Downtown merchants find faith, profits by opening extra day

This is the fourth installment in a six-part series looking at how downtown Northville business owners are employing low-cost techniques in the high-stakes competition for retail customers.

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

The shoppers were from Grand Rapids, but seven pairs of shoes later Mark Bishop was happy he kept his downtown Northville doors propped open one Sunday.

Since the first-time store owner's January purchase of Healthy Solutions, 137 E. Main St., Bishop said he has been experimenting with retail methods. Expanding hours to include Sunday, along with 50 of his neighboring merchants, was a natural step, he said. The weekend Bishop sold so many Croc-brand shoes has been the exception more than the rule, he said. He also had no sales on a subsequent Sunday.

"Will it happen every Sunday? Who's to say?" Bishop said. "I want to tap into the community and find out what their wants are."

Taking one final roll call After 27 years, township cop retires; heads for open road via Harley

"I've worked my entire career here with Northville Township. It's been a great career. I have done everything I think that I could possibly have done."

> Lt. Mike Panagiolides Northville Township Police Department

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

Chasing down a psychiatric hospital escapee 22 years ago landed Lt. Mike Panagiotides his first career injury with Northville Township.

Our intent was to apprehend him before he did some harm," said Panagiotides, 51. "He started running south down the railroad tracks."

Both met up, fought and tumbled 20 feet from an overpass to Northville Road at Six Mile. The lieutenant suffered a broken collarbone. But he caught the suspect.

After 27 years of bumps, bruises and professional camaraderie, Panagiotides is retiring. Tomorrow is his last day.

'I've worked my entire career here with Northville Township," he said. "It's been a great career. I have done everything I think that I could possibly have done."

Panagiotides grew up the youngest of four siblings near the Ford Rouge Plant in Dearborn Heights. In a multi-ethnic neighborhood, his Greek-Italian family blended smoothly with Poles and Puerto Ricans.

"All my life, I never remember my parents taking a vacation until they retired." Panagiotides said. "Our family was extremely close."

He spent summers with grandparents on a 300-acre farm in Hillsdale. Fishing, hunting, feeding cattle and collecting eggs became beloved tasks

A guiding grandfather taught Panagiotides to drive a pick-up truck at age taught

"All my life I loved cars and motorcycles," he said. "Working in the auto industry intrigued me."

Toiling in 16-hour foundry shifts changed that goal. Inspired by friends and police officers living in his subdivision, he opted for law enforcement.

"The element of helping people was enor-mous, and also the excitement," Panagiotides said. His family was less thrilled: "They didn't want to see me get hurt."

But two years after he graduated from college and married, Panagiotides was hired at the Northville Township Police Department on June 5, 1978.

The community was small, as was the nine-member department.

You didn't have the manpower. It was not uncommon for you to work the entire town-ship by yourself," he said. "There was still a rural flavor.'

Dressed in heavy winter gear, he per-formed CPR for the first time on a heart attack victim for 45 minutes. Heated by a potbelly stove, the room was sweltering.

I was completely and absolutely exhausted. Just blocked it out of my mind and focused," Panagiotides said. Early on, there were runaway cattle and indignant drunk drivers riding down dirt roads.

In 1985, he trained Police Chief John

Werth, taking the then-rookie on his first squad car ride.

"I remember holding onto the dashboard and the spotlight when we was driving," Werth laughed. "He taught me the ropes. He's the one guy that knows what the job is, what to do and how to do it. He could relay that to the younger officers."

Promoted to patrol officer, sergeant, detective and lieutenant, Panagiotides has seen the department and identity theft crimes grow.

That collarbone injury also resurfaced two more times: during a 1997 scuffle with a gas station robber and again last October when taser training ruptured scar tissue.

"Enough is enough," Panagiotides chuck-led. "It's just time for me to move on into another season in my life."

For the first time since 1973, he's taking a summer off. On a Harley Davidson, he'll head west and to Florida to visit his parents.

Divorced, Panagiotides has four kids ages 15-27 he said he intends to see more often. In a few years, he hopes to buy a 10-acre hobby farm.

The veteran will be sent off with an August retirement party. Werth said a hiring plan should be in line by December.

"He's a community kind of guy," Werth said. "Mike is truly one of a kind."

No sale yet: Former Ford dealership remains idle

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

There's been plenty of interest but no ink yet on the vacant Ford dealership buildings at S. Main Street and Seven Mile Road.

Meanwhile, the three owners of the 4.6-acre parcel south of Seven Mile are awaiting completion of a certified appraisal, said Bill Sliger, who along with his wife Marjorie, owns the showroom building facing Main Street.

Sliger said interest to date has been limited to price inquiries.

"We've had three or four developers talk to us," Sliger said. "We have to come up with a price for them. Hopefully, this week."

Sliger said he, along with Jim Allen, and the six members of the Mach family who own the largest parcel, are planning to sell the propenty as a package.

NORTHVILLE RECORD-Thursday, June 2, 2005

() 出版 () 出版 () POLICE REPORT

Gasoline drive-offs

A Mobil gas station in Northville Township lost $44 in two days due to drive-off fuelers, police said.

At about 6:30 p.m. on March 18, a young white male was reported driving away from the 39425 Six Mile Road locale, after pumping $22 of gas. Witnesses said the man didn't pay and left in a silver Pontiac vehicle. The case is open. A second $22 larceny occurred around 11 a.m. on March 19. This time, an older white male was spotted leaving in a gold sports car, police said. No information was found on the vehicle's license plate, police said, and the case was closed.

Lag incharact Youth caught with rum

Allegedly trying to take two bottles of unpurchased rum from the township's Meijer landed a Howell boy a trip to the police station. At about 11:45 p.m. on March 22, store loss prevention officials said the suspect concealed the liquor in his coat. The 16-year-old Howell male reportedly was arrested when he did not offer the $26.48 payment for both bottles. The boy's grandmother picked him up from Northville Township Police Station, police said. Pending charges, the case was last reported open.

Speedy getaway halted

Township police wrote tickets to four young men reportedly, trespassing on the grounds of the for-Northville Psychiatric mer Hospital.

At around 11:30 p.m. on May 23, an officer patrolling Seven Mile Road reported seeing a Jeep speed off the property at 72 mph.

When the officer pulled the vehicle over, the driver, a 19-year-old Riverview male, reportedly said the group trespassed after seeing the hospital on a ghost-themed Web site. In their 20s, the three passengers were from Southgate.

Police said two flashlights were in the quartet's Jeep, and a property security guard had seen the suspects. All four are scheduled to appear today at 35th District Court in Plymouth.

1 Dogs chase man, dog

After being twice chased by two Labrador dogs, a township man made a police report.

The 53-year-old man told officers he had been walking his dog down Pinebrook Drive at around 6:40 a.m. March 21 when the dogs started chasing. Picking up his own dog, the man reportedly ran home with the dogs in pursuit. No injuries were listed. The owner of the Labradors, a 67-year-old man, said his dogs leaped an "invisible fence" on the property. His court date is at 8:30 a.m. today at Plymouth's 35th District Court.

Michigan State Police toxicology tests indicated Peterson's blood alcohol content was .20 following the accident.

The drunk driving limit in Michigan is .08.

Vehicle speed at time of impact was a second piece of evidence police investigators were hoping to establish prior to filing charges.

But last week a Ford official responsible for downloading electronic information such as vehicle speed from one of the Mustang's two onboard "event data recorders" was unable to do so.

Rick Ruth, a Ford environmental and safety manager, said last week the recorder attached to the vehicle's powertrain system was not triggered because an air bag was not deployed at the time of the accident.

He said available information allowed police to approximate the vehicle's speed.

Washtenaw County Sheriff Comm. Dave Egeler said those official test results arrived last week and an arrest warrant was issued against Peterson May 26.

"That was what was making a difference as to which charge.' Egeler said. "It wasn't until we were able to get some of the information from the manufacturer, as well as some other experts that... we got a speed estimation. "It has to be done in a very thorough manner."

Egeler said prosecutors would not release the speed results prior to a June 14 preliminary hearing at Washtenaw County District Court.

The prosecution has witnesses ready, Siller said, but if Peterson waives his right to the hearing, set for I p.m., the case would go directly to circuit court.

They really were considering and would have liked to have gone with second degree (murder)."

Peterson faces 20 years in prison if charged with killing Schoenheide and injuring another biker in Plymouth Township.

Dale Schoenheide, Chezick's ex-husband, said he also was hopeful for greater charges.

"It's been a long haul," Schoenheide said, "but I'm confident that everything that could have been done was done.

He has accepted advice about how to carve a market niche by specializing and catering to his clients' desires.

Adding Sunday hours is one example; he's hoping his addition this week of organic smoothies will please the families and couples who stroll downtown evenings and weekends.

A Downtown Retail Market Study conducted by Bob Gibbs of the Birmingham-based Gibbs Planning Group indicated local retailers were hurting themselves by limiting their hours.

"Many of Northville's retailers close by 5 p.m. and on Sundays, causing them to miss a significant amount of the market share," the study indicated. "Studies indicate that over 70 percent of all retail sales occur after 5:30 p.m. and on Sundays."

So far, so good

The Northville Central Business Association responded by launching a "Northville's Open" campaign, effective April 1, Many retailers, including Bishop, added noon-4 p.m. Sunday as well as Thursday evening hours.

Association vice president Mark Trudeau, owner of Fine Threads at 105 E. Main St., reluctantly joined the movement, worried that Sunday Up next: Part V

"It's been awesome," Trudeau said. "I should have done it a long time ago."

Fine Threads general manager John Torosian, who joined Trudeau's staff two months ago, said the Sunday clientele primarily remains men shopping for themselves

"So far, it's paid for itself," he said. "It's early on, so there's not a lot to gauge it on."

Down the block, Bishop is the lone Healthy Solutions' full-time employee; that's in addition to his information technology night job at a bank. Part-time help relieves him in the afternoon and occasional weekend days.

"It's a one-man band," he said. "What recharges you is that you enjoy the actual business, when you get people coming in saying we really need this store here.

After 10 years, Gardenviews grows business from former gas station

Lou Mascolo filled in for absent stock help last week by climbing into the back of a truck to help unload ornate, wrought iron benches.

Gardenviews also carries merchandise to customer vehicles and wraps gifts, he said.

"Even expensive stuff has to have value," he said. "We have $3,000 fountains and statues, $1,800 arbors. We also have a lot of gift items under $50."

During the past decade, Mascolo has weathered many storms, including a "Beanie Baby" craze he rebuffed, an Internet stock crash and a $30,000 hit suffered when a popular craft show moved. Last year, a deer burst through his front window and caused $3,000 worth of damage.

"I had business sense, not necessarily a love for gardening," he said, "I enjoy gardening, but I don't know anything about it."

While Gardenviews' owner knows retailing, he said he also knows his limitations. He has called on designers, architects and artists to create his store's ambiance. From day one, he was open seven days a week.

"It's not a hobby, it's a business," he said. "That's the difference."

"That's why so many businesses fail in the first six months to a vear."

Healthy roots

Mascolo said he believes the retail store construction and building reconfiguration consuming the block east of his store will be a boon to his business.

At the same time he can't help contrasting new brick with his unique setting in a building rich with local history.

Mascolo specifically searched for a vintage location when deciding to open his store, choosing the former service station over an old church in Milford and warehouse in Walled Lake.

"They were all free-standing buildings with their own identity." he said. "The city wanted to have this building razed. It was an old eyesore."

But Mascolo didn't see overgrown shrubs or windows painted over and boarded up.

District recognized for special education strides

Officials: legislation, grant help kids

By Victoria Sadlocha RECORD STAFF WRITER

Keeping kids out of special education classes is attracting attention for Northville Public Schools. State data shows as of December 1, 2004, the district's rate for special education identification of resident students is 5.83 percent, less than half the state average.

"We have much lower special ed rates than the state average and we have been going down consistently for the last 10 years while unfortunately, the rest of the state has been consistently increasing in the need for special education," said Robert Sornson, Northville Public Schools executive director of special education.

Sornson, author of "Preventing Early Learning Failure," is credited with creating a special education early intervention program in the 1990s, implemented at Silver Springs Elementary School.

"Essentially we finalized a process called the instructional support team as a way of trying to create a conscious deliberate system to helping children stay as successful as possible in the early years of schools," Sornson said.

The program is now at every elementary school in the district.

If you can help those kids become successful in kindergarten, first grade and second grade then they don't fall behind far enough to be identified as special ed in fourth grade," Sornson said. "The national average for special education, in the learning disability area in particular, is fourth grade and that is because those children have fallen behind far enough to meet the qualifying standards."

The special education director was asked by State Senator Nancy Cassis (R-Novi) earlier this year to serve as a key consultant on early education legislative package because of the district's strides.

In SAVE the Children Early Learning Initiative legislation, Cassis asks $1 million of the $26 million allocated for small class sizes be dedicated to establishing an early intervention grant program like Northville's model.

Cassis said the state's special education rate of

"We have much lower special ed rates than the state average and we have been going down consistently for the last 10 years..."

Robert Sornson Executive Director of Special Education, Northville Public Schools

14.2 percent has risen from 10.5 percent last year and she estimates placing children in special education programs, during the course of their school careers, increases the cost of education by $30,000.

"If there is nothing in place for these children, then the only outlet right now would be to fail until they meet special education criteria." she said. "This is a seriously flawed system. We don't want special ed to become a dumping ground."

Northville Public Schools was also one of seven districts in the state to receive a special needs partnership grant for the 2005-06 school year.

The $12,300 Michigan Education Association grant will establish a partnership between Silver Springs Elementary School and Eastern Michigan Iniversity.

Bob Harris, Michigan Education Association professional development and human rights consultant. said Silver Springs staff members will guest lecture at Eastern Michigan as part of the program, focusing on early intervention strategies.

Harris said Eastern will use Silver Springs as a learning site for pre-service teachers.

Robert Somson, Northville Public School executive director of special education. Somson supervises the district's special education program

In the program, "Smart" stands for Speech and Motor Abilities Readiness Training.

It is an evidence-based program integrating commercial and traditional training intended to provide delivery of services. We were just delighted, "said to become used to a classroom structure with a smaller number of students.

Program organizers said participating students develop social awareness and social norms, helping the transition into kindergarten.

"It was developed in Northville, recognizing that we could make better progress with these kids if we looked at their sensory motor needs in addition to their language needs." Somson said.

- And it is a terrifically successful program from the data that we have, we are making much better progress with these children than we would if we only dealt with the language and didn't work on the motor and sensory needs." The SMART Start Program is held in the district's Main Street building, but students don't have to be in the Northville Public Schools Early Childhood Center programs to attend.

Any Northville resident who qualifies for speech and language eligibility at the preschool level would be considered for the program," Sornson said.

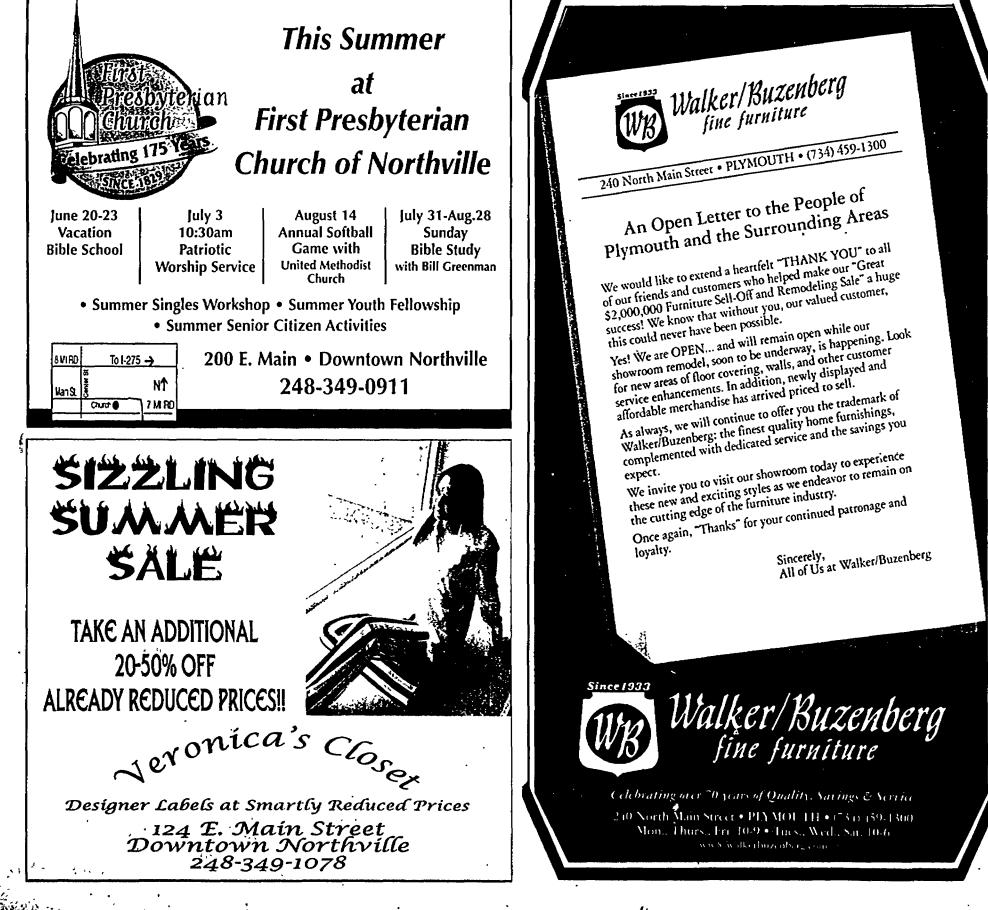

Referrals come from many sources including preschool programs, parents and physicians.

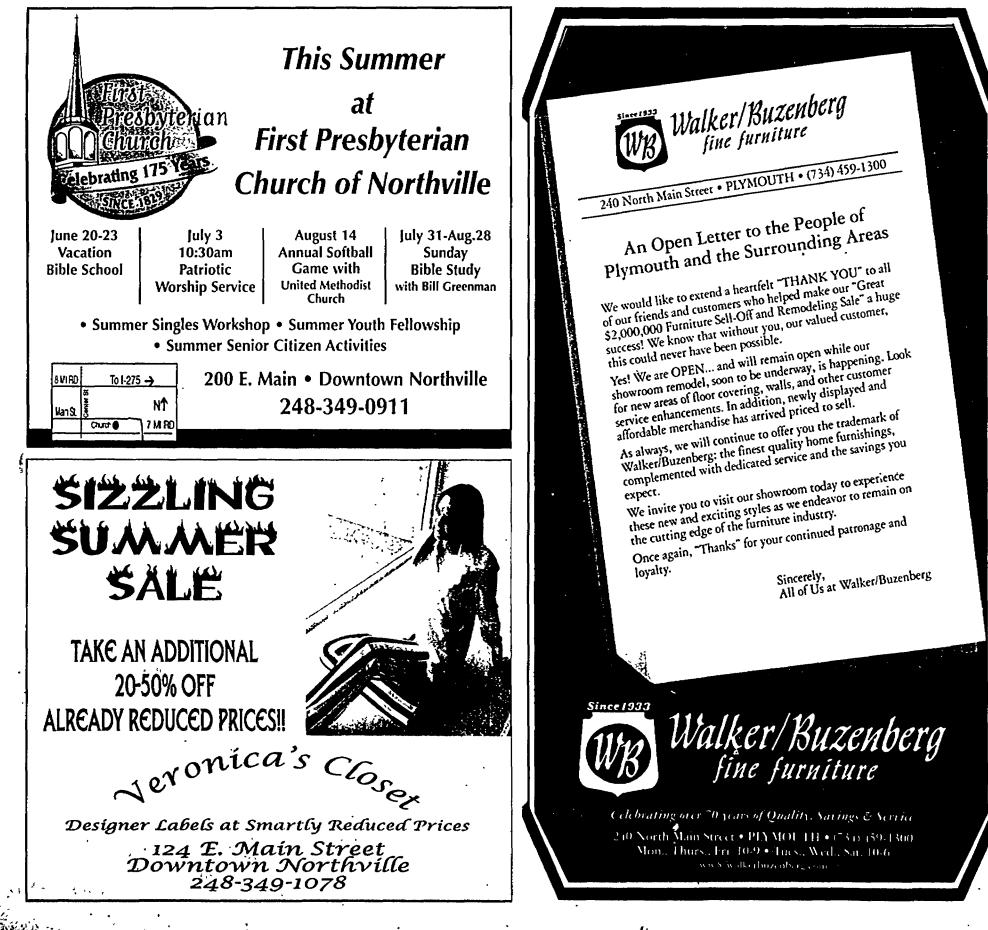

Very often it is parents that notice there is a speech and language delay," Sornson said. "We go through a specific evaluation progress to determine if a child has a significant enough delay to be called handicapped or eligible for special ed supports."

Recognized by the association for their achievements are: Devon Bracken, speech-language pathologist: Carrie Osborn and Katie Shirk, teacher consultants; Erin Miller, preschool consultant psychologist; and Somson.

'Clock' concerts resume tomorrow; public welcome

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

When residents stroll up to Bandshell Park tomorrow night, they will help kick off a season of favorite performers.

The Northville Arts Commission June 3 resumes its free summer "Clock Concert" series at the Main Street gazebo. All Friday events are 7:30-9 p.m. "With this year the 25th anniversary of the arts commission, we decided to have long-time kind of historic favorites, as well as some of the 'new' favorites," said commission chairman Ken Naigus. The Northville High School ensemble falls into that category, he said.

"It's kind of an anniversary celebration," he said. "It's a throw-back series, of sorts."

Similar to the series' early years, the Schoolcraft College ensemble will perform twice during the season, Naigus said.

The concerts are a large draw for pedestrians downtown, Naigus said. He said he expects hundreds to attend tomorrow's concert.

"The lowest was a cold, rainy, drizzly night when the Red Wings had a playoff game," he said. "We only had 12 people."

Commission volunteers block vehicle traffic between Main Street and Mary Alexander Court so people can surround the stage. "It fills the plaza and the street," Naigus said. "It creates a community atmosphere."

While the adults enjoy the music, the children enjoy the chalk the commission provides to decorate the pavement, he said.

FBI slated to handle robbery cases

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

The two Ohio men allegedly behind multiple video shop robberies, including a May 6 theft of $243 from Northville's EB Games, now will be charged federally, township police said.

three states believe Alfred Hadlock, 36, and Eric Weerstra, 34, are behind at least 45 robberies.

Because state lines were crossed, Mayes said the FBI will handle the case. The men will be tried by a federal grand jury before indictment, he said.

Household treasures

Warm weather brings garage sales

By Kim Kovelle RECORD STAFF WRITER

Like scores of others, Elvera Hiddee has a mission this Saturday: Get a good deal.

More specifically, the Northville Township resident hopes to end a five-year quest.

"I'm going to be looking around here for hot curlers," said Hiddee, president of her Kings Mill community's women's club. "Not the Velcro."

From 9 a.m.-3 p.m., she'll get her chance at Kings Mill's 24th annual flea market.

Garage sale season is setting sail, and for many subdivisions and independent homeowners, it'll be anchors away.

As weather warms, clothes and toys stacked on card tables. jewelry in shoe boxes and furniture placed on front lawns become familiar sights.

Sometimes the prices are set firm. Other times, a lacking tag means an open invitation to barter. "Everybody loves it," Hiddee said. "It's a camaraderie. They may have lived here for 20 years and not know everyone." Whether selling for cash or to clean out, take the right steps before opening garage doors.

Get it together

Organization and realistic goals are key, said Tom Kage, a part-time Northville antique dealer who helps with two to three garages sales a year.

"If you want to get rid of things, don't try to make it store prices," Kage said. "Price it so people will want it."

What: bake sale, coffee and donuts, 50-50 raffle and plenty of bargains

Be willing to haggle, he said, and consider last day "half-off" sales to clear out items.

Preparation is crucial. Keep tarps handy for rainy days and stock food, change and plastic grocery bags.

"Be prepared, just like any-thing," Kage added. "Get a friend or a couple friends. It's kind of a social time together." That also can help during the morning rushes, when early bargain-shoppers are out in force. Take care in displaying valuables and plan ahead, whether pricing items or advertising. "I wouldn't do it the night before," Kage said. "You're going to drive yourself crazy."

Safe and neat

Clearing out old junk serves another task: getting the garage in order. Novi resident Larry Mueller and family help host yearly garage sales.

He owns Garage-ology, LLC. a renovation service offering detailing, glossy epoxy flooring and custom wall cabinets to hoist clutter from moist grounds.

"People are having garage sales to get rid of their extra stuff," Mueller said. "After the garage sale, if you don't organize it, it still looks pretty much the same way it did the day of the sale.

"Cabinets specifically designed for the garage ... give a lot more useful space."

Tucking items away also can avoid customer confusion and prevent theft.

'You don't know who's coming into your garage," Mueller said. "Safety can play into it."

Kim Kovelle can be reached at (248) 349-1700, ext. 107, or via e-mail kkovelle@ht.homecomm.net.

> Sign sizes are restricted too, and can't be in the right of way.

Before you sell, check local rules first

"Police will drive around," Gutowski added. "If they see someone having a sale they will stop."

There are civil infraction fines for violating the ordinances. In the city, those who don't comply with any part of the garage sale ordinace are fined about $10.

In the township, violating the sign ordinance a first time results in a fine no less than $150. For repeat offenses, it jumps to $300

Lone duffle bag in tow, Pete Kelley was told he had 90 seconds to bid his family farewell.

He and a fresh crop of cadets were then whisked off for basic training at U.S. Military Academy at West Point in New York.

"It's just kind of hit the ground running," Kelley, 20, said. "On the other side, its just people yelling at you. It was challenging. It was fun, at the same time.

It's been two years since the Northville High School alumni had his West Point Reception Day — better known as "R Day.'

Home briefly this month, Kelley is visiting local schools and scout troops on a mission to share details on his school's academic, military and athletic staples.

"You get everything you get at a conventional school but you get a little more," he said.

Getting in Buzz-cut hair, shoe polishing and military jargon were new to Kelley as a "plebe," or first-year cadet, in 2003. His dad, an engineer, had suggested West Point. "I always kind of thought the military was a noble cause," Kelley said. "I was doing something different than my friends." As a first-grader, he was impressed by a quick Army victory in the 1991 Gulf War. He said Sept. 11 attacks inspired interest.

"It seemed like the United States was going to need more people to volunteer," Kelley said.

During his junior year, the high school class treasurer and wrestler began a yearlong process of nominations and tests. Out of 12,000 applicants, he and about 1,200 others reported as cadets.

Contemplating a marketing major, Kelley said his third year will begin with platoon sergeant training duties this summer. He's graduated to pre-polished "Corfam" shoes.

Soccer might replace wrestling as his sport. And as a junior, he can own a vehicle after spring break to travel on weekends.

Selling off, or selling out?

There goes the neighborhood. Why is it that government entities like Northville Township can't wait self off any and all vacant property? The time-worn excuse is to get more tax money. Where is there a gain? More building simply means more streets and highways, more sidewalks, more sewers, more street lights, more traffic signals, more goods and services, etc. We get stuck not only with the initial cost, but for the forever cost of maintenance and replacement.

In exchange we lose another natural treasure of woods, peat bogs and wild life, none of which requires any money to build or maintain.

The same applies to the property along Seven Mile Road. The state can't wait to dump it so they balance their budget. What are they going to sell next?

Somson serves as the district's executive director of special education and has authored the book, "Preventing Early Learning Failure."

His approach is simple: Don't wait until children become fourth graders, when most children have fallen behind and are most prone to be misidentified as special education kids.

Rather, get involved early, identify possible learning disabilities and help correct them.

"If you can help those kids become successful in kindergarten, first grade and second grade then they don't fall behind far enough to be identified as special ed in fourth grade," Somson said.

Sounds simple: But it requires hard work from a dedicated Northville Public Schools staff whose commitment often goes unnoticed.

Their hard work is paying off.

CITY OF NORTHVILLE

best?

Recently, the city of Northville was recognized for a low crime rate in contrast to cities of similar size. We hope public decorum, especially during public meetings, is not headed the other way. Often tossed as verbal daggers toward organizations and individuals, petty bickering serves no purpose other than serving petty individual agendas. Dissent is fine, even relished. But moving forward sometimes means taking a loss and living to fight. smarter, another day.

NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP Garage sale, with care

Garage sale with care

As garage sale and flea market season gets in gear, all residents should keep safety tips in mind. Sellers, keep valuables tucked away and work with friends or family, if possible. Shoppers, don't forget to keep cars locked while zipping to and from the bargain tables. Northville Township is a safe community, but thefts from unlocked vehicles and homes still happen. With a bit of caution and common courtesy, springtime sale-ing can be safe and successful.

NORTHVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Class is out — soon enough

With the end of the school year only two weeks away, the district wraps up the 2004-05 year. Seniors completed their last day of school May 26, with the rest of the students soon to follow. The last day of school for the rest of the district is Thursday, June 16.

NORTHVILLE ATHLETICS

Play the game, the right way

It's not about who wins or loses, but how the game is played. That's the way the Northville Baseball and Softball Association teaches their participants how to play the game and we agree it's how things should be done. Life becomes competitive too quickly in this day and age, so teaching kids the importance of having fun while playing sports is commendable.

The second state of the second

Monday was Memorial Day, a holiday now rightly devoted to the remembrance of things past.

Originally designated to honor those who died serving our country, the holiday has taken on broader meaning. These days, it is right and fitting to take this occasion to recall friends and family from all walks of life who are no longer with us. Like many other families, my wife Kathy and I marked the day by plantflowers ing (bright red geraniums in our case) in front of the black granite gravestones on our family plot in the cemetery. My musings about the meanished by a lunch I had last week Phil Power with a friend of more than 40 years who - until retirement - held a high position in Michigan's labor movement.

We got together to discuss their planned move to Florida, where the warm and humid weather is supposed to help rheumatism. But our conversation quickly shifted to what we saw ahead for our state.

We agreed the Michigan of the future would almost certainly not be like the Michigan in which we grew up. We concluded that our auto industry is in crisis, now that global markets are no longer dominated by the Detroit-based "Big Three." We wondered whether General Motors and Ford would survive, fall into bankruptcy or be sold, as Chrysler was, to a foreign company.

We agreed the auto parts supply chain

"If you were running the UAW these days, what would you do?" I asked.

"I would do everything I could to help the domestic auto industry," was the response. "I'd eliminate all those job classifications. I'd drastically reduce work rules. I wouldn't touch health care, but I'd take the money now being wasted in all those training programs and redirect it into health care ... Id freeze wages, at least until the companies turned profitable.

"And I'd demand a seat at the table while management considers plans and strategies for the business. For GM to spend all that money on first buying a part of Fiat and then dump more money down the drain to get out of the deal is just criminal. And people in the plants are sore.

"I admit this would make a lot of people mad, but we've got to face reality that either the auto companies are going to survive or a whole lot of people are going to be out of work and even more retirees are going to get their pensions and health care cut drastically."

Whew! Strong stuff from a labor leader who has for years been militant, but at the same time realistic and practical.

My friend is right, of course. The Michigan we grew up in no longer exists. The Detroit that was a thriving city when we were starting our careers has now lost half its population and is teetering on the edge of receivership.

The hundreds of little tool-and-die shops that used to populate southern Oakland County are now broke or out of business, and the parts supply companies that made good livings for so many are in what could be terminal trouble. The unions of the AFL-CIO, once united, are now threatening to break up the labor movement. And our politics, once driven largely by labor and the Big Three are now fragmented beyond recognition.

When former Secretary of Defense Charlie Wilson said, "What's good for General Motors is good for the country, and vice-versa," he wasn't just making a political statement. He was setting out a business model that worked in Michigan for decades. But that model is broken today. The men who built it are either dead or retiring.

As we finished our lunch, my friend and I agreed on one reason so many people are so anxious on this Memorial Day holiday. it's not at all clear what business model makes sense for Michigan today.

Worse, I'm beginning to think that the traditional places we look to for answers our great corporations and labor unions and the politicians - are the places least likely to come up with any sensible ones. They are all imprisoned in iron boxes, so hemmed in by demands from their constituencies they are scared to offer farreaching solutions.

And I couldn't help reflect that while my old friend and I could talk intelligently about what the union should do to help the auto industry, there was something poignant about the occasion. For it was a conversation that took place just before the retired leader was abandoning our state for Florida. How symbolic of the situation in which we find ourselves!

Overstated elegance wasn't what hair color specialists Laura Solomon and Dennis Potts had in mind for Novi's Salon Blow. Vintage 1960s hairdryers and mod art dot the walls. A bright orange, antique sofa's perched in the lobby. There's even a purplehaired mannequin.

"Trendy, fashion-forward funky and mod," is how Dennis describes it. "When we opened up, we knew we didn't want to have an over-stuffed leather couch or heavy mahogany. "We just wanted to go with a whole different visual. We just loved that very colorful, modish feel."

A year-and-a-half later, a wide clientele has caught on to Salon Blow's bold, eclectic flair - and its high-quality hair styling products, pedicures, manicures, facial waxing and new make-up line. With about 15 years of experience apiece, both owners decided to strike out on their own after a decade of consideration.

"We'd both been doing hair in Novi for quite a few years before that," Dennis said. "Very positive feedback. They love having us in the area. It's a very relaxed, comfortable place." Eight hairdressers use Alterna and Schwarzkopf professional hair care products to sculpt traditional and avant-guard styles alike.

Pedicures and manicures are handled by two specialists. And a make-up specialist applies the salon's just-introduced Trucco line. 'Everyone loves their bold colors - but the foundation stays on," "Their product lasts and last." While stylists work their magic, clients are treated to lounge-style, techno and "hippie" background music.

"Good" 1960s discs are spun whenever possible.

When narrowing down a salon title, owners said the name was geared at reflecting the same bold style. Salon Blow is in action (like the verb). It just means blow-dry, blow out - big." But there's styles for all tastes. Some employees sport bright pink or purple do's, while other opt for classic, more conventional styles.

Stylists keep up on the latest trends at events like the American Hair Idol Battle, held in Detroit in March. The look for this summer? Extremely over-layered and textured styles are hous where said - but keep an eye of rs said - but keep an eye out for curls set

for soccer post-season

By Sam Eggleston RECORD SPORTS WRITER

It's all about timing, and Northville senior Tessa Adkins has

The Northville soccer defender slipped on a patch of snowy turf April 23 when the Mustangs took on a tough Saline squad and felt pain surge through her knee.

It was serious. A dislocated knee cap and a sprained medial collateral ligament. Adkins underwent intense physical therapy and was expected to return next week.

"I actually came back earlier than they 'thought," said Adkins. "They cut me loose two weeks early because I improved so much."

She couldn't have picked a better time. Adkins returned to the soccer pitch to help Northville capture the Western Lakes Activities Association title and will be expected to play huge role-when the Mustangs take on Livonia Stevenson in the district tournament semi-finals tonight at 7 p.m. The game will be played at Stevenson.

If Nonhville wins, they'll advance to the district finals tomorrow at Stevenson at 7 p.m.

"I'm really looking forward to it." Adkins said of the game against Stevenson. She was sidelined when the Mustangs lost to the Spartans earlier this year. "I think it's going to Soccer wins conference The Northville Mustanos soccer team made it official ---they are the best team in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The squad, coached by Ron Meteyer, earned a 3-0 win over the Salem Rocks last week to secure the title.

"The Mustangs' midfield dominated the Rocks' midfield thanks to the efforts of (Jen) Kritch, Lindsey Blair, Amy Cauzillo, Sarah Comai and Kristen Slack," said Meteyer. Earning the shutout in goal was sophomore Liz Watza with the help of defenders Simone Toney, Brooke Richard, Kate Hawthome and Tessa Adkins.

The Mustangs got on the board early, scoring their first goal just eight minutes into the contest when Dani Toney took a throw-in from Kritch, raced around defenders and fired the goal past the Rocks' goalie for the 1-0 lead.

With 6:06 left in the first half, Kritch added a goal of her own, scoring on a pass from Lauren Hill for the 2-0 advantage.

The second half was a midfield fight with both teams stalemating several times before Hill scored to end the game. Blair took the ball, be a completely different game."

Her presence has already made a difference in the aggressiveness of the defense. She plays in the backfield with Simone Toney, Kate Hawthome and Brooke Richard.

Standout

Adkins said she could ask for a better team to play with. She's been a member of the varsity squad for three years and said she's enjoyed every bit of it.

"I've had the opportunity to play with some of the best soccer players in the state," she said. "I've been lucky."

Luck had nothing to do with it. Adkins is a standout player in her own right, as Madonna University proved by picking her up for their team next year.

"I really liked the coach and I really liked the team," she said of collegiate destination. her "Everyone worked well together and the team is really like a big family. I think I'll fit in well with them."

Adkins has made a point of fitting in well no matter where she plays. In the summer and fall, she's a member of Nonhville Premier club soccer where she actually moves up to the forward position. She said she enjoys being with Premier, though most top-shelf players play with the Michigan Hawks or Vardar.

"I like the girls on the (Premier) team and I've always liked the coach," she said. "The Hawks are the Hawks, it's that simple. I've never felt the need to be with them."

Give me a "S-O-C-C-E-R"! Adkins' career is one that almost wasn't. At Hillside Middle School she was a cheerleader.

passed it from the midfield to Cauzillo, who centered the ball to Hill for a one-yard shot and a goal for the 3-0 final.

cheering the Raiders on to victory while practicing her routines.

It wasn't until the age of 13'much later than most Northville soccer standouts --- she found herself switching sports.

"One day I just wanted to play soccer," she said. "I tried it at recess and I really liked it. So, I decided I wanted to do it."

Somewhere along the line, she decided she wanted to be good at it too. Adkins put in plenty of time and effort and found herself being noticed despite the lack of years under her belt. At first she said she saw a difference in how she played compared to the other girls, but rectified the situation.

"When I was younger I felt like everyone had a couple of years on me," she said. "I just worked really. really hard and I think I caught up to them."

Adkins is glad she did and she's proud of the fact that she's a part of a state championship team. She said she's looking forward to helping her team defend that title, though she's not at full strength just yet.

"I think I'm at about 85 percent," she said. "My speed isn't quite up there yet, but it will eventually come. It's definitely frustrating, but 've got to get through it.'

And along the way, she'll take a strong run in the state playoffs too.

"I'm excited," she said. "I'm looking forward to seeing what we can do, especially since we're healthy right now. It's going to be a lot of fun."

Three veterans and a rookie looking to break a school record and they're five seconds away?

If it weren't the state track and field finals at it weren't the Northville Mustangs 3,200meter relay team looking to do it, some people might think it won't be done.

"That's our goal right now." said senior Kate McClymont, who will make her third trip to the finals tomorrow. "We want to break the school record and I think we can do it."

Why not? The Northville team's combined state finals experience is seven years with junior Bryn Smetana and Hrivnak going twice along with McClymont's three trips. Freshman Lindsay Hagan has competed at the national level before and isn't expected to hamper the Mustangs in any way the returning But Northville runners know failure all too well and believe they can't be too careful this year. Last year the team was ranked eighth overall and finished at a much lower place." "We know what happens if you don't stay focused and put everything you've got into the race," said senior Liz Hrivnak, who missed going to the finals as an individual by mere seconds this year. "We want to have our best finish ever and hopefully we can set a school record while we're at it."

The Mustangs have had plenty of success in the 3.200-meter relay already this year. Beyond beating nearly every dual-meet opponent they faced, the Mustangs also earned the crown of regional champions two weeks ago with a time of 9:44.

Northville has had a new driving force this year. Though the team has had the luxury of coach Nancy Smith pushing them for the past four seasons, the Mustangs added veteran coach Chris Cronin - who coaches boys cross country in the fall - to the line-up.

The ninth green at the Fox Classic's The Hills course, like most of the holes on the course, has undulating edges.

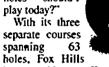

Fox Hills has something to offer everyone

By John Mueller SPORTS WRITER

Making the decision to play Plymouth's Fox Hills is a decision you won't regret.

Be warned, though — there's additional decisions to make even after you've decided to play there. As in, "Which 18 holes — or 27holes ---- should I play today?" With its three separate courses has something to offer just about every type of golfer, whether you're just learning the game or shooting right around par.

As you approach 8768 N. Territorial Road by car, you quickly realize you're surrounded by holes, holes, holes. At that point it's time to make a decision: should you play the Strategic Fox, the Fox Classic or the Golden Fox?

'To answer that question, ask yourself what kind of game you have, and go from there.

"At our facility, we can handle a golfer right from the beginning stages all the way to the advanced stage," said Roger Bliss, director of golf at Fox Hills.

We have a golf course for every body," he continued. The Strategic Fox, which was built in 2001, consists of 18 par-3 ideal for the ning golfer. In addition to playing this course, beginners can take lessons at the Crystal Mountain Golf School, which is run through Fox Hills.

For golfers with a little more experience, the Fox Classic offers more of a challenge. The layout consists of 27 holes. 18 of which (The Hills and The Woodlands) were built in 1921, while the third nine (The Lakes) was built in the early 1980s.

The course's designers stuck to the tradition of building small, round greens with undulations around their edges rather than across them.

Many golfers choose to play The Hills and The Woodlands for their 18-hole combination. The former measures out at 2,815 yards from the white tees while the latter is 2,576, so extra distance isn't a must-have.

However, with narrow fairways and water coming into play on several of the holes, accuracy and smart shot placement is required.

The Hills consists of six par 4s '(the longest of which is the 408yard fifth hole), a pair of par 3s and one par 5 measuring out at 421 yards that the big hitters can reach in two as long as they're hitting it straight.

The Woodlands is similar, with its six relatively short par 4s, two par 3s and the 459-yard par 5 sixth hole.

"Just like any other golf course,

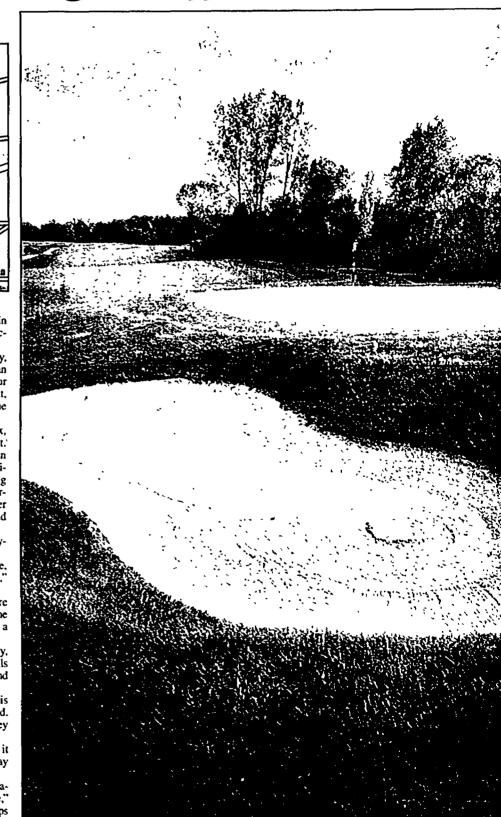

Fox Hills

Scott Wilson, Crystal Mountain Golf School's director of instruction

"The premium is on accuracy, and length isn't as much of an issue," he continued. "Most of our greens are sloped back-to-front, so you want to stay below the hole.

Then there's the Golden Fox, the venue's signature layout." Constructed in 1989, the Golden Fox is comprised of 18 championship-caliber holes, featuring more small greens, narrow fairways and a whole slew of other in the form enges traps and water hazards.

There's a little bit of everything out there," Wilson said.

"It's more of a modern course, tournament-caliber course," Bliss said.

There's more length, more bunkers and more hazards. On the Golden Fox, you're forced to hit a higher-quality golf shot.

Regardless of how they play, people who show up to Fox Hills seem to like what they see and experience.

Their initial impression is always very positive." Bliss said. "A lot of people mention that they plan on coming back."

Which makes sense. After all, it would be difficult indeed to play all 63 holes in a single visit.

The variety here in one location is really second-to-none," Wilson said. "And the crew keeps the courses in wonderful condition."

While long-ball strength isn't required on much of the Fox Hills layout, deep bunkers like the one shown above present tough challenges throughout, as do the occasional water hazards spread around the courses. The Golden Fox was built in 1989, while the Strategic Fox came around in 2001. The Fox Classic, meanwhile, got its start in 1921 with the building of the first 18 holes. A third nine-hole course was constructed in the early 1980s.

Fox Hills pro Scott Wilson, on slicing:

"The root cause of the slice is an open club face; at impact it points to the right of the intended target line. Your hands and your grip is what's controlling the clubface. The best, most general thought you can have is to let your fingers wrap around the club, instead of trying to grab and hold it with your hands. If the fingers wrap around the club properly, it allows your hands and wrists to hang at a very neutral position. A check point to look for: You'll create two 'Vs', a V in your top hand and one in your bottom hand at the base of your hand and thumb, and they should point to the right shoulder of a right-handed player. That will allow you the best chance to return the clubface to a ^{1D} square position at impact."

Shanoski wants top spot in state final

By Sam Eggleston RECORD SPORTS WRITER

Making the trek to the state finals is starting to be old hat for Northville senior Alan Shanoski.

The high jumper has been to the finals in Rockford for four years, placing each time in the top-10. This year, he hopes to finish a little higher --- both on the bar and in the final standings

'I'd like to be in the top two," he said. "I'm excited about going again. It's always exciting to jump against the best guys in the state.

And hopefully beat them, he said. Shanoski, who has cleared 6-feet-9-inches this year to set a new Western Lakes Activities Association record, is looking to leap about 6-10 or 6-11 in the finals tomorrow,

It won't be easy and he's well aware of it, especially since he has a bit of an injury hampering him in the form of shin splints. The painful infliction found him sitting the sidelines for the open 400-meter dash and the 4-by-400 relay where coach Bill Cornelius had expected the senior to help the Mustangs score points.

No amount of pain was going isit to keep him from the high jump pit though. In fact, Shanoski said the pain is a lot less now.

"They aren't real bad right now, but they were pretty strong in the middle of the season," he said. "It's not going to stop me from jumping in the finals that's for sure."

Shanoski already has his eye on one athlete he's looking forward to testing his skills against. Ryan Libiran, of Okemos, has been a friendly rival of Shanoski's for a few ✤ years.

"He's a good jumper," Shanoski said. "Him and I will probably be neck and neck the whole time. It should be fun. It McClymont said Cronin has been a factor in the success of the 3,200-meter relay team and her individual performances as well.

The senior distance runner qualified for the two-mile event as an individual this year as well.

"Coach Cronin put me in the two mile earlier this year and I was mad at him," said McClymont. "But I really like the two-mile now. I'm really excited about running it in the state finals."

The individual event may find McClymont running a little late for another important date on her calendar - Northville's graduation ceremonies.

She said she wouldn't miss her race for the world though, even if it means she won't have time to primp her hair.

"I'm hoping I make it but I think I might end up missing graduation or at least being late," she said. "I might end up just throwing my gown on over my track clothes."

Research has shown honey, along with suplemental calium, can help enhance calcium absorption. One easy way to add it to your diet: smoothies and shakes.

Honey may aid in calcium absorption

Here's another reason to enjoy the sweet taste of 100 percent pure honey.

A new study conducted at Purdue University has shown that consuming honey along with supplemental calcium enhanced calcium absorption in rats. In addition, the absorption of calcium was increased as the amount of honey was increased. The study, led by Dr. Berdine Martin of Purdue University, was presented at the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology meeting in San Diego in April.

"Many adults struggle to get the recommended amounts of calcium in their daily diet," said Dr. honey "Although this study was done with rats, the preliminary results are very compelling," said Dr. Beals. "Of course, we would have to replicate the experiment in a human sample to see if the same holds true for people."

Small-Business Focus: Recommended Summer Reading

We Americans tend to scan the things we read, a skill taught in most secondary schools. While that's a worthwhile timesaving talent that enables us to lead more efficient lives, it can have a somewhat detrimental impact on the understanding of our history.

Most of the U.S. population has heard of the Bill of Rights. but few have actually taken the time to read it. These rights, we assume, come Constitution. The fact that they were almost literally written in the blood of our forefathers is something to which we rarely give full consideration. After all, our minds are preoccupied with today's challenges. Something adopted almost 214 years ago is ancient history.

The danger of falling into that mind-set revealed itself recently when it became frightfully evident that history was beginning to repeat itself in a little-noticed corner of the federal government known as the U.S. Tax Court. Certainly the tax court wasn't plotting to repeat the oppressions of Great Britain's King George Ill, who set in motion the American Revolution by enabling his government to impose a variety of taxes. But when the court denied small businesses due process of law, it trampled upon some of the basic rights of all American citizens.

Ignoring those rights in the case of Ballard v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the tax court refused to allow the small-business defendant access to reports prepared by special trial judges. Without that information, the defendant lacked the tools and information needed to mount a fair fight.

Fortunately, the National Fédération of Independent Business's Legal Foundation stepped in, filing a friend-of-thecourt brief last summer that challenged the tax court by showing that the small firm's rights were not only being violated, but that the court's stand was unconstitutional.

When the issue reached the U.S. Supreme Court, the justices overwhelmingly agreed, striking down the tax court's unfair practice by a 7-2 vote and overturning a 1983 decision that unfairly denied the rights of small businesses and other litigants. Now, special trial judges will be required to reveal their reports.

This is crucial to the American small-business sector because 85 percent of those who own Main Street firms file their taxes as individuals, and the tax court is the only place where they can contest an income tax levy without first paying the full amount.

But the celebration of this important victory won't last long. True, it is a burden lifted from the shoulders of small-business owners, but the challenge that all Americans face is to remain vigilant. It's far too easy for a government as large as ours to forget the lessons of history and tread on those rights that we assume came with the territory.

With summer vacations on the horizon, it might be a good idea for all Americans to forego reading the latest novel and get a copy of a document that begins: "We, the People of the United States."

HDTV uses a digital signal free of the ghosting and signal-fade problems of the traditional analog TV. It has a higher-resolution image than DVD and traditional TV, giving you a much more detailed picture. Programs can be broadcast in a widescreen (16:9) aspect ratio, as opposed to squares (4:3) aspect ratio for traditional TV, so you can see more of the action in a sporting event or the entire frame of a widescreen movie. Soundtracks can be broadcast in 5.1 Dolby Digital, giving you the same sound surround sound experience you get with DVDs.

HOTV Format

Most digital TV programs are broadcast using either the 1080s (interlaced) or 720p (progressivescan) high-definition format. You don't need to know all the detail about these since any HDTV that doesn't support both directly will automatically convert the unsupported format to its "native" screen format, but it's useful to have general ideas of what distinguished them.

A digital image displayed on a TV is made up of horizontal scan lines, or pixel rows, and the format number indicated how many lines or rows (Counting for the top to bottom) are in a complete video image or frame. The frames of the 1080i format which is used by most local broadcast TV stations are interlaced, which means that the even and odd lines of a frame are assigned to separate, interlocking fields displayed one after the other. The 720p format used by ABC is progressive scan, with each line of a frame transmitted in sequence so the entire frame is shown at once. In general, 1080i excels with more images, while 720p is the best with fast motion.

Standard analog TV uses a 480i image. Any 480i programming is "up converted" for high-definition broadcast, resulting in image the aren't true HDTV but might look better than their analog counterparts. The digital TV standard also allows for 480p "enhance definition" transmission. Fox is the only network currently using this format, and plans to switch to highdef 720p this fall. You'll find that some digital set are enhanced-definition TVs or EDTV. While these sets aren't capable of the full resolution of high-def models, their pictures can be noticeable better that those of traditional TVs.

Aspect Rations

A few HDTV's have 4:3 aspect ratio screens, but most have 16:9 screens, which means you won't see large black bars above and below the picture when watching most wide screen movies. The disadvantage of 16:9 screens is that you'll have black or gray bards on either side of the image when watching anything broadcast in 4:3 and that includes older movies and most TV shows, setup from the Installation and Set-Up menu it let you select the aspect ratio 16:9 or 4:3. You can also select the TV Type, 1080i, 720p or 480p. The Model 811 has an input connection to receive programming signals from off-air antenna. This enable you to receive HDTV from your local station. In the Detroit market Channel 56 broadcast approximately 12 to 18 hours a day in HDTV while other

And that's about it. When you go shopping for your first HDTV you'll need to be more aware of the options. Call Digicomm Electronics concerning your HDTV/SATELLITE equipment.

Ad that

Works

Avoid Abbreviations.

A few accepted and recognizable abbreviations are OK, but an ad full of them just confuses the readers. They will go on to the next ad rather than decipher yours. A good rule of thumb is "Spell it out, or leave it out."

Be Available.

A BAR AND A BAR AND A CONTRACT AND A

List your telephone number so that potential buyers will know how to contact you. State the best hours to call so they'll know when you can be reached.

Consider Your Readers.

Put yourself in the readers' place. If you were considering buying this item, what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, color, brand name and any other important information needed to describe it completely and accurately. Sell the benefits of owning the item.

Don't Exaggerate.

Misleading information may bring potential buyers to your home but it will not help you make the sale. You'll lose the prospect's trust and faith as well as the sale.

Include the Price.

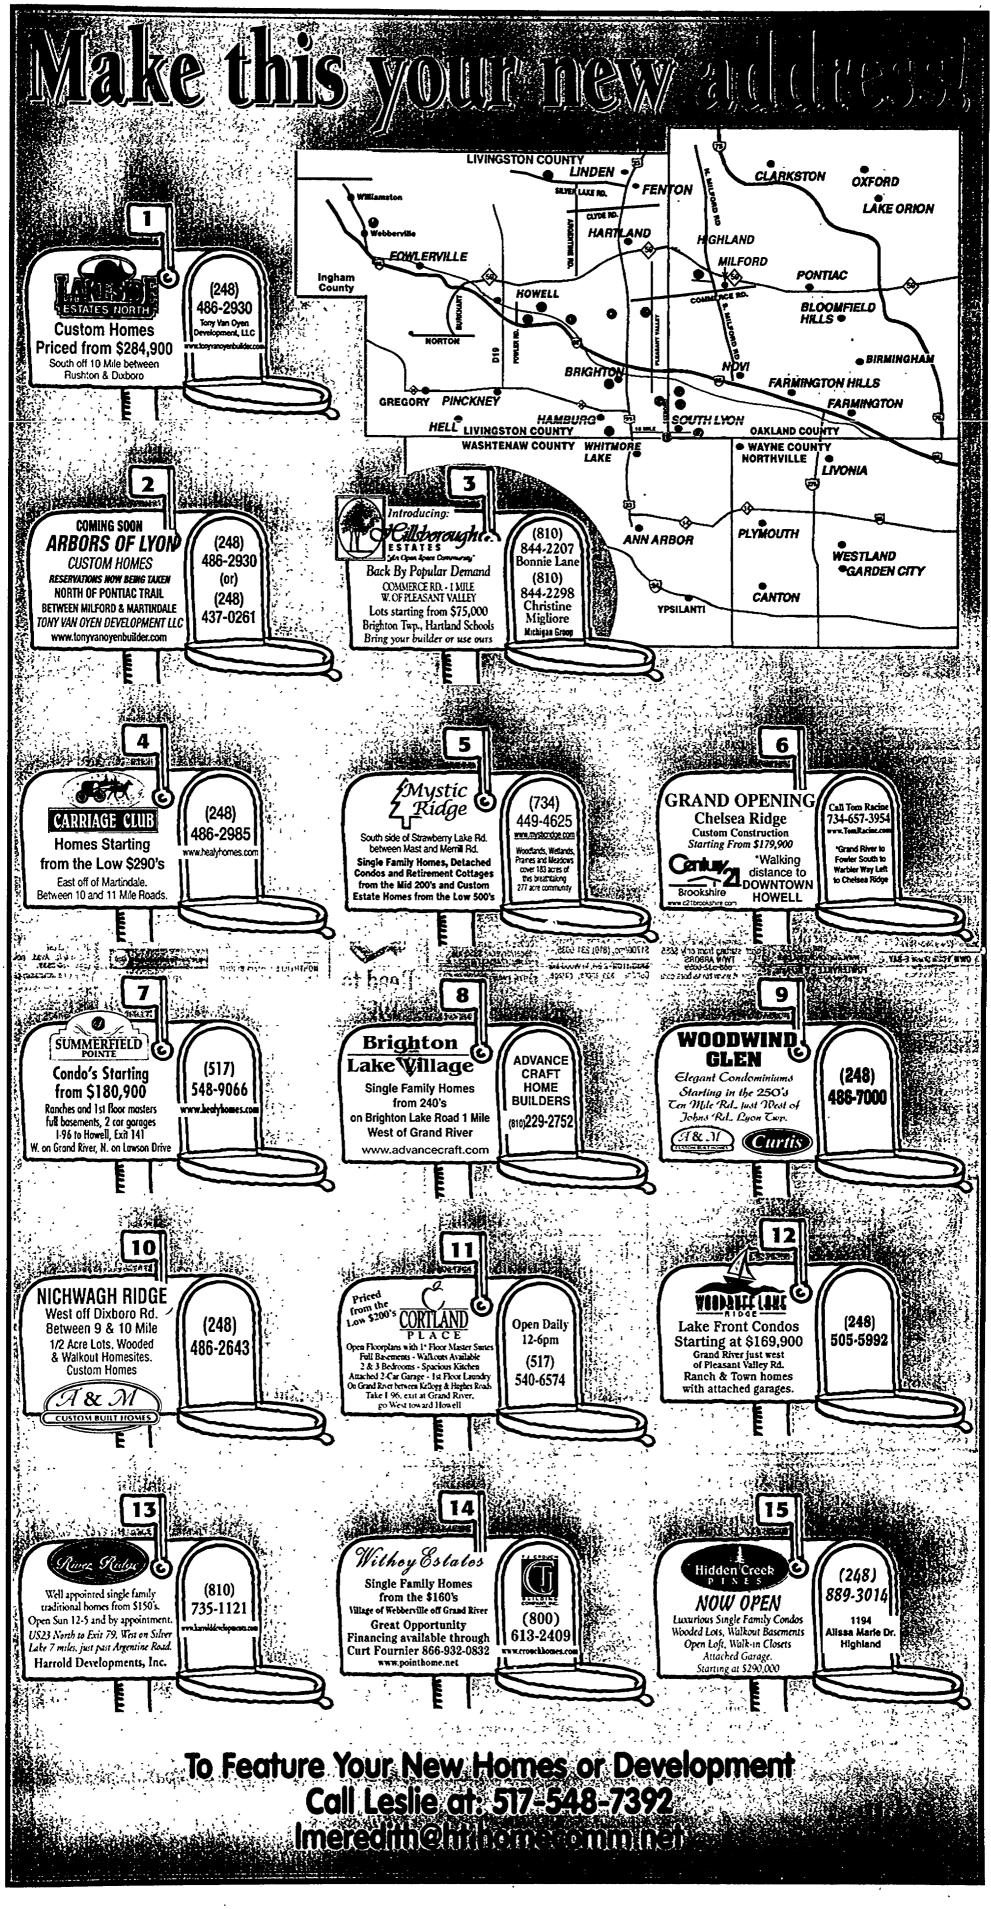

Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified shoppers. Ads that list prices will get their attention first. Including price also helps you avoid inquiries from callers not in your price range.

Call Mon. & Fri. 8–5 p.m., Tues. thru Thurs. 8:30–5 p.m. to place your ad.

Life Line Screening is America's leading provider of quality health screenings. These tests quickly detect arterial abnormalities which can cause disrupted blood flow. Our screenings are fast, accurate, and available at an affordable rate.

We provide these non-invasive, completely painless screenings using Doppler ultrasound technology.

Stroke Screening/ Carotid Artery

This screens the carotid arteries in the neck for plaque buildup. The #1 cause of stroke is linked to carotid artery blockage.

Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Screening

This screens for the existence of an aneurysm in the abdominal aorta. The vast majority of people who have an aneurysm have no symptoms.

Complete details on reverse side.

Peripheral Arterial Disease Screening

This screens for peripheral arterial disease (plaque buildup) in the lower extremities which is linked to coronary artery disease.

Life Line Screening

A physician typically will not order an ultrasound evaluation for someone who has no symptoms of vascular disease or osteoporosis. Life Line Screening[®] enables you to be checked for vascular disease or osteoporosis as part of your own personal prevention plan. Over 2.5 million people have participated in these non-invasive and painless screenings. This valuable information will help you and your personal physician quickly and inexpensively manage your wellness.

- State-of-the-art equipment is used with sophisticated color flow ultrasound technology.
- A board certified physician, who is fully insured and licensed to practice, reviews and confirms all screening results.

"Vascular screening programs for cerebrovascular disease, aortic aneurysms and peripheral vascular disease have proven their value in detecting previously unrecognized problems in many individual patients that could have resulted in significant illness or even death."

Board Certified Cardiologist, Cleveland, Ohio

"I participated in all three screenings and felt the staff was very professional, efficient and gracious. This certainly is a valuable service which I shall continue to provide to Laurel Lake residents and to the community for as long as possible."

Stroke Screening/ Carotid Artery $45

Visualizes the buildup of fatty plaque in the carotid arteries which leads to stroke.

Procedure: The technologist applies an acoustic gel on your neck over your carotid arteries. A painless instrument, a transducer, will be moved around your neck to visualize the inside of the carotid artery.

Visualizes the existence of an aneurysm (enlargement) in the abdominal aorta that could lead to a ruptured aortic artery.

Procedure: The technologist applies an acoustic gel on your abdomen and uses a painless instrument called a transducer to visualize the aorta.

Screens for peripheral arterial disease in the lower extremities. Studies suggest an abnormal ABI may indicate peripheral arterial disease as well as a high risk of coronary artery disease.

Procedure: Blood pressure cuffs and a Doppler ultrasound probe are placed on your arms and ankles.

Complete Vascular Package (all 3 screenings) $109

If you pay by phone, we accept these credit cards. We do not accept credit cards at the event.

Life Line Screening is dedicated to providing the highest quality imaging technology at an affordable rate. Our goal is to make people aware of an undetected health problem and encourage them to seek follow-up care with their physician. You will receive your results in 21 days.

Insurance Note: At the present time, Medicare does not cover the cost of these screening services. Life Line Screening does not file insurance claims.

I love American Chopper. I was wondering if you could tell me the address of Orange County Choppers so I could write to Paul Teutul Sr. and Paul Teutui Jr. -Connie T., Ohio

You can write to both father and son at: Orange County Choppers, 10 Factory St., Montgomery, N.Y. 12549, or via e-mail at fanmail@orangecountychoppers.com. For Paul Sr., 56, born in Yonkers,

N.Y., the popular Discovery Channel show is just an extension of the steel fabricating business that he began in the early 1970s. The divorced father had his sons-Paul Jr. (Paulie), 30; Mikey, 26; and Danny, 28-working for him in the steel shop, previous to the bike building. Paul Jr. is chief designer and fabricator at OCC, Mikey answers phones and orders parts, and Danny is the general manager of Orange County Ironworks. (They have a sister, Kristin, who is studying to become a nurse.) "We like doing the show," says Paul

Sr. of the show that captures the day-to-day drama of the Teutul family and their struggles to maintain their flourishing custom motorcycle shop, as well as their family relationships. "It's more work than you think it is and you really don't have any time to yourself, but we have a lot of fun doing it."

What happened to Vinnie, who was Paulie's right hand man on American Chopper?

-Ray Y., Missouri

Vinnie Demartino, 32, is still very much a part of Orange County Chop-Vinnie Demartino pers. "There were a couple of episodes

I wasn't as involved in, but I'm still very much involved," says Demartino, who has been friends with Paul Teutul

Jr. since the third grade. Demartino began riding motorcycles when he was 3. "My father sold motorcycles, and he made my first with training wheels," he says. The Newburgh, N.Y. (pop. 28,259), native now lives in Pinebush, N.Y., with his wife of four years, Melissa, and baby daughter Vanessa. "I drive her around the yard on my scooter right now." Demartino admits that he has a love-hate relationship with the show. "It's a lot of work," he says. "When the cameras stop rolling, we're still working."

> What happened to Molly Ringwald. who played in several movies in the [980s? -Rachel D., Tennessee Molly Ringwald was only 16 during the peak of her fame in the 1980s with Sixteen Candles, The Breakfast Club and Pretty in Pink. But breaking that teen stereotype was not easy for the Roseville, Calif., native, and in 1990, at 22, she moved to Paris for the next 10 years, which included a failed short marriage. In the late 1990s, Ringwald took several roles in low profile projects. Then in 2000, she returned to the United States, where she worked on and off Broadway, including a portrayal of sassy Sally Bowles in Cabaret. Now 37, Ringwald lives with her daughter, Mathilda Ereni, in New York City. Her most visible recent role was in the popular 2001 spoof, Not Another Teen Movie.

Like his father, grandfather and great-grandfather before him, Silguero, 40, works and lives at the only place he's ever really called home-the sprawling 825,000-acre King Ranch near Kingsville, Texas (pop. 25,575).

recognized as the birthplace of the American ranching industry. It was there, in this harsh brush country along the mesquiteshrouded banks of Santa Gertrudis Creek. that Richard King in 1853 first launched the Western cattle business by corralling wild longhorns that roamed the Texas flatlands and herding them north to markets that hungered for beef.

Sprung from one man's foresight more than 150 years ago, the King Ranch has not only survived but evolved into a major agribusiness corporation that today has interests in cattle and feedlot operations, farming, citrus groves, recreational hunting, ecotourism and retail sales.

The ranch's contributions to the industry are numerous. It produced the first American beef breed of cattle, the Santa Gertrudis, in 1940, and more recently,

Cowboys ride the open range at the legendary King Ranch, near Kingsville, Texas, where horses,

The ranch produced some of the all-time top running and performance horses, including Mr. San Peppy, the youngest horse ever to be inducted into the National Cutting Horse Association's Hall of Fame in 1974.

And years ahead of their time, ranch managers in 1912 implemented a hunting code and in 1945 hired their first wikllife biologist.

"This place is as much about wikllife and land stewardship as it is about the cattle," says David DeLaney, the ranch's assistant general manager. "There's a long-term commitment here not only to sustainable agriculture and wikilife management, but also to the people who The ranch's 32,000-square-foot, Spanish-style hacienda was built between 1912 and 1915.

Those bonds took root when Richard King, a successful steamboat captain who knew little about cattle, traveled into Mexico in 1854 in search of taqueno (Mexican cowboys) to run the 15,500. acre ranch he'd bought the year before. He came upon the drought-stricken village of Las Cruillas, where he invited townspeople to follow him back to Texas. In exchange, King promised homes and

"I take care of this place like it's my own," says Quintanilla, 47, an assistant area manager whose duties include tending part of the ranch's 1,500 miles of fence.

Cowboys still tend to the ranch's 50,000 cattle Capt. Richard King on horseback, but they also use pickup trucks to pull feed wagons, electric branding irons to mark animals, computers to compile stock records and helicopters to herd cattle.

Mickey Hellickson, the ranch's chief wildlife biologist, uses helicopters, too, to survey white-tailed deer. The annual counts determine how many will be harvested during fall hunting seasons, a major income source for the ranch. "Our overall goal is to ensure that wildlife populations on the ranch are always thriving," Hellickson says.

Birthplace of by WARREN D. JORGENSEN Photos by Jim Laragy Day

Veterans Les King and Wayne Campbell, with their respective VFW and American Legion brothers, quietly lay wreaths at the headstones of fallen soldiers at St. Mary's and Maple Grove cemeteries in Waterloo, N.Y. (pop. 7,866). It's a scene that has played out for 138 years in Waterloo, which proudly holds the distinction as "The Birthplace of Memorial Day."

"It's the living coming to pay tribute to those who did not survive," says Campbell, a Waterloo resident and Vietnam War veteran, one of two dozen former soldiers who participated in the solemn early morning march and ceremony last May 30.

"Memorial Day means three things to me," says World War II veteran Ed Nelson, 80. "It is for those who gave their lives, for those who are suffering in veterans hospitals, and for those of us who took the time to go. We all made sacrifices."

The first Memorial Day

In the summer of 1865, the scars of the Civil War were fresh in the nation's psyche and hundreds of thousands of war casualties filled cemeteries across the country. Waterloo druggist Henry C. Welles suggested to Gen. John B. Murray that honoring the war dead by placing flowers on their graves would be a fitting tribute. Murray, a Civil War hero and town clerk in the neighboring village of Seneca Falls agreed, and the two gathered supporters. On May 5, 1866, the town of Waterloo observed its first Mernorial Day.

Two years later, Gen. John A. Logan, commanding general of the Grand Army of the Republic, an early veterans' association, issued General Order 11 from his headquarters in Washington, D.C. The order, known as Logan's Order, declared that: "The 30th of May, 1868 is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the land."

Following that dictate, despite the 1966 congressional edict that Memorial Day be observed on the last Monday in May, veterans' groups in Waterloo have observed Memorial Day on May 30 without interruption each year since 1868.

Official designation

In 1966, Congress officially recognized Waterloo as "The Birthplace of Memorial Day," a title that the town and its people bear with obvious pride. The spirit of Memorial Day permeates the town, and it is imbued in school children, who are raised with the knowledge that something very important began in their hometown.

"I was 9 when we got the designation," says resident Doug Daeffler, 47, an Air Force Reserve captain and former Coast Guard helicopter pilot. "I thought. Wow! This is really cool, this is my town, and this is just great stuff.

"We have the greatest country in the workl, and someone has to defend it," he adds. Daeffler married his high school sweetheart, and in 2003 left his family and his job to serve a tour in Iraq as a forward air controller. "And if not me, who?"

He's following in the footsteps of his father, Roger, 74, who saw combat in Korea. His son, Michael. entered the Coast Guard Academy last year.

Daeffler shows his respect for his fellow veterans by marching in the town's Memorial Day parade. Korean War veterans are honored during the procession.

and the second second

Veterans commemorate their comrades each May 30. something he first did as a Cub Scout, then Eagle Scout, and now as a scoutmaster of Troop 81 in Waterloo.

The proclamation, signed by President Lyndon B. Johnson, confirming Waterloo's status was cause for celebration in 1966, which residents did with a community-wide festival. Celebrations were held again in 1976, 1991 and 2000, each on the federally mandated last Monday in May. However, the commercial aspect did not sit well with many veterans, who continued their own tradition of marching to veterans' graves only on May 30.

Celebrate-commemorate

Since 2000—the year residents draped Waterloo in nearly 26,000 American flags—the town has combined the festive and memorial aspects under the official title of Celebrate-Commemonate Weekend. The celebration is held during the weekend preceding the federally recognized holiday on Monday, with the commemorative parade and observances by the veterans on May 30.

This year, the celebration is scheduled Saturday, May 28, and Sunday, May 29. The entire town takes on a subdued festive air during the event, featuring a 10K run, train rides and colorful banners. La Fayette Park will take on a Norman Rockwell scene, filled with craftspeople, vendor's tents, hot dogs, popcorn, live music and the sound of cannon fired by a Civil War re-enactors group that has set up its encampment there every year since 2000.

The streets will be lined with wooden cutouts of large stars, bearing the names of Aging is Natural. Giving Up on Your Sexual Health Isn't!

Hold Onto the Best Years of Your Life! Here's how one man did it!

Dear Readers:

Although this would otherwise be an embarrassing subject – I feel strongly about sharing a recent experience with others my age. Simply put ... I'm 47 years old and even though I'm in overall good health, my body just doesn't respond sexually like it used to.

Recently, I found myself struggling to "perform". It was just so difficult to remain firm. I began losing my confidence and my sex drive with it. I was feeling a great deal of pressure and embarrassment and my wife was beginning to think it was something she did or didn't do – it wasn't.

I wasn't comfortable discussing my situation with anyone – not even my doctor. At my age, I just didn't feel it necessary to turn to prescription drugs. So in a desperate attempt to find some help, I privately did some research on the web.

First, I found that many HEALTHY men experience a decrease in stamina and performance with age (sometimes it can even happen to men under 30). I wasn't alone! Good blood circulation is key to maintaining a strong erection and apparently there are a number of factors that can weaken it.

Armed with this new information, I began to search through the many "male enhancement" and potency products on the net. I found a pill for everything and anything but among the various pills and patches – one product stood out – Maxoderm! Not a pill or a patch, Maxoderm is a topical formula for those concerned with the quality and firmness of their erections! Using a targeted delivery system that's applied right to the "source", it gets the job done where I need it most. I don't need to swallow a pill, prescription drug, or wear some kind of patch on my shoulder.

After trying Maxoderm just once, I could actually feel it working immediately! What a difference! I couldn't believe how firm I was - I even lasted longer than I have in years! My driver's license says I'm 47 but thanks to Maxoderm, my wife says I'm 18 again! It felt great!

I now know it's normal to experience some problems with sexual performance as we age, but Maxoderm let me deal with it naturally. No pills – no patches – and even better – no embarrassing appointment with the doctor.

Try Maxoderm. You'll feel it working immediately - then you can bring back the best years of your life.

- Jim, S. Miami, FL

P.S., Maxoderm actually offers a 90 Day RISK FREE Program. They will even give you the FIRST MONTH ABSOLUTELY FREE. Broccoli and Cauliflower Salad Salad: 6 to 8 slices of bacon, fried and crumbled. [head broccoli [head broccoli [head cauliflower [to:2/cups grated mild cheese [small onion diced [cup mushrooms: optional]

Dressing: I cup light sour cream

Cut broccoli and cauliflower into bite sized pieces. Toss together all salad ingredients. Mix dressing ingredients and pour over salad. When vegetables are evenly coated, refrigerate at least one hour or overnight before serving.

Tips From Our-Test Kitchen: Consider steaming broccoli and cauliflower until crisp tender. This brings out the bright green color in the broccoli and makes the vegetables easier to eat.

Technology Keeping Kids Safe Online

You wouldn't dream of dropping your 8-year-old off at the shopping mall unsupervised. But every day, thousands of children use computers, roaming cyberspace completely unprotected. As a parent, it's your job to safeguard your children by giving them the right combination of information and supervision when they venture online.

Online risks such as a loss of privacy, exposure to objectionable material, and financial scams or frauds can be encountered in chat rooms, on interactive sites and via e-mail, says Natalie Walker Whitlock, author of A Parent's Guide to the Internet.

"The risks and challenges the Internet presents are understandably scary, but parents need not overreact or feel powerless," Whitlock says. In fact, an educated, involved parent is the best protection a child has against online risks. So take responsibility for your child's education and guidance.

The first step to raising a child with "cyber street smarts" is developing a family contract for online safety. This agreement, signed by your child and posted near the computer, states that the child will follow basic safety rules while surfing the Web. Rules may include: • Be aware

- Do not give out any personal information online.
- Do not agree to get together with someone met online without checking with a parent.
- Meet online friends in a public place and bring a parent with you.
- Do not send pictures over the Internet.
- Do not give out or share passwords.
- Do not open e-mail attachments.

Content filters and monitoring devices can track your child's online activities. However, none is 100-percent effective, and they're best used along with your own "monitoring devices"—your eyes, ears and continued communication with your child.

Other basics rules to keep your child safe online include:

• Keep the computer in an open space where you can see what your child is doing.

Set appropriate limits regarding the amount of time spent on the Internet and the activities done online.
Surf with your child and know his online friends.

• Check your child's online history and monitor his e-mail.

• Be aware of "red flags" that may indicate a problem.

If your child shuts off the computer when you enter the room or gets defensive when asked questions, it's time to look closer.

Monitoring your child's online activities and talking to him about potential risks is as basic and important as buckling a seatbelt when you drive in a car. In both cases, you'll be navigating the streets in safety. \Rightarrow

Golf has always been a game of knowledge as well as skill. For the last 62 years, Pinehurst Resort in Pinehurst, N.C. (pop. 9,706), has been fortunate to have on its premises a veritable font of local golfing wisdom.

Willie McRae, 72, has caddied at Pinehurst since May 19, 1943, walking—it's been estimated—the equivalent of five times around the world. He has carried the bags of golfing luminaries such as Gene Sarazen and Arnold Palmer, as well as legendary golf course architect Donald Ross, designer of Pinehurst courses Nos. 1, 2 and 3, built from 1899 to 1910.

In a time when it might appear that the era of the caddie is endangered by the omnipresent golf cart, McRae smiles and reminds golfers that a cart can't tell you how to read the break on a green.

"A lot of young people are riding carts, and that's killing them and their game," McRae attests. "Golf is supposed to be a walking sport, not a riding sport. If you're walking to the ball, you got time to think. When you're riding down there so fast, you ain't got time to think. That's why you hit so many bad shots."

Born in Taylortown—nicknamed Caddieville for the influx of caddies who took up residence in the little hamlet adjacent to Pinehurst in the early 1900s—McRae learned the tools of the trade at age 11 from his father, Thaddeus McRae, who also was a Pinehurst caddie.

"You got to know when to say something and know when not to say something," instructs McRae, who caddled for the winning U.S. Ryder Cup team captained by Sam Snead when the event was held at Pinehurst in 1951. "When you say something, you've got to say the right thing. Man hit a bad shot, you got to pat him on the back and say, 'Listen, come on, let's hit a good shot. Just play."

It is that personal touch along with his long-earned course savvy that keeps McRae in demand.

"He has terrific people skills," says Jimmy Smith, Pinchurst's program manager. "He knows how to treat the guests. He makes them feel like a winner, like they're the greatest in the workl. Even though they could be a 25-handicapper, when they leave here, he makes them feel like, 'Man, this is the greatest golf I've ever had.' You can see it. He puts a smile on their face, and they always ask for him."

Making the trip to work is all the sweeter for McRae, knowing that some family interaction may lie ahead during the course of the day.

"My son (Paul Kerry McRae) is a golf pro here at Pinehurst," says McRae, of the third-generation member of McRaes to serve golfers at the resort. "He's a good one; everybody wants him."

While he may be advancing in age, you won't find McRae settled back in a golf cart leisurely issuing lordly advice to golfers in need. During a typical tournament, he walks the course seven consecutive days.

"He carries two bags," Smith says. "He's solid as a rock."

Away from the course, over the years, McRae, who now lives in nearby Carthage, N.C. (pop. 1,871), has developed a decided preference for the small-town way of life.

"There's nothing like being out in the fresh air," says McRae, inducted into the Professional Caddies Association's Hall of Fame in October 2003. "When people see me, I don't care where they see me at—the post office, anywhere—they'll wave."

That lights a wide smile on the venerable caddie's face. For now, retirement is nowhere in sight, as his flame for the game still surges on.

"I tell you what," McRae reflects, almost solemnly. "I love that game so good."

Although several cities—including Boalsburg, Pa.; Columbus, Miss.; and Macon, Ga.-claim to be the "Birthplace of Memorial Day," only Waterloo, N.Y., holds the designation from the federal government.

Last year, the decorative yellow stars were all over town, standing on short poles stuck in the ground. Doris Wolf, one of the volunteers who helped coordinate the "star" effort, says they are "stars that celebrate the people who make the community what it is."

"It's OK to celebrate the freedoms we have and to commemorate the people who gave their lives," says Dave Duprey, co-chairman of the event's Celebration Committee, explaining how the festival honors veterans in the same spirit as the commemorative parade.

"If you want to celebrate life in a small town, we have the celebration for you," Wolf says.

Resident Ed Nelson concurs. "This is what we all fought for, the freedom of doing exactly this," he says, sitting in the middle of the park celebration.

Waterloo honors its link to the national holiday at the Memorial Day Museum, the only one of its kind in the nation. The museum was opened in 1966 by the town's historical society. In its 22 rooms, the entire history of Waterloo's contributions to defending our liberties and freedoms are on display in the cabinets and on the walls. Henry Welles' apothecary scale, mortar and pestle are displayed alongside battle swords and medals, Civil War minié-balls, 19th- and early 20th-century uniforms, buckles and bayonets, and Japanese flags and Nazi armbands, trophies brought home by World War II veterans.

In memoriam

Monday, May 30, will be the day of commemoration in Waterloo, when veterans of World War II, Korea, Vietnam and other military actions gather their thoughts and reflect on the sacrifices that they and those who went before them made. In the morning, they plan to march to cemeteries to pay their respects, remembering their fallen comrades.

On Monday evening, thousands of residents will line Main Street to watch veterans and active duty and reserve troops march to a monument honoring Waterloo's war dead in La Fayette Park. Wreaths will be laid where the names of 44 hometown heroes are inscribed, Waterloo soldiers and sailors who did not return.

Recalling the first Memorial Day, which honored the town's Civil War dead, the Gettysburg Address will be read, the words just as moving now as they were when President Abraham Lincoln spoke them in 1863. Logan's Order will be read aloud, speeches made, a 21-gun salute fired, and Taps will sound at dusk.

In the end though, veteran Les King's words will hang in the air and in the memories of those who bow their heads in remembrance of falken relatives, friends and neighbors. "We honor them for the rights we all have, rights preserved by those who have given their lives and we honor them for what they have done."

In Waterloo, the spirit of Memorial Day endures. ≯

Now get Free Bulbs for Life!* A floor lamp that spreads sunshine all over a room, and pays for itself!

The Balanced Spectrum' floor lamp combines the benefits of natural daylight indoors with a savings of $51 over the life of one bulb!"

Ever since the first human went into a dark cave and built a fire, people have realized the importance of proper indoor lighting. Unfortunately, since Edison invented the light bulb, lighting technology has remained relatively prehistoric. Modern light fixtures do little to combat many symptoms of improper lighting, such as eyestrain, dryness or burning. As more and more of us spend longer hours in front of a computer monitor, the results are compounded. And the effects of indoor lighting are not necessarily limited to physical well-being. Many people believe that the quantity and quality of light can play a part in one's mood and work performance. Now there's a better way to bring the positive benefits of natural sunlight indoors.

about your living or work spaces. Studies show that sunshine can lift your mood and your energy levels. But as we all know the sun, unfortunately, does not always shine. So to bring the benefits of natural daylight indoors, use the floor lamp that simulates the full spectrum of daylight. You will see with more clarity and enjoyment as this lamp provides sharp visibility for close tasks and reduces eyestrain.

Its 27-watt compact bulb is the equivalent to a 150-watt ordinary light bulb. This makes it perfect for activities such as reading, writing, sewing, needlepoint, and especially for aging eyes.

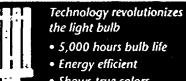

We've looked at lots of lights, but this one offers the benefit of dual light levels of 27 and 18 watts of power equivalent to 150-and 100-watt incandescent bulbs. This lamp has a flexible gooseneck design for maximum efficiency, with an "Instant On" switch that is flicker-free. The high-tech electronics, user-friendly design, and bulb that lasts 10 times longer than an ordinary bulb make this lamp a must-have.

SAVE $51 over the life of one Balanced Spectrum^{*} bulb!"

A 150-watt incandescent bulb uses $0.013 per hour in energy cost. The Balanced Spectrum* bulb uses an average of 70% less energy which saves you $0.009 per hour. Based on 5,000 hours bulb life, the Balanced Spectrum[®] bulb will save $46 in energy cost. Plus, because the Balanced Spectrum's bulb lasts 10 times longer than an incandescent bulb priced at an average of $0.50, an additional $5 savings is realized.
