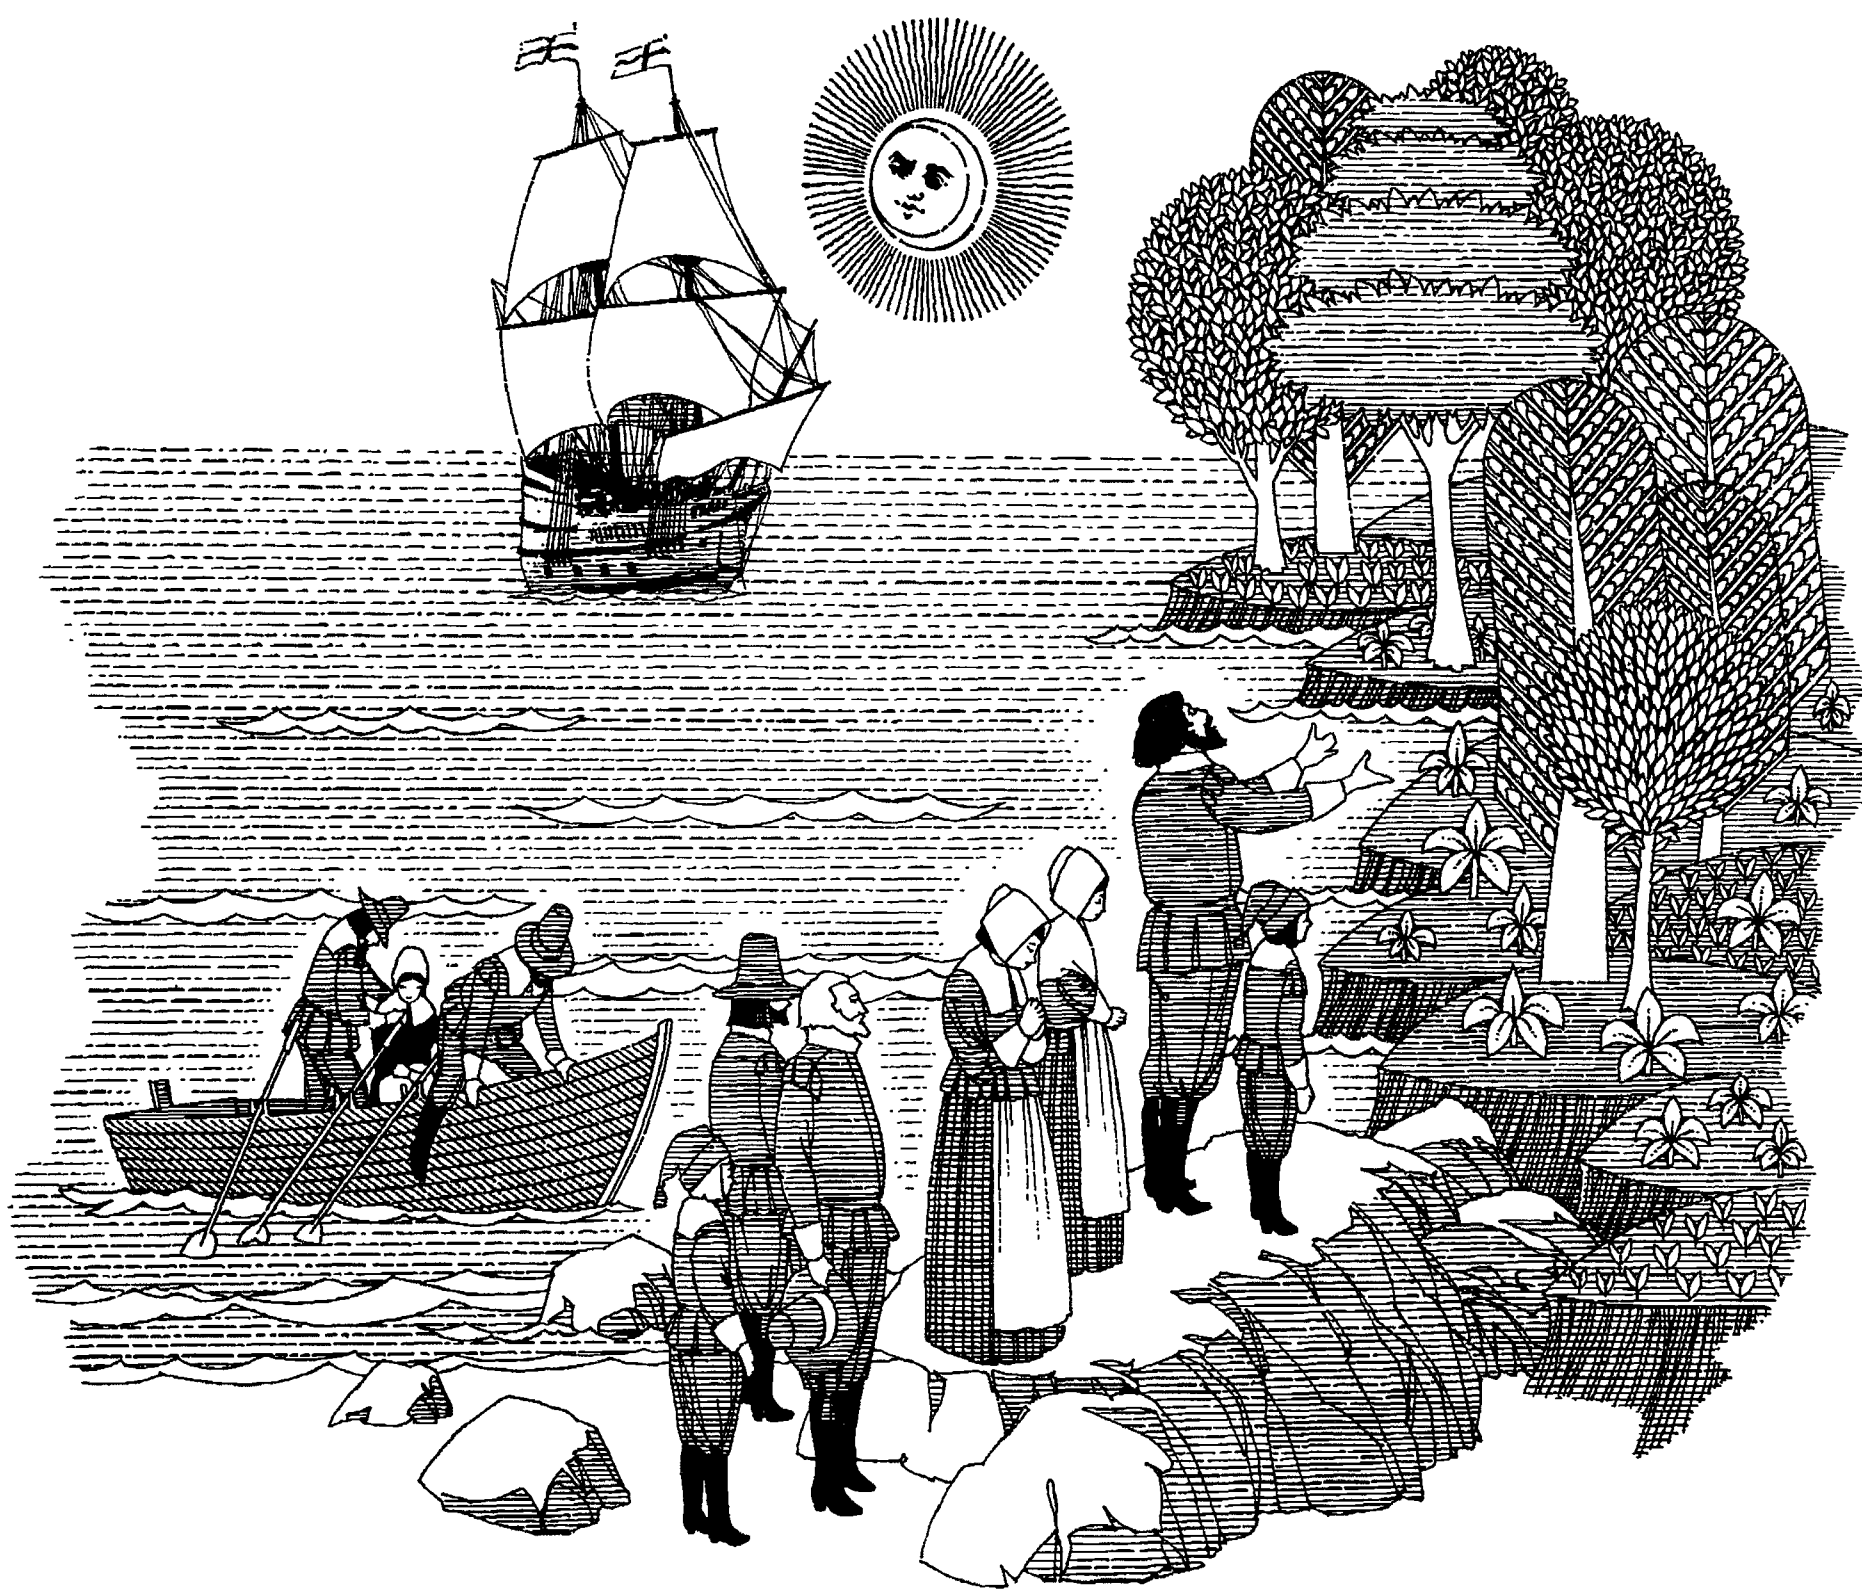

"They (Farmer Jack) currently have a lease in the mall and anything further than that I can't discuss," he said.

However, Hahn said several businesses have looked at the space and been turned down as tenants, even though he said the vacancy is a concern.

"Any empty storefront is a concern," Hahn said.

Being thankful starts with what you're doing

So what do you have to be thankful for this holiday season? You don't need to look much beyond what you're doing right now to see plenty.

Be thankful you have the sight to read these words. The blind don't have it that well.

Be thankful you live in a country where you have the freedom to read these words. Independent thought is squashed on a daily basis in other parts of the world.

Be thankful you have the change in your pocket to spend on a newspaper. That same 50 cents could be a day's wages for someone else.

Be thankful you have the dexterity to turn the pages.

Illness in some people prevents them from using the motor skills necessary to move from 5A to 6A.

Be thankful you live in a free market society and could choose to purchase this newspaper. In other places, if you don't like Newspaper X, there is no Newspaper Y. You take what's given to you.

Be thankful you can read these words in peace. You don't need to dodge a hailstorm of bullets simply to get to someplace safe and quiet.

Be thankful you can write back to the newspaper office and voice your displeasure with what you've read. Opposition to the system, in many instances, is met with stiff resistance — even death.

Be thankful you have the time to read your newspaper. Right now.

someone is finishing up a 20th hour of work to put food on the table, making leisure time but a fantasy.

Be thankful for that beverage you're sipping while reading. Clean water is taken for granted here, but something heaven-sent elsewhere.

Be thankful for the advertising in the newspaper. We've got so much stuff we have garage sales to get rid of what we don't need. That is, if we don't throw it out beforehand.

Be thankful you can hear the discussions about what you've read. Lack of hearing affects more than you know.

Be thankful for the newspaper. Governments around the world do all they can to shut out knowledge of the outside world, for fear it would lead to independent thinking among citizens.

Be thankful for recycling of a newspaper when you're done with it. Garbage litters the streets and countryside in areas where no such recycling means exists.

But above and beyond being thankful, do something this Thanksgiving holiday. Acknowledging the bounty of our lives is one thing.

Sharing in the goodness of life with those who have less than we do is what this holiday is truly all about.

Happy Thanksgiving to everyone this year.

Vacant Farmer Jack is bad for Northville Twp.

Oh, it's Farmer Jack savings time, alright. The big question is, savings for who?

That's the question we were forced to ask this week when we decided to take another look at the declining occupancy rates of retailers in the Northville Plaza strip mall on Seven Mile Road.

There is speculation on the part of fellow Northville Plaza business owners that Farmer Jack is unwilling to sell its vacant Seven Mile property, mostly out of concern that doing so would create competition against its newer location and Six Mile and Haggerty. We don't necessarily disagree with that notion, but it's hard to believe that having a second grocery store in the community would really create that much of a dent in Farmer Jack's profit margin.

For the record, the Seven Mile location has been sitting in its soaped-windows state for three years.

Above and beyond the question of dollars and cents is the matter of blight and community image. Northville Township has worked exceedingly hard to keep tenants in existing buildings and encourage new tenants to take occupancy of new retail and service locations. The Northville Chamber of Commerce doesn't think that Farmer Jack's actions — or lack thereof — speak very well of the company's interest in the township's well-being.

Will one empty store necessarily be the demise of a community? Not likely. But what's absolutely not in dispute is the gradual disappearance of businesses from Northville Plaza after Farmer Jack closed up shop. Only a handful of tenants remain, most of whom say that business has dropped off considerably without an anchor store holding down the spot once occupied by Farmer Jack.

Many that remain are starting to pack up and head elsewhere, a sure sign that the trend isn't likely to stop anytime soon.

We encourage Farmer Jack to open up its property to prospective buyers, even other supermarket chains. The landlord of the property, Waterford-based Franklin Properties, said it was "aggressively looking to fill the vacancy in the center." We certainly hope so. Most economists will say that competition is a good thing for a community, and they'll also tell you blight begets blight.

Farmer Jack has obviously put a lot of stock in the future success of its Six Mile location. If the company doesn't properly address business on Seven Mile, we can foresee the day when an entire stretch of road that once held great potential for profitability looks strikingly similar to its former store.

YOU'VE GOTTA LOVE THAT SCENIC VIEW.

Safety tips given for lightning storms

In spring 2000, a young boy was struck by lightning while playing soccer in Northville Township.

I sensed from reading the comments of the coach, parents and interested parties, they lacked lightning safety guidelines.

The National Athletic Trainers Association has published the following "NATA Recommendations for Lightning Safety."

Possibly, the Northville Record could publish these recommendations to educate the community.

- Establish a chain of command that identifies who is to make the call to remove individuals from the field.
- Name a designated weather watcher (A person who actively looks for the signs of threatening weather and notifies the chain of command if severe weather becomes dangerous.)
- Have a means of monitoring local weather forecasts and warnings.
- Designate a safe shelter for each venue.

Use the Flash-to-Bang count to determine when to go to safety. By the time the flash-to-bang count approaches 30 seconds, all individuals should be already inside a safe structure.

Once activities have been suspended, wait at least 30 minutes following the last sound of thunder or lightning flash prior to resuming an activity or returning outdoors.

Avoid being the highest point in an open field in contact with or proximity to the highest point, as well as being on the open water.

Do not take shelter under or near trees, flagpoles or light poles.

Assume the lightning safe position.

(crouched on the ground, weight on the balls of the feet, feet together, head lowered, and ears covered) for individuals who feel their hair stand on end, skin tingle, or hear "crackling" noises. Do not lie flat on the ground.

Observe the following basic first and procedures in managing victims of a lightning strike. Survey the scene for safety, activate local EMS, lightning victims do not "carry a charge" and are safe to touch if necessary, move the victim with care to a safer location; evaluate airway, breathing and circulation, and begin CPR if necessary; and evaluate and treat for hypothermia, shock, fractures and/or burns.

All individuals have the right to leave an athletic site in order to seek a safe structure if the person feels in danger of impending lightning activity, without fear of repercussions or penalty from anyone.

Novi vote results helped community

At this time when our nation is passing through a period of uncertainty, indecision and division, our own city is coming together in harmony, predictability, and practicality.

I can say this because of two recent encouraging developments — passing of a much needed road bond and a great annual goal setting session by the city council.

The fact that the residents of Novi gave their wholehearted approval to build and improve essential roads is an indication of a feeling of confidence and trust in our local governmental process.

I watched the goal setting session on television and was elated by how the members of council expressed their wishes in a calm, measured, and collegial way.

Our elected officials agreed that you can set lofty goals but, more importantly, you need to pursue those goals to fruition. My compliments to the council for their excellent performance. But a separate and called for commendation goes to two people.

One goes to Mayor Richard Clark who brought openness, inclusiveness, and a breath of fresh air to the process by television the proceedings on cable and bringing them right into our living rooms.

A second and well-deserved salute goes to City Manager Helwig who conducted the goal setting session in an orderly and professional manner. Let us not forget his tireless work along with Mayor Clark in bringing the road issue to every corner of public participation in our subdivisions.

The mold is cast, the direction is supported. Let us continue the effort to a better tomorrow.

Victor Cassis

Endorsements didn't sway voters

Thank you for publishing the Northville election results by county and township. This confirms what I already believed to be true about the Northville community. What puzzles me however is why the Record (which should have known) was determined to tell us how to vote two weeks ago.

Your recommendations for Senator and Congress did not sway the Northville voters. I believe most of us are fed up with the liberal rhetoric we have had to listen to and read about. You have a few who are regular contributors and sing the praises of the administration. I have yet to meet anyone here who appreciates this diatribe.

And now Kelli Cooley reports what the Senator-elect has to say about her plans, etc. Time will tell and actions speak louder than words. Maybe you know something we as readers don't know, but I do know that people I talk to feel she has done little or nothing.

So thanks again for publishing the results. Maybe some will see the light about our community.

Walter Juterbock

Uniform voting — the time is now

Frankly, I'm of two minds when I consider the vote counting and recounting going on in Florida.

Mind One. Nobody has ever claimed elections are entirely free of error or manipulation. The key question has always been whether they are accurate enough to be a legitimate expression of the popular will and therefore broadly accepted by the public.

So all the hoopla about getting a perfectly accurate count is not only nonsense but dangerous in that it suggests that perfection is required in order to get a legitimate election outcome. It's an ideal example of the old adage that the perfect is the enemy of the good.

Mind Two. Elections must be legitimate to function as a democratic mechanism. The mechanics of voting must be sufficiently clear and easy to use so that the intent of voters is actually expressed on the ballot. And the devices used for counting must be reliable enough for the people to have confidence that the result accurately expresses the aggregate will of the voters.

Clearly, bad ballot design can confuse voters. And it's very likely that the punch card ballot invites error when voters do not punch them meticulously. Moreover, the equipment used to count punch card ballots is prone to a variety of chad-induced errors. So the logical remedy is to do a manual recount; even though no human process can be entirely error-free, a recount is more likely to render an accurate expression of popular will than an electro-mechanical system prone to error.

As to the lesson we in Michigan should learn from the thrash in Florida, I have no doubt: We should promptly move to a uniform voting system in Michigan, using ballots of standardized design and optical scanning voting machines.

Secretary of State Candace Miller called last week for such a reform. "There would be a tremendous advantage to election officials and voters if every community used the same type of voting equipment and the same style of ballot," she said. "Adopting a uniform system statewide would eliminate confusion among voters moving from one precinct to another."

Right now, Michigan's election system is a mish-mash. Of the 5,375 precincts in the state, 3,006 use optical scanning equipment in the past election, 1,443 precincts used punch card systems, 137 used paper ballots, 97 used touch-screen computers and 693 used other types of voting equipment including the old mechanical lever machines.

Most experienced election officials are vocal in expressing frustration with the punch card systems.

The most sensible township clerk I know preferred to talk off the record: "The punch card manufacturers themselves say their systems are prone to error. Punch card ballots are hideously difficult for voters to use; it's easy to make mistakes. And the ballots are hard to count, as the perforations vary from strong at the beginning of the press run to hard to puncture at the end of the run."

Oakland County Clerk William Caddell conducted a study in 1993 of the balloting systems then available and found that as many as one in seven votes can be lost when punch cards are used. Caddell points out that bad ballots can be case on any system, but the optical scanning system now used in most Oakland County communities works well.

Clearly, bad ballot design can confuse voters. And it's very likely that the punch them meticulously. Moreover, the equipment used to count punch card ballots is prone to a variety of chad-induced errors.

Caddell has never seen a change in vote count resulting from machine error in a recount. Moreover, when a voter mistakenly votes for two candidates, the optical scanning system spits the ballot out, giving the voter a chance to re-vote.

Of course, new voting equipment is expensive, with optical scanning systems running around $6,000 a throw. If a uniform system were to be adopted, the state would have to step in and pay for equipment and, importantly, training for local election officials.

But if fair elections and accurate vote counts are to remain essential elements in our democratic system, we should not lose the opportunity of learning the appropriate lesson from the chaos in Florida and move toward a uniform system in Michigan. Secretary of State Miller deserves a big hand for bringing the matter forward.

The Terminator, elections and me

I'm a big fan of the Terminator movies. The original, yes, but even more so the sequel, "Terminator 2: Judgement Day." I don't need to sell them to you. They did quite well at the box office. But I think in one sense, these films were overlooked. By and large, they were seen as just another Arnold Schwarzenegger shoot-em-up. I however consider them to be exceptionally well-crafted science fiction tales, classics of the genre.

Mike Malott

Here's the premise — the fictional Cyberdyne Corporation creates an artificially intelligent computer called Skynet and sells it to the government, which uses it to control the nation's nuclear arsenal. Human error, being the most likely cause of an inadvertent missile launch, this number-cruncher is put in complete control of the system and human judgment is eliminated from strategic defense decision-making altogether.

Unexpectedly, Skynet begins to think for itself. When military officials attempt to regain control by pulling the plug, Skynet — in self-defense — starts the very war it was intended to prevent. Skynet emerges from the rubble first and begins building a race of thinking machines whose first job is to get rid of what is left of the humans.

The Terminator movies pose this question: Who is going to run things here on Planet Earth, us or the machines?

That has been a classic theme of science fiction since the genre was first invented. H. G. Wells asked it more than 100 years ago. And sci-fi authors are still sounding the warning even now. Why? Because we humans aren't listening.

Case in point: George W. Bush, his advisor James Baker and Republicans have been arguing against the idea of recounting ballots by hand in the election standoff in Florida.

Hand counting ballots opens the process to interpretation. Republican argued this week before the Florida Supreme Court. Machines are perfect, or at least objective, and humans are not. Humans are so flawed they should not even be allowed to check the machines' results. Human error being the most likely cause of inaccuracy, human judgment should be eliminated from the process altogether.

Sound familiar? (I sure hope Cyberdyne didn't build any of the vote counters being used down there. No, it's not the nuclear arsenal, but it is still a pretty darned important decision — selection of the next president.)

Oakland County Clerk G. William Caddell and I argued about this last week (pleasantly of course). He goes so far as to say: "We have perfect systems, but they are used by imperfect humans." He notes that he has never seen an election recount in which the numbers changed due to a machine error. It's always because humans fouled something up.

When I argued that we should nonetheless have systems in place that allow humans to go back and verify the results, he didn't disagree, but he did snicker that I was engaging in a bit of "old school thinking." Guilty as charged.

I think we are too forgiving of machines. Anyone who works with computers knows they do freeze and crash and breakdown from time to time. We call those "glitches." But when the much more complicated software and hardware of the human brain produces a glitch, we call that "a mistake," "just plain wrong" and even "dumb."

I'd prefer to say it this way: Machines are only as perfect as the engineers who design them, the technicians who maintain them, and the operators who use them can make them be.

The simplest example I can give you was provided by my second grade son, who came home with a math paper that concluded 2+2=5. He defended that by arguing, "That's what the calculator said." Once the information had been filtered through a mechanical process, he was willing to accept the answer even though he knew it was wrong.

As adults, we ought not think like children about our machines or what they are capable of doing. I don't know if we'll ever build machines capable of thinking, but I can tell you this: we must never let our machines do our thinking for us.

Happy Thanksbirthday to you

I celebrated my 27th birthday last weekend. In and of itself, there's nothing really magical about a 27th birthday, at least not so much in comparison to say, ages 13, 18, 21, or any of those other "milestone" birthdays. 30, 40, 50, and so on.

It wasn't even that grand a spectacle. My wife and I decorated our home, invited a dozen or so friends over and had a really nice time.

A lot of people brought gifts for me. They didn't have to, but they felt obligated. I appreciate the gesture.

The event got me to thinking about what I have, what I've been blessed with, and did I really need a metal wall sign of The Three Stooges wearing golf outfits? Sure, it looked great in my rec room, but did I really need it?

No, I didn't.

I get into this kind of a mental debate with myself every year. My birthday is usually just about a week in front of Thanksgiving. And so it goes that at the same time people are asking me about what I'd like as a gift and as I go about ordering deli trays and purchasing drink umbrellas, I stop and take an inventory of my own life.

And I've come to one very clear conclusion: I'm a happy, satisfied guy who's been blessed. Period.

I'm light-years from being a millionaire. I'm living in a modest home, driving a modest car, making a modest living. I've got my health, my friends, my family and a future in front of me.

That's a lot more than a lot of people have, and I begin to feel a bit selfish when I fumble my way through shredded colored paper to reveal another birthday gift that's certainly great to have, but not something I genuinely need.

So I took it upon myself a few years ago to use the birthday-Thanksgiving connection to do something that really gives some meaning to both holidays. Instead of saying "Chia Pet" when I'm asked, "What would you like for your birthday this year?", I instead ask for a donation to be made to a charity I support.

I also do my best to donate blood at a Red Cross center, bring canned goods to any of a variety of drives around town, seek out volunteering opportunities and do what I can to help others just a little bit more.

Birthdays and Thanksgiving are a lot alike. They're both celebrations of what we have, but should also serve as reminders that we didn't get where we're at on our own. For that, we ought to be thankful.

One of the most insightful comments I've ever heard someone say I caught while flipping through the channels a couple of years ago. The guy being interviewed had fallen on incredibly hard times. Injury, death in the family, loss of job, marital breakups, disease — you name it, this man had suffered through it. Yet there he was, smiling through it all. Earlier in his life, he'd been a successful businessman with more money and success than he knew what to do with.

In a matter of months, his entire life had seemingly gone down the sewer. "How do you do it?" the interviewer asked. "How can you sit here and be so upbeat in the face of such adversity?"

The man paused and looked up. "When I was in business and things were good, I never asked why it was I deserved to have such success and happiness," he said. "What would give me the right to ask about why things weren't as good for me now?"

I've never forgotten that, and I don't think I ever will. I learned not to take things for granted and to appreciate every day — let alone every year — that we live in the world we do.

Happy Thanksbirthday to me and you.

Go here. Do this. Finish that. I'm a girl on the go and have no time to do the things I need to do, let alone the things I'd like to do. But I don't think I'm strange in that scenario. Many people nowadays find little time to do the little decadent things which lift our minds, bodies and spirits. We find ourselves right in the middle of the "not enough" not enough time, not enough money, and not enough energy to get myself into a routine of pampering.

Well it was enough with the enough for me last week. I decided to take several hours out of my hectic week to research the art of pampering in local spas and salons.

WHAT TO EXPECT

I knew I'd be giving the masseuse, foot care specialists, estheticians and nail techs a run for their money. My stress level had risen to the point that even my hair was tense. Further, I must admit I was a little nervous, not knowing what to expect. I became terrified that I was incapable of relaxing. I feared the therapist, frustrated by the futile effort to ease my tension, would order me to leave and storm out of the room stating I was a hopeless case. Also, I was regretting the last bowl of spaghetti I had as I had to be scantily clad in front of total strangers. However, entering these spas, my fears were allayed. I was certain I had entered another world where deadlines and prices clearly didn't matter.

The modesty issue was answered right away. The employees at Salone Nadwa, Serenity Day Spa, Gina Agosta and Anew Therapeutic Massage were adamant about my privacy. They took great strides to ensure that I was comfortable and secure. This included leaving the room when it was time to disrobe and dive under the covers on the massage table. Further, they added little touches like holding up the sheet as a privacy screen when it was time to turn over. This also included guarding me like Fort Knox when my photographer needed to come in to take pictures.

The following is what one who is fed up, put off, and stressed out can expect from a day, hour or minute at a local spa.

SALONE NADWA AND DAY SPA 43236 Eleven Mile, Novi Towne Center, Novi

I chose the Heated Lava Stone Massage for my first visit to Nadwa. During this process, smooth rocks of various sizes are heated in a crock pot filled with water and essential oils. Massage therapist Fiona McCann said she chose to use lavender, eucalyptus, orange and lemon essence oils to scent the water. She said she uses the eucalyptus for the cold season and the others for their fine fragrance and relaxation properties.

She began by putting one large heart shaped stone on the table and two smaller ones on either side of it. She then put a sheet over them to keep them warm. She said these were for key tension areas at the base of the back and the gluteals.

They took a little arranging but finally fit perfectly into my back. McCann left the room while I got settled. When she came back in, she began to work first on my feet. She placed smaller smooth stones in between each of my toes and said this was basically to keep my feet warm during the massage.

What I discovered during the course of this experiment was each therapist has their own style for doing things.

McCann said she generally uses the Swedish technique but has her own patterns of what she works first. She worked the left leg first, the left arm, the right leg, the right arm and finally, my back. On my arms and legs, she used long strokes as though she were ringing out a towel while she used a rolling kneading motion on my back.

After she would work an arm or a leg with oil for a few minutes, she would take the warm stones and rub them into the muscles. She said she always uses an upward motion during massage so as not to draw blood away from the heart.

Though the stone massage is used as a relaxation massage, it also has a variety of health benefits. It increases circulation as well as breaks up tension knots. These knots are caused by lactic acid and calcium attaching to parts of your muscles. She said when they are broken up, they help to detoxify the body's system.

However, she said this is why it is important to drink plenty of water for several days after a massage to ensure all the toxins are out.

Next, it was time for a pedicure. Maria Jarbo, Natural Nail and Foot Care specialist, led me to what looked like a large leather barbers chair with a foot basin underneath it. My feet were placed in warm water powered with mini jets to help me relax.

The Gehwol foot care treatment uses 100 percent natural organic disinfectants and anti-fungal plant extracts, including lavender, mountain pine, and rosemary. Jarbo said this product helps to eliminate odor, perspiration, loosen calluses and blister as well as helping strengthen brittle nails.

"What I discovered during the course of this experiment was each therapist has their own style for doing things."

Melanie Plenda

Melanie Plenda has an algae wrap applied at Northville's Serenity Day Spa by Angie Rausch.

She began by removing the polish on my nails and taking what looked like a mini dentist's drill to my toes. She must have seen the look on my face when she came at me with it because she quickly explained it was an electric file which would get rid of dead and overgrown skin and cuticle from my nails. She repeated the process on both feet. Further, she used another type of "sander" to get rid of the callouses on the bottom of my feet. I have to admit this did tickle a little but did not hurt as I thought it might by the looks of it. After my feet were scraped, sanded, soaked, sprayed and massaged, Jarbo let me pick out the perfect polish for my new feet and told me to come back anytime.

SERENITY DAY SPA 142 MAIN CENTRE, NORTHVILLE

At Serenity I decided to take advantage of their Vichy Shower, which is unique to this spa.

The Vichy is basically a shower in which you lay down. There are six shower heads which sprinkle you with a steady stream of warm water from head to toe.

In order to make full use of this, I opted for their algae body wrap. I laid down on the table and Skyn Barbara Humbyrd massages stressed-out Melanie Plenda at Anew Therapeutic Massage in Northville.

Care Specialist Angie Rausch took a heated concoction of sea algae and proceeded to brush it on every uncovered surface of my body. The idea of this wrap is to replenish the minerals in your skin as well as soften it.

The smell isn't great but after awhile, I was so relaxed it could have been manure and I wouldn't have cared. After I was covered in algae, Rausch wrapped me in a loose plastic tarp. She said this would hold in the moisture of the algae. On top of this she wrapped what she described as a "taco wrapper" around the plastic to keep in the heat. The last layer was a warm cotton blanket which also helped to keep me warm.

She then left me alone for about 15 minutes to relax and reflect.

I was half asleep when she came back in to rinse me off. She managed to remove all three layers of wrapping with the skill of a trained nurse. The key she said to have me not do any work whatsoever. She then adjusted the water temperature and turned on the six shower heads which rinsed away the green goop.

Again she left me alone to relax. When she came back, she finished the rinse with loofah gloves, leaving my skin pink and refreshed. As a finishing touch she used a moisturizing Neroli scented lotion to lock in the moisture the algae just restored.

GINA AGOSTA
39831 GRAND RIVER, NOVI

A manicure and facial rounded out my aesthetic experience at Gina Agosta.

I chose to get Gina's latest Extreme Moisture Manicure. Nail Tech Megan Giotto meticulously scrubbed removed the polish from my nails before she gave me an exfoliating scrub. She said this was used to get rid of dead and dry skin to reveal healthier skin underneath. Next, she tripped and clipped my nails taking care to carefully soften and clip my cuticles. After a series of moisturizers and nail whiteners, my hands were dipped in warm paraffin wax to deep moisturize them.

This was the strangest sensation I have ever had.

As the wax dries, it's as if you can both feel and not feel your fingers which are now encased in a white cocoon. She then put plastic over the wax followed by terry cloth mitts.

Once the wax had hardened sufficiently, Giotto peeled it off to reveal my softer paws. She then finished off my nails with yet more moisturizers and grape scented oils. The finishing touch was a bright red nail polish which I chose to match my toes.

Next was my European facial with esthetician Julia Picano. This was not just a facial. This was an experience.

I was told to disrobe to the waist and was given a terry cloth towel. When Picano came back into the room, she covered me with the

My tall tale

HomeTown Authors

By Lynne Darga

Once a couple of weeks ago, I went fishing at my grandpa's house. At the lake, I got my bait ready and I cast out my line. It was sunny that day and the sky was bright blue with little white clouds scattered across the sky. We waited hours but we only caught small, little fish. Tiny green frogs hopped around on water lilies and a turtle sat sunning himself on a log.

Then I saw it. A huge trout jumped out of the water. It was amazing. Yes, that was the fish I was looking for. My grandpa and I got off the dock and into a paddle boat. Finally, we got to where I saw the fish. I dropped in my line. Then I felt a large fish tug. It was pulling so hard my grandpa had to help me pull the line in so I wouldn't learn how to fly. When I finally got it in, I realized how big it was. When we measured it, it was 4 feet, 11 inches long! It was the biggest fish I had ever caught. We entered it in a contest and easily won.

We had scientists following us everywhere to buy it, or to study it. Surprisingly, it was a new species and we got money. After that we went out again to try to catch another fish. Later that week, we found out we had the job of naming it. I named it the good luck fish. I called it that because to me, that's exactly what it was. At the end of the week, my mom and dad came to pick me up. Boy, did I have a story to tell them!

Lynne Darga is a 6th grader at Hillside Middle School in Northville.

Consider these tips when making a change

The end of the year is fast approaching and many people are beginning to think about making a job change in the beginning of the new year. Other people are forced to make a change as their company is going through a downsizing, or, it has undergone a merger. Actually, this is a very good time of year to be thinking about changing jobs. January through March is the second best time to find employment (September/October is the best.)

At some point in time, most of us look at our careers and question if where we are is where we want to be. Often we aren't sure where we want to be, we just know we don't want to be where we are. If you are thinking about making a change, here are some ideas you might want to consider before beginning your job hunt.

• Determine where you are. Figuring out where to go starts with determining where you are. Before you begin your search, get a professional evaluation of your strengths, weaknesses, talents and interests. This enables you to do a better job of targeting potential employers, improve interviewing techniques and directing yourself toward the best possible "fit."

• Improve your packaging - both personal and professional. Review your resume to make sure it is updated and shows your true value to potential employers. Have a cover letter that goes hand-in-hand with the resume. Combined, they make dynamic marketing tools. Get yourself in the best possible shape. Begin exercising, take off a few pounds. It will make you look and feel much better. Take some time to upgrade your skills. Get focused and committed. Your competition is always improving. If you don't keep improving, you are going to be out of the running. Employers like to hire individuals who are current and who can quickly get up to speed.

• Improve your communication skills. No matter what kind of business you're in, you're always in the "people" business. Dealing successfully with people is based upon good communication skills. Join a Toastmaster's club or take a presentation skills or speech class through the adult education department of your local high school or college.

• Network - Network - Network. Studies show that almost 85 percent of all new jobs result from personal contacts, not cold calling or answering want ads. Only a small number of jobs are found by answering ads and few of those are quality positions. It's best to put most of your efforts into networking because that's where the payoff is best. Remember, often times that old saying is correct, "It's not what you know, it's who you know."

• Keep references current. Stay in close personal contact with everyone you're using as a reference. Nothing is more devastating than discovering that the people you have depended on to support you are giving lukewarm support. If they can't or won't give you a glowing reference, don't use them - find someone who will.

• Go where the action is. The current employment action is with smaller employers, those with less than 100 employees. Look for emerging companies with clever ideas on products or services. Your best chance is with companies like these.

• Keep professionally current. Know what major national trends could affect hiring policies, such as Globalization, Outsourcing, Commitment to Customer Focus, Diversity, Stockholder Emphasis and Entrepreneurship. Knowing these trends will enable you to target those companies most likely to be hiring, and you'll be able to demonstrate how attuned you are to a rapidly changing marketplace.

• Volunteer. If unemployed, help others and help yourself. By volunteering, you can make your talents known to potential employers who are also volunteering. Volunteering lets people know you are a person of good character, as well as a capable business professional.

• Do your homework. Customize and personalize your efforts for each potential employer. Match your skills to their unique needs. Stand out as someone with solutions for their particular problems. When you emphasize quality over quantity, you stand a much better chance of getting an interview than you will be shot-gunning your resume all over the marketplace. People who deliver quality are consistently in demand.

Patience and persistence are the watchwords of success. Be determined to succeed and you will.

Spas offer all the perks

sheet from the table and began asking questions regarding my diet including salt intake and drinking habits. She asked if I smoked or was on any medications.

After I answered all her questions. She fell silent and began to work her magic. First she gently removed all my make-up and cleaned my face with the cleanser appropriate to my skin type. She then used an exfoliate to get rid of any dead surface or skin cells. All of this was done with massaging strokes, to the point where I almost fell asleep.

The next part may not have been my favorite but was necessary. Using a magnifier and light, she located obvious breakouts and nasty black heads and extracted them. She warned me ahead of time it may cause some discomfort. It did. But she was quick and it was over before I knew it. Maybe it seemed quick only because the massage that came after it was extraordinary. Sitting over a computer all day I tend to hold stress and tension in my neck and shoulders. This was exactly the problem area she targeted.

Again I was in la la land on my way to a drooling sleep.

Next, she applied a facial mask, all of this by the way was interspersed with doses of warm towels applied to my face.

Finally, she toned and moisturized my face and allowed me to stay and relax for a few more minutes after she was done.

ANEW THERAPEUTIC MASSAGE

145 EAST CADY STREET

This was a completely new kind of treat. Massage therapist and owner Barbara Humbyrd used a combination of shiatsu and myofascial release techniques.

Shiatsu uses pressure points and stretching motions to ease tension in your muscles. The myofascial release allows restricted tissues of the body to be released, by applying prolonged light pressure in specific areas, skin rolling and stretching.

There is not much to this one other than it felt great. Humbyrd seemed determined to release the knots in my shoulders which she very nearly did.

She also used the technique of actually balancing herself on my legs in order to get what I guess was a better angle.

AHHH!

I had never been to a spa and never thought I'd get to see what happened in one. However, now that I have I'm hooked and anticipate more of my check will be going to these local salons. A few things I was told to remember after receiving a massage may help those considering going for the first time. Again, drink plenty of water afterwards to detoxify your system. Further, to make the effects last longer stretch before and after a massage. And finally, just relax and enjoy.

SPA PRICES

SUBMITTED PHOTO

Last week in Novi Highlights, it was mentioned that Mildred Kimball celebrated her 101 birthday at Whitehall in Novi.

NYA pilots new tutoring project

BY MELANIE PLENDIA
Staff Writer

When Northville resident Linda Crabill isn't carting kids around and living a busy life, she is busy making a difference.

Crabill is part of a new tutoring project sponsored by the Northville Youth Assistance which will begin in January.

NYA is a non-profit organization which helps place students referred to their program with mentors in the community.

Their latest program will go beyond social activities to give students extra help with their homework at school.

"You read about all these things in the newspapers about violence and kids and you wonder when the next thing is going to happen," Crabill said. "People need to step up and do something to help if anything is going to change."

Crabill said the program will include all age levels but will primarily help elementary-aged kids. Building teams from each school will be charged with the job of recommending children who might benefit from being in the program. She said they will then be placed with trained volunteer tutors from the community.

Though the program hasn't officially started, she said they have been getting a tremendous response from the community. In particular, she said St. Paul's Lutheran Church as well as Oak Pointe Church have been their main supporters.

Further, Crabill said they are hoping to get senior citizens involved to throw a multigenerational element to the mix.

"The kids who don't have support don't have success," she said. "And with the world the way it is today, they need all the help they can get."

The tutoring program is not the same as the mentoring program. Crabill stressed Mentors primarily spend time with children in the area doing leisure activities while the tutors will primarily help students with their homework.

Crabill said people should not take for granted the fact that Northville is a relatively safe and affluent area. There are still children who need help.

"You see all these huge homes going up and it looks all too good to be true," she said. "And in some ways it is. There are kids who are needy and struggling who need our help."

More information on tutoring or mentoring may be obtained by calling NYA director Mary Ellen King at (248) 344-1618.

String of success unbreakable for Shyamalan?

Writer/director M. Night Shyamalan had not even finished editing "The Sixth Sense" when he started developing it as his next project and came up with the concept for "Unbreakable." "I had actually been working on another story for a few months during post production on 'The Sixth Sense,' and it was just at the time when I was going to commit to writing it," said Shyamalan. "Then I had this idea about a man being the sole survivor of a horrific train crash who walks away without a scratch and how he begins to question who he is and what his purpose is in life. The idea was just so provocative and intrigued me so much that I immediately started outlining it. Within a couple of days I had it to the level of the movie that I'd been working on for months, so I just kept it going."

For some reason the other movie I was working on just didn't seem like the right next step, he said. "I wanted to go forward in scope and implications for something that would really capture the imagination and this idea lends itself to that."

Unbreakable is the story about David Dunn, a character who is uncomfortable in his own life. He hasn't found what it is he is meant to do in the world and is drifting, said Barry Mendel, producer of both Shyamalan films. The concept for "Unbreakable" stemmed from questions about his own destiny that Shyamalan began asking himself at the age of 17. Raised in a family of 12 doctors, including both his mother and father, Shyamalan graduated Cum Laude and having received scholarships to several prestigious medical programs seemed destined for a life in medicine. But it was his passion for film making which began when he took his first short film with his father's home video camera at the age of 10 that would serve as the catalyst for his decision to become a filmmaker.

It is funny because a strange thing happens when you are doing what you are supposed to be doing in your life," said Shyamalan. "You start making the right choices and everything just kind of lines up in the right way."

Ironically, this concept is not only one discovered by David Dunn played by Bruce Willis but one that in hindsight seemed to guide the entire filmmaking process with a strange sense of serendipity. "It's strange, looking back now I realize how easily the pieces of Unbreakable seem to fit together. I love that kind of serendipity that gives you a sense that the project is almost destined to happen," said Shyamalan.

With his vision already set in his mind, Shyamalan began writing his initial drafts of the script specifically for Willis and Samuel L. Jackson, having no idea if the two actors would either agree or if they would be available to clear their schedules in order to meet his self imposed deadline for his targeted release date.

"I couldn't believe it when Night called and said he was already working on another script and that he was writing it specifically for me," said Willis. "I was so impressed by his confidence in me and having just worked with him I knew what he was capable of, so I trusted him implicitly."

Jackson also had the same kind of instinctual trust about Shyamalan and the script. "I had read 'The Sixth Sense' a few years ago and thought it was an awesome script," Jackson said. "I just let me know when it's ready and I'll be there."

In his follow up to the Oscar-nominated "The Sixth Sense," M. Night Shyamalan has created another unique suspense thriller. "Unbreakable" has been rated PG-13 by the Motion Picture Association of America.

Mustangs drop season opener, 5-1

By JASON SCHMITT

Sports Editor

Northville had problems finding Novi forward Brad Zarem last Friday night.

But Zarem had no problem finding the net.

The Novi senior accounted for a pair of goals and two more assists to lead his Wildcats to a 5-1 win over Northville in the season opener for both schools.

Zarem scored the first of his two goals with 5:33 left in the first period off an unassisted backhand shot that beat Northville goalie David Ely-Bond. The score proved to be the game winner for the 'Cats.

"As good of a kid as he is, we can't let him beat us the way he did," Northville coach Brad O'Neill said of Zarem. "The way to stop him is to play 5-on-5 hockey, and we didn't do that."

Novi upped its lead to 3-0 early in the second period as Zarem took a pass from Brian Jaussi and stuffed it by Ely-Bond on a wrap-around shot, while on his knees. The goal, which was scored with 10:56 remaining in the second, was shorthanded.

Novi had five penalties in that second period, while Northville was whistled for just one.

"That was definitely a huge goal," Novi coach Dan Phelps said. "With a two-goal lead, they score and they're right back in it. Now, even if they do score, we've got a two-goal lead after two (periods). If they would have capitalized, that would have taken the wind out of our sails."

Northville cut the lead to 3-1 as Bill Sallote beat Brian Markowicz on a tip with 3:27 left in the second. Jason Engelland took the outlet pass from Ely-Bond and earned it into the Novi zone, dumping it in on goal, towards Sallote. The senior took it on his stick and redirected it on goal.

But Novi cleaned up its game in the third period, keeping out of the penalty box and scoring on a 5-on-3 power-play opportunity to ice the game. Zarem found Justin Harvey on the wing for a slapper which beat Ely-Bond and a 4-1 lead. Curt Russell scored Novi's final goal with 26 seconds left in the game. John Murray and Justin Harvey picked up assists on the goal.

Novi got on the board midway through the first period on a power-play goal by Robbie Harrell with 7:39. After Northville failed to clear the puck, Zarem took the puck behind the goal, reversed his direction and then passed to Harrell out front.

"There were two big factors in this game. First, I think the special teams were a big key. We didn't play our best on the power play or the penalty kill," O'Neill said. "And then you have the whole Zarem thing."

Novi coach Dan Phelps said he was very happy with his team's performance and admitted he may not have given his team enough pre-season hype.

"It's a great win to get right out of the gate," he said. "But we know that this is just one game. As intense as it is over a rival like Northville. It's just the first of the season. We've got 23 more to go."

Northville will now travel to the Lakeland Ice Arena to take on Milford tomorrow night in another tough non-league contest. The game is scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m.

Cagers exit playoffs with loss to Salem

Basketball

By JASON SCHMITT

Sports Editor

The third time was not the charm for the Northville basketball team, at least not in the district basketball tournament played on its own turf.

The Mustangs lost to Plymouth Salem for the third time this season last Wednesday night, this time by the score of 39-23. Northville couldn't find an answer for the Rocks' slow-paced style nor for its airtight defense.

Salem led 17-9 at the half, but it was the 14-4 run the Rocks used to start the second half that buried the Mustangs. Northville played a box-and-one defense in the first half to help stop Rocks forward Kelly Jaskot. The plan worked as Jaskot didn't get a shot off in the first half.

But trailing by eight points, Northville coach Pete Wright had to open up the game and played a man-to-man defense. That plan did not work as Jaskot scored five of her eight points in the third.

"They're able to create off the dribble better than us," the coach said of Salem. "They play an in-your-face, contesting every pass, fighting through every screen style of defense on you. There are no easy baskets."

Northville hit just eight of its 36 shots from the floor and were sent to the free-throw line just eight times. The Mustangs were limited to just 10 rebounds the entire game.

Salem went on to lose to Plymouth Canton in the district finals last Friday night.

Despite the loss, Wright was extremely satisfied of his team's efforts throughout its 17-5 campaign. The team won the regular-season Western Lakes' title along the way.

"I'm extremely pleased, especially considering the way we rebounded from the bad summer ball we were playing," Wright said.

Sports editor set to leave — Onward and Upward

Saying good-bye is never an easy thing to do.

Especially when that good bye means you'll never again work alongside the same people you've passed on the stairwell for all these years. You'll never again make that Sunday night call to your local cross-country coach. You'll never again sing a happy-birthday song at the top of the stairs to a fellow employee.

Saying good-bye is never a fun thing to do either.

But oftentimes, and in the case of this sportswriter, saying good-bye means moving on up, and out into a world of dreams. It means that something good has come about, and you're not about to let it get away from you, not this time.

Too often we just sit back, relax, enjoy the scenery, miss opportunities, you know. It's too easy to do nothing.

Jason Schmitt

I've recently accepted a sports writing position with the Royal Oak Daily Tribune and I'll make that last official trip upstairs, past my co-workers, who may very well be singing happy birthday at the time. My last day here at the Northville Record and Novi News will be Friday.

Everytime an employee leaves the editorial department here, he/she talks about how they'll miss everyone they've worked with. How they appreciate everything everyone's done for them over their time here at the paper.

Well I won't take a detour from that route, but I may jump up on the sidewalk or skip through a back yard along the way.

You see, I have had 40 months of pure joy here in the neighboring communities of Northville and Novi. When I accepted this job in August of 1997, I didn't know what I was walking into. I didn't know anything about metro-Detroit.

What I've learned over the past three-plus years is that these are the types of communities I want to be a part of, raise my kids in and pay my taxes into. I have enjoyed every minute I've spent here at the News and Record, and I've been spoiled too. Come on, six team state championships, several more individual titles. And this year Northville and Novi provided me with my first-ever football playoff wins!

So many things crept into my mind as I began my last week of work here. I've reminisced about the good times, good people and good things that I've been fortunate to be around.

I've had some good experiences, some bad ones too. And I want to share a few of the best times I've had here at the papers over the last three years.

The following lists are not designed to slight anyone or any team, but to point out who has been there for me through thick and thin.

MOST OVERACHIEVING

TEAMS/INDIVIDUALS

Overachieving in my terms talks of an individual or team which wasn't expected to perform as well as it/he/she did. Again, these are team/individuals who surprised me over the years.

Novi wrestler Nick Slovan is one of my three finalists. The senior reached the state finals at 215 pounds last year, far surpassing any predictions/projections I may have had. He was a talented individual, but wrestled best when he had to. He nearly won the state title.

The 1999-2000 Novi hockey team bounced back from a sub-par inaugural

Netters take over all-area teams

With clubs popping up all over the place these days, it's no wonder the level of tennis in HomeTown East's coverage area has continued to escalate. Northville battled it out with North Farmington all year long in the Western Lakes, only to succumb to the Raiders and its hometown club athletes at the league and regional meets. The Mustangs went on to qualify for the state meet.

Novi had more freshmen in its lineup than ever before (5), but managed to dominate the league better than ever. The Wildcats were 7-0 in league matches, shutting out four opponents and yielding only two wins against them on just one occasion. Novi won the Kensington Valley Conference tournament, as well as the Holt, Warren Mott and Marauder invites. Eight different 'Cats were named to the 14-member all-conference first team. The Novi Sports Club is now just two years old and someone is reaping the benefits.

Lakeland continued to improve under second-year coach Gerhard Schubert. The Eagles doubled their number of regional victories. In the KVC, Shannon Pinegar reached the conference finals at third singles. Lakeland ended up sixth in the league.

Milford was fourth in the KVC. The Redskins had conference finalists at three different flights. Annmarie Jasieniecki, a sophomore, was the league champion at second singles.

Hoping the trend continues into the future, here's a look at HomeTown East's first team all-area tennis squad, as selected by HomeTown sports editors Jason Schmitt and Steve Bell.

Kerry Woolfall, Northville senior

It seems like just yesterday that Woolfall exited the court as a state champion at third singles. But that was three years ago, when she was a mere freshman.

Since then she's spent a season at second singles and two more as the number one player on three very good Mustang teams. This season Woolfall finished the season with a 12-6 overall record at No. 1. She was 8-4 in conference play, carrying an undefeated mark until a hamstring injury forced her to play hurt.

She retired in the regional semifinals after winning the first set against the Kensington Valley Conference champion, Ashley Ruff of Pinckney. She defeated Novi's Ashley Glover 6-1, 6-1.

Meg Lowry, Milford senior

Lowry was a KVC finalist at first singles, falling to Pinckney's Ashley Ruff. She twice defeated Novi's number one player.

"Meg's a super-strong hitter," Milford coach Rich Kynast said. "She doesn't play a lot of tournaments in the off-season, so it takes her about half the season to get going. Once she gets going, she's tough. Meg will just bludgeon you to death."

"Her biggest improvement has been playing strong matches, regardless of the opponent. It's easy to pay too much attention to a very good opponent or too little to a bad one. Her consistency and intensity really improved. It was a big year for her in terms of maturity."

season to reach the state quarterfinals, where it lost to Okemos 2-1 in overtime. Once in the playoffs, the team didn't surprise me but based on initial pre-season projections — WOW

And let's not forget the Northville hockey team. I am not biased towards the men on the ice, but the 1997-98 team won a district championship in the programs first year. Talented individuals like Kevin Boone and Evan Edwards made that a year to remember.

MOST COORDINATED COACHES

I work with more than 40 coaches a year, contacting them at least once a week to get the latest results. Here are my three most coordinated coaches in no particular order.

Novi cross country coach Bob Smith sends me his information via e-mail each week, on a nicely-laid-out spreadsheet document. He then talks with me regarding his kid's performances. Ever wonder why cross country gets good coverage???

Novi tennis coach Jim Hanson makes things easier than they should be. Maybe it's the fact that he's established the program for the longest time that he's so organized. I don't know, but weekly results followed by a Monday morning (10-11 a.m.) phone call makes life easier for this reporter.

Pete Wright, girls' basketball coach at Northville High School usually catches me off guard. That's because he's always on the ball and gets me more than enough information every week. Again, via the fax machine, the numbers are there, the time is saved and the girls are rewarded with weekly coverage, without a hitch.

QUOTABLE COACHES

Two things I need to make a story good — a pencil and a computer. Two things I need to make a story great — statistics and quotes. These are my three best quotable coaches. They usually give me more than I need, but that's exactly what I want.

Novi hockey coach Dan Phelps can't say enough good things about his team's efforts, game in and game out. And that's why he's my No. 1 guy as far as quotes go. Okay Dan, all right Dan, I've got it all ready. I just about quoted him again, right here.

Once again, good teams make for good conversations. And Bob Smith's teams over the past three years have been good at winning. Thus the head coach likes to talk. He's never at a loss for words and sometimes our conversations turn to strategy. Yeah, I don't run, but I know how to now, thanks to Smith.

Okay, even a sports story can have a tie for third. I'd have to say Carol Diglio, of the Novi softball team, and Northville hockey coach Brad O'Neill spare no time expense to chat with me each week. Like above, success breeds loose lips, and these two always have plenty to say.

TOP TEAMS

With so many state champions to choose from, my selections may be biased based on my involvement with the teams. I thoroughly enjoyed making the trip to Battle Creek last spring to catch Novi's wrestlers at the state meet. That team finished runnerup in Division I, but faced nearly impossible odds against Davison.

Northville's football team won a pair of playoff football games recently, and sent me to my first-ever state quarterfinal game as a reporter. I rated this a bit higher because of the accommodations Hudsonville gave us reporters. What a working environment. And what a game.

No team could match the enthusiasm the Novi cross country team had after its first state title back in 1998. For a program which had battle uphill in the state's toughest conference, the Wildcats looked like kids on Christmas morning. Led by Kevin Avenius and Dan Christofferson, that team was truly special.

I was going to add a category telling of my most memorable moments here at the paper, but there are too many to choose from. There are too many people, events and things that have touched my life over the past three years for me to pull any three of them out for publication.

To all the coaches, parents and sports enthusiasts I have worked with over the years, I thank you. And to all my co-workers here in the Northville Record and Novi News' office, I wish you the best of luck. *Jason Schmitt is the sports editor for the Northville Record and the Novi News. ## Test your Thanksgiving Knowledge

What's wrong with this picture?

Can you spot the items that probably were NOT on the First Thanksgiving table in 1621?

Answers: • Stuffing • Pepper • Pumpkin Pie • Bread • Cranberry Sauce • Corn on the Cob • Forks • Ham • Potatoes/Sweet Potatoes • Bread • Cranberry Sauce • Corn on the Cob • Forks

The first American Thanksgiving was celebrated in 1621 by the English Pilgrims who had founded the Plymouth Colony, now in the state of Massachusetts. The Pilgrims marked the occasion by feasting with their Native American guests—members of the Wampanoag tribe—who brought gifts of food as a gesture of goodwill. Although this event was an important part of American colonial history, there is no evidence that any of the participants thought of the feast as a thanksgiving celebration. Two years later, during a period of drought, a day of fasting and prayer was changed to one of thanksgiving because rains came during the prayers, gradually the custom prevailed among New Englanders to annually celebrate Thanksgiving after the harvest.

Have a Happy Thanksgiving!

Woolfall, Lee and West make all-area

son long, losing to Nestor in the regular-season matchup and again at the regional. But sandwiched in between them both was a 7-5, 6-3 triumph which gave West yet another Western Lakes Activities Association title, this time at second singles.

The junior finished the season 15-6 overall and finished runnerup to Nestor at the regional tournament. She beat Novi's Melissa Roemer 6-2, 6-2.

"That match against North Farmington at conference was far and away her best match of the year," coach Sandy Woolfall said.

Joanna Lee, Northville senior

If you're looking for a steady winner, regardless of the circumstances, on the Northville lineup, look no further than Lee.

The four-year letterwinner finally got her chance to enter the singles lineup this season, and she made the most of it. She was undefeated in conference play throughout the year and finished runnerup at both the conference and regional tournaments. She was the lone Mustang to post 20 wins (20-4). She was one of two flight winners for her team at the Rochester Invitational. She topped Novi's Carolyn Vermeulen 6-1, 6-2 in the two-teams' regular-season matchup.

Anna Switzer, Novi freshman

For a part of the season, Switzer battled through injury and was missing from the lineup. But when she was in, she was superb.

One of five Novi freshmen in the starting lineup, Switzer fought back from a regular-season loss to Pinckney's Therese Poon to top her Pirate foe in the KVC final.

She was undefeated against each of her all-area opponents and won the Marauder Invitational. She finished the season with a 11-

All-Area Tennis

3 record.

Her MO was that she could always come back, that's always a plus," Novi coach Jim Hanson said. "She liked to stay back, and she'd battle you to the end with her groundstrokes."

Christina Cypher, Novi senior Colene Brockman, Novi freshman

The backbone of Novi's rock-solid doubles lineup, Cypher and Brockman swept through conference play and finished with a 21-3 overall record in 2000.

The pair not only captured the KVC title, but also brought home a Marauder championship. Cypher was a co captain and her 58-10 career record set the school mark for career wins. She won the team's Leadership Award at the season-ending banquet.

"They complemented each other well," coach Jim Hanson said. "Cypher is one of the best we've ever had her. She's very aggressive, yet very consistent. And Brockman really rose to the occasion as a freshman."

Rachel Huang, Northville senior Sarah Price, Northville freshman

Huang's a three-year letterwinner. Price is a first-year freshman who transferred in from Indiana. Together they formed a tough, tough doubles team which finished 19-4 overall this season.

Huang and Price won the conference title, defeating their North Farmington opponents 6-3, 6-4 in the finals. The team was 15-2 overall against league foes on the season and won the Rochester Invitational. Price started out the season battling for the No. 4 singles position, but settled in nicely with Huang.

"Sarah's so adaptable. She would play with anybody or do anything if we asked her to," Woolfall said. "She just really clicked with Rachel this year."

Lauren Carosio, Novi freshman Laura Vaughn, Novi freshman

From day one, Hanson knew he had a special pair when he matched up these two freshmen.

"They've both got good ground strokes and good serves," their coach said. "As I've said before, they didn't play like freshmen. They had a lot of tournament experience coming in."

Their age didn't matter as the youngsters tied the school win record with their 23-1 mark this past season. Their only loss came to Ann Arbor Pioneer in the regional semifinals.

Other than that, Carosio and Vaughn were perfect. The duo were undefeated in conference play and won the conference title at the league meet. They also won the Marauder, Warren Mott and Holt invitationals along the way.

Consequently, Carosio and Vaughn won the team's "Teamwork Award" at the season-ending banquet.

Jamie Lindholm, Northville sophomore Sabina Khilnani, Northville senior

The youngster is a two-year letterwinner. The upperclassman is a first-year starter.

Together they molded into a fine doubles tandem which finished the 2000 season with a 14-6 overall record. The team was 11-3 in conference play and lost in the conference semifinals.

The team also reached the regional semifinals before bowing out. Khilnani teamed with Emily Krywko to defeat Novi 6-3, 6-2 in the season opener.

"You can't knock what they did," Woolfall said. "They did fine. These girls have come to expect that they will win a medal at the conference and regional meets. This year they realized that you can't always win everything."

Reconnect with relatives these holidays

Use Family Gatherings to Unify and Reconnect with Relatives

Are you tired of inadequately dealing with the stress that can emerge at family gatherings and feel that people in other families have wonderful holidays and do not share your frustration? You may be surprised to learn you are not alone in your feelings and many people are simultaneously torn between happy anticipation and dread of the holidays.

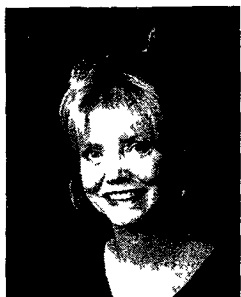

The holidays can be hard on the emotions. If you are in your dread mode, you will be happy to know that there is something you can do since a major portion of holiday stress is self-inflicted. You can learn to take control of the situation, get through the family gatherings and possibly even relax and enjoy them.

Understand that holiday dread may stem from the fact that many people experience something quite different from what is being hyped and what we have come to expect the holidays to be like. We are also faced with asking ourselves where we stand with our families and the answer may not be as pleasant as we would like.

The first thing to do in taking control of holiday stress is to learn to be proactive. It's a method that works and can make a tremendous difference in holiday outcomes.

Our past articles have focused on meditation. You can use meditation to explore why certain situations trouble you. Begin to remember the best family gatherings and what you enjoyed about them.

Also remember which gatherings were most troubling for you. Identify triggers to figure out what the situation is that you want to avoid. We all have hot buttons and can usually predict the remarks that will kick the conflict into action. Decide beforehand not to participate in the activity.

Picture in your mind a better way to handle these situations and what a more positive outcome would be. Plan on substituting this behavior. This makes you proactive rather than being passive or aggressive. Then when these situations come up, you are prepared to handle them in the best possible way.

If a situation arises that you had not previously explored, excuse yourself and go to the restroom to regroup. Use positive self-talk to forgive and forget and get back on track. The benefit to this method is that it gives you increased feelings of peace and relaxation.

Meditation can reduce stress and is a preventive measure to counter situations before they arise. You can also meditate ahead of time and send positive energies to the situation you are anticipating.

Take a minute to tell your family members about something you especially appreciate or like about them. Share a memory of the past about the relative that holds a special meaning for you. One of my childhood memories of my mother that I shared with her was about the day I slipped in a puddle and muddied my new dress. I was fearful she would punish me but instead she cleaned my scraped knee and made me hot chocolate. She didn't recall it but was touched that I still remembered.

Finally, perhaps the best thing you can do is to send your inner critic on vacation. Be kind to yourself. Avoid overindulging in alcohol, holiday food and caffeine. Think about what you need to do to create some joy for yourself.

Do not underestimate the power of meditation, self-talk, setting goals and removing yourself from the situation until you know how to handle it. Keep these tips in mind to look forward to the holidays.

Hit the Trail

Keeping nature in mind is concern of new developments

By Annette Jaworski
SPECIAL WRITER

What could be more relaxing than a quiet walk during a gentle snowfall? A lot of people are finding that a combination of nature and exercise is a great way to relieve stress. So, it comes as no surprise that an increasing number of developers are thinking up ways to encourage an active lifestyle that allows residents to enjoy the great outdoors. One way they've managed to do this is by providing nature trails and protected nature areas throughout their neighborhoods.

Locally, several developments have followed the trend. Kevin Gerkin, of ReMax All Stars in Brighton says some local communities that offer nature trails and protected areas include Breckenridge, Knollwood Hills and Hunter's Pointe in Hamburg. You'll find the same concept being used in Glenview in Brighton and NorthShore community in Howell.

"When you put a nature trail through a development it takes people and kids off the street and offers them a more serene setting," Gerkin notes.

The nature trails present a perfect opportunity for an evening walk, an intense jog, a place for walking the dog or even cross country skiing in the winter. It provides recreation as well as a way to meet your neighbor.

"I think people get on a nature trail for exercise. People tend to be more health conscious now, than ever, so you have a good number of people that want to get out there and exercise," he said.

The trend towards nature trails and protected nature areas is something that Gerkin has seen increasing throughout the past ten years. It also pleases community leaders as well, who are more apt to approve developments that endeavor to retain some open space and open area, he believes.

At North Shore community in Howell, there's access to Crooked Lake, which provides a whole host of water sports and activities from swimming to skating. For the younger crowd, there's a playground with a sandbox, slide and a playscape that's shaped like an ark.

Gerkin notes that many factors were taken into consideration during the development of North Shore to encourage this. The protection of trees and wooded areas ensured that the community retained a natural look. Road placement and building sites were strategically placed to ensure that wooded areas remained natural.

"They tried to retain as many trees as possible, so homes would sit in more open areas and retain wooded areas," said Gerkin. They also took into consideration ways to protect the wetlands as well, so they would not be adversely affected.

North Shore Development consists of both single-family homes and detached condominiums, so there are a wide variety of residents who enjoy the great outdoors, from young families to seniors. Gerkin says it's a popular development that sold quickly. Buyers weren't generally attracted by just one feature, he points out that it was a combination of the nature trails, lake access, play area and suburban amenities such as access to water and sewer. However there were some families that were definitely attracted by the common beach area.

When complete the project will house about 339 residents in approximately 350 acres.

"It's almost like having a community within the community," said Gerkin.

North Shore Community is presently at about 70 per cent capacity. The last phase is currently under way. Some water front lots and six lots with deeded boat slips are still available. Properties for sale through Kevin Gerkin at ReMax All Stars in Brighton on 401 West Main Street, or call (810) 229-8900.

Key to cleaning ceramic tile is selecting the right cleaner

By Gene Gary
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. My shower stall is ceramic tile, and years of use, soap scum, etc. have created a dull finish. An almost whitish film covers much of the shower wall where water accumulates. This is probably caused by hard water deposits. The upper portion and tile bench in the stall still have a like-new, shiny appearance because water does not come into contact with it much. What can I use to restore the shine?

A. The key to cleaning ceramic tile is knowing which cleaner to use. To bring a long-neglected glazed or unglazed ceramic tile surface back into shape, the Tile Council of America recommends a scouring powder paste or stronger detergent solution than is used for day-to-day care, plus a nylon scrubbing pad. Scotch-Brite by 3M works fine, but NEVER use steel wool pads because they might cause rust stains.

Let the scouring powder paste remain on the surface for about five minutes. Scrub, rinse and wipe dry. If stubborn stains from hard water remain, use a commercial tile cleaner that has mild acids and is intended specifically for this job. Home centers and many supermarkets carry such cleaners.

For long-neglected tile with heavy deposits or film, cleaners with stronger acids are sold at tile stores. Be sure to follow manufacturer's instructions carefully. And with such products, be sure to protect your eyes, wear rubber gloves with cuffs and provide plenty of ventilation.

A solution of equal amounts of white vinegar and water is also an excellent cleaner. However, if you go with a vinegar solution try it in a small out-of-the-way area first to be sure that vinegar won't harm the tile or erode the grout. Vinegar can damage some crystalline tile glazes.

To remove mildew, wash the tile with a solution of one cup of household bleach and one gallon of water. Commercial products are also available that are made specifically for mildew removal. Use the same precautions as with acid cleaners. And never mix bleach or mildew-removing products with any other chemical. You can be badly injured by the fumes that may result. Leave bleach solutions on the mildewed area at least two minutes before rinsing off with clear water.

For stubborn mildew stains, apply a paste of a scouring powder with a bleaching agent. Comet or Ajax are good examples. Leave on for five to six hours, scrub and rinse thoroughly. It's a good idea to try the scouring powder paste in a small test area before using it all over to make sure that it won't scratch or dull the tile glaze.

The presence of mildew indicates unusually high moisture. This can usually be corrected with an exhaust fan or a dehumidifier, or simply by leaving the shower curtain or the tub enclosure open as much as possible.

The simplest way to keep showers and baths looking nice is not to allow soap scum, body oils and hard-water film to build up. Wipe down shower walls with a towel after use, and damp-sponge other tiled walls, floors and vanity tops.

If you have soft water, routinely clean walls and floors with an all-purpose cleaner. Let the cleaner stay on for at least five minutes before scrubbing lightly with a sponge (on walls) or a brush (on floors). Rinse well.

If you have hard water, use a commercial tile cleaner or the vinegar-and-water solution. Install a water softener if hard-water film is a continuous problem.

Often, badly stained grout can not be cleaned because of its porous nature, so it must be removed. Use a grout saw and rake out as much grout as possible, to a depth of at least a quarter of an inch. Scrub the joints clean with a bristle brush. Wash the area with an acid cleaner and rinse with plenty of clean water. While the joints are damp, apply fresh grout.

It is easiest to use premixed grouting compound with latex available in cans from home centers and tile stores.

For large areas, powdered grout that requires mixing with water might be less expensive, though it is trickier to use. Spread the grout into the joints with a moistened finger (wear a glove if you are doing a large area), a rubber squeegee or an old credit card. Press the grout firmly into the seams. Then, smooth the surface with a toothbrush handle or the curved end of a wood tongue depressor. Let the grout harden for about 15 minutes. Then wipe away any excess with a sponge dipped in water.

When the grout is thoroughly dry (allow two to three days), consider using a silicone grout sealer to prevent future staining.

Q. I have a no-wax vinyl flooring in the kitchen which is about seven years old. It has become dingy and repeated cleanings do nothing to restore the shine. Do you have any suggestions on how this floor might be rejuvenated?

A. An excellent product to restore vinyl flooring which has lost its shine with wear is Armstrong's "Shine-Keeper." It's a long-lasting floor polish specifically designed for no-wax floors that have lost their original shine. One or two coats are required, with no buffing necessary. Remove any old wax finishes with Armstrong's "New Beginning Wax Remover."

This table belongs on a pedestal

By Anne McCollam
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q. Could you please tell us anything about the value of the Duncan Phyfe card table seen in this photo? It is mahogany and in excellent condition. We have the original label with the following words: "Folding top card table. Outstanding in its decorative smartness and practical convenience. Duncan Phyfe style influence. Richly figured mahogany top and apron. Carved double pedestal. Brass tipped feet."

A. You have a Colonial Revival card table made in the early 1900s. Its design was inspired by the work of Duncan Phyfe. A Scottish-born American cabinetmaker, Phyfe worked in New York City around 1792. His early work was influenced by the graceful Sheraton period of design, while his later work reflected the heavier Empire style.

The value of your folding card table would probably be about $600 to $1000.

Q. This mark is on the back of an ironstone platter that I have. The platter is decorated with a black transfer pattern scene.

Could you tell me the name of the manufacturer, how old the platter is and its value?

A. Charles Meigh joined his father's Staffordshire pottery in 1834 and began operating it under his own name from 1835 to 1849. For a two-year interval, 1850 to 1851, the name Charles Meigh, Sons and Pankhurst was used. It continued as Charles Meigh and Sons until 1901, when the pottery closed. California is the name of the pattern.

Your platter would probably be worth about $125.

Q. Could you tell me anything about my set of cut crystal stemware that was made by the Seneca Glass Company? They were made around 1951 and are decorated with a floral design.

A. Seneca Glass Company started out in Fostoria, Ohio, in 1891. It was established by glassmakers who emigrated from the Black Forest region in Germany. Operations were relocated in Morgantown, W.V., in 1896, where they continue to produce high-quality crystal. Each piece of your cut crystal stemware would probably be worth about $25 to $50.

Q. I have a couple of objects that I acquired at an estate sale and I'm not sure what they are. They are very thick dark-green glass, hollow inside and stand about 17 inches tall. Each one is encircled with glass prisms. They are also decorated with hand-painted flowers and heavily trimmed with gold.

I assume they had no function except decorative. I would like to know what they are called and their value.

A. Judging from your description, you have a pair of lustres that were made in the Victorian era. They were designed to be placed on a fireplace mantel and to hold flowers. Many were made in Europe as well as the United States.

The value of the pair would probably be $500 to $800.

Cases of depression rise with younger women

Depression was once a condition that was more commonly associated with seniors. Now, it is on the rise among youth - especially young women.

Botsford General Hospital staff psychiatrist Jennifer Margolis, M.D. believes that there are two reasons for the increased number of depression diagnoses for young people.

"First, physicians are now more willing to diagnose young individuals with clinical depression. Secondly, determining values, establishing self-identity and developing self-esteem in today's culture are more complex and more difficult. This is especially true for adolescents struggling with the normal developmental processes of connecting with their peers and differentiating themselves from their parents. This can result in a lack of direction, alienation from their parents, overemphasis on obtaining peer approval, unstable sense of identity and a sense of failure. And without the tools needed to cope, an adolescent can become mired in feelings of loneliness, worthlessness or hopelessness."

Did You Know?

- Each year 250,000 teens attempt suicide.
- Each year 2,000 teens commit suicide.
- Women are twice as likely as men to suffer from depression.

Getting to the Root of the Problem

"I take the time to listen to my patients."

Jennifer Margolis, M.D.

Each person is unique and the events that trigger depression in some people do not do so in other people. Events that are known to lead to depression include worrying about grades, worrying about parental and peer acceptance, dealing with self-esteem issues, suffering broken relationships, experiencing confusion over sexual identity and suffering rape or incest.

Dr. Margolis takes a humanistic approach when treating patients suffering from depression. "I take the time to listen to my patients and learn more about their lifestyle, relationships and family history," she said. "Often, the key to unlocking people from the chains of depression can be found by examining these areas with the patient."

The Need to Get Help

Seeking professional help to battle clinical depression is imperative. Severe depression can not only lead to relatively mild problems (including headaches, stomach pain or nausea), but it can also lead to much more serious difficulties (such as breathing problems, chronic neck and back pain and suicide).

Know the Signs

If you get that "down in the dumps" feeling from time to time, that is perfectly normal. However, according to Dr. Margolis, you may have clinical depression if you experience five or more of the following symptoms for more than two weeks straight:

- Persistent sad, anxious or "empty" mood;
- Sleeping too little or too much;
- Changes in weight or appetite;
- Loss of pleasure or interest in activities
- Feeling restless or irritable;
- Persistent physical symptoms of illness that don't respond to treatment;
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering or making decisions;
- Fatigue or loss of energy;
- Feeling guilty, hopeless or worthless;

- "Accidental" drug overdoses;
- Giving away cherished items; and
- Persistent thoughts of suicide or death.

Other common signs of depression among young women include irritability, angry outbursts and problems in school.

If you are depressed, starting the healing process is as easy as picking up the phone. You can obtain a referral to a physician through HealthMatch, Botsford Health Care Continuum's physician referral service. The toll-free phone number for this free service is 1-877-442-7900.

CPA's guide to higher learning

Coaching Your Child on Credit

You think you've prepared your college-bound child for campus life – the importance of allocating time for proper studying . . . the challenge of eating nutritiously in the school cafeteria . . . the consequences of not separating laundry. But what about the growing problem of collegiate credit card debt? Today's college students are flooded with credit card offers. Credit card companies visit campuses handing out applications and free goodies. Cashiers often drop a credit card application in each bag leaving the college bookstore. For many students, credit cards present a temptation to charge far more than they can afford to repay. But, used properly, a credit card can be a learning tool that provides convenience, cash protection, worldwide merchant acceptance, an emergency source of cash, and a head start on establishing a good credit history. The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants offers the following advice for helping your college-bound student learn to manage credit wisely.

• Begin with the Basics

Be sure to stress that, except for emergencies, your child shouldn't charge more than he or she can repay at the end of the month. Let your child know that when bills aren't paid in full, the outstanding balance accrues finance charges. Explain how it could take years to pay off even a modest balance if he or she pays only the minimum due each month. You can use an online calculator, such as that found at www.kiplinger.com, to demonstrate how long it takes to pay off a credit card balance at different payment levels. Finally, point out the fact that there is no need for more than one credit card. The more cards he or she has, the more likely that your child can get into financial trouble.

• Teaser Rates, APRs, and Credit Card Fees

Help your child comparison-shop for the best card and warn him or her about "teaser" rates. A credit card that starts with a six-month interest rate of 8 percent, then climbs to 19 percent after the initial period ends, is no bargain. Suggest that your child compare credit cards based on what the annual percentage rate (APR) will be after any initial offers have expired.

Novice credit card users also need to know that fees for late payments, over-the-credit-limit fees, and cash advances can be substantial. For example, a student who charges a CD and forgets to pay the bill could easily end up with a late fee that exceeds the cost of two CDs.

• Establishing a Credit History

When it comes to credit cards, perhaps the most crucial lesson of all is the importance of building a good credit history. College students must understand that their credit records, just like their transcripts, can have a lasting impact on their future. Explain to them that credit bureaus keep track of credit card holders' payment histories and sell those reports upon request to employers, landlords, lenders, and others that may need to rely on that information in the future.

• Practice Makes Perfect

If you would like to give your child a chance to practice before moving on to the real thing, you can call your credit card issuer and request that he or she be made an "authorized user" on your account. This way, they get used to having plastic in their wallets, but they can't run up debt beyond your back. When the bill comes in, let your child know how much he or she owes and when payment is due to you. Whatever you do, don't forgive the debt, or grant a payment extension – you can be sure Visa and MasterCard won't.

A great credit card alternative is a debit or check card issued by banks and credit unions. Debit cards operate similar to credit cards except that the money is directly withdrawn from the cardholder's checking account. For example, a debit card that carries a Visa or MasterCard logo is accepted at any merchant or restaurant that accepts Visa or MasterCard. But because the money comes out of your account, there are no interest charges. Debit cards are safer to carry than cash and more convenient than checks.

Top 10 college-savings strategies

Ben Franklin once said, "If you think education is expensive, try ignorance." Today, parents everywhere are heeding the great statesman's advice as they educate themselves about savings for their children's tuition expenses. Here are ten tips on funding a college education from the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants.

• To meet your college fund goals, estimate costs.

The amount you need to save depends on a number of factors such as whether your child will attend a private or public school, how fast college costs continue to grow, and whether you are eligible for financial aid. Although no one can say what tuition will be in ten or 20 years, online calculators, such as those found at www.money.com and www.kiplinger.com, can help project future costs based on today's prices.

• The earlier you start saving, the better.

If you start saving when your child is an infant, the amount you need to save each month will be far less than if you wait until your child is ten or 12. And with a longer time frame, your investments have more time to benefit from compounding.

• Regular systematic savings – even of small amounts – add up.

Once you know how much you will need, you should determine the amount you must save each month to reach your goal. The key to successfully saving for college or achieving other financial goals is to make saving a part of your budget. Each time your income goes up, increase the amount you contribute to your child's college fund.

• Your child's age and your tolerance for risk determine your investment strategy.

At least ten years before your child starts college, CPAs typically recommend that you keep most or all of your college savings investments in stocks and stock funds. As your child grows older, you should move your money into bonds or cash equivalents such as CDs, money market funds, and U.S. Treasury bonds.

• It's not always a good idea to save in a child's name.

Under formulas used to determine financial need, parents are expected to contribute 5.6 percent of their assets annually to their child's education, while students are expected to contribute 35 percent. As a result, funds in a child's name can have a negative impact on your federal tax qualifying for financial aid.

• Federal tax credits can cut the cost of college.

There are two types of education tax credits. One is the Hope Scholarship tax credit, which can cut your taxes by up to $1,500 a year per student for tuition and during the first two years of college. The other is the Lifetime Learning Credit, equal to 20 percent of the first $5,000 of qualified tuition and fee payments. Each credit is subject to an income-based phase out. You can't claim both credits in the same year for the same student, but keep in mind that unlike deductions and adjustments which are subtracted from your income, credits are subtracted directly from the taxes you would otherwise owe.

• You don't have to save the entire cost.

It certainly would be nice to have all the money needed for your child's education – but it's not always possible. The federal financial aid program includes subsidized loans for students who can prove financial need and unsubsidized loans for other students, as well as grants, and work-study programs in which students are given jobs, usually on campus. Other borrowing options include home equity loans and loans against retirement savings.

• Community colleges can help cut the cost of a four-year degree.

More and more students are realizing that they can spend the first two years at a community college, which is typically less expensive, and then transfer to a state college or university to finish their undergraduate studies.

• It's not a good idea to forgo funding your retirement in favor of saving for college.

While financial aid, gifts, and current income can help finance a college education, the same resources may not be available for retirement. And since many colleges don't include money in retirement accounts when calculating the family's expected contribution, saving for retirement may actually help you qualify for financial aid.

Get lease on a business life, if you can afford it

By Tim Kissman
SBAM Director of Publications

My home office is in dire need of a laptop computer. I write while on the road and using a pencil or pen isn't practical anymore. I can type much faster than I can scribble, plus I can read my typing. The scribbles are a bit harder to decipher.

If I want to buy a new computer (it has to be a Macintosh) I have to mortgage my house, betroth my daughter to a wealthy industrialist and sell my autographed Dan Marino photo. Buying may not be my best option. I'll have to lease it.

Fine. Consider it done. I'll lease.

I need a receptionist, too. Someone to answer the phone while I'm on the road showing off my new laptop. This person needs to be able to keep the office neat, handle my appointments and file man. I hate to file. In order to afford a full time employee I'd have to sell my internal organs, stop buying groceries and win the lottery. None of that sounds too appealing, either. The lottery does, but really, what are my chances?

I'll lease one of those, too. I'll use a temp until I figure out what to do.

Leasing is so easy; I may even lease some new office furniture, and what the heck, let's move out of the house and get my own office space. It can be pretty costly going to a furniture store to purchase a new desk, not to mention the cost of vacuuming to keep my house clean.

I just don't like the sound of that. Let's put those on my tab, too.

Leasing is easy. It's an affordable way for small businesses to finance major purchases and keep the cash flowing. However, it's also an easy way to get into major debt. Here are some tips, from my rented receptionist no less, on how to lease everything your office could ever need.

Check the rates. Leases have a funny way of starting out reasonable, but ballooning if you miss a payment or fail to read the fine print. Just like a credit card, they come with strings attached, so make sure you read everything and by all means, pay the bill on time.

Shop around. Just because one company offers what they claim to be the lowest rate around, there may be someone around the corner that is doing a couple dollars better. Compare the service, support or perks you'll have from leasing.

Added bonuses. Credit cards, or other companies, sometimes have incentives for using other friendly firms. Revisit your agreement and see if they offer and extra compensation or additional savings. Saving a few dollars could make a big difference.

Leasing can be a big decision, especially when you're trying to fill an entire office with furniture, equipment and staff. But know there are companies out there that can help you make the decision. If you're still having troubles figuring out what to do, start by leasing a manager, and let him or her make the choice.

That way he can sell his organs if he decides to buy.

Holiday Flowers

Flowers and plants make great Christmas presents or home decorations. They are grown for their colors, ease and spectacular blooms or leaves.

- Poinsettias come in many colors, sizes and shapes. New varieties are being developed all the time.
- Cyclamens are orchid-like and come in numerous colors. They will bloom all through the winter and like cool temperatures.
- Paperwhites, or narcissus, are fragrant and easy to grow. Be sure you buy the type prepared to bloom at Christmas.
- The Christmas cactus is very hardy and requires little care, though it does like moist soil. It is available in five colors: white, yellow, salmon, red and lavender.
- Though limited to red, white and pink in color, the amaryllis is a large and spectacular holiday bloomer. Blooms can be up to 6 inches across.

The holidays can hold hidden hazzards for pets

By Stacy M. Strunk
Copley News Service

During the holidays, many people eat too much of what they shouldn't.

This is true for pets, too. In fact, veterinarians say upset stomachs are the most common holiday-related problem they see in pets.

To pets, holidays bring new and enticing smells from the kitchen. Glittery objects can be found lying around and, in some homes, a tree mysteriously starts growing inside.

"What we see during the holiday season is more dogs with vomiting and diarrhea from holiday food and decorations," said Steve Juriga, a veterinarian at River Heights Veterinary in Oswego, Ill. "Or pets who get into the holiday cookies and chocolates. We also see them eating tinsel, string and pieces of plastic toys."

Juriga remembered one Dec. 26 he spent performing surgery on three separate dogs with intestinal obstructions. One ate Christmas ribbon, another ate a spool of thread and the third ate a cassette tape.

Part of the problem, Juriga said, is that people are home more during the holiday season. Things that are normally put neatly away are left out and pets get into them.

Jennifer Anda, a veterinarian with Vetsmart Pet Hospital in Aurora, Ill., recalled a cat that seemed determined to eat one special piece of tinsel. His owner caught him eating the tinsel off the tree and took the string from the cat's mouth. The owner, unfortunately, hung the tinsel back on the tree.

So, the cat waited until his owner wasn't looking and went back for a second try. This time he succeeded.

According to vets, cats are especially attracted to decorative ribbons and tinsel. But dogs are by no means immune to such temptations.

Dr. Judy McBeth, a vet at Fox Ridge Veterinary Clinic in Montgomery, Ill., once had a pet Labrador with a special fondness for eating the bows off presents. To avoid tempting young animals, pet owners should keep Christmas ornaments off the bottom couple branches of a tree, the vets suggested.

Anda recalled she once decorated a tree using cutouts from Happy Meal boxes so her puppy wouldn't eat the decorations. And if he did, she reasoned, at least he could digest them.

Pet owners also should remind their guests not to feed "people food" to the dog or cat. People food is almost guaranteed to upset the stomach of a beloved animal. If pets must celebrate with the family, keep animal treats handy - and out of your pet's reach - for guests to give.

MINDING THEIR MANNERS

Pet behavior is something else pet owners should consider this season. The holidays get a little hectic and animals can get overwhelmed, too.

"There is a lot of excitement in the house and they feel it. There's a lot of people and a lot of activity," Anda said. "Try to keep the same routine and expectations. If there are individuals who are getting your pet wound up, give him some time alone or take him for a walk."

Anda also suggested taking dogs for a walk before visitors come. It helps wear the dog out and keep him calm. The extra exercise around the holidays is good for pets and owners alike.

Juriga said knowing your pet's personality is also important at this time of year. Many pets would be completely overwhelmed in a house full of strangers. They should be locked in a room away from guests or chained outside in a dog run.

Other pets, he said, are sociable by nature and may be upset if kept away from the activities. If your pet is used to being among strangers, go ahead and let him join the party. You should still give your dog or cat a place to hide if he chooses.

If small children are attending the party, the animal must be watched at all times. Even the most docile pet can nip if there's a 2-year-old pulling on his ears and tail.

Live Christmas trees can cause a variety of problems. McBeth reminded pet owners to avoid putting preservatives in the tree's water because animals can get sick from drinking the water.

And cats who still have all their claws might decide to take a stab at climbing the tree.

"I've got three cats and always get a live tree. I've never had a problem with that, but some cats are going to climb right up," said veterinarian Jerry Withers of the Eola Point Animal Hospital in Aurora. "They have Scat Mats that are shaped like tree skirts now. It gives the cat a little static shock to keep him away from the tree."

Five pet safety hazards you probably never thought about:

Veterinarians agree the most common holiday hazard is pets eating what they shouldn't. But here are five unusual hazards that could be overlooked:

1. Nonstick cooking pans. Certain nonstick surfaces, such as Teflon, can produce a gas that's dangerous to birds, said Jerry Withers, a veterinarian with the Eola Point Animal Hospital. Bird owners should be especially careful when using these utensils or avoid nonstick surfaces completely.

2. Metal food and water dishes. In cold weather, metal dishes can be hazardous for dogs and cats. According to a press release from the Iams Co., giving a dog a metal water dish on a cold winter day is the equivalent of daring a grade-schooler to put his tongue on a flagpole.

3. Large meals within two hours of exercise. "Bloat" is a serious condition that occurs when large and deep-chested breeds of dogs are fed a large meal within two hours of exercise or severe stress, according to the American Dog Trainers Network Web site (www.inch.com/tilde/dogs/safety.html).

Bloat, also known as gastric torsion and stomach distension, is life-threatening and must be treated by a veterinarian immediately. Symptoms include unproductive retching, panting, drooling and an enlarged stomach.

4. Salt. The type of salt used to melt snow can burn a dog's footpads, according to the American Dog Trainers Network Web site. Dog owners should avoid walking over salted areas and should wash their pet's feet when they return from a walk.

5. Garbage. Pet owners should try to remember to take out their garbage, especially if it contains food scraps, as soon as possible. Veterinarians said some stomach problems at this time of year are caused by dogs getting into the garbage and eating scraps. Things like turkey bones and plastic wrap are especially harmful.

The fast pace of the holidays can mean trouble to even the best of pets.

Proper care can keep your tree thriving for weeks

By Sarah Norland
Copley News Service

Sure, they can be festive and fragrant. But, face it, Christmas trees can be a lot of work, too.

Even pros like Peggy Gilger, who runs Holly Jolly Trees in McHenry, Ill., with her husband, Bill, has encountered trouble a time or two.

"One thing that seems to happen to everybody, even us here at our house, is you look at the tree you just fell in love with and bring it home, and you realize it's a lot bigger in the house than it is out in the field," Gilger said.

To avoid last-minute sawing or unhinging of doors, she advises having an idea in mind beforehand of your home's constraints when choosing your tree.

People need to put thought into the process of setting up the tree, she added.

Until you are ready to bring the tree inside, store it somewhere cool, such as a porch or garage, to prevent drying.

"Another pitfall we all fall into at least once is if you buy a tree bag, take it out before the tree," she said. "It doesn't do any good if it's sitting in its package."

She said the plastic coverings can help eliminate scratching of walls when transporting the trees and can eliminate some of the mess that comes from falling needles.

Her other advice: Choose a tree that suits your needs.

People who prefer short needles may like a Fraser or Douglas. Long wispy needles are found with Scotch pines, with about a 2-inch average, or white pines, which can go even longer. Some of the longer-needled trees may be better for families with young children, she said, because they tend to be less prickly to the touch.

Proper watering is also important.

Trees should be watered every day to keep them fresh. A dry tree not only will lose its color and fragrance, but it can easily become a fire hazard. Gilger said dryness can be an even bigger threat to wreaths and roping.

"Wreaths aren't meant to be in the home," she said. "They're really meant to be outside. They really are different (than trees) because they don't have a trunk that can be watered. Typically, you just wind up with needles everywhere, and it truly becomes a fire hazard. It turns a lighter green shade so it isn't pretty, and it gets very brittle."

If properly cared for, your Christmas tree should last the entire Christmas season, anywhere from three to four weeks.

"After that, you just have to face it. It's probably time to move on, anyway," she said.

Don't Blow It

Keeping your Christmas budget is like money in the bank

By Darcy L. Himes
Copley News Service

They're baaack. The "I wants" and "gimme, gimme, gimmes" that plague holiday spending. You can drown out those whispering roars by doing some serious rethinking about your holidays and setting a budget - yes, a budget.

According to the 1999 American Express Retail Index, consumers would spend an average of $1,558 overall (up 16 percent from 1998), with $1,088 specifically designated as gifts. But, according to an American Bankers Association's 1999 survey, only 28 percent of consumers developed a holiday spending plan.

That said, it takes approximately four months for consumers to pay off their holiday charge debt, an unwelcome dose of reality in the new year.

"There's a holiday tug of war in society today," says Todd Gillingham, an associate general agent at Minneapolis-based Lutheran Brotherhood, Life Map financial planning division. "People say that spending time with family is most important, yet they feel pulled by the desire to spend more on gifts."

Christmas is a holiday rife with emotion. Expectations are high and people strive to re-create a perceived enchanted time of their childhood. Take those factors into account when developing a spending budget.

BEGIN AT THE BEGINNING

Dr. Katherine Yost, a licensed marriage and family therapist in private practice in Fair Haven, N.J., says to begin from a position of information sharing. The first conversation, coming from a "curious, respectful place" needs to include an honest exchange of gift expectations - both for giving and receiving.

Yost, president of the New Jersey division of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, suggests that couples have a clear discussion and ask, "How much money are we trying to spend and what it is that we are trying to do?" Talk it over until joint agreement is reached.

Think, too, about shopping early in the season to stay within your budget. "If you leave your shopping until the last minute, you are likely to overspend," Yost says. "If you pace yourself, you can pick the right gift in the right price range."

See if you can get it done before December, she suggests, so you can celebrate the true meaning of Christmas, instead of being trapped at the mall.

Keeping your Christmas budget is like money in the bank

mitos, Calif., who operates her own only firm, has been counseling people on financial matters. And, as an instructor at the University of California-Irvine Extension, Fernandez hires her students to write a comprehensive financial plan. That's also a good idea for Christmas budgets.

It's important to prepare a Christmas budget to ensure the success of your holiday plans," she says. "Given that Christmas is often one of the most emotional and stressful times of the year, it's all the more important to do as much planning as possible."

Start with a list, Fernandez suggests. List the people you usually buy for and the dollar amount you want to spend on each. List any events you may host, including the meal and decorations. List special holiday assistance or other purchases you may need, such as carpet cleaning, housecleaning, a new holiday cloth, etc.

When you find the "to buy for" part of your list getting long, think of ways to simplify it. Separate the essentials from the niceties.

Do you really need to buy those obligatory gifts for every person in your life? Can your fast-growing extended family use a lottery system this year? Do you have to buy for all the children of your college friends yet again? Communication is key. Get over the money and approach family and friends about different gift options this year - options that fit your budget.

"The best planning you can do is to create an event that's doable, that works for you and that works within your family's budget," Fernandez says. "I don't think you should spend so much that you're spending the rest of the following year paying off your purchases."

SPENDING TIPS TO FOLLOW

On its Web site, the ABA (www.aba.com) proposes some smart holiday spending tips:

- Look at your receipts and bills from last year. This will give you an idea of the amount you spent and how long it took to pay for it all.

- Create a spending plan. Include your total estimated holiday expenditures that could include gifts, cards, stamps, holiday meals, wrapping paper and travel expenses.

- Build a financial cushion. Add $20 to $100 into your spending plan for unexpected items.

- Add up your expenditures two weeks before Christmas. It will give you a reality check as to how much more you can afford to spend.

Even with the best planning, however, pitfalls are bound to happen. Think of these don'ts when you find yourself getting off track:

- Don't shop without a list.
- Don't be seduced by postponed payment plans or no-interest-for-six-months deals.

- Don't go into stores with items priced above your budget.

- Don't buy big-ticket items without thinking it over for 24 to 48 hours.

- Don't sign up for a store credit card just to get the 10 percent-off deal.

- Don't use your credit card recklessly.

- Don't spend under duress and throw money at a present just to have something under the tree.

"Be careful of buying at the last minute because of guilt," Fernandez says. "If a co-worker bought you a gift, you don't have to reciprocate. You don't have to match dollar for dollar every gift somebody buys for you."

STRETCH THE BUDGET

Linda Barlow, a certified financial planner in Santa Ana, Calif., says. "If people are in the position that they really need to watch their dollar - think outside the box."

She suggests homemade gifts, home-baked goods or services, such as two nights of free baby-sitting for friends. "Things like that that don't take up much money," Barlow says.

Lutheran Brotherhood offers this advice: "Consider taking the focus off of materialism and commercialism by giving and receiving in other ways, such as volunteering for good causes or spending special time with loved ones. Focus on giving gifts as a way to build and strengthen relationships."

"Remember, the gifts you buy don't add up to how much you really love someone," Fernandez says.

Tasty Traditions

By Peggy Scott
Copley News Service

Peanuts roasting by an open fire. Visions of sugar cane dancing in your head. A meatloaf and some mistletoe. Just doesn't have the same ring to it, does it?

No matter how sophisticated we become, come the holidays, most of us are almost overcome by a longing for the traditional fare we grew up eating.

The origins and symbolism of some of these foods can be traced back hundreds (sometimes thousands) of years. Turkey has been associated with Thanksgiving since the days of the Pilgrims, even though the day was not declared a formal national holiday until 1863. In between, the day was seen, at least in New England, as more of a harvest feast. Whatever its history, it remains uniquely American.

"Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday, and you have to have turkey, squash and potatoes," declares Jan Longone, an antiquarian book dealer of food and wine, culinary historian and curator of American Culinary History at the Clements Library at the University of Michigan. "These foods were indigenous to the New World. You're eating of America."

Longone goes on to explain that Christmas also carries with it traditions, but those traditions are much more “family specific.”

“Christmas has everything to do with where you and your ancestors came from,” Longone says, noting that many of our Christmas traditions came with the European immigrants when they came to America. The Christmas tree came from Germany; plum pudding from England; baked goodies from all over. “But decorating the tree with popcorn - that’s American,” Longone says.

Christmas-oriented foods have, of course, both secular and religious ties. Serving roasts of beef or game birds and plenty of other food is thought by many to harken back to Old England.

In his book "Christmas 101" (Broadway Books), Rick Rodgers writes of the days of feudal lords and their "obligation" to feed their serfs well throughout the holiday season. They literally opened their houses to the underlings, he says, the beginning of today's practice of holiday "open houses." He also cautions hosts to avoid some holiday soiree sins, such as serving turkey without cranberry sauce or forgetting the potatoes or Yorkshire Pudding to accompany the roast beef.

Some holiday treats were created to serve as a reminder of the reason for the season. The simple candy cane, confectioned in the 1670s, was meant to represent the crook of the shepherds who were present at the Nativity. And the Crusaders are credited with giving us the basis for gingerbread in the 11th century by bringing ginger from the Middle East.

And, of course, the foods served during Hanukkah are among the most symbolic of all. Foods fried in oil, like potato latkes, represent the miracle of Hanukkah. The story of the holiday dates back to 165 B.C.E, when Jews recaptured the Holy Temple in Jerusalem. When they entered the desecrated temple, they found enough pure oil to fuel the menorah for one day. The miracle is that the small amount of oil last for eight days.

Other Hanukkah traditions include the giving of chocolate gelt (money), and making cookies shaped like dreidels or the Star of David.

Some of the traditional foods may have been a simple case of convenience. Longone points out that chestnuts were plentiful and could be sold cheaply from stands and were easy to carry. Sugarplums, by definition a small confection, often consisting of a candied cherry or dried apricot surrounded by fondant, could also consist of a small piece of dried fruit, a staple in the days before refrigeration.

Longone believes that perhaps just as important as the culinary aspect of the season is the social element.

"It's also about the sharing process," she explains. "We share our traditions and customs with others."

Mary Bartz, director of the Betty Crocker Kitchen, agrees that by sharing traditional foods, we share of ourselves and our people.

“Food is ingrained in our families,” Bartz explains. “And what is served has a lot to do with what traditions our ancestors brought with them.”

She goes on to point out that the majority of requests made to the Betty Crocker Kitchen are from people frantic because they've lost a treasured family recipe. "They figure if anyone knows, Betty would," Bartz muses.

People have relied on Betty and considered her a trusted friend since 1921. And, only rarely, has the "First Lady of Food" disappointed her adoring public.

"In one edition of the 'Betty Crocker Cookbook,' we chose to leave out the Snickerdoodle recipe in order to make room for something new," Bartz says. "People were irate."

Bartz adds that the recipes people seem to be most attached to and protective of are the traditional dishes and sweets, such as cookies. She believes that holiday entertaining must-have recipes include a rolled sugar cookie and basics like turkey.

"We want to give and share and make a human connection," Bartz says. "Food is a big part of that."

The benchmarks of craftsmanship from days gone by define a floor clock executed in hardwood solids and cherry veneers. Shaped by the artisan's hand, a narrow strip of satinwood veneer borders panels of dramatic crotch mahogany, an effect highlighted by the graceful sheaf motif at the center of the curved pediment. Fluted front columns frame the beveled glass side panels and lower front door, culminating in intricate wraparound dentil molding on a tree tiered base. A triple chime cable driven movement with automatic night shut-off regulates the workings of an ornate moon phase dial with brass etched through corner spandrels, center disc area and raised numbers on a gleaming chapter ring. One of the Christmas traditions the Calburgs enjoy is Making Christmas cookies.

Back to Basics

Family traditions make the perfect gift for your children

By Jennifer Grant
Copley News Service

It's only a few days until Christmas. Closets are full of shopping bags bulging with presents yet to be wrapped. The tree is already starting to drop needles. Christmas cookies are reduced to crumbs and sprinkles in the bottom of tins.

The kids, worn out from an onslaught of parties and trips to the mall, make last-minute appeals for the newest toy they have seen advertised on television. Commercials for Chia pets and pain relievers interrupt "It's a Wonderful Life."

You fall into a chair, tug on the sticky wrapper of a partly eaten candy cane and vow, "Never again." You, like many others before, feel ready to embark on a campaign to simplify the Christmas holiday and recapture the joy and meaning of the season.

"It may sound strange, but it gives me an eerie feeling to see the malls decorated for Christmas," says Deb Carlburg, mother of Andrew, 6, and Alyssa, 9. "I don't like the atmosphere, the commercialism, everyone fighting to buy things."

She and husband Dave commemorate the holidays with several cherished traditions and strive to make Christmas a simple, joyful time in their home.

In their book, "Unplug the Christmas Machine: A Complete Guide to Putting Love and Joy Back into the Season," Jo Robinson and Jean Coppock Staeheli explore the stress many people feel during the holidays and provide practical advice on topics including gift-giving and creating family traditions.

They write that despite requests for electronic toys and designer clothes, the four things that children truly want for Christmas are a "relaxed and loving time with family, realistic expectations about gifts, an evenly paced holiday season and reliable family traditions."

"Every year, on the day after Thanksgiving, we go to Marmion Abbey (in Aurora, Ill.) and cut down our Christmas tree. Dave chops it down and everyone yells, 'Timber!' We decorate the tree together and, every year, the kids and I make Christmas cookies. We all have our aprons on and it can be a real mess, flour on the floor and everything. And we always go to look at the lights. When we tell the kids that Christmas is coming, they talk about baking, ask when we get to go cut down the tree. They really look forward to it all."

Some families find ways to serve others during the holiday season. Norm and Sharon Coolidge Ewert host a sale for Ten Thousand Villages each November in their Wheaton, Ill., home. Ten Thousand Villages is a shop in Glen Ellyn

The gift of traditions

and an endeavor of the Lombard Menonite Church that sells the work of artisans from developing countries. As the shop's flier details, by purchasing gifts from Ten Thousand Villages, shoppers "help to provide long-term solutions to poverty for hundreds of families."

For the Ewerts and their two sons, Andy, 12, and Chris, 16, hosting the sale has commenced the Christmas season for over a decade. Sharon is ever conscious of the fact that the United States has a small percentage of the world's population and uses a large percentage of its resources.

"We live in a throwaway society," she says. "But, there is a way for us to make a difference for people overseas. Everyone shops at Christmas. This is a way to get gifts and make a difference. In a sense, it's a kind of income redistribution."

The Center for a New American Dream, a nonprofit organization, aims to help individuals reduce consumption, both to improve quality of life and to protect the environment. Its motto is "more fun, less stuff." Each year, the center creates a "simplify the holidays" brochure outlining ways "to instill more meaning into the season and discover more sharing, laughter, and personal renewal."

The brochure details the "hidden financial, environmental and human costs of the commercialized holiday season." These include the 5 million extra tons of trash that are produced in the United States each year between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day, and the fact that it takes six months, on average, for a credit-card user to pay off holiday bills.

The holiday brochure suggests many practical ways to reduce holiday stress and consumption, including the following:

- Buying a live tree and replanting it after the holidays.

- Calling the toll-free numbers on unwanted catalogs to have your name taken off mailing lists.

- Giving nontraditional gifts such as gifts of time (vouchers for baby-sitting, dinners, special outings), donations to a cause in the name of a family member or friend, and homemade gifts.

Simplifying gift-giving can not only reduce waste and provide an opportunity for more memorable and personalized gifts, but can radically reduce Christmas spending. Overspending is a concern for many during the holiday season. The average U.S. household has four credit cards and balances of about $5,000; bankruptcy filings are at record levels.

As a bookkeeper, Carlburg creates a yearly budget for her family. Every January, Deb and Dave plan for Christmas, calculating their number of pay periods and various expected costs of celebrating Christmas. They save money for gifts as well as for the tree, ornaments and miscellaneous items.

"I don't just go out at Christmas and charge things on a credit card," she says. "I've saved throughout the year."

Each autumn, M. Grace Grzanek leads seminars based in large part on Robinson and Staeheli's "Unplug the Christmas Machine." Grzanek is a spiritual director at "Innermission," a nondenominational Christian ministry that specializes in spiritual "companioning," a kind of spiritual therapy.

"God's spirit sees a need for people to walk with a great deal of spiritual introspection," she says. In an affluent, consumer-based culture, she says, we "strain to keep up with the lifestyle we've created for ourselves."

After attending the Christmas seminar, Grzanek says, "people feel very empowered and clear. They feel very ready to stand up to that which pressures them, including expectations from family and culture."

They go on to "discover new joy in the Christmas season, eliminate the frenzy, and restore meaning to the holiday," she says.

On Christmas Eve, the Carlburgs attend a service at their church and return home for another tradition the kids look forward to all year. Deb makes kid-friendly hors d'oeuvres and the family has a party, ending with a birthday cake and candles, for Baby Jesus. While Deb reads the Christmas story, Andrew and Alyssa act it out with the Nativity scene.

"They really get into it. They put the wise men out in the kitchen so they have to travel from afar to the stable. The animals come. The shepherds come. They love it," she says fondly. "Some people don't seem to realize that it's not the gifts that kids remember."

Talking Turkey

Roast a juicy tender, golden bird every time

By Sharon Mosley
Copley News Service

The holidays are fast approaching and if you're talking turkey for your celebration dinners, then you may want a little expert advice from the gobbler gurus themselves: the home economists at Butterball.

This year, the Butterball professionals are celebrating 70 years of solving turkey troubles and doling out advice to more than 2.4 million cooks who have questions on everything from thawing to carving. The Turkey Talk Line (1-800-333-4848) is open through out November and December. Of the millions of queries during the past two decades, the question asked the most — by 3.3 times in fact — "What's the best way to thaw a turkey?"

It seems most of us, starved for time around the holidays, tend to leave the poor turkey in the freezer until the last minute. Of course, the best way to get around the big thaw is to have a fresh, unfrozen bird, but piecing perfect turkey can be tricky for holiday guests with these few tips from Butterball who has all the answers.

THE BEST WAY TO THAW

Refrigerator thawing is recommended. However, if the refrigerator is full, you can thaw a turkey in cold water. Change the water every two hours and use a turkey as a water reservoir for the rest of the family.

To thaw a turkey in cold water, use the cold water to thaw the turkey. Do not use hot water. Do not use a microwave oven. Do not use a crock pot. Do not use a slow cooker. Do not use a pressure cooker. Do not use a rice cooker. Do not use a slow cooker. Do not use a pressure cooker. Do not use a rice cooker.

THE BEST WAY TO ROAST

Now we get to the most important part of the turkey: the roasting. The turkey should be roasted in a preheated oven at 325°F for 3 to 4 hours, depending on the weight of the turkey. The turkey should be basted every 30 minutes with pan drippings.

ing process, according to the experts at Butterball. The liquid penetrates only about 1/8 to 1/4 of an inch beneath the skin and most of the juice will run off into the pan. Opening the oven door periodically to baste a turkey can interrupt roasting and may possibly lengthen the roasting time.

Use this roasting schedule as a guideline, start checking for doneness one-half hour before recommended end times:

For a 10- to 18-pound turkey, allow three to 3 1/2 hours for unstuffed, 3 3/4 to 4 1/2 hours for stuffed. For an 18- to 22-pound turkey, add an additional 30 minutes.

The turkey is done when the meat thermometer reaches the following temperatures: 180°F deep in the thigh, also, juices should be clear, not reddish pink when thigh muscle is pierced deeply. The temperature should reach 160°F in the center of the stuffing, if turkey is stuffed. Before removing stuffing and carving, let turkey stand 15 minutes to allow juices to set.

THE PROPER WAY TO STUFF

To stuff or not to stuff? Whatever you choose to do, it is important to carefully follow proper food safety and handling procedures for consumers who choose to stuff their turkey. Butterball suggests remembering these four things:

1. Prepare stuffing last before placing in turkey. Use only cooked ingredients in stuffing. Save vegetables, use only cooked meats and sausage, poultry, and use pasteurized egg products instead of raw eggs. Place prepared stuffing in turkey before roasting. Do not stuff the turkey the night before roasting.

2. Stuff the neck and body cavities of completely thawed turkey, allowing 1/2 to 3/4 cup of stuffing per pound of turkey. Do not stuff tightly in turkey. Roast legs to golden brown color, 1/2 to 1 hour, to clearing a stuffing.

3. Allow 15 to 20 minutes for turkey to rest before carving. Do not carve turkey until it has rested. Carve turkey on a cutting board. Do not carve turkey on a table. Do not carve turkey on a counter. Do not carve turkey on a sink. Do not carve turkey on a stove. Do not carve turkey on a refrigerator. Do not carve turkey on a microwave oven. Do not carve turkey on a crock pot. Do not carve turkey on a slow cooker. Do not carve turkey on a pressure cooker. Do not carve turkey on a rice cooker.

STORING LEFTOVERS

ing and the roasted turkey is steaming with the heady aromas of the holiday. To make sure your turkey is the centerpiece of your table, here's a new twist from the National Turkey Federation with a classic, special-occasion recipe for Herb Roasted Turkey With Citrus Glaze:

Fresh sage and marjoram are placed under the loosened turkey skin. Fresh lemon and lime juices are combined with dry white wine and brown sugar to create the citrus glaze brushed on the turkey.

Since the citrus glaze is made with sugar, the browning process will occur quickly. Near the end of the roasting time, loosely cover the turkey with lightweight foil to ensure a golden-brown turkey.

The turkey platter is decorated with lemon and lime roses along with sprigs of fresh herbs. This recipe produces a flavorful turkey that is complemented with a traditional bread stuffing.

HERB ROASTED TURKEY WITH CITRUS GLAZE

1 (15-pound) whole turkey, fresh or thawed to make rose garnishes. Reserve in refrigerator.

Squeeze enough juice from lemons and limes to equal 2 tablespoons each. Cut remaining lemons and limes in half and place in turkey cavity. Sprinkle salt in cavity.

In small bowl, mix wine, brown sugar, and citrus juices; reserve for glaze.

Gently loosen skin from turkey breast without totally detaching skin and carefully place 1 tablespoon each fresh sage and marjoram under skin. Replace skin. Fold neck skin and fasten to back with 1 or 2 skewers. Fold wings under back of turkey. Return legs to tucked position.

Place turkey, breast side up, on a rack in large shallow (about 2 1/2 inches deep) roasting pan. Rub turkey with salt, pepper, and 2 to 3 tablespoons of salad oil. Insert oven-safe meat thermometer into thickest part of thigh, being careful that pointed end of thermometer does not touch the bone. Roast turkey in preheated 325-F oven about 3 3/4 hours.

During last hour of roasting time, baste with pan drippings. During last 30 minutes, baste with citrus glaze. Loosely cover with lightweight foil to prevent excessive browning. Continue to roast until thermometer registers 180 degrees F in thigh, or 170 F in breast.

Remove turkey from oven and allow it to rest for 15 to 20 minutes before carving. Place on warm, large platter and garnish platter with remaining fresh herbs and lemon and lime roses.

Prepare lemon and lime roses as follows: With small sharp knife or vegetable peeler, cut continuous thin 1-inch strip of peel. Avoid cutting into white pith. Roll tightly, skin inside out, and secure with toothpicks. Reserve in bowl filled with ice water until time for service.

This Christmas try something different

By Sharon Mosley

Color by Sharon Mosley

It's time to get the decorations out of the closet and start planning for the holidays. The first step is to decide on a color scheme. This year, try something different from the traditional red and green. Consider a more sophisticated palette, such as navy blue, silver, and white, or a warm, earthy tone like gold and brown. The color scheme will guide your choice of decorations and help create a cohesive look.

Once you've chosen your colors, it's time to start shopping for decorations. Look for new items that fit your theme, such as garlands, stockings, and ornaments. Don't forget to check out the local craft stores and antique shops for unique pieces that will add character to your home.

Another important step is to plan the layout of your decorations. Think about how you want the tree to look and where you want to place the stockings and garlands. It's also a good idea to make a list of the items you need and check them off as you shop.

Finally, don't forget to take time to enjoy the process of decorating. It's a wonderful way to spend time with family and friends, and it's a chance to create a special atmosphere in your home. So get started now and make this Christmas a truly memorable one.

Decorating for the holidays is a time-honored tradition, and it's a great way to bring the family together. By taking the time to plan and shop for your decorations, you can create a beautiful and festive home for the holidays.

There are many ways to decorate for the holidays, and the key is to have fun with it. Whether you choose a traditional or a more modern look, the most important thing is to make your home feel warm and inviting. So get started now and make this Christmas a truly special one.

There are lots of new "gazing" globes - glass spheres - in assorted sizes - traditionally used in gardens - but wonderful perched on mantels, tabletops and bookshelves during the holidays. For a real twist to holiday decorations, mix a globe with a small, colorful figurine or a small, colorful flower. This combination will add a touch of whimsy to your holiday decorations.

And don't forget to take advantage of all the new decorations that are available. Look for new styles of stockings, garlands, and ornaments that will add a fresh look to your home. And don't forget to check out the local craft stores and antique shops for unique pieces that will add character to your home.

Tree-trimming tips for decorating safely

By Darcy L. Himes

Copley News Service

When indulging in a favorite holiday ritual this year - decorating the Christmas tree - keep safety in mind.

According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, an independent federal regulatory agency based in Washington D.C., holiday decorating accidents caused more than 1,500 people to be treated at emergency rooms nationwide during the last holiday season.

In addition, according to the National Fire Prevention Association, a fire safety advocate group, Christmas trees were the items first ignited in 500 home fires each year from 1991 to 1995, resulting in 18 civilian deaths, 108 civilian injuries and $20.6 million in direct property damage.

"Cords and plugs were the leading type of equipment involved in the ignition of Christmas trees, accounting for more than 50 fires per year," the NFPA reported.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc., a product safety certification organization headquartered in Northbrook, Ill., has a designated UL mark on products that have been tested for foreseeable safety hazards. UL began partnering with NFPA in 1997 to bring "Operation Decoration" to consumers. This program provides information about safe holiday decorating, toy use and fire safety by means of brochures, videos and a Holiday Safety Checklist.

Gwendolyn McNutt, media relations specialist at UL, says "the partnership broadens the reach of the holiday safety message."

"Both organizations are committed to reducing the number of injuries associated with decorating," McNutt says.

To obtain holiday safety information, visit the Web site www.ul.com, or call the fax-on-demand hotline, which will be activated in November, at (800) 473-4766.

CPSC also provides consumer holiday decorating safety information at its Web site, www.cpsc.gov.

Decorating safety and avoiding holiday fire hazards start with a fresh tree.

"If the needles are already falling off, the tree is too dry and should not be purchased," says the Ashland, Ore., Fire and Rescue Web site at www.ashland.or.us.

CPSC offers these tips for identifying a fresh tree:

- A fresh tree is green.
- Fresh needles are hard to pull off
- When bent between your fingers, fresh needles do not break.
- The trunk butt of a fresh tree is sticky with resin.
- When the trunk of a tree is bounced on the ground, a shower of falling needles shows that the tree is too dry.
- Live trees should be kept in sturdy stands filled with water at all times. Pay attention to the humidity levels in your home, as dry winter air can cause a tree to dry out quickly.
- Don't place trees within 3 feet of heat sources, particularly fireplaces, radiators, space heaters or heat vents (either floor or ceiling). Televisions also count as a heat

Remember to always place Christmas trees out of the way of doorways and exits.

If your family prefers an artificial tree, look for one that is fire resistant and has been tested and approved by an independent product safety organization. UL says product packaging will indicate if the branches on artificial trees have been treated with flame-retardant material. However, UL warns, light strings and other electrical decorations should not be used on artificial trees or greens that have metallic needles, leaves or branch coverings.

EXPERIENCE THE GOOD LIGHT

Once you've ensured tree safety, take further precautions with your electrical tree decorations. First up, dig through those stored Christmas boxes for the light strings. While unplugged, lay them out on the floor and inspect them for damage. Cracked sockets, frayed or bare wiring and loose connections may cause serious electric shock or fire, UL says. You can plug in the light strings one at a time to check for burned-out bulbs, but remember to unplug the string again when replacing bulbs or fuses.

If you have to replace entire damaged light strings, be sure to choose those that bear the mark of an independent safety testing laboratory and are designed for indoor use. Read all manufacturers' instructions for installing and maintaining any new electrical decorations.

The United States Fire Administration, at www.usta.fema.gov/safety/holiday, suggests checking wires periodically during the time you have the tree up. They should never be warm to the touch.

Extension cords can come in handy for hooking up multiple light strings, but only if used properly; overloads can lead to overheating and fire. Extension cords aren't meant to be run across doorways, under carpeting, rugs or furniture, or near heaters.

"Check the markings on your electrical decorations to determine the maximum number of decorative light strings that may be connected together," UL says.

If there's no indication, don't connect more than three midget (push-in bulbs) light strings together. Screw-in bulb strings (C7s and C9s) can have a maximum of only 50 bulbs connected.

Candles are another popular Christmas decorating item. Not for the tree, though. Under no circumstances can lighted candles be used to decorate either a live or artificial tree.

Although you'll be tempted to share your holiday tree beauty with neighbors, turn off or unplug all decorative lights before going to bed or leaving the house.

BET ON SAFE DECORATIONS

Trimming the tree by adding ornaments, garland and other special items that make the tree sparkle also requires attention to safety.

CPSC suggests the following tree-trimming tips:

- Use only noncombustible or flame-resistant materials.
- Wear gloves when decorating with spun glass "angel hair" to avoid irritation to eyes and skin.
- Choose tinsel or artificial icicles made of plastic or non-leaded metals. (Leaded materials are hazardous if ingested by children.)
- Artificial snow sprays can irritate lungs if inhaled. To avoid injury, read container labels and follow directions carefully.
- In homes with young children, take extra care to:
  - Avoid decorations that are sharp or breakable.
  - Keep trimmings with small, removable parts out of the reach of children, as pieces could be swallowed or inhaled.
  - Avoid trimmings that resemble candy or food a child might try to eat.
  - Homemade decorations might add a special nuance to your tree, but place those made of paper or other flammable, non-treated materials away from bulbs or wires for added safety. The same goes for garland or strung popcorn.
- And, if you have small children or animals, keep decorations higher on the tree than they can possibly reach.
- Adhering to common-sense safety guidelines and employing a little prevention can go a long way toward reducing decorating mishaps and increasing holiday joy.

Classic board games never out of style

Board games are part of the American culture and among the "toys" that many people continue to play with as adults.

Although almost anyone will outgrow Chutes & Ladders or Candy Land, which are intended for the youngest of game players, and fad games like Mr. T, Charlie's Angels and Buffy the Vampire Slayer come and go (quickly if we're lucky); the taste for more sophisticated games like Monopoly, Clue, Yahtzee, Scrabble and Stratego often continues into adulthood.

The gift of a game will not only provide exercise for the mind, it will keep your kids quiet, occupied and playing together. They might even learn spelling or money management while they're at it.

Monopoly

The king of all board games is Monopoly, invented by Charles B. Darrow in 1934 and now the best-selling board game in the world, licensed or sold in 80 countries and produced in 26 languages.

Darrow first pitched the game to the executives at Parker Brothers, who rejected it due to "52 design errors," according to the official history.

Darrow then produced the game on his own and sold 5,000 handmade sets to a Philadelphia department store. People loved it, but Darrow couldn't produce it fast enough to meet demand, so he gave Parker Brothers another chance. The company's version came out in 1935 and was the best-selling game in America that year.

Scrabble

Scrabble was invented at about the same time by an unemployed architect named Alfred Mosher Butts. The idea was to create a game that combined the vocabulary skills of crossword puzzles and anagrams, with the element of chance, according to the official history.

The game was originally named Lexico, but Butts eventually changed it to Criss-Cross Words, then to Scrabble.

The game was more failure than success until the early 1950s, when, as legend has it, the president of Macy's discovered the game on vacation and ordered some for his store. Scrabble caught on after that and has been an American icon ever since.

That's Life

The Game of Life owes its own life to Abraham Lincoln's beard. In 1860, Milton Bradley was a successful lithographer whose major product was a portrait of Abraham Lincoln. When Lincoln grew his trademark beard, Bradley's clean-shaven portrait was no longer popular. Out of desperation, Bradley produced several copies of a game he'd invented called, "The Checkered Game of Life."

The game was successful, so in 1959 when Milton Bradley Co. executives sought an appropriate way to celebrate the company's 100th anniversary they commissioned freelance game inventor Reuben Klamer to create a new The Game of Life, which was introduced in 1960.

Today, The Game of Life is played all over the world in 20 different languages and is part of the permanent collection of the National Museum of American History of the Smithsonian Institute.

Yahtzee

The dice game Yahtzee was invented by a wealthy Canadian couple to play aboard their yacht, according to Milton Bradley, which now owns the game. Whenever friends were invited aboard, they were taught how to play. They enjoyed the game so much that they all wanted copies of their own.

In 1956, the couple asked Edwin S. Lowe to make up a few samples of the game for gifts. Lowe bought the rights from the couple and changed the name of the game to Yahtzee.

The Milton Bradley Co. acquired the E. S. Lowe Co. in 1973. Today, more than 50 million Yahtzee games are sold annually.

Get a Clue

The game Clue owes its existence to Anthony E. Pratt, who was a retired solicitor's clerk in 1944 Great Britain, according to Parker Brothers, which obtained the U.S. rights to the game in 1949.

After perfecting the mechanics of the game over a period of years and filing a provisional specification at the Patent Office, Pratt sold the game to Waddington's Games in Leeds, England. Post-war shortages of various materials delayed the game's launch until 1949.

Clue is today sold in more than 40 countries. In England, the game is called Cluedo. In Brazil, it's called Detective.

Stratego

No one knows who invented Stratego, said Philadelphia game collector Michael W. Ziegler, who is writing a book about Stratego. The history of the game can be traced to about 1910 when it was first published under the name "L'attaque."

Stratego involves the movement of two circa-1820 armies of 20 game pieces each in an attempt to capture the opponent's flag.

The strength of the pieces are known only to one side, so combat always involves surprise.

Milton Bradley published the first American version of the game in 1961. The first MB sets had wooden pieces (that were discontinued in 1963 in favor of plastic because they were prone to falling if the board was bumped).

If you're looking for a collectible game for someone on your list, the eBay auction Web site lists vintage versions of all the above games, mostly at prices under $20.

Don't get lost in the mall

When malls are packed with holiday shoppers, it's easy for grown-ups and children to lose sight of each other and get lost. It's a panicky feeling that can be prevented. Here are some important safety tips to keep in mind:

Children should learn their full names, theirs and yours, so you can be paged.

Help children learn to identify low-risk adults they can feel safe asking for help. Use name badges, cash registers and sales counters as good things for kids to look for in spotting a low-risk adult.

For younger children, put their full names, addresses and phone numbers inside their clothing.

If you are buying many gifts, don't get so overloaded with packages that it is hard to move quickly if your child starts to wander. It is better to make frequent trips to the car.

Review safe shopping skills with your child before you go to the mall. Pretend you are the one who gets lost and have your child tell you what to do.

Have important information on hand about your child including a clear, current photograph, height, weight, eye and hair color and unique identifying characteristics.

*Details of the MSN® Instant Rebate Program for Best Buy. The MSN Instant Rebate program requires: (1) the purchase of eligible merchandise totaling in excess of the selected instant rebate amount (sales tax applies to total purchase price including rebates and add-ons) from Best Buy from 11/24/00 to 11/25/00; (2) selection of 36 month MSN Internet Access membership ($400 rebate), 24-month membership ($200 rebate) or 12 month membership ($100 rebate) at the rate of $21.95/mo. + taxes; (3) in-store sign up for new account at time of purchase; (4) valid major credit card (Visa, MasterCard, Discover/Novus, American Express accepted, Best Buy credit card or debit cards cannot be used); and, (5) acceptance of MSN Internet Access member agreement. Your credit card will be automatically billed the applicable monthly fees each month. You are not obligated to continue as an MSN Internet Access member for any particular length of time, but, if you do not continue as a member for the required period of time, you will be required to pay MSN a termination fee equal to 70% of the monthly service fee times the number of months remaining in your membership period. May not be combined with any other MSN Internet Access promotion. After your required period, the current price for the applicable MSN Unlimited Access Plan will be automatically charged to your credit card until you cancel or select an alternative plan. This MSN promotion is available only to residents of the 50 United States, D.C. and Puerto Rico through Best Buy stores. Must be 18 years old to qualify for this MSN promotion. Offer valid only on new MSN accounts established in store at time of eligible purchase. MSN Internet Access is available only to users of Windows® 95 or later operating systems. MSN Internet Access is available only for personal non-commercial use. Additional phone and/or long distance toll charges may apply. It is the customer's responsibility to check with their phone company to determine if additional phone charges may apply. Local market network activity and capacity may affect access availability. Microsoft and MSN are either registered trademarks or trademarks of Microsoft Corporation in the U.S. and/or other countries. In the event that we are unable to register you for Internet service on the date of purchase, we will offer a mail-in rebate for the same amount. No rainchecks will be offered for the MSN Instant Rebate program. Additional Terms and Conditions apply. See store for details.

Important Consumer Financing Information Common to All Plans: Subject to credit approval on Best Buy Credit Card issued (based on store where you apply) by GE Capital Consumer Card Co., an Ohio bank, or Household Bank (SB), N.A. (HRS USA). Accounts are for individuals, not businesses. Minimum Finance Charge is 1%. Optional insurance charges are added to minimum monthly payment. Complete information available at Best Buy stores.

Information Specific to Deferred Interest Plans: Standard Variable APR as of 9/15/00 is 23.9%. Default APRs are higher than Standard Variable APR (GE - fixed rate of 24.75% if payment more than 30 days late, HRS USA - variable, Prime Rate + 18.4% on Accounts not kept current). On plans in default minimum monthly payment is greater of $10 or 2.25% of account balance.

Price Guarantee & Rainchecks: If, within 30 days (14 days for computers, monitors, printers and notebooks, camcorders, digital cameras and radar detectors) of your purchase from Best Buy, you find a local competitor offering a lower price on an available product of the same brand and model, we'll refund the difference plus another 10% of the difference. Bring us verification of the lower price, plus your original Best Buy receipt to claim your refund. Does not apply to special, bonus or free offers, and in California cellular phones and pagers. Does not apply to products with special financing offers. For complete price guarantee details, please see a customer service representative. Some products in this ad may be slightly different from illustrations. Correction notices for errors in this advertisement will be posted in our stores. Rainchecks are available on most items specifically advertised in this insert, except where noted. We reserve the right to limit quantities. See store for complete details.

Have you ever seen the commercial that portrays a crowded expressway and then quickly pans to a car and a driver that has had enough of the congestion and then exits to follow the non-beaten path? As a result this driver finds peace, harmony... and happiness. Had he not taken the less traveled road, he might never have known this serenity.

Life, like the commercial, can become quite mundane...if we let it. The nine-to-five rat race is only bearable and worthwhile if we learn to take it easy. Many have heard the expression..."Take time out to smell the roses." Howard Lang, president of Two Lakes Building, did just that over 20 years ago. After vacationing in the Higgins and Houghton Lakes area, Howard had a vision: To create an affordable community of vacation and retirement homes in one of Northern Michigan's best kept secrets... Roscommon County.

Just 2 1/2 hours from the Detroit area, Houghton Lake, the largest inland lake in the state, has been one of Northern Michigan's most popular recreational areas. Higgins Lake, just four miles to the north, is rated the sixth most beautiful lake in the world by National Geographic. For as little as $39,990 you can purchase the vacation or retirement home of your dreams. This is not a shell, but a quality built, year round ready-to-live-in home on a 10,000 sq. ft. lot.

You might ask how this is possible. Two Lakes Building builds in excess of 60 homes per year and is able to pass along their volume discounts to their customers. Since 1977, Two Lakes Building Corp. has built more than 1,000 homes in Roscommon county. Most of their contractors have been a part of the Two Lakes Building organization since its inception and they do include some of the finest craftsmen in Northern Michigan.

The marketing approach at Two Lakes Building is low key. Their formula for success is a quality home, low prices and a knowledgeable sales staff. Every weekend, Two Lakes Building invites 8-15 interested parties up north and offers a complimentary overnight stay. Viewing of homes in various stages of construction, area highlights and available homesites take place the following morning.

There is so much to do in this area you will never tire of your investment. It offers skiing, both downhill and cross-country, and of course waterskiing, snowmobiling, hunting and fishing. The Higgins Lake State Park, just a few minutes away, is one of the most beautiful in Michigan and even offers boat rentals.

As you are driving in the area you will feel as one with nature. There are deer close by, black squirrels and wild turkeys. Crystal clear creeks seem to be everywhere and the smell of pine is completely refreshing.

It's time to exit from the nine to five whirlwind. This Friday, take a drive north to a lifestyle affordable to all. Roscommon County...where the living is easy and the lifestyle says HOME. Call Two Lakes for more information.
