Rental inspections on the horizon

By LON HUHMANN
Staff Writer

Apartments in city may face new regulations

The city of Northville has approved its 2001-2002 budget, but there is one detail that has some city landlords, as well as one city council member steaming.

Approval of the budget occurred at the May 21 city council meeting. All council members gave their vote of confidence for the budget. However, council member Kevin Hartshorne disapproved and dissented on several grounds. The issue of the city planning department to develop a registration-inspection program for residential rental properties was a thorn in the side for Hartshorne.

"It's too much of a conflict for me and I think the landlords have a good case," Hartshorne said.

Hartshorne and a number of city landlords aired their concerns at the meeting. The primary question on their minds was — why?

Ron Bodnar, owner of Copy Boy Printers as well as a landlord of several city rental properties, said it was odd that such a major decision was hidden inside a budget, which many residents did not know about because they do not attend the budget hearings.

"The idea of an inspection program seems redundant to me," Bodnar said. "Why set up the program when there are already standards in place? The fire, police and building departments as well as the courts already perform inspections and settle safety issues. The process is already self-sufficient. Why set aside funds for such a program?"

City planning commission vice-chairperson and rental property owner John Kaloustian also said an implementation of the program would be repetitive because there are already avenues in place.

Volunteers dig in to preserve, fix Johnson Creek

By JOHN HEIDER

In between the raindrops of last Saturday, local citizens gathered to help learn about, clean, protect and maintain the Rouge River system — one foot at a time.

In Northville and Northville Township more than 50 volunteers gathered to help the fragile resource that flows through their community in Johnson Creek Day 2001.

Johnson Creek Day featured an informative nature walk, volunteer streambank stabilization, a clean-up of the stream and its surrounding woodlands and a day of free brown trout fishing at Fish Hatchery Park.

The event began in the rain around 9:30 a.m. as volunteers gathered at two locations: Northville's Fish Hatchery Park and the property of Jim and Dodi Hodgins off of Maplebrook near Beck Road.

At the Park, volunteers began to remove rubbish from the stream's banks and boated about the park's pond to clean-up some of the fallen tree limbs that cluttered its shore.

Earlier, more than 225 brown trout were put in the pond by Bueter's Outdoors for people to enjoy fishing for later in the day.

District seeks to keep class size low

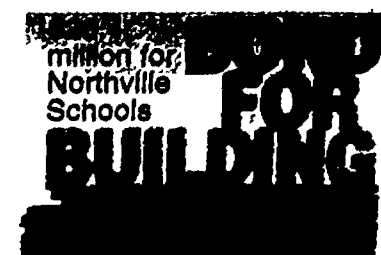

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

The student-teacher ratio level is at an all-time low, according to the Northville Public Schools 2000-2001 Enrollment and Staffing Report.

And school officials aim to continue that pattern.

In order to help maintain low class sizes and maintain the efficiency of school programming, school officials are asking voters to approve a $26 million dollar bond issue in September.

Pending voter approval, new additions for the Northville School District will include a new elementary school, additions to Winchester Elementary, Moraine Elementary and Northville High School as well as a storage addition at Amer-

Unopposed, Handley seeks term on school board

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

Judy Handley is running unopposed in her reelection bid for the Northville Public Schools Board of Education, which is set for June 11.

Handley, who is currently the vice-president on the board, said she is completing her fourth year of service.

So far, she said, this has been a quiet election.

"My interest started when we moved into the community," said Handley. "I wanted to do whatever I could to help move the school in a positive direction."

But she feels her work is not yet complete.

"There's still a lot that needs to be done," she said. "I still feel like my journey hasn't finished. There's still a lot left to accomplish."

Handley said some of the particulars she would like to see come into effect include having enough classroom space to house students inside the buildings, instead of using portable classrooms.

In addition, she said she would like to see expanded course offerings at the high school level.

"I think the kids are really taking advantage of many of the tech opportunities we have now," she said.

Also, Handley said she would like to continue working within the com-

High-octane owner reflects on years of gas station service

By LON HUHMANN
Staff Writer

Honest, hard work is what members of the Asher family pride themselves on, and it is the primary reason they have served the community of Northville since 1951.

Asher's Cigo is celebrating an achievement that most gas stations can't — 50 years of operating as a full service gas station. Asher's Cigo is located at 357 S. Rogers Street on Seven Mile Road.

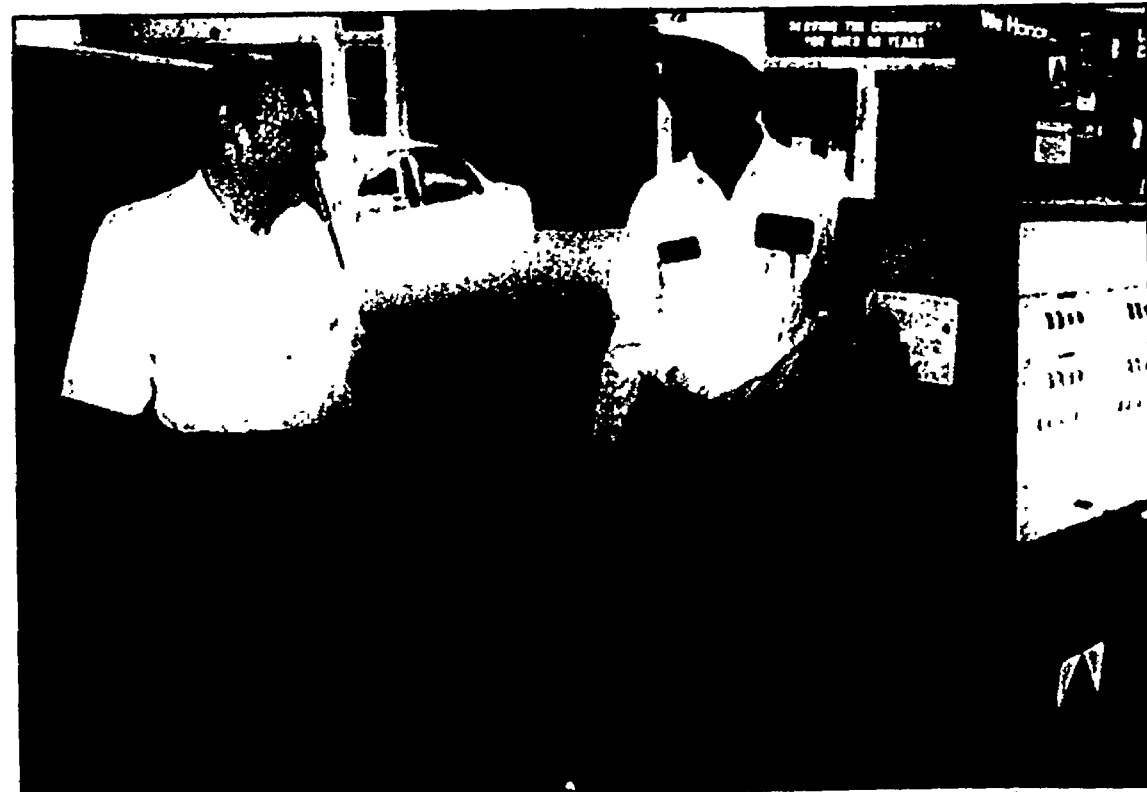

According to original owner and operator Bill Asher, there were 13 full service stations in the Northville area when he established his first station. Bill is the father of current owner Rick and grandfather to Mathew and Chris.

"I was 26 years old when I bought my first station in Northville," Bill Asher said. "It was located on Main Street across from where Gardenvue is currently at."

Asher said it didn't take much

Rock on — musical duo entertains at Silver Springs

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

Jennifer Haddad never imagined that singers Evan and Jaron Lowenstein would perform at Silver Springs Elementary School May 24. Haddad, a Kids Club teacher at the school, won a radio contest called "Play Where You Say," which was sponsored by WKQI-FM (95.5). She said she won the contest after sending an e-mail message to the radio station where station officials decided her request for the group to play at an elementary school was the best location for a performance. Haddad probably won't soon forget the moment where she found her request was approved. "I was screaming," she said. "I was all excited. I just thought it would be something different for the kids. Not everyone will go to a concert in their life. I thought it would be cool to bring one to them."

At the school, students erupted with ear-splitting screams as the two musicians walked up onto the stage set up in the gymnasium. Before performing, Evan and Jaron answered questions from the audience.

"It was great," said Haddad. "I liked how they interacted with the kids. It was more than I expected."

Air personality and assistant music director Booker said the station received about 400 e-mails requesting for Evan and Jaron to perform in locations ranging from hot tubs to graduation parties. Silver Springs turned out to be the lucky location.

During the performance, students even began singing along as the two singers performed "Crazy for this Girl."

Haddad said the student enjoyed the performance.

"They liked it a lot," she said, adding that she was also a fan of the group.

The two performers also said that this was a unique location for a performance, having never performed at an elementary school.

Jaron said he was happy to see the young children's enthusiasm and exuberance in their questions.

"I forgot how much I love kids," he said.

NORTHVILLE'S NATIONAL MERIT SCHOLARS:

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

Kelly Wright took the PSAT test in the fall of her junior year, turned it in, and almost forgot about it.

That is, until she was informed that she was a National Merit Finalist.

"I guess I didn't think about it that much," said Wright, a 2001 graduate of Northville High School.

Wright was one of five students from Northville High School selected to be National Merit Finalists from Northville High School.

She said she was accepted into Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., and plans on studying genetics. Her career plans are uncertain at this point, but Wright said she thinking about a career in the field of medicine or biomedical engineering.

"I'm keeping doors open, but I don't really know," she said.

The sciences have always been some of Wright's best classes.

"AP Biology has always been one of my favorite classes," said Wright, adding that biology is her favorite subject. Another favorite class during high school was college prep composition, she said.

Wright will be graduating with the highest honors in the Summa Cum Laude bracket.

During high school, she served as vice-president of concert choir, and was also involved in the National Honor Society, Science Olympiad, National German Honor Society, two school musicals, the singing-ensemble Treblemakers, and even played softball during sophomore year.

Last summer, Wright said she went to Germany worked as a counselor for the organization Volunteers for Peace.

Wright said she is looking forward to beginning college and exploring new academic areas.

"I'm really excited about it, but I'm kind of scared," said Wright. "I'm going far away and I'll miss my family. [But] I think it'll definitely be a good way to check out what the world is like. I think it will be a good experience. I'm pretty ready to move on."

Wright also said she would like to offer her gratitude for important figures in her life.

"I would like to thank my parents for letting me do my own thing and I thank my sister for being the best example anyone could ever be," she said.

She also said she appreciated the help of teacher Susan Couzens and the choir director for their involvement.

Wright also said she's taking away some sound lessons from her high school career.

"I think in high school you're supposed to learn what kind of life you want to live for the rest of your life and what general direction you want to go," she said. "It's about figuring out the path you want to take and the people and things you want to bring along the way."

The list of accolades for Emily Needham keeps getting longer.

Needham, a 2001 graduate of Northville High School, was selected as a National Merit Finalist from her school. She along with four other graduating seniors were recognized with this academic achievement.

After graduation, she plans to attend the school of management at Purdue University in Indiana. Needham said she is going to study marketing-management.

Needham was selected to be a National Merit Finalist due to her excellent performance on her PSAT test, or preliminary scholastic aptitude test.

"We took the test in the fall of our junior year," she said. "When I found out

Emily Needham

I told all my junior friends you have to take the test semi-seriously because you can get money for it."

Needham was also awarded a Purdue University Merit Scholarship through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

When the start of the college year begins, Needham said she'll be excited about new experiences and even has a unique knowledge about the school.

"I've always wanted to go to Purdue," she said. "I've been exposed to the university all my life."

Needham said she has already visited Purdue University and both her parents are Purdue alumni.

Although she'll miss her friends, she said she's looking forward to new opportunities.

"I think it will be a big difference, but it will be lots of fun too," she said.

Needham will be graduating with highest honors in the Summa cum laude ranking. She is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the National Honor Society. In addition to being honored as a National Merit Finalist, she was awarded the Michigan Merit Award and the Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

After experiencing the rigors and demands of high school, Needham has learned a valuable lesson that can benefit others as well.

"Work hard in high school because you want to be able to go to college," said Needham. "There's so many opportunities once you have a college education."

City water, sewer rates head north

Increases relatively small across the board

By LON HUHMAN
Staff Writer

It's official, and many city of Northville residents should be pleasantly surprised at the lack of increase for water and sewer rates.

The adjusted water and sewer rates, which will become effective on July 1, were approved by the Northville city council at its Monday night meeting.

According to city manager Gary Word, the water and sewer rates are reviewed at least annually to ensure that the water and sewer fund continues to be financially sound, as well as the continuing of the long term plan for capital improvements without the issuance of additional debt. Public works director James Gallogly said the only rate increase will be with the dual meter program. The dual meter program allows residents to have a second meter for outdoor watering, generally lawn sprinkling, that does not add to the flow of the sewer system, Gallogly said.

"Since the city is required to pay Wayne County for sewer disposal based upon units of water purchased from the city of Detroit, the dual meter customers were still required to pay for a portion of the sewer costs," Gallogly said. "The rate policy that the Northville city council established was to discount the city's sewer rate to the level that covered the city's cost to Wayne County. As a result of the decreased sewer debt, the relative portion of Wayne County sewer charges has increased and for that reason a 5 percent rate adjustment is proposed for the dual meter sewer rate."

As the rates stand today residents are charged $3.82 per unit for water, $3.76 per unit for sewer and dual program users are charged $1.28 per unit. The bi-monthly service charge is $4.92 and the combined rate per unit is currently at $7.58. These current rates became effective in 1999, with one unit equal to 1,000 gallons.

"The water rate and bi-monthly service charge will not change," Gallogly said. "Due to a combination of decreasing debt service balances as well as a controlled capital improvement program, the fund was able to absorb rate increase from both Detroit and Wayne County."

According to assistant city manager and finance director Nicolette Bateson, there are several factors to consider when evaluating the rates. One is the maintaining of an acceptable level of working capital funds for the purpose of having a cash flow as well as for emergency expenditure purposes. Bateson said sufficient working capital reserves are especially important, since an excess flow facility is likely to be mandated in the future.

The rate increase for water purchased by the city from the city of Detroit is 12.6 percent as of July 1, and Wayne County sewage disposal charges will increase 7 percent as of July 1, as well. Rate increases from both suppliers in 2000 and 2001 have been absorbed.

Gallogly said another factor in considering the rates is the updated five-year capital improvement plan. The plan identifies $804,500 of proposed projects through 2005 that focuses on prioritized municipal water system improvements. The water main replacement projects will take place on Baseline Road from Center to Novi Street, Allen Drive and S. Rogers Street from Main to Fairbrook Streets. There will also be a water and sanitary sewer extension on Caldwell Road as well as the River Park agreement, which will see the replacement of a 12-inch water main on Baseline Road in partnership with the residential development project.

Water loss is yet another detail to include in the adjustment proposals.

"The water loss ratio has been less than 12 percent for the past 30 months," Gallogly said.

Fleas-ing the masses, Kings Mill hosts sale

By LON HUHMAN
Staff Writer

There won't be any fleas, but a lot of neat stuff will be available.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday, King's Mill Cooperative is having its annual flea market. According to flea market committee member John Bowman, this year's flea market is special in that it is the 20th anniversary of the co-op's flea market. Bowman, along with Steve Hucal, Ed Keegan, Russ Rathburn, Dot Hadac and Rita MacFarlane form the flea market committee. "We have the flea market each year and this year is significant because we are still going strong," Bowman said.

King's Mill is located at 18120 Jamestown Circle off of Northville Road between Six Mile and Seven Mile roads. Bowman said the flea market will be held in the commons area. He said co-op residents and others will have set up tables as well as spaces of items available to be bought.

"There will be plenty of cool bargains on hand. We don't really know how many tables will be set up until the day arrives, but it will be good," Bowman said. "We will also have a bake sale and refreshments."

One highlight will be the 50-50 cash drawing. Bowman said the drawing will have three winners. The co-op consists of 455 units with a clubhouse and pool available to residents.

Bowman said there will be plenty of available room for parking.

LET'S TALK Jewelry GARY S. WEINSTEIN
GEMOLOGIST

WHY THE RUSH FOR GOLD?

Since ancient times, gold has been regarded as one of the most precious of metals, owing largely to its lustrous beauty, easy workability, rarity and virtual indestructibility. So soft and malleable is gold that one ounce of it can be stretched into wire five miles long. Gold is so rare that only an estimated 102,000 tons have been mined from the earth since the beginning of recorded history. And, the bright and shiny coins taken from centuries-old shipwrecks give ample testimony to the fact that gold neither rusts, corrodes, nor tarnishes. The fact that is lasts forever has prompted many people to give the gift of gold to those who hold their love to be of similar nature.

Gold jewelry is appropriate for most any occasion. At WEINSTEIN JEWELERS OF NOVI you can rely on our professionals for their expert advice, as well as one of the largest selections of jewelry and gemstones in the area. Come see us soon at 41990 Grand River Ave. (248-347-0303). We're here for you Mon.-Thurs. 10a.m.-6p.m., Fri. 10a.m.-6p.m., Sat. 10a.m.-5p.m. We are now licensed by the city of Novi to offer loans on jewelry. We are "The name you know, the name you trust." STUDENT WINS NAVY SCHOLARSHIP

John Hamann, a Northville resident and 2001 graduate of Detroit Catholic Central High School, received a scholarship issued by the U.S. Navy and will be attending the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Hamann said he has been accepted to the College of Engineering at the university and will be a part of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

John Hamann

The scholarship will cover the costs of tuition, books and lab fees. Room and board expenses are not covered. After graduation, Hamann said he would be a commissioned officer in either the U.S. Navy or the Marine Corp.

Hamann said it has been a life-long ambition to be in the military. "It's always been something I've been interested in," he said, adding that he eventually aims to become a flight officer. "I always knew I wanted to be a pilot."

During high school, Hamann played football, was involved with track and field and was a member of the National Honor Society.

AMERMAN SPACE MISSION

A fourth and fifth grade class at Amerman Elementary are conducting a space event called Amerman Space Mission. The mission is going to be held in the Amerman Courtyard from June 5-June 9.

The team will make a spacecraft, or room that looks like the inside of a spacecraft out of cardboard and other materials. There will be several blastoffs. On the targeted planet, the astronauts will conduct experiments and tests, while another group of kids will conduct the same tests on Earth. The team will have a debriefing ceremony on Monday, June 11.

Two groups will include mission control and astronauts. The astronauts will do tests and experiments on the planet. Mission control will keep contact with the astronauts and offer instructions.

Amerman Space Mission will include tours of the areas around the planet, tours to see what mission control does, a chance to see the experiments they are doing on Earth and possibly a chance to talk to the astronauts after their landing on Earth. The last blastoff will be on Friday and about six astronauts and a team of mission control will stay overnight doing their jobs.

CAR CRASH SIMULATION

Members of the SADD organization at Northville High School are planning to host a simulated car crash during the last week in September to remind students about the dangers of drinking and driving. Representatives from SADD are looking for volunteers to donate their time and materials for the event.

The group is in need of a towing company or a junkyard to donate a wrecked car that has had all the fluids drained in order to be safely used for the demonstration. Members of the local police and fire departments are slated to participate as well as representatives from the Midwest Med Flight in Ypsilanti, local paramedics and ambulances. Organizers also hope to arrange abbreviated funeral services for the simulated victims.

Four students are expected to participate in the simulated drunk driving accident to show the consequences of drinking and driving.

Interested participants are asked to call Carolyn Miranda, student assistant coordinator, at Northville High School at (248) 344-8420.

2001 GRAD WINS HONORS

Tom Hoeg, a 2001 graduate of Detroit Catholic Central High School and Northville resident, has been recognized as a National Merit Finalist. He will be attending the Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland this fall. Hoeg has received a full tuition scholarship to Case Western Reserve University as well as a national merit scholarship. He plans to study engineering and physics.

While in high school, some of the events Hoeg participated in include theater, National Honor Society, Michigan Math League and Science Olympiad.

He also said that his high school years seem to have flown by and stressed participating in school activities.

"When you first start high school you think it's going to go really slowly, but it goes by so fast," he said. "You should try to get involved as much as you can and make some memories."

Northville, Detroit pupils exchange bilingual mail

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

Students from Maybury Elementary in Detroit recently visited Northville's Amerman Elementary as part of a pen-pal project established between the two schools.

The two schools had been sending correspondence in a partnership alliance designed to form new friendships and promote the development of foreign language skills. Students practiced both their Spanish and English skills as they conversed back and forth. "There's such a benefit on both ends," said Rose McDougall, a Spanish teacher at Amerman Elementary.

Students from both schools gathered in the gymnasium for picnic-style lunches and conversations. Some Maybury students had very limited English speaking abilities, which prompted students to work together so that could learn from each other.

McDougall said the project began in December and was quite a success.

She said it was rewarding seeing her students try to speak a foreign language to their new pen pal.

"I have never seen them try so hard," said McDougall. "It had so much to do with personal investment. It wasn't just classroom learning. It was an extension of the classroom. They were working with kids in their age range."

She definitely plans to do activity again.

"It was incredible how excited they were," she said.

Students were busy breaking down language barriers, exchanging addresses and phone numbers and forming friendships that afternoon.

"They can learn so much from each other," said McDougall. "It was incredible. When the (Maybury) kids were leaving, they didn't want to leave. The Amerman kids were eager to see them again."

Lunch was provided for all of the kids. The Amerman PTA and the room mothers from the Amerman classes provided drinks and desserts.

Arnie dedicates township course

Golf legend Palmer tees off in style at new Northville Hills Golf Club

By LON HUUMAN
STAFF WRITER

Nothing better than having a world famous golf legend chip off the grand opening celebration of a new golf course club.

On June 4, Toll Brothers, Inc. hosted Arnold Palmer at the grand opening celebration of the Northville Hills Golf Club. The Northville Hills golf course was designed by Palmer and his Palmer Course Design Company. The grand opening was attended by area business and community leaders, real estate professionals, homeowners and prospective homeowners.

"I thought it would be brisk out this morning, but you people don't seem to mind the weather," Palmer said to the invitation-only crowd that gathered to see him give a golf demonstration as well as some instructional tips while he was hitting golf balls at the course driving range. Palmer then went on to play nine holes to officially open the course.

Northville Hills is a 7,003-yard, par 72 Palmer-signature golf course that is located on Five Mile Road between Beek and Sheldon Roads in Northville Township. The Palmer Course Design Company is a complete worldwide golf course planning and design organization with over 250 active projects and open golf courses, which cover 36 states and 20 countries. Palmer said he truly enjoyed designing fun and challenging golf courses.

"All of the great courses blend in naturally with the existing environment," Palmer said. "We respect and try to preserve the existing terrain and environment on every course as much as it will allow us to do so and still stay within the framework of playability. Put simply, we do not force or design unnecessary grade work or features."

Palmer's company executive vice-president and chief operating officer Ed Seay said the unique layout of Northville Hills brings to play all that Michigan golf has to offer. Seay said the course incorporates the native woodlands, natural wetland areas, lakes and rolling slopes of "Michigan heather." Seay said the course ranges from 5,166 yards to a challenging, yet enjoyable 7,003 yards with expansive fairways, enormous greens, multiple tees for every type of player.

"Hopefully all of our courses are different," Seay said. "We do not have a design trademark, nor do we want one. We do, however, strive to design all of our courses so that they are beautiful, constructed soundly within the budget and are fun to play."

Northville Hills marketing director Christina Julian said in addition to the world-class course, Northville Hills is also a private community featuring single family estate and fairway homes. It will also have summer villa homes built and opened in 2002. Julian said, Homes range in size from 2,600 to 4,300 square feet, with starting prices currently ranging from the high $300,000's to over $1 million. Julian said the estate decorated model homes, the Somerset Williamsburg and Harvard Federal, and the fairway homes, the Stratton Federal and Milburn Federal, are now open.

"Combining Toll Brothers homes and the expertise of Mr. Palmer and the Palmer Course Design Company creates an exceptional match allowing both home buyers and avid golfers to enjoy the unparalleled lifestyle of Northville Hills Golf Club," project manager Bill Bye said.

Julian said the club also features a 10,000 square foot clubhouse appointed with amenities from a full-service pro-shop and expansive men's and women's locker rooms to dining facilities and lounge. The club also has a swim and fitness complex.

Northville Hills is the second Toll Brothers project in the Northville/Novi area.

Police Reports

NORTHVILLE CITY POLICE REPORTS

MDOP AT OLD VILLAGE: Old Village School supervisor Arthur Fischer said malicious destruction of property on the school grounds has become a popular thing in the last several months. According to a Northville city police report, Fischer said there have been three incidents in the last several months of ornaments and other items in the school's courtyard being destroyed and stolen.

He told city police that the suspects have been engaging the destructive acts over the weekends. The latest incident had the base of a cement bird bath broken and two of the baths are missing. In addition, a bird house was damaged and large tree limbs were broken off as well as a variety of flowering plants were trampled upon, Fischer said.

The city police as well as the school said they will be keeping a closer lookout for suspects in the future.

OUIL: After being informed by the parents of her boyfriend that she had been drinking alcohol, a woman was pulled over May 29 for driving while being intoxicated. According to the city police report, the woman, along with her boyfriend had been drinking and arguing the day she was arrested for OUIL and UBAL.

A city police officer stopped the woman at N. Center Street near Hill Street on the information provided by the man's parents. The parents informed the police that the woman was driving by their home and would not stop even though her boyfriend appeared to be attempting to get out of the vehicle. The city officer reported the smell of intoxicants from the vehicle and the woman's eyes appeared glassy and red.

When the officer asked the woman for her license and registration she said it wasn't her car. She finally produced a license after searching through her purse for several minutes. Before she performed the field sobriety tasks she told the officer that she already knew how because she had been pulled over recently for the same offense and that her lawyer would get her out of it again.

Her preliminary breathalyzer test registered a 0.12 percent. She was arrested and later released pending bond and sobriety.

NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP POLICE REPORTS

CIGARETTES AND WEAPONS: A 14-year-old Northville High School student was suspended

indefinitely and issued an appearance violation for possession of a dangerous weapon and possession of cigarettes. A physical education teacher informed township detective Mike Wildt that the student had a club in his back pack, which was described as being a broken shovel handle.

The student was also seen throwing away a pack of cigarettes. According to the township police report, the student said the club was for a science project, but later confessed that it was for protection against someone who he had heard was threatening to attack him. The student's parents were informed of the actions taken against their son.

GETAWAY: On May 30, a township police officer observed a vehicle bearing a stolen license plate make a wide right hand turn from southbound Haggerty Road onto Seven Mile Road. The vehicle then swerved onto the shoulder twice. The township officer reported observing a black Eagle Taken following closely behind the vehicle and it seemed to be following the vehicle.

The officer finally stopped the first vehicle when it turned into American House. As the officer exited the vehicle, the suspects abruptly took off, squealing the car's tires in the process. As the driver fled, he failed to yield to the officer's lights and siren. The township officer lost sight of the vehicle around Newburgh Road and informed Livonia police of the situation. Livonia failed to apprehend the vehicle.

GETAWAY, Pt. II: According to a township police report, an unknown male and female stole four bottles of liquor from Farmer

Jack supermarket on Haggerty Road on May 31. The report said the two suspects concealed the bottles in their jackets before exiting the store and leaving in an unknown direction while driving a red Ford Explorer.

BAHAMA BOOZIN': A 20-year-old Bloomfield Hills male was issued a OUIL citation after running a red light onto northbound Haggerty Road. The reporting township officer said the man's eyes were red and his vehicle smelled of intoxicants. The man said he had a few drinks earlier at Bahama Breeze.

His preliminary breathalyzer test registered a 0.15 percent and the man was arrested. He was later released on bond and sobriety.

Cops drop the hammer on construction theft suspect

By LON HUUMAN
Staff Writer

Not in my neighborhood, said one Northville resident.

With an ever-growing community, there are plenty of home construction sites with very expensive equipment and materials being used. Many times the equipment and materials will be stored overnight for the next day of work and this gives criminals an opportunity to rob the site, that is if the neighborhood residents don't report any wrong doing first.

"It's important that residents understand that they're our eyes and ears in many cases," Northville Township police chief John Werth said. "This particular case was solved because one resident made the outstanding decision to call us right away after seeing a situation they believed was odd and out of place."

The suspect, a 41-year-old man from the Wixom area, was seen loading bags of mortar into his truck around 7:30 p.m. on May 16 by an area resident of Lochmoor Circle, which is located near Six Mile and Beck Roads. The scene of the robbery was a construction site of the Robertson Brothers Construction Company. According to Werth, the suspect is a construction worker who had been doing a side job in the area.

"Many times we do not receive a call from residents on a suspicious situation until it is too late, but this time the resident called us immediately," Werth said. "The resident got the license plate number as well as a detailed vehicle description. That made the difference in apprehending the suspect."

Township police officers received the essential information from dispatch on the suspect and caught up with him at the Mobil gas station at Six Mile and Haggerty Road. The man was arrested for larceny and placed into police custody. In custody and after further questioning, the man confessed to larcenies of three other Northville construction sites as well as four Novi sites.

According to the township police report, stolen scaffolding ladders from a previous Northville larceny was recovered as well as a two-wheel cement mixer from a Novi construction larceny.

"I'm impressed that the Robertson Brothers Construction Company is aggressively pursuing the charges," township police detective Paul Sumner said. "Many times that is not the case, but the supervisor and company understands the importance in not letting someone get away unpunished."

Werth said calls from residents do not go unheard, but are welcome.

"We want good communication with residents and when a resident observes something he or she thinks is suspicious, it's better to be safe rather than sorry," Werth said. "It's key that a person contacts us as soon as possible."

The suspect is due in the 35th District Court in Plymouth on June 5.

— only $5,000 — for him to acquire the Main Street station. He managed the Main Street station for seven years before moving into the present location, which has been in operation for the last 44 years.

"There was an old wooden building here before this station was built," Asher said. "The former owner did not want to move into the new building, so I took a hold of the opportunity and moved my operation to our current location."

His son Rick eventually took over the management responsibilities after 38 years of his father running the family business and he has been in charge ever since with his sons Mathew and Chris assisting him at the full service station. Rick said their station is an original and stands out from the self-serve stations.

their vehicle while we basically check everything from the tires to the windshield wiper fluid," Rick said. "We can even give the two kids in the back seat a sucker." Bill Asher said everyone else has changed except them, and the most significant change the Asher family has observed throughout the 50 years of service were the vehicles their customers were driving. Mathew Asher said vehicles may change even more in the future, citing electric powered vehicles as a possibility, but he added that they will always need repairs.

"Asher Citgo will always be around as long as there is a need for us and I doubt there will be a lack of work any time soon," Mathew Asher said. "As long as we keep on doing what we do right our customers will be satisfied."

To celebrate their anniversary the Ashers will be giving away gifts, such as sport bottles, Frisbees and balloons, to their customers' kids, as well as having a free prize drawing with such prizes as a scooter, kid's bikes, television/VCR combo, pre-paid gas cards and 30 piece Napa tool set. The gift and prize celebration will be happening from today through Saturday and registration is free.

"The celebration is really geared toward our customer's children, so there are many free gifts we will be giving out to them," Rick Asher said.

Arrowhead Alpines

With Michigan's largest selection of Perennials, Woodland Wildflowers, Unusual Ferns, Rare Alpines, Dwarf Conifers, Unusual Shrubs

We have finally wrapped up the shipping season and madly setting up for visitors, we are open, finally, but are still in the midst of setup. It takes awhile to move such a huge volume of plant materials out of our retail area and we hope you will be patient, we are re-doing our shade area so we can display a much wider array of shade plants. Our stock changes continuously throughout the season as we continue to bring new plants out to the retail area; there simply isn't enough room to display everything (it's our clever ploy to make you return frequently). As one of the largest rare plant growers in the country, we are confident you will find enough cool stuff and we understand the "I need one of each" addiction, it's impossible to see everything in a single day. Indeed the diversity can be a bit overwhelming, study the catalog carefully or check out the website arrowheadalpine.com, perhaps bring a few reference books, and start your quest to find the plants you have previously only dreamed of growing. Hellebores, Primulas, Hostas, Trilliums, rare woodlanders, anemone ferns, incredible rock plants, dwarf conifers, rare flowering shrubs, and a huge selection of perennials; we offer many things that can be found nowhere else. It's no surprise that when the Chicago Botanic Gardens wanted plants for their "Rare Affairs" plant auction (black tie, run by Christie's and very elite) they sent a truck to Arrowhead and spent two days loading treasures.

Apartment face more city regulations under proposal

The city council, excluding Hartshorne, countered by stating that the city has received tenant complaints regarding rental buildings that are not up to code, which possibly makes the buildings unsafe to live in. The council also said many rental property owners do not live in the rental property and they may not always be concerned with life and safety issues.

According to city manager Gary Word, the inspection program was first introduced in last year's budget hearings and was initiated by tenant complaints. It was discussed again this year with an estimated $9,000 being appropriated to the building and fire departments for the program. Mayor Chris Johnson said this year the city will further discuss and debate the program, which in turn meant setting aside of funds for the program. Bodnar said the city has been working on an inspection ordinance for the last five months.

"Nothing is imminent and we cannot go forward until our new plumbing, electric, heating and cooling codes are in place," Word said. "I believe this is something we should explore. Many cities already have programs similar to the one we will propose to the council in the future."

Word said the possible implementation of the proposed rental registration and inspection program would be performed in conjunction with the required fire, health/life safety and/or building and property maintenance inspections performed by an independent contractor. According to Word, the cost and administration of the program would be shared with the fire department.

Word said the program will probably not be totally self-supporting because it is considered a public safety issue, requiring there to be an allocation of funds in the last two budgets, but there is projected revenue to be collected by using a fee schedule for the inspections that could be required every two years. Word said the program is in the very early stages and the proposed required inspections could change from two years to three or even one.

"One aspect in moving forward with the program would be forming a community group to review the proposals," Word said. "The group would be made up of city officials, landlords, tenants and residents."

According to Word, the projected fee schedule for every two-year inspections would be $55 for single family dwellings, $85 for two family dwellings and $100 for multiple family dwellings, which would have a base fee of $55 plus $25 per additional unit. Word said the revenue is based on a total of 200 rental units that divides into 125 single-family dwellings, 50 two-family dwellings and 25 multiple-family dwellings.

"If you checked any home in the city, it would most likely not meet the highest required code," Bodnar said. "Landlords would be forced to spend a lot of money on keeping up with the inspections and in turn it might force the landlord to sell the rental property."

The potential sale of a rental property causes the issue of Proposal A to be examined closer, Bodnar said. At present, or before a rental property is sold, the individual rental property's tax base is the lesser of 5 percent or equal to inflation. However, if the property is sold, then the taxable value is reset at 50 percent of the true cash value or sale price. Bodnar said the issue of selling the rental property could be one offshoot of the potential implementation of the program.

"We will definitely have a number of public hearings, public notices and possibly study sessions throughout the development

A living museum, the village was built on land donated to the city of Northville by the Ford Motor Co. Once the site of a grist mill, the village consists of a church, gazebo, school, rustic wooden bridge, blacksmith shop, interurban station, and several homes reminiscent of an era gone by.

Quietly, Handley seeks seat on board munity and improving the level of education.

Furthermore, Handley said she would like to investigate initiating a later start time at the high school.

"A later start for high school would have to be a cooperative effort with a lot of school districts," she said. "It's something that's been on the horizon. We're just in the beginning stages. Truly nothing has been set in place at this point. It would really be a change for many people — we need to learn more about before we make a definite stand on it."

Handley said she has enjoyed serving and being a part of the school board.

"It was extremely interesting being the vice president this year," she said.

After the election, board members may shuffle their appointed seats.

"In mid-June we start talking about the officers for the upcoming year," said Handley. "The first board meeting in July is where the nominations and the voting take place."

Handley said the ability to switch positions is a positive attribute to the board.

"The idea we may rotate offices — it enriches everybody," she said. "Everybody brings to the table different perspectives. That's a healthy opportunity to give to people. It truly does give us the opportunity to grow in our perspectives."

Other aspirations include seeing the approval of the $26 million dollar school bond, she said.

"I just want to see some of the projects come to completion and try to move the district forward," said Handley. "I'd love to see the new elementary start and see the addition to the high school."

Handley also said she is looking forward to another exciting year in the fall and the many projects on the horizon.

"We will be off and running," she said. "It is so very exciting what the future could hold for the district."

Stewart gives look at state-school relations

By JENNIFER NORRIS
Staff Writer

A classroom of juniors and seniors at Northville High School had the opportunity to meet and chat about educational issues with State Rep. John Stewart on Monday.

Stewart, R-Plymouth, visited a group of upperclassmen in Jean Calabrese's classroom and addressed several educational hot buttons in Michigan. Calabrese teaches sociology and economics at the high school level.

During his presentation, Stewart spoke on the caliber of the Northville school district, how schools receive funding and how much money is allotted for various districts. He also spoke on the subjects of vouchers, charter schools, home-schooling and provided information on schools of choice.

Emphasizing Northville's high test scores, he praised the district's academic standing.

Lauren Phillips, senior at

"I thought it was really impressive that he would come in."

Lauren Phillips
NHS senior

Northville High School, said Stewart's visit to the high school was informational for her.

"I thought it was really impressive that he would come in," said

Phillips. "You don't get to see [officials] often. I actually got something out of it."

She said she learned how different kinds of schools are funded and also learned what the government's role is in education.

"He talked a lot about other school systems," said Phillips. "He talked a lot about how Northville is seen publicly in regards to other schools in Michigan. I really had no idea that we were that good."

Students also recently studied a unit investigating how education has the ability to impact the future of a society.

Calabrese said Stewart's visit to her classroom not only allowed students to meet their representative but offered a chance for them to hear his views and have their questions on education issues answered.

Our fundamental purposes are to enhance the lives of our readers, nurture the home towns we serve and contribute to the business success of our customers.

Rental regulations may be too much

The saying goes like this: If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

On the other hand, if it is broke, then it should be fixed.

Which theory applies in the case of Northville landlords and the properties they maintain? That's a tough one to answer at this stage of the game, which is why we think city officials should proceed with caution into the possibility of adding rental inspections to its regulatory processes.

Ask anyone who's rented an apartment before, and chances are there's been at least one dwelling along the way with a leaky roof or drippy ceiling that won't be repaired, despite numerous calls to the complex's management. We'd venture to guess that there are probably a few such instances of that "we'll-get-to-it-later" method of doing business here in Northville, as well.

But with numerous safety inspections already made standard fare for city housing, we wonder exactly what can be gained (besides added financial burden to landlords) with added regulations on the books.

City councilman Kevin Hartshorne last week stood alone, as he frequently does, in opposing such regulations, saying that the purpose of such a program to be developed had not been adequately defined.

Landlord Ron Bodnar chimed in with his own set of concerns.

"The idea of an inspection program seems redundant to me," Bodnar said. "Why set up the program when there are already standards in place?"

Mr. Bodnar and Mr. Hartshorne both raise interesting points, and ones we believe the rest of the Northville city council, as well as the city's building department, should take into consideration before implementing any additional rules.

In fairness to the council, we can understand the basic precepts to the proposal: the city wants its residents, whether homeowners or renters, to have safe and comfortable housing. In and of itself, that's not a bad thing. A lot of communities wouldn't be as assertive in seeking to keep its pool of available housing in good condition. And every once in a while, we hear of extreme cases in other towns where landlords are all too eager to rake in that rent check on the first of the month, but are nowhere to be seen when a window is reported to have been busted out.

In those rare instances, shame on the landlords for not doing their jobs.

But we have to question the relative value in adding more paperwork and fees when mechanisms are apparently already in place to prevent such bad things from happening. Without some serious justification, we view this as an unnecessary layer of oversight and added paperwork that may prove to be too cumbersome and costly for landlords.

FOOTNOTE: (When expenses get excessive for apartment landlords, they may very well consider selling their property, thereby impacting the tax base in the community. With residents out of a home and the city scrambling to recover revenue, we wonder just how much the benefits would outweigh the consequences — or if they even would.)

Writers grateful for Genitti's lunch

We would like to take a moment to thank Genitti's Hole-in-the-Wall restaurant for all of their support and assistance over the past school year.

The First Friday Parent-to-Parent Coffees sponsored by the Council of PTAs found a home at Genitti's. Each "First Friday" morning, Genitti's specially opened their downstairs as a meeting place, furnished coffee and tea, and allowed parents to gather, listen to a speaker, and share networking/discussion time.

It has become a tradition with both the Northville High School PTSA and the Council of PTAs to gather for lunch at Genitti's after our monthly business meetings. Whether we had six parents or 20 we were always welcomed and graciously accommodated.

Perhaps this is part of the reason that we enjoy living in Northville — that willingness of our community to be helpful. We appreciate the great folks at Genitti's for making us always feel welcome.

Northville salaries can afford the bond

The paper is talking about a $26 million bond issue to finance new schools.

Last week we drove through the new Stonewater Subdivision and I couldn't believe all the new homes that have been built in the past two years.

The homes from $500,000 to over a million dollars have been going up like $12,000 row houses after World War II.

It is easy to see why we are in need of more schools.

We shouldn't worry about not passing the millage request if the new people get out and vote. I hate it when 15 percent to 25 percent of the voters decide the vote.

Everyone hates more taxes but common sense tells me to vote yes.

Last week I had to run home for a few minutes and when I drove by the new high school, I drove through the students parking lot.

I counted 70 Ford Explorers, Jeeps and Blazers that high school students drive to school.

If people can afford to let high school students drive $20,000 to $30,000 cars to school, I am sure they can vote yes on the new millage so the school board shouldn't be worried.

Congratulations to Interact Club

Congratulations to the Northville High School Rotary Interact Club. They organized and held a very successful "run" and a fund raiser for Children's International last Saturday, May 19.

This 5K run involved hundreds of participants and raised money for Health Care, Nutritional Rehabilitation, and Educational Opportunities. The money raised from this event will go to "Children's International."

Also, I admire and want to thank Sharon Whithello, who is the advisor for the Northville Rotary Club. It is worthwhile events like this which make the community of Northville a great place to live.

River condition has simple solution

Your article on the clean-up of the Rouge River reminded me of a serious problem in the middle of our home town. I'm speaking about the condition of the stream which runs through the Historic Mill Race Village. Last year I discussed this with a member of the Northville Record and the Northville manager. Both assured me they would look into it.

The village is used for historical tours, the Woman's Club meetings, the Garden Club meetings, other club meetings, and even weddings are conducted on the bridge over the stream. Last year, an international meeting was held there and the stagnant water was a disgrace to our community.

The solution to this problem is to let the water flow through the grate. Because of the problem with the waterwheel being shut down, the flow of water has been stopped. I observed last year that when the wheel was turning and the water was flowing, I could see the bottom of the stream. It is my opinion that the water could still flow under the wheel even though it is not operating.

If Northville could engineer a way to move the water over the stream, this stream could come alive again and add beauty to the Mill Race Village.

Keep Northville's Mill Race Village beautiful.

Student ads were a treat for many

What a treat it was to see such a grand story ("Student Adds Appear Today") in the May 24 Record. I was extremely impressed with the experience that third grade teacher, Beth Kurlik gave her students. It was a great idea to have her children interview the merchants and then do ads for their study of economics.

I commend the children on the originality of their ads and I commend the Record on the clarity of the children's artwork. What a thrill it must have been to see their work in print.

The merchants benefited as much as the children. The ads were well written and well illustrated.

I enjoyed reading the article written by Ms. Norris. It was a well done story. Thank you for sharing this with us.

Superintendent explains Novi bond

The purpose of this letter is to underscore the importance of the three ballot proposals presented to the residents of the Novi Community School District on June 11.

The extreme importance of each of the three proposals can be simply stated: The approval of each of the proposals is essential if the community expects the quality of the school district to remain at a high level. Let me explain why.

Proposal 1:
First, this proposal will provide additional space for our expanding student body, especially at the high school where enrollment is expected to grow from 1,650 to 2,400 students in the next 10 years (a 45 percent increase). Expansions and school improvements will also be made at Novi Woods, Orchard Hills, and Village Oaks.

Second, Proposal 1 will also allow the district to update and enhance the technology available for student use as an important learning tool in all of our schools.

Third, the proposal also allows for the enlargement of our warehouse building and transportation garage area to accommodate more buses. In addition, knowing that land is required for future student growth, this proposal will also pay for the land that was recently purchased by the school district.

Proposal 2:

Proposal 2 provides for a one-half mill for a dedicated sinking fund to be used solely for keeping our buildings and school sites in good repair. There are two reasons why this proposal is so important to the school district. The first reason is that we have over 25 percent more property to take care of because we have constructed two new buildings, and provided upgraded and additional playground and athletic facilities over the last several years. But more importantly, the second reason as stated in a recent Standard and Poor's report, is that over a three-year period, our state revenue per pupil has increased by only a total of 4.4 percent (an average of 1.5 percent per year). It is becoming extremely difficult to keep our building school sites in good repair when our annual state aid increases continue to be small. We believe it is important to protect and keep in good repair all of our buildings and sites for use by your children.

Proposal 3:

This proposal is perhaps the easiest for people to understand and accept because it represents no increase (yes, that is correct, zero increase) in homeowner taxes. The proposal simply allows the school district to continue levying 18 mills on business and commercial property in the school district, as provided by law. If the millage levy falls below 18 mills, because of the Headlee Impact, the state does not give us full state aid per pupil. As a result, Novi schools lost $250,000 in revenue this year and greater losses are projected for future years. The Headlee rollback in this proposal would allow us to receive full state aid and help maintain student programs.

As you can see by these explanations, each of the three proposals appearing on the ballot on June 11 is important to the school district for different reasons. Proposal 1 will provide space for your children; Proposal 2 will keep the building and sites in good repair; and Proposal 3 will allow the school district to receive full state aid for each pupil and help maintain our student programs.

The bottom line for the June 11 ballot proposals is this: All three proposals are extremely important for the Novi Community School District if we are to continue providing a quality education for your children. You, as school district residents, can individually make a difference.

Superintendent of Novi Schools

OTHER OPINIONS

Development has many sides

My home is along the M-14 corridor that links the suburbs of western Wayne County with the relatively undeveloped areas of Livingston and Washtenaw counties. Once placidly rural, signs of development are cropping up all over.

The rich guy from Oakland County has just moved into his 14,000-square-foot starter home at the end of the road, complete with a gatehouse and a jet d'eau and a pair of mute swans in his pond. A new subdivision — complete with an inviting picture of a country landscape at the entrance — is going in just north of two new and truly hideous big houses, complete with gingerbread on every available surface. And a local family proposes to rezone their 360-acre farm to develop it as a trailer park.

None of this is big news to anybody who has looked around recently. Dirt is being scraped everywhere you look, whether it's for a new subdivision or mall or merely a trophy mansion.

The pressure of development has led to much hand-wringing about "sprawl" and numerous mind-numbing discussions about how to combat it.

On the one hand are the pro-development folks, who never saw a development proposal they didn't like. Trumpeting slogans about private property rights and sneering at tree-huggers, they reflexively support any proposed development, preferably with a rationalized public subsidy "to gain revenue for the local tax base."

This val-sal thing is getting crazy

I'm sorry to spring this one on the eve of high school commencements, but I can't hold this one in any longer.

I graduated from Novi High in 1992. (BOO HISS BOO HISS) Okay. Now that we've got that out of the way...

Around May of that year, we learned that right around nine of my peers would be named valedictorians of the graduating class. Jaws dropped like math books at the end of sixth hour.

Nine valedictorians?!? What gives? Is this some kind of a joke?

No. It wasn't. There were nine valedictorians and a couple more salutatorians. (In case you're wondering, I wasn't one of them. I was a three-point-three through high school. Nothing great, nothing terrible, either. I did what I could and that was about it. College was about the same thing.)

Fast-forward to last Friday afternoon. I learn that Novi's graduating class of 2001 will have 26 valedictorians, as well as 12 salutatorians. You can imagine the look on my face.

At the risk of sending parents and students a plenty on a "Davis Must Be Tied And Quarantined" letter-writing crusade, I'll go on record as saying that when school districts permit the title of "valuedictorian" to be bestowed on

My take on our love with SUVs

You see them everywhere in our town these days. No, I'm not talking about an empty Starbucks' coffee cup or a "twener" with the latest in Britney Spears' fashion stylings.

They are large, box-like, are taller than most NBA centers, and can be just as temperamental. The fact of the matter is that you can't help but notice them as you can't see AROUND these things and you can't swing a dead cat in either a Northville or Novi parking lot without hitting one.

I'm talking about the bane of the modern driving existence that are single-handedly assuring all oil and petroleum company CEO's and stockholders a very rosey financial future, the gargantuan that ton-for-impact-ton provide more excitement and challenge for emergency personnel faced with the task of extricating people whose autos unfortunately got in their way.

Yes, I speak of the sport utility vehicle. They're something that's been on my econo-car driving mind for sometime now. I'm not even talking about the predecessors of today's monsters; forget about your meager Ford Broncos, Chevy Suburbans and

John Helder

Jeep Cherokees, I'm talking about the steel-storid infused creations like the Ford Excursion, Cadillac Escalade and their smaller but significant cousin the Dodge Durango.

I grew up in a time of America's continuing love affair with the car and its unfortunate clash with an OPEC oil embargo. I remember in the early 1970s my father wondering aloud if he'd be able to find enough gas to get his family to their needed destinations. In these days, lines snaked for blocks from our friendly gas stations (their motto in those days: "What the heck does 'Self-serve' mean?") and for awhile you could only get gas on odd or even days, depending on the numeral your license plate ended in, and there were "gasless Sundays".

A certain sense of mindfulness of one's transportation needs took hold in America. Did we really need to get in the ol' '75 Dodge Duster to drive the three blocks to the local 7-Eleven to get a Slurpee? Heady times indeed.

Couple this with that decade's coal-miners' strike that promised to limit electricity production and a minor-league conservationist is born. Not an "I'm going off the grid" and raising my own organic sludge miles away from any civilization-type. Just your run-of-the-mill concerned mindful user of resources.

The oft-maligned SUV has skillfully found its way into American psyche and garage. God bless Motown's auto lobbying efforts in the federal government for being able to keep these "light trucks" on our nation's

On the other side are anti-development folks who never saw a development they didn't hate. Chanting slogans about preserving farmland and green space, they fight losing battle after losing battle as sprawl encroaches daily on diminishing rural areas.

Caught in the middle are local governments, especially zoning authorities, who have master plans and an obligation to follow them but who are terrified of being sued to the breaking point should they deny developers the rezoning or use permits they seek.

Here are three starting points for a common-sense approach to this tangled subject.

Plainly, neither the automatic pro-development nor the reflexive anti-development position can contribute much to useful discussion of this issue. A constructive re-framing might be for everybody to recognize that in many areas growth is inevitable, so the discussion really ought to revolve around how best to manage the growth that is certain to come. For example, my friend, former state Senator Lana Pollock, who runs the Michigan Environmental Council, talks sensibly about "smart growth" — meaning managed growth.

Michigan's Constitution puts a big barrier in the way. We are a "home rule" state, which means in practice that municipalities and, especially, townships, are free to adopt whatever zoning ordinances they wish, regardless of what their immediate neighbors happen to do. That means that a 200-acre shopping mall can be plunked down next to a determinedly rural township, and there's nothing anybody can do about it.

House Speaker Rick Johnson, by backing a farmer from northern Michigan, has proposed a series of measures that would coordinate planning among neighboring government units. He deserves a lot of credit for willingness to break loose from a mind-set that places private self-interest over community values. While the Legislature is looking at that suggestion, some attention should also be that many students, it cheapens the overall value of the term "valuedictorian."

Don't let me be misunderstood, folks. Academic success means a lot to me, and it should mean a lot to the students who bust their rear ends to knock out A's in the tough courses. To the ones who grind it out in the classroom, hats off. You deserve the accolades.

But let's refer to the dictionary for a moment, shall we?

valuedictorian (n) — The student with the highest academic rank in a class who delivers the farewell statement at graduation.

If we believe the dictionary definition to be true, then we've got a problem.

You see, not every one of the 26 student named as valuedictorians can have the highest academic rank. That honor belongs to one person.

Which one? you ask. They all four-pointed. This is where things get awfully, awfully messy, so brace yourselves. Ready?

If a school district has multiple perfect GPAs — a legitimate reality in this day and age — then it's time for the school districts to either a) simply acknowledge the students collectively as graduating Summa cum laude, or b) subjectively look at non-academic criteria and determine which single student most closely exemplifies the best student and person of the graduating class.

The way I see it, if this proliferation of valuedictorian titles isn't slowed down sometime soon, the title "valuedictorian" to a student will mean about as much as "UL Approved" does for electrical products: it either bears the label, or it's a complete disaster.

Would it be too much to ask for high achievers to be acknowledged as a group? Or given to immunizing zoning boards against frivolous lawsuits brought by deep-pocketed developers when things don't go their way.

Lastly, there are certain areas of the state that simply should be preserved from development. The Michigan Nature Conservancy, at 31,000 members one of the largest conservation organizations in the state, is in the process of unveiling a program that prioritizes threatened eco-systems according to hard scientific analysis. The Conservancy works with landowners who wish to place a "conservation easement" on their property, thereby preventing development for all time. It also helps fund outright land purchases and find conservation buyers who are prepared to buy and protect threatened areas.

Obviously, issues of sprawl are complicated, intensely local and often very difficult to resolve. They deserve higher priority in Michigan's public policy and political circles, if only because they affect so profoundly the intimate details of how we all live our lives.

Phil Power is a member of the board of the Michigan Nature Conservancy and chairman of HomeTown Communications Network Inc., the company that owns this newspaper. He welcomes your comments, either by voice mail at (734) 953-2047, ext. 1880, or by e-mail at ppower@homecomm.net.

If a school district has multiple perfect GPAs — a legitimate reality in this day and age — then it's time for the school district to make some tough decisions about how it wants to recognize the achievement.

what about examining things like community service and character qualifications, to search for the shining example of not only the brightest, but the best of Novi? I don't think so, but then, I'm neither a parent nor a student. I'm some guy who thought the situation in his own graduating class was a bit silly, and now looks at the graduates in the on-deck circle and just shakes his head.

We had nine vals back in 1992. Almost 10 years later, we've got 26. If the current rate of valuedictorian sprawl continues, I bet we'll have around 81 valuedictorians for the class of 2011. When will it stop?

There are plenty of smart kids in Novi (as well as here in Northville, where that val-sa game isn't played), and to those who'll be wearing a cap and gown (and honor cords, might I add), congratulations. You deserve a salute for your hard work.

If you want your efforts to continue to carry weight down the road, though, it's important that the district that educated you for the last four years rethink its honors policy.

may I suggest one to two things: A visit to a cosmetic surgeon to, ah, enhance yourself in that special area that you're feeling deficient in, OR a series of sessions with a skilled therapist who can help you overcome those deep-seated feelings of inadequacy and your poor self-esteem.

Tammy S., 28, and an avid outdoorsperson says: "I like being able to go just anywhere with my SUV. Poorly-maintained and snow-filled roads are no match for its four-wheel abilities."

Tammy, my friend: Having a vehicle that weighs more than your average elephant — even equipped with four-wheel drive capabilities — only means that you can get stuck in more and more remote areas; SUV-ers like you will do 99% of your driving on paved surfaces. More intrepid mindsets will venture their 1984 Chevy Chevelles down rutted, muddied two-tracks up north and go far further than you due to their extraordinary, time-tested driving skills and innate chutzpah.

Dirk Smedley, a 30-something white collar worker from Berkley says: "I love the extra space you get in your typical SUV. I'm almost 5'10" and really enjoy the extra ten feet of head and leg room. Your average car seems so cramped by comparison."

My Dear Dirk: You silly, silly man. Sure you've got more leg room. Who wouldn't driving in a shed-on-wheels? I know America is still a democracy (Author's note: may not apply in the U.S.A. after November 2000) and that you can drive whatever someone will build you...but Dirk, do you need that extra room? Are you going to do yoga stretchings as you zoom down I-898? Or custom design and build some new kitchen cabinetry?

Melvin Lethargy of Wyandotte opines: "I like my sport utility vehicle because it's a safe, steady ride and will protect me in case of a crash."

Melvin, sure your SUV will protect you in case of a crash. But what will happen TO YOU when the Big Three begin producing vehicles based on the Bradley Assault Vehicle chassis with the optional 30 mm anti-car canon? You'll be caught in an arms-race like effect! Augggh! You'll have to add armor plating to your SUV and hope for the best. Survival of the fittest, baby.

Which brings us to the nightmarish summer of 2001 and the repeat of last year's high gasoline prices. If those driving SUVs or light trucks need another reason to give up on their gas-addictive monsters it may be the fact that to fill up their 35 gallon tanks they'll soon need to re-mortgage their homes.

Although I wish no personal malice or inconvenience to the drivers of these over-sized land yachts believe me my friends; there are more than just a few of us who are cheering on the dramatic rise at the gaspumps.

Shout, we will to those gasoline prices: Go! Go! Higher and higher!

Volunteers pitch in to help hurting creek

John Bueter and representatives of the Mid-Michigan Fly-fishers' Assoc. were on hand to teach people how to catch a few of the trout.

Jim Hodgins, hosting more than two dozen volunteers at his property along Johnson Creek, which eventually flows into the Rouge system, found plenty to do and many excited people to help him with it.

"We were looking for help today," said Hodgins, who's lived along the stream for more than 25 years. "We've learned a lot about the river system in that time such as what kind of creatures and birds and plants should be here. It's been fun for us."

At the Hodgins' property, under the supervision of Matt Best with the Wayne County Department of Environmental Watershed Management Division, volunteers in raingear and waders hit the water and streambanks to help in stabilization of the water's flow.

Best directed efforts in three main areas: soft engineering or bundled facines, adding woody debris to the river to help direct its flow in as non-eroding a manner as possible and increasing the riparian zone near the water system to give the stream's water areas to dissipate when floods occur.

Jim Quinn, left, and Don Levens wrestle an eight-foot section of log into place along the inside of a bend of Northville's Johnson Creek last Saturday. The log helps soften water currents in bends, their vegetation and then tied in bundles, or facines, and then planted a foot deep along the river's bank on the Hodgins' property. The facines will then plant themselves and grow bank-stabilizing trees to prevent excess run-off from entering Johnson Creek.

"This is the first time I've participated in an effort like this," said Best. "We need to learn how we can best protect this resource and it's great to see people helping out and having fun. I'm having a blast."

Looking at the busy, muddy river-protectors around him Best added: "If we can protect streams and keep them the way they are now, maybe we can go back and fix their other more serious problems another time."

In an effort to help minimize streambank erosion volunteers Don Levens and Jim Quinn dragged an eight-foot section of hardwood tree to a bend in the creek and helped to secure firmly in place it by wires and stakes.

Elsewhere, red flags noted where others had planted dozens of cedar, willow, silky and red osier dogwood trees along a flood plain to help provide more areas for water to enter the ground and to combat erosion.

Visiting Garden City resident, Friend of Rouge member and U-M Dearborn Environmental Studies' student Nicole Parys said she found the day "awesome," noting that she was amazed at the turnout as "usually it's hard to get volunteers on a rainy day."

As the rain-swollen creek moved along below and workers continued in their efforts to help keep it as vital as possible, Parys said, "This kind of streambank restoration is new and maybe in doing this we can bring people to understand that this is the best way to bring nature back to the city."

District: smaller classes warrant more building an Elementary. On top of that, the district is requesting fiber optic cabling to the new elementary school and the establishment of a redundant loop to complete the district's technology structure. With a boom in elementary enrollment figures, Northville's five elementary schools are hunting for space to accommodate the amount of growth. School officials believe the best way to handle the surging numbers of elementary students is to construct a sixth elementary school as well as build additions on to existing buildings. "They desperately need the space," said superintendent Leonard Rezmiarski. He said while level of growth can bring new opportunities, the issue of capacity limits must be addressed to maintain a high level of instruction for each student. "It's exciting because of what all this means to us," said Rezmiarski. "We're honored people are moving in to the community. We have to face the growth and plan accordingly." He also said the need to have another bond issue for the district came earlier than expected. Problems of availability could be rectified by simply raising the class size, said Rezmiarski, but a higher student-teacher ratio will only compromise the level of instruction students would receive. "A key factor is continued quality," he said.

Mustangs advance

Northville moves on to the regionals with two thrilling wins

By COLBY J. CAVALIERE
SPORTS WRITER

■ Carbutt is team's emotional leader. See page 2B.

Northville went into the 2001 soccer season with one goal in mind: treat each game one at a time, and never look too far ahead. After a series of 19 small battles through the season, the Mustangs won the district war.

On a stormy, rainy afternoon interrupted by two lightning breaks, Northville captured the Division 1, District 7 title when they beat Plymouth Salem 4-1 last Saturday. The win also avenged the Mustangs' only loss of the season, a 1-0 defeat at the hands of Rocks on April 9.

"It was a real nail-biter for a good part of the game, and the score doesn't indicate how close it was," said Northville coach Ron Meteyer.

Early on the Mustangs looked at home in the wet conditions, as they mounted an early attack that yielded a goal by Michelle Maharant on a pass from Larissa Fill. But fittingly, a lightning delay stole some of the Mustangs' thunder as Salem came out of the break with renewed fury.

Luckily the flat Mustangs were able to hold off Salem until lightning interrupted the game once again. And like before, it was Salem who came out charged up, and this time they took advantage. With the Northville defense distracted with a foul call, the Rocks set up quickly, and fired a direct kick that found the back of the net to tie the game at 1-1 going into the halftime break.

Meteyer took the chance to lay into his team, and give them a warning.

"We read them the riot act at halftime, and warned them that Salem was a great team, and they would eventually take advantage of our poor play," he said.

The speech evidently fired up his team, as the Mustangs burst out and scored the go-ahead goal less than five minutes into the half when Maggie Ossola headed in a perfect direct kick by Lindsay Dunmead. Northville continued to control the game's pace, and with 21:34 left in the game they took a 3-1 lead. Defender Emily Carbutt smacked a direct kick into a marked Northville scored its third goal of the half on yet another set play, when Dunmead blasted a direct kick into the net from about 25 yards out with 11:19 left in the contest.

NORTHVILLE 1 LIVONIA STEVENSON 0

Before Northville could win a district championship, they had to win Round Three of the war with Stevenson. The Mustangs did just that, as they beat their rivals for the third time in three weeks by a 1-0 score on May 28 in the district quarterfinals.

Relying on his defense to blanket the Spartan attackers, Meteyer applied all of his resources to defending the net early on. As a result, the two teams played to a scoreless first half, where the Mustangs could only manage three shots on goal.

"Our strategy was to let them come at us, but deny them good shots. They did get off a few from far out, but they got nothing in close," Meteyer said.

In the second half, Northville switched gears and went on the attack, but it failed to yield them a goal. As the two teams slugged it out in the mud, it seemed that Stevenson was tiring. It was then that the Mustangs struck the fatal blow. Maggie Ossola sent a long pass up to Lindsay Dunmead.

Dunmead got a step on her defender, and that caused the Spartan goalie to move forward

"The win is a reaffirmation that we are the better team this year."

Ron Meteyer
Northville coach after beating Stevenson for the 3rd time this year

"It was a really great win for us and the program. When that last goal went in you could see our girls charge the field in jubilation, and their players fall to the ground crying. The win is just a reaffirmation that we are the better team this year," Meteyer said.

After winning the district, Northville faced off against 12-5-3 Dearborn Tuesday afternoon. With another win a meeting with the winner of the Ann Arbor Pioneer/Plymouth Canton game looms in the regional finals tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Novi.

Despite the best efforts of seniors like Bill Sallotte (above), the Northville baseball season came to an end with a 2-0 loss to Novi in the pre-districts. In his last game on the mound in a Mustang uniform, Tommy Hughes struck out 12 Wildcat batters.

Softball squad ends 2001 season with 14-12 mark

By COLBY J. CAVALIERE
SPORTS WRITER

A 2-0 loss to Novi in the pre-districts ended their season, but the Northville softball team had plenty to be proud of as they wrapped up a 14-12 2001 campaign by winning the Novi Invitational on May 26.

In Game One, the Mustangs rode the arm of senior Maureen Emaus to a 3-1 win over Harrison. The Kawamura sisters, Makiko and Fumiko, and senior Megan Karney scored the three runs.

Yet another conference opponent came calling, and like the first time, the Mustangs prevailed 3-1, this time over Livonia Churchill.

In the championship game, the Mustangs jumped out to a 3-0 lead after the first inning against Livonia Franklin. Northville would tack on another run later, but mental errors by the Mustangs would allow the Patriots to come back and tie the game 4-4 in the bottom of the seventh.

In the top of the eighth Makiko Kawamura came around to score, and Northville would hold on to win 5-4.

"We really needed that," said coach Kelly DeWitt. "After starting out the season so well, and slipping in the last few weeks of the season against teams we had already beaten, it was really nice that we were able to come in here and get some quality wins, and win the Invitational."

Emaus was dominant in the series, as she struck out 29 opponent batters.

The senior ended her career at Northville as the teams leader in on base percentage (.583) and strikeouts (138). Her numbers and leadership also earned her a place on the WLAA All-Conference Team.

Also in their final seasons as Mustangs are Makiko Kawamura, and Fumiko Kawamura. Fumiko earned All-Division, and finished tied with fellow senior Erin Banner for the team batting average lead (.318). Sister Makiko earned All-Division as well with a .310 average.

DeWitt sees next season as a growing year after losing Emaus, Banner, the Kawamuras, Kate Atty, Jennifer Brennan, Erin May, and Karney, but players like sophomore Lindsay Tomasak and a host of talented JV players should give DeWitt a competitive squad in 2002.

Boys' Track

Brandon Langston v. the state of Michigan.

Not the best odds, but Northville couldn't have chosen a better athlete to represent the school at the Division 1 boys state track finals last Saturday. Langston ran a time of 49.02, good for fourth in the 400m dash. The senior also qualified for the 100m dash, but didn't place. Had he been able to match his school record time of 10.66 in these finals, he could have been state champion, as the winner from West Bloomfield ran a 10.86.

WLAA MEET

Despite a very talented core of athletes, the Mustangs could only manage a seventh place finish at the WLAA meet on May 22. So goes the fate of teams in a conference such as the Western Lakes.

"We didn't run as many season best times as I had hoped, but the kids ran with everything they had. We were very weak in the field events, but that has troubled us all year long," said coach Eric Cunningham.

The day's best finishes belonged to Langston (third in 100m), Matt Cornelius (third in long jump), and the 800m and 3200m relay teams (third).

Other solid performances were turned in by Matt Foster (eighth, discus), the 400m relay team (fifth), and Ben Maxim and Robert Cameron who ran personal best times to finish sixth and seventh in the 300m hurdles. Mike Gabrys also did well with a personal best seventh place finish in the 1600m run.

"Mike Gabrys ran his PR and moved up into a scoring position in the mile. He showed his maturation as a runner this year and left with his sights set on moving up his position in the conference," Cunningham said.

Bill Dalton placed fifth in the 800m run with a time 2:01.2, and fellow senior Brian Bilyk placed fourth in the 3200m run with a time of 10:00.9.

"Brian Bilyk and Bill Dalton finished with great individual performances in their races. We as coaches have cherished our time with these dedicated athletes. They were excellent role models for their teammates with hard work ethics and great leadership abilities. We hope to have many more like them," said Cunningham.

Cunningham was happy with the way his team performed during an extremely competitive track season.

"We finished our season 2-3 in the conference and with very respectable finishes at our relay meets. We were very happy with the way our distance and sprint teams progressed and hope to continue next year with their success. Our field event teams worked very hard this season, but found ourselves outmatched. We hope to develop more strength in the offseason and return next year more competitive," he said.

Carbott is a rare breed

Talented athlete leads Mustangs in recognition and into playoffs, again.

Emily Carbott, Northville's senior defensive specialist soccer player, was recently voted to the WLAA All-Conference Team for the second year in a row.

Under the guidance of second-year coach Ron Meteyer and with leaders Carbott on defense, Alex Katona in goal and Lindsey Dunmead and Maggie Ossola at forward, the Mustangs in the last two seasons have a staggering record of 33-7-2 and this spring, have bested all but two of their opponents for a mark of 17-1-1.

As a defensive "sweeper back," Carbott has been utilized this year to move upfield on occasion and join the attack, and in doing so has nine goals and eleven assists.

Given those offensive-minded stats, Carbott has been asked to provide leadership in her specialties: hampering opponents' ball carriers and guiding the Mustangs' defensive efforts.

"She directs well and sees the field well," said girls varsity soccer coach Ron Meteyer. "Northville's been known for having a 'smothering defense'. We double (team) the ball carrier and Carbott leads us in doing that."

Good things, in Carbott's case, do come in small packages.

"She's deceptively quick and at 5'4" doesn't look like much, but she can pump those legs like pistons, turn on a dime and accelerate quickly," Meteyer said.

Carbott, a senior at Northville and heading off to MSU to play soccer on a scholarship, provides more than assists and goals. "She's the emotional leader on the team. She identifies with the kids' spirit," Meteyer said. "She's the one they turn to when they're having second thoughts about being able to beat a team."

During the 2001 season, the Mustangs have topped every state-ranked team they've gone up against - the same teams they were losing to last year.

After a trying personal year in 2000, Carbott has really bloomed on the field and cemented a good off-the-field friendship with keeper Katona. "They're going to be a tough pair to lose," noted Meteyer. "I'm glad I got to know her as a person this year."

Meteyer expects Carbott to be named, as she was last year, to the All-District and All-State teams. In addition to her conference selection.

Northville High School is losing Carbott, an athlete equally talented on the basketball court, to graduation and the Spartans but her value won't be forgotten by coach Meteyer.

"I guess if I were to make a prototype player to lead the defense and the team, Emily would be the model I'd use. I have a lot of respect for her."

Northville Spring Hockey Recap

Hockey Playoffs

Thursday night, May 24th, The 6th ranked Northville Varsity Spring Hockey team faced off against the 3rd ranked Farmington United Varsity in the first round of the spring league playoffs. Northville won 2-1. Ryan Hohl scored late in the first period, assisted by Aaron Bernstein. The 1-0 mark would hold through a close checking second period, and well into the third. Both teams were playing well, but the defensesmen on both sides were preventing any scoring chances from developing. Mid-way through the third period, Farmington scored to make it a 1-1 game. That's the way it would end after three periods of regulation time. But, ... this is the playoffs, and there has to be a winner. Nine minutes into the overtime period, Jeff Crawford captured the victory by snapping in a perfectly set up pass from Adam Zobl. Northville goes on to the next round, and Farmington goes home.

Round 2 of the Spring Varsity League playoffs was held Wednesday, May 30. Northville lost against the top ranked U of D Varsity, 7-1. Northville's lone goal came mid-way through the second period when Mike Fil slipped the puck from the side boards, over everyone's heads, to Jeff Crawford who was standing alone on the far side of the U of D goal. Before the U of D goalie had time to react, Crawford grabbed the puck out of mid-air, dropped it to his feet, and popped it in. At that point, the score was 4-1, but even this goal could not change the momentum of the game. U of D scored three more times in the third period, and moved on to the championship round.

Lavish Luxury

These homes are genuine works of art

By Annette Jaworski
SPECIAL WRITER

Part of the trend towards luxury building includes showcase communities with estate size lots and extravagant homes. Turnberry Estates in Northville is representative of the trend toward exclusive homes, worth a million dollars or plus. Their brochure calls it the ultimate setting of sophistication and solitude. It's a blend of luxury lifestyle, combined with privacy and accessibility in a unique package.

Each of the 19 lots is an acre or more in size. Exclusive builder for the development, John Richards Homes, offers homeowners base plans, however each of the seven base home plans can be customized to suite the homeowners needs. Custom homes are also found throughout the development.

"For homeowners that purchase here, it's more than a domicile, it's a work of art," said Judy Korby, Community Representative for Turnberry Estates.

The result is each home is the detail to attention given to custom homes. In the development, you'll see a variation of home styles, including classic with flair, European or traditional, with no two homes alike.

"It's a smaller community, more of a reflection of the way that communities used to be," said Korby.

Inside you'll find more about what luxury building is all about, such as dramatic two story foyers, with detailed windows. Formal areas are located in the front of the house, so the formal furnishings create a grand first impression. The floor of one model is a combination of limestone, granite with a hand cut finish, which is an upgrade available to homeowners. John Richards Homes offers a choice of marble, ceramic tile or oak hardwood as standard flooring. There is also a full view of the open stairway from the entry. Wrought iron rails give it a unique European look. The rail continues a wide bridge with an impressive view to the great room. Korby notes the wrought iron is a popular upgrade here.

Nine or ten foot ceilings are found throughout the entire first floor. Crown moulding is standard throughout the first floor as well. The library on display featured built in maple bookcases for an elegant traditional look.

In building these homes, many of the features that are upgrades with other builders are included with the John Richards Homes, she notes. Some base plans come with up to three fireplaces. Powder rooms and master suite baths come with marble countertops. A recent model features barrel ceilings accented by curved windows in the master bath area. A Mariposa platform whirlpool tub comes standard in the master bath.

The dining area contains a butler's pantry to make entertaining and serving convenient. Granite and solid countertops are standard here and in the kitchen. The kitchen features custom Fieldstone cabinetry in oak, maple or white with raised panel design.

Flutter to Carousel Acres

Walk amongst the butterflies at new Green Oak business

By John Colling
Staff Writer

You can walk among 100 butterflies at Carousel Acres in Green Oak Township.

Or you can pet a pig.
Or a donkey.
Or a goat.

Maybe even an alpaca.

Carousel Acres, located at 12749 Nine Mile just east of Rushton Road, will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on weekends starting Saturday, June 16, the day of a gala Grand Opening Open House.

Proprietor Tammy Iaconelli promises pony rides, a petting zoo, and a visit to the butterfly house at the open house, all free to the public on that date.

The facility also will be open during the week by appointment for school, church, or other group visits.

"We've already had a few school groups in," says Iaconelli, "and the kids just loved the butterflies."

Also very popular is the wide range of animals available for petting. In addition to the aforementioned pig, donkey, goat, and alpaca, the farm features sheep, horses, rabbits, ducks, homing pigeons, and an emu.

Additionally, visitors can view a variety of lizards, snakes, millipedes, a tarantula, a scorpion, and some Madagascar hissing cockroaches.

A building to house the reptiles is currently in the planning stages.

Started in 1991 as a mobile petting farm and pony rides business, Carousel Acres is family owned and operated. Tammy's husband, Dave, and their four daughters, Angela, Julie, Jennifer, and Kimberly, are all involved.

The business originally consisted of taking farm animals to birthday parties and to school and community events.

Later, they added homing pigeons — doves — to be available for release at weddings, memorial services, or other special occasions, and the next step was to develop a mobile "Zoo to You" exhibit of reptiles, insects, and small mammals.

About two years ago, the family started raising butterflies. The butterfly house is not only an exhibit of a variety of butterflies found in the eastern United States, it is educational as well.

Members of the Carousel Acres staff can point out butterfly eggs on plants inside the exhibit. They also have a chrysalis case, showing various butterflies in their chrysalis, or cocoon, stage of development.

Butterflies, of course, start out life as caterpillars before changing into their beautiful winged forms.

The latest development for the Iaconelli business is the opening of the grounds on weekends so that visitors can enjoy all the animals at one location.

"Our animals are spoiled," said Iaconelli. "They love company."

Host and nectar plants, which will attract butterflies to your own garden, can be purchased at the gift shop located on the premises. Iaconelli suggests that visitors bring a camera to permanently record their visits.

Carousel Acres will be open each weekend during June and July from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Admission is seven dollars for adults and six dollars for children from three to 16 years of age.

The mobile petting zoo is still available for parties and special events for $200 for an hour's visit, and school groups are welcome by appointment at $5 per student and no cost for the teachers.

For additional information about Carousel Acres, or for making group reservations, call 248-437-7669.

Above, a butterfly nibbles fruit from the tip of Julie Tanner's finger. Tanner helps her mother, Tammy Iaconelli, run Carousel Acres at 12749 Nine Mile Road in Green Oak Township.

On the left, one of more than 100 butterflies sip nectar from flowers inside Carousel Acres' indoor butterfly garden.

Carousel Acres visitors can see a variety of animals including a pig, goat, ponies, sheep, an emu, an alpaca (in the same family as llamas), rabbits, ducks, homing pigeons and more, at the petting zoo, pictured on the right.

Heeding the call

Some motorists are being driven to distraction

By Priscilla Lister

Copley News Service

Angry chat room postings about dialing and driving are not enough to burn the car you've got pressed against the cell phone.

• "Can anyone in California go for an hour without being on the (blankity-blank) phone? I saw this (blankity-blank-blank) using her phone go straight into the back of a flatbed."

• "I can vouch for the fact that talking on the cell phone, and probably even talking to anyone in the car, makes you less attentive to what is going on around you. For me, personally, I feel that it lowers my driving skills to about the average of L.A. drivers (read: no longer checks mirrors often enough)."

These are just two postings about cell phone usage on the message board of LAinsider.com, a Web site about autos and commuting in the Big Orange.

But cell phone usage in cars has risen above the anecdotal level.

A 1997 study by the New England Journal of Medicine concluded, "The use of cellular telephones in motor vehicles is associated with a quadrupling of the risk of a collision during the brief period of a call. Decisions about regulation of such telephones, however, need to take into account the benefits of the technology and the role of individual responsibility."

According to the Cellular Telecommunications and Internet Association, 120,000 emergency calls are placed from cellular phones each year. That industry group, in response to concerns about traffic safety, recommends the use of hands-free phones, which may become mandatory.

This year, there are 38 states, as well as Washington, D.C., that have bills pending to ban or restrict the use of hand-held cellular phones while driving, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver.

As reported in The Washington Post, 10 municipalities have enacted such bans, and major cities considering restrictions include Chicago and New York, which already has such a ban for cabdrivers.

There are some 110 million cellular phones registered to users in the United States, and some 85 percent of those owners use their phones while driving.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has studied the correlation between cell phone use while driving and accidents. A 1997 report was "neutral, concluding that it was impossible to determine the magnitude of safety-related problems associated with cell phone use while driving and urging improvements in data collection," reported The Washington Post.

Frances Betts, vice president and general manager of research and technology at Dynamic Science Inc., was the principal author of the NHTSA report, "An Investigation of the Safety Implications of Wireless Communications in Vehicles." While she acknowledges the "difficulties in trying to identify cell phone use among crash-involved drivers," she points to three different types of distraction: visual, mechanical and cognitive.

She says as cell phone users become more familiar with operating their equipment, they probably spend less time looking at the device to turn it on or dial it. And even though using a phone hands-free reduces mechanical distraction, she says "what seems to be most relevant to safe cell phone use is cognitive distraction."

"Even after years of talking on the land line phone, our ability to concentrate on more than one activity doesn't seem to improve," says Betts. "The activity that cell phone using drivers are not attending to is the driving task. I believe this is a critical issue, and that nonessential technologies which do not help us operate our vehicles more safely should not be allowed."

Japan in November 1999 banned the use of hand-held cellular phones while driving, allowing hands-free phone use.

The accident rate had increased in that country with the proliferation of cell phones, says Hiroshi Tsuda of the Vehicle Research Laboratory of Nissan Motor Co., and an expert used by NHTSA. A survey in 1997 and 1998 concluded that car phone-related traffic accidents were found to represent 0.34 percent of all accidents involving injuries (about 370,500 total cases). The study found that most of those accidents occurred when drivers were receiving calls (43 percent), followed by those occurring while making calls (22.9 percent).

Since Japan's hand-held ban was enacted, and a survey conducted from then to May 2000, compared with the same six-month period the previous year showed the number of accidents involving the use of cell phones decreased by 60 percent.

In a May 2000, study by the NHTSA, 15 drivers were studied both with and without a hands-free cell phone conversation.

"The driving task was relatively easy, and the young drivers studied were able to have a hands-free telephone conversation and perform well. However, significant differences were found in choice reaction time, especially in the beginning stages of the telephone conversation, and in situation awareness. The subjects reacted significantly slower to an unexpected event in the first two minutes of the telephone conversation and were, for a large part of the telephone conversation, unaware of traffic movements around them," the study concluded.

A 1991 study by James McKnight and A. Scott McKnight for the National Public Services Research Institute, under a grant from the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, concluded:

• All forms of cellular phone usage lead to significant increases in the establishment of non-response to highway-traffic situations and increase in time to respond.

• Complex, intense conversation leads to the greatest increases in likelihood of overlooking significant highway traffic conditions and the time to respond to them.

• The distracting effect of cellular phone use among drivers over age 50 is two to three times as great as that of younger drivers.

• Prior experience with cellular phones appears to bear no relation to the distracting effect of cellular phone use.

While enacting outright bans has proved elusive so far, chances are some restrictions will be coming soon regarding cell phone usage while driving.

Just drive

Here are some cellular phone safety tips from The Automobile Club of Southern California and Verizon Wireless:

• Install and use the hands-free or speaker phone option to allow you to keep your hands on the steering wheel and your eyes on the road.

• Make sure your phone is mounted where you can easily reach it while driving.

• Familiarize yourself with all of the operations of your cellular phone and learn to use it without looking. Keep your attention on the road by programming frequently called numbers into the phone's memory to minimize dialing.

• Dial sensibly. Wait for a stoplight or pull off the road to dial, or ask your passenger to dial for you.

• Don't use your cellular phone in distracting traffic situations. Pull off the road to make a call.

• Be careful about where you stop to make calls. Parked callers may become victims of phone theft.

• When calling 911 to report an emergency, be prepared to provide the closest major cross streets or off-ramps, and know your cellular phone number.

• Use your voice mail to take calls or leave yourself messages. Don't take notes while driving.

• Disconnect your cellular phone when using jumper cables - the power surge could burn out your phone.

Rotation and proper inflation will add safety and life
to your car's life

- Tire makers recommend tire rotation about every 5,000 to 6,000 miles. This ensures even tread wear. Tire dealers sometimes make free rotation part of a sale. Tread life estimates will be shortened if tires are not rotated.

Maintenance Guide

Keep your car healthy with simple check ups

By Paul R. Huard

Copley News Service

A new season means more than just spring in the air.

Your car has just received its annual chew-out from the teeth of Old Man Winter. Cold, wet weather with plenty of rain, snow or ice takes its toll on the most basic systems that keep your car running reliably.

A quick and easy automotive checkup can help prepare a vehicle for the stress of summer's high temperatures and increase reliability on long road trips, say experts with AAA.

A few minutes spent checking your car's vital components can help you enjoy another season of trouble-free driving.

To help prevent dangerous and inconvenient tire failure, examine tires for uneven or excessive tread wear. Make sure all tires, including the spare, are inflated properly.

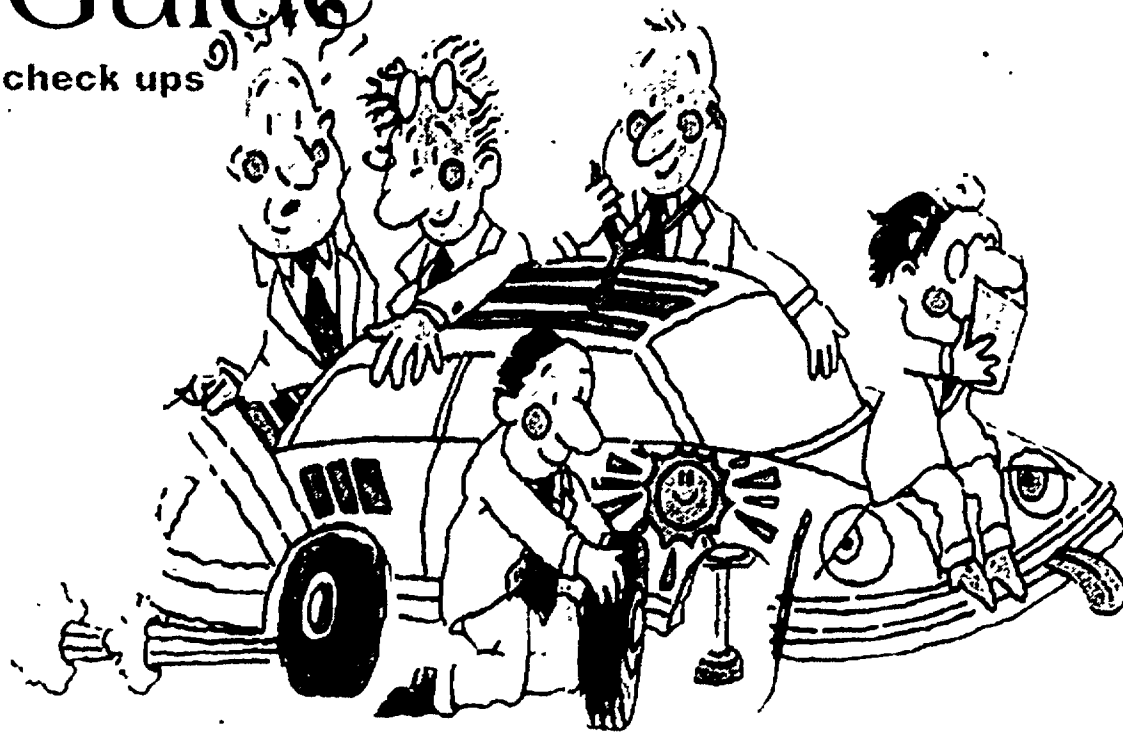

With the engine off, look for worn or cracked belts and damaged, blistered or soft hoses. Inspect antifreeze/coolant level and condition, making certain the proper 50-50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

Check motor oil level and condition. If driving under extreme conditions, such as very hot temperatures or towing a heavy trailer, switch to a motor oil with higher viscosity. Check the owner's manual for specific oil recommendations.

If you are not comfortable performing this inspection yourself, a qualified auto service facility with a AAA "Approved Auto Repair" program can conduct a thorough examination.

Because even properly maintained vehicles can break down, AAA urges motorists to equip their vehicle with an emergency kit containing at least the following items:

- Flashlight with extra batteries.
- Warning devices such as flares or reflective triangles.
- Jumper cables.
- A first-aid kit.

- A cellular phone, which provides an easy way to summon emergency assistance.

Some owners keep a log of oil changes and basic maintenance. This helps you keep track of periodic inspections and service you should perform routinely.

A list is better than trying to commit all the important information to memory. So keep this checklist handy with your maintenance log:

- Have brakes and the braking system inspected at least once each year.
- Examine all belts for fraying and tension with every other oil change (about every 6,000 miles).
- Check hoses for deterioration, corrosion, cracking, bulging, breakage and other signs of extreme wear, also during every other oil change service.

- Rotate tires about every 7,500 miles to maximize tire life, and assure steady, even wear of all tires. Do not mix radial tires and bias-ply tires on the same vehicle - and never on the same axle.

• Have car's exhaust system inspected on an overhead rack twice a year to avoid dangerous leakage of carbon monoxide.

• Check all safety belts for wear, proper clasp and secure anchoring.

• Replace windshield wipers when worn, streaking or not providing you with clear visibility during inclement weather.

• Check all lights to make certain bulbs have not burned out. Include checks of headlights and high-beams, taillights, turn signal indicators, brake lights/high-mount stoplights, back-up lights, parking lights and other exterior lights.
