Northville shows up big at the polls

City, township residents carry Election Day weight

By David Aguilar RECORD EDITOR

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Northville residents showed up en masse Tuesday to cast ballots for issues ranging between statewide ballot issues and the nation's highest office.

Nearly 84 percent of the City of Northville's 4,697 voters turned up at the polls, casting 3,929 ballots. In the township, 14,932 ballots were cast, representing 77.75 percent of its 19,285 registered voters.

Absentee ballots accounted for 5,000 township votes, which were returned at a 97 percent rate.

"The voting really dropped off at the dinner hour," Hillebrand said. "We had the workers closing the polls right at 8:10, 8:20. I had results at 9. We were swamped in the morning.

City hall poll worker Jackie Bousha said* she was amazed at the turnout.

"We were busy the whole day," she said.

High school play opens next Thursday; cast, crew take dramatic ride

By Kim Kovelle STAFF WRITER

In his notebook, the sharp-eyed banker furiously scribbled down the poor farmer's meager inventory last week.

On-stage at Northville High School, the scene from 1920s Kansas was brimming with tension. Further upstage, though, some modern-day touches were being hammered into the set.

"Practice talking over that pounding," called Director Christina Lombardo.

Someone quipped, "We're having some work done on the house.'

Next Thursday, the work put in by cast and crew over the past month will come together with the opening of "Orphan Train," a drama addressing oss and faith.

For the farmer, banker and other acting veterans at the high school, the show pushed their talents and drew them to newcomers in a cast of 27. "Banker" Wes Todd, 18, started acting with the Marquis Theater 10 years ago. He said the show was challenging compared to past comedies.

ł

The honesty that is portrayed in dramas is nowhere near the level of comedies," said Todd. 'It deals with heavy truths, with spirituality. This is the heaviest show I've ever done.'

To tap the subject and bring the cast closer, Lombardo, a Northville High School alumnus, organized development and trust exercises.

The students are always adaptable," Lombardo said. "They trust and they go with it. They're always great to work with.

Once, actors stood in lines linking arms, while each took turns laying across the arms, trusting their peers not to drop them.

"(It) changes our attitude on stage completely before we go on," junior Chris Burns said. 'There's a couple people in this cast that I walked in not knowing.'

Even with a large cast, that changed quickly for all involved.

The same story held for the backstagers. While the cast rehearsed up to four hours daily, the crew

Seniors hustle toward good health, physical fitness

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Mary Blakeman looks forward to Mondays when she can spend the afternoon doing the Hustle, Cowboy Charleston and Blue Rose Waltz. "I used to love to dance," the

82-year-old said. "For this, you don't need a partner."

Nearly two dozen men and women — Blakeman's age, older and younger — ante $4 weekly for line dance instruction in the Northville Senior Community Center gym. They line up in evenly spaced rows and follow the foot steps of instructor Carolyn Fugate to tunes like "Achy, Breaky Heart." "They're able to meet people,"

Fugate said. "They're able to relax and have fun." Meanwhile, they are exercising, the instructor said. Her emphasis is more on keeping her dancers moving than on perfect dance moves.

You can't just sit at home and watch TV all the time," she said. "You need to be out communicating with people.

'We'd love to have more people come out and join us.'

Traci Sincock likes that idea. The Northville Parks and Recreation director said her department's mission is to keep people happy and healthy members of the community. Part of that plan is pooling efforts with like-minded organizations, she said

This Saturday, the recreation department is co-hosting with the Water Wheel Health Club, Schoolcraft College, St. Mary Mercy Hospital, the Northville Chamber of Commerce, Main Street Family Chiropractic Center, Poise and Providence Hospital the latest installment in the local health and fitness awareness campaign, "No Stoppin' Northville." "Michigan is known — unfortunately - as the third heaviest state in the country," she said

"We need to do something as a community to address this health issue.' The recreation department each session offers a variety of classes for the community's older set to encourage active minds and bodies, said senior center programmer Dennis Smith. Badminton, table tennis and basketball are among the activities residents 50-plus enroll in that are not labeled for 'seniors," he said.

"We try to promote physical fitness and health awareness," he said. "We're part of parks and recreation - that's what it's all about, physical fitness. That's part of our mission.

The staff continually adds and subtracts based on resident demand, Smith said. The classes with contracted instructors have enrollment requirements to make them financially feasible, he said.

The recreation department in January likely will add at the senior center a yoga class as well as return Tai Chi, instruction of flowing movements designed to relieve tension, increase circulation and strengthen the body.

Since the 303 W. Main Street building's July open, the staff has publicized an opportunity to walk in the gym 8-9 a.m., Mondays through Fridays. It's free. Music is piped in. Eighteen laps around the perimeter measure one mile, Smith said. "It's slowly picking up.'

Meanwhile, the line dancing seniors in the gym move to the beat of country/western, Top 40, easy listening and '50s and '60s music. "It's a very enjoyable class," Blakeman said. She said sometimes she takes a bleacher breather from the 90-minute

So how much does it take to reap its protective benefits?

JUST HALF AN HOUR

The Surgeon General's Office recommends 30 minutes of accumulated physical activity on most days of the week. And while it's never too late to start, don't stop once you do.

 Reinforce yourself. Keep reminding yourself of all the benefits you realize from exercise. Make a list and post it where you can see it every day. Make it your mantra.

. Do what feels good. Choose an activity you like. That way, you're more likely to stick with it. Try combining exercise with another activity: lift weights or do sit-ups while you're watching television; take a walk with your grandchild while you're baby-sitting

• Don't sweat it. If you're pressed for time, divide your activity into small sessions. Take a 10-minute walk at lunch, another one after dinner; pull weeds for 10 or 15 minutes.

• Ease into it. Don't try to do too much at once, especially if you have a chronic illness or other health condition. Talk to your doctor and try to devise a fitness plan to suit your individual needs and situation.

• Eat well. Food provides the fuel your body needs to exercise and function efficiently. Choose foods wisely and try to pack in nutrients.

Following the learning curve Dual dispatch system endures, solves early bugs

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

Despite some early bugs, combined public safety dispatch services for the city and township have been doing well as the effort reaches its one-month mark, officials said

On the city side, adjusting to equipment such as new Computer Aided Dispatch still is the biggest challenge, said City Police Chief James Petres

"I think overall, it's been good," Petres said "We found in some instances, some of the information that the officers relay to the dispatch that they put into the CAD isn't readily available as much as we would like There's a variety of different reports and formats where we can go and get some of the information that we need.

"That's learning curve on our part."

An initial problem with the CLEMIS computer network, where new activity codes weren't operating properly in officers' cars, was fixed, Petres said Township Police Chief John Werth said another snag has been radio reception near the Northville Downs racetrack.

"We do have that same existing problem at our Meijer station," Werth said "They're having a hard time hearing them on the portable radios. We're evaluating all this with the expert Motorola and we're going to have a solution shortly.

"There's some growing pains

When city residents call the city police at (248) 349-1234, they reach dispatch. However, if their call is forwarded to nonemergency police administration, it can get very feint.

"We're still having a problem with calls that go to the township and then they're transferred back. All that switching back and forth, it was losing something," Petres said.

Werth said that should be resolved with a new phone system due in 30-45 days. That step was delayed "The day they went to install it, we found out they didn't go by our request for product. It would not allow

Police Chief, Northville Township

(dispatchers) to barge in on a call Dispatch has to be able to that," Werth said.

Three additional receivers also are planned for both municipalities. Those should be ready to go by the time the township's new dispatch center is operational Jan. 1.

When high winds last weekend knocked out an SBC circuit line attached to a dispatch center receiver, Werth said the combined system helped things run smoothly

Tree experts: fall is the perfect time to prune

If you think the end of the growing season means you can stop worrying about the trees in your landscape, think again

Fall is one of the best times to examine the safety and health of your trees, say experts in tree care. Why?

First, with the leaves off, cracks, defects and deadwood are easier to see. Second, with winter storms approaching, hazards should be removed now before they damage property.

"Most trees can be pruned yearround," says Peter Gerstenberger, senior advisor for safety, standards & compliance for the Tree Care Industry Association, "and certain operations are easier to do in the fall, when dead branches are easily seen and removed." Some homeowners worry that arborists will not be able to determine deadwood on a tree when the leaves are off.

"On contrary," the says Gerstenberger, "this is the best time for an arborist to locate deadwood by looking for changes in color, fungus growth, cracks, and other symptoms, which can help them make this determination.

'Since the leaves are off, the view of the entire tree's architecture is clear and a thorough check can be performed."

Pruning is much more than the simple act of sawing off limbs. Proper pruning is an art based on scientific principles of plant physiology. At its most basic level, pruning trees involves removing damaged, dead or structurally weak limbs, which will improve a tree's health and reduce the chances of personal or property damage caused by falling limbs

Professional arborists have the capability to make the tree safer and more attractive by pruning live growth as well.

Proper pruning encourages growth, increases flower and fruit production, improves plant health, repairs damage and helps add aesthetic appeal to a tree. Pruning at the right time and in the right way is critical, since it is possible to kill a tree through neglect or overpruning.

The Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA) is a 68-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards, and are required to carry liability insurance Recently, the TCIA implemented an accreditation program, and Owen Tree

Church youth group benefits from Close commitment

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Doris Close's license plate says, "I LAUGH." The 85-year-old Northville resident is a busy lady, energized by her faith, a healthy sense of humor and continuous exposure to children.

One of five founders of First United Methodist Church's youth group 30 years ago, she shares weekly with local youngsters the group's core message --- then lives it: "Treat everyone as a child of God."

The youth club rule: treat everyone as you expect to be treated by them, she said

"I was called to this church to do this," Close said. The twice-widowed Close said the group she first helped breathe life into has since sustained her.

Diving into formation of the group in 1973 saved the then 53-year-old from the depths of despair when her first husband, Mike Herrick, died suddenly. "It was a lifesaver," she said. "It keeps you on your toes working with youth.'

When her husband Richard was ill, Close said his son and her daughter cared for him Wednesday nights so she could stay involved in the club she holds so dear.

"I've done everything, counselor, teacher, secretary/treasurer, cook, director.

From the fledgling 50 fourth through 12th graders who attended youth group meetings at the start, the program now called "Logos' (The Word) has grown to 200 youngsters. They gather for three hours of Bible study, choir, craft or recreation activities and dinner/fellowship every Wednesday night at the Eight Mile Road church.

"I could see a need for something for the youth of our church," she recalled "This program just fit it exactly.

"It's so enriching to the youth and to the whole church really," Close said. "We're fortunate we have wonderful people. "I'm just thrilled to be part of it."

Devoted leader

Northville's Youth and Family Forum recently recognized Close's efforts by presenting to her its "Asset Builder Award." She was singled out for her continuous involvement in the youth group and her leadership in the Appalachian Serve Project which each summer sends church teams to help repair houses for the needy.

The following Wednesday, current students showed the program co-founder how much her efforts mean to them when her accomplishment was noted in their presence.

"You'd be surprised how many of them came up to congratulate me," she said. "The parents didn't tell them to do it. That made me feel really good."

Enrollment in the youth group takes a family commitment. When moms and dads register their children for a $55 session, they too must sign up for an hour each week. 100 Nearly volunteers

Wednesdays serve as table parents, activity directors, Bible study teachers, hall monitors and so on.

"That's not a lot to ask for what it gives their children," she said. "It takes a lot of devoted people."

The program's appeal is wide and the impact far-reaching, Close said.

"It's not just our church," she said. "We've had Catholic kids, Jewish kids, Lutheran kids. The parents want this for their kids when they see it."

The only way

Proud as she is of Logos, Close acknowledged it is not for everyone "Some people have other priorities," she said, In the context of Bible teachings, the directors talk about personal responsibility and following direction. "The biggest change I've seen in the kids over the years is how the adults treat the kids," Close said. The kids are put on a pedestal. And you know what they're doing to them - they're destroying them."

The long-term success of First United Methodist's youth club is due to the leaders' commitment to maintaining the program's content, Close said. Adults involved in administering the program, including clergy, must attend three 12hour days of Logos instruction.

"You have to keep the real reason in the foreground — it's for the Bible study," she said "That's why

The second Sunday in November is the deadline to sign up for the trip. Year-round fundraising efforts will cover the $50,000 the volunteers will need for a 15-passenger van rental and travel expenses, Close said.

The task of preparing these coming months for the week-long trip is arduous. The reward: hard labor in Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia or West Virginia.

"The whole thing is not so much building the houses," she said "It's more our contact with them and their contact with us."

"They're so thankful for everything that you do," she said. That's the one thing the kids find out. They don't have anything materially, but they're happy."

At evening gatherings, the tired crews talk about what happened that day; adult organizers layout plans for the next day. The group leaders try to squeeze lessons about local culture into the trip's scarce free time.

"It's really hard work," Close said "It does the kids good.

No one was injured last Friday when a vertical conveyor belt known as a "man-lift" caught fire at about 3 pm outside the ZF Group business

All personnel were evacuated safely, according to township police, and the fire department put out the flames. Damage to the lift, located at the north end of the building and used to hoist workers, was estimated at $15,000.

Corner proposal shot down

A proposal to change the zoning on the northwest corner of Six Mile and Ridge roads from residential to business was met with high resident opposition last week

Italy America Construction, LLC., requested rezoning of 2.6 acres for a 14,000 square-foot neighborhood shopping plaza.

'It wouldn't be very commercial looking," said Italy America agent Frank Mastroianni. "Very low-key so it looks like it belongs"

Nearly 40 residents wrote letters and about 30 showed up to voice dissent Reasons ranged from safety to natural terrain.

'We .. purchased a home because of the beauty and tranquility of Northville Township," Laurie McClure said. "We did not bargain to have strip malls right in our own neighborhoods,"

Based on nine criteria, the commission decided 7-0 to give a negative recommendation to the board of trustees, which will hear the issue Nov. 18.

Signs of change?

The five business corridors in Northville Township may one day require new or changed signs to have more consistent sizes reported a Honda Civic driving northbound on Haggerty Road approaching Eight Mile Road with severe rear damage, including a crushed trunk and shattered glass The officer determined the accident occurred in South Lyon Township and learned that no hit and runs had been reported to South Lyon police. One male was 26 years old, the other 25

An arresting Halloween

A 22-year-old South Lyon male allegedly tried to help himself to a free Halloween "treat" at Meijer Instead, he was arrested by township police on a third count of retail fraud and for possessing narcotic paraphernalia

Development Community Director Jennifer Frey presented to the planning commission the beginning stages of a possible amendment to the zoning ordinance in these areas.

"The corridor philosophy is to create uniform signs along main roads within the community rather than different signs by zoning district," Frey said "Any new signs would have to conform, or changes to existing signs would trigger compliance with this ordinance Existing signs would be permitted to remain."

The proposed corridors include sections of Five Mile, Seven Mile, Northville and Haggerty roads

The topic will again come before the planning commission on Dec. 7, and, if it proceeds, eventually face public hearing.

Police said the male admitted he is a heroin user His court date is Nov 18.

Northville's fund balance is $49 million, nearly 10 percent of the school's budget, said John Street, Northville Public Schools director of business and finance.

The fund balance, though healthy, falls short of the school board 11 percent goal

Michigan School Business Officials, a nonprofit corporation founded in 1937 to serve the interest of education, recommends districts maintain a fund balance between 15-20 percent.

But recommendations by the American School Board Journal suggest any balance exceeding 15 percent is too high, preferring instead a fund balance of about 10 percent

The state-wide average is about 16 percent.

"There isn't an objective minimum, there isn't a right size," Street said.

The district finance director said between 10-20 percent is reasonable

"You don't want to have too large of fund balance that somewhat indicates you are not spending your money for the purpose it was raised, you don't want to keep growing it or having it too large and you don't want to have it too small so that you can't absorb problems that come along," Street said.

"It is a cushion You add to it when you are doing well and you take from it when you run into some troubles, but you still have to maintain a reasonable amount just to meet your operating obligations."

Keeping a healthy balance is important for reasons other than maintaining a rainy day fund.

Street said a fund balance is an indication of a district's cash position and influences a district's bond rating

"People who are buying your bonds look at your fund balance as an indication of your ability to man-age your money," he said

Northville's position

Beck is back in action

Road construction project wraps up

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

After months of bottlenecked traffic on Beck Road, the orange barrels have disappeared almost for good.

"There's just some miscellaneous clean up here and there," said Project Engineer Craig Wobrock of the Wayne County "There Engineering Division may be temporary lane closures for the next couple weeks'

But by and large, the piece of Beck between Five and Six Mile roads is now complete. The project, which began this March, added an extra through-lane in each direction, as well as boulevard medians with turnarounds.

Work on the county-operated road, which also included and Five and Six Mile intersections, was contracted last August to Peter A Basile Sons at a cost of $3 825 million.

In order to have boulevards instead of five lanes, Township Director of Public Services Don Weaver said the township contributed $80,000 from its general fund.

"We didn't want to create another Haggerty Road on the west side of the township, so it gives a little bit softer appearance," Weaver said. "It was a year late commencing, (but) I think it has turned out well."

Wobrock said the road officially reopened Oct. 26.

Paving, asphalt, turnarounds and major road signs are complete. As of last Friday, still on the 'to-do" list were median sodding, permanent "No Parking" signs, land line markings and painted lane striping on the roads.

The project took slightly longer than mid-to-late September projections made by Wayne County in August.

"We had some material holdups that caused some problems." Wobrock said Steel shortages were one. The steel is used for contraction joints in the pavement, which allows the road to constrict when the weather gets cold.

Project Manager Al Flores of Peter A. Basile Sons, Inc. said the Five Mile/Beck roads intersection was a challenge. "There were a lot of things in that intersection that delayed our work," Flores said. "There was some utility conflicts. Five Mile Road kind of looked like spaghettı. I thınk Edison was there There (were) sewers in the way. I think there was water in the way as well.

"Because of the utility conflicts, the Six Mile Road intersection was built first."

In all, Wobrock said, "I'd say (it was) pretty typical for that size of job and from the time of the land award. It was pretty large.

The project began last fall with construction on the Six Mile/Beck roads intersection. Last year, the county worked on Sheldon Road between Five Mile Road and Tournament Drive, and S1x Mile between Beck and Ridge roads prior to that.

Alive again Northville Elementary students add words to historical characters

By Victoria Sadlocha RECORD STAFF WRITER

Only in Northville last week could Joe Paterno, King Tutankhamun, Queen Elizabeth and Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis be together talking in the same room.

The feat was accomplished by the fifth-grade student body at Ridge Wood Elementary School.

The school's cafeteria was transformed into a living wax museum on Oct. 27 and 28 where students cloaked as historical figures narrated life tales.

The students selected the subjects they portrayed.

"I chose her (astronaut Sally Ride) because I thought she would be interesting to research," said student, Lisa Hamel. "I also chose her because I always wanted to go to space myself."

Students Jon Wicker and Eugene Williams chose athletic figures for the same reason - overcoming physical adversity at a young age.

Wicker said he portrayed Muhammad Alı because the famous boxer went from being scrawny to a champ and Williams chose Red Wing Brett Hull because he weighed 215 pounds when he was younger.

Student Michael Bitterle chose Nazi Death Camp survivor, Jack Mandelbaum.

Bitterle recited from memorization a brief depiction of life as the 15-year-old Jewish boy from Polland banished to a concentra-

Play is North's late-night dream

By Kim Kovelle STAFF WRITER

While playwright Dennis North slept one night, he had a dream he couldn't shake.

"It was a dream that I had that literally my own son had died," said North, a professional actor. "An angel came in and said, 'There's been a mistake. We just have to take the baby back.' That stuck with me for six months or so.'

It was one source of inspiration his first full play "Orphan Train," a story about a farm couple who loses their child in the 1920s and also risks losing their farm in tough times.

Another source was a PBS television special he saw about turnof-the-century orphan trains. The trains traveled the country with the ideal that the orphaned children onboard would be dropped off to caring families.

"Before I knew it the two ideas kind of gelled together," North said. "My main premise I think in the play is .. these (characters) have faith and faith is real."

Election offers perfect example of why this is your hometown paper

Mercifully, this election is over at last

Because I am a hostage to early deadlines, as of this writing I have no idea how it all turned out. But I continue to feel that whoever won the Presidency ought to realize his first and most important task is to bring our country - now so narrowly and so bitterly divided - back together.

Back in the mid-'60s, I knew former President Lyndon B. Johnson slightly.

I remember that one of his favorite sayings, taken from the Bible, was "Come, let us reason together" Older and perhaps rather more skeptical than I was, I now wonder occasionally if LBJ's "reasoning together" was a verbally convenient way of inviting people to agree with him.

Regardless, LBJ had an important point. The process of reasoning together has great appeal, if only because our _ diverse and vast country simply cannot continue to withstand the sort of brutish, nasty and divisive politics we have experienced over the past six years, beginning with the attempted impeachment of a not-fullyhonest President Clinton and proceeding to the polarization of the country under President Bush

Johnson Creek meeting

The Johnson Creek, a Rouge tributary that flows through Northville 1s a resource that Northville residents cannot afford to lose. One of the unique draws to the area and a factor that keeps housing values at a premium is the natural beauty of this trout stream. As the Rouge's only coldwater trout stream, the Johnson Creek has some of the best water quality and fish and wildlife habitat in the Rouge River Watershed.

Yet the attractiveness of the stream may be its downfall as the pressure to build homes close to the creek and its wetlands eat away at the creek's ability to restore itself.

Wetlands are critical to keeping a creek clean as they absorb and filter rainwater, protect from flooding, and help to maintain consistent water flow in the creek. They are also critical wildlife habitat. As any resident who gain by working together than by fighting it out to the end. In my experience, this more often than not comes about in a context of smaller, local, relatively face-to-face communities, where people get to know each other as people rather than as abstract images to be demonized.

Quite possibly, this is the underlying factor that has made local politics here in Michigan so much less nasty than the national variety People living together in local communities have a chance to rub up against each other in a variety of situations, not always political. And there's nothing like the shared interest of having a vital, prosperous community to dissolve ideological and partisan attitudes. (I recognize this generalization doesn't always apply in certain places, but for most communities it works.)

That's why publishing this hometown newspaper is such a continued joy to me. Some years ago, I finally summoned up the discipline to write down this newspaper's fundamental purposes for being. They include enhancing the lives of our readers and sustaining the communities we serve. My dictionary offers up definitions for enhance: "To make greater, as in value, beauty or reputation; augment.

By publishing a community newspaper that provides you with news of your own commuvided our readers with up-tothe minute local election results. We did these things in the belief that providing our readers with the local information they need to make informed local political choices is an essential obligation of a hometown newspaper This is at heart the consequence of our mission to enhance the lives of our readers. And we believe this information helps encourage the face-to-face local political process that brings local people to reason together for the common good and, as such, helps fulfill our obligation to nurture the communities we serve.

My sense is that people living in their own home towns in close and mutually respectful relationships with others and joined in their aspirations for their own communities represent the solid heart of American democracy. That's the feeling I regularly get when I step into my township hall to vote Sadly, that feeling seems miles away from the corrosive. negative and nasty campaign we have just seen acted out on a national scale.

This started out as a peace vigil which is a noble cause and I am sure most people of both political parties support that idea What is misleading about his letter is saying that is has strictly been a peace vigil. That is a lie! For about the past 9 months it has been a Democratic Political protest of the current President's policies and more recently, strictly a Kerry/Edwards political display I am not surprised the Bush supporters joined in If Mr Clancy does not want competition, then he should not have allowed the "peace vigil" to turn into a street cornel political debate. However I am most concerned for the safety of motorists and for the pedestrians and houses near the intersection since both of the groups have been bringing extremely large political signs and holding them up in the air which definitely does block the view of numerous drivers. Mr. Clancy should follow his own advice and refrain from bringing large signs, which block traffic and pursue his original peace-oriented vigil We all will be much better off

Regarding (the Our Lady of Victory) project, I agree with Mr Coolman 1 live on the corner of Main Street and Rogers and I watch the traffic go by They come barreling down Main Street and, if you dare to try to back out maintain these roads and I, for one, am tired of the bullying going on. This is a democracy. So why don't we put it up for a vote? Why should the city planners have to take all this flack? We should band together and let this bully know we agree with the city planners and we don't want this large building in our neighborhood or our town I have lived here since before the Church was built, and I sure do miss the original church They were good neighbors and respected our neighborhood.

A total of approximately $11,000 was raised and has been divided between both schools. These monies will assist in funding student equipment purchases, music therapy and leisure recreation activities such as swimming, bowling and rollerskating.

Voters approve Proposal 1

Statewide proposal sets Northville Downs on new track

By Maureen Johnston and Victoria Sadlocha RECORD STAFF WRITERS

Following passage Tuesday of Proposal 1, local officials are sounding off about the impact the statewide ballot initiative will have locally

Northville Downs operations director Lou Carlo said he was disappointed voters approved Proposal

The constitutional amendment's passage effectively kills "racino" plan the state's race tracks had pursued for months through Michigan's Legislature.

Proposal 1 will require voter approval at both state and local levels to institute any new forms of gambling, including lottery games Northville's harness and simulcast racing attraction looked to video terminal gambling to appeal to a new. younger clientele. The 50plus-year-old venue needs to keep up with the trends, Carlo had said.

"We're not going anywhere," he said Wednesday. "It wasn't that big a blow. It wasn't the heart. This is just business."

Northville school board vicepresident, Joan Wadsworth, said on Wednesday she is disappointed with the results.

"It may well be unfortunate for schools and we'll see how that plays out and you wonder if there is anything that can be done to minimize the impact on schools," Wadsworth said.

"But I think that if the folks who have looked at it very carefully are saying it limits the lottery's ability to produce and market new games... and that really happens it will have a negative impact on school funding."

Leonard Rezmierski, superintendent of Northville Schools said the proposal could cost school districts statewide nearly $100 million annually.

More than 5 percent of public school districts' budgets come from state lottery funds, he said.

Critics like Rezmierski believe Proposal 1 will make the task of introducing new lottery games difficult, influencing school proceeds.

Wednesday unofficial state results showed the proposal passed by 736,748 votes. Nearly 2.6 million Michigan ballots were cast in favor.

More than half of Wayne County voters approved the proposal, with unofficial results showing a 62 percent approval rate versus 54 percent of Oakland County voters supporting the amendment.

At the local level, the race was nearly a tie in the city.

City of Northville voters approved the proposal by two votes, with 1,882 yes votes compared to 1.880 nos.

In the township the proposal passed by about 500 votes.

Mark Holland, 41, voted in his first election Tuesday. The Canton resident said his wife, Sandi, convinced him it was time to finally cast a ballot.

Locally, two statewide ballot proposals took different roads.

In the city, residents narrowly approved Proposal 1, an amendment to the state constitution requiring a local vote for any newly begun gaming venture, including state lottery games.

City residents approved the measure by two votes, 1,882-1,880. Township voters approved Proposal 1 by a 7,359-6,875 margin.

Proposal 2, a constitutional amendment making the marriage of one man and one woman the only union officially recognized by state statute, took two different roads in the city and township.

In the city, the measure was turned down, 1,887-1,870; in the township, voters approved Proposal 2 by a 8,005-6,202 mark.

A regular voter, Kilpatrick said he studied before making ballot choices.

Township resident Lindell Collins, 64, voted by 10 a m. The Dallas, Texas transplant voted for Bush.

"You don't need to change presidents during a war or terroristic times," Collins said. "And I didn't like Kerry's wife."

Jimmy Rea, who works as a waiter at the Starting Gate restaurant his parents own along Center Street in downtown Northville, said Proposal 1 drove him to the polls. He voted against the proposal.

"The track has supported us all these years," he said. "So we can't

"I've always been one to analyze everything first," he said. "I thought unless you make an informed decision you shouldn't vote.'

Following the vote, the Northville High School graduate shared an election night pizza with his dad, Lee Holland, who cast his absentee ballot.

Crystal Berry, 19, also voted for the first time. The 2003 Northville High School graduate hurried from work at the Novi Toys R Us store to cast her ballot and was Precinct 1's final voter.

A recent address change meant Berry had to fill out a provisional ballot. Still, she was not deterred. She said the two statewide proposals drove her to the election night polls, adding she voted "no" for each.

Berry said she was not impressed with the presidential timbre neither Bush nor Kerry displayed.

"Personally, I think they acted like a couple of children," Berry said. "I was looking for someone who said what they were going to do, rather than just butcher each other."

Her presidential selection was a write-in candidate, she said: "Mickey Mouse."

Political signs: 30-day clock ticking

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

Now that the intense campaigns and elections of 2004 are nearly over, what's one thing that George W. Bush and John F. Kerry sull have in common?

Here in Northville, it's arguably the fact that red, white and blue signs trumpeting both names will continue to dot lawns and street corners for a few days.

But according city and township ordinances, all political signs must come down five to seven days after ballots are cast Nov. 2, or risk fines.

In Northville Township, signs are allowed up 60 days before the election, and must be removed seven days after.

Ordinance Enforcement Officer

Joe Bauer said fines could be a minimum of $150 in the first instance, increasing to no less than $300 for repeat offenses. Violators can be tracked by addresses located on the signs.

"They're pretty accurate as far as taking them down afterwards," Bauer said. "As you get to that seven day deadline, it mostly takes care of itself.

"They're probably mostly in the main intersections, such as, let's say, where the road stops (at) Northville Road and Five Mile. Wherever there's a longer stoppage in traffic."

Deadlines are a bit tighter in the city: signs can be erected 45 days before the election, and must be removed five days after. Civil fines can reach up to $500.

City Manager Gary Word said

"By and large people tend to respect" the rules."

signs also are found at major intersections.

"(They) generally tend to coagulate where a lot of people tend to go, although they can't be on public property," Word said. "I think we'll probably have more signs out than normal. By and large people tend to respect the rules."

Demand for downtown parking rises

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Protest from upper-floor tenants postponed wholesale changes planned for all-day downtown public parking lots for now.

Remaining for at least another two weeks: 30 orange dots at the Main and Wing street parking lot and another 60 at the Dunlap Street lot behind the Marquis Theatre

The Northville City Council Monday night expanded an existing parking committee to include voices of Main and Center street office occupants, apartment tenants, and affected property owners.

The city leaders asked for a speedy short-term compromise suggestion from the volunteers joining the long-standing committee of retailers and down-town business owners.

With the holiday shopping season fast approaching and the Main and Wing street lot suddenly 60 spaces shorter with the start of Jim Long's retail-office construction project, convenient parking shortage is stoking frustration.

Several Center Street secondfloor tenants asked the council members to consider their needs before acting on a recommendation to convert the lots completely to a three-hour limit. They described the two-block walk they would be asked to make as an after-dark safety concern, a dreaded winter weather working condition and a hiring obstacle.

The Northville Downtown Development Authority had proposed removing all the orange dots as soon as possible to open more spaces for downtown shoppers. They suggested workers use nearby all-day free parking lots, primarily south of Cady Street.

Discussion Monday returned to the recurring theme of a need for a long-term parking solution. The quickly assembled group will look at possibilities in the next two weeks and will try to address the immediate need.

From there, the council will consider hiring a community strategic planning consultant to help develop a plan the majority of downtown dwellers will accept.

The council did proceed with the first reading of an ordinance amendment that would clearly designate the city's most-used parking areas as three-hour-limit lots versus three-hour-limit spaces.

The revision is designed to curtail employees' evasion of the limit by moving their cars from one space another in the lot after an enforcement officer chalks their tire.

Edward Lee Perpich, 65

Edward Lee Perpich died on Oct. 26, 2004 from complications of kidney surgery. He was 65.

Ed was born in rural West Virginia on May 2, 1939, the fourth child of Frances and George Perpich. The physician who delivered him at home was said to pronounce him 15 pounds at birth, beginning a life of a big man with a bigger heart.

Ed loved to tell jokes and he loved to tell stories. He told of the time his second grade teacher offered him the schoolhouse Christmas tree after school let out and how he proudly dragged the tree home to present to his mother. He was also fond of telling the story of how he escaped out the bathroom window one day when his mother needed to teach him a lesson with a switch.

Seeking opportunity for their children, the family moved from the coal mines of Elkhorn, West Virginia, to the city of Dearborn, Mich, in 1944. He attended Miller Elementary, where he met friends that he kept until the present day, and Fordson High School, where he lettered in varsity football and basketball, eventually winning an athletic scholarship to Michigan State University.

He met his wife of 44 years. Nancy Bohas, when he offered her his hand to descend the stage at a Model of the Future contest. A beautiful, vivacious young couple blessed with loying families and grand circles of friends, they married on Oct. 15, 1960.

He attended Ferris State University from 1961 to 1964 where he studied graphic arts and played football and basketball. He once drove from Big Rapids to Dearborn and back after playing a game in which he received a concussion only to wake up Monday morning thinking it was halftime and their young daughter. He took a job in the Printing Department at Ford Motor Company and passed up opportunities for advancement to avoid traveling far from Nancy and their three children. He coached youth basketball and football in Northville for many years and attended countless high school games. He took early retirement as purchasing buyer at Ford and later left a successful second career to gladly retire with Nancy. They traveled with friends to Alaska, to Tahiti, and to 100 places in between. This summer, they fulfilled a lifelong dream and visited Croatia with his brother and other Perpich family members.

He always enjoyed the trip from the fridge to the TV, and he loved driving the pontoon a slow loop around Portage Lake, where he relished peaceful evenings with Nancy after a long day visiting or power-washing the deck.

For all the miles he traveled, most were spent driving from Northville to Ann Arbor to Brighton to spend time with his children and grandchildren. They will miss his big Papa hugs, his kisses on fingers and elbows, his gentle reminders that someone's hair was too long, or too short, or in someone's eyes. He was forever willing to pull a comb out of his back pocket to offer a loving swipe through their hair.

He leaves stories unwritten but many to be told.

Edward was a member of the Graphic Arts Guild, a member of the Croatian Fraternal Union, a founding member of the Northville Booster Club, and a past president of the Fordson Alumni Club He is preceded in death by his parents Frances and George, his sister Anne and brother Frank. He is survived by his wife Nancy; his children Diana (Katie), David (Liz), and Daniel (Lori); seven grandchildren; brother, Rudy (Jean); sister-in-law Helen; and a wide circle of dear friends and family.

HOME TOUR: annual event benefits Northville Foundation

event has sold out each year, said Foundation president Sharr Peters "We always hope to do at least 1.000"

įł

"The five selected homes for Mission-flavor cozy family home this year's tour are all very different, very unique and a delight to the eye," Peters said

The tour offerings range from a 6,000-square-foot showplace to a to a waterfront condo to a 13room French country-style house to a traditional setting with custom kids' rooms.

Waterford-based Newell said he will spend two weeks preparing Sam Messina's home built in 2000. Just the place for entertaining, the traditional home features custom cabinetry, granite counter tops, crystal chandehers and furniture accumulated during the owner's travels.

Messina called on Newell's expertise after seeing his holiday transformation of neighbors homes. The decorator will make his first impression on visitors' as they approach the leaded glass doors from the front porch.

"I am trying to blend with the color tones of each room," Newel said "I tried to go with the character of every room It's kind of an eclectic European mix. He's got some very vivid colors so I tried to incorporate that."

Patti and Joe D'Avanzo completed renovation projects in their Blue Heron Pointe condominium just in time for the tour. The 12year-old 4,200-square foot home overlooks water from almost every room

No surprise, Patti said, "the view" is her favorite part of the place, now updated with spicecolored faux finishes, oak floors and designer window treatments.

"When we moved in, the house was all white," D'Avanzo said. "It had a contemporary flair to it. We are more traditional.

A patron of Northville's Preferences, D'Avanzo 1s looking forward to boutique owner Peggy Robison's holiday touches for her home. A past tour volunteer, she designers are planning eight trees a variety of sizes, formal table settings, fireplace decoration and more

"I'm thrilled to watch someone else work their magic in my house," said Cooper. The homeowner does a lot of her own home projects from staining the staircase and fireplace to installing tile as a kitchen backsplash and around the fireplace, as well as creating the suede-look on her kitchen walls.

"I usually do one tree," the mom of three said. "I'm excited to see eight."

It's hard to characterize the 3,800-square-foot home's décor style, Cooper said, pointing to the simple Mission-style lines of the woodwork. It's a comfortable home to a family of five, she said. She smiled at the thought of 1,000

"This house is like Grand Central Station on any given day," she said. "My friends are amazed at how many people are in and out of my house.

"Everything is my house is used. There are no museum pieces. I hope people get that sense."

Mustangs ready for district competition

By Sam Eggleston RECORD SPORTS WRITER

What's the key to winning in the district tournament for the Northville Mustangs?

Teamwork, teamwork and more teamwork.

The Mustangs are well aware their season only gets tougher starting Nov. 15 when they play Novi in the first round of the post season at Canton High School. Tip off 1s scheduled for 7 p.m.

"I think we're really peaking right now," said senior forward Evonna Karchon, who leads her team in scoring this season. "We're trying our hardest right now and it's easy to see that we all really want to win.'

Northville doesn't seem too worried that Novi beat them earlier this season by a single free throw. Emily Weaver and Chrissy Castelli said Novi beat them last year in the regular season as well. "We ended up beating them in the first round last year," Weaver said. "I think we're definitely ready. We're much better than we were back then. We're much more controlled."

Plus, a little challenge never hurt anyone, Castelli and Weaver will have the task of playing against 'some of the best post players in the area if the Mustangs earn a few wins in the district.

"We're looking forward to the challenge," said Castelli. "It's a little intimidating when you think about it at first, but in the past when we've played those good post players I think we've competed at their level. It should make the games interest-Ing." Northville comes into the post season in better shape than they have over the past few years. Instead of being toward the middle to the bottom of the Western Lakes Activities Association pack, they are one of the top tier teams In fact, the only teams to beat them from the district line up are Novi and Canton.

For district playoff brackets, see page 5B

What's their secret?

"Teams have to have great chem-stry," Weaver said. "Teams with great chemistry win more games and are more surprising than teams that don't. We have it.'

For the senior players, there is an extra playoffs motivation: one loss and they're done.

"I think it motivates all of our seniors," said Castelli. "I think it even motivates the underclassmen. They know that once we lose a game we can't be the same team anymore. Next year's team won't quite be the same as this year's. I think we're all really motivated to win these games.

Northville has shown time and time again this season they are capable of adjusting to whatever their opponent brings to the hardwood. That, said Karchon, will be key in beating Novi and any other team the Mustangs may face in post season play.

said. "Teams know its a completely different game in the districts. They are going to try and fool us, go a different way and play a different style sometimes. We're going to recognize that though. It's one of our best abilities and we've been pretty darn good at it lately.'

They'll have to keep playing that way if they want to earn some post season victories. From pressing defenses to three-guard offenses, Northville is going to have the opportunity to see a lot of different styles of basketball being played. They'll have to adjust to each of them if they want to win.

Intangibles? Never dismiss a little team motivation.

we're fired up," Karchon said. "We want to do so good that it blows the pants off the other team."

Mustangs Evonna Karchon, Chrissy Castelli, and Emily Weaver will battle for district playoff rebounds.

Emily Foland is having fun playing for the Northville 'Colts.

Emily's Greatest Hits Thornton Creek student is first-ever female Colt

This Halloween a lot of girls wanted to be a princess or a kitty cat. Northville's Emily Foland wanted to be a football player.

In fact, it's a role she wanted to play even in the summer.

"I really like playing football," said Foland, a fifth grader at Thornton Creek Elementary in Northville. "It's a lot of fun."

Foland is the first-ever female football player to don the pads for the Northville Colts youth football organization.

"I used to play football in the backyard at our old house (in Milford)," she said. "I liked playing it and I liked watching it so I wanted to play for the Colts."

Foland entered her name in the annual lottery to see who would make the team and who wouldn't. Hers was the fourth name drawn for junior varsity.

Sam

Eggleston

RECORD SPORTS

The reality of her situation hit when Foland went to meet her teammates for the first time.

"I was really nervous when I went to meet them," she said. "I was wondering how they were going to treat me."

It ended up they treated her like one of the guys. "They just wondered how I could play," she said. "They are all really nice to me."

Foland's fellow Colts didn't have to wonder long. She plays at the receiver position, on kickoffs and on the defensive line.

She said the hardest thing about football is all of the sprints her coaches make the team run at the end of practice and, of course, the hits. "The hitting is a lot harder than I thought," she said.

That's why her mother and father, Kathleen and Todd, were apprehensive about letting her play in the first place.

'I thought maybe she'd get hurt," her mother explained. "Her good friend from Milford started football a year earlier than her and he would come home covered in bruises. I was a little nervous."

The nerves, they found out, were unnecessary. Their daughter was willing to go in and scrap with the rest of the "boys."

"I hit someone on one of the kick-offs," Foland said. "Then someone hit me and knocked me over. There are some hard hits, but it isn't bad.

Foland admits she still gets excited before the games. But after the first hit she's settled down and ready to play. In her first season strapping on the shoulder pads, Foland has found herself with a good team. The junior varsity Colts finished their regular season the top team in their league and look to have a promising run into the playoffs

'I think we'll do pretty good," she said. "We've scored the most touchdowns and our defense has allowed the least.'

Foland has the support of her parents as well as her older sister Megan, 13, and younger sister Lillie, 3.

One of the loudest cheers for Foland comes from the sidelines in the form of her fraternal twin, Gabby, who is on the Colts cheerleading squad.

With four daughters, Foland's mom never thought she'd have to cheer for tackles and catches on the football field.

'My husband was a little apprehensive at first," she said. "One of his friends told him it was as close as he was going to get so he might as well go for it."

"I used to play football in the backyard at our old house (in Milford). I liked playing it and I liked watching it so I wanted to play for the Colts."

> Emily Foland Northville Colts Player

And so the Folands went for it. The result? "I'd like to play next year," Emily Foland said.

And what about middle school and possibly high school football?

'We'll see how it goes next year," Foland said. "I'll see how I play and then I'll decide."

Two girls advance to states

It was a finish that stunned the Northville Mustangs girls cross country team

Despite being touted as one of the top teams in the regional meet last Saturday, the Mustangs team came up short in one of the toughest races of the year

"Even though the Mustangs were disappointed not placing as a team, they have nothing to hang their heads about," said coach Nancy Smith "This team had an amazing season. They put in great times and school-history bests throughout the entire season Today just wasn't their day.

The Mustangs finished fifth as a team, but still managed to qualify two runners to the state finals this Saturday in Brooklyn, Mich Senior Kate McClymont extended her senior cross country career by capturing 12th in a time of 20.20 while Bryn Smetana was 15th in 20.27 The top 15 runners qualified individually for the finals

Molly Gavin finished 16th in 20.36 while Mary Sprader was 28th in 21 06, Megan Sheremet was 34th in 21.22 and Andrea Moehle was 40th in 22 03

The biggest shock of the day was the race senior Liz Hrivnak ran. After finishing as the top Mustang in the majority of the meets this year, Hrivnak finished 33rd overall in 21.21.

But it was a wet soggy course that sapped everyone, especially with the addition of a strong wind.

"The wind took a toll on us as a team today and the straight, long stretches didn't fare well for us.

Turnbull headed to Brooklyn

Northville's stellar sophomore harrier Jasen Tuinbull added to his already impressive resume with an individual finish of fifth place at the regional meet to qualify for the state finals

The finals are slated to be held Saturday in Brooklyn, Mich The berth marks the first trip the sophomore made to the finals "Jasen showed his mettle Saturday," said Chris Cronin, the boys coach "He was aggressive and responded when challenged in the late stages of the race. He hasn't run well in windy conditions all season, but I felt today he was mentally too strong to be impacted by the conditions When Jasen has his focus, he is a tough runner to beat

Cronin noted there was more to the finish than last-minute preparation

"Sure, this was one of our stated goals for the season, but we always talk about the fact that qualifying for the state finals is a byproduct of summer conditioning, quality practices, and a resolve that is unwavering," he ٩,

Tommy Farrell capped off a terrific season with a 28th-place finish in the region while George Kern took 35th Jake Myers, Tommy Sugawara and Neil Das came in 43rd, 45th and 47th, Rounding out respectively Northville finishers was Josh Ermatinger in 55th with a time of 19 25

The Northville freshman Colts won a decisive 36-19 victory against the Livonia Eagles in their last season game Sunday

The Novi faithful sure know how to throw a party. Prior to the football game at Hillside, the green and white fans were in the parking lot with hot dogs cooking on the flames of an open grill. It was a sight to see and even better to taste.

The Wildcats fanatics raised over $200 for Teens Aiding the Cancer Community and they hope everyone will help them do it again next week at Canton. The cost of the tailgate is $5 for all-you-can-eat. The two high school students who organize the event take enough cash off the top to even out what they spent on supplies and donate the rest

How do you get a team of more than 70 girls to become close to one another? Simple. You start by having them do team building exercises such as yoga and running and then you do fun things like go on a hay rıde.

It's amazing the difference a mere mile can make.

At Novi's football stadium a fan has to strain at times to hear the National Anthem being played over the din of the fans. At Northville's field you could practically hear a pin drop.

It's even more of an honor to hear the silence, thanks to Northville's decision to feature a veteran as an honorary captain each week throughout the regular season. They go out and assist with the coin toss and are allowed on the sidelines throughout the game.

Words of encouragement

Northville football coach Clint Alexander isn't the mostliked person in town. In fact, on the Web site www.mlive.com forums there are people still asking for his job.

It seems a 7-3 season isn't good enough for some, despite the fact that it's nearly double the victories from the last two seasons put together.

Alexander does have his supporters though.

One former football player from Concorde High School, where coach departed to come to Northville, spoke up after the game to tell the Northville fans that they are headed in the right direction.

Alexander, for the first time since arriving in Northville, wiped away tears as he addressed his team.

"You've seen what hard work can do," he said. "You underclassmen have a lot to live up

That they do. It was one heck of a run.

Name games

Sometimes the difference between right and wrong is two letters.

Northville High School swimmer Emily Hopcian's last name has been spelled Hopican for the last several issues. Why? One roster in the Northville Record sports department has it spelled that way.

When the error was pointed out, a thorough investigation ensued, only to find it spelled "Hopic-o-n" in the program and Hopci-a-n in the student directory.

Lesson learned.

Sometimes you need a program to tell the players apart. Other times you need a home phone number.

It was a scene common throughout the night. Multiple parents came up to Alexander to thank him for what he had done for their sons.

"These are great kids," Alexander said. "This is a hard way to end the year for them."

Hard indeed. After losing to Novi two weeks ago, 35-7, the Mustangs seemed pumped up and ready to play. In complete deja vu, the Wildcats scored on their opening drive and didn't look back.

Novi admitted they were worried about Northville coming into the contest - especially with a damp field thanks to rain the night before.

"We were definitely worried," Kellepourey said of Northville's second chance "With the mud on the field and their spread offense we thought they would have a strong combination"

It was a combination the Mustangs thought would be potent as well and one they aren't about to abandon. Alexander said come next year he has full intentions of wearing orange and black as the top Mustang in town.

"We've got a lot of good kids coming up and a lot of good kids coming back," he said. "I'm going to stay in Northville. I'm excited about what these kids coming back have to offer this program."

In a flash, the fleet-footed ghost disappears. The ghost is youth, running forever free between life's hash marks, passing without notice from one person to the next.

On the high school football field, the world is a never-ending overtime game. Every play is big. Every moment is crucial, because, in context, they are so few.

A team huddles one final time. Parents gather. A head coach, who weathered two consecutive two-win seasons begins to speak. Instantly, his voice becomes a broken broomstick. He chokes up repeatedly. The moment is larger than the man.

So he does what he's always done: he passes around praise like it's a dish filled with Halloween candy. He thanks the players, the seniors, the coaches, the parents, the boosters, the cheerleaders, the bus driver.

He concedes Friday's game was less a state playoff game and more a double-episode season finale of the Sopranos. The season ended because Novi was simply the better team. They had more talent, more team speed and used them both masterfully to bull-doze the Mustangs, 51-13.

Novi left no doubt which team was superior. That's what good teams do. But there's a bigger lesson, he said.

"We may not have the greatest team," Mustangs' head coach Clint Alexander said to his team following the game. "But we have the greatest kids...

It's a tough moment to watch because there's so much to say. But there's so much standing in the way.

Between broken sentences and deep breaths Alexander looked down at his two sons. Wyatt and Colt. He rubbed their young faces, conjuring strength.

Beneath the fading white light, the world was ending. And renewing itself all over again.

Seniors say good-bye. They practice and lift weights, then return freshly laundered - and in some cases tattered - jerseys without fanfare. They make speeches, huddled close one final time. They sing the school fight song, together.

"I love you guys," senior captain Mac Stilec said from the middle of the post-game pile, crying openly. "This is the best team I ever played on... I love all of you so much.'

At midfield, a ghost flashes across the middle. He's open. And you wonder: Is there really a better high school sports story than this?

Districts 101: how do you stop top players?

Being the best often means beating the best

By Sam Eggleston RECORD SPORTS WRITER

Try stopping any team in the bas-ketball districts. It's tough. Why? Because every team knows the next loss is their last. Season's over after just one.

So how does a team go about keeping that loss at bay? The first step is the most important: stopping the other team's top player.

The top player is always easy to notice. She's pushing hard to the bucket, calling for the ball and making things happen. That's why they're the best.

Canton Chiefs

Katie Cezat, senior, post The question is simple: is there anything Katie Cezat can't do? "She can shoot the three, she can play the post and she can basically do whatever she wants to do," said Northville coach Pete Wright. "She's not a true post player because she can do almost anythung."

Cezat registers as the biggest threat to any squad who faces the Chiefs

"She's dangerous in a lot of dif-ferent ways," Wright said. "She's excellent. It's hard figuring out what kind of player you want to guard her with."

A team looking to take down Canton has one huge step to take down a very long road - stopping Cezat.

"You certainly have to minimize her points," said Wright. "Canton is always going to play great defense so you have to hold her number of points down. They do have other girls that are going to make shots. Even if you give an all out effort on Katie, you have to play defense on the other four. They definitely contribute when Katie is being stopped."

Plymouth Wildcats

Jeanine Moise, junior, post Classic post players can take you to the hoop with a variety of inside moves that get you going one way while they go the other. Jeanine Moise is a classic post player.

"She has all of the classic post moves," said Wright. "She gets the ball down on the block and (she) is extremely difficult to stop."

Moise 1sn't afraid to move around the court either. Wright said the biggest challenge with the Wildcat is how well she rotates to the ball.

Freshman football

"She goes after everything," he said. And even when a team manages to get a body on Moise, there is an answer waiting to step up in Kim Olack, a junior post player.

"Kim's about the same type of player," saud Wright.

They are both true post players and the biggest assets on Plymouth's team. Not to mention the factors an opposing team has to stop to win the game.

"Plymouth's biggest challenge is getting them the ball," Wright said.

Salem Rocks

Ellen Canale, senior, shooting guard

Some players just never give up. Salem is fortunate to have one of them. "She's just very competitive," said Wright.

And she's darn good too. Canale can pull up and sink the three-point field goal or pull the ball down and drive on any team.

"Just about the time you run at her she's going to fake and then end up in the heart of your defense," Wright said. "She's just a complete shooting type of guard."

Canale is also capable of taking the ball up the court. Salem runs with three guards, all of which are capable of playing the point guard position.

"It's point guard by committee over there," said Wright. "Though she can play that role easily she's more of a true shooting guard."

The key to stopping her? Wright said teams have to contain her when she has the ball but concentrate on making sure she doesn't get it.

"You've got to make sure it stays out of her hands," he said. "And if she gets it, you have to make sure she doesn't get a wide-open look at the basket."

Northville Mustangs

Evonna Karchon, senior, post There are players in the game of basketball who feed off the ability of others, making themselves better as well as their entire team.

'You go into a game against Northville and you have to know that if you don't guard the Toney sisters (Danielle and Simone) they are going to hurt you," said Novi's Bill Kelp. "When you do guard them, they penetrate and kick it to Evonna. She's their best shooter. She's great.'

Karchon has led the Mustangs in nearly every contest this year, netting in double digits in almost every game

"If Evonna gets a good look at the basket she's probably going to make it," said Kelp.

And pulling up and draining the jumper isn't the only thing Karchon is good at either.

"If she drives on you she also has the ability to kick it out to another player or passing it inside to an open interior player," Kelp said. That makes her a tough player to guard. She worries me when she has the ball."

Kelp said he and other teams can only hope when the ball ends up in the Northville senior's hands she doesn't have a great view. Getting in her face seems to be the only way to slow her down.

"We can't give her open shots," he said. "She's going to make them if we do.", 4 4 4 4 4 4

Novi Wildcats

Rachele Folino, junior, post What 1s it about Rachele Folino that seems to have all the colleges calling to talk to her? Could it be her ability to make the buckets even on tough shots or how she seems capable of scoring nearly 20 points in most of her games? Or could it be the way defenses respect her? "Folino is going to draw a double and sometimes a triple team in some games," said Kelp, her coach. "Defenses come out specifically looking to stop her."

Her opponents agree "You've got to stop Rachele Folino," said Northville post player Emily Weaver. "She's a good shooter and she can handle the ball." Not to mention rebound. In most games, the junior leads her team in that category as well. Folino seems capable of shooting from almost anywhere on the floor and can hit the bucket while running or planting and pulling up for the jumper. When she's not doing that, she's keeping her eyes peeled for open players.

"Because of the way defenses focus on Rachele, it's key that she finds other players and that they play well," said Kelp. "But the other teams don't have much choice. They can't ignore her or she'll score on them nearly every time"

South Lyon Lions

Stefanee Morrison, senior, point guard

Speed is one of the greatest assets a player can have in the world of high school basketball. South Lyon's Stefanee Morrison has plenty of it. Couple that with her shooting ability and ball-handling skills and suddenly you find yourself with an offensive threat on your hands.

"She's quick, she can handle the ball and she can penetrate," said Kelp. "She's a tough kid and a tough player."

Morrison is key in an offense that uses three guards to keep their opponents off balance. Out of the ston@ht homecomm net.

trio, hers is a name that comes up quickly and often when talking about the Lions.

"Morrison has the ability to make plays," Kelp said. "She can penetrate and then kick the ball out to an open player or she can take it in herself and score. She's fast, so you have to keep her from getting around you or she'll make something happen for them."

The key to stopping Morrison is keeping her firmly in your defensive sights, said Kelp.

"You've got to keep her in front of you," he said. "If she turns you she's probably going to beat you. You've got to have a great defensive guard against her."

And, of course, it helps if that defensive guard is fast, too."

Colts fall to Livonia, 33-7

Freshman Colts suffered an overwhelming loss to the Livonia Falcons Saturday at Livonia's home field.

The Colts started strong when quarterback Cameron Thomas passed to Robby Parks who ran 55 yards for a touchdown. Parks then ran in the extra point, giving the Colts an early 7-0 lead.

Great tackles by Thomas Huber, Rini Jusufi, Ryan Gardner, Tyler Gozdor, Mark Guidobono, Kyle Heinz, Brock Drogosch and Julian Gjonaj allowed the Colts to take over on downs.

The Colts maintained control in the next several series with three more completed passes by Thomas

Sam Tacconelli and Huber carried for big gains. Offensive players Greg Stewart, Kyle Clary, Alex Carson, Tyler Kwasny, Jude Jordan, Nick Koehler, Lincoln Boutilier, David Blough, Jack Ellis and Chris Komorous contributed to the 1st quarter success.

Second quarter, the Falcons began their assault with a touchdown run on a kickoff return and then a fumble recovery to score again. Colts defense held back an increasingly aggressive Falcon offense with key tackles by Chad Berryman, Taggart McCreadie, JT Kahn, Benny Marsalese, Gozdor, Drogosh and Clary. With only one minute left in the third, the Falcons broke free to score.

David Blough blocked the extra point.

Final quarter, Colts were unable to stop the Falcons despite all out efforts by RJ Holloway, Kyle Brenner, Scan Wagner, Jake Slominski, Max VanAntwerp, David Borthwick and Robby Sneed. Final score Falcons 33, Colts 7.

Each member's season began this summer with camp and continued on with near four-hour Wednesday marching practices and daily band class

It's dedication mirroring any on-field athlete.

The band switched things up during its performances and designed a special show for homecoming.

"I think our season went really well," Fowlkes said. "We played awesome songs and it was a lot of fun."

Some of Fowlkes favorite memories include marching at half-time and having fun with his trumpet buddies.

"It is a community within a community," said Chris' mother, Lynne Fowlkes.

Lynne, along with may other band parents, filled the stands attending all home games in support of the band.

The band mother said she will support her son in his decision to march again next year.

For this year, the marching is over, but the students will continue on with concert band and put their thoughts toward the next football season.

HEALTHY LIVING One foot forward Walking is a great fitness alternative where the the second second

Exercising for good health and fitness can be as easy as putting one foot in front of the other-simply walking.

Walking is a great exercise option for every age and fitness level. Building stamina in time, distance and pace increases the positive aspect.

For thousands of people, walking for health has taken on a whole new meaning with distance walking-up to a marathon distance (26.2 miles) at a time. When walks raise money for charity, the benefits extend to saving the lives of others.

A very popular long distance walking event is the Avon Walk for Breast Cancer series. The non-competitive Avon Walks attract 2,000 to 4,000 people each, and offer a choice of walking a marathon (26.2 miles) or a marathon and a half (39.3 miles) over a weekend. The walks raise funds for access to care and finding a cure for breast cancer and have generated nearly $60 million in the past two years for breast cancer research, clinical care, support services, screening and education

With proper training, people of virtually any age and fitness level can take part in these walks.

"The sense of victory and empowerment from walking for a cause enhances the accomplishment in so many ways," said Kathleen Walas, president of the Avon Foundation, which produces the walks.

For those who consider distance walking, there are important training tips:

Shoe Sense. According to the American Podiatric Medical Association, the ideal walking shoe should be stable from side to side and well-cushioned. For women, consider shoes from RYKä, performance athletic footwear with a narrower heel and wider forefoot. Wear thick or double-layer, lined non-cotton socks to help cushion the soles. Stretch Your Muscles. "Health" magazine recommends a brief warm-up, walking in place and simple stretches before walking. Stop and stretch a few minutes every hour during your walk and do slow stretches after.

Hydrate! Walkers should drink 8 to 16 ounces of water per hour and drink before they begin walking. Sports drinks are essential during longer walks.

Dress for safety. Wear light-colored clothes so you are visible and dress for the weather, including sunscreen.

Walk smart. Obey the rules of the road. Watch out for hazards and be on guard for vehicles.

Are you a spoon, ruler, hourglass or cone? Fitness experts say knowing and understanding your body type plays an important role in the specific exercises that will make you fit and feel good.

Because everyone's body is built differently, experts say that exercise programs should be, too. "For years many people have to maintain their fitness tried level with cookie-cutter exercise routines," said Edward Jackowski, fitness expert and author of "Jump Into Fitness," "Escape Your Weight," "Escape Your Shape" and "Hold It! You're Exercising Wrong." "The reality is that with the wrong exercise for your body type, you may actually be bulking up problem areas instead of minimizing them.'

Jackowski offers the following suggestions on how to determine body type* and the best exercises for each:

Hourglass - A curvaceous and balanced body with the majority of weight evenly distributed in the upper and lower body. A few suggested exercises for this body type include jumping jacks, jumping rope, elliptical machines with no resistance, and jogging or running slowly for distance.

One size does not fit all: maybe it's time to find your exercising body type

Spoon - Carries majority of weight in the hips, thighs and buttocks and is more slender in the upper body. A few of the best exercise options for this shape are riding a stationary bike with light resistance, ski machines with light resistance for lower body and high resistance for upper body, and marching in place on toes.

Ruler - Has very few curves and is built straight up and down. Tends to put on weight around the midsection. The best exercises for this body type are step classes, spinning, stationary biking with moderate to high resistance, and walking, jogging or running on an incline or hilly surfacc.

Conc - The majority of body weight is carried in the back, chest, arms and stomach and the body is slender from the hips down. The best exercises for this body type are biking, squats, lunges, leg presses, stair climbers and stationary biking with moderate to high resistance.

Equally important to knowing your body shape is incorporating proper nutrition and eating habits into an overall healthy diet. Each of Jackowski's exercise programs include tips on ways to improve your eating habits, no matter what your body shape is.

"By identifying your body type and incorporating the right exercises into your daily routine, and making sure you get the right amount of calories and nutrients, vou'll be on the way to a better you," said Jackowski.

Leave romance about money, finances at alter

For millions of couples, pooling finances after years of making their own money decisions can cause marital conflict.

Newlyweds often mistakenly think that money matters will just fall into place Successfully merging finances requires communication, compromise, honesty and trust - the very ingredients that form a good partnership.

Whether you're a newlywed, engaged to be married, or a seasoned couple still trying to reach a you'll first want to get a few things out in the open, namely, your salaries, what you've saved, what you owe, what you own and what financial goals you share. Totaling your assets and liabilities will give you a good idea of your current financial situation and help you move toward your goals Next, consider asking yourselves these questions. How many bank accounts do we # want? One, two or three?

Couples' approaches to banking and bill paying are as different as their relationships. They range from separate accounts where expenses are divvied up to joint checking, savings and credit card accounts. There are pros and cons for each accounting method.

A joint account for everything is handy, but requires a mutual ease with each other's spending and banking habits. By pooling money, however, you'll have a larger amount in the bank, and since financial institutions generally pay higher rates on higher balances, your money will work harder for you. A word of caution to women: merging everything into one account may inhibit your financial viability should something go awry in the marriage. Women are more likely to struggle financially after divorce or a spouse's death, which is why it's imperative that she establish credit in her own name and have some money of her own in the marriage

Separate accounts for each spouse are good for independent partners because they provide a sense of freedom However, while separate accounts may give partners spending autonomy, they're not very practical when it comes to paying household expenses. Additionally, you will have to pay account fees such as ATM withdrawals on both accounts.

'Spooling" which is dividing plus pooling is one way to enjoy autonomy while merging resources. A joint checking account for expenses, a joint savings account for shared goals, and Buying quality jewelry at a price you can afford can be daunting.

That's why Milford Jewelers dedicates itself to making sure customers get the most for their jewelry-buying budg-

"Buying the right diamond, or even the right bracelet or earrings, is challenging for most people," Tamar Aguilar said, who along with her brother, Jacques Chopjian, owns Milford Jewelers, located at 441 N. Main Street, in historic downtown Milford.

"It's our job to make sure customers understand what they are looking at and how best to make an educated decision'

Tamar and Jacques' family has been in the jewelry business for more than 30 years. The family owns three retail stores, operates valuable thing its own jewelry manufacturing plant and specializes in handcrafted custom design. Meticulous dedication and hand-hewn expertise is what sets Milford Jewelers apart from those who merely retail namebrand inventory "We don't strive to be the biggest jeweler in the world," Tamar said. "We simply want to be the best, the friendliest and the most affordable jeweler you have ever visited in your life."

"Jewelry is very personal for people," Tamar said. "People want something they can proud of, something they can pass down from one generation to the next.

"That's why we take so much care with every job - big or small," she said. "To most people, the value of a jewelry piece goes well beyond its actual price.' Milford Jewelers specializes in every jewelry craft - from refinishing, remounting and restoration to high-end custom design, complete with handengraving and while-you-watch diamond setting.

"Our goal is to make people feel as comfortable as possible,"...Tamar said.

She and Jacques do so by educating customers about their possible options. Often it's done over coffee and a cookie, after a handshake and a smile. Many deals are closed with a hug.

"People who visit us become our friends," Tamar said. "They visit Milford because this is such a unique town, with so many wonder-to ensure spending autonomy, separate accounts for each spouse.

Another option is to open a joint checking account and money market account Put just enough in your checking account to qualify for a higher interest rate and such perks as free checking, and put the rest in a money market account, which earns a little more interest than a savings account

Who is responsible for paying bills?

In most couples, one person is responsible for paying bills. While this is the most efficacious approach, the partner who isn't handling the money matters shouldn't be left in the dark. The couple should have regular discussions of money matters, this is particularly important in case something happens to the partner who does the banking. How should we handle spending?

It's both counterproductive and unhealthy for couples to debate every $10 purchase. On the other hand, setting no spending boundaries is dangerous, a spouse may wake up one morning to find a Porsche parked in the driveway. Working out a reasonable budget together encourages couples to establish spending priorities

In the course of developing a budget, couples should also discuss how they'd deal with an unexpected shortfall such as job loss, injury or a major auto repair. How can we pay off our debt?

Creating a budget will help you figure out how to pay off credit card debt and student loans in an agreed-upon time frame. To repay your debt in a hurry, consider curbing discretionary spending on clothes and entertainment and apply the money toward paying off debt. Or, if one spouse gets a raise, put the extra money earned toward the debt.

And while for most jewelry retailers that may seem like a daunting task, at Milford, Jewelers it's long been the cen-ter stone of one family's life work.

Inside the cozy Main Street store, beyond the stone facade and copper awning, Tamar and Jacques spend their time making sure things get done right.

Jacques said store visitors often stay awhile.

'People like coming in here because they immediately feel at home," he said laugh-"Sometimes I ıng. even have to remind myself I have work to do."

Still, Jacques and Tamar don't have to think long about how seriously they take Tamar Aguilar Co-owner, Milford Jewelers their craft.

ADVERTORIAL Husband-wife team, Dwight & Janie Ray, finds formula for success in real estate

By Duane Ramsey SPECIAL WRITER

The husband and wife team of Dwight and Janie Ray has found success in the real estate business by delivering the best possible service to their clients. The Rays work out of the Century 21 Town & Country office in Northville and are South Lyon residents.

"Our commitment and dedication is to our clients. We want satisfied clients who will gladly refer us to friends and family," said Janie. "We understand the stress of moving. It's not just about boxes and furniture. It's about people and real life emotions."

The Rays put customer satisfaction at the top of their priority list.

"We believe customers deserve good service. Our clients can depend on us to deliver the best possible service," Dwight said.

The Rays have been successful in delivering that high level of service as 98 percent of their clients have been "very satisfied" with their home buying or selling experience, based on direct customer feedback. As part of its Quality Service Program, Century 21 surveys every buyer and seller who uses the services of its sales associates.

Dwight and Janie pay special attention to helping clients understand what is happening at each step of the home buying and selling process. Anything can happen between contract acceptance and closing, but Dwight and Janie strive to tie up any loose ends.

A special benefit of the real estate business is the relationship that can develop in the few short months of the transaction and continue through the following years, the couple said.

"It feels good when we can help someone and benefit from it by gaining a new friend," said Janie, who came to the real estate business in 1995 following an exten-

Dwight has had his real estate license for five years and recently joined his wife full-time in the business. During his previous 20 years in automobile sales, he was the recipient of numerous top salesman awards.

"Dwight's integrity, knowledge and people skills are a great asset to this business," Janie said. "He is a gifted salesman who possesses an outstanding ability to listen. To be successful in this business, you need to know how to listen to people."

Professional ethics are very important to the Rays.

"Simply put, we're just honest, hard-working people," Dwight said.

Janie said they are fortunate to have the support of the staff at the Century 21 Town & Country office in Northville, which is the number one firm in the Century 21 system nationwide since 1994. The company's Home

Northville: Home is where the heart is

Small towns are the places to which nostalgic hearts return, where shoveled sidewalks clear the way for downtown visitors who exchange gift ideas amid crisp winter air.

Shopkeepers smile and extend a hand — then remember your name, your suit size and your preferred fragrance.

NORTHVILLE

Lined up like memories in the heart, familiar stores stack along cobbled sidewalks, inviting visitors in from the cold, smiling back through oversized windows alight with gift-giving possibilities.

The air and the pace are the same: brisk. And in small towns like Northville, where downtown streets are aglow and abuzz all at once, we are left to remember fondly from whence we came. We stay warm against the billowing steam of hot chocolate and chat with those whose friendships we annually renew.

We return to places like downtown RECORD EDITOR Northville because she welcomes us with unconditional grace, with a pristine Victorian smile and a warm blanket of personalized service.

The heart comes home for holidays — for a season, for a reason. It returns to Northville, because home is where the heart is.

Are Your Filters Clean?

Replacing your HVAC filter helps remove odors, allergens, pollen and more from the air. There are many types to choose from, but spending just a couple dollars more will provide you and your family with cleaner air for months.

- Ultra Allergen filters are the best for scrubbing the air clean of all types of contaminants.
- Electrostatically Charged filters use a static charge to attract and remove tiny particles.
- Basic Filters are just that -basic-but are a huge improvement over the old blue fiberglass filter you probably have now.

Hometow Raising a Hero Rainforest

When Carolyn Reedom became the principal of John C. Vanderburg Elementary School in Henderson, Nev., in 1996, she was determined to excite the school's students and teachers about science.

"Science is a difficult subject to teach," says Reedom, who built a marine lab when she previously served as principal at Estes McDoniel Elementary School in Henderson. "I wanted to do something similar by providing a lab where kids could study, work and develop a strong science background." She had plenty of ideas. But at the top of her wish list was building an onsite 3,000square-foot rainforest biosphere containing hundreds of plants and animals. Of course, the idea of a rainforest among a city located in the desert sounded bizarre to some.

When she first mentioned the ambitious project to the school's teachers, silence filled the room, recalls Joyce Schneider, a thirdgrade teacher at Vanderburg. "We thought, 'Wow, this is big," she says. "But we also knew that when Dr. Reedom decided to do something, there was a way to make it happen."

Getting support from teachers was easy, but Reedom knew that paying for such a project would be a massive undertaking. "We couldn't raise $1 million selling cookies and candy," Reedom says. "If this was something we wanted to do, the community had to help us."

She sent letters to students' parents, introducing herself and her rainforest idea. She wasn't sure how they'd react, but slowly, excitement started building. Parents began mailing cash contributions and donating services, everything from carpentry to plumbing. She also wrote a proposal and received a $150,000 federal grant to train teachers about rainforests and formed a community task force to coordinate project details and fundraising events such as Run for the Rainforest.

Back at school, she created "DEER Day," an acronym for "Drop Everything Else and Research." For six months, students spent one hour a week researching rainforests and occasionally met with local architects to exchange design ideas.

After several years of planning and hoping, Reedom was elated and a bit relieved when ground was broken for the rainforest in 1999. But not everything proceeded smoothly.

"It was frustrating when contractors who volunteered their time didn't show up for work," she says. "We had to start all over again and find someone to do their work. It took a lot of persistence and perseverance, but I never felt like giving up."

By the time the rainforest opened in November 2002, more than 200 people had worked on the $1.4 million project. The community contributed $250,000 in cash, and more than 70 companies donated labor and supplies.

"We did it," says Reedom, who was promoted to assistant superintendent of the school district's southeast region in 2001. "And it was far greater than what I had envisioned."

The 3,200-square-foot rainforest is inhabited by more than 100 species of plant life, a 5-footlong iguana called Iggy, two cockatoos named Ben and Angel, tree frogs and red-spotted chameleons. A Mayan temple with authentic rainforest artifacts sits inside the front entrance. Other features include a computer lab, an amphitheater for storytelling, a waterfall and pond, sand boxes used to simulate archeological digs, and a laboratory for growing plants.

The project's annual $140,000 maintenance fees are funded by the John C. Vanderburg Rainforest Biosphere Foundation, says Catherine Maggiore, the elementary school's current principal. "Dr. Reedom's ability to make science come alive for students is greatly appreciated by everyone," says Maggiore, adding that Reedom has earned a reputation for achieving the impossible.

Because the rainforest is a fieldtrip destination for Nevada schoolchildren, parents and students have been trained as tour guides. One Vanderburg student and guide, Elizabeth Kahan, 10, says the rainforest boosted her self-confidence and science grades, which are now straight A's.

"The rainforest is a very cool idea," Kahan says. "My favorite part of the rainforest is the animals. I love to help animals and to save stuff like plants, which are homes for many animals."

Looking back, Reedom is very proud of what everyone accomplished.

"Our kids deserve whatever we can give them and more," she says. "I knew this was going to be a great way to get kids turned on about science." " Carol Patton is a freelance writer in Las Vegas.

...... DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA

Foreword by FOX News Channel's Sean Hannity

I hether you consider yourself Democrat, Republican or anything in between, voting is one of the most important things that you can do; but simply voting is not enough. With so much going on in the world today, it is imperative that everyone be informed and knowledgeable about what they are voting for. We are on the brink of so many crucial decisions in our society that the more voices heard, the better our decisions can be.

Young people are the future and what happens now and in every election will directly affect that future. This is why our youth need to stay updated, involved and motivated to take action in the political world. Evervone deserves a hand in the future that is being shaped for them, and with such close elections, each and every vote really does count. Our youth need to gather information from reliable sources, from people they trust, and in an environment ready to listen to their thoughts and opinions. This is your country so participate in it, be proud of it, take an active role: vote. The rest of your rights depend on it.

Editor's Note:

American Profile and Fox News Channel asked people across the country for their opinions on the freedoms we enjoy and the responsibilities we inherit as United States citizens. This is the third installment of a four-part series titled Democracy in America.

The right to vote is a right that many Americans particularly young people-take for granted. Young voters in five towns with presidential names were asked to explain this phenome non and why they plan to cast ballots in this week's election.

"Voting 15 your chance to influence the future of the entire country," says Adam McGee, 18, of Lincoln, Ill. He's registered and ready for Election Day 2004.

McGee and other members of the Class of 2004from Lincoln Community High School in Lincoln, Ill. (pop. 15,369); Madison Consolidated High School in Madison, Ind. (pop. 12,004); Monroe Area Comprehensive High School in Monroe, Ga. (pop. 11,407); Washington High School in Washington, Mo. (pop. 13,243); and Cleveland High School in Cleveland, Okla. (pop. 3,282)-are looking forward to this rite of passage and assuming the responsibility of being a U.S. citizen.

"I've been waiting long enough," declares Joseph Martin of Monroe, Ga. "I'm 18 and a lot of things will affect me now-the economy, the war. It's important to get involved."

Since the national voting age was lowered from 21 to 18 in 1971, the voting record among 18- to 24-year-olds has been less than stellar. In the 2000 election, only 36 percent voted, compared with 59 percent of all voters.

Truthfully, a lot of apathy has to do with people not taking the time and with laziness.

But, say these first-time voters, young people today have been affected by events of the past four years, including the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, and the war in Iraq, and are becoming more politically active. Several Internet-based nonpartisan groups are mobilizing young voters, such as MTV's Choose or Lose (uwu:mtv.com/chooseorlose); New Voters Project (www.neuvotersproject.org) and Freedom's Answer (www.freedomsanswer.net).

"If you don't get involved now, then why complain about the president and what's going on with our country?" asks Maggie Jones, 18, of Washington, Mo. Last fall, the class president and fellow student council member Randy Downs, 18, registered more than 100 students and adults during football games and outside the school lunchroom.

"Absolutely, it does matter to vote," Downs says, "and school is a good place to inform students." He reads newspapers and listens to National Public Radio to stay informed about candidates and issues.

Jones and Downs both note that their high school promotes good citizenship and political involvement by excusing students on election days to leave school to go to the polls.

Danielle Bruce, 18, of Madison, Ind., agrees that school is the ideal place for "voter 101" education. Her government teacher, Ben Newell, passed out voter-registration forms and encourages students to tune into the issues and candidates.

"Otherwise kids don't really know where to register or they're not informed," says Bruce, who was born in Canada, moved to the United States in 1990, and is looking forward to voting in her new homeland.

and echoes the idea that teens are unsure about the registration and voting process.

"I didn't know how to register until they stopped me at the fair and had me fill out the form," she says. "People our age right now are going to be the future. It's up to us to select the right leaders."

Fear, apathy and laziness

Voter education at school helped ease her jitters, says Kristina Ohse, 18, of Washington, Mo., who cast her first ballot last April in a local schoolbond election.

Still, the students interviewed admitted that many young people are nervous about voting for the first time, ambivalent because they don't think their vote will count, or are too busy to get informed about the candidates and issues.

"Truthfully, a lot of apathy has to do with people not taking the time—and with laziness. People don't want to educate themselves," says Ashlea Hutchins, 18, of Monroe, Ga. She says her parents are active voters and encourage her to get politically involved. She is still undecided on a candidate, but "some issues that concern me are funding for college, and pretty soon I'll be paying taxes."

Fellow classmate Lee Garcia, 18, agrees: "I try to research, and we talk about politics a lot in my house, and I like to have a voice in what's happening," he says. "A lot of young people, though, don't want to take the time to learn."

It's sometimes not just a matter of "wanting" to take time, but "finding" the time, according to Emily Rigg, 18, of Washington, Mo.

"We juggle school and work, and it takes a whole lot of time to study up about the candidates, but obviously, if > you don't vote, you don't get your voice heard."

Making a difference

One vote can make a difference, says Thad Money, 18, of Monroe, Ga., who has collected pledges to vote from 60 people and helped rally Georgia students as part of his work with Freedom's Answer. He also volunteered as an election worker during the primary.

"You look back in history and you can see the power of one vote," Money says. "George Bush was elected in Florida by 537 votes. Andrew Johnson missed being impeached by one vote."

While young people complain that politicians don't pay attention to them, those who don't vote are partially responsible for the dilemma. "Politicians don't listen to young voters because we don't vote, and we don't vote because politicians don't listen to us," Money says.

Most students interviewed believe that only people who vote have the right to find fault with elected officials and policy.

"Why try to voice your opinion after the fact?" asks Dustin Ferguson, 18, of Monroe, Ga., who enlisted in the Army during his senior year and was placed on delayed-entry status until graduation. "If people don't vote, they don't have a right to say what's right and what's wrong."

Patriotism and confidence in democracy and America's voting system run high among these young voters, says

than stellar. In the 2000 election, only 36 percent voted, compared with 59 percent of all voters.

But, say these first-time voters, young people today have been affected by events of the past four years, including the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, and the war in Iraq, and are becoming more politically active. Several Internet-based nonpartisan groups are mobilizing young voters, such as MTV's Choose or Lose (www.mtv.com/chooseorlose); New Voters Project (www.newvotersproject.org) and Freedom's Answer (www.freedomsanswer.net).

"If you don't get involved now, then why complain about the president and what's going on with our country?" asks Maggie Jones, 18, of Washington, Mo. Last fall, the class president and fellow student council member Randy Downs, 18, registered more than 100 students and adults during football games and outside the school lunchroom.

"Absolutely, it does matter to vote," Downs says, "and school is a good place to inform students." He reads newspapers and listens to National Public Radio to stay informed about candidates and issues.

Jones and Downs both note that their high school promotes good citizenship and political involvement by excusing students on election days to leave school to go to the polls.

Danielle Bruce, 18, of Madison, Ind., agrees that school is the ideal place for "voter 101" education. Her government teacher, Ben Newell, passed out voter-registration forms and encourages students to tune into the issues and candidates.

"Otherwise kids don't really know where to register or they're not informed," says Bruce, who was born in Canada, moved to the United States in 1990, and is looking forward to voting in her new homeland.

and echoes the idea that teens are unsure about the registration and voting process.

"I didn't know how to register until they stopped me at the fair and had me fill out the form," she says. "People our age right now are going to be the future. It's up to us to select the right leaders."

Fear, apathy and laziness

Voter education at school helped ease her jitters, says Kristina Ohse, 18, of Washington, Mo., who cast her first ballot last April in a local schoolbond election.

Still, the students interviewed admitted that many young people are nervous about voting for the first time, ambivalent because they don't think their vote will count, or are too busy to get informed about the candidates and issues.

"Truthfully, a lot of apathy has to do with people not taking the time—and with laziness. People don't want to educate themselves," says Ashlea Hutchins, 18, of Monroe, Ga. She says her parents are active voters and encourage her to get politically involved. She is still undecided on a candidate, but "some issues that concern me are funding for college, and pretty soon I'll be paying taxes."

Fellow classmate Lee Garcia, 18, agrees: "I try to research, and we talk about politics a lot in my house, and I like to have a voice in what's happening," he says. "A lot of young people, though, don't want to take the time to learn."

It's sometimes not just a matter of "wanting" to take time, but "finding" the time, according to Emily Rigg, 18, of Washington, Mo.

"We juggle school and work, and it takes a whole lot of time to study up about the candidates, but obviously, if you don't vote, you don't get your voice heard."

Making a difference

One vote can make a difference, says Thad Money, 18, of Monroe, Ga., who has collected pledges to vote from 60 people and helped rally Georgia students as part of his work with Freedom's Answer. He also volunteered as an election worker during the primary.

"You look back in history and you can see the power of one vote," Money says. "George Bush was elected in Florida by 537 votes. Andrew Johnson missed being impeached by one vote."

While young people complain that politicians don't pay attention to them, those who don't vote are partially responsible for the dilemma. "Politicians don't listen to young voters because we don't vote, and we don't vote because politicians don't listen to us," Money says.

Most students interviewed believe that only people who vote have the right to find fault with elected officials and policy.

"Why try to voice your opinion after the fact?" asks Dustin Ferguson, 18, of Monroe, Ga., who enlisted in the Army during his senior year and was placed on delayed-entry status until graduation. "If people don't vote, they don't have a right to say what's right and what's wrong."

Patriotism and confidence in democracy and America's voting system run high among these young voters, says doors of Vallentines general store in Cope, S.C. (pop. 107), and you'll step back in time. Literally, that is, if you slip your feet into a pair of the 1940s shoes tucked nearly behind the counter

And while you're at Vallentines, which bills itself as "a peek into the past," take a gander at a wooden sewing box from Singer, a cream can, kettles, baskets, mule shoes and hundreds of nuts and bolts—just a few of the thousands of items that line the shelves of this old-time store. But you can't exactly purchase these products they're strictly for show.

"We don't like to part with anything," says proprietor Jo Helen Rıley, whose grandfather, J.I. Vallentine, established the general store as well as a cotton gin in the early 1900s. "We cling to it all."

"She has done a lot to preserve what's left of our town's history," Mayor Janet Joye says of Riley. "Cope had one of the first banks, first post offices and first telephones in the state."

The current store, built in 1940, is a neat, brick buildinglocated at 132 Cotton Ave., next to the family's still operating cotton gin. Inside the long, narrow store, Riley shows off two original telephones from the Cope Telephone Co. She reminisces about Mrs. Adams, a telephone operator who happily kept up with everyone's whereabouts in the 1940s and '50s.

Vintage gas pumps adorn Vallentines general store, where visitors can travel back in time.

"I'd call her up and say, 'Mrs. Adams, where's my daddy?" recalls Riley, who can still take incoming calls on one of the phones. "And she always knew."

Rıley's father, Robert Vallentine, took over the store in 1937 and ran it with the help of his sister, Henry Ella Vallentine, until she died in 1980. When Robert died in 1987, Riley made sure the doors stayed open as long as she could.

In the past year, the 67-year-old Riley has stopped operating the store on a daily basis, but still loves to show it off to local school and senior citizen groups and tourists. "A lot of tourists are coming through that want to see it," she says. "The postmaster is right across the street, and he'll call me and say, 'You got time? People want to see the store.' And if they call, I'll come down. Since the store has changed very little since it opened, people always say to me, 'It looks just like it did.'"

It's a place where visitors can see Little Sister and Little Brother Sealpax undersuits and thread on wooden spools, as well as Poll-Parrot leather shoes and cookie cutters advertising baking powder.

A long tradition of raising and ginning cotton also is a family affair for Riley, her husband Fletcher, and their two daughters, Roxane Cummings and Marlene Workman. Marlene's husband, Will, works in the gin's sales department, while Roxane's husband, Skip, is involved in the physical aspect of ginning. During one of their best years, the family ginned 14,000 bales of cotton for 65 area farmers. "We're hoping to do even better this year," she says.

Riley's roots in Cope run even deeper than the store and cotton gin. The town was named after her great-grandfather, Jacob Martin Cope, who in 1894 deeded 25 acres to the Manchester and Augusta Railroad so a town could be built around the new railroad station. Several years later, the town boasted churches, a school, a bank and a post office that offered one of the first rural deliveries in South Carolina. Many of the structures have been replaced, but the original train depot building still stands across the road from Vallentines, and in 2001, was placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Joye, who has served as mayor since 1992, describes the town as small and quiet, where residents enjoy the "simple life." It's the kind of place where, as she says, "If you want to step back in history a little bit, this is a great town."  $\stackrel{\sim}{\longrightarrow}$ moves increasingly and the suburbs, this debut by Rincon, Ga. (pop. 4,376), native Billy Currington reinforces the genre's small-town heart. The honky-tonking Currington, who recalls Sammy Kershaw in vocal tone and subject matter, tries to hold on to common sense in an increasingly crazy world. He reminisces fondly of a simpler time, insisting that Andy Griffith looked better in black-and-white and growing up down South was as idyllic experience. But he turns poignant on Walk a Little Straughter, drawing on his memories of an alcoholic stepfather.

Billy Currington Billy Currington Mercury Nashville Records As country music

Currington also laments the real-life loss of American jobs to Mexico, and in Am't What It Used to Be, paints an affecting portrait of a man who watches his livelihood, his girl and his life disappear in the rear view mirror. With Off My Rocker providing a bit of comic relief, this newcomer rounds out a nearly perfect first-time bow.

Tim McGraw Live Like You Were Dying Curb

Country singer Tim McGraw, who has sold 30 million records in the last dozen years, could easily assemble a CD of safe radio hits and be assured of another chart topper. But on his eighth album, he got brave, tackling issues such as death (Live Like You Were Dying), loss (My Old Friend), suicide (Kill Myself), drug use (Drugs or Jesus), spousal abuse (Walk Like a Man), and the will to carry on.

Those topics may not sound like hit material, but as the career-crowning title song proves, they can be that and more. McGraw knows the pain of a number of these subjects, having grown up in an unstable home with a "scary" stepfather, and only recently losing his biological father, baseball great Tug McGraw, to brain cancer. That's why he's able to infuse these songs with both believable and moving emotion, turning out one of his most satisfying—and life affirming—efforts.

RECIPE: Spinach Triangles

American Profile

Spinach Triangles

8 ounces frozen Fillo dough 1/2 cup butter, melted 10 ounces frozen chopped spinach, thawed I yellow medium-size onion 3 tablespoons olive oil 8 ounces Feta cheese, crumbled I tablespoon dried oregano Salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Thaw Fillo dough according to package instructions. Brush a layer of melted butter in a 9by-13-inch pan Alternate layers of Fillo dough sheets (dough sheets should slightly overlap to completely cover the bottom of the pan) and melted butter until half of the dough and butter are used. Saute onion in olive oil. Squeeze excess liquid from spinach and stir in with onions. Combine Feta cheese, oregano, salt and pepper into the spinach mixture. Spread mixture evenly over the prepared Fillo dough sheets. Layer remaining dough and butter over spinach mixture. Bake for 40 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool slightly and cut into triangles. Serves 8 to 10 as an appetizer.

Tips From Our Test Kitchen: Carefully adhere to the Fillo dough package instructions. Working with this papery dough takes a bit of practice. Don't free if your finished product looks a bit messy it still tastes delicious.

Renee Olstead Renee Olstead Reprise/Warner Bros. Records

On her major label debut, Renee Olstead convincingly masquerades as an experienced, sultry songstress with a vocal dexterity that is all at once confident and vulnerable, wistful and seductive. The Texas-born talent, whose many entertainment credits include a co-starring role on the CBS sitcom Still Standing, covers selections from the great American songbook in a gentle sensuality few 15-year-olds can speak of, let alone croon.

The album opens with a jazzy, Big Band production of Summertime, so rich in orchestration that George Gershwin himself would swoon. Other perennial songs include a duet with Peter Cincotti on Neil Sedaka's Breaking Up Is Hard To Do and an eloquent version of What a Difference a Day Makes, made famous by Dinah Washington.

Much credit goes to producer David Foster for anchoring the standards with near flawless arrangement and penning the album's sole original ballad, A Love That Will Last, with wife Linda Thompson. However, it's Olstead's consistent execution that provides the debut with enough substance to propel her alongside fellow torch singers Diana Krall and Norah Jones, thus confirming the adage that age 15 but a number.

Holly Williams The Ones We Never Knew Universal South Records Newcomer Holly

Williams wishes for a lot of things on her unforgettable debut, but none more poignant than trying to save an unnamed singer of the blues, dying in the back of a baby blue Cadillac on New Year's Eve 1953. For her, the legendary Hank Williams, who died at 29, isn't just country's patron saint-he's also her grandfather. As the title of her deeply searching album references, the Hillbilly Shakespeare is only one of the huge influences absent from her life. As the confrontational Between Your Lines suggests, her father, Hank Williams Jr., who split from her mother when Holly was a baby, is apparently another. This particular Williams offspring may write in an intimate style more akin to neo-folkie Shawn Colvin than rowdy ol' Bocephus, but she shares the family legacy of pain, and, as her hauntingly beautiful album suggests, pure genius.
