Danielle Werner, left, will soon leave behind her parents, cat and home and travel hundreds of miles away to Emory & Henry College in Emory, Virginia.

THE EMPTY NEST

As fall rapidly approaches, parents and first-time college students prepare for suddenly new beginnings

By Larissa Barlow
RECORD SPECIAL WRITER

Brad Werner is about to face one of the most difficult tasks a parent has – sending his youngest daughter, Danielle, away to college.

Werner is having mixed feelings about the whole situation, and not just because she's the last of his children to move away from home. It's because she's going 600 miles away.

"It's difficult, but I'm trying to look at it with my eyes wide open," Werner said. "It's a time of mixed emotions. I'm excited for her, but it's also sad."

Danielle will be attending Emory & Henry College in Emory, Virginia this fall. And even though she's been away from home before, Werner can't help but feel different this time.

"She's gone away before but it was only for a couple weeks. Now it's going to be for months at a time," Werner said.

A child going away to school can make parents feel sad, lonely or empty while the student may be experiencing the same thing while away from home, said Eleanor Bossi, a psychologist at Michigan State University's counseling center.

"Parents go through their own transition," Bossi said. "They can experience anything from great relief to empty nest syndrome. They may feel the same anxious feelings they had when they first dropped their kids off to school in kindergarten."

But those feelings are commonplace and affect many parents.

"The best thing is to know that it's not an unusual situation for parents to feel that way," Bossi said.

Arnold Keller, executive director of Psychotherapy and Counseling Services, PC in Northville, said parents need to give their child independence, but shouldn't avoid contact.

"Parents need to learn to disengage," Keller said. "Don't make overly frequent calls but still keep in regular contact. It's really a delicate balance, but it's also a time to let go."

Keller suggests the best way to work through this transition is to realize that even though their child has moved away, they're still needed.

For an in-depth look at the challenges and opportunities facing first-time local college students, see page 6.

"College is a time for students to go out on their own, but they're still going to need their parents," Keller said.

That's why Werner has already started looking into times the family can all be together again, even before his daughter has left for school.

"We're already started making plans and arrangements of when Danielle is coming home," Werner said. "I've already found out there's a non-stop flight out of Metro Detroit that's to an airport only an hour away from her school."

Werner describes it all as a milestone moment for him and his wife, and something of an adventure for his daughter. While Danielle is away at school, Werner said he's going to be looking around, wondering why his house is now empty.

But Werner is sure he'll be able to cope, but not as well as his daughter will.

"She's going to adapt better to this than her mother and I are."

Dispatch backlash

Activist group says council vote is main reason for recall effort

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Residents angered by a recent city council decision to contract public dispatch services from Northville Township are now seeking to recall three council members and the mayor.

Members of a resident group called the Northville Volunteer League said they believe the council's decision to contract dispatch services from an outside entitiy is another example of city official indifference to taxpayer concerns.

Northville Mayor Christopher Johnson, Mayor Pro-tem Carolann Ayers and council members Kevin Hartshorne and Jerry Mittman received notice last week from county officials that city residents initiated an effort to remove them from office. Each voted to approve the dispatch agreement.

Council member Tom Swigart voted against the plan. He is not targeted.

The recall petition wording cites the council members' July 26 4-1 vote to contract public safety dispatch and lock-up services from Northville Township as the reason for the recall.

"We did a lot of research," said Larry Parks, a co-founder of the Northville Volunteer League and recall petitioner. "We asked them to reconsider their vote. I wonder if they even heard us."

Parks, along fellow Volunteer League members, previously presented to the council multi-page proposals they believe would allow the city to maintain its Main Street police station. "I've done that twice — they've hardly responded in any way that I can see that they're listening. I'm done talking."

Monday night Mittman asked members of the Northville Volunteer League, present for the council meeting, to reconsider their recall effort.

"I don't think a one-issue recall is appropriate," Mittman said. "It's really legislation by intimidation."

Mittman said council member

Northville athletes will pay more to play

Northville Schools hikes fee $25

By Victoria Sadlocha
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Athletes will open their wallets a little wider this year following a decision by district officials to raise the amount students pay for high school sports.

The participation fee for Michigan High School Athletic Association-sanctioned sports will increase $25 for the 2004-05 school year.

"The cost is now $75 for high-school athletes," said Brian Masi, Northville High School athletic director. "It is a one-time charge so they can play as many as three sports for the same charge."

The fee for middle-school level sports remains $50.

Masi said the pay-to-participate fee goes directly into the district's general fund, which in turn finances the athletic department.

The athletic department is operating with a $648,000 budget for the 2004-05 school, up nearly

Paging, Mr. Ford

Township resident will serve as congressional page

By Kim Kovelle
RECORD STAFF WRITER

At age 16, Northville High student Tim Ford has served consistently as his class president and has been active in organizing community events and local politicians' campaigns.

He'll soon put his leadership abilities and penchant for politics to work serving as a congressional page with the U.S. House of Representatives in Washington, D.C.

As one of only 72 pages chosen for the fall semester, Ford will spend five months at the House of Representatives Page School in the early morning, then working on the Congress floor. Participants must be 16 years old and high school juniors.

"My A.P. government teacher recommended it to me," Ford said. "It was earlier last school year, around October. (He) brought it up with my mom at conferences. There was a lot of applying. We had to get in contact with my congressman's office, because you ... need your congressman's nomination first."

By December, Ford turned in a two-page resume, an essay, three letters of recommendation and an application to the page coordinator at the office of Rep. Thaddeus McCotter (R-Mich.).

Then, he waited. And waited.

McCotter's nomination came in late June. A phone interview with the page school then followed. Ford hoped to get word before he left for a school trip to Germany.

Realizing that she might get the news in her son's absence, Ford's

City hall intern gets crash course in small-town politics

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

The swirl of controversy that swept through the city this summer was a condensed civics course for one college senior.

From the public safety dispatch discussion to the church's proposed school construction to rescinded approval to cut down trees, Tom Gromek had a front-row seat as an unpaid intern in Northville's city hall. During his final days on the job last week, he said he is more certain than ever public administration is his proper career path.

"People think government is boring," he said. "If they would have seen what I did this summer, they would see it's more of an exciting feel. You can make a difference, even if it's locally.

"I've learned more this summer — career-wise and life-wise — than I have in any class or college."

Gromek, a Livonia resident who returns to his Central Michigan University political science studies in a couple of weeks, said he knows his enthusiasm contrasts the apathy of some of his peers. "I've been interested in government since high school. I think this experience has only made me more intrigued by going into government."

The student said he pursued the internship opportunity to help determine whether he was on the right track with his major, not to earn money or credits. He worked afternoons at a second job for a paycheck.

"It's been a busy summer, a lot of hours," he said. "It's probably been my best summer, and most rewarding. I've had a lot of fun, especially here (in City Hall)."

"I was real nervous going in," Gromek said. "Now I feel like I fit in here. I can do a job like this."

Summer intern Tom Gromek talks about his experiences at Northville's city hall.

The shadow knows

Northville City Manager Gary Word agreed this spring to allow the student to shadow him 9 a.m.-1 p.m. five days a week from mid-May through Aug. 13.

"He did great," Word said. "He's getting a lot of valuable experience, a head start on all his classmates. It was great to have him with us this summer."

Gromek said only looking from the "inside" did he begin to grasp the scope of a city manager's responsibility. "You see how everything inter-works," he said.

One of the intern's assignments was beginning to draft a special-events policy for the city. That required discussing the impact on each of the city departments, he said. "I think we made considerable progress, trying to merge everyone's wants and needs."

The intern also attended meetings of the city council and the downtown development authority, as well as contract negotiations, he said. "I found that interesting — the strategy that goes in with that, the stances you have to take."

Also, Word arranged for him to spend time with a number of administrators, he said. He learned about the duties of department heads for recreation, public works, and youth assistance, as well as township officials. "It's been really interesting," he said. "I feel like I want to be involved in this — trying to work things out."

Gromek complimented Word's "open door" style. "What I admire about Gary is he treats people with respect and in a professional manner," he said. "He's good at dealing with people and situations — I learned it's all about how you treat people."

Changed perspectives

Gromek said his perception of Northville in May was a "quiet, small town." "From the outside, you don't think there's a lot going on. I think I've been fortunate to have some of the hot topics going on."

For example, Gromek said, he sat in on meetings when city and township leaders worked to draft a potential joint public safety dispatch agreement. He also attended the city council meeting when two dozen residents spoke against the plan. "I got exposed to both views — that was a real interesting topic to follow," he said. "People have really strong opinions, really strong emotions."

The student said it will be a tough transition returning to his textbook lessons after watching people "storm out," volumes of letters on a single subject and lawsuits filed. "I feel like it's been so valuable. I'm really grateful."

RECALL: effort targets council

contributions reach far beyond a single hot-button issue. He said such efforts include commissions and committee work and 20 years of community service. "The community we live in today is better because of the commitment of these people." "To me, (a recall) is a disruptive process."

Can you hear us now?

Following the meeting, Parks said members of the volunteer league hired an attorney to guide them through the recall process. Wayne and Oakland county election officials are expected Aug. 24 and 30, respectively, to decide on the petition language. With approval, the volunteers will begin their 90-day signature collection campaign, he said.

"It was a last-ditch effort on the part of the citizens to have a recall," Sherry Underwood said. "We requested for weeks on end to work with the council. I have great respect for them, other than how they treated people on the 26th I think they should be ashamed of themselves for that."

The dispatch and lock-up agreement — the impetus for the recall effort — would shift the city's services to the township's police headquarters as soon as this fall. Council members have described city benefits of enhanced service, cost savings, a superior lock-up facility and access to advanced technology.

Opponents to the concept have questioned the cost savings for the city over the long-term. Other repeated concerns are the potential increase in response times within the larger volume of township dispatch calls, the perception of losing a city entity, as well as fears that total public safety consolidation will soon follow.

"On Saturday, I had another lady call me and say, 'Whatever you are doing, I want to help you.'," Parks said. He and other city residents will attend the township's board of trustees meeting tonight. The board is expected to vote on the issue.

"We will make our decision based on the ramifications for Northville Township," said Supervisor Mark Abbo. He said the township's ability to provide service in a professional and efficient manner, potential effects on the current level of service and economic feasibility will each be discussed.

"That is the criteria I will use to evaluate it," Abbo said. "That is what I will ask our board to use to evaluate it. As far as I can tell, we meet the criteria. I am supportive of the concept."

"We're going to make our decision, politics aside," the supervisor said. "We were approached by the representatives of the City of Northville. Period. I'm not going to be swayed by a threat of a recall."

Long-term concerns

Like Mittman, Ayers said she is concerned about the long-term impact a recall effort will have on city residents. She said she and fellow council members will continue to conduct the city's business.

"I am concerned about the split the community has been experiencing on several issues," she said. The mayor pro-tem said she was elected in November unopposed. "I thought that was a statement."

Francine Holmoty said the council's July 26 vote was the "straw that broke the camel's back."

"The recall is not to be looked at as a threat," she said. "This is the citizen's right to say we don't like the path we're going down."

It is not the volunteer league that is splitting the community, Kathi Tarrant-Parks said. "This issue has split the community. Their vote . . . has really caused distrust among the citizens."

Maureen Johnston can be reached at (248) 349-1700, ext 108, or mjohnston@ht homecomm.net.

Resident recall movement requires residents to sign-off, pay for election

Wayne and Oakland County officials will decide Aug. 24 and 30, respectively, whether or not the proposed recall petition language is adequate.

Currently, members of the Northville Volunteer League are seeking to recall Northville's mayor and three city council members. County approval is necessary for signature collection to begin.

With approval city residents members would be able to begin circulating recall petitions. Organizers would then have 90 days to collect signatures from at least 25 percent of the number of people who cast votes in the 2002 governor's election in the district where the officials are being recalled, according to the election code.

In Oakland county — where the majority of the city's votes are cast — that would mean one-quarter of 1,648 votes — or 412 signatures, said Ellen Davis Halsey, Oakland County director of elections. Monday she was awaiting word from the state on whether the same percentage would be required from Wayne County.

Names would then be validated, Davis Halsey said. "Normally, we would ask the city clerk to verify the signatures," she said.

If a sufficient number of signatures are determined valid, an election would then be set within the next 35 days, and would be held within 60 days of that date, the director said.

Ballot language would mirror the county-approved petition and would include a "yes" or "no" option. Individual officials targeted by the recall effort would also have an opportunity on the ballot to justify their conduct in 200 words or less.

Who pays?

If successful, the city would have to pay for the recall and all subsequent elections necessary to fill any vacancies, Davis Halsey said. The cost for a special election would be $8,000-10,000, Northville City Clerk Dianne Massa said.

Kathi Tarrant-Parks, co-founder of the Northville Volunteer League which is spearheading the recall effort, said the cost is justified. "A local government should always anticipate the possibility (of a recall)," she said. "That's good budgeting."

A recall election is "part of the democratic process," said her husband, Larry Parks. The couple believes volunteers would be able to collect the necessary number of names to place the recall question before the voters.

Fall vacation?

According to the election code, a successful recall immediately vacates the position. If the remaining body is unable to conduct city business, then state law provides for governor appointment of interim replacement officials.

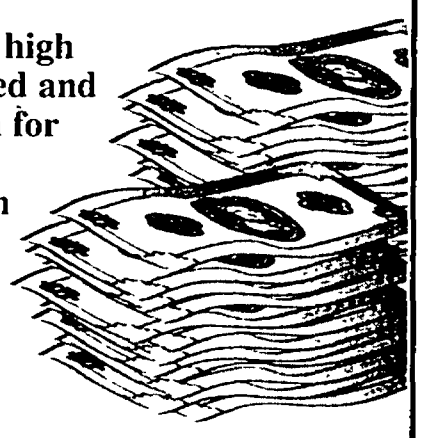

A special election would be set within 60 days to fill the vacancy. Officials recalled in the process cannot run.

If the local petitions produce an election, the timing of the effort may affect the process, Davis Halsey said. New statewide election consolidation law takes effect Jan. 1, 2005 and allows for only four voting dates — February, May, August and November — as well as one "floater," she said.

"It all depends on their timing — it's going to affect when the elections can be held," Davis Halsey said. "I don't know how that's all handled. It is going to affect things like these."

POLICE REPORT

Kid unfriendly

Providence Hospital contacted the Northville Township Police Department earlier this month reporting a small girl was bit by an area dog. Hospital employees told police a 3-year-old Livonia girl was given eight stitches to her right cheek following a bite taking place in Northville. Township police contacted the German shepherd's owner on Saturday, Aug. 7 and he confirmed the episode took place. The man living in the 46000 block of Seven Mile Road told police the girl, who was visiting her mother next to his Northville township home, was inside his home playing with his daughter when the 2-year-old dog attacked. According to the report, the man told police his dog doesn't like children because it was harassed by kids when a puppy.

Found items

A couple of items found in the township were turned into the police department Tuesday, Aug. 10. The first item was brought into the Northville Township station at about 6:45 p.m. A resident found a set of keys in the street by a sewer drain in the area of Waterfall and Pon Valley. According to the report, the keys were on a "J" key chain with Mickey Mouse sitting on top of the initial.

The same day, a found bike was also brought into the station. A resident living in the 15000 block of Maxwell told police he found the 24-speed Del Sol bike behind his garage while mowing his lawn. The man said he checked with his neighbors, asking if they lost a green and gray bike, but had no luck. Both items were logged into the station.

Dogs on the run

Two dogs were found in Northville Township last week and taken to Parkway Veterinary Clinic after owners were not located. The first dog was brought into the station on Wednesday, Aug. 11. A resident found a small black and gray female dog in the area of Cedar Lake and Six Mile Road. The dog weighed about 16 pounds and did not have identification tags.

Two days later on Friday 13, two officers were approached in the parking lot of Meijer by a woman reporting a dog on the loose. The woman found a black male Labrador retriever running eastbound on Eight Mile west of Haggerty Road. The 60-pound pet was found with a leather collar and no tags. A wire lead was attached to the dog's collar.

Missing motorcycles

Two motorcycles were stolen last week from Northville Township apartment complexes on the same day. The first call came into the department at about 8:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 11. A 28-year-old male living in the 19000 block of North Ridge told police someone stole his 2004 Honda motorcycle while it was parked under a carport. Detroit police officers called the township later the same day, reporting they found the stolen bike. Police said the ignition was "punched out" and the bike was damaged.

A second resident called the township department on the 11th and reported his 2000 Suzuki was stolen from a carport in the 20000 Block of Northville Place Drive. The 23-year-old male said the bike was stolen sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 9 p.m. The man told police the bike was locked.

Sky watch

A 44-year-old Northville Township resident called police last week, reporting a suspicious circumstance. The woman living in the 40000 block of Mill Pond Court called police on Thursday, Aug. 12, saying a helicopter flew over her house three times since July 31. The woman told police the helicopter had flown over her house for 3 minutes at about 11 a.m. on the day she called the department. According to the report, "the complainant feels someone might be stalking her."

Booze brings bad luck

In the wee morning hours of Friday the 13th, bad luck befell a 19-year-old Livonia female who drank alcohol and was then spotted by police driving northbound along Haggerty Road.

Police pulled over the woman's white 1993 Mercury Cougar at about 2:19 a.m., after the vehicle was observed coming within an inch of running up on a curb two separate times. She'd been driving 50 mph in a 45 mph zone, the police report noted, and she admitted to consuming "about three" drinks that evening.

The woman lost her balance two times during field sobriety task, and used her arms to keep balanced, according to the police report. A preliminary breath test recorded her blood alcohol content at .155. Arrested without incident, the woman was released on personal bond. Her court date is set for 8:30 a.m. today at the 35th District Court.

Freshman life: stressful life

Students may have a hard time adjusting to their new environment

Record SPECIAL REPORT

By Larissa Barlow
RECORD SPECIAL WRITER

Entering college can be a stressful time for incoming freshmen moving away from home – or just going to school down the street.

"There's really going to be a culture shock for students, even if they're only coming 20 miles to campus," psychologist Eleanor Bossi said.

Bossi works at Michigan State University's counseling center where students seeking help for dealing with the stresses of their new environment.

Freshman may feel overwhelmed or experience sadness at being away from home. "Many feel sad and unsure," Bossi said. So the counseling center provides a place for students to go to for help managing their feelings.

Arnold Keller, executive director of Psychotherapy and Counseling Services, PC in Northville, said it's normal for freshman to experience a period of sadness when first starting school.

"Despite the fact that a lot of children have gone away to summer camp, when they arrive on campus it's likely they'll experience a mild sadness to depression," Keller said.

Keller calls the period of sadness "freshman loneliness syndrome," and said the effects can last days to several months.

"If it lingers into the third month of depression, one should find the student health center," Keller said.

But students who suffer from prolonged sadness don't always seek help at the center Bossi said. More often, they go to residence hall staff for help.

That's why some staff members are taught to look for signs of mental distress.

"Very often people assume students will go to a counseling service first, but they go to residence hall staff," Bossi said. "Most residence hall staff are trained by the counseling center to look for who has a typical issue from the transition to university and who is suffering from something more severe."

What to look for — and what to do...

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, some symptoms of depression may include: persistent sad, anxious, or empty moods; feelings of hopelessness, pessimism, guilt, worthlessness, helplessness; insomnia, early-morning awakening, or oversleeping and thoughts of death or suicide.

Parents who are concerned their child is suffering from these symptoms are encouraged to contact the university counseling center. Bossi said. Staff counselors can provide helpful tips and get students timely help.

But Keller said parents should be proactive and explain to their child they might feel sad or lonely the first month of being away from home.

"If they're told that before they leave, it could minimize the sadness or eliminate it completely," Keller said.

Kelly Lockwood, a social worker at the University of Michigan, said it's important for students to know they're not the only one going through these feelings.

"Typically we try to normalize the feelings they're having and validate their emotions," Lockwood said.

Best defense

The best way to combat feelings of isolation and homesickness while away at school is to keep busy and get involved in activities, Keller said.

Joining clubs and social activities, starting a study group or joining a sports team are all things Keller said would help ease the transition into college.

Lockwood also suggests students stay close to campus the first month. That makes it easier to make friends and familiarize themselves with the school.

Most of all, Keller said parents should do their part by calling their child and making more frequent visits, especially during the first few weeks of school. Doing so might help freshmen students better adapt to their new environment.

"It's a geographical change as well as a huge emotional shift being in a new environment that's alien to them," Keller said.

Personal finance a major lesson for new students

By Larissa Barlow
RECORD SPECIAL WRITER

Students entering college run a risk of getting into debt because of poor money management and unexpected expenses.

Joyce Banish, vice president of marketing for Michigan State University's Federal Credit Union, said incoming freshmen are bombarded with credit card applications that may have stiff penalties and large late fees.

"Students are hit with a barrage of credit card offers through the mail, and I'd say the majority of them have never had one before," Banish said.

This leads to the danger of signing up for more than one card and then being faced with large bills that the student isn't prepared for, Banish said.

"Students that find problems have hooked up with multiple credit cards," Banish said. "And what's happening now is credit card issuers are really shortening the time you get the bill and the time it needs to be paid, just so they get a late fee on your account."

But using cash only doesn't stop the problems of poor money management.

"Parents may give money for the whole year, and then you hear a story where it's gone in four months," Banish said. Overspending is a problem Banish attributes to students who don't plan ahead for the cost of books, supplies and personal expenses while at college.

COST OF BOOKS

- University of Michigan-Ann Arbor: $938
- Michigan State University: $826
- Wayne State University: $800

All figures are approximate for first-time undergraduates for the 2003-04 school year. Source: http://www.universities.com.

Don DiVirgilio, general manager of Wayne State University's Barnes & Noble Bookstore, said students are often shocked by textbook prices.

"Everybody is. I'm even shocked by the price," DiVirgilio said. "Depending on classes, a freshman could pay between $300 and $400 a semester for books." DiVirgilio said biology, chemistry and math textbooks are usually the most expensive.

The same is true for other schools. According to the MSU office of admissions and scholarships, tuition and expenses estimates for the 2004-2005 academic year show students paying about $800 a year for textbooks and supplies and around $1,400 on personal expenses.

Banish said debt doesn't always happen because a student is reckless with their funds; they've just never been taught how to budget their money.

"Students are concerned about doing things the right way," Banish said. "But many students don't realize the effects of a bad credit score."

Banish said a poor credit score could follow a student after graduation, precluding them from getting a lease on an apartment and hurting their chances of obtaining a mortgage and even getting a job.

But Banish said having a credit card is nearly essential to a student who's away from home.

"It's hard not to have a credit card in today's world. They should just shop the credit card instead of the credit card shopping them," she said.

The best way to avoid debt is to establish a budget so you know how much you can afford to spend, Banish said. She also said tracking expenses so you can plan when you'll need funds for books is a valuable effort.

The MSU Federal Credit Union supplies students with budgeting software and offers consultations to help manage debt, Banish said.

Rodney Cole, assistant director of career planning and placement services at WSU, said some students just sign-up for an on-campus job to make extra cash.

"Students are always in need of money for books," Cole said.

His office helps students find jobs on campus, which is a convenient way to earn money.

"I think students should consider on-campus employment," Cole said. "There are no worries of commuting, and departments definitely work around schedules."

A good financial plan can help students keep track of their cash flow, so any extra money earned can go into savings.

Banish said it's just a lack of experience with credit that gets students into trouble, and she suggests parents teach their kids about managing money before they leave for college.

"I think it should start in high school by teaching them to save for a rainy day," Banish said. "Setting up an emergency fund, saving for a short term or a long term to illustrate the different classes of credit will always be beneficial."

PAY: Northville athletes will pay more to compete

Masi said the fee increase was needed and will help maintain current programming.

Northville High School club sports — teams not sanctioned by the Michigan High School Athletic Association — do not fall under the district's $75 pay-to-participate fee.

Not just here

Northville is not the only district in the area deciding in favor of a varsity sports fee increase.

"Pay-to-participate for the Plymouth-Canton schools did go up this year," said Tom Willette, Salem High School athletic director. "We were asked to cut another $200,000 from our budget on top of the $200,000 from the year before and we are doing that once again through pay-to-participate and also now some other athletic cuts."

Plymouth-Canton student athletes participating in MHSAA sanctioned sports will pay $150 for their first sport, $80 for the second and no additional charge for the third sport played by the same student. The fee is up $25 from the 2003-04 school year.

Walled Lake Consolidated Schools also raised its fee.

Student athletes in the district will pay a one-time fee of $125, up $25 from last year, regardless of the number of sports played.

David Yarbrough, Walled Lake Consolidated Schools athletic director, said the district implemented a $50 charge at the middle school level for the first time this year.

Other area districts including Livonia, Farmington and Novi continue maintaining no-cost athletic programs.

Curt Ellis, Novi High School athletic director, said most often the core of the decision to charge or not charge students to play MHSAA sanctioned sports is financial; although, the choice is ultimately a philosophical decision by each individual board of education whether or not to fund athletics at a level that is less than full.

"At this point our board of education has not chosen or perhaps been forced to do that which is not to say they might not in the future," Ellis said. "But at this particular juncture they have not chosen to do anything less than fully fund our athletic program."

Pay-to-play

Northville Public School's initial $50 pay-to-participate fee was instituted during the 2003-04 school year.

Implementing pay-to-participate sports was the top suggestion given by a small portion of 378 registered Northville voters in December who responded in a survey when asked how to manage per-pupil cuts in state-aid funding.

The independent, biennial opinion study conducted by School Public Relations Consultant Services of Lansing and Williamston, indicated out of the 49 percent of respondents who made a suggestion regarding cuts, utilizing pay-to-participate sports and reducing athletics tied as the top two suggestions.

When breaking down the vote among those respondents with children in Northville Public Schools and those without, implementing a fee was still the top suggestion from both groups.

Class NOTES

School Bond '04

The Northville School District awarded contracts to an architectural and construction management firm for the purpose of executing 2004 Northville School bond projects. Fanning-Howey & Associates, Inc. was awarded a $1.1 million architectural management contract, which includes all personnel. Skanska USA Building Inc. was awarded a $1.1 million construction management contract, which includes personnel and fees. Fourteen architectural firms and eight construction firms submitted bids, and five architectural firms and four construction management firms were interviewed by the district selection committee before the contracts were awarded. District officials said a newly adopted competitive bidding process saved the district money when considering applications. The process has been in place since 1996.

Ballot cast

Members of the Northville school board unanimously agreed to cast one vote for Ralph Nodwell for a two-year term as a member of the Michigan Association of School Boards board of directors. Nodwell was nominated by the Van Buren Public Schools board of education. Reason for the endorsement included the candidate was from a Wayne County school district, his major concern is finding additional sources of funding, he will bring a fresh perspective to the board and he wrote a letter to the board asking for support.

LET'S TALK Jewelry WITH GARY S. WEINSTEIN GEMOLOGIST

CHOOSE ANY COLOR, EXCEPT RED

Sapphire, the birthstone for September, is truly one of the most illustrious gemstone in history. Prized by ancients and moderns alike for its exceptional hardness (second only to diamond), transparency, and magnificent color, sapphire is popularly associated with its gorgeous cornflower blue color. Yet, sapphire is available in a wide spectrum of other colors, with one notable exception. Sapphire is a member of the corundum family of minerals, which consists of pure aluminum oxide that has been formed into gemstones by the heat and pressure of the earth. When small portions of other elements enter the mix, such as iron and chrome, numerous other colors of sapphire are produced. Red corundum, notably, is known as ruby. Sapphires are the "hot new" side stones for engagement rings. Our expert staff would be happy to assist you in designing an engagement ring that will knock anyone's socks off.

We invite you to come into WEINSTEIN JEWELERS OF NOVI at 41990 Grand River Ave. (248-347-0303) and to browse around through our magnificent selection of diamonds and other gemstones, as well as gold, silver, and platinum jewelry, sure to meet your particular tastes as well as your budget. We are extremely proud of the reputation we have earned as the "Number 1" jeweler in this area. We are now licensed by the city of Novi to offer loans on jewelry. Open: Mon., Tue., & Thurs. 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Fri. 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Sat. 10 a.m.- 5 p.m.. Most major credit cards accepted. We are "The name you know, the you trust."

P.S. The most desirable color for the sapphire is a deep, saturated blue, which appears blue even in dim artificial light.

SPOTLIGHT ON: ORTHODONTIC NEWS

Orthodontic Specialist

ASSESSING A CHILD'S BITE

It is estimated that about 90% of school-aged children have some degree of malocclusion (irregular contact between the teeth of the upper jaw and those of the lower jaw), but only about 10%-15% of these cases are sufficiently severe to warrant orthodontic treatment. The orthodontist can assess a child's bite and decide whether it needs correction to avert biting/chewing problems, unnecessary tooth wear, jaw joint problems, and gum problems, as well as improve appearance and better facilitate speech development. There is no single cause of malocclusion. Many different factors are involved, including genetic and/or environmental factors. Children who suck their thumbs or fingers beyond age five have an increased chance of developing malocclusion.

By age 7, enough permanent teeth have come in and enough jaw growth has occurred that an orthodontist can identify current problems, anticipate future problems and alleviate parent's concerns if all seems normal. Any ongoing finger sucking or other oral habits can be assessed at this time as well. To schedule a consultation, call my office at 248-471-1581. The office is conveniently located at 39595 W. Ten Mile Road, Suite 111.

PS Children with very small spaces between their primary ("baby") teeth are at risk for malocclusion when their permanent teeth appear because the larger permanent teeth require more space

AVOIDING INSECT STINGS

Because individuals who are allergic to stinging insects can potentially suffer lifethreatening reactions, it helps to know how to prevent insects stings in the first place. Of course, stay away from stinging insects if possible. When they do fly around, remain calm and quiet and move slowly. Avoid brightly colored clothing, loose-fitting clothing that can trap the insects, and perfumes. Wear closed-toe shoes and avoid walking barefoot. Be careful when cooking, eating, or drinking sweet soda or juices, all of which can attract insects. Keep food covered until eaten. Keep trash covered and the surrounding area clean. Consider hiring an exterminator to destroy hives and nests around the home.

Additionally, be sure to keep prescribed allergy medications handy at all times and follow the instructions if you are stung. When you require the care of an allergist, call us at the ALLERGY AND ASTHMA CENTER OF MICHIGAN at (248) 473-6400. We are conveniently located at 24230 Karim Blvd. Suite 130, Novi.

P.S. If you have summer hay fever or frequent hives, call and volunteer for our ongoing research studies.

New school year and old lessons

Next week local children officially begin their academic school year. But we hope some of their most valuable life lessons will be ones already taught to them long before arriving inside a new classroom.

Parents of children young and old should take time during the next week to establish guidelines, reinforce old messages and provide support for children on the verge of becoming instantly overwhelmed.

If they have not already, parents and children should have open — and frequent — discussions about public safety, public conduct and individual responsibility.

Parents should use the new school year as yet another opportunity to remind young children about time-honored themes: stay on the sidewalk, don't talk to strangers, walk in groups and look both ways before crossing the street.

Older students should be reminded that enthusiasm should be tempered by responsible actions. Some students will be driving to school for the first time, in some cases carrying with them friends and siblings.

They should know a new school year brings with it suddenly increased traffic, young children darting into streets without looking and myriad other roadway distractions.

Older students should understand driving is a privilege, not a right. It carries with it an unspoken responsibility to drivers and pedestrians alike: that you will pay close attention to conditions around you and navigate them safely.

Additionally, driving students should again be reminded about the harsh realities facing those who use drugs and alcohol in combination with driving.

Next week marks a new school year. We hope local parents will continue to pass along to their children lessons of courtesy and respect, prudence and sound decision-making.

Such are lessons we each should renew, practice and pass along community-wide.

In time, we all come to learn: Life is the toughest teacher, because she gives her tests first. And her lessons after.

We stand corrected

In the Aug. 19 issue of the Northville Record:

• A story about township public utility inspector Rick Renault listed his son's name as "Adam." Renault's son is Eric.

• A story about the new township fire headquarters said a back-up power generator was 100,000 kilowatts. It should have read, "100 kilowatts (which converts to 100,000 watts)."

Maybury vision

In all of my 50 years, I have never had the experience of having a vision. Never, that is, until two days after a pair of century-old replacement barns rolled to a stop on the very spot where Maybury State Park lost its expansive previous barn to fire. With the memory of the smoldering ashes that once grand barn had become still painfully fresh in my mind, it was almost jolting to revisit the place on August 8th and behold - like the proverbial phoenix rising from the ashes - two "new" barns that almost seemed to have materialized there by way of some otherworldly, empathetic, benevolent power. I had to stare to reassure myself that what I was seeing was real.

Being somewhat of a cynic, I presumed that the spot where Maybury's original barn once stood would remain a scarred patch of earth for years to come. Sure, there was a groundswell of public support for a new barn, but with the State in no position to bring the old barn back and the Northville Community Foundation and Friends of Maybury trying but still well short of the figures needed to do so, it seemed we Maybury lovers would just have to use our imaginations when trying to glean a generic approximation of the classic 19th century American farming experience from a farm lacking the most basic of components: a genuine, working, musty, dusty, time-worn, "hands-on" barn. Happily, I see that I was wrong.

Thanks, firefighters

(Thank you to) local fire fighters, including Northville Township, for their efforts fundraising for MDA in the Fill-the-Boot campaign over the last weekend of July.

Detroit Regional Public Affairs Coordinator
Muscular Dystrophy Association

Firefighters help MDA

As the parents of a girl with Merosin Deficiency, we know firsthand how important the Muscular Dystrophy Association's work is to families like ours. We also know that MDA couldn't offer its wonderful programs without the dedicated support of the fire fighters in our community and across the country.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the inauguration of the International Association of Fire Fighters' partnership with MDA. In Metro Detroit, members of some 50 Locals help enable MDA to offer my family hope through research and help through quality medical care and assistance with obtaining medical equipment.

Across the country, fire fighters raise tens of millions of dollars each year through Fill-the-Boot campaigns, softball tournaments, bowl-a-thons and other special events. These funds help support some 400 research teams worldwide and 230 MDA clinics, including clinics at Children's Hospital, the Michigan Institute for Neurological Disorders and Wayne State University/Harper University Hospital. They also send my daughter, Natalie, and more than 4,000 other young sters to MDA summer camps, where they have great fun.

The strength and support MDA has given Natalie means more than I can say. Whenever you see fire fighters in the Detroit area, remember they're not only saving lives while they're doing their jobs, they're also helping to save and improve the lives of Natalie and other people with neuromuscular diseases in our community.

Kerry flip-flops

A letter writer in last weeks' edition suggests we read Kerry/Edwards 263-page manifesto prior to making up our minds in November. How can we know if these far left liberal lawyers will or can keep their promises? Actually, there is no way they can deliver on their smorgasbord of boasts. The best predictor of future behavior is to examine past behavior. An examination of their past accomplishments, in the Senate, reveals both have undistinguished careers; unless you cite Kerry's constant flip-flopping on issues as an accomplishment. His remark touting Hollywood "as the heart and soul of America", proves how out of touch he is with people who actually work for a living. And his claim of being in Cambodia, during his four month stint in Vietnam, is an example of another lie in a series of lies.

Declare 'Victory'

The Northville citizens who were appalled that Our Lady of Victory exercised their constitutional rights to seek protection of their property rights in a Court of law, can rest easy now. Apparently, a Circuit Court Judge agreed with the Church, that the Planning commission had to make a decision. The Commission's act of "tabling" the site plan decision was not an act of heroic civil service, but rather, typical back room procedural maneuvering. Tabling a matter has the same effect as "denying" it approval by not voting on the matter at all.

A judge agreed with the Church's legal and factual position and ordered the Planning Commission to do what it was legally obligated to do - make a decision. There's an old legal saying that, "If the facts are against you, pound the law. If the law is against you, pound the facts. And if the law and the facts are against you, pound the table." Those that opposed the Church's decision to seek legal help, should stop pounding the table. This includes those on the commission. For example, one commissioner is quoted as voicing concern about losing local control of the project because the State of Michigan ultimately oversees all school construction. If this is a legitimate concern then every school project in the State of Michigan should be opposed by the local community because the local community will not control the project. Is that rational thinking from a government official? Get over it and move on.

Robert G. Lahiff
Northville

Let judge decide

In the over thirty years we have lived in Northville I have noticed that (Our Lady of Victory) always encounters problems with the city whenever they try to make any changes. The usual method of resistance to (Our Lady of Victory) has been to put enough roadblocks in (the church's) path that they get worn down, give up and go away. I see the city council, planning commission and the (Our Lady of Victory) neighbors doing the same once again. The latest is astounding and makes me glad I am in the township and not the city. I think Judge Kelly should make Northville pay a high price for its illegal actions.

I conclude that the (Our Lady of Victory) area neighborhood, city fathers and planning commission must contain many anti-Catholics. There is a word for this and the word begins with a "B."

Summer thoughts: education, labor and Dream Crusin'

Notes and comments on some recent news events (kept mercifully brief in this season of high summer) ...

Phil Power
CHAIRMAN, HOMETOWN COMMUNICATIONS

Former U.S. Rep. William D. Ford died last Saturday. He represented western Wayne County and Downriver communities during his 30 years in Congress, where he chaired the powerful House Education and Labor Committee, and before that the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee. I first knew him when I worked for another Michigan congressman; Ford's reputation in Congress was that of somebody you did not want to cross.

Short-statured, intense and pugnacious, Bill Ford was a classic Democratic politician who did a great job representing his working class constituency. "The AFL-CIO sent me to Congress; the AFL-CIO keeps me in Congress; and the AFL-CIO will tell me when to leave Congress," he once told an AFL-CIO gathering, which explains why his opponents tried to pigeonhole him as a "labor stooge." Ford never forgot that his immigrant father died at age 42 in a factory fire (which the company tried to deny) and he made workplace safety one of his top priorities.

Ford was a leader in a generation of liberal Democratic politicians who made no bones about their belief that government had an important role to play in improving the lives of workers and poor people, and who were quite prepared to play political hardball to achieve their objectives. Ford soldiered on, partisanship and ideology unchanged, during a period when knee-jerk liberalism became increasingly unpopular. So perhaps his decision to retire from the House after 1994 (when the Republicans under Newt Gingrich took control) came at the right time.

The Woodward Dream Cruise rumbles to life again this week, enchanting more than a million spectators lined up along 16 miles of Route One from Eight Mile to Pontiac. They are bound to have more fun than last year, when the Great Blackout of '03 put a damper on things. During the decade it's been in existence, the Cruise has lifted spirits, exalted our hometown industry and made retro automotive design a fashion statement. That's a great record, and one that still stirs the heart of yours truly who, at age 17, wanted nothing more than to go cruisin' down Woodward Avenue.

Given the decades-long slide in market share of our domestic auto manufacturers, however, I can't help but be reminded of the famous comment of the early 19th century German historian and philosopher, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel: "The owl of Minerva takes flight only at dusk." If we remember that Minerva was the Greek goddess of history whose symbol was the owl, Hegel was commenting on the tendency of civilizations to become preoccupied with their history exactly at the time they enter their decline. It's a useful perspective to bear in mind while you're thrilling to the rumble of mighty exhausts.

Michigan voters turned in their usual fairly sane performance in the August primary elections. Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson and the forces of moderation (something that will seem amazing to anyone who remembers Brooks' political debut amid the bussing controversies of the early 1970s) defeated the hard right-wingers led by County Commissioner Tom McMillin of Auburn Hills.

Best news of all was from the Seventh Congressional District, a sprawling piece of real estate running from the suburbs west of Lansing through Battle Creek and Jackson and into western Washtenaw County. Former State Sen. John (Joe) Schwarz (R-Battle Creek) easily won a GOP primary that featured no less than five other candidates who were vying for the title of "most conservative." A "moderate" Republican (whatever that means these days) Schwarz told me he was delighted that voters realized that there are other issues at hand than guns, gays and abortion. When I asked which ones, Schwarz answered, "jobs and the economy, national security, the war in Iraq, health care, the environment and our national infrastructure."

Schwarz's victory came in part because he was the only moderate candidate in a crowded election where the prevailing wisdom was that candidates had to pander to the right wing to get anywhere. But it also came because he is tough, smart, experienced and sensible enough to realize what's important and what's emotional fluff. He'll likely be elected in November, after which the big question is whether he can present himself as enough of a "regular Republican" (whatever that means) to survive a potential challenge two years from now.

Ford was a leader in a generation of liberal Democratic politicians who made no bones about their belief that government had an important role to play in improving the lives of workers and poor people

Kagan's elephant decision no 300-pound gorilla after all

Whatever their politics and whatever their views of what's happening in the state and the nation, just about everyone in Michigan in recent years has been happy about one thing: The Detroit Zoo.

Jack Lessenberry
EDITORIAL VICE PRESIDENT, HOMETOWN COMMUNICATIONS

That is, until the director, Ron Kagan, announced a startling decision this spring. This fall, he will send away the zoo's two Asian elephants, Wanda and Winky, because he feels it is not fair to keep them in captivity.

And they won't be replaced as long as he has anything to say about it, which means the zoo, which has had at least one elephant ever since the place opened in 1928, will have them no more.

That has prompted the first major controversy surrounding the zoo since Kagan arrived at the end of 1992 and inaugurated sort of a renaissance at the facility, which, really isn't in Detroit at all, but suburban Royal Oak.

Since then, the zoo, which by the 1980s had become a bit rundown and scandal-ridden, has again been recognized as one of the best zoos in the country. Anyone who hasn't been there in a decade is bound to be blown away by the vast range of new exhibits and improvements.

They include the Arctic Ring of Life, which simulates a natural polar environment; a stunning Wildlife Interpretative Gallery, a vast exhibit that shows great apes in something close to their natural habitat; and, for frog and salamander lovers, the National Amphibian Conservation Center.

Attendance has soared, and the zoo has won favorable national attention in everything from industry journals to the Discovery Channel and Animal Planet. Virtually all of this was largely due to Kagan, 52, a wry and self-effacing man who has a doctorate in zoology, is fascinated by the science of management, and is delighted to talk about anything at the zoo except himself.

Lately, however, he has been talking a lot about elephants, which traditionally have been among the most popular animals at any zoo. "Our mission is celebrating and saving wildlife, and educating people about them," he said.

"But there is an ethical dimension. Anyone in charge of an animal has a responsibility to give that animal the best quality of life possible, and we just can't reasonably do that adequately here," he said. The zoo would need to set aside 20 acres and put a heated dome over half of it, "which would cost maybe $50 million, which would be just crazy to contemplate."

Currently, the zoo's two elephants live in an enclosure that is just more than 1 acre. That's higher than industry standards, but far less than they really need. Winky, 51, and Wanda, 45, suffer from arthritis and foot problems from being confined in such a small space; elephants in the wild often roam for miles every day. "Besides, they don't belong in cold climates, anymore than you can responsibly maintain polar bears in the deep South."

So before winter, they will be resettled in a vast wildlife refuge in either Tennessee or California, depending on input from the American Zoological Society. Instead, the zoo will use the former elephant area to show rhinoceroses.

That decision was denounced in a Detroit News editorial, which said the zoo should keep the elephants, which after all, "don't have to worry about lions biting them on the backside." One reader wrote in and suggested the zoo director be sent "to roam in California or Tennessee instead."

But zoo officials were astounded that the vast majority of responses supported the decision. "We normally think 200 letters or e-mails on an issue is big. We have gotten more than 2,000 on the elephants — 90 percent of them supporting the decision to give them a better life," Kagan said.

Some old-timers, such as Beatrice Scalise of Plymouth, reminisced about the days when kids could come to the zoo and ride on an elephant, then added, "I have more respect for animals nowadays, so I say let them go free."

People will have a final few months to say good-bye. Kagan, who lives in a house on the zoo grounds, says he isn't at all surprised if there are some hard feelings. Nor does he expect all zoos to follow his lead.

"We've been told all our lives that it is OK to have elephants in captivity," he said. "You can't expect people to suddenly understand overnight."

Yet he has faith that in a world in which sensitivity to the rights and needs of animals is growing, Detroiters will "get it" and continue to support the zoo. "We have to be creative in how we promote nature in ways that go beyond the traditional," he says.

"That's the challenge."

Not necessarily a good dream: Next Saturday's annual Dream Cruise, in which people fill Woodward Avenue with ancient vehicles is a mixed blessing for Kagan. On one hand, he loves cars. On the other, it effectively blocks the zoo entrance, and can cost the park as much as $50,000 in lost revenue.

Dixon comes home, briefly, for potluck and family

It's a small thing really, a Sunday potluck dinner.

But that's the way neighbors in the Northville Commons subdivision, along Six Mile Road, would like to outwardly express to 20-year-old Rob Dixon how happy they are to see him home, see him safe.

David Aguilar
RECORD EDITOR

Its a brief respite. Two weeks is what the U.S. Army told Dixon he had coming when they tapped him on the shoulder while stationed in Afghanistan.

Fly to Atlanta, they told him. The Army will get you home from there.

Dixon called his mother, Mary, when he arrived in Atlanta. She knew he'd be rotating home for a brief visit. But she had no idea when.

"Hi, Mom... I'll be home in four hours."

She cried, then began cooking. He walked through the door. And she cried again. Then got back to cooking: roasted chicken, barbecued turkey and Meatlover's Pizza.

Arms swallowed the 2002 Northville High School graduate who joined the army following the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C.

But not because of them, he is quick to point out. His father, Len, had attended West Point, then served in the army for six years.

"Serving my country has always been big in my family," Dixon said. "So it just seemed like the right thing to do.

"I think everyone should serve their country. It's the right thing to do."

Now he serves as an infantry-mortarman. He's a grunt, part of the 101st Airborne, Bravo Company 2-27, formerly stationed for three months in Iraq at an undisclosed location.

Since March, he has been stationed in Afghanistan, where mountains and moderating temperatures are much different that the flat, hot terrain of Iraq.

"It's hard work," he said. "And it's tough being away from your family, but it's nothing you can't control."

His 25th Division, whose home base is Oahu, Hawaii has a simple mission: maintain the peace, promote free elections.

Tall orders for a unit better known on the ground as the "Wolfhounds." His battalion numbers about 1,000.

"We are making progress, and it is very good progress," Dixon said, admittedly nervous about disclosing too much information. The Army has rules.

But none of them forbid him from enjoying Sunday's potluck dinner, catered by neighbors and local businesses, well-wishers whose only agenda is to bathe within one simple notion: He's home. He's safe.

"It's good because I can see all the neighbors and people I haven't seen in a while," Dixon said.

He's spent the past week relaxing, he said. He returns to work next Thursday. The work is satisfying, he said.

But it's good be home again, enjoying simple things, waving to neighbors, talking to the mailman.

"Days like this," Dixon said, "when everything is green. And it's a nice temperature, and you can go outside. I don't know, you just enjoy it."

Janelle Matney
RECORD SPECIAL WRITER

Northville's summer-long Farmer's Market is shifting from flowers and shrubs ready to brighten your yard to a freshly picked harvest of flavor.

Leading into the cooler days of fall, vendors are currently shifting their products to reflect the changing season.

Now is prime time to pick up the freshest fruits and vegetables. Every Thursday until Oct. 28, annuals, perennials, produce, baked goods and crafts are just some of the items that can be found at Seven Mile and Sheldon roads.

Since the flower planting days have slowly faded away, shipments of edible goodies are filling the space of the once dominant floral displays. Judy Snider is a vendor at the market who sells flowers, shrubbery and herbs at her stand.

"People like to buy when things are in bloom so they can see what they are getting," Snider said, "and since the time for planting is gone, the market is quickly changing over its products week to week."

Homegrown herbs, such as thyme, oregano and rosemary are always hot sellers, according to Snider, because people always enjoy cooking with fresh cut herbs.

Organic tomatoes are another crowd favorite and can be found at Mandy and Richard Carpenter's stand. They set up shop on Thursdays at 5:30 a.m. to sell their certified organic foods.

This is their second year at the Northville Farmer's Market. They said their organic foods always sell well because people appreciate that pesticides aren't used on any of their Michigan grown crops.

Charlotte Barel likes to frequent the market for sweet corn and fresh cut flowers. Reasonable prices bring the shoppers back for repeat business.

Such a vast array of Michigan's best keeps the market going strong. Blueberries, eggplant, cucumbers, peaches, apples, green peppers, banana bread and hanging plants line the tables as shoppers browse.

For those who like to get into the holiday spirit, unique Halloween decorations can be found at the market in its final month of this year.

Variety in the selection of products is key to its success, Snider said.

Even though some venders prefer the product lines to be limited at a farmer's market, "I think it would be a mistake to limit it to just one thing," she said.

MILL RACE

Historic Mill Race Village

In August of 1983 stakes were pounded into the ground as the foundation was laid for a blacksmith shop. It was the first reproduction building in the village. A re-creation of one operated on Main Street around the turn of the century by John Hirsch. Fran Gazlay, chairman of the building project, said they were asking everyone to save stones. He indicated it was going to require a vast supply of stones as the entire blacksmith shop was going to be fronted with cobblestone. The men who helped work on this project came to be known as the Stone Gang. They continue to meet here every Tuesday morning to help maintain the village. Come and meet them in person.

Fine Threads gets new home, keeps old Northville friends

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

The tailored, navy pin-stripe awning above Fine Threads on Main Street helped stitch Mark Trudeau into the permanent fabric of downtown Northville.

The custom facade was the final fitting following Trudeau's purchase of the multi-tenant building earlier this year. It now houses his haberdashery.

Trudeau said it made good business sense to buy the building located at 105 E. Main Street, following the closing of Morrison's Antiques Previously, Trudeau's store had been located just down the street.

In March he re-opened his 3-1/2-year-old upscale men's clothing store at its new location. And along with a new address came a familiar complementary operation, Bentley's Alterations.

Trudeau said he is pleased the 7,000 square foot building he and his wife, Annie, purchased is now completely occupied. He said both old and new customers stop by.

Trudeau said a continued dedication to customer familiarity, brand-name merchandise, store ambiance and the expert abilities of seamstress Maria Ross have each yielded positive customer feedback.

Inside

Tall oak display cabinets are neatly stocked with suits, starched cuffs and collars, slacks and sports shirts. Belts, socks and shoes are artfully intermingled. Tufted leather furniture, timeless music, select antique furniture and vintage sports equipment breathe elite men's club

If visitors find the new store eerily familiar, it's because the Fine Threads staff almost duplicated the Long building layout, Trudeau said

"We wanted to make sure we brought that same flavor into the Morrison building," "Everything we had done there fit in here perfectly. The feedback I'm hearing so far is this is more cozy. This has the old flavor of Northville in it."

The menswear and tailoring operation occupy 2,000 square feet. His upstair and next-door tenants at addresses 103 through 107 Main Street are home decor, financial advice, and computer-search-engine companies. His latest lease is with a fellow merchant in need of gallery space, he said.

Trudeau declined to reveal the amount of his purchase, other than it was less than the $1 million at which it was appraised. "It was a significant investment."

Trudeau said he counts himself lucky to have heard about the availability of his Main Street building "A building has not sold in downtown Northville through a realtor in 30 years," he said. "I got wind about this building going for sale . . . it was a 24-hour window to pull the deal together. It was a lucky find, no doubt about it"

Trudeau invests in downtown's future

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Mark Trudeau recently planted his business in downtown Northville, just a few blocks from his home. Now he wants to make sure it grows there.

The lessee-turned-landlord has definite ideas about the identity the town need to cultivate to attract the clientele that will help specialty shops like his thrive. The haberdasher said his stream of customers regularly voices their opinion about what would bring them downtown to shop.

"We were told our store is classy enough to be in Birmingham or Troy," said the owner of Fine Threads, 105 E. Main Street. "We've been downtown residents in the historic district for 14 years. That's why we chose Northville."

"We're here for the long haul."

The business owner already was involved in the community as a resident and Northville Central Business Association member. He said purchasing a multi-tenant building has further fostered his interest in the direction of Northville's Downtown Development Authority.

"I made a big commitment in this town," he said "I want to see things go the right way."

"We need more viable businesses to bring people in from the township every day," Trudeau said. "We need to give them a reason to not drive to the mall. We have to get the right mix of businesses"

Fine Threads' designer labels carry price tags associated with investment dressing. Customers clamored for the clothes featured in upscale department stores such as Nordstrom and Nieman Marcus, Trudeau said He listened, and they keep coming back, he said

There is a certain appeal that comes with an independent operation in the heart of a small town, the owner said. "People have said to me, "You know what I liked best about my first visit in? You left me alone.'"

Trudeau said he makes a point to greet patrons, not ambush them. 'I'm still building this business Every customer is crucial Every night I lie down and ask myself, 'Did that guy have a good experience?'"

People drive to the downtown business from surrounding Northville, Novi, Plymouth and Farmington The appeal is the right product at a fair value with great service, Trudeau said

"I'm a firm believer in a small quaint 'Mayberry' community, he said "You have to get to know your customers You don't get that at big stores"

Seamstress Maria Ross' ability to quickly turn around tailoring requests often closes the deal, he said "He cannot get that at Nieman Marcus or Nordstrom, no matter what." Fine Threads also has special-order capability, Trudeau said

"This business was a home run as far as selection of product — the mixture of goods and services," Trudeau said "Men that have a nice house, have a nice car, they want nice clothes They're at a point in their life they can wear nice clothes"

Settle 'Our Lady'

What a shame that the City of Northville Planning Commission, could not render a decision on the merits of the city ordinance, instead of injecting their own "wish list" for the project. They knew what they had to do, in fact the courts told them what they had to do. Yet, they did it so reluctantly, that it was hard to hear, as if they were ashamed to say it.

Do they not know that (Our Lady of Victory) school is the "jewel" of the Northville School District?

The demeanor of the commission was apparent with the closing remarks by the one gentleman who always had the respect and ear of the city fathers. But his remarks were so mean and vitriol, I will not repeat them. It is enough to say he has lost all respect as a professional.

Meads Mill complaint misguided

This is in regard to the Civil Rights Complaint filed by a parent of an African American Meads Mill School student. Apparently, one or more of the Caucasian students used a racial slur toward the African American student. Clearly, these students were in the wrong. If my child had done that, he'd be grounded for a month and certain privileges would be taken away, just to let him know how serious this was However, I feel that Ms. Kirk (the African American student's mother) has blown the incident out of proportion.

The school handled the incident appropriately. They interviewed all the students involved. The main "culprit" admitted he was wrong and apologized

What did Ms. Kirk want the school to do? Did she think the offending student should be expelled? Did she feel that the police should be called and the child placed in Juvenile Detention?

Ever since schools were started kids have been guilty of name calling. Of course, this incident was much more serious since it involved a slur against a race. However, the offending students were severely reprimanded. As I understand, the one child apologized to the African American student. What more should be done? Unfortunately, by over reacting, as I feel Ms. Kirk has done, good friendships have probably been permanently destroyed. I hope not. But Ms. Kirk's actions promotes the very racism, she has accused the Caucasian students of. I know I'd think twice before letting my child associate with Ms. Kirk's son because I'd be afraid she might accuse my child of some other action. I hope she feels her complaint was worth it.

Backing Bush

I often read detailed literature about President George W. Bush. While, I applaud the amount of people who have written the Northville Record exercising their Freedom of Speech, I cannot help but notice the misinformation that is used to attempt to persuade the citizens of Northville to unite against the Bush Administration.

Some of the political jargon written about President George W. Bush is completely baseless and cannot be backed up by factual information. One of the most preposterous (Letters to the Editor) I had read called for women to vote against Bush. Comparing the Bush Administration to any shape or form of The Taliban is not only absurd but an unintelligible analogy.

As I read through the (Letter to the Editor), I was dumbfounded at all the misinformation and allegations presented as fact by the writer; it was quite risible. These "explanations" for cause to vote against President Bush are nothing more than skewed data and half-truths. For example, records found from The United States State Department, Peruvian Congress, and the Population Research Institute "revealed that the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) has been actively involved in coercive abortion and forced sterilization campaigns in several countries, despite denial of the charges by the UNFPA's supporters" (http://www.lifenews com/intl10.html).

In addition to that, the (Letter to the Editor) claimed President Bush was polluting the air. Once again this is untrue. President Bush's "Clear Skies" legislation calls for the improvement of air quality by reducing power plants' emissions of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide, and mercury by approximately 70% over the next 15 years, more than any other clean air initiative. In addition to "Clear Skies," President Bush in December 2003, signed the "Healthy Forests Initiative" legislation to assist in the preservation our National Parks by revitalizing forests and provide aid for forest fire prevention.

It has been well documented about the job losses due to The Post-Clinton Administration recession. During the final years of the Clinton Presidency, economists had predicted an eminent recession. This inherited recession occurred shortly after the September 11th terrorist attacks. Part of the recession is due to the high tariffs that foreign countries impose of American goods, thus making it harder to sell and distribute American made products. President Bush is actively pursuing free trade agreements with foreign countries, similar to those he recently signed with Singapore and Chile. This opens up a fair market and creates more jobs Once more jobs have been created, the economy will experience a recovery and the "huge deficit to be paid by today's children" will become a surplus given the right amount of time.

For one to make the accusations that President Bush keeps "us vulnerable to terrorists in so many ways" would imply that President Bush has done nothing to ensure the security of Americans. The Department of Homeland Security, a department created by President Bush, has already implemented numerous improvements to protect us domestically. President Bush passed the Patriot Act to break down barriers between law enforcement and intelligence officers. He signed the Smart Border Declaration which established numerous ways to increase security on our borders. He also created The Terrorist Threat Integration Center which gathers all threats both here and abroad and filters them into a national database. There are numerous steps he has taken to protect all Americans.

The allegations that President Bush brought us to "an unnecessary war sold by false reasons" is an inaccurate statement. While there have been lapses in credible information, an NPR report in February 2004 reported, "Intelligence experts say much of the information provided on Iraq was accurate."

In short, the accusations and allegations made by "Women Should Vote" (Letter to the Editor) are nothing more than half-truths and skewed data. The above is factual based information and can be confirmed by multiple sources. It is great that women can see through false advertisements because I am confident that American women will be able to see through the these ludicrous allegations.

FORD: Northville junior heads to washington, D.C.

mom, Maribeth, struck a deal:

"She told me that she wouldn't tell me until I got off the plane," Ford explained. When he returned, "My mom has this pin on, and it was this flashing American flag pin — and I didn't get it at first. It turns out she had found out while I was in Germany, and that was her hint that I got in, that I was accepted."

Confirmation came the day Tim left, July 7. He'd missed the call by about an hour.

"The competition was so fierce," Maribeth said. "I certainly felt he was qualified. We were really thrilled. It's going to be tough saying good-bye for five months, but he's always been very independent, so I think he'll handle it well."

Orientation, when Ford will officially be employed at a pre-tax/residence fee salary of about $1,345 per month, is on Sept. 5. He'll head off with his mom, dad and younger sister Kelli two days earlier.

Working on the Hill

During his Washington stay, Ford will be busy. He's signed up for five classes held in the Jefferson Building of the U.S. Library of Congress: Honors American Literature and Composition, Honors Pre-Calculus, Honors U.S. History with an Advanced Placement test emphasis, Honors Physics, and Energy and Public Policy.

Some Saturdays will feature tours of historical sites through an interdisciplinary study program.

"School will start at 6:45 in the morning," Ford said. After classes let out, he said, "From there I go to work" — until 5 p.m., or until the House adjourns for the day.

Congressional duties range from running legislative documents between the House and Senate, to taking down session minutes. Though it takes memorizing all 435 representatives' names, being a Cloakroom page, which involves relaying messages and reminders, is a task Ford is eyeing.

"I get to be up and moving around," Ford said. "It's probably the most interacting with the members."

He'll dorm at the House's Page Residence Hall, located on Capitol Hill, and wear a navy blue blazer, long sleeved white shirt, dark gray pants, comfortable black shoes and an issued, striped tie.

Paging, Mr. Ford

Ford comes prepared for busy days. This year will be his third serving as Class of 2006 president at Northville High. He's also been active with the Northville Youth Assistance, helping to organize the SKRUFF (Suburban Kids Rockin' Under Ford Field) event, and working to spearhead the Northville Youth Committee Action Council, founded to help put into motion ideas born in community dialogues.

A member of his school's National Honor Society and German National Honor Society, Ford organizes monthly events with Rotary Interact and tutors a German student.

What might the future hold?

"I know being president is very unrealistic," Ford said. But he's aiming high: a political science degree at Georgetown University is his goal. He'd like to eventually run for office, but wants to "ride the wave and see where it goes."

"I'm just really excited to have this opportunity," Ford said. "What an honor it's going to be just to see what these people (do). Who knows, I might want to be in their shoes someday, too."

Township Briefs

NORTHVILLE

Board of Trustees meeting tonight

A variety of topics are on tap for tonight's regular board of trustees meeting, which will begin at 7:30 p.m. in township hall, located at 41600 West Six Mile Rd.

Ongoing park projects will once again take center stage. Community Park payment, progress and change order information will be announced. Previously unexpected costs, which arose after rubble from the former state-owned Phoenix Correctional Facility needed to be excavated, should be reported. Last month, $600,000 was the estimate.

The project has an approximately $3.1 million construction cap.

Also on the agenda are: the public safety dispatch contract recently approved by the City of Northville; public safety's impending purchase of taser equipment; and routine payment information on the two new municipal buildings.

Tonight's meeting is the first since the Aug. 3 election.

Speaking of municipal buildings ...

While the new township fire headquarters is up and running, it will be more than a month before the same can be said for the new township hall at the southwest corner of Sheldon and Six Mile roads.

Township manager Chip Snider said a "real tentative target date" for Usztan Construction to complete its work is now Oct. 2. The original expected completion time was early June; most recently, the estimate was late August or early September.

"There has been an increase in activity and resources put in township hall as a result of the (occupying) of the fire station," Snider said. "All the arrows are going in the same direction."

Snider said the top two floors are all but finished, but the main floor and basement still are underway. Usztan must pay $750 in penalties daily for each day construction runs over.

Usztan paid about $60,000 following construction delays at the recently completed fire headquarters.

Total building costs for township hall are almost $6.17 million, and $3.35 million for the fire headquarters. Renovation of the current township hall, which will be used solely as the township police station once the new township hall is completed, is about $1.63 million.

An additional $3.9 million will be paid for various fees and interest on the 20-year bonds used to fund the projects.

Beck Road construction update

The end may be in sight for the slow-going on Beck Road between Five and Six Mile roads, according to the Wayne County Engineering Division.

Project Engineer Craig Wobrock said he anticipates a stretch of Beck — which is receiving an added through-traffic lane in each direction — will be complete "hopefully probably" by mid- to late-September.

"They're getting ready to pave the two northbound lanes out there," Wobrock said. "We look to be paving the other side in about two weeks. The weather has slowed us down some."

Wobrock said turnarounds, restoration items, permanent signs, seeding, sodding and another layer of asphalt have yet to be completed.

The current project started this spring, but technically began last fall with the Six Mile/Beck intersection. Last year, the county worked on Sheldon Road between Five Mile Road and Tournament Drive, and Six Mile between Beck and Ridge roads prior to that.

Preliminary talks roll along

Preliminary talks between the township and Real Estate Interests, Inc. regarding the former Northville Psychiatric Hospital land continued two Fridays in a row, on Aug. 6 and Aug. 13.

"What we're doing now is meeting with the developer to talk about process, to talk about what the township procedures are for introducing a plan of this magnitude," Township Planner Maureen Osiecki said. "There are many preliminary items that need to be discussed."

"Items" include ground water, sewage capacity and traffic studies, Osiecki said. More meetings will likely follow before Real Estate Interests, the developer that won the land from the state in a bidding process, submits its preliminary site plan to the board of trustees.

Spiritual seeker signs

This Sunday, Aug. 22, at 1 p.m., author and "spiritual speaker" Molly Srode will be at the Barnes and Noble at Haggerty and Six Mile roads to sign copies of her book, "Creating a Spiritual Retirement: A Guide to the Unseen Possibilities in Our Lives."

Srode, a former Catholic nun and retired hospital chaplain, writes about her own spiritual journey, gearing her work towards readers of all faith traditions. She and her husband, Bernie, publish the Senior Spirituality Newsletter.

Northville searches for its queen

Let the competition to be Queen of the 16th annual Victorian Festival begin.

The Northville Chamber of Commerce seeks a local woman to reign over this year's Sept. 17-19 festivities, starting with the parade Friday evening. The queen must be at least 18 and provide her own costume. The winner will be chosen in a random drawing from entry forms submitted through 4 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 1.

Residents interested should mail, fax or drop off entries marked "Victorian Festival Queen," to the Northville Chamber of Commerce, 195 S. Main St., Northville, MI 48167. The fax number is (248) 349-8730.

For the first time, Chamber members are adding treasure to the royal rewards of crown and sash, said Janet Bloom, chamber marketing and events director. "Queen Victoria" will receive a complimentary dinner for two at Little Italy Ristorante and a spa treatment at Utopia Salon.

The queen's responsibilities include:

- a horse and carriage ride in the Victorian Festival parade Friday
- receiving a key to the city from dignitaries after the parade
- appearing at Mill Race Historical Village
- visiting her subjects downtown.

"We want someone who will play to the hilt the role of Queen Victoria," Bloom said. "It's meant to be part of the charm of the Victorian Festival."

The marketing director complimented the enthusiasm of previous royals, including last year's queen Margit Erickson of Novi. "They have fun with it. They walk through the streets greeting their 'subjects.'"

Erickson was a festival enthusiast even before she donned her royal garb, she said. "I would always dress up, even as a participant just walking the streets," she said. "You like to support the community."

Her role as queen was an enjoyable extension of that, she said. "It was all fun. It was nice to meet people and get their reaction to the whole festival. It was all so positive."

Victorian Festival Queen

The Northville Victorian Festival is looking for a local woman to play Queen Victoria for the weekend of the sixteenth annual Victorian Festival, September 17th - 19th 2004.

The Queen will be honored during the weekend with:

• A horse and carriage ride in the Victorian Festival parade Friday evening at 6:30 p.m.
• Be presented with a Key to the City from dignitaries after parade

Complete your Royal Weekend with:

A dinner for two at Little Italy
Relax during a spa treatment at Utopia Salon

Requirements: Must be at least 18 years-old and provide own costume. The winner will be chosen in a random drawing.

Northville athletes work to be the best

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

So you want to be a starter, eh?

Tired of sitting the bench, watching all your teammates get playing time? You want to be on the field?

Well, it takes a bit more than just want to get there.

"It takes dedication," said John Mullen, a senior starter for the Northville football team. "It's a lot of hard work and dedication and you've got to have a love for the game you play and the desire to play at the highest level you can."

Mullen knows exactly what it takes. He transferred into the Northville High School his freshman year after a brief stint in Georgia and 13 years in New Jersey. He didn't quite stack up to the expectations football coach Clint Alexander had for a starter.

"I've been playing football since I was seven," Mullen said.

But experience wasn't enough. His junior year, he found himself sharing time on the junior varsity squad as well as with the varsity team.

"We were trying to get him some more experience in this program and trying to build him up," Alexander said.

The tactic worked. By the end of the season, Mullen was pressing for starting time on the varsity roster against the likes of Taylor Lebeis — the team's best offensive lineman.

Mullen said his own dedication and loyal teammates get much of the credit. But he also points to the weight room. When asked how much he owes to his time pumping iron, Mullen replied flatly: "Everything."

The difference has been stark, he said.

"I've gained so much strength over the past summer. Coach (Steve) Mandregger has showed me so much. It was a lot of hard work, but it was fun too."

Mullen has not only been inked in as a starter on the offensive line, but the 5-feet-11-inch, 235-pound senior is also a leader.

"If someone messes up on the line, I don't have to say a thing," said Alexander. "John is the first to whip them back in shape and get us going again."

The weight room has paid dividends for Mullen, who is squatting 470 pounds, deadlifting 480 and benching just about 310 pounds.

"Hitting the weight room with a coach like Mandregger is the best thing an athlete can do," Mullen said. "You're not trying to build yourself with illegal drugs or anything. It's just hard work, which is the healthiest way and the best way."

Fast as can be

Lindsay Williams has never been the kind of athlete to complain. She puts in an amazing amount of hours during season to make herself a better athlete in her three sports — cross country, cheerleading and track.

During the off-season, she does even more.

"I believe (working out) has kept me from getting injured and has made me stronger and more athletically fit," said Williams, a junior. "I feel better prepared because I have more endurance and am more toned for running."

Last year, Williams recorded a career-best 22:49 in cross country. Already this year in camp, she has eclipsed 22:15.

Speed isn't the only thing Williams has gained from her time in the weight room. She's also proved cheerleaders aren't just powderpuffs.

"She's been the push-up champ for two straight years now," Alexander noted. "She beats all the guys."

That's because Williams doesn't mind pounding out 60-70 reps in a single session.

"Most of the time I don't count," she admitted. "It's nice to beat the boys though. Girls are usually considered weak and I'm glad I can prove to them I have the strength to beat them."

Though Williams conceded the public's overall sports perception is that girls can't compete with boys in the weight room, she said don't expect the coaches to take it easy just because of her gender.

"I thought they might have gone easier with the girls and I was surprised at the amount of working out they expected," Williams said of her first days in the weight room two years ago. "They put the girls right in with the boys and usually the ones who play linebacker. You have to own up to yourself and push right in."

And just because she's a cheerleader doesn't mean she's going to back down.

"It made me prove to them that just because I'm a cheerleader doesn't mean I can't hold my own," Williams said. "They might not think cheerleading is a sport, but I'm just as fit as the football guys and I workout along side of them. I'm an athlete just like they are."

Showing up equals improved strength

At 6-feet-5-inches and 250 pounds, Mark Yassay is a sight to see. He's intimidating, though he doesn't mean to be.

Following two years of dedicated training, the senior lineman can squat 475 pounds and powerclean 305 pounds. He never thought weightlifting could make such a difference.

"I liked to do it," Yassay said. "I really enjoy the camaraderie. I started lifting because I wanted to make friends."

Now Yassay continues lifting, mostly to be around his friends and teammates. He enjoys each repetition.

"That's just Mark," Alexander said. "He's not hiding anything. He really started playing football and lifting weights because he wanted to make friends."

Now Yassay stands as a sculpted model of admiration, Alexander said. He's built himself into a starter on the offensive line who will also see plenty of playing time on defense.

The key, said Yassay, is a good support system. He said his mother, Cindy, his dad, Mark, and brother, Mike, have all helped push him to be the best he can be. He said his girlfriend, fellow athlete Jenna Sielof, has also been a major component in the time and dedication he gives to weight lifting and football.

"Having that kind of support makes it easier," he said.

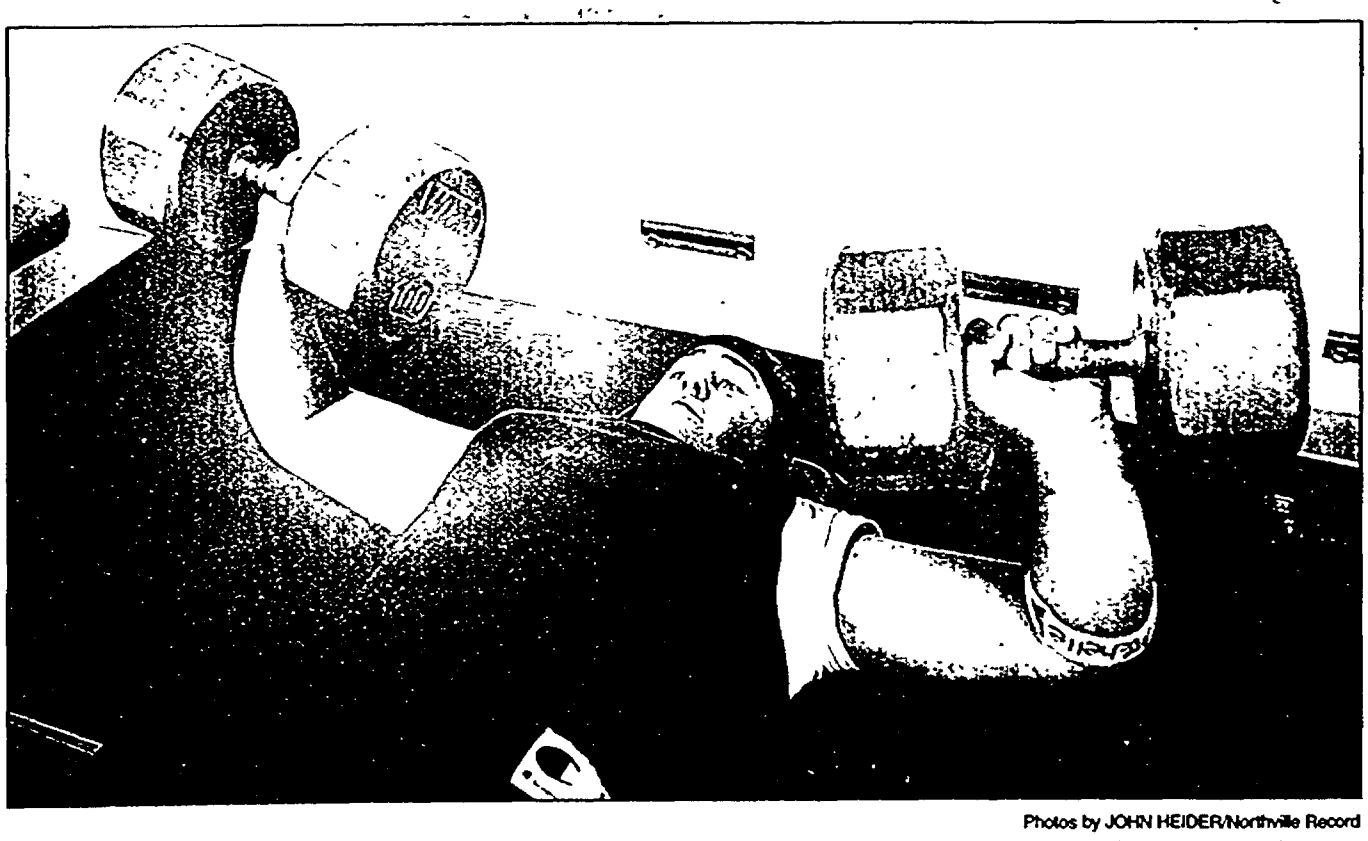

Yassay said weight room success mirrors life: showing up is half the battle.

"You have to show up," he said. "If you show up, you'll get better. The coaches aren't just going to let you sit there and do nothing. You'll get better and better."

Yassay said weight lifting benefits don't end on the playing field.

"I support the program 100 percent," he said. "It has helped me in life, in school and in everything. This program is the real deal."

Northville's athletes are always looking to be the biggest and the best. TOP: Lindsay Williams lifts a 15-pound dumbbell as she helps herself get into shape for the three sports in which she participates. MIDDLE: Mark Yassay has only played two years of football and thanks to the weight room is one of the best players on the team; BOTTOM: John Mullen lifts dumbells with ease. Mullen shared time with the junior varsity football team last year as a junior and is now a starter on the offensive line.

Samuel, go pack your bags

I knew this was going to be a tough interview — maybe my toughest to date.

I sat down at Frogger's Smoothie Bar, cleared my throat and set a digital recorder down on the table in front of me. Immediately, I caught him glancing down at it. And then back up at me.

"Shouldn't we do this over pizza?" Samuel asked. "Maybe a Big Mac or a Whopper to wash it down with?"

I shook my head. If anything, this interview would be conducted over a turkey sandwich with light mayonnaise and wheat bread. The very thought of it seemed to disgust him.

"I'm getting real tired of this game you're playing," Samuel said.

I feigned innocence. What was he talking about?

"You brought me here, to this public place, so I wouldn't make a fuss," he spat. "You're trying to get rid of me once and for all. You can't do that, Sam. We've been friends for a long time. We're inseparable."

That's what bothered me for so long. Samuel has been my buddy for a long time. He's sat through Chinese buffets, all-you-can-eat pizza bars and Friday night fish fries. He was even there when I ate 20 McDonald's hamburgers in high school and was there when I couldn't quite keep down 10 Bray's hamburgers in a 20-minute eating contest. Samuel, for those who don't know, is my obesity. He's my large (and for too long) in-charge alter ego whose little voice has always told me it's just fine to eat five burritos for dinner.

Sam Eggleston

"They're only beef and beans wrapped in a flour tortilla for crying out loud," he'd bark.

But each are nearly 400 calories. Didn't he read the label?

"Labels? Those are for health-food junkies and freaks who jog every morning," Samuel retorted. "Haven't they ever heard of a car?"

I'm sure they have. I have too, but that hasn't stopped me from walking from my apartment to work nearly every day. Samuel isn't happy about that either. He can feel himself losing control.

"How much of me have you lost?" he asked, edgily.

I don't need to tell him that at last check it was 25 pounds. Samuel weighed in at about 150 pounds (the amount I'd like to shed during the next three years) when I first started working with the Water Wheel Health Club in Northville. I've used their equipment, trainers and Apex system to shed unwanted weight.

Thanks to Apex, the Water Wheel, my family and friends, Samuel now weighs 125 pounds.

"I bet you're really proud of yourself," he said flippantly, watching me down the end of his nose as I considered my dinner options: boneless skinless chicken breast sounded good. Samuel didn't mind that. But he preferred it breaded and fried. Instead I planned to grill it.

"With barbecue sauce?" he asked.

I shook my head: "No." Maybe a little salt and pepper. Boiled potatoes on the side, with a cup of French-style green beans.

Samuel wasn't so sure. "How about some dinner rolls, a bowl of chili and a slab of butter and sour cream on those potatoes?"

I stand firm. "No, Samuel. Too many calories."

"There you go again," he said. "Calories, calories, calories. You're going to start doing yoga soon, aren't you? Maybe some stinkin' Pilates?"

Pilates? "Now that you mention it, why not? It does involve a lot of core muscle exercises," I respond.

"This is stupid," Samuel groaned. "Just get a whole slab of pork ribs, gnaw on them for a while and let's call this little game over."

He continued his childish rant. He was standing on the Smoothie bar table, insistent on drawing public attention, determined to get his way.

I watched him, embarrassed. He was part of me, the part which for too long had always run things. I shook my head, then left.

"Leaving already?" Samuel asked. "The baby getting tired of me picking on him? Go cry at the Water Wheel, baby."

I turned, and smiled. "Nah. I think I'll just go work out a little."

Samuel threw his feet into the air, citing reasons why he had always meant so much to me through the years. And he was right. I always liked being me. Then a light shone on me, through the prism of my daughter's eyes, Shaylyn.

The choice was simple. The interview was over. A new era has begun.

Samuel, it was fun. But it's over. I'm committed to being a better person. I know I can do it. I'm 1/6th of the way there already.

Pack your bags, buddy. I'm evicting you.

Back to school budget lessons

Adults will spend more than $14 billion to send their kids back to school this year, according to a recent survey by the National Retail Federation. Adult consumers won't be the only ones spending money this back-to-school season, second only to the Christmas shopping season in terms of sales. Kids and teens will spend roughly $884 million of their own money to buy clothes, shoes, school supplies and electronics.

Now is a great time to engage your children and teens in some constructive dialog about spending and saving money. A few lessons in planning, budgeting and differentiating between wants and needs will go a long way to help your children make smart decisions. Here are a few ideas you might consider.

First things first. Carve out some time with your child to go through her closet to see which items of clothing still fit. Then sit down together and make a comprehensive list of the items you think you may need to purchase. Consider all items—clothing as well as school supplies. Have a calculator as well as a few circulars and catalogues on hand when you sit down to craft your list.

Engage your child as much as possible in this exercise. Write down everything he wants even if you don't agree with his choices. You can revisit these items later when you discuss "wants" vs. "needs." After you've made your list, ask him to use the catalogues and circulars to compare prices; and then work collaboratively to come up with approximate costs for the items.

Now is a good time to discuss the items your child wanted, but which fall outside the realm of necessity. Is there money left over in the budget for these items? You may want to suggest that she use her allowance money to purchase these items. Or, encourage her to shop sales to see if she can buy her necessities at a lower price, and put the money she saves toward her "wish" items.

Shop early. Congratulations! You've set boundaries, managed expectations, provided options and worked with your child to come up with a realistic back-to-school budget. Now it's time to hit the stores. You won't want to leave this task until the very end because you'll rob you child the time she'll need to comparison shop. Instead, try to make multiple trips to stores over the next few weeks. You might also consider waiting to buy all but a few items after school starts. This will give your child some time to decide on the styles he or she wants. And, you'll likely be able to pick up some really good bargains later in the season.

Resist the temptation to give in. Before you head to the stores remind you child that he'll need to adhere to his budget. It will be up to you to resist begging and pleading for "cool" items that haven't been budgeted for. Better he learn to live within his means now so he can better manage his financial obligations—which don't go away with begging and pleading—later in life.

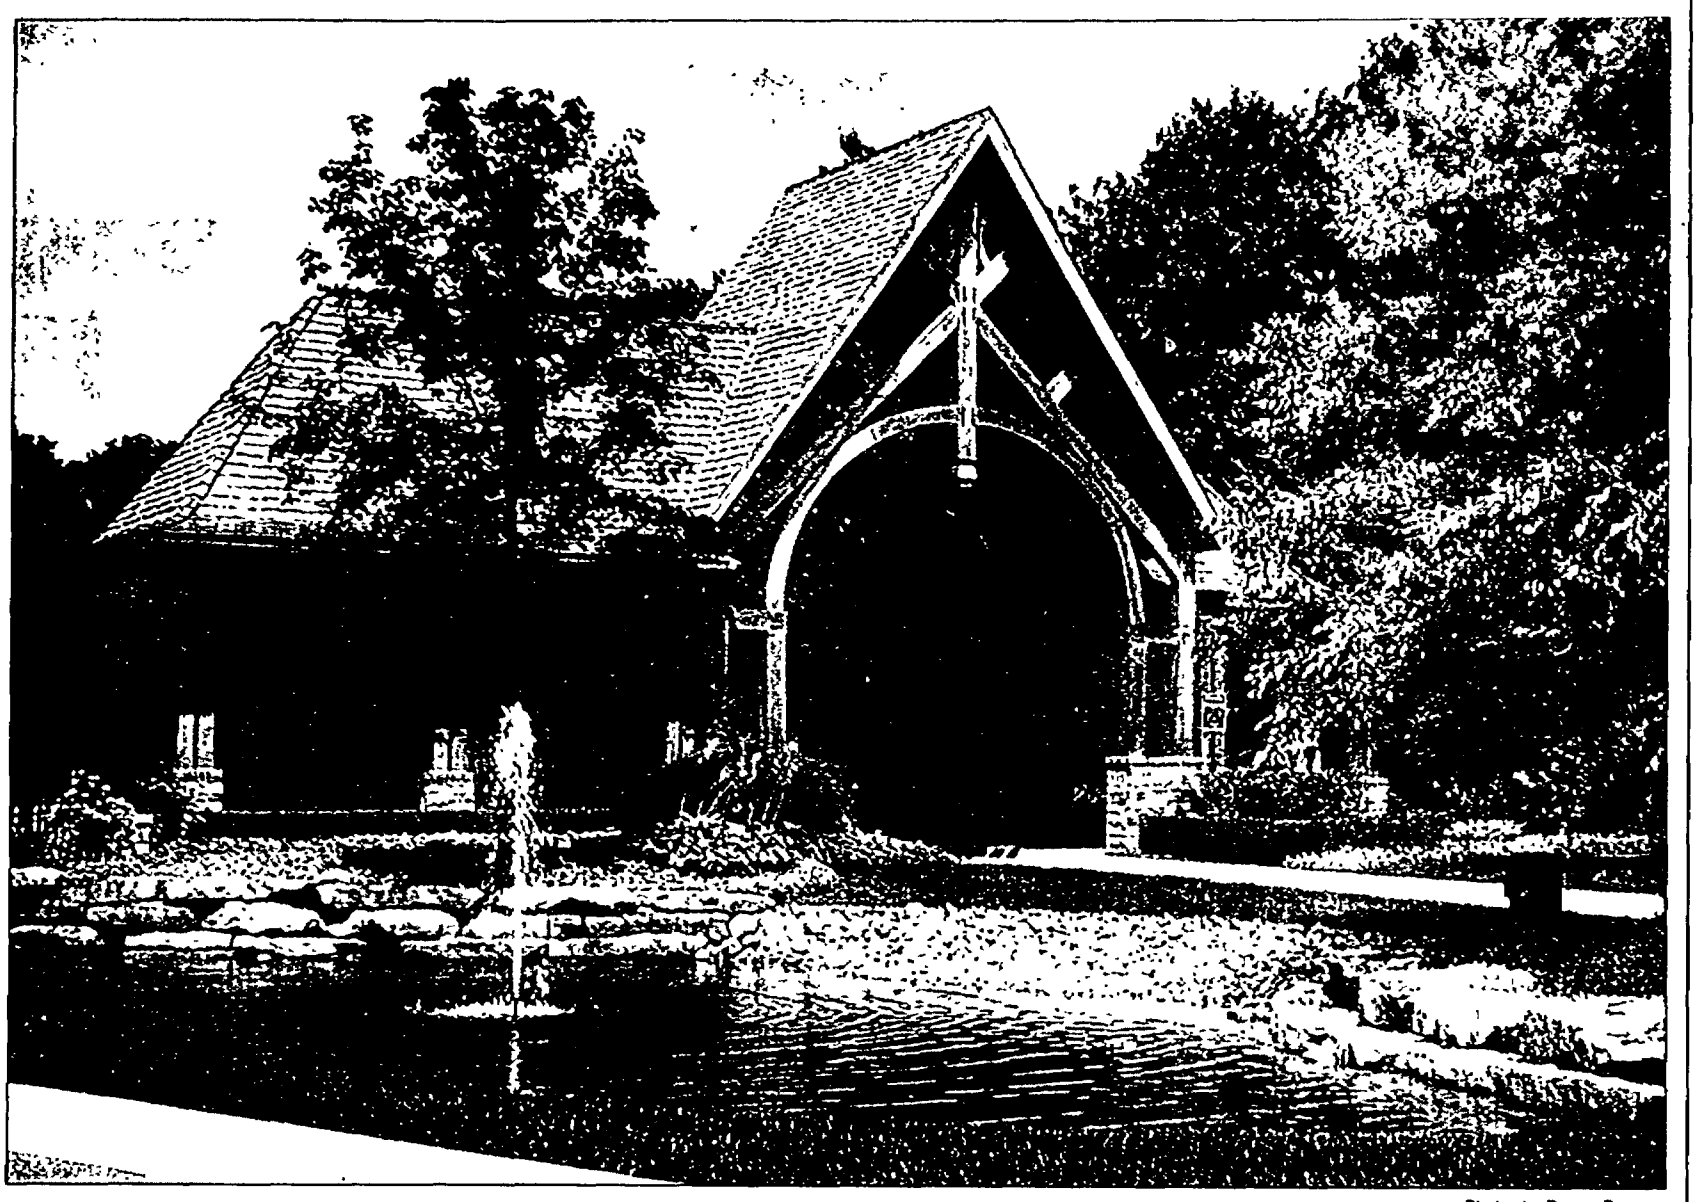

Teens and preteens wield an average annual purchasing power of $150 billion, yet surveys show they're not learning about money management in the classroom.

While the back-to-school season presents a great opportunity to get your child thinking critically about the value of money, encouraging her to set goals, budget and save on a regular basis should be an ongoing effort.

Hidden Lake features this European-style gatehouse and fountain for a distinctive entrance to the residential community.

Hidden Lake offers resort living in rural setting

By Duane Ramsey
SPECIAL WRITER

Hidden Lake is a lakefront community of upscale homes that offers the ultimate lifestyle of resort living in a rural setting. The planned mixed-use residential development is conveniently located off Silver Lake Road, one mile east of U.S. 23 just southeast of Brighton in Livingston County.

Beck Development Company has created a community where families and individuals can enjoy a luxurious lifestyle that fulfills a dream. The Hidden Lake community is fulfilling Earl and Steven LaFave's vision for the property.

"Our mission is to create an environment that allows you to define your lifestyle as one that rivals that of the finest resorts," the LaFave brothers have stated.

The brothers and partners in Hidden Lake and Beck Development assumed an existing mining operation on the site in 1988. They are completing the land reclamation project with their vision to create a developed community on the property.

Hidden Lake is a 376-acre residential development surrounding the 110-acre, spring-fed lake. It will consist of 425 residences including single-family homes, attached and detached condominiums with a private marina and community center on the lake.

"It's a diamond in the rough coming from the mining operations to become a beautiful upscale, all-sports lake community," said Diane Paczas, marketing director for Beck Development.

Hidden Lake offers easy access to U.S. 23 and I-96 for people commuting to nearby Ann Arbor, Flint, Lansing or the Detroit metro area. Located in the Brighton School District, it also provides municipal services that include a private water system and connection to sewers maintained by Green Oak Township.

Custom-built homes begin with minimums of 2,500 to 2,750 square feet of living space and prices ranging from $450,000 to more than $1 million. Hidden Lake has established detailed architectural and landscaping requirements to maintain the high quality of the residential development.

The developers have selected a small group of custom builders to build homes at Hidden Lake. People may choose from a wide variety of designs and floor plans for single-family homes from among those builders.

The homes built at Hidden Lake have the presence of country estates with a timeless elegance in a setting with beautiful views, gardens and areas where nature is the architect. The project's designers have blended the natural areas with the residential landscaping.

The new Falls of Hidden Lake offers luxury waterfront attached condominiums with a maintenance-free lifestyle in an upscale lakeside community. Four distinct floor plans are available from 2,200 to 2,700 square feet with walkout levels available on most sites, starting in the high $300,000's.

The Coves at Hidden Lake is a limited edition of individual condominium homes, featuring French Country style residences. The Coves offers three ranch and 1.5-story Cape Cod plans ranging from 2,200 to 2,760 square feet priced from $490,000 to $526,000.

The Hidden Lake Community Association represents the entire development and is responsible for maintaining the private roads and all common areas. There are separate associations for the single-family homes, attached and detached condominiums.

Hidden Lake is not only where the home is but also where people come to play with boating, fishing, swimming and walking trails just out your front or back door. Six miles of paved walkway meander throughout the community with access to all the amenities and is ideal for bird watching, jogging or leisurely walks.

The community center was created to be the foundation for the Hidden Lake lifestyle where family, friends and neighbors gather to enjoy the beach, gardens, lake or open green spaces. The private marina offers permanent docking slips for lease or purchase, a boat launch and fishing pier.

A small amphitheater was created on the lakeshore to bring people together with events for adults and children. They have an adult music series with country and western, jazz bands, '50s music and comedians. They hold carnivals, picnics, puppet shows or have magicians and storytellers for the children on weekends.

Hidden Lake received two prestigious awards in 2003. It was named Development of the Year by the Building Industry of Southeast Michigan and received the Outstanding Planning Project Award from the Michigan Society of Planning.

The LaFave brothers are not absentee developers of Hidden Lake. Earl lives in a home on the lake while Steve has a lot where he plans to build a home. He currently lives with his family in Brighton.

The Beck Development Company is located on Silver Lake Road near the entrance to Hidden Lake. The developers are no strangers when it comes to creating residential projects in the area.

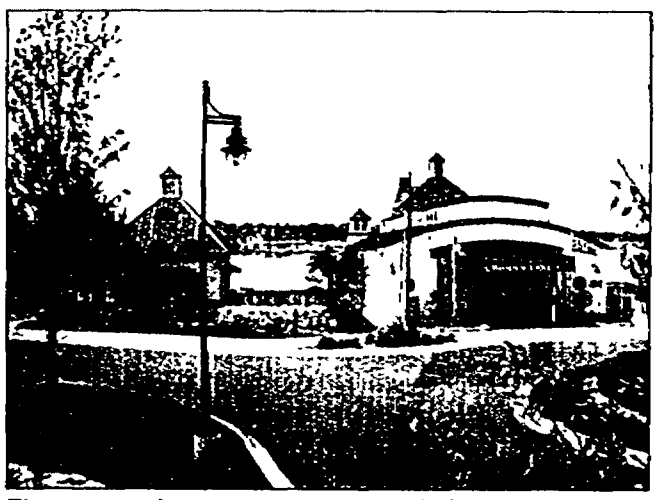

In 1987, they embarked on their first planned community development, Blue Heron Point in Northville. The firm has been involved in other residential ventures such as The Villas in Livonia and Condominiums at Oak Pointe in Brighton.

However, it was their award-winning Blue Heron Point that inspired the brothers' desire to create the lakefront community of Hidden Lake that set the standards by which others can only attempt to imitate.

Not enough wall space? Put shelving right over closet door

By Rose Bennett Gilbert
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Q: We are trying to figure how to turn a small guest bedroom into a home office for my husband when he retires next year. He's planning to write a book and says he needs a lot of shelf space.

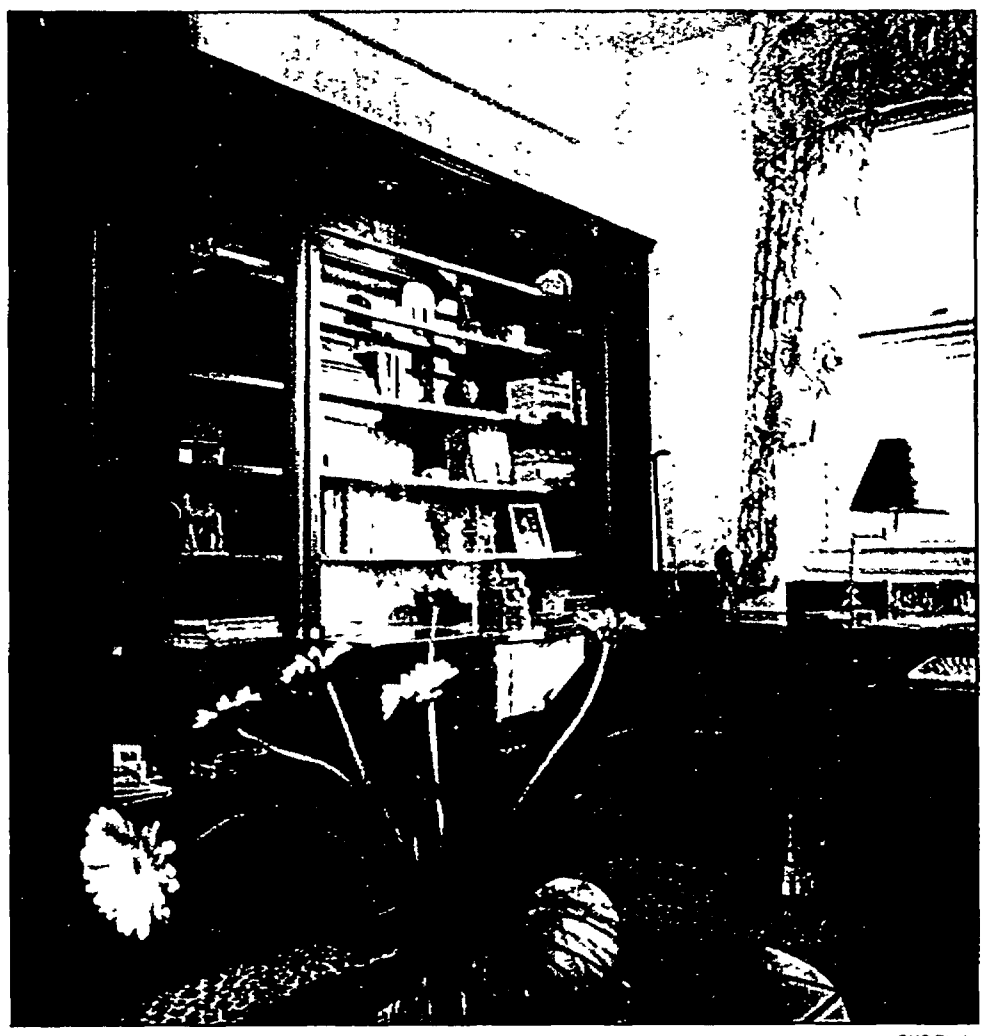

The problem with this room is a lack of wall space. There are windows on two walls, a door on the other, and a closet on the forth. Should we just build shelves around the closet door?

A: Or right over it, if you can appropriate a clever idea from New York interior designer Michelle Slovak. She was called in to work some room-stretching magic in a small Manhattan apartment (or is that redundant?) that suffered from the same lack of wall space you're struggling with. The only difference was the fact that this room had to do double-duty as both living room and office.

Michelle's solution: Build a tall shelving unit along one entire wall, and never mind if it happens to have the closet door in the middle of it. She simply hinged one section of bookshelves so it could swing out to reveal — ta dum! — the "secret" door to the supply closet.

At 5 p.m. quitting time, the shelf rotates back into place and no one would suspect it's playing cover-up.

For more on the designer's magic ways, see www.michelleslovak.com.

This home office has a secret: The bookcase swings open to reveal a closet.

Q. Do you long for a real chair to curl up in on the balcony or beside the pool?

A: San Diego artist/designer John Moore has a perfect answer: His "Splash" furniture looks like your typical big, overstuffed easy chair, but what's easy about it, is its ability to live happily out of doors.

Useful by the pool, on the patio or balcony, "Splash" chairs are made of weather-proof fiberglass studded with glass mosaic tiles in any number of colorful combinations. Back and seat cushions of equally carefree fabrics supply the curl up quotient

Familiar but still edgy, Moore's furniture has already taken a background seat, so to speak, in several TV series, including M.C. Hammer lounging in a "Splash" chair in the reality show, "The Surreal Life." Surreal, and yet so fun, the furniture qualifies as collector's art at about $4,495 plus shipping (and it's heavy!)

Take a closer look at www.splashfurniture.com.

Trees, shrubs are dying because they're drowning

Home Grown

Gretchen Voyle

Q: I have had several shrubs and small trees die this year for no reason. These have been planted within the last five years. Because I have heavy clay soil, I have made a beautiful planting mixture for them. I dug a hole twice as wide as the balls and mixed one-third compost and one-third manure and one-third rich, black soil. I didn't put any clay back in the hole. So why did they die?

A: You loved them too much. The best-laid plans of gardeners can be derailed by things beyond their control. In this case, it was wet weather. You have created a lovely mixture guaranteed to hold an optimal amount of moisture. The mix is surrounded by clay that acts as a container. Add water and you have a soil mixture that resembles chocolate pudding in a bowl. If you analyze what went into the pit of despair, it was well over two-thirds organic matter. That's like adding bezillions of torn-up sponges to soak up and hold moisture. That moisture has nowhere to go. In the last five years, we haven't had a really rainy season, so you got away with this mixture. When it was dry, you have been watering them and were able to control how much moisture was added. This year, we had double or triple the rain we usually get so months. All of the air was forced out of the soil, and water filled the soil pore spaces. None of these plants were swamp dwellers, so they couldn't tolerate the conditions. If you dig them up, you will notice that roots have become darkened and the small ones have probably rotted. Planting in clay soil is a challenge. If you modify the soil in holes, this stuff happens. Breaking up clay into marble- or pea-sized pieces and putting it back into the planting hole would be a better idea. When digging the hole, roughen or chip up the sides of the hole. Making smooth sides can make it very difficult for roots to grow into the surrounding soil. Add organic matter very sparingly, if at all. You may have to plant slightly higher to help drainage, but taper the soil away from the ball very gently. Roots want to grow horizontally. Leaving the plant as a gopher mound gives the roots nowhere to go. In the art of gardening, we probably learn more from our mistakes. This is just another gardening lesson from ol' Mother Nature.

Q: Something is wrong with some of my perennial flowers in my garden. They have been in for at least six or seven years and have been beautiful until now. They are now growing in a circle, but the middle of the circle doesn't have anything growing in it. They didn't bloom as much this year. This appears to be spreading, because I can see this happening to my Siberian Iris and a couple of others. What is it?

A: They have just been too successful. Your little darlings have grown into big mooses. This means that it is time to divide those plants. Because you have great garden success, you now get extra plants as a winner's bonus. This is a perfect time of year to divide those plants. Dig them up and divide them into four or more pieces. You will probably need weapons of mass destruction to cut through the roots. This could be a large knife or a hatchet or a big foot stomping on a shovel. Separate the parts and plant them as soon as you are done dividing them. Water them well, and by the end of the season, they will have established themselves. Many perennials become less vigorous and bloom less when they are crowded. They can crowd themselves very well after a number of years. If you have ornamental grasses that need to be divided, hold off until spring. You want a time when root growth for them is optimum. As soon as you see the tops beginning to grow, dig and divide. This is one of the pluses of growing perennial plants — you get more for your money.

OcuGuard Plus with Lutein

30% OFF

Why OcuGuard Plus?

Ocuguard Plus capsules contain a special blend of specific multi-vitamins (more than 14 in all!) all designed to help protect the eyes.

The "Plus" in OcuGuard Plus refers to the additional breakthrough nutrient called lutein. A day's supply contains 80 times the trace amounts found in the leading multi-vitamin! This carotenoid is abundant in fruits and vegetables, and is also a potent antioxidant highly concentrated in the macula of the eye (the back part of the retina where entering light hits and sends signals to the brain for sight).

The problem is, as we age, our supply of lutein dwindles. The natural solution? Ocuguard Plus with Lutein.

ON SALE FOR

60 Caps Retail $24.95... $17.47

120 Caps Retail $46.49... $32.54

Did you know?

Research shows that lutein can serve as your body's own "internal sunglasses," helping to block out visible blue light, the major cause of photic (light induced) damage to the eye.*

HUGE CLEARANCE EVENT!

Over 25 National and Local Banks and Lending Institutions have released liens on over 100 vehicles for immediate Public Disposal prior to auction.

Inventories are piling up with late model '00, '01 and '02, two doors, four doors, cars, trucks, vans and SUV's... virtually all makes and models (Chrysler, Dodge, Jeep, Ford, Chevy, Toyota, Honda, Nissan and many more).

Dave Hekhuis of National Fleet Liquidators said, "This means the people of Ypsilanti, MI and the surrounding areas could get an unheard of deal on a newer car! Some of these vehicles are going for as low as $79 a month."*

Hekhuis confirmed, "We are here to do one thing and one thing only... we will do whatever is necessary to deliver these vehicles! Even if you have had credit problems in the past, come on in. We will accept every application and try to find a way for everyone to drive home in a new vehicle! Even if you have been turned down elsewhere, come on in - we have bank sources aggressively seeking new accounts." This is obviously a unique and tremendous opportunity. If you are in the Ypsilanti area and are considering a newer vehicle in the next 1-2 years, this is it! This is your time for a newer vehicle!

Here is how it works. Pay the $59 down payment* then start making payments - payments will start as low as $79 per month! If you have $59 down* you can drive!

Due to its central location, the K-Mart parking lot at 3100 Washtenaw has been selected as the site for this special event. National Fleet Liquidators, Inc. and Cueter Chrysler, Dodge, Jeep have joined together and are prepared to dispose of over 100 vehicles.

"This incredible event will be held for 3 days only! Do not miss this massive savings event," urged Hekhuis.

To recap: "This is an unbelievable event! The auctions are flooded with rental units. National Fleet Liquidators, Inc. has arranged for over 100 auction, repossessed and other vehicles to be at this Ypsilanti, MI location and are prepared to eliminate them at all costs," said Hekhuis. "Their Loss is your Gain! $59 down* delivers with payments starting at $79 per month. Bad credit, no credit? Let us help! We will have special financing available and finance representatives will be on the premises approving applications."

"If you are considering a newer vehicle, it could never be easier than this!" exclaimed Hekhuis.

Father's Day Run Celebrates Silver Anniversary!

A Record crowd for annual YMCA Run!!

Before firing up the barbecues and opening gifts, more than 1,000 people began their Father's Day celebration by lacing up their running shoes. A record 1,072 runners took to the streets of Plymouth for the 25th Annual YMCA Father's Day Run June 20. This event has become a family tradition for many. Dads, moms, sons and daughters of all ages participated in a variety of races, from the diaper dash to the MDG (Morse Dental Group) Triple which included all three races (1 mile, 5K and 10K). Loc Performance, the event's Platinum sponsor is one of the many organizations and individuals who made this event a success. Proceeds from the run support the annual YMCA Strong Kids Campaign, which helps ensure all children can participate at the YMCA.

Summer Program Highlights

Summer Camp has continued to be a point of emphasis for our branch over the summer months. This summer we have been "Making Memories" for many children. Through a variety of daily activities, we challenge campers to grow in spirit, mind and body. We have traveled on many field trips, including water parks, watching the Detroit Shock and going to a carnival at the YMCA in Milford. Overall, we have been pleased with the camp's ability to challenge campers to grow in many ways while having an awesome time!

The Youth Sports Programs are designed so every child plays and has fun, and so far this year approximately 1180 kids have been doing exactly that! The tennis program had over 50 kids taking lessons and the Spring soccer league sponsored 14 teams of ages 4-11. 130 kids enjoyed "America's favorite pastime" - in our Y Baseball league.

"Hoop It Up" at the YMCA

The YMCA offers many basketball programs throughout the year. From winter basketball leagues to summer basketball camps, there is something for everyone. Over 80 kids participated in our summer basketball camps.

Did you know the YMCA invented basketball in 1891?

Youth Volunteer Program honored by Salvation Army

The Volunteer Program was recognized by the Salvation Army at their annual Civic Recognition Dinner, May 12th. The YMCA youth were honored for their participation and extraordinary results in the Salvation Army's bell ringing fundraiser. Twenty teens raised over $450 by collecting donations at area businesses. The Volunteer program, funded by the Wilcox Foundation, matches students with community organizations. A variety of agencies have partnered with the YMCA. Call for more information.

Adventure Guides

For young children, life is a wondrous journey with the parent as a guide. That's the premise of YMCA Adventure Guides, an exciting new parent-child experience. This life-changing program is an excellent tool to support your family's relationships. It celebrates family, nature, community and plain old-fashioned fun, imbued as always with the Y's four character values of caring, honesty, respect and responsibility. Like the symbolic compass of its logo, YMCA Adventure Guides offers new directions to rituals, routines and rites of passage, group meetings and activities, community outings and overnight camping. The program is structured so that one parent spends time with his or her 4 to 9 year-old child, building a relationship that is sure to make them "friends forever." Indeed, "friends forever" is the program motto, symbolizing the goal of building relationships that will last a lifetime. Join us for an Open House at the Plymouth Library on Thursday, September 23rd from 6:00pm - 8:30pm to learn more about the program. Also, you and your family are invited to experience the excitement of the Adventure Guides first hand at the Navigator's bon fire on Saturday, September 25th at 6pm at Maybury State Park. Call the YMCA at (734) 453-2904 for more information.

Volunteering at the YMCA

The YMCA Youth Volunteer Program gives high school students an opportunity to fulfill their community service requirements. The free program is open to students ages 11-18. To register for the program call Cindy Morency at 734-453-2904 or email: cmorency@ymcametrodetroit.org

McDonald's® Chicken Selects® are so good, there's no way I'll ever share. With all that juicy breast meat inside and the crispy perfect outside, who can blame me? Even the dipping sauces, like savory ranch, spicy buffalo and low-fat honey mustard are worth fighting for. Better get going before I get hungry.

Matchbox Twenty recently released a DVD of one of its many performances.

Q What's going on with Matchbox Twenty?
—Shawn T., New Hampshire

The pop/rock band just saw the release of its concert DVD, Show—A Night in the Life of Matchbox Twenty, in May. Lead singer/songwriter Rob Thomas is working on a solo album, but the group itself is on hiatus. "We've been together for a long time and we've all been really close, and we all got really sick of each other," the married Thomas says, laughing. "After about 10 years on a bus, it's good to just have a couple years where you only talk on the phone."

Q Could you give us an update on Sheilah Kast, an anchor with Peter Jennings on ABC?
—Larry G., Indiana

Anchor Sheilah Kast.

You can find her weekends on PBS, anchoring the PBS/NPR Newsbrief, which are hourly 30-second reports produced by National Public Radio for public television. The Indianapolis native became interested in journalism in high school. "The big attraction was the reporting more than the writing," she says. "Reporting gives you a license to walk up to anyone and ask them a question—what a gift for someone who's shy!" Kast has worked in newspapers and on television, joining ABC News in 1991, and hosting This Week in Business on public television starting in 1997. She spent two years in Romania when her husband, John Rosapepe, served as U.S. Ambassador to that country. After returning in 2001, Kast worked as a reporter for CNN. "I've been a newspaper reporter, an editor, a television correspondent and an anchor. It's that sense of mission that makes it fun to go to work each day," Kast says.

Composer Randy Newman.

Q What can you tell me about the composer and singer of It's a Jungle Out There, the theme song from the TV show Monk?
—Frank P., New Mexico

The man behind the song is Randy Newman, a multiple Grammy winner known for his sly and twisted wit as a lyricist as much as for his soundtrack credits and hit songs. He recorded a few mainstream hits, including Short People, I Love L.A. and You've Got A Friend In Me (from the movie Toy Story), but his most consistent success is as a songwriter. A Los Angeles native from a musical family, Newman started writing songs at 17. Three Dog Night had a hit with his Mama Told Me Not To Come, and Joe Cocker scored with You Can Leave Your Hat On. He wrote the scores for films such as Ragtime, The Natural, Toy Story, Toy Story 2 and Avalon, receiving 16 Oscar nominations for his work.

Q Can you please tell me about Little Jimmy Dickens and how we can order some of his records?
—Betty D., Florida

Little Jimmy Dickens.

Born in Bolt, W.Va., on Dec. 19, 1920, James Cecil Dickens stands only 4 feet 11 inches tall, but he's looked up to by generations of country music fans. Known for novelty numbers such as Take an Old Cold 'Tater (And Wait), Dickens joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1948 and still performs there today. He admits he's sentimental: A miniature covered wagon given to him by Elvis Presley in 1957 still sits in his den. "I treasure it," he says. "That thrilled me to death." You can order his records from the Ernest Tubb Record Shop, P.O. Box 500, Nashville, Tenn., 37202 or by calling (615) 255-7503.

Where Potatoes are Spudtacular

Residents of Barnesville, Minn. (pop. 2,108), have a close and long-standing love affair with their celebrated spud. Potatoes have been a major crop in the Red River Valley for more than a century.

A messy mashed potato wrestling contest.

Green leafy potato plants shrivel to brown vines by fall, producing the 16 varieties of potatoes raised in the Barnesville vicinity, ranging from red, white and yellow to blue. "We harvest about 38 million pounds of potatoes a year," boasts Karen Lauer, executive director of the Barnesville Economic Development Authority.

The Minnesota portion of the Red River Valley annually yields some 1.9 billion pounds of potatoes from 56,000 acres, says Duane Maatz, president of the Northern Plains Potato Growers Association. In fact, the Red River Valley region of Minnesota and North Dakota ranks third in the nation in potato production, behind Idaho and Washington.

Brian Halverson's family has produced certified seed potatoes near Barnesville since the 1940s. As a seed grower, Halverson cares more about eyes than size. Digging up hills of modestly sized red-skinned spuds, Halverson explains that big potatoes fill the sack without yielding more eyes. "We want to get 1,100 eyes per 100 pounds of potatoes," he says.

In May, Halverson plants 10 or 11 varieties of potatoes on 150 acres. From his fields, he'll harvest between 15,000 to 20,000 pounds of tubers per acre in mid-September to early October.

At the Mike Layton Co. Potato Wash Plant in Barnesville, about 350 truckloads of spuds get washed, sorted and shipped out from August to April. Owner Mike Layton buys and sells potatoes for table use, operates a truck brokerage and grows potatoes, too. Fresh red potatoes have been good to market the last three seasons, says Layton, who gets about $20 for a 100-pound bag of baby reds.

A few blocks away, the K.W. Christensen and Sons Warehouse, run by Wes and Etta Christensen, sells potatoes for seed as well as bags of plump tubers heading home to be mashed, baked, boiled or fried. Seed potatoes must pass three state inspections and can also be sold for consumption, but potatoes that are not inspected by the state cannot be sold for seed.

Etta previously served as secretary for the town's annual Potato Days, a celebration started in the late 1930s. This year's festival is scheduled Aug. 27 and 28. This unpretentious, homespun gathering features potato-related festivities and bags of potatoes and garden produce for sale. In a feverishly paced contest, pickers harvest spuds the old-fashioned way—on hands and knees, dumping full pails of potatoes into potato sacks. Then, people with work-callused hands and strong arms compete in manual potato sack sewing, stacking and tossing, amid good-natured razzing and camaraderie.

In addition to preserving the region's potato-growing heritage, the celebration bridges the gap between city and rural people. Everyone pitches in to put on a potato hors d'oeuvre cookoff, a potato peeling contest, and other events. In the food court, plates brim with potato dumplings, potato sausage, twice baked potatoes, french fries, and even potato chip cookies. Some people wear clothing made from potato sacks, and everyone celebrates potatoes nonstop for two days. It's spudtacular.

From Field to Table

A potato's eyes are the seed for next year's crop, planted in the spring. Come fall, a harvesting machine scoops the spuds out of the earth, sifts out the dirt and loads them into a truck. From the truck, spuds are conveyed into a warehouse. Later, they are graded, sacked, stacked on pallets, shipped to brokers or other buyers, and distributed to supermarkets, garden stores and food processors.

Anti-Aging Breakthrough

Better than Botox®?™

"Who would have thought a stretch mark reducer would turn out to be the anti-wrinkle breakthrough of the decade!"

In a remarkable turn of events, arguably one of the strangest in the history of cosmetics, women across the country are putting a stretch-mark reducing emulsion called StriVectin-SD† on their face to diminish fine lines, wrinkles and crows' feet. And, if consumer sales are any indication of a product's effectiveness, StriVectin-SD is nothing short of a miracle. Women (as well as a growing number of "Boomer" men) are buying so much StriVectin-SD that finding a tube at your local cosmetic counter has become just about impossible. Has everyone gone mad? Well... not really.

Scientific Breakthrough or Dumb Luck?

Although StriVectin-SD was already backed by clinical trials documenting its ability to visibly reduce the depth, length, discoloration and roughness of existing stretch marks, the success of StriVectin-SD as an anti-wrinkle cream was "dumb luck," says Gina Gay, spokesperson for Klein-Becker, StriVectin-SD's exclusive distributor.

"When we first handed out samples of the StriVectin formula to employees and customers as part of our market research, the sample tubes were simply marked 'topical cream' with the lot number underneath," Ms. Gay explains. "As the samples were passed to friends and family, the message became a little muddled and some people used this 'topical cream' as a facial moisturizer. As we began to receive feedback from users, like 'I look 10 years younger' and 'my crows' feet are gone,' we knew we had something more than America's most effective stretch-mark reducer. The point was driven home as store owners began reporting that almost as many people were purchasing StriVectin as an anti-wrinkle cream as were buying it to reduce stretch marks."

Dr. Daniel B. Mowrey, Klein-Becker's Director of Scientific Affairs, says, "Clearly, people were seeing results, but we didn't have a scientific explanation as to why this wrinkle-reduction was occurring. However, based on the incredibly positive reports, I started using it myself – applying StriVectin to my face after shaving." Dr. Mowrey adds, "On a personal note, my wife tells me I haven't looked this good in years."

Dumb Luck Strikes Again!

Then, on Tuesday, July 2, 2002, at a meeting of the 20th World Congress of Dermatology in Paris, France, a series of studies detailing the superior wrinkle-reducing properties of a patented oligo-peptide (called Pal-KTTKS) versus retinol, vitamin C, and placebo, on "photo-aged skin" was presented.[1] "As luck would have it," Dr. Mowrey states, "the wrinkle-reducing oligo-peptide tested in the breakthrough clinical trials turned out to be a key ingredient in the StriVectin cream."

In the trials, subjects applied the patented peptide solution to the crows' feet area on one side of the face, and a cream containing either retinol, vitamin C, or a placebo to the other side.

Subjects in the Pal-KTTKS/retinol study applied the cream once a day for 2 months and then twice a day for the next 2 months. Using special image analysis, the study's authors reported "significant improvement" in wrinkle depth, length, wrinkle volume, and skin roughness for those women using the peptide solution.

Better yet, at the 2-month halfway point, the peptide solution thickened skin nearly 1.5 times faster than retinol, and without the inflammation retinol often causes in sensitive skin. As was expected, the results of the remaining studies confirmed that the Pal-KTTKS solution's effectiveness at reducing the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles far exceeded both vitamin C and placebo.

A smoother, younger complexion, less irritation, fewer wrinkles, and faster results — all without expensive (and painful) peels, implants or injections.

Better than Retinol and Vitamin C, But Is StriVectin-SD† Better than Botox*?†

Dr. Nathalie Chevreau, Director of Women's Health at Salt Lake City based Basic Research, exclusive distributor for Klein-Becker, explains, "Many researchers believe less invasive cosmetic alternatives are better than Botox* [sometimes referred to as Botox* Cosmetic]. That's because topical creams and gels offer gradual, continual results, while the effects of injections, facial peels, and dermabrasions wear off... in fact, you'll never look better than you do shortly after the inflammation and redness subside. Not one bit better."

"Furthermore," Dr. Chevreau continues, "Botox has been approved by the FDA for an extremely limited use — the tiny little space of deep furrows between the eyebrows (called glabellar lines) — and can cause side effects such as 'headache, temporary eyelid droop, and nausea.' While StriVectin was not designed to eliminate the deep glabellar lines targeted by Botox, the proprietary StriVectin complex has been shown to significantly reduce the appearance of fine lines and facial wrinkles (including crows' feet) that can add 10-15 years to your appearance... the type of fine lines and wrinkles Botox treatments leave behind."

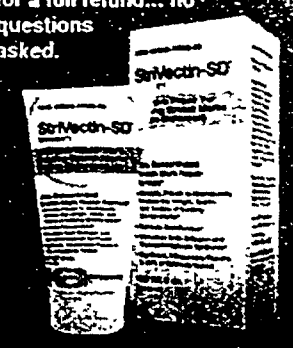

In other words, StriVectin-SD helps give you a youthful, healthy, glowing complexion faster than retinol, far superior to vitamin C, and without irritation, needles, or surgery.

So, if you see someone applying an anti-stretch mark cream to their face, don't think they've gone on the deep end... they may be smarter than you think.

Having a hard time finding StriVectin-SD®?

If you've been [illegible] StriVectin-SD, you [illegible] become almost impossible. Don't bother with [illegible] they don't have it. Your best bet are SEPHORA stores, Lord & Taylor, [illegible] Saks 5th Avenue (though [illegible] to keep it in stock) or, if [illegible] not, the pregnancy [illegible] local GNC or [illegible] retailer. To be absolutely sure, you can order StriVectin-SD [illegible] from Klein-Becker at 1-800-720-4316 or order online at www.StriVectin.com.

Since StriVectin-SD was [illegible] as a stretch-mark reducing [illegible] it comes in a large, 6-ounce tube. At $135.00, StriVectin-SD is not cheap... but when used as a wrinkle remover, one tube will last approximately six months. By the way, StriVectin-SD is backed by Klein-Becker's money-back guarantee. If StriVectin-SD doesn't make your skin look younger, healthier, and more vibrant, simply return the unused portion within 30 days for a full refund... no questions asked.

Teacher in Spirit

by BEVERLY KEEL

As the nation's Top 50 teachers gathered on the lush lawn of the White House's Rose Garden in April, they waited with nervous anticipation as President George Bush took center stage. Each year, the State Teachers of the Year and the National Teacher of the Year are invited to Washington, D.C., to be honored by the president for their accomplishments.

But they were just as anxious to hear from first lady Laura Bush because she is one of their own. A former Texas elementary school teacher and librarian, Mrs. Bush has embraced education as her platform during her White House years. As she stepped up to the podium and began sharing her classroom experiences with the teachers, they nodded in mutual understanding.

Mrs. Bush speaks to the nation's Top 50 teachers.

"I know how rewarding and how challenging teaching can be and what a remarkable difference a teacher can make in the life of a child," she told the group. "When I was 8 years old, I made the decision to become a teacher. My mother said she knew I'd be a teacher when she heard me scolding my dolls for not paying attention. But I wanted to teach because I loved school and I loved my second-grade teacher; I wanted to be just like her."

One of her most memorable days remains her first day of teaching. "I had earned a teaching degree, but no textbook could prepare me for the pressure of 20 sets of eyes staring at me with total expectation," she said. "At 9 a.m., we started to work. We recited the alphabet and numbers. We colored and we put together puzzles. We read a few books. And a few more. And by 9:15 a.m., I'd gone through my entire day's lesson plans."

Moments after the ceremony ended, she walked to the Map Room in the residence for an exclusive interview with American Profile. Warm and approachable, she remains a teacher in spirit and disposition as she encourages more Americans to become teachers and urges parents to read to their pre-school children.

"There's a lot of research that shows that children who have been read to start school with a huge advantage," she says. "They have a much bigger vocabulary because the vocabulary in books—children's books that parents read to children—is larger than the spoken vocabulary of children who aren't read to.

"Everything that's associated with learning to read—the way we read in English, the way we turn the pages, the way we read from left to right on the page—all of those things we just assume children will know, but they have to be taught that," she says. "Children have to be taught to read; it isn't something you learn automatically."

Midland memories

While growing up in Midland, Texas, Laura was read to each night by her mother, Jenna Welch. "We read Little Women before I could read it myself and cried together when Beth died," she recalls. "And now, of course, I have those same memories of reading with my own children."

The first lady vividly remembers the evenings filled with books by Dr. Seuss. "When the president

During or within 14 days following the administration of monoamine oxidase inhibitors (hypertensive crises may result). WARNINGS Psychosis: Clinical experience suggests that, in psychotic patients, administration of amphetamine may exacerbate symptoms of behavior disturbance and thought disorder. Long-Term Suppression of Growth: Data are inadequate to determine whether chronic use of stimulants in children, including amphetamine, may be causally associated with suppression of growth. Therefore, growth should be monitored during treatment and patients who are not growing or gaining weight as expected should have their treatment interrupted. PRECAUTIONS General: The least amount of amphetamine feasible should be prescribed or dispensed at one time in order to minimize the possibility of overdosage. Hypertension and other Cardiovascular Conditions: Caution is to be exercised in prescribing amphetamines for patients with even mild hypertension (see CONTRAINDICATIONS). Blood pressure and pulse should be monitored at appropriate intervals in patients taking ADDERALL XR®, especially patients with hypertension. Tics: Amphetamines have been reported to exacerbate motor and phonic tics and Tourette's syndrome. Therefore, clinical evaluation for tics and Tourette's syndrome in children and their families should precede use of stimulant medications. Information for Patients: Amphetamines may impair the ability of the patient to engage in potentially hazardous activities such as operating machinery or vehicles; the patient should therefore be cautioned accordingly. Drug Interactions: Acidifying agents—Gastrointestinal acidifying agents (guanethidine, reserpine, glutamic acid HCl, ascorbic acid, etc.) lower absorption of amphetamines. Urinary acidifying agents—These agents (ammonium chloride, sodium acid phosphate, etc.) increase the concentration of the ionized species of the amphetamine molecule, thereby increasing urinary excretion. Both groups of agents lower blood levels and efficacy of amphetamines. Adrenergic blockers—Adrenergic blockers are inhibited by amphetamines. Alkalinizing agents—Gastrointestinal alkalinizing agents (sodium bicarbonate, etc.) increase absorption of amphetamines. Co-administration of ADDERALL XR® and gastrointestinal alkalinizing agents such as antacids, should be avoided. Urinary alkalinizing agents (acetazolamide, some thiazides) increase the concentration of the non-ionized species of the amphetamine molecule, thereby decreasing urinary excretion. Both groups of agents increase blood levels and therefore potentiate the actions of amphetamines. Antidepressants, tricyclic—Amphetamines may enhance the activity of tricyclic antidepressants or sympathomimetic agents; d-amphetamine with desipramine or protriptyline and possibly other tricyclics cause striking and sustained increases in the concentration of d-amphetamine in the brain; cardiovascular effects can be potentiated. MAO inhibitors—MAOI antidepressants, as well as a metabolite of furazolidone, slow amphetamine metabolism. This slowing potentiates amphetamines, increasing their effect on the release of norepinephrine and other monoamines from adrenergic nerve endings; this can cause headaches and other signs of hypertensive crisis. A variety of toxic neurological effects and malignant hyperpyrexia can occur, sometimes with fatal results. Antihistamines—Amphetamines may counteract the sedative effect of antihistamines. Antihypertensives—Amphetamines may antagonize the hypotensive effects of antihypertensives. Chlorpromazine—Chlorpromazine blocks dopamine and norepinephrine receptors, thus inhibiting the central stimulant effects of amphetamines and can be used to treat amphetamine poisoning. Ethosuximide—Amphetamines may delay intestinal absorption of ethosuximide. Haloperidol—Haloperidol blocks dopamine receptors, thus inhibiting the central stimulant effects of amphetamines. Lithium carbonate—The anorectic and stimulatory effects of amphetamines may be inhibited by lithium carbonate. Meperidine—Amphetamines potentiate the analgesic effect of meperidine. Methenamine therapy—Urinary excretion of amphetamines is increased, and efficacy is reduced by acidifying agents used in methenamine therapy. Norepinephrine—Amphetamines enhance the adrenergic effect of norepinephrine. Phenobarbital—Amphetamines may delay intestinal absorption of phenobarbital; co-administration of phenobarbital may produce a synergistic anticonvulsant action. Phenytoin—Amphetamines may delay intestinal absorption of phenytoin, co-administration of phenytoin may produce a synergistic anticonvulsant action. Propoxyphene—In cases of propoxyphene overdosage, amphetamine CNS stimulation is potentiated and fatal convulsions can occur. Veratrum alkaloids—Amphetamines inhibit the hypotensive effect of veratrum alkaloids. Drug/Laboratory Test Interactions: Amphetamines can cause a significant elevation in plasma corticosteroid levels. This increase is greatest in the evening. Amphetamines may interfere with urinary steroid determinations. Carcinogenesis/Mutagenesis and Impairment of Fertility: No evidence of carcinogenicity was found in studies in which d,l-amphetamine (enantiomer ratio of 1:1) was administered to mice and rats in the diet for 2 years at doses of up to 30 mg/kg/day in male mice, 19 mg/kg/day in female mice, and 5 mg/kg/day in male and female rats. These doses are approximately 2.4, 1.5, and 0.8 times, respectively, the maximum recommended human dose of 30 mg/day on a mg/m² body surface area basis. Amphetamine, in the enantiomer ratio present in ADDERALL® (immediate-release)(d- to l- ratio of 3:1), was not clastogenic in the mouse bone marrow micronucleus test in vivo and was negative when tested in the E. coli component of the Ames test in vitro. d,l-Amphetamine (1:1 enantiomer ratio) has been reported to produce a positive response in the mouse bone marrow micronucleus test, an equivocal response in the Ames test, and negative responses in the in vitro sister chromatid exchange and chromosomal aberration assays. Amphetamine, in the enantiomer ratio present in ADDERALL® (immediate-release)(d- to l- ratio of 3:1), did not adversely affect fertility or early embryonic development in the rat at doses of up to 20 mg/kg/day (approximately 5 times the maximum recommended human dose of 30 mg/day on a mg/m² body surface area basis). Pregnancy: Pregnancy Category C. Amphetamine, in the enantiomer ratio present in ADDERALL® (d- to l- ratio of 3:1), had no apparent effects on embryofetal morphological development or survival when orally administered to pregnant rats and rabbits throughout the period of organogenesis at doses of up to 6 and 16 mg/kg/day, respectively. These doses are approximately 1.5 and 8 times, respectively, the maximum recommended human dose of 30 mg/day on a mg/m² body surface area basis. Fetal malformations and death have been reported in mice following parenteral administration of d-amphetamine doses of 50 mg/kg/day (approximately 6 times the maximum recommended human dose of 30 mg/day on a mg/m² basis) or greater to pregnant animals. Administration of these doses was also associated with severe maternal toxicity. A number of studies in rodents indicate that prenatal or early postnatal exposure to amphetamine (d- or d,l-), at doses similar to those used clinically, can result in long-term neurochemical and behavioral alterations. Reported behavioral effects include learning and memory deficits, altered locomotor activity, and changes in sexual function. There are no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. There has been one report of severe congenital bony deformity, tracheo-esophageal fistula, and anal atresia (vater association) in a baby born to a woman who took dextroamphetamine sulfate with lovastatin during the first trimester of pregnancy. Amphetamines should be used during pregnancy only if the potential benefit justifies the potential risk to the fetus. Nonteratogenic Effects: Infants born to mothers dependent on amphetamines have an increased risk of premature delivery and low birth weight. Also, these infants may experience symptoms of withdrawal as demonstrated by dysphoria, including agitation, and significant lassitude. Usage in Nursing Mothers: Amphetamines are excreted in human milk. Mothers taking amphetamines should be advised to refrain from nursing. Pediatric Use: ADDERALL XR® is indicated for use in children 6 years of age and older. Use in Children Under Six Years of Age: Effects of ADDERALL XR® in 3-5 year olds have not been studied. Long-term effects of amphetamines in children have not been well established. Amphetamines are not recommended for use in children under 3 years of age. Geriatric Use: ADDERALL XR® has not been studied in the geriatric population. ADVERSE EVENTS The premarketing development program for ADDERALL XR® included exposures in a total of 685 participants in clinical trials (615 patients, 70 healthy adult subjects). These participants received ADDERALL XR® at daily doses up to 30 mg. The 615 patients (ages 6 to 12) were evaluated in two controlled clinical studies, one open-label clinical study, and one single-dose clinical pharmacology study (N=20). Safety data on all patients are included in the discussion that follows. Adverse reactions were assessed by collecting adverse events, results of physical examinations, vital signs, weights, laboratory analyses, and ECGs. Adverse events during exposure were obtained primarily by general inquiry and recorded by clinical investigators using terminology of their own choosing. Consequently, it is not possible to provide a meaningful estimate of the proportion of individuals experiencing adverse events without first grouping similar types of events into a smaller number of standardized event categories. In the tables and listings that follow, COSTART terminology has been used to classify reported adverse events. The stated frequencies of adverse events represent the proportion of individuals who experienced, at least once, a treatment-emergent adverse event of the type listed. Adverse events associated with discontinuation of treatment: In two placebo-controlled studies of up to 5 weeks duration, 2.4% (10/425) of ADDERALL XR® treated patients discontinued due to adverse events (including 3 patients with loss of appetite, one of whom also reported insomnia) compared to 2.7% (7/259) receiving placebo. The most frequent adverse events associated with discontinuation of ADDERALL XR® in controlled and uncontrolled, multiple-dose clinical trials (N=595) are presented below. Over half of these patients were exposed to ADDERALL XR® for 12 months or more.

Adverse event	% of patients discontinuing (N=595)
Anorexia (loss of appetite)	2.9
Insomnia	1.5
Weight loss	1.2
Emotional lability	1.0
Depression	0.7

Adverse events occurring in a controlled trial: Adverse events reported in a 3-week clinical trial of pediatric patients treated with ADDERALL XR® or placebo are presented in the table below. The prescriber should be aware that these figures cannot be used to predict the incidence of adverse events in the course of usual medical practice where patient characteristics and other factors differ from those which prevailed in the clinical trials. Similarly, the cited frequencies cannot be compared with figures obtained from other clinical investigations involving different treatments, uses, and investigators. The cited figures, however, do provide the prescribing physician with some basis for estimating the relative contribution of drug and non-drug factors to the adverse event incidence rate in the population studied.

Table 1 Adverse Events Reported by More Than 1% of Patients Receiving ADDERALL XR® with Higher Incidence Than on Placebo in a 584 Patient Clinical Study

The following adverse reactions have been associated with amphetamine use. Cardiovascular: Palpitations, tachycardia, elevation of blood pressure. There have been isolated reports of cardiomyopathy associated with chronic amphetamine use. Central Nervous System: Psychotic episodes at recommended doses, overstimulation, restlessness, dizziness, insomnia, euphoria, dyskinesia, dysphoria, tremor, headache, exacerbation of motor and phonic tics and Tourette's syndrome. Gastrointestinal: Dryness of the mouth, unpleasant taste, diarrhea, constipation, other gastrointestinal disturbances. Anorexia and weight loss may occur as undesirable effects. Allergic: Urticaria, Endocrine: Impotence, changes in libido. DRUG ABUSE AND DEPENDENCE ADDERALL XR® is a Schedule II controlled substance. Amphetamines have been extensively abused. Tolerance, extreme psychological dependence, and severe social disability have occurred. There are reports of patients who have increased the dosage to many times that recommended. Abrupt cessation following prolonged high dosage administration results in extreme fatigue and mental depression; changes are also noted on the sleep EEG. Manifestations of chronic intoxication with amphetamines may include severe dermatoses, marked insomnia, irritability, hyperactivity, and personality changes. The most severe manifestation of chronic intoxication is psychosis, often clinically indistinguishable from schizophrenia. OVERDOSAGE Individual patient response to amphetamines varies widely. Toxic symptoms may occur idiosyncratically at low doses. Symptoms: Manifestations of acute overdosage with amphetamines include restlessness, tremor, hyperreflexia, rapid respiration, confusion, assaultiveness, hallucinations, panic states, hyperpyrexia and rhabdomyolysis. Fatigue and depression usually follow the central nervous system stimulation. Cardiovascular effects include arrhythmias, hypertension or hypotension and circulatory collapse. Gastrointestinal symptoms include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and abdominal cramps. Fatal poisoning is usually preceded by convulsions and coma. Treatment: Consult with a Certified Poison Control Center for up-to-date guidance and advice. Management of acute amphetamine intoxication is largely symptomatic and includes gastric lavage, administration of activated charcoal, administration of a cathartic and sedation. Experience with hemodialysis or peritoneal dialysis is inadequate to permit recommendation in this regard. Acidification of the urine increases amphetamine excretion, but is believed to increase risk of acute renal failure if myoglobinuria is present. If acute severe hypertension complicates amphetamine overdosage, administration of intravenous phentolamine has been suggested. However, a gradual drop in blood pressure will usually result when sufficient sedation has been achieved. Chlorpromazine antagonizes the central stimulant effects of amphetamines and can be used to treat amphetamine intoxication. The prolonged release of mixed amphetamine salts from ADDERALL XR® should be considered when treating patients with overdose. Dispense in a tight, light-resistant container as defined in the USP. Store at 25° C (77° F). Excursions permitted to 15-30° C (59-86° F) [see USP Controlled Room Temperature]. Manufactured by DSM Pharmaceuticals Inc., Greenville, North Carolina 27834. Distributed and marketed by Shire US Inc., Newport, KY 41071. For more information call 1-800-828-2088 or visit www.adderallxr.com. ADDERALL® is registered in the US Patent and Trademark Office.

The Facts of Lice

If your child is constantly

scratching his or her head, especially in the back or behind the ears, then its time to take good look for head lice.

Anybody can get head lice, and it has absolutely nothing to do with how clean or dirty your kids or your house is. Head lice don't care if you're clean or dirty, rich or poor, a boy or a girl. All you need is hair.

A common misunderstanding about lice is that they jump from one head to another, but the fact is lice can't jump or fly. They can move really, really fast from one head to another. The number one way that head lice travel from one head to the next is by direct physical contact, including sharing combs, brushes, hats and sports helmets. Lice also lay eggs, which are called "nits."

To check your child, part the hair into small sections and look under bright, preferably natural light. Nits (lice eggs) are grayish in color and are about the size of a poppy seed, so they're hard to find. They are usually attached to the hair shaft near the scalp and are not easily removed.

If your child has lice, call your doctor. Chances are you will be told to get a lice shampoo and comb. Everybody in the family who has hair will be told to shampoo. (If dad is bald he may want to shampoo just to feel like part of the family). You also will need to do a thorough cleaning of your child's bedding and carpet, and the stuffed animals will need to go into quarantine (a plastic bag will do).

You need to continue checking your child's hair every day for at least 10 to 14 days after treatment. The reason for this is the possibility of re-infestation from the hatching of lice eggs that may have been missed during the initial treatment because there is a possibility of re-infestation resulting from other infested people and from various household objects.

Make sure to let your child's school (or camp) know, if they weren't the ones to tell you. And then get on the phone and alert the parents of your child's friends. They may not be thrilled with the news, but they'll be grateful. If everyone eliminates the problem at the same time, re-infestation is less likely.

First lady Laura Bush reads to school children during a February visit to the Rancho Mirage Public Library in Palm Springs, Calif. (pop. 42,807).

would read Hop On Pop to them, they would take it literally. The front of Hop On Pop has the big bear Dr. Seuss character with the two little characters jumping on him, and that's exactly what Barbara and Jenna did. When he read Hop On Pop, they did."

She earned a bachelor's degree in education from Southern Methodist University in 1968 and then launched her education career by teaching a third-grade class in Dallas. The next year, she moved to Houston, where she taught second, third and fourth grades.

She earned a master's degree in library science from the University of Texas-Austin in 1973 and accepted librarian positions at public libraries and elementary schools in Houston and Austin through the 1970s. "I read, for instance, every single book in the whole library about landscaping and gardening, because that was an interest of mine," she admits. "It was one of the few jobs where you didn't feel guilty if you spent all of your time reading." She married in 1977 and left the classroom to become a full-time mother in 1981.

Teachers today face many of the same challenges that Mrs. Bush did more than 30 years ago. "They're always the same because the challenges are human challenges—the challenge to inspire children, the challenge to make sure children are really learning what you want them to. There's always the challenge of making sure children know how to read, because if you can read, you can do all the rest of your subjects. Really, by about the fourth grade, most of your school work is dependent on your reading ability."

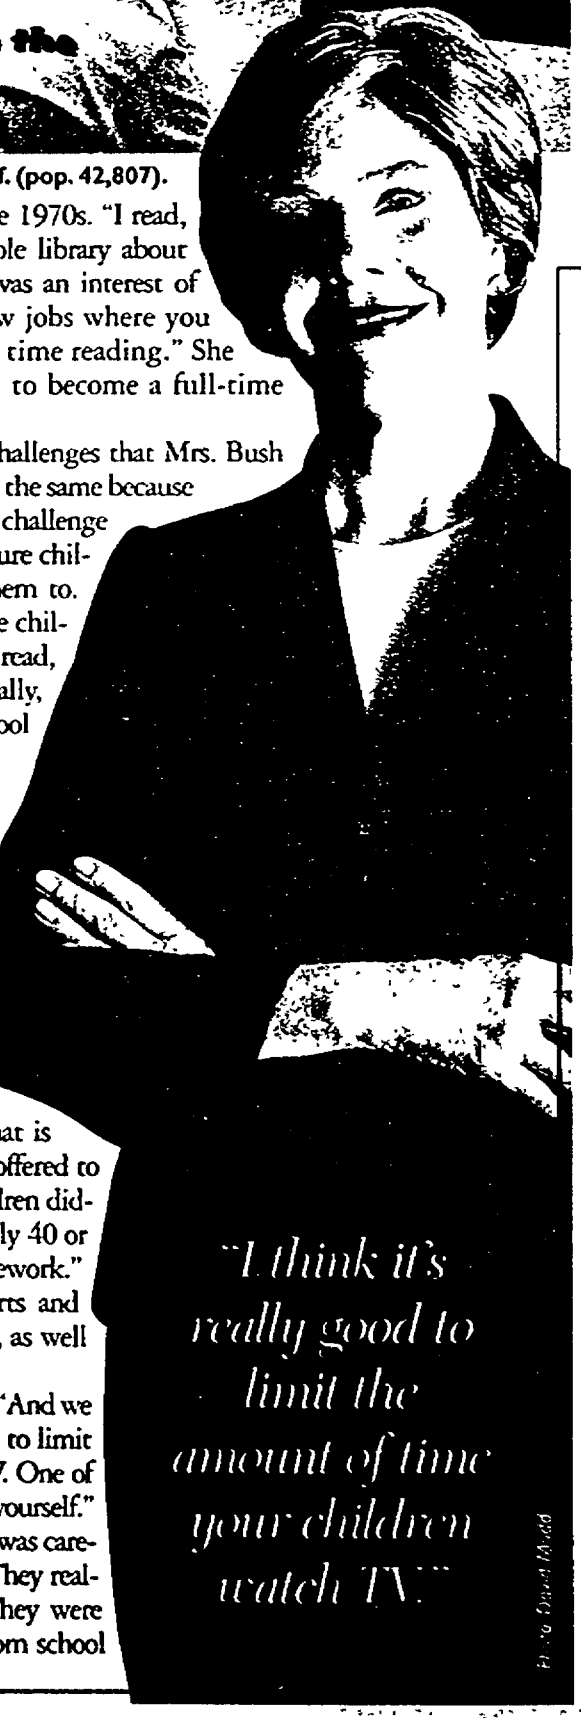

Technological change

What has changed, she says, is technology. "Now everyone is using a computer, and I noticed my girls in high school and in college, they e-mailed their papers to their professors. The use of e-mail is really a terrific tool for education.

"And then there's the big competition that schools and teachers have, and that is television and all the other things that are offered to children now that other generations of children didn't have. Most generations, up until probably 40 or 50 years ago, went home and did their homework." Now homework must compete with sports and other demanding extra-curricular activities, as well as the television, she says.

"Turn off the TV, is my advice," she says. "And we did this in our home. I think it's really good to limit the amount of time your children watch TV. One of the ways you have to do that is to turn it off yourself."

When her daughters were younger, she was careful not to turn on the TV too frequently. "They really didn't complain about it," she says. "They were also very self-directed. They came home from school and sat down and got their homework done because they wanted to get it done and be finished with it. I have to say, I was not that directed as a student. I was much bigger of a procrastinator than they ever were. But their father was pretty directed like that, so I guess they inherited it from him."

Mrs. Bush, who left most of her personal collection of books at the family's ranch in Crawford, Texas (pop. 705), begins and ends her days with books. "Laura, for God's sake, turn off the light!" her husband has told her. "That's when we both read, at night," she says. "It's how we relax. It's really sort of a ritual for us. And then, in the morning, we get up really early and get coffee, bring it back to bed and read the newspapers."

When her husband was elected president in 2000, she immediately knew that education would be her main focus as first lady. "When George was elected governor, those were the issues I worked on in Texas," she says. "I actually hosted a symposium on early childhood education, a lot like the one that I hosted in (Washington, D.C.)." In fact, the first lady was on Capitol Hill on the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, scheduled to brief the Senate Education Committee about the symposium.

In 2001, she launched the first National Book Festival, an annual event that celebrates reading. Last year's event attracted 80 authors and a crowd of more than 70,000. This year's festival is scheduled Oct. 9 on the National Mall in Washington, D.C.

She also works with several recruitment programs, including the New Teacher Project, which welcomes mid-career professionals to low-income and rural schools; Teach America, which recruits college graduates to teach in under-served schools; and Troops to Teachers, which offers second careers to retired military personnel.

"Education is always an important issue in our country, and it's never finished," she says. "We think, 'OK, we've really gotten that right. Now we know the research and we know how to teach reading.' But the fact is, another kindergarten class starts the next year."

Two That Pass the Test for Back-to-School

It's back-to-school time and that always means packing lunchboxes and having plenty of after-school snacks on hand.

If you're a parent of small children, you know how hard it is to prepare lunches and snacks that your kids not only find appealing, but that are nutritious as well.

Of the hundreds of reader recipes we receive weekly, we thought it would be helpful and fun to offer two healthful favorites that are particularly suited for lunches or snacks.

The first recipe is for classic bran muffins, submitted by Bette Meyer of Delaware, Ohio. She states, "This recipe is over 30 years old. It was developed by the Kansas State Home Economics Department as a nutritious school breakfast offering. School children and everyone else I've baked them for, just love this wholesome muffin." We loved them too and thought they might be a great addition to your child's lunchbox.

The second recipe is from Erin Jones of Brentwood, Tenn. It's a variation of today's popular wraps that she calls granola wraps. "Wraps are so quick and easy to make," she says. "You can put just about anything in them. This is an after-school and lunchbox favorite."

We hope you find these two recipes as fun and easy to make as we did, and, as always, we look forward to hearing from you.

RECIPE Bran Muffins

Bran Muffins

2 cups boiling water
2 cups raisins
5 teaspoons baking soda
Combine above ingredients in a small bowl and set aside.

1 cup margarine or butter (2 sticks)
2 cups sugar
1 quart buttermilk
5 and 1/2 cups flour, sifted
1 cup chopped nuts
4 cups all-bran cereal
2 cups 40-percent bran flakes
4 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon salt

In a large bowl, cream sugar and margarine. Combine beaten eggs with buttermilk in a separate container. Mix together flour, cereals, salt and nuts in another bowl. Alternately add dry and wet ingredients to creamed mixture until just moistened. Stir in raisin mixture last. Store batter in the refrigerator until you want to bake fresh muffins. The batter will last for six weeks. When ready to bake, fill greased muffin tins three-quarters full and bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Yields four dozen muffins.

Tips From Our Test Kitchen:
For a smaller batch, reduce recipe by half.

Granola Wraps

Granola Wraps

10-inch flour tortillas
peanut butter
honey
granola cereal
bananas

Spread a thin, even coating of peanut butter and honey on tortilla, leaving about 1/2 inch uncovered around the edge. Sprinkle a thin layer of granola over the peanut butter and honey. Slice a banana in half from end to end and place it in the tortilla's center. Roll up tortilla and slice into spirals for a snack, or keep it whole to eat as a sandwich.

Tips From Our Test Kitchen:
The granola can be replaced with raisins, and the honey can be omitted or replaced with a fruit spread. A thin layer of cream cheese, sprinkled with cinnamon sugar makes a great wrap. Cut it into spirals and toast until just warm in a toaster oven.

Organize Your Kitchen

Having a disorganized kitchen robs you of your time and patience. Below are some ideas for creating a user-friendly kitchen.

- Rethink your kitchen work centers—where specific tasks such as chopping, cooking and making lunches are performed. Think of how you can store equipment and food near each center where they'll be used—pots and pans near the stove, baking goods and utensils near the mixer, dishes near the dishwasher.
- Begin reorganizing with the cupboard closest to the sink and work your way methodically around the kitchen.
- Maximize the space in cabinets and drawers with drawer dividers, plate stackers and cup hooks.
- Install vertical dividers in a lower cabinet to organize cookie sheets, pizza pans and cake racks.
- Paint the inside of the cupboard under the sink a bright color to reflect light. Use plastic vegetable bins to store items in this usually wasted space. Attach a towel rack to the inside of the cabinet door for dishrags and wet gloves.
- Use lazy Susans on deep shelves or in corner cabinets.
- Hang a foil, wrap and bag organizer inside a cabinet or pantry door.
- Use wall space for mountable dispensers and portable appliances. Some coffeemakers, microwaves and radios can be mounted underneath high cabinets.
- Attach small containers or racks to the inside of cabinet doors for envelope mixes and other small, hard-to-store items.
- Install slide-out plastic drawers to simplify the retrieval of items at the back of deep cabinets.
- Add a kitchen island or buy a portable butcher block to gain more work and storage space.
- Give away cookbooks you never use. Cut out favorite recipes and file them in inexpensive photo albums.
- Hang a decorative hook on the wall above the kitchen sink for your watch and other jewelry you remove when doing the dishes.
- Keep refrigerator art under control. Let each child post one masterpiece at a time. Or hang a special bulletin board in the kitchen for art projects.
- Use only glass or clear plastic containers for storing food in your refrigerator so you always know what you're saving.
- Store canned goods by category and with labels facing forward.
- Keep a measuring cup in the flour and sugar and a measuring spoon in the coffee.
- Designate a drawer for healthy snacks so children can help themselves when hungry.
