Northville High School graduates grab diplomas, ponder 'major' decisions

By Victoria Sadlocha
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Northville High School seniors crossed the stage at Compuware arena Saturday, receiving their diplomas while taking in sage advice for the future.

Now, many of the young adults making up the Class of 2005 will head to college.

Decisions like declaring a major, are suddenly no longer abstract. They are real.

But how are such decisions made? And more importantly, how often does the decision change?

According to a survey conducted by Young Money magazine, 60 percent of college students will change their majors before graduating.

And according to the survey, nearly half of the remaining 40 percent will leave school regretting the major they chose, leaving few college students satisfied with their decisions.

Northville High School graduate, Alexandra Hollmeyer is entering Grand Valley State in the fall and is among many seniors entering college with a decided career path.

She will begin her freshman year declaring a communications major, a field she, up to this point, enjoys.

But Hollmeyer said she is open to change if her interests start to sway.

Marlis Shannon, director of the office of advising and student records for the College of Arts, Sciences and Letters at The University of Michigan-Dearborn, said being open to change in the beginning is not a bad idea

EB Games store robbed — again

Police: no connection to last month's heist

By Kim Kovel
RECORD STAFF WRITER

For the second time in barely a month, the EB Games store in Northville Township was targeted for armed robbery, police said.

Just after the Haggerty Road store closed at 9 p.m. June 4, a white male suspect reportedly displayed a handgun and demanded cash from the shop's register.

Two employees were uninjured, officers said, but the suspect fled with a few hundred dollars in cash and some video game products.

The suspect was gone by the time police arrived, Northville Township Det. Sgt. Matt Mayes said.

"They dialed 911 as soon as the suspect left the store," Mayes said. "No vehicle was seen at this one. There's no leads as of yet."

Opportunity and proximity to the I-275 expressway were likely factors, police said.

Mayes said there is no relation between the recent theft and a May 6 robbery, when two Ohio men allegedly stole $243 from the store. Also linked to about 45 similar robberies in three states, the duo is being charged federally, police said.

Mayes said during last Saturday's robbery, the suspect waited until the final two customers left the store before making his move. Witnesses described the suspect as very skinny, 6-foot tall and in his 20s with brown, crew-cut hair.

At the time, he reportedly was wearing a black shirt; long, baggy blue jeans; white socks up to the ankle; and a blue and white baseball cap.

Mayes said patrol in unmarked vehicles and undercover surveillance have been increased in that area.

"We've alerted the area merchants in the (strip) mall," he said. "Any place you get a lot of businesses that are in retail, you start getting these kind of things, unfortunately."

Anyone with information on the case is asked to call the Northville Township Police Department at (248) 349-9400.

Northville blade runners

Homeowners face lawn primping query: 'How low should I go?'

By Kim Kovel
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Despite golfers' spikes and rumbling carts, the greens at Northville Township's Meadowbrook Country Club appear perfectly manicured.

It's enough to make any homeowner sick — or inspired.

But Superintendent Mike Edgerton said keeping up the 18-hole course is much different than pruning a homeowner's lawn.

"If you look at it compared to automobiles, golf course turf is like an Indy car," he said. "We kind of micro-manage."

Still, some fairway tactics can help keep suburban green lush.

Keep It clipped

Want a putting green lawn? You might want to think twice.

Edgerton said Meadowbrook putting greens are double-cut six days a week while tees and fairways are trimmed three weekly.

"The farther you want the greens to putt, the more it takes to maintain," he said. "We mow the greens at an eighth of an inch."

Conversely, the target length for residential lawns is closer to two-three inches, said John Gatti, owner, Michigan Outdoor Services in Northville.

"The biggest mistake people make is you cut it too short," Gatti said. "It kind of burns out. If they keep it a little bit longer, it will hold up and look better."

Newer "bent" grass species have been engineered to withstand the close golf course croppings, Edgerton said.

But whether home grass is sodded or seed-grown, both experts said one mowing a week is ample.

Don't mow wet lawns, Gatti said, and sharpen blades monthly.

Lawn grooming facts

- Lawns absorb airborne pollutants such as soot dust, carbon dioxide noises, meaning less weeds, pollen and allergies

- Water quality is improved and run-off and erosion eliminated when grass is well managed

- Healthy lawns have cooling effects. A block of eight average-sized front yards produces about 70 tons of air conditioning.

- Good lawns increase property value, adding about 7 percent to the value of residential property

Source: www.AMAboutHome.com

"If they don't sharpen it enough it won't make a nice even cut. It will kind of pull it off at the roots and break it," Gatti said.

Water sprinklers are scattered in course greens, Edgerton said, but fairway grass actually is drier than typical lawns.

Merchants work together to improve downtown

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

This is the fifth installment in a six-part series looking at how downtown Northville business owners are employing low-cost techniques in the high-stakes competition for retail customers.

The gown fitted by Elizabeth's Bridal Manor was perfect, but the bra beneath wasn't quite right.

LaCorsetiere to the rescue.

"She would hand deliver a more suitable bra, even on a Saturday,"

Elizabeth Clancy said of lingerie store owner, Louise Miglio.

Cooperation like that among Northville businesses is what will keep commerce healthy, said Clancy, who has expanded her South Main Street store three times in 16 years.

"I think it's essential in order to survive in a small town," she said. "I patronize these businesses I refer these people to so I know first-hand the quality of merchandise and service."

Miglio is an expert fitter, Clancy said. She also sends customers across the street to Veronica's Closet.

"We need each other," Clancy said. "But I don't refer them just because they're in Northville. They're good, they're a cut above."

"The bulk of my business is based on referrals,"

Cross promotion critical

Lingerie at LaCorsetiere, outfit at VanDam's, jewelry at Dancing Eye Gallery, shoes at Sole Sisters and a smart jacket at Open & Clothed — a walk within a single downtown block can cover a shopper top to bottom.

Ideally, downtown Northville merchants would outfit patrons that way. Some say it works that way; others say it doesn't.

"It's all about bringing people into downtown Northville," said Golubovic, who opened in March 2004. "The merchants need to pull together."

"It's crucial we get people from Northville."

Downtown shoppers are frustrated by the lack of consistency in product offerings, Golubovic said. Tenants signed to leases to bring in traffic often bring in the wrong kind of traffic, she said.

Golubovic said her clientele would not shop at the nearby re-sale shops and vice versa, she said.

"It's almost like a small-town mentality," she said. "That is a concern for the retailers because rent ain't cheap — it's almost comparable to Birmingham."

Golubovic, who last month opened a second store in Birmingham, said merchants there are expert at cooperation for business' and customers' sake. Northville retailers need to cross-promote more, she said, like when Chocolates by Renee provided truffles during Veronica's Closet fashion shows.

Golubovic said the number of restaurants she can steer customers to for lunch dwindled as they cut hours to maintain profitability.

"If that downtown area doesn't do something to turn itself around — the merchants are hurting — the values of those homes are going to go down."

Peaceful co-existence

On Center Street, Sole Sisters owner Lauren Beras has a rosier forecast.

"Out here it's been a completely different experience for me," she said, calling Northville's retail atmosphere more like fictional television town Mayberry R.F.D. than other cities in which she's worked.

Beras said she purposely merchandised her store not to overlap her neighbors when she opened in November.

"I wanted them to be happy I was here, not feel like I had a competing product," she said. "All the other merchants have embraced me."

The Open and Clothed staff in particular point patrons across Center, she said.

"They're in that shop because they're open and established, then they send them across the street."

Beras tries to return the favor, she said, sending customers in search of dyed-to-match shoes to La Corsetiere.

"It's all about bringing people into downtown Northville. The merchants need to pull together."

Veronica Golubovic
Owner, Veronica's Closet

The people who shop downtown comprise a loyal core clientele, Beras said, who base their acceptance of a new business on merchant perception and referrals.

"It's been vital, for not only my existence, my thriving existence," she said. "They want to know who the new girl or guy is. They want to know if the other shops like them. That endorsement is priceless."

Maureen Johnston can be reached at (248) 349-1700, ext. 103, or via e-mail at mjohnston@ht.homecomm.net.

Talking teamwork

Local merchants are investing in a six-week "Where's Wooliam?" advertising campaign, hoping to herd customers in search of the oversized, stuffed lamb to shop downtown.

While Northville Record readers tracking the Pendleton Shop mascot's location earn a chance for a downtown gift certificate, business owners hope to boost retail traffic.

The Northville Central

Business Association bought the ads, a recent example of cooperative marketing efforts. The group, host of last month's Flower Days, also recently launched a First Fridays gallery walk and a "We're Open" campaign extending hours Sundays and Thursday nights.

The dozens of storefronts comprising the Main and Center downtown shopping district offer a range of products, unique and complementary to their neighbors' wares.

Up next: Part VI

The final part of this six-week series will look at how some businesses insist on going their own way, bypassing peer pressures of the day.

BLADERUNNER: making the green no easy task

"You really do not want a very lush color," he said. "We try to keep the playing field fast, dry."

Even with home lawns, though, pooled water can rupture plant cells and damage the grass.

Water lawns in mornings or evenings for best absorption, Gatti said, and leave some clippings for nutrients — if the they're not too long.

Maintain it

Sprayed by licensed pesticide handlers through computerized devices, plant protectors are critical for golf greens.

"It's done once every 10 days at a very light rate," Edgerton said. "We call it spoon-feeding."

While golf courses typically apply fungicides to thwart pink and gray snow mold, Edgerton said weeds are the bigger problems for home lawns.

When fertilizing, he recommends the "holiday tip."

Around Memorial Day, apply a crab grass preventer. Use a grub controller by Independence Day.

Labor Day is ideal for weed and feeds, while a dormant fertilizer is due before Thanksgiving.

Worried your lawncare budget might be growing faster than your actual lawn?

Consider this: high-end golf courses budget up to $800,000 annually for lawn maintenance, Edgerton said, but name brand fertilizers like Scotts do the trick on home lawns.

Jill Rosales, co-owner of Northville's Champion Sprinklers & Landscaping, also recommends aerating once or twice a year.

Small, finger-like soil plugs are pulled out by machine at intervals.

"It opens up the soil to let the air in, to let the nutrients, the rain, just everything," Rosales said. "It looks like you had a bunch of ducks in your yard, but it's very healthy."

Homeowners starting from scratch should make sure the sod's soil color matches natural earth, Edgerton said.

In Northville, sub-soil is typically brown sand or a clay-base.

"I ended up seeding," Edgerton said. "That's probably the best method, if you're patient. You don't have that soil change."

"I ended up seeding. That's probably the best method, if you're patient. You don't have that soil change."

Edgerton said with proper maintenance — and minus foot traffic and swinging clubs — keeping your own lawn impeccable could be easier than an approach shot from the rough.

Downtown: play nice

Amid city development, one lingering concern: 'Can't we all just get along?'

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Lisa Malpede knows from corporate and personal experience people can be resistant to new ideas.

The five-year city resident said downtown Northville now faces critical decisions about its future: unite and flourish or divide and perish.

"Being part of a community, you have to take the good with the bad," she said. "For whatever reason, it's just not positive right now."

"We need to have more emphasis on the positive, rather than on the negative."

But visioning sessions, focus groups and public meetings have been unable to answer one fundamental question: Where does downtown Northville go next?

Truly representative?

Councilman Tom Swigart said consensus is key.

Swigart said an ideal process would invite every resident to attend a town meeting and write on a 3-by-5 card what they think will impact Northville locally, nationally and internationally.

"You will generate a lot of perspectives and every person will be engaged in the meeting," he said. Swigart said he knows that level of participation isn't realistic.

He said he supports hiring a strategic planning consultant who encourages community involvement. Additional experts may also be needed, he said.

But playing nicely in the same sandbox has not always been easy.

Vocal critics have questioned the downtown steering committee's effectiveness and the Northville Development Authority's motives.

Volunteers on both bodies have expressed dismay their credibility was questioned and frustration their report wasn't regarded as a mobilizing plan.

Development authority executive director Lori Ward, who works with both groups, said their common goal is downtown improvement, not necessarily growth.

"Every one of the DDA members has the interests of the community at heart," she said. "They have to live here and see it."

Ward rebuffed the notion that some authority members, because they are downtown property owners, make decisions colored by individual financial interests.

"Clearly the (state legislation) that set this up said they didn't have a conflict — they have a commitment," she said.

Check the tone

Malpede sees progress, albeit slow. She was one of six people who volunteered next week to help select a downtown strategic planning consultant.

"We need to reach consensus," Malpede said. "I believe the effort that's been done has been excellent — I thought that process was outstanding."

"If people want to explore further, with a consultant coming in, that's fine."

That likely will happen. Monday night the council formed a review committee to better determine interview applicants. Proposals are due Monday.

Like Malpede, the Rev. Kent

Up next

The Northville City Council June 20 will interview applicants for the strategic planning role with a goal of appointing one at the regular 7:30 p.m. meeting.

The firm selected will consider a retail market study completed in November by the Birmingham-based Gibbs Planning Group and the downtown steering committee's "Northville 2010" report.

The task, estimated to cost the city $50-100,000: help develop a plan that improves the physical and economic health of downtown Northville.

Clise of First Presbyterian Church is concerned about divisive commentary.

"I'm seeing too many instances public leaders and volunteers and their motives are being questioned," he said. "The recall of the mayor, the nasty things said about (Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church)."

"Everyone has to assume everyone is doing the best they can."

The change in tone seems to accompany Northville's growing wealth, Clise said.

"As the economic stakes become higher, we get more unpleasant with each other," he said. "It's not the way to go."

POLICE REPORT

Man misuses camera

A man snapping photos of women in a township shopping complex parking lot June 1 was stopped by police.

Witnesses said at 12:13 p.m., the 40-year-old Northville male was parked in a silver truck near the Loehmann's store at 17615 Haggerty Road. When police examined the man's digital camera, they found 14 pictures of fully clothed women's backsides.

The suspect told police he also had taken photos near a CVS and lingerie store in Northville, and that he had been convicted of criminal sexual misconduct in 1983.

After deleting the pictures, police ordered the man to cease his behavior and sent a copy of the report to city of Northville Police.

Naked man eludes cops

Northville Township Police responded to a report of indecent exposure May 31 but weren't able to catch the male suspect.

Police said a 34-year-old Northville Township female first saw the man loitering in a parking lot at 11 p.m. from her Northridge condominium window. After 30 minutes, she said the man was looking into her window from 20 feet away.

A responding officer said the suspect fled the scene naked, clothes in hand, heading west near Seven Mile Road. Police followed by patrol car but lost sight of the suspect due to steep terrain. The case was closed.

Students suspended for graffiti

Three Meads Mill Middle School students were suspended after reportedly drawing inappropriate graffiti in a Winchester Elementary School classroom, township police said.

The trio of boys reportedly entered the fifth grade classroom the evening of Friday, May 20, following a school art fair. On the room's blackboard and whiteboards, they wrote phrases including "I watch you in your sleep" and drew a picture of male genitals.

One suspect's sister told the school principal, whom police said gave all three boys a four-day suspension for violating the student conduct code.

All three boys had previously attended Winchester, police said, and one 13-year-old had a history of trouble with the teacher whose room was targeted.

Fireworks explode at Meijer

After setting off explosives at Meijer, three teenagers fled the Northville Township scene, police said. No injuries were listed.

At 10:42 p.m. May 27, the male trio reportedly pushed a shopping cart filled with fireworks and a jar of curry pepper into the store. After detonating the explosives and sending the pepper airborne, the teens ran.

Witnesses reported a dark-colored getaway van, but the trio wasn't found and police closed the case.

Golf equipment stolen

Three township residents reported golf bags and clubs stolen from their garages late last month.

At 10:27 a.m. May 27, a 67-year-old reported $2,025 in stolen equipment from his home in the 47000 block of Blue Heron Drive South. Items reportedly went missing May 18 or 19.

The night of May 29, two thefts were reported in the 17000 block of Stonebrook Drive. One victim told police $1,940 in equipment had been snagged while the family was at a graduation party. The other, a 44-year-old female, reported $1,500 in missing golf gear, along with two mountain bikes.

The bikes were found the next day in the 17000 block of Oak Hill Drive, police said.

Dispatcher joins force as patrol officer

Randall: 'It's the only thing I could ever imagine myself doing'

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Dave Randall is learning the ropes with three senior city of Northville police officers.

The 22-year-old joined the department last month, bringing the patrol ranks to 11 officers. A former part-time dispatcher for the city department, Randall recently completed the Schoolcraft College police academy and will wind up a criminal justice bachelor's degree this year.

The 16-week academy training covered all the job responsibilities, Randall said, including weapons, driving, searches, arrest procedure and more.

For 15 weeks, Randall will ride along with experienced peers, learning on-the-job procedures from officer safety and prisoner handling to communication and report writing.

"They space it out over three officers so you learn different ways of doing it," Randall said.

His 20 months as a dispatcher and police clerk are coming in handy, he said.

"It gave me experience on both sides of it," he said. "Being out there, I know what's going on here."

Those early responsibilities also convinced Randall he was on the right career path.

"It's the only thing I could ever imagine myself doing," he said. His ideal job: helping people and the excitement of never knowing what's going to happen next.

Randall said Northville's low-crime pace is fine with him.

"There's a lot of community service type calls," he said. "The kids drinking or the drunk driving — those are the most common."

"I like the small-town feel of it. It's a very friendly place to work —

Dragon Eyes

Local marine stationed in Iraq takes pride in 'saving lives'

By Angela Harris
SPECIAL WRITER

After graduating from Northville High School four years ago, U.S. Cpl. Jeremy Carter wanted to change his life.

Today, he's one of three Marines working on the Dragon Eyes, an unmanned air vehicle, in Iraq.

The Dragon Eyes are about three feet by three feet and are too small for landing gear, causing them to do "controlled crash landings" and return "shot up," brother, Micheal, 19, said.

This is where Carter from the 4 Echelon Section, Electronics Maintenance Platoon, Maintenance Detachment, Combat Logistics Regiment 25, 2D Force Service Support Group comes into play.

With the help of Sgt. Patrick Broughal of N.Y. and Cpls. Harley Marson III of N.C. Carter provides the repairs to the Dragon Eyes after they crash, whether it is to the body of the vehicles or moving the electronics from an unrepairable unit to a new one.

The Dragon Eyes are used for surveillance and saving lives by notifying the Marines of any enemy activity in the area before they enter the area.

"It literally save lives, and that is what is important," Carter said.

When he first entered the military, Carter was assigned to work on computer and communication hardware repair and was working with fiberoptics in Iraq.

However, in March, Carter was assigned to work on the Dragon Eyes after the military did not renew the contract with the private contractor that had been repairing them.

Carter began his military career as a Marine with his best friend, Andy Meeonis, after college and small jobs were not working out and they wanted to do something with their lives.

"We wanted to enter the hardest one," Meeonis, 19, said. "We wanted to go four the best one — the one with the best training."

Carter agreed.

"I have always looked up to veterans throughout my life, and even though some people may not have agreed with whatever conflict was going on in the world, we are part of a bigger nation than ourselves," he said. "Those are the type of people that support our country in the best of their abilities."

His father Ron added, "He wanted to make a contribution and this kind of fulfills his ambitions of being there (in Iraq). He's making his mark and he's saving us a lot of money, doing a good job, saving lives and assisting the guys on the ground." He is scheduled to return home between Aug. 15 and Sept. 30, but hopes to be home by his birthday — Aug. 27 — after being deployed to Iraq on Feb. 26. Carter is stationed at Al-Taqaddum, which is 60 miles west of Baghdad.

Making math add up

Students help others while learning

By Victoria Sadlocha
RECORD STAFF WRITER

It started as a simple fund raiser. But quickly, the Winchester Elementary School math-a-thon, held on behalf of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., started teaching students meaningful lessons about giving.

"At times, didn't you feel tingly inside?" student George Cholack asked his teacher.

Cholack was referring to the unexplainable emotion overwhelming him each time he learned how much more the school raised for the sick children and their families at the research hospital.

Every day the enthusiastic fourth grader would go to the office and announce the day's donation total. He was the only one other than Winchester teacher, Marc Van Poperin, who knew the tally before the broadcast.

The grand total announced by Cholack: $13,534. "It is outrageous, I can't even fathom that," Van Poperin said. "It really makes you proud to be a teacher."

"I am so proud they did such a good job. It was definitely a labor of love. This has been the one of the most gratifying experiences of my teaching career."

The Winchester fourth-grade teacher organized the initiative, involving students in grades first through fifth along with fellow teachers and administrators.

Third-grade student Peter Fontana had the highest student contribution total, donating almost $600 to the cause.

"I wanted to help people at St. Jude's," Fontana said.

His parents helped by receiving matching contributions from their employers.

Van Poperin said many families and members of the community helped the students attain the lofty tally.

To earn money, students successfully completed grade-appropriate math problems.

St. Jude Children's Hospital provided each child with the choice of a math workbook or computer game.

The math computer game was the hands-down favorite, according to kids.

"I thought it was really neat," Cholack said. "It was both fun and I was learning while I was doing it. I wanted to do it first when I got home before I did anything else."

St. Jude

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, founded by the late entertainer Danny Thomas, is the first institution established for the sole purpose of conducting basic and clinical research into catastrophic childhood diseases, mainly cancer.

It is the largest childhood cancer research center in the world in terms of the number of patients enrolled on research protocols and successfully treated.

The hospital treats about 160 patients every day on an outpatient basis and maintains 58 inpatient beds.

Source: St. Jude Children's Research Hospital

The kids had about two weeks to work on the problems and collect pledges. No class time was allotted for fund-raising math solving.

"Once we told kids what was going and the money was going to kids, they were on board," Van Poperin said. "It really hit home with some of these kids. It opened their eyes to outside of Northville."

Participating students received certificates of participation, T-shirts, duffle bags and admission tickets to Six Flags depending on contribution level.

And the grand prize: portable compact disc player. "I learned two things from this," Cholack said. "I learned that I can help people all around the world, not even just the sick and ... I forgot the second thing."

There are a lot of empty desks as "shared" teacher Anne Marie Turnate begins her art lesson for the combined third and fourth grade classes of St. Paul's Lutheran School. The two classes normally have a total of six students, and two were absent this day. Turnate is shared by school districts within the Wayne County area.

"When I came here I thought 'Goodness sakes, why are we not busting at the seams?' Especially when I hear that it is not a general issue like the enrollment is down all over or there are no kids in Northville. They are overcrowded."

St. Paul's offers schooling for area residents

St. Paul's Lutheran School "motor mom" Sarah Lucas helps kindergarten student Grace Wennerberg with some of her fine motor skills on a recent Tuesday morning. Lucas and other St. Paul's moms volunteer their time to help out with the physical education program.

We're right in town. We're behind Hillier's Market. We're down the street from Allen Terrace. Carl Hall finds himself repeating the same mantras over and over again. Hall, principal of St. Paul's Lutheran School, feels divine intervention may be needed to spread one single message: His school is a viable Northville education option.

A place on the hill

On the downtown path less traveled, St. Paul's is a hidden afterthought to those who manage to drive down High Street, past Randolph. The school opened its doors to seven students in 1896 and now has nine classrooms, a full-size gymnasium, locker rooms, two outdoor playgrounds and ample office space. The 25,000-square-foot building is home to 70 students, six teachers, two teacher aides, one principal and an administrative staff of two. Classes are sparse, teacher-pupil ratios are in the single digits and students are taught a secular curriculum with a Christian perspective. Rooms still smell of chalk, have desks with room for books and take adults back to grammar school days. "We are sitting here with a beautiful facility and a great program," Hall said. The ongoing challenge: letting parents know.

Ample space

Five eager students crowd around art teacher Anne Marie Turnate's desk, ready for their art lesson. It's Tuesday. Normally the class is bigger, but today, one-sixth of the class is out with the flu. At St. Paul's, where six students account for the entire third- and fourth-grade combined class, one missing student amounts to an outbreak. Grades are combined and class sizes are small. The largest class is the first- and second-grade combined class of 20; the smallest is the third- and fourth-grade combined class and the kindergarten. Each have six children. "It is great. I love it," Turnate said. "I've actually had all my kids for three years. Some of the schools I go to have 32 or more students." Turnate is a shared teacher through Livonia Public Schools, a resource St. Paul's uses for art, computers and physical education. Sharing specialized teachers with public school districts is one of many services Hall believes parents don't know about parochial schools.

Myriad of misconceptions

As the parochial principal sits in his office surrounded by classical music, he reflects on why the Christian school has only 70 students. He settles on misconceptions. Hall said parents believe smaller, private schools don't provide services public school districts offer. He said, for example, speech services, are provided at St. Paul's and are the same services offered to public school children. By law, students in a parochial setting are entitled to the same services as the public schools, he said. Answers to other misconceptions Hall said he hears often are: Yes, all teachers at the school are certified; you don't have to be Lutheran; the school offers a latch-key program; children participate in community activities and have assemblies; children go on field trips; and bus service is provided to Northville residents, but you don't have to live in Northville to attend. "When I came here I thought 'Goodness sakes, why are we not busting at the seams?'" he said. "Especially when I hear that it is not a general issue like the enrollment is down all over or there are no kids in Northville. They are overcrowded."

The student

St. Paul's graduate Jacob Boehm welcomed prospective parents, Todd and Lynn Brown into the hallway of the Christian school during a recent open house. "I really enjoyed my time here," Boehm told the couple. Boehm, now a student at Lutheran High School in Westland, said he misses his former school and enjoyed the intimacy the school offered. He said the transition into the larger Christian High School wasn't hard, despite what people may think of the leap into bigger schools. "Never have I had a student graduate who can't cope," Hall said. "It is just the opposite. They do fantastic." Hall said students need self-confidence, self-discipline, respect for others and a good work ethic to succeed in larger settings — all attributes a small school setting supplies. "Some of the nicest compliments I've ever received are 'your kids are just nice people,'" he said.

The basics

St. Paul's operates from one philosophy: focus on the fundamentals and larger problems will never arise. "Chewing gum and passing notes are the problems at St. Paul's," Hall said. "We are still at the kind of naive stage." The principal credits the school philosophy and intimate setting for the absence of other issues, like bullying. "Why is it people don't usually get along? Because they don't understand," Hall said. "Prejudice is all rooted with a lack of understanding and lack of empathy and when you are in a small class size you are going to get to know the person, and you're not always going to be best friends, but you will be much more tolerant and understanding." At St. Paul's, the school day includes religion class and every morning begins with devotion. Students attend chapel service once a week. Classes like art, music, physical education and computers add to the school's core academic classes. "Academically it is good," Hall said. "We are able to reach each student individually, which you can't do in larger situations." School funding is based on St. Paul's Lutheran Church contributions, tuition and registration fees. Annual tuition is $3,000 for residents and $4,000 for nonresidents.

The magnificent seven

Panthers track team is small but talented

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

There's an old sports saying that states it's not the size of the dog in the fight, but the size of the fight in the dog. At St. Paul's Lutheran School, it's the size of the fight in the Panthers that matters. The St. Paul's coed track team, made fourth, fifth and sixth graders, isn't a stunning sight when they show up at a meet. They wear jerseys from the basketball team and mis-matching shorts. Their best athletes don't even have track spikes. But they didn't let it slow them down this year. Seven kids qualified for the regional meet and two of them advanced to the state finals with one placing. Not bad considering there are only seven kids on the entire team. "I'm so proud of these kids," said coach Kevin Grobe. "They've really showed it doesn't matter how many kids are on your team or at your school. It matters how hard you work."

Small in stature ...

The small school doesn't boast its own track. Instead they practice in the yard of the church and then head to the track at Hillside Middle School to run. The Panthers don't mind. They said they're happy to have the generosity of the public school system supporting them. The school was invited to several qualifying track and field meets this year by much larger schools. Some of the teams, said Grobe, had 40-50 kids participating. St. Paul's was much smaller. "I think they probably regretted inviting us in the end," he said. "At times we felt a little out numbered but we focused on doing the fundamentals and doing a good job." Placing in their respective events were Jacob Fairbairn, Zachary Foor, Brooke Peedle and Jenna Abraham. Stuart Tarp didn't compete due to prior commitments.

... Big in talent

With every team there are standouts. For St. Paul's, almost 30 percent of their team earned that recognition. Two athletes. Sixth grader Kristin Tarp qualified for the state finals in the 440-meter dash, the shot put and the long jump. Mitchell Boehm, a fifth grader, qualified in the 440-meter dash, the mile run and the long jump. "I was nervous," Tarp said. "I wasn't sure if I was going to be able to compete. I'm really happy I did as good as I did." And though Tarp didn't earn a medal at the finals, held in Ulica last Saturday, she finished ninth in all three of her events. Tarp said she was proud to represent her little school.

"We showed that just because we're small doesn't mean we're not important."

Heart

Even the smallest of athletes can inspire. Boehm is one of those athletes. Barely 5-feet tall, Boehm showed at the state finals it takes more than fancy Nike track spikes and matching uniforms to be one of the best. It takes heart. Boehm — wearing his basketball jersey and cross-training tennis shoes — was in the final lap of the mile run, pacing himself in 90-plus degree heat. He was in 10th place and fading. As he neared the final turn he felt his stomach churn as the heat waved over him. He vomited. Many athletes would have stopped. They would have taken themselves out of the race and bowed out. Boehm didn't. He kept running. A few steps later he got sick again, but pushed forward. Before he reached the finish line, Boehm overtook two runners and placed eighth. He won a medal. "I never thought I'd make it to the state meet," Boehm said. "I'm glad I did. It was a lot of fun." "Hopefully we'll have a bigger team next year and we'll all do better."

The St. Paul's track team is small, but full of heart.

Honorees

Northville Public Schools education technology coordinator Anne Proulx received this year's award of excellence at the 2005 Michigan Educational Technology Coordinators Conference. For the past eight years, the award has been given to a Michigan kindergarten-12th grade technology coordinator demonstrating true leadership in the field of educational technology for teaching and learning.

Students

Children attending Amerman Elementary School participated in Operation: Phone Home last month as a Memorial Day community service project. The elementary students wrote letters, drew pictures and collected donations for phone cards to send to soldiers in Iraq. More than 100 letters will be shipped along with nearly 200 phone cards.

Merit winners

Northville residents Ben Harpe and Maxwell Working were awarded college-sponsored Merit Scholarship awards through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. The awards are offered to finalists in the National Merit Scholarship Program who will attend the sponsoring college or university. Both students attend Detroit Catholic High School. Harpe will attend Kalamazoo College to study computer science and Working will attend the University of Chicago to study applied physics.

Alicia Raisinghani from Northville High School received a $1,000 college scholarship from Community Financial as part of the institution's 2005 scholarship program, the Community Financial Scholarship Fund. The winners were selected from eligible students who are Community Financial members and will use the funds to attend an accredited post-secondary educational institution. Raisinghani will study business at the University of Pennsylvania.

Presented by Michael S. Rowe, M.D., F.A.C.P., C.C.R.I.

ASTHMA & BODY MASS INDEX

Overweight and obese people may have a greater chance of developing asthma, according to a new study. Risk of asthma increases as body mass index (BMI) rises, says a recently released study of 135,000 Norwegian men and women. Results were published in the American Journal of Epidemiology. Study participants aged 14 to 60 years old were followed for an average of 21 years. Adjustments were made for smoking, education and physical activity. The link between BMI and asthma risk remained consistent regardless of smoking history or education level. In men, asthma risk rose 10 percent for each unit of increased BMI between 25 and 30. In women, the similar value of increased risk was 7 percent. Seeing a specialist trained and experienced in treatment of your specific medical condition can often result in earlier diagnosis and proper treatment. If you have any questions about today's topic, or if you would like to schedule an appointment, call the ALLERGY AND ASTHMA CENTER of MICHIGAN, the caring allergist who gets results. # Saving Sessi with folk rock

Friends hope to pay for dog's surgery through benefit concert

By Kim Kovel
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Nearly two years ago, Lee Hyland fell head over heels for two ladies: his girlfriend, Kelly Ryan, and her pet dog, Sessi. "I was extremely, pleasantly surprised to find out that Sessi was 10 times nicer than Kelly," Hyland said. "She's just a total sweetheart."

When Hyland learned the husky-German shepherd mix needed a pricey surgery to save its rear leg, the former concert booker put his old skills to work.

Now, he's hoping others will be singing Sessi's praises.

Tomorrow night, three local folk rock artists will play downtown Northville's VFW Hall.

At $10 a ticket, most proceeds will go to veterinarians' fees to repair damaged knee ligaments in Sessi's rear right leg.

Another $100-200 will go to the Michigan Humane Society, said Hyland, who lives in Novi.

"This dog is only 4 and she's so fun to have around," said Hyland, 32. "To me this is just about getting a job done."

Ryan, 25, first met her puppy when Sessi was a quivering black ball of fur in a little box.

The Northville resident rendezvoused with a friend to pick up the litter runt from Detroit.

"We met at a gas station," Ryan said. "She was adorable. She was so scared."

Sessi — a shortened form of "Princess" — quickly warmed up to the Ryans, curling up in family members' beds and eagerly cleaning out yogurt containers.

"She loves to play tug of war," said Ryan. "She didn't cause one problem."

A few months ago, though, Sessi began hobbling. The couple at first suspected a cramp or toenail problems.

A veterinarian pinned down the problem: a torn anterior cruciate ligament.

Common in larger dogs, the injury meant bones around Sessi's knee were unhinged and sliding. Veterinarians said damage could spread as the dog puts pressure on its other legs.

"She's a tripod, basically," Hyland said. "It's going to proceed to become worse and worse."

A surgery that replaces the ligaments with man-made material could cost at least $1,200 — and as much $2,000.

"The estimate changes the longer you wait," Ryan said. "The longer we take, the more damage that's happening."

With Hyland holding down several odd jobs and Ryan working at a restaurant, the duo said the sum was more than they could afford alone.

Hyland first turned to Robin Horlock, a fellow Novi resident, friend and musician.

Horlock, whose band plays regularly in the area, said he jumped at the chance to donate his music equipment and talent for the evening.

"She's just a cute dog," he said. "It's friends. It's a good thing to do."

A folk rock artist named Justin Lee agreed to pitch in, along with members of an acoustic outfit called Baked Potato.

Hyland devised fliers with a photo he'd snapped of Sessi wearing the lining of a welder's hat.

"There's a possibility that the dog will be making a guest appearance," Hyland said. "There's always an overhead (but nobody's taking a penny."

After the surgery, Hyland said Sessi will need to be kept caged and stay off of her healing leg.

"It'll be rough, he said, but worth it to have both his sweethearts back at full capacity."

"I'm totally grateful," Ryan

$25 Reward Sir Wooliam

The Pendleton Shop mascot you've seen in the window is still missing. Help us find him!

Last week Wooliam showed up at Northville Candle & Gifts on Center Street but before we could catch him he was gone again.

But where? We think Wooliam was off to experience all the great restaurants, shops, concerts, galleries etc. in Downtown Northville. We know he doesn't have a photographic memory, so he'll probably want to record all the images he sees, whether on film or perhaps digitally.

Name the business where you think Wooliam was headed to this week and you could win a $25 Gift Certificate to Downtown Northville businesses. Let us know by 9am Wednesday, June 15th.

Mail your answer to: Sir Wooliam, c/o Northville Record

104 West Main St., Northville, MI 48167

One winner will be drawn from all correct entries each week.

NORTHVILLE

Help a hound

A benefit concert will be held tomorrow to help fund surgery for a Northville Township woman's dog and to aid the Michigan Humane Society.

Sessi, a 4-year-old female husky-German shepherd mix, has a torn cruciate leg ligament, owners said, and surgery could upwards of $2,000.

Featuring acoustic sets by the Robin Horlock Band, Justin Lee and Baked Potato, the concert's doors open at 9 p.m. June 10 at the VFW Hall, 438 S. Main St. The show lasts until 12:30 p.m.

Ages 21 and older are welcome. The entry fee is $10, with all proceeds not covering the venue going toward the two causes.

To learn more, visit www.robinhorlock.com.

New childcare center denied

A childcare and preschool centered pitched by developers was turned down May 26 by Northville Township's planning commission.

Business owner Paul Thiel proposed "A2Z Tots" for the northeast corner of Pierson and Seven Mile roads. The project fit land zoning, planners said, but developers wanted variances incompatible with the area.

Sixteen residents wrote letters of opposition, while 23 voiced complaints at the meeting. Concerns included noise, increased traffic, safety problems with an existing bus stop and maintenance of Pierson, a privately owned road.

Commissioners unanimously denied approval in a 7-0 vote.

'Three Generations' gets boost

Plans for "Three Generations Plaza," proposed for the southeast corner of Eight Mile and Haggerty roads, received a planning commission nod May 26.

In a 7-0 decision, township commissioners approved revised final plans for restaurants and shops pitched by John Pastor, property owner and state representative for Livonia.

Final details are to be handled by township staff, commissioners decided.

Upcoming meetings

Northville Township governing bodies will meet on the following dates:

• June 15: zoning board of appeals, 7:30 p.m. regular meeting

• June 16: board of trustees, 7:30 p.m. regular meeting

• June 21: planning commission, 6:30 p.m. special meeting; the agenda will include revisiting the planned unit development for the former Northville Psychiatric Hospital property and discussion on the township's master plan for land use, poised for its five-year update

• June 28: planning commission, 7:30 p.m. regular meeting

All meetings take place in the community room at Northville Township Hall, 44405 Six Mile Road. For more information or for agendas, call (248) 348-5800, ext. 10492.

Solid waste pick-up

Through a contract with Northville Township, Painter & Ruthenberg, Inc. picks up residents' rubbish, recyclables and compostables.

The $14 per month compostables fee is identified on water bills. With any collection problems, call Inkster-based Painter & Ruthenberg at (313) 561-0303.

Mind West Nile Virus

As weather warms, officials are warning residents to take precautions to protect against mosquitoes, which could carry the West Nile Virus.

Wearing protective clothing, applying insect repellent containing DEET, mowing tall grass, draining standing water and replacing broken screens are among preventative measures.

More information is available via the Michigan Department of Community Health. Call (888) 668-0869, visit www.michigan.gov/mdch or pick up a "What is West Nile Virus?" pamphlet at Northville Township Hall, 44405 Six Mile Road.

Safely dump hazardous items

Mark your calendars, township residents: A household hazardous waste collection will be held 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Aug. 6.

Sponsored the Wayne County Department of Environment, the event will be located at the Redford Public Services building, 12200 Beach Daly Road, south of I-96.

For more information, call (734) 326-3936.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Help Seedlings Braille Books

Northville Township's Barnes & Noble Booksellers will host book fair 9 a.m.-11 p.m. June 18 to benefit non-profit Seedlings Braille Books for Children, based in Livonia.

At 2 p.m., "Corduroy the Bear" will host a special story time about the world of Braille in the store's children's corner. Kids who attend will receive a Braille bookmark.

Also, Katie Keel, a 13-year-old Redford Township resident who has been blind from birth, will read Corduroy's story in Braille and share other Seedling books. Those presenting a special voucher on June 18 will have a percentage of their purchase donated to Seedlings. Funds will produce children's Braille books.

Vouchers will be available at a Seedlings informational table in the store. Call (734) 427-8552 to receive vouchers by mail or e-mail.

Barnes & Noble is located at 17111 Haggerty Road, just north of Six Mile Road. For more information, visit www.seedlings.org.

Mainvilles leave legacy of community support

By Maureen Johnston
RECORD STAFF WRITER

Glance at a street sign, grab a paper from the local newsstand, visit Northville's new senior community center: the Mainville legacy surrounds Northville residents.

The late Leo and June Mainville established a trust fund to indefinitely share their fortune with their long-time hometown.

Theirs is a story of a locally developed patent leading to prosperity, then philanthropy.

Since June's death in 1999, about $65,000 per year has been donated to various projects and agencies, said trust administrator and local accountant Lee Holland. Leo preceded her in death in 1976.

Many gifts

Last year, the Mainville Trust committed $20,000 toward the renovation of the 303 W. Main St. senior center.

"It has allowed us to really upgrade the interior, to give it a warm, living room, comfortable, friendly interior," said senior advisory council chairman Jim Nield, who supervised the center's 2004 renovation project. "The furnishings, carpet, fireplace — those kinds of things make a big difference in how the seniors feel when they come in."

Everyone benefits from the Mainville contribution, Nield said.

"They designated money for these kinds of causes in the community. I think that's wonderful," he said. "I hope others do that — that are alive today — tag a portion of their estate to go to their community."

"It's a nice legacy, a nice extension of what the Mainvilles did when they were alive, continuing to contribute."

In addition to the senior center, Northville beneficiaries of the Mainville estate include the city's senior public housing Allen Terrace, the Northville District Library and local church building funds.

The Mainvilles did not have children, Holland said. June set aside an inheritance for surviving family members, before directing him to invest the rest, he said.

Local contributions

The Southeastern Michigan Foundation, holder of Mainville's trust, each year sets aside 5 percent of the endowment for charitable gifts. Holland and Mainville attorney Dennis Phenev each year decide which local causes will benefit.

"For these reasons, Dennis and I refer to June's gift as the gift that keeps giving," he said.

June Mainville liked the idea of a trust that could help fund community projects on the investment proceeds of her inheritance, Holland said.

"It's almost as if she continued living," he said. "It's interesting. She was very frugal, but when it came to charities, she was very generous."

From the 1940s through the 1970s, the couple was a downtown fixture, Holland said. Leo in his pharmacy and June working both there and at the now defunct Brader's department store on Main Street.

They made their fortune in Northville, where they moved in 1940.

A pharmacist by profession, Leo purchased Northville Drugs, the building today housing the Kitchen Witch. The couple resided in the apartment above the 134 E. Main St. store.

Mainville's historical station was secured by his concoction of a horse liniment used by Northville Downs horsemen. He also sold the liniment over the counter, used by those who suffered muscular aches and pains.

Later, after Leo's death, Northville Laboratories, Inc., bought the formula from June, along with the rights to its registered Stenz trademark, Holland said.

Profits plus proceeds from the sale of the pharmacy and downtown building helped create a foundation for the Mainvilles, Holland said.

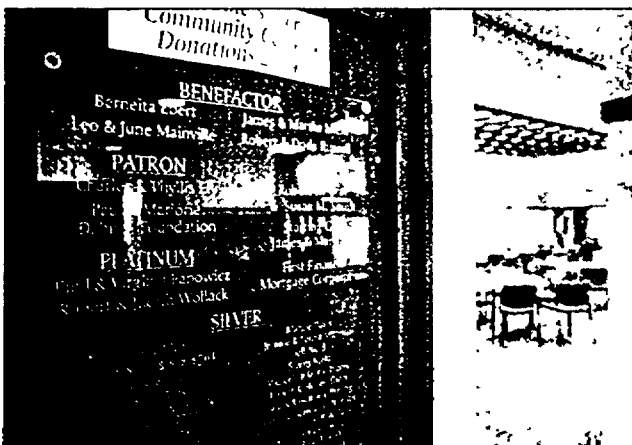

"She really like the idea of getting income from the trust for the rest of her life and leaving the principal to some of her and our favorite charities," he said.

"She really like the idea of avoiding all capital gains taxes from the sale of the building."

Northville accountant Lee Holland points to one of the examples of how the Mainville Foundation has benefitted the city: standardized newspaper vending machines.

Leo and June Mainville are listed on a plaque honoring donors for the Northville Senior Community Center where the meeting room named in their honor.

Public payout

Holland said Mainville was surprised at the size of her holdings, about $3 million. She liked the concept of creating a legacy, he said.

In 2003, investment interest paid for the $20,000 black multi-box newspaper containers in front of the Michigan Gift Mart and the Main Street gazebo.

In his memoirs

The Mainvilles appear in one chapter in "Boiled Peanuts and Buckeyes," Lee Holland's autobiography.

The career accountant worked steadily three years to compile the story of his life, including his administration of the Mainville trust, which he handles for free.

The 350-page work is named for the snacks he sold in Alabama and his college mascot. While vacationing in Florida five years ago, he began sketching the 54 vignettes that became the core stories.

The husband, dad, former township treasurer, little league football coach and local businessman includes experiences since his move to Northville in 1970.

will be willing to step forward to pay for it.

"I think Mrs. Mainville wanted that done."

'Kid Lunch Theater' set for summer debut

By Michael Melvin
SPECIAL WRITER

The Royal family is in peril. Swords are clashing, fire is spreading across the land and there's a dragon on the loose. No, this isn't the next Hollywood epic looking to usurp Lord of the Rings. It's the latest production being held at Genitti's Kid

Lunch Theater.

Currently playing, "The Dragon of Elderberry Castle," is the tale of a young princess placed in emotional peril when an escaped dragon thwarts her extravagantly planned birthday celebration.

The production is an interactive comedy allowing children to get on stage and sing, dance, or say an important line of dialogue with the cast.

"The kids love the shows," said Laura Genitti, organizer of the productions, "and it's good for Genitti's because we get to have children come to the restaurant and experience the atmosphere while becoming more involved in the shows themselves."

Audience members are fed a lunch consisting of soup, pasta, salad, baked chicken, lemonade and brownies — a welcomed culinary alternative for any kid who's tired of peanut butter and jelly.

The show will be playing at 11:30 a.m. almost every Saturday and Sunday during the summer. The production runs about two hours, and costs $16.95 for adults and $14.95 for children to attend.

Michael Melvin is a journalism student at Albion College and a Northville Record intern.

Also playing: Theatre Summer Camp

Summer Theatre Day Camp begins June 13 for children 8-12 at the Marquis Theatre. There will be five sessions running two weeks for the summer. The cost is $75 dollars per session and enrollments are now being accepted. Call 248-349-8110 for more information.

A fond farewell to good sports

As the final seconds pass on the 2004-05

Northville school sports season, kudos to the many players, coaches, organizers, boosters — and yes, even officials — who practiced good sportsmanship.

No local team this year finished its season with an unblemished record. There were no state champions, no national rankings.

That's OK. What's most important is that players and coaches — and parents, prone to speak when they should listen — handled themselves in a way befitting an athletic season's most noble prize: sportsmanship.

We tell children from an early age what's most important is how they play the game, not the final outcome. Too often, the game then starts and what we've preached gets lost amid break-neck action.

No student-athlete this year finished the season all-world. A few were recognized statewide; others even nationally.

But those distinctions will fade one day. What will remain is a legacy of how players and coaches behaved between the white lines, on the practice field and in the classroom.

A thousand unrecorded victories were no doubt tallied this past year when no one was looking — players lifting teammates up, during practice, others helping classmates with schoolwork after a tough loss.

These are important intangibles. They tally teamwork.

Trite? Maybe today. But not tomorrow. Soon enough, the faces of youth wash away, and student-athletes become parents themselves. Or coaches, boosters — and yes, even officials.

What they remember about their playing careers, and what they eventually pass along, is shaped today by parents and coaches whose job more than winning is to set a good example and be a role model worth emulating, in good times and bad.

Because if that's not our main objective, then we've already lost the most important game of all.

And so now I say goodbye

"Hi! This is Kim Kovel with the Novi News. And the Northville Record.

"Well, actually, both."

Call it a split personality.

It all began a year ago to the date, when my first full-time journalism job as "swing reporter" for the two newspapers began.

Since then, during countless interviews, the clumsy greeting has slipped more than twice.

But starting June 13, I'll have a different greeting — along with new places, names and faces to get to know.

I'm moving on to report with the Metro Parent Publishing Group in Southfield. And Ferndale.

Well, actually, they're moving in July.

Call it another nomadic journey.

Then again, that's why I picked this field. In the constant change, there's always fresh detail to absorb and personality to discover, topped by the challenge of getting it into accurate, coherent form by print deadline.

Though it's only been 12 months, working dual beats has unleashed a world of lessons.

Deciphering the world of government was a biggie. New municipal buildings, a public safety dispatch merger and the rise and fall of development plans for 415 acres were among Northville Township's hot issues.

In November, the thrills and pitfalls of covering local elections and making endorsements hit home. Flushing out key issues and people was the ongoing objective.

Late night Novi Planning Commission meetings shed light on zoning, sewer systems, consent judgments, driveway egresses, PROs ... ah yes, and somehow making the stuff readable.

Driving everything were scores of fascinating folks. Businesses owners were pitted against unending road construction odds. Authors, actors and arborists shared their stories, along with farmers, ministers, bikers and cancer survivors.

Whether competing in "Olympics" or frolicking on stage in leotards, senior citizens proved there's plenty for me to look forward to some 40 years from now.

I've shared in people's loss, celebrated their joy and knocked on plenty of doors.

Robberies and runaway horses alike kept me on the ball — plus generous portions of chocolate and caffeine.

Naturally, there was much I still hoped to do. As an admitted history and preservation buff, I was geared up to explore more of Novi's past in a monthly series forged in January.

The future of the former Northville Psychiatric Hospital property was another. Along with tax base potential, the site also hosts 28 deer and plenty of untold tales.

Several sorts of roots still flourish in Novi and Northville Township, and it heartens me to see residents who embrace that.

During my first days on the job, a fellow reporter suggested I always fully listen to what people have to say and resist zipping through questions. That's where the story is.

I've striven to do so, and I'm grateful and indebted to all those who've opened up and helped me along the way.

No matter where the future leads, my plans are to keep that up.

And catch up on my reading, restore an old theater and get back to belting out Broadway tunes onstage.

Call it a road with lots to come. I'll be busy, but fortunately I'll have two personalities in tow.

CITY OF NORTHVILLE

It's time to move forward

The Northville City Council is moving ahead with an important phase in the downtown's development. Those resistant to the process without offering a viable alternative ignore the fact change is inevitable. By seeking an expert to identify residents' common objectives and offer advice about how those objectives can be achieved, the council is taking an appropriate step toward protecting the community's long-term viability. Get on with it.

NORTHVILLE TOWNSHIP

Tight grip needed on costs

During a Tuesday study session, Northville Township trustees discussed several cost-sensitive issues. While the board agreed to spend $5,000 to maintain buildings at its future Thayer's Corner Park, it left unanswered questions about a potential $40,000 barn moving and about $6,000 to draft plans for Beck Road median landscaping. Up against dwindling state funds and a 2006 parks millage renewal, the township was wise in holding off on quick judgments. When it comes to recreational costs, though, getting residents' input is still critical — and the township's Web site could be one source.

NORTHVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Education alternatives abound

Many parents in Northville move to this community for the school district. Rated as one of the top in the state according to data collected by State Rep. John Stewart (R-Plymouth), parents treasure the thought of their children receiving a top education. But when the dream diminishes, as it has with some Ridge Wood families learning their children will not attend kindergarten at the neighborhood school, there are other options. Parochial private and home schooling education offer viable alternatives in Northville. The schools aren't free; they are in the community.

NORTHVILLE ATHLETICS

Better officials needed

Unfortunately, questionable officiating helped determine the final outcome of Northville's 8-6 victory over cross-town rival Novi last Saturday in the district tournament. The Michigan High School Athletics Association should next year make certain officials and umpires have the necessary training and support to ensure athletic contests are decided by players — and not by vexing calls which leave players, coaches and parents scrambling for a rule book.

Kids need more than 'cool parents'

Northville kids are risking a criminal record, health consequences and stunted emotional growth — all for a swig of beer, a hit of ecstasy and a line of coke.

We say: they're only experimenting. If they don't do it at home, they'll do it elsewhere, or I did it at that age.

Why not: I am the grown-up and I prohibit it; you can make your own decision when you turn 21; you are on your own with the consequences if you defy me.

Jim Balmer, president of Dawn Farm treatment and recovery program in Ypsilanti, said it is important parents discuss substance abuse with their children. He also said preventing a kid from that first drink or hit is an uphill battle given society's permissive attitude toward underage use.

Mark Mandell, a defense attorney with Northville-based law firm Fausone, Taylor and Bohn, said he can't believe how indignant some parents get, insisting their busted teens are being "persecuted by the system."

"When they start that young, it's a red flag that there's going to be a problem in the future," Mandell said. He marvels at parents who say they drank at that age "and look how we turned out."

"They're divorced, have their own drinking problems, they're living in dysfunctional family settings," he said. "They live in a big house, with a nice car, belong to the country club and they just pass on it."

"It's a crystal ball into the future of a potential substance abuse problem because the last time I looked, you have to be 21 to drink, not 17."

Mandell said he has talked to many adult clients charged with drunk driving who say they started drinking in high school.

Officials check if drunk drivers had minor-in-possession charges, Mandell said. So, a citation dismissed by parents as a youthful indiscretion can bring to bear a full weight down the road — loss of driver's license, a criminal record — nothing but consequences.

As school lets out next week, local youngsters will have more time on their hands and more time unsupervised. Remember that public service television ad from a few years ago asking, "Do you know where your children are?"

City of Northville police see a rise in underage consumption citations during the summer and the holidays, said senior clerk Susan Hatch, a 27-year department veteran. The youngest offender she remembers was age 12.

That's seventh grade.

If that child begins to think alcohol's numbing effects are fun worth pursuing, he or she already has started on the path toward shirking responsibility, stunting maturity and being distracted from their full potential.

Hatch said often officers are dispatched on noise complaints for house parties where parents are out for the night and their teens are hosting a bash.

But drinking citations don't leave your record, like speeding tickets do, she said. They stick long after the party's over.

"It could affect their eligibility for college, their employment status," she said. "More and more employers are doing criminal checks."

"People arrested as a teen — applying for a job in their 20s — these records are popping up on them now."

So what can you do? A book distributed by Northville High School's Students Against Destructive Decisions, "Growing Up Drug Free, A Parent's Guide to Prevention" has many real-life suggestions.

There's also a host of organizations out there that will help anyone who wants their child to grow up healthy

Making Your Position Clear

- Don't assume your children know where you stand.
- They want to talk to you about drugs. State your position clearly; if you're ambiguous, children may be tempted to use.
- Tell your children that you forbid them to use alcohol, tobacco and drugs because you love them.
- Don't be afraid to pull out all the emotional stops. You can say, "If you took drugs it would break my heart."
- Make it clear that this rule holds true even at other people's houses.
- Discuss the consequences of breaking the rules — what the punishment will be and how it will be carried out.
- Rules about drugs give them reasons to fall back on when they feel tempted to make bad decisions.
- Praise them for respecting the household rules.

Balmer said renowned recovery organization Hazelden has conducted extensive research about factors affecting children's tendency to try drugs and alcohol.

The study showed only one factor significantly registered in preventing first use: religious upbringing.

It's something to think about.

Another thing to think about: parents can lead by example.

Health care could save state billions

Every year, Michigan faces a state budget deficit crisis of staggering proportions. Not only does this tie our lawmakers in knots for months, it is beginning to threaten the health of our major research universities — the hope of our state's economic future — as they bleed from a thousand little funding cuts.

Yet there is a better way to balance the books, one the lobbyists and many legislators would rather you didn't think about. It involves a poorly understood and more poorly managed program called Medicaid, for which Michigan taxpayers shell out $8.9 billion a year.

By making a few common-sense changes, the state should be able to save at least $1 billion a year — while providing better quality care to the poor. No, this is not a shell game or an illusion. Just the facts.

Here's how we can do that. First, the Michigan legislature needs to pass legislation to eliminate the Certificate of Need (CON) program. This was established years ago to force hospitals to share technology. For example, the goal was for several hospitals to share one CAT Scanner.

That may have been worth a try — though in practice, it seldom worked. However, the state did, as usual, build up an expensive bureaucracy around the process, which has worked just fine at perpetuating itself.

Today, the CON process is used by hospitals to stop competition from other health care providers. And there is one exception. If one has money, one can buy a CON. A few years ago a physician wanted a certificate of need to install an MRI scanner at his hospital. He hired a lobbyist who told him he could get an "official" approval for $50,000, if he retained the lobbyist at $8,000 per month for a year.

Evidently, that was chicken feed compared to what the physician could make with a scanner. The doc paid up, and obtained his CON and scanner.

That is one of many examples why the administration of the Medicaid program needs to be turned over to the private sector.

Also, the Michigan Department of Management and Budget should purchase a utilization and review system to determine what health care services we purchased at what cost and for whom.

The attorney general could then use this information to prosecute Medicaid fraud. In any event, every aspect of Medicaid should undergo a comprehensive forensic audit once every five years.

So how do we save a billion dollars? Well, believe it or not, dramatically reducing the cost of health care is not rocket science. We can learn from some well-run corporations. Quad/Graphics in West Allis, Wis., is one of the nation's biggest printing companies. They are cutting their costs by bringing primary care in-house (Wall Street Journal, Feb. 11, 2005).

Michigan Medicaid could, and should, establish cost-effective county primary care clinics in areas accessible to the poor.

There's no need to stop there. Staff who can deliver rehabilitation, as well as laboratory, radiology and MRI services should be hired by the state, which should also purchase the necessary equipment. Not to worry; the net cost to all of us will turn out to be far cheaper in the long run.

And Michigan should then take the next step. Secondary care physicians, specialists such as allergists, podiatrists and surgeons, as well as hospitals, get their patients from primary care doctors. The state clinics should have specialists and hospitals bid for those services.

Through these contracts, any service that can be provided "outpatient" should be removed from hospitals. For example: Blue Cross pays more than $600 per physical therapy visit when the cost of the same service provided by an independent physical therapist ranges from $120-$150 a visit.

Pharmacy benefits are out of control. The cost of a stomach medicine can be $5 per pill. There's no excuse for that, now that there are wonderful generic drugs on the market. We should limit the medicines provided by Medicaid to generics, unless a physician from a state clinic finds a brand name drug necessary.

Finally, we need to make a couple of eligibility changes. The state should no longer pay for health care services for 18 and 19 year olds, who are legally adults. Nor should the state pay for your apartment should you become pregnant.

If Michigan were to adopt these simple changes to the delivery of health care services for the poor in Michigan, billions could be saved and the quality of care provided to the poor would increase.

Frankly, if Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan adopted a similar approach, our corporations could cut their premiums in half.

But that's their business. The state budget crisis is everyone's problem. And a solution is sitting right under our legislature's noses.

Bruce Hansen has been president and vice president of several Health Maintenance Organizations, and also served as director of budget, policy and computer systems for the state Medicaid program.

'MoveOn' presents petitions to McCotter; puts grassroots democracy to work

By Kim Kovel
RECORD STAFF WRITER

After rallying signatures for a week, Don Jones was among the 28 local residents who delivered a petition to Rep. Thaddeus McCotter (R-Livonia) on June 1. With the MoveOn political action committee, the Northville Township resident said the goal is firing U.S. House of Representatives Republican Majority Leader Tom DeLay.

"He was admonished three times by the House ethics committee. He's under investigation by the district attorney in Texas."

For more information about allegations against DeLay, visit www.moveonpac.org/delay.

Kim Kovel can be reached at (248) 349-1700, ext. 107, or via e-mail at kkovelle@ht.homecomm.net.

"(The petition) is just to create awareness."

In McCotter's 11th District, which includes Northville city and township in its 26 municipalities, Jones said 823 signatures were gathered electronically via MoveOn.org.

Along with other MoveOn groups statewide, the petitions were delivered at noon last Wednesday, Jones said.

McCotter's spokesman Bob Jackson said the congressman greeted all the visitors and answered their questions.

"He likes it when constituents come in to petition their government," Jackson said. "That's what the system is all about. He took his time."

Jackson said once legal and ethical questions around DeLay are answered, McCotter will decide whether or not to encourage the majority leader to resign.

"It's patently unfair to punish anyone on the sole basis of an accusation," Jackson said.

Meanwhile, Jackson said, McCotter is not taking money from DeLay's political action committee, "Americans for a Republican Majority." The committee allegedly funded politicians who allegedly gave favors to DeLay.

"(McCotter) will continue to maintain this stance until this whole thing clears up one way or the other," Jackson said.

Jones said the congressman's reception was warm.

"McCotter interrupted his day on very short notice and personally came out and greeted every person," he said. "It might even

What's New In Carpet?

A revolutionary new carpet polymer (fiber) that offers superior engineered-in stain resistance that will never wash or wear off. It's called SmartStrand made with DuPont's Sorona 3GT fiber, and is available exclusively from Mohawk carpet retailers.

Remember that no carpet is stain proof. However, SmartStrand made with Sorona 3GT resists any food and beverage stain including mustard, coffee, herbal teas, household bleach, benzoyl peroxide and other non oily/waxy stains. Exceptions to the stain resistance warranty are oil-based or wax-based stains such as tar, make up, shoe polish and paint.

Another plus in the SmartStrand column is the soft comfortable feel it gives carpets while it performs equal or better to nylon carpets of like construction.

Is this the perfect carpet? Of course the answer is no. But this new yarn does incorporate the best characteristics of both nylon and polyester. My Mohawk rep tells me it's the biggest thing to happen to carpet in the last 20 years. I tend to agree.

FUTURE: grads face 'major' changes

when tackling the major decision. "We allow students to be undecided, officially until they have 60 credit hours and at that point we would require them to speak with us and seek assistance with declaring at least a tentative major," she said.

Shannon said depending on the direction, academic exploration isn't bad, even if students don't decide in the first two years.

"But in other cases some majors require a lot of ground work and there is a lot of (prerequisites) and it is to a student's advantage to be focused early in the game," she said.

Shannon said college students should assess their own interests and take classes that will leave the opportunity for varied career choices open.

In The University of Michigan-Dearborn College of Arts Sciences and Letters, some of the most popular majors are psychology, biology, criminal justice, communications and political science.

Signs of major change:

- You're bored in your current major courses.
- You're doing poorly in your current major courses.
- You chose your current major without much thought.
- You keep reading or asking about other majors.
- You just can't let the idea go.

NORTHVILLE RECORD, PAGE B1

Comerica, here comes Williams

Standout catcher earns all-star invite

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

It's a year of All-Stars for the Northville and Novi baseball programs this spring.

Matt Williams, a senior catcher for the Mustangs, and Kevin Cislo, a senior short stop for the Wildcats, have both been selected to play in the Third Annual Negro Leagues Celebration High School All-Star Game Aug. 5.

The game, played at Comerica Park, will host 28 of the state's top players as selected by the Detroit Tigers.

"It's such an honor to be picked for a game like this," said Williams, who was a pre-season All-America Selection and a selection for the 2005 High School Sports America Mark Mulder All-American Student Athlete Baseball Team.

"I'm looking forward to getting the chance to play with some of the best players in Michigan."

It's a chance both players said they are looking forward to. Though the Tigers had not released the complete list of selections by press time, Cislo and Williams said they expect to be part of a talented roster.

"There are so many other good kids out there," said Cislo. "It's a huge honor for me to be selected. I think it's great I'll be able to meet and play with some of the best athletes in the state. It should be a great game."

The all-star game will be played in honor of a week-long Major League Baseball salute to Negro Leagues.

Cislo said he thought it was a great way to applaud those players who have come and gone.

"They had a great league going even with the segregation," he said. "So many great players were involved in that league but you've probably never heard of them. They did have an impact on baseball though and I'm proud to be able to help honor them."

For both players, they're hoping their time at Comerica Park will be a glimpse of what they might get to do in the future.

"It's been a life-long dream of mine to play in the pros," said Williams. "To have a pro team see me as one of the top 28 guys in our state is a nice accomplishment. It's nice to know the Tigers know who I am."

Star Studded

Williams, who will be attending Duke to play baseball in the fall, and Cislo, who will play at Michigan, have both been selected to play in the Sixth Annual East/West All-Star Game hosted by the Novi News and the Northville Record. Both are also expected to be possible selections for the 24th Annual Michigan High School Baseball Coaches' Association East-West All-Star Game, which will also be played at Comerica Park.

"It's been a great year," Cislo said of his performance and the recognition he has received from it. "I'm excited to be a part of these kinds of games. It really is an honor."

The two all-stars said they are hoping to get the chance to play on each other's teams instead of against one another when they take to the field Aug. 5.

Cislo said he and Williams have played together before.

"I've played with Williams before and he's caught me," he said. "I'm looking forward to hopefully being his teammate again. I've played against him enough to know I don't want him on the other team."

Williams had similar respect for his high school season rival.

"Cislo is a great player," he said. "I haven't had the chance to play with too many guys that are as good as he is."

But both won't be a stranger to the talent they'll be surrounded by in the all-star contest. The two standouts both play with some of the best club programs the state has to offer.

"I'm happy to be able to be a representative for Northville and our baseball program," Williams said. "I've had the opportunity to play with some great guys here and I'm happy to be able to represent them in this game."

Cislo agreed.

"It's exciting to be able to represent Novi and the coaches who have done so much work for me," he said. "I'll be able to show what they've taught me and what kind of baseball we're capable of playing in Novi."

Sixth-annual all-star game ready to roll

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

This year the Kensington Valley Conference and the Western Lakes Activities Association have been blessed with outstanding baseball and softball talent.

Novi and Northville are some of the best teams in those conferences and boast some of the best talent.

The teams will be well represented at this year's East versus West All-Star baseball and softball games, which pit some of the best players in Livingston and Oakland counties against each other.

The games are co-sponsored by the Northville Record and the Novi News along with sister publication the Livingston Country Daily Press & Argus.

The games, which are in their sixth season, will be played at Milford High School this year. Coaching the East softball team will be Lakeland's Joe Alsop while the baseball squad will be coached by Rick Green.

Nearly 40 baseball stars and 30 softball standouts from both counties will take the fields with their peers and, as always, it looks to be some promising competition.

The East teams — or the Oakland All-Stars — consist of players from Northville, Novi, Milford, South Lyon and Lakeland while the West teams — the Livingston All-Stars — have players from Hartland, Howell, Brighton, Pinckney and Fowlerville on the roster.

The East squads have had plenty of success over the past five games. The baseball teams, which have had such stars as Mark Sorensen, A.J. Rowe, Mike Hart, Brendan Buckley and Mitch Maier take the field, have compiled an impressive 4-1 record against their Livingston counterparts.

The East softball team, boasting such notables as Kim Zarczynski and Kim Larson on last year's squad, leads the annual series, 3-2.

The games — which are free to attend — are scheduled to be played at Milford High School with the softball game taking place June 22 and the baseball teams facing off June 21. Both games begin at 4 p.m.

Novi and Northville each have four baseball and three softball invitees for the game. Novi's

Alyssa Wagner and Andrea Jirasek and Northville's Kristen Zawacki, Jane Kruszewski and Kim Bagian have confirmed their intentions to play for the softball team as have Richard Vanderveer, Billy Morrison and Zach Flavin from Novi and Tyler Laing, Steve Besk and Rick Birdsall from Northville for the baseball game.

ADVERTORIAL

The view from the fourth tee at Prestwick Village shows a slice of lush, undulating fairway that is typical of the layout. The country club opened in 1996.

The par-3 17th hole, measuring out at 162 yards from the white tees, is the club's acknowledged signature hole, offering a breathtaking view from an elevated tee.

Big-time challenge

Picturesque Prestwick Village already leaving special mark

By John Mueller
SPORTS WRITER

The course isn't quite 10 years old yet, but a quick glance at Prestwick Village Golf Club's resume illustrates its stature and importance in southeastern Michigan's golfing community.

The private country club, located just off M-59 in Highland, has hosted three U.S. Open Qualifiers since opening in 1996, as well as the U.S. Amateur Qualifier in 1998 and the State PGA Assistants Championship last year, to name a few premier events.

Who says a course has to be 70+ years old to be known as a hallowed championship layout? Not the people who play Prestwick Village, it seems.

"We try to hold a lot of events here, so I get a lot of feedback from professionals," Prestwick Village head professional Jeff Gniewek said. "And they love the place."

Everywhere you look, there's quite a bit to love.

The front nine consists of relatively wide fairways and large greens, measuring out at 3,018 from the white tees. It features five par 4s (the longest being the 355-yard fifth hole), two par 5s (520 and 481 yards) and two par 3s (147 and 161 yards). The layout is dotted with numerous elongated sand traps, and water comes into play on three of the holes.

Things change slightly on the back nine, which features a magnificent stretch of four holes (No. 13 through No. 16) that delves into the woods. Compared to the front nine, the tree-lined fairways on the back nine will make you think the following thought a little more urgently: "Straight. Straight. Straight."

It's best to take this thought seriously.

"The back nine is more of an atmosphere where you have to be more accurate," Gniewek said.

By that time, your game better be ready, because you have to hit it straighter. And the wind tends to blow a lot, which makes you have to hit more clubs.

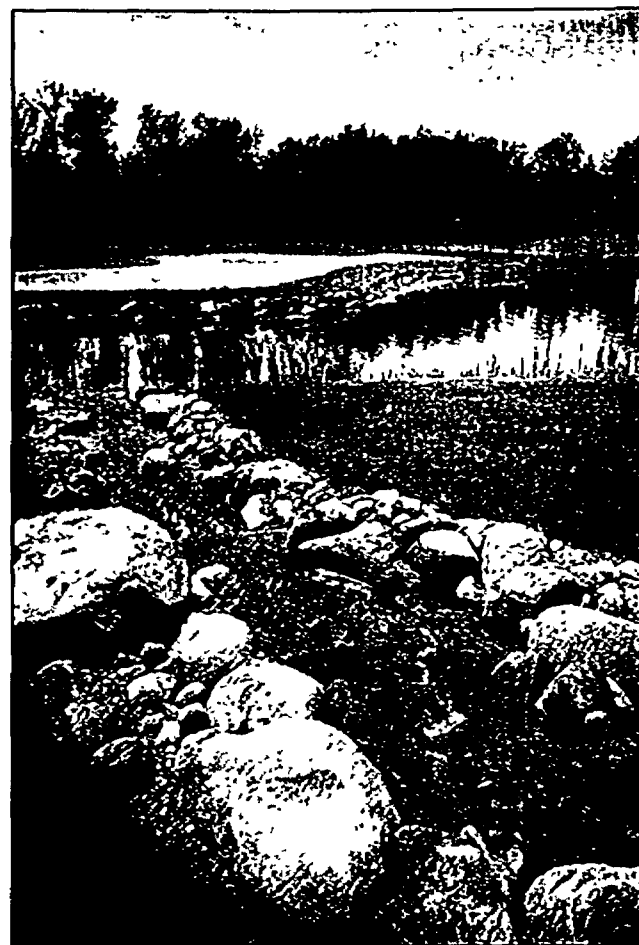

The back nine gets under way with the 500-yard par-5 10th hole, where a sprawling sand trap runs along most of the hole's right-side length. Golfers trudging into this trap hoping to coax their balls out of trouble resemble astronauts walking across a vast lunar landscape.

Following this tough challenge, golfers have to contend with two par 3s (147 and 162 yards), five par 4s (the 388-yard 16th hole is the longest) and another par 5 (456 yards).

The course's signature hole is the 162-yard 17th hole, which offers a breathtaking view from an elevated tee area. The green sits far below, and properly-struck tee shots seem to linger in the air for an extended length of time before landing (hopefully) on the softly-undulating green surrounded by a curling sand trap.

The course is less than 10 years old, but the view from the 17th hole tee area is already quite famous amongst local golfers.

"On a nice, clear day you can see quite a distance," Gniewek said, and this is not an exaggeration. If you have a minute (and as long as another foursome isn't right on your tail), be sure to enjoy the view from the tee area as long as your time permits. It's worth it.

Pictured here is the waterfall near the No. 1 green, just another visually appealing element that makes Prestwick Village stand out.

Most of the greens throughout the entire 18-hole layout slope from the back to the front, which means a shot that comes up short of the pin is often safer than one that goes too far.

"When our pins are set in back of the green, you never want to be over the green," Gniewek said. "It's very difficult to get up and down from behind the green. The best advice is to try to stay below the hole."

You can bet on one thing.

whether you're a beginner or an accomplished golfer: Prestwick Hills will require your whole bag of clubs.

"It's not a driver-wedge, driver-wedge, driver-wedge kind of course," Gniewek said. "You'll be hitting every club."

In addition to hosting the before-mentioned tournaments, Prestwick Hills also hosts about 10 charity tournaments per year. All in all, between these events and the day-to-day action, that's a lot of golf.

Since Prestwick Village general manager Ken Flynn took his position in January of 2003, the club has seen a positive net growth of 36 new members.

Clearly, the word is getting around.

"Everyone likes the challenge, and they like the community feel," Flynn said. "This club is very well-established for such a young club."

Pro tip

Prestwick Village head professional Jeff Gniewek, on chipping woes:

"With chipping, the biggest mistake people make is that they get too handsy with the shot, too wristy. The solution is, if you put the ball back in your stance a little bit and put your hands more forward, you create a downward angle — a steeper angle — coming into the ball, creating solid contact. If you get too wristy, the clubhead can get caught up in the grass."

Northville topples Novi, falls to Salem

Softball can't get past pesky Wildcats

The Northville Mustangs baseball team may have had to go a weird way about it, but they beat Novi once again in the district tournament last Saturday.

The Mustangs, coached by John Kostzrewa, earned an 8-6 victory over their cross-town rivals before losing to Salem, 7-6, in the championship.

Against the Salem Rocks, the Mustangs leapt out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning but could sustain it.

Junior Charlie Thomas banged out two hits as did Brett Spencer. Collecting hits were Rick Birdsall, Matt Williams, Bryce Jenny, Steve Besk and Tyler Laing.

"We had problems throwing strikes," said Kostzrewa. "We walked six and hit three others and made an error. All of that contributed to us getting down 7-4 in the fifth."

The Mustangs fought back in the inning, adding two runs to cut the lead, but couldn't muster enough of a charge to end the contest.

"Give Salem credit," Kostzrewa said. "Their pitcher kept the ball down and all three pitchers for them threw strikes."

The Mustangs had a better showing against Novi despite several odd calls that didn't assist either team. One such call found Northville catcher Williams meeting a Novi runner in the baseline before home plate, tagging him, dropping the ball and watching as the umpire called him safe though the Wildcat didn't tag home plate. "I don't even know what to say," said Williams after the game. "There were just some bizarre calls."

The Mustangs led 4-0 in the fifth before Novi bounced back to take the lead, 5-4. Northville didn't budge though, fighting back to earn the victory.

Besk earned the win from the mound though he had battled the flu for three days prior to the game, running temperatures over 100 degrees.

"Every pitch is just wearing me out," he said as he slumped on the bench while Northville was on offense. "It's exhausting."

Softball falls

The Northville softball team didn't have as well of a showing as they fell to the Novi Wildcats last Saturday, 4-3.

Senior Jane Kruszewski took the loss from the mound. Freshman Jenna Dumbleton came in for relief in the seventh inning.

Golf takes sixth

The Mustangs girls golf team had a strong showing in the state finals, taking sixth as a team.

The team, coached by Mary Jane Ossola, shot a combined 717. Grand Blanc repeated as champions.

"I thought we did well at states," said Ossola. "I was really pleased with a sixth-place finish."

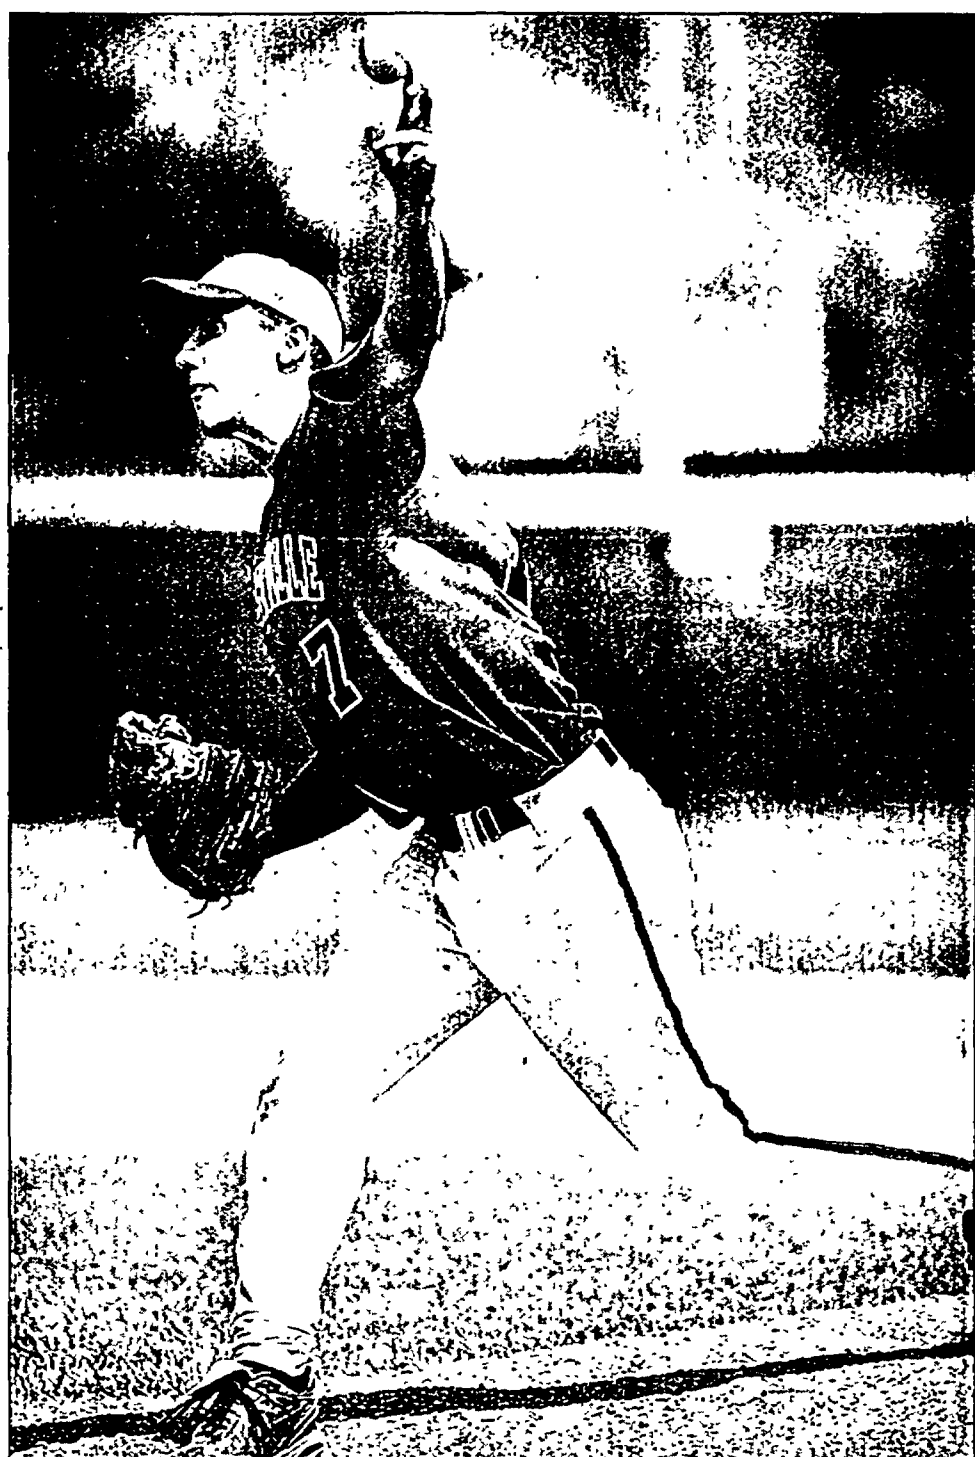

And why not? The team's score of 350 on the first day of competition was the best of the year. Had they repeated that performance, they would have finished fifth.

"Anything better than that was probably out of reach," Ossola noted of the talented field.

Theresa Juthage, a senior, led the team with a 170 after shooting an 82 and an 88 Friday and Saturday. Sophomore Susan Snyder shot an 80 and 92 for a 172 while freshman Kirsten Freisen shot a 96 on the first day but calmed enough for an 89 on Saturday for a combined 185. Rounding out Northville's scores were Allison Grant with a 190 and Lauren Grigsby with a 222.

Grigsby, Juthage and Grant graduate from the program this year.

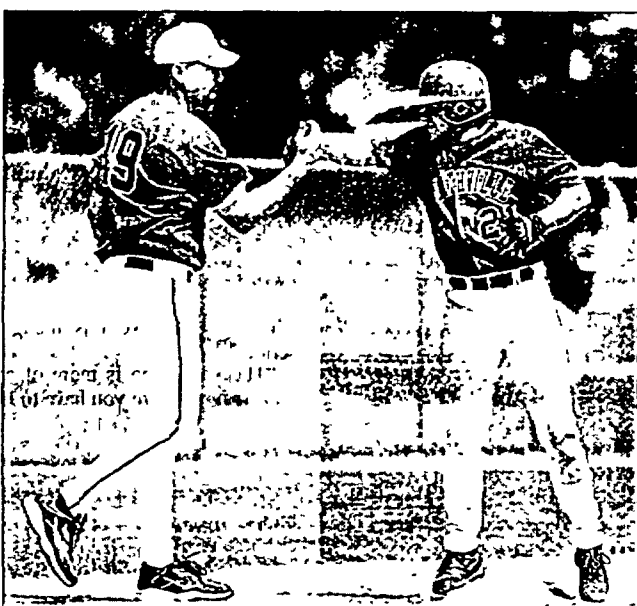

"I'm really encouraged by the play of Susan Snyder and Kirsten Freisen," said Ossola. "They have two and three more years of golf left at NHS. They are both dedicated golfers and I expect them to be even better next year."

Northville lefty Steve Besk battled the flu for three days before pitching a win against Novi in the district tournament last Saturday in 90-plus degree heat.

DARN IT!

Defending state champion Mustangs ousted from playoffs

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

Northville soccer coach Ron Meteyer has said since the end of last season that one of the hardest things to do in high school sports is repeat as state champions.

Last Friday in front of a packed crowd and under the lights at Livonia Stevenson, the Novi Wildcats proved him right.

Novi earned a stunning 4-1 victory over their cross-town rivals to earn a berth to the regional title game off the tremendous play of their defense.

"We played outstanding from start to finish," said Novi coach Brian O'Leary. "My four defenders played spectacular as a group. They held Northville's national-team forward Danielle Toney without a shot on goal."

It was a frustrating night for Toney, who has become accustomed to being one of the top scorers in every game.

Novi's Jessica Barndt, Kelly Hebert, Kristine Chaklos and Lauren Marchioni defended against her throughout the night, double teaming the speedy goal scorer much of the time.

It wasn't only the Wildcats defense that played well. Northville, plagued by injury all season, was back to full strength for the matchup, but it was Novi's offensive surge that sent the Mustangs home.

Novi showed the value of a deep bench after Stephanie Crawford opened the scoring at 33:50 in the game for an early 1-0 lead. She found the back of the net after converting on a corner kick by Sarah Schmitt.

The Northville defense adjusted, focusing their attention on Crawford and Novi's own national team forward of Emily Esbrook. It was an adjustment that didn't bother the Wildcats too much as Katie Walker took an assist from Schmitt and fired it past Northville's goalie for a 2-0 advantage at the 25 minute mark.

Northville returned from half-time and came out firing. The Mustangs got on the board just five minutes into the half when forward Lauren Hill broke through the Novi defense and sped away for a goal against Novi's Kim Herbst to cut the lead to 2-1.

Despite several attempts, it was the Mustangs' only goal.

The Walker twins took advantage of a Northville defense focused on shutting down the 'Cats top forwards and went on to tally the final two goals of the night.

The first came at the 25 minute mark when Katie Walker one timed a Kelly Hebert throw in for a 3-1 lead. Just seven minutes later, Kellie Walker fed a slot pass to her sister, who was taken down in the box and awarded a penalty kick.

Katie Walker took a deep breath, picked her shot and fired it in for the 4-1 finale.

Irvine regrets late-season injury

One soccer game changed season for four-year starter

By Sam Eggleston
RECORD SPORTS WRITER

Northville's Chris Irvine doesn't regret much from his senior tennis season, except for one mistake.

It wasn't a bad serve or a thrown tennis racket. It was a game of soccer.

Irvine, who played at two singles for the Western Lakes Activities Association champion Mustangs this season, felt his ankle give out from beneath him while playing in an indoor co-ed soccer game this spring. The injury, a deep bruise, kept him from playing to the top of his game in the latter portion of the season.

"Coach wasn't too happy about that," Irvine said. "It was definitely my last game of soccer."

The Mustangs had to adjust the line up for two matches and forfeit the entire two singles flight for a tournament, but Irvine found ways to contribute to his team despite not being able to play.

"Coach (Matt) Stetson wasn't able to make it so Coach (Chris) Ford stepped in to help out," Irvine said of the tournament. "I got to help out by coaching the three and four doubles guys."

While lending a helping hand, Irvine talked his brother, Phil, and partner, Andy Mills, through a three-set match.

"It was definitely rewarding to help them through that," Irvine said.

But the tennis standout couldn't shake a bad feeling. His team was hurt because he chose to play soccer.

"I regretted it instantly," he said. "I felt bad but not for myself. I felt like I was letting the team down because I was out doing something for fun and I got hurt. I owed it to the team to be out there competing."

So he competed. Irvine gritted his teeth and entered the line up for the Western Lakes Athletics Association conference tournament. His ankle stung but he fought through it. When the smoke cleared and the dust settled, the Mustangs had earned a co-championship in the conference along with Walled Lake Western.

It was a bright moment during a dark time of tennis for Irvine.

"I'm so happy we were able to win it," he said. "It was a great way for us seniors to go out."

Northville graduate at four-year tennis starter Chris Irvine doesn't regret much from his career, except one soccer game.

Irvine, who went last season, said it was a great year nonetheless.

"I'm really happy with how well the team did," he said. "I was able to play on the same team as my brother, which was great. It would have been nice to go to the state finals again, but I got to experience that already. I'm happy with my career."

Any why not? Irvine was a four-year varsity player with two years in the doubles flights and two at singles to put under his belt. With so much experience, especially on a well-trained team like Northville, one might expect him to eye a college team.

"I've decided I'm going to U-M," said Irvine of his future Ann Arbor home. "I figure I'm going to check out the club tennis program. A Division I, Big 10 tennis program isn't something you just stroll into."

With the club team at Michigan, Irvine said he'll still get to play and travel to other schools. He just won't have to worry about the same stress level at the varsity players.

"It takes up so much of your time," he said. "I have tons of respect for the athletes that can do it. I don't want to have to try and manage that time with school. I want to go up there and enjoy college and concentrate on school first."

Irvine said he intends to keep playing tennis.

"It's been a big part of my life," he said. "I'm not ready to give it up just yet."

Freshman Freisen big part of Northville's future golf plans

It wasn't as though the Northville Mustangs golf program had been keeping its eye on freshman Kirsten Freisen.

In fact, they didn't even know she existed until this year.

Freisen, who was the third-best golfer on the team at the state finals last weekend, moved to Northville from Naperville, Ill., and decided to try her hand at the high school's golf program.

"When I first saw Kirsten hitting balls in the dome during tryouts, I marveled at her swing and felt very fortunate her family had chosen to come to Northville," said coach Mary Jane Ossola.

"Her father is an excellent golfer and you can tell he has given her a great start in this game."

A great start, indeed. Freisen shot a 185 at the state finals over two days of 18-hole play. On the opening day she recorded a 96 and then calmed herself for an impressive 89 on the second day. She finished better than half of the golfers who's teams had qualified for the second day of competition.

Freisen's 185 was just behind teammate Susan Snyder's 172 and Therese Juthage's 170. Allison Grant shot a 190 in the tournament and Lauren Grigsby shot a 222. Northville finished sixth overall with 717.

Northville has plenty to look forward to next season with the return of both Snyder and Freisen to the line-up.

"We will certainly miss this senior class, but I feel confident Kirsten and Susan will continue to carry on the tradition of excellence that Northville golf has experienced the past several years," said Ossola.

Freisen had plenty to guide her this year. Juthage, who moved to Northville from Sweden for her freshman year, also made the varsity team as a freshman.

The senior captain made a point of helping the young Mustangs golfer as much as she could.

"Therese took Kirsten under her wing this season and has been an excellent role model for Kirsten," said Ossola.

Juthage also knows what it's like to have pressure during a freshman season. She made four trips to the state finals with the Mustangs during her career. Though Juthage was there for support this year, Freisen had to learn how to handle the pressure herself.

And there was definitely pressure.

"I think Kirsten felt the pressure at the conference and regional as she didn't play her best," Ossola said. "In regionals, when you only have five golfers and have four scores to count, everyone feels the pressure to shoot a good round. So, for a freshman, it's even more difficult."

Looking over Freisen's scorecards through the season, it's easy to see she wasn't daunted during normal matches.

She shot a nine-hole average of 49.27 on the year. In the two toughest regular-season matches, she played outstanding. Against Stevenson — a team the Mustangs hadn't beat head-to-head in two years — she shot a 46 to be the second best player that day to lead her team to victory.

Against Salem, she recorded a 43, which tied her for the second-best nine-hole score of the year for Northville.

shooting an 89 and a 93 over two days as the team's low scorer.

But there's a lot of work to do. Freisen is only a freshman and the future, they say, is bright for Northville golf.

"Now it's up to her to refine her swing and work on her short game and putting," said Ossola. "Kirsten has an excellent work ethic and seems to enjoy the game, so I think we will see her improve each year."

One day, maybe she'll even lead like someone else who grew up on the links with a Northville Mustangs emblem on her golf shirt.

"I think Kirsten is going to be a very good golfer," Juthage earlier this year. "She has showed a lot of potential this year."

"She's going to be better than I am."

Eat and live well with

FAMILY FEATURES
EDITORIAL SYNDICATE

Anyone who has traveled in Italy knows that the Italian lifestyle is defined by a love of good food, a passion for flavor, and a vibrant lifestyle. But you don't have to vacation in Rome to live "la dolce vita" — eating and living Italian style is a way of life that can be enjoyed anywhere, all year around.

Though Italian culture emphasizes eating for enjoyment (notice you don't meet many Italians on fad diets?), the Italian diet also happens to be one of the healthiest in the world; incorporating fresh, wholesome foods that are rich in nutrients and low in unhealthy fats.

To help guide people on how to eat and live like an Italian, Barilla — the Italian food brand — partnered with a team of nutritionists to create a new model that demonstrates the Italian way of eating as well as the various components that go into creating a perfectly balanced pasta meal. It's also worth noting that this model of eating fits well within the parameters of the new Dietary Guidelines for Americans and the My Pyramid Food Guidance system, so anyone who considers Italian to be their favorite cuisine can feel good about eating the Italian way while benefiting from a healthy diet and lifestyle.

Sure, there are still people who think of pasta as fettuccine smothered in fat-laden cream sauce. But traditional pasta meals are fresh, light, and easy to put together with nutritious, seasonal ingredients. Pasta is a perfect delivery system to get many healthy foods in your diet — such as a variety of colorful vegetables, tomato sauce, olive oil, fish and lean cuts of poultry. And pasta is low in sodium and cholesterol-free, as well as a good source of thiamin, folic acid, iron, riboflavin and niacin.

Pasta also ranks among children's favorite foods — especially when they can help prepare the meal. "Cooking pasta together is an easy way to get your family eating and communicating better," says Lynn Fredericks, author of Cooking Time is Family Time. "Let kids choose the pasta shape, help chop vegetables, set the table — cooking is a lot more fun when everyone pitches in."

Start experimenting with different variations on pasta meals to keep dinnertime interesting and healthy. For starters, try these recipes for typical Italian dishes that offer exceptional taste and nutrition. For many more authentic pasta meal recipes as well as tips on eating, cooking and living the Italian way, visit the new Barilla America website at www.barillausa.com.

White Bean Pasta e Fagioli

Serves 4

- 3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
  - 1 small onion, chopped
  - 2 small carrots, chopped
  - 1 rib celery, chopped
  - 2 cloves garlic, minced
  - 1/2 bunch broccoli rabe, excess stems removed, torn
  - 1/2 bunch kale, excess stems removed, torn
  - 1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes
  - 2 (15-ounce) cans cannellini beans, drained and rinsed
  - 5 cups chicken broth
  - 1 cup Barilla Ditalini
  - 1/4 cup chopped parsley, divided
  - 1 tablespoon chopped oregano
  - 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1 cup freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, divided
1. Heat olive oil in large stockpot over medium-high heat. Add onion, carrots, celery and garlic. Sauté 3-4 minutes or until tender, stirring occasionally.
  2. Add greens and stir until wilted.
  3. Add tomatoes, squashing them gently by hand over pot to break them apart. Add remaining juice of tomatoes as well.
  4. Add beans and chicken broth.
  5. Add ditalini, 2 tablespoons parsley, oregano, pepper and salt. Bring to boil and cook 10-12 minutes or until pasta is tender.
  6. Stir in remaining parsley and 1/2 cup cheese. Serve with remaining cheese. Serve with crusty bread and drizzle with olive oil if desired.

Farfalle With Chicken and Chard

Serves 4-6

- 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, cut into bite-sized pieces
  - 2 teaspoons salt, divided
  - 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, divided
  - 3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
  - 1 small onion, chopped
  - 1 orange bell pepper, chopped
  - 2 cloves garlic, minced
  - 1/2 bunch swiss chard, ends removed and leaves torn
  - 1 cup chicken broth
  - 1 box Barilla Farfalle
  - 1/4 cup freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
  - 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1. Sprinkle chicken with 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper.
  2. Heat oil in large skillet over medium-high heat. Add chicken, onion, pepper and garlic. Cook and stir 5 minutes.
  3. Fill large pot with lightly salted water and bring to boil.
  4. Add chard to skillet and vegetables and stir, mixing thoroughly until wilted.
  5. Add chicken broth and remaining salt and pepper. Cook until chicken is cooked through.
  6. While broth is heating, cook farfalle. Drain and return to pot.
  7. Add chicken mixture to hot farfalle; toss. Transfer to serving platter and sprinkle with cheese and chopped parsley.

MONEY MATTERS

Flexible spending account holders now have more time to spend money

Holiday shopping aside, December may be a little less hectic for workers with flexible spending accounts (FSAs). That's because FSA account holders now have a grace period of up to two and a half months after the close of their flexible spending plan year to pay for medical and dependent care expenses. Under the prior rule workers could only use the funds for treatments and services provided before the plan's year end, which for many companies is Dec. 31. Funds not used by this date were forfeited under the "use it or lose it" rule. Now workers can use funds remaining from the previous year to pay for expenses incurred up until March 15 of the current year. Companies are not required to adhere to this new rule. Employees should check with their company's human resources department to see if this grace period applies to their plan. And remember, the "use it or lose it rule" still applies: Unspent funds not used by the deadline, whether it's Dec. 31 or March 15, are forfeited.

How FSAs work

FSAs allow you to direct, on a pre-tax basis, part of your earnings into a special reimbursement account. During the year you use this money to pay for medical costs not covered by insurance such as deductibles, copayments, as well as for qualified dependent care expenses such as daycare fees. Employees must determine the amount to be withheld for the upcoming plan year before the conclusion of the current plan year.

The maximum amount an employee can contribute to a health care FSA each year is $2,500. FSA participants pay for services, prescriptions and other eligible benefits up-front, and submit a claim to the FSA administrator for reimbursement.

Savings vary

How much you save in a year depends on your federal income tax bracket. For example, if you are in the 28 percent tax bracket, you might save as much as $280 in taxes for every $1,000 you set aside in an FSA.

Another benefit of a health care FSA is that at any point in the year an employee can spend more than they have contributed to the account up to that date as long as it does not exceed the scheduled contribution for that year. For example, if an employee elects to contribute $200 a month to their health care FSA, and they incur $1,000 of qualifying expenses the first month, they are entitled to the full $1,000 reimbursement even though to date they have paid only $200 into the plan.

With dependent care spending accounts, employees can save pre-tax dollars for the purpose of day care, after school care and summer day camp for dependents under age 13. Under the current law, the maximum tax-free reimbursement for a dependent care FSA is $5,000. Keep in mind, if you contribute to a dependent care FSA, any tax-free reimbursement reduces the expenses eligible for the dependent care credit, so employees will want to calculate which dependent care method is most cost effective.

Tutto: Everything for the Home

Unique store offers home décor items, and design service

By Duane Ramsey
SPECIAL WRITER

Tutto, the word for everything in Italian, offers "everything for the home" including exquisite decorative items, fine art, furniture and accessories in an inviting shopping environment. The unique business, located in the Old Church Square in downtown Northville, also offers interior design services for home décor. The inspiration for Tutto came from owner Cheryl Nestro's admiration and passion for exquisite home interiors like the beautiful home where she grew up. She drew upon her Italian heritage to come up with a name that summarizes it all, Tutto.

"It's challenging and exciting to balance the design and retail aspects of the business," said Cheryl.

"The premise of the retail shop is to accentuate the design and reflect her creativity," said Anthony, her husband and business partner.

Cheryl began her interior design business out of her home six years ago after studying at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit. She experienced the good fortune of having dear friends approach her about opening a design studio and retail store.

One year ago, Cheryl opened Tutto, a combination of shop and studio at its present location. The interior space of the store required extensive remodeling before opening last May.

"The store is dramatically different from the day I took occupancy," she said. "I spent three months day and night working with my general contractor to make the space unmistakably beautiful."

They knocked out ceilings, changed the electrical layout, added travertine tile flooring and walls with new storage space. Nestro remodeled the powder room with exquisite trim work and wall finishes that she designed and finished herself.

"My landlords, Bob and Margene Buckhave, have done a remarkable job of revamping the Old Church Square," Cheryl said. "My store just adds to the ambiance and quaintness of the square."

Customers will find a unique style of custom-framed artwork exclusively available at Tutto. Nestro also offers fine hand-painted frames from Rome with custom and standard size mirrors as well as limited edition wall art.

Tutto presents an exquisite selection of fine fabrics from Italy with a host of other nationally acclaimed fabric lines. Italian crystal is an appropriate gift for any occasion, according to Nestro.

"I travel extensively to find items of the highest quality for my store," said Cheryl. "Most home accessories are hand finished with much attention to detail. Everyone will experience something that speaks to them."

"Tutto is a magical moment of Cheryl Nestro works in her design space at Tutto with catalogs and samples of home interior accessories all around her.

time to explore the palatable possibilities for your own home," said Kathy Masciulli, an associate at Tutto. "You will find a style that is unique with continuous attention to classic timeless design."

Tutto offers everything for the home, including:

- Full service interior design
- Fine Italian fabrics and linens
- Specialty painting services
- Custom window treatments
- European home accents

Nestro will soon stimulate the homemaker's senses with Hickory Chair and Habersham's newest designs in furniture and finishes. The self-designed vignette at Tutto will show what she offers in high style design to make every home everything its owners imagined it could be.

"Cheryl is fabulous and I love Tutto," said Jackie Gandol of Farmington Hills. "There is always something new and unique that you wouldn't find anywhere else." Gandol has used Cheryl's interior design services and purchased several items for her home at Tutto.

Nestro combines the ideas of the homeowner with their favorite colors, styles and tastes to create an interior design suitable for each individual customer.

"I want to make people comfortable with the design in their home," Cheryl said. "I have a team of contractors that do beautiful wall textures and murals. They also avail me to custom furniture, built-in wall units, exquisite tile work and much more."

"Working with Cheryl was amazing. She is easy to work with. She understood my tastes and what I expected from her in my house," said Cecilia Ulla, who moved to Northville just six months ago.

Nestro created completely new designs for Ulla's family, dining, and living rooms and master bedroom.

"My house looks beautiful. I love what she has done," said Ulla.

Nestro is carrying her passion for beautiful things into contributing to the community. She is purchasing a selection of exquisite artwork and paintings for the art auction at an upcoming charity event.

The Grand Art Extravaganza at Shelly Pond will present a night of elegance, great food and fun on June 24 at the beautiful Summit model by Vistal Homes at 18198 Shelly Pond Court in Northville. The proceeds of the art auction and elegant event will benefit the Karmanos Cancer Foundation.

Small business ownership: What is right for you?

Congratulations! You have decided to start your own business!

Apart from thinking of a name, location and size, you must consider the legal structure of your business. Determining the type of ownership is one of the key decisions you must make, and should be one of your first steps.

The structure of your business is a decision not to take lightly since it will have long-term implications. Therefore, you should consult with an attorney and accountant prior to making any firm decisions.

When selecting the right ownership, consider these factors, according to the Online Women's Business Center (www.onlinewbc.gov):

- Your vision regarding the size and nature of your business.
- The level of control you wish to have.
- The level of "structure" you are willing to deal with.
- The business' vulnerability to lawsuits.
- Tax implications of the different ownership structures.
- Expected profit (or loss) of the business.
- Whether or not you need to re-invest earnings into the business.
- Your need for access to cash out of the business for yourself.

There are four major forms of business ownership for small businesses: sole proprietorship, partnership, corporation and limited liability company.

Here is a brief description of these types of business ownerships, followed by the pros and cons of each.

Sole Proprietorship

Usually small businesses start out as sole proprietorships. They are the easiest to organize because usually the business owner is the person responsible for the day-to-day operation of the business. Sole proprietors own all the assets of the business and its profits. They also assume complete responsibility for any of its liabilities or debts. In the eyes of the law and the public, you are one and the same with the business.

Partnership

Two or more people share ownership of a business. Like sole proprietorship, the law does not distinguish between the business and its owners, making all partners liable for the business. Partners should have a legal agreement that sets forth how decisions will be made, profits will be shared, disputes will be resolved, how future partners will be admitted to the partnership, how partners can be bought out, or what steps will be taken to dissolve the partnership when needed.

MAJOR FORMS OF BUSINESSES OWNERSHIP

Pros

- Least expensive and easiest to organize
- Owner receives all income
- Easy to dissolve

Cons

- Owner has unlimited liability
- Benefits are not business deductions
- Limited funds

Pros

- Easy to organize but need agreements
- Partners receive and share all income
- Ability to raise funds

Cons

- Unlimited liability
- Partners may disagree with each other
- Life of business may be limited

CORPORATION

Pros

- Limited liability
- Can raise funds through sale of stocks
- Life of the business is unlimited

Cons

- Incorporating takes time and money
- May result in higher overall taxes
- Government monitoring

LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY

Pros

- Offers limited liability
- Tax efficiencies not offered to corporations

Cons

- May not be recognized in all states
- Strict guides

Corporation

A corporation is chartered by the state in which incorporation takes place. It separates all business owners from the company, making the business a separate entity.

Therefore, the business itself can be taxed, sued, etc. The owners of the business are its shareholders.

The shareholders elect a board of directors to oversee major company decisions. Corporations may be able to deduct the cost of benefits it offers its employees.

Limited Liability Company (LLC)

The LLC is a relatively new type of hybrid business structure. It is designed to provide the limited liability features of a corporation and the tax efficiencies and operational flexibility of a partnership. Formation is more complex and formal than a general partnership. The owners are members, and the duration of the LLC is usually determined when the organization papers are filed.

Learn the basics concerning adoption

Adoption requires a lesson in tough decision-making. Adopting a child or giving a child up for adoption is not a task to take lightly.

There are many questions to answer, emotions to address, beliefs to explore and tasks to complete. Here is some information to start you on your journey.

Pregnant and thinking about adopting

Many pregnant women consider giving their child up for adoption. This decision can be a difficult one, requiring great courage and love.

Remember, adoption is permanent, so you will need to consider some factors before you make your decision:

- Possibilities explored: Is adoption your only option? What are your reasons behind giving your child up for adoption? Are they financial or because of your living situation? State agencies may be able to assist you or family members if your ultimate goal is to keep your child. If you've considered other options, but still want adoption, you may feel more content with your decision after you've explored all possibilities.

- Adoptive parents: Prospective adoptive parents are carefully screened by social workers. They are taught about the special needs of adoptive children, like making them feel like they fit into the family, before an adoption takes place. Once they receive approval, it is very likely that these parents will be loving ones who will care for your child.

- Types of adoption: You can reveal as little or as much as you like to prospective adoptive parents. During a confidential adoption, the birth parents and the adoptive parents never know one another. Only background information from you, like medical information, is required.

With an open adoption, the birth parents and the adoptive parents know something about each other, like their names or where they live. You can decide on the level of openness.

- Arranging an adoption: In all states, you may work with a licensed agency. In most states, you can also work directly with an adoptive couple or attorney.

Contact the National Adoption Information Clearinghouse (NAIC) for more information at <http://naic.acf.hhs.gov>.

- Future contact: If your child wishes to contact you in the future but you had previously decided on a confidential adoption, you still have some options.

Many states and some private national organizations have set up adoption registries to help people find one another. When registering, keep your information current so that you can be contacted should your child choose to do so.

Some adoption agencies who arrange private adoptions will hold a letter in your file detailing your reason for adoption and how you can be contacted. This information can be released to your child if he or she wants to seek out or contact you.

Considering adopting a child

Children are adopted for a number of reasons. It's a viable option for couples who can't conceive their own child, or for those who want to assist a less fortunate child by welcoming him or her into their home.

Adopting a child can be a confusing and expensive process, so educate yourself to make the experience go more smoothly.

- Deciding on a child: Once you've made the decision to adopt, usually your next consideration is the sex of the child. Then you may factor in the race and age of the child. Most people initially set out to adopt a newborn of their own race. However, as they begin to learn more about adoption, their search criteria tends to widen.

Keep in mind the resources available to you, your own background and your adoptive child's needs. This will help you choose a child that best fits into your home.

- Domestic or abroad: Adoptions can occur both in your home country or through agencies around the world. Consider how much money you can spend, the amount of travel you wish to incur and whether or not you prefer a newborn. Domestic adoptions, whether public or private, have a good chance of finding you an infant. If you adopt a baby from a foreign country, you will never get a newborn.

- Cost factor: Apart from the cost involved with the adoption process, you must assess your

ADOPTION WEB STIES

- National Adoption Information Clearinghouse (NAIC)
<http://naic.acf.hhs.gov>

- <http://adoption.about.com>

financial status. Is your home big enough? Do you have enough money for all the expenses of raising a child, like clothing and medical care?

Domestic adoptions through an agency range from $4,000 to $30,000, which includes a number of costs like counseling, home preparation and the child's expenses. Independent adoptions, where you find your own birth parents, can range from $8,000 to $30,000. International adoptions can run from $7,000 to $25,000, which includes agency fees, immigration processing fees, and court costs. However, there may be additional fees for travel or to have another person escort the child into the country.

Before you set out on your adoption journey, contact organizations in your area or log onto your computer for more in-depth information on the topics that were mentioned above. Information was gathered from About.com and the National Adoption Information Clearinghouse.

Common questions answered for estate planning, will writing

Estate planning is a broad term that encompasses the distribution of your assets to people you choose after you are deceased.

It generally involves the drafting of a will, and where necessary, the creation of real estate trusts.

It can also include funeral preparation information, the name of your designated executor (the person who will carry out the terms of your will) and plans for organ donation, child care and guardianship.

It is important to have a plan in place, whether simple or all-encompassing, regardless of your age, marital status, financial status or health situation.

However, if you live an unusually risky lifestyle, or are very wealthy, it's wise to set up an estate plan immediately to protect your assets.

One of the main advantages of a will is that it avoids the probate process, which occurs when there isn't a will in place, and requires the court to split up your possessions. This could result in your property going to people you might not want it to go to.

For example, the majority of your assets could be left to your children, with your spouse left financially floundering. Then he or she would need to seek the court's permission to spend the money — a timely and costly process. A will helps head off concerns with probate.

COMMON QUESTIONS

Though most people are aware that they need a will, the majority — about 70 percent of Americans — doesn't have one, according to Nolo.com, a legal information Web site. The reasons for procrastination vary (many people don't like to think about death and dying).

But, once the will is done, you can rest a little easier knowing that your wishes will be followed after your death.

Because it is such an important document, here is some information you should know:

Do I need a lawyer to draft a will?

In most cases, no. Making a will rarely involves complicated legal rules, and most people can draft their own will with the aid of a good self-help book or software program. However, if you stumble across roadblocks or questions, seek the advice of a lawyer.

Can I make a handwritten will since I don't have much property?

These types of wills, called holographic wills, are valid in very few states. And if need be, they may not hold up well if there is a need for probate court. Be safe and avoid them.

What makes a will legal?

If you are of sound mind, then there are only a few other requirements.

1. The document must expressly state that it's your will.
2. You must date and sign the will.
3. The will must be signed by at least two, or in some states, three, witnesses.

They must watch you sign the will, although they don't need to read it.

Your witnesses, in most states, must be people who won't inherit anything under the will.

Generally, you don't need the will notarized. If you have questions about the requirements, contact an attorney.

What if I don't want to leave

assets to my spouse?

Your spouse is legally protected against walking away with nothing from your will. In some states (Nevada, Arizona, California, for example), he or she inherits half of your estate, regardless of what your will indicates. In most other states, your spouse is entitled to a portion of your estate.

What if I have young children?

You can leave assets to young children, but they will need to be managed by an adult until they reach 18 years of age. If this is your plan, also name an adult financial guardian in the will.

Can someone challenge my will once I've died?

Very few wills are ever challenged in court. When they are, it's usually by a close relative who feels somehow cheated out of his or her rightful share of the deceased person's property. Usually, only a spouse would be entitled to a share of property.

Make a will to protect family members and their assets

When there's a will, there's a way.

Unfortunately, there won't be a way for the more than 70 percent of Americans who don't have a will, according to a 2003 report by NOLO, an online legal resource.

A will is a legal document that ensures that your assets are distributed properly.

If you die and you have young children, a will also enables you to designate a guardian for them.

The state decides if you won't

Without a will, the court will distribute your property according to the laws of your state or have your children placed in the custody of a court-appointed guardian.

Generally, your property will go to your spouse and children. If you have neither, it will go to relatives. And if there are no relatives, it will be turned over to your state's treasury.

Do it yourself

You can make a will with or without the help of a lawyer. If you are doing it yourself, there are books, software programs and online resources to help you out.

Check with your state if it allows handwritten, unwitnessed wills. Avoid using them if you can — since no witnesses watch you sign, it's hard to prove their legitimacy. If this type of will is your only option, proceed since it's better than nothing.

Keep current

Your will needs to be updated throughout your life.

If a child is born, someone gets married or someone moves, be sure such changes are reflected in it. After signing the new document, destroy the old one.

Keep it safe — and accessible

You may have all your wishes in writing, but someone must know where to find them when the time arrives.

Store a will in a safe and accessible place such as a safe deposit box. Tell a friend or relative where the will is located. Your attorney should also have a copy of your will as well as a note, detailing its whereabouts.

— Metro News Service

A BASIC WILL

According to insurance experts, a will usually has:

- your name to indicate that it is your will
- where you live
- a description of your assets
- the names of your spouse, children and beneficiaries such as charities or friends (children under 18 can inherit property, but you should name an adult to manage it for them)
- a guardian to raise young children (children should appoint the same guardian so they can stay together)
- specific gifts such as a car or home
- trusts
- cancellation of debts owed to you, if desired
- the name of your estate executor
- your signature and date
- witnesses' signature(s) (number varies by state)

Planning for your power of attorney

Today, you are in complete control of your life. That's why it's hard to understand that someday you may need someone else to make decisions for you.

A power of attorney is a written document where you (the principal) appoint someone (called the agent or attorney-in-fact) to handle your affairs if you can't take care of things yourself.

Even if you have a will, you should still choose a power of attorney since the will's executor doesn't gain power until your death.

Your agent will be making important decisions on your behalf so he should be someone you trust. Many people select their spouse and designate a child or other relative as a substitute. Pick another person if your spouse will be unable to handle everything because of an illness or the inability to manage finances.

There are a few different types of power of attorney, according to the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP). They differ on when they start and end. These types include:

- conventional power of attorney — begins when you sign it and continues until you become mentally incapacitated
- durable power of attorney — begins when you sign it and is effective for life until you cancel it
- springing power of attorney — begins when a specific event happens (such as incapacitation)

You can give your agent as much power as you want. Let him sell your car, manage real estate, sell stocks or sign your income tax return.

When designating power of attorney, it makes the most sense to give your agent a range of powers so he will be allowed to take care of everything for you — even things you haven't thought about.

Note that all powers of attorney end at your death, meaning that the agent can't make any decisions after your death.

The best way to prepare your power of attorney

"Even if you have a will, you should still choose a power of attorney since the will's executor doesn't gain control until your death."

ney is through your lawyer. Visit him now so you don't have to worry about it later on. If you don't have a power of attorney, your family may have to go to court to appoint a guardian.

FlooringAMERICA design tips

"Decorating your home is challenging, fun, and rewarding! Here are a few pointers to help get you started!"

DONNA ROUGHGARDEN
Flooring America
Sales Coordinator

1. THE MAGIC OF PATTERN

Try patterns and dark colors in high-traffic areas and to create kid-friendly rooms. Patterns look great and help hide dirt and foot tracks!

2. TEXTURIZE IT

Use texture to define the atmosphere you desire. Materials such as glass, stainless steel, and concrete all emanate a cool feeling, while wood, wicker, and plush fabrics radiate warmth.

3. CREATE A FOCAL POINT

Whether it is a piano, fireplace, an entertainment system, or art, create a floor plan designed around that piece. It will center the room.

4. DON'T KNOW WHERE TO START YOUR FLOORING SEARCH?

Begin your flooring project with FlooringKnowledge.com and run a quick fact check on different types of flooring, color and design, plus care and maintenance. When you visit Flooring America, we can answer any questions in depth and show you samples.

How to be Safe at Home

Developing a plan is the first step to making your home secure. Buying the right products is only a part of the process. Consider how to lock the house securely, eliminate intruder hiding places and add alarms and detectors. Plus, always give the appearance you are home.

Home security systems are easy to install and should be the initial part of your plan. Remember to balance your approach with equal thought to fire safety and weather preparedness.

YOUR SOURCE FOR Find what you need

Economical Answers To Increase Your Fire Safety

For a very small investment, you can help protect your family from fire-related injuries. Select a reliable fire extinguisher and learn how to use it, then keep it easily accessible. Be sure smoke and carbon monoxide detectors are in proper working order. And don't forget escape ladders for a safe, quick exit.

Rebate applies to Select Belkin Networking Products at The Home Depot Stores. Purchase must be made between June 12, 2005 to July 12, 2005. All requests MUST be postmarked by July 27th, 2005. Offer not valid with any other rebates, offers or promotions. Offer valid in US only. Good for actual purchases by end users, excludes resellers and distributors of products and their families. Please allow 8 weeks after claim is received by Fulfillment Company to receive your rebate. All rebates will be made in US dollars. Manufacturer is not responsible for lost or misdirected mail and illegible entries. Limit one rebate per product per name/address/household. The maximum dollar amount to be paid for each household/name/address is $60. For questions about your rebate call 1 866 703 0533. Fraudulent submission of multiple requests could result in federal prosecution under the U.S. Mail Fraud Statutes (18 USC, Section 1341 & 1342). Keep a copy of your claim for future reference. To check your rebate status online go to WWW.REBATESHQ.COM

Innovative Home Networking

With the right hardware, it's easy to deliver audio, video, voice and data to any room of your condo, apartment or home. A professional-grade whole-house media enclosure creates one distribution point for all low voltage cables.

Choosing a Media Center

Look for a self-contained enclosure that holds a variety of full and half-width expansion modules. It should also accommodate two pre-configured structured cabling panels. A sturdy design and robust functionality facilitate installation, reduce job-site labor costs and provide expandability for future home networking.

Q Where is Alan Ruck these days? The only time I ever saw him was in Ferris Bueller's Day Off.

—Ken G., Michigan

Alan Ruck, 48, has stayed very busy since the 1986 teen classic. In 1990, he starred in a TV series called Going Places and in the film Young Guns II. In 1994, he was in the movie Speed, followed by Star Trek: Generations and then several more TV series, including Spin City for six years. Three years ago, Cleveland-born Ruck had a near-fatal bout with blood poisoning in Los Angeles. "I went home to New York a couple of days later, and by the time I got to our place, I was delirious." His wife, Claudia, rushed him to the hospital, where his kidneys failed. It took him a year to recover fully. Currently, Ruck is the lead in Broadway's The Producers. "Three years ago I couldn't walk, and now I'm singing and dancing," says the actor, who has two children—Emma, 17, and Sam, 11.

Q What happened to Larry Parks who played Al Jolson in The Jolson Story and Jolson Sings Again?

—Jerry R., Washington

Actor Larry Parks died of a heart attack in 1975 at age 60. The Olathe, Kan., native really did little acting besides those biographical movies. After attending the University of Illinois, he worked in various stock companies before changing careers. He was signed by Columbia Pictures in 1941 and was a great success in 1946's The Jolson Story, earning him an Oscar nomination. The 1949 sequel was his last major role as an actor, although he did co-star with Elizabeth Alan Ruck, a father of two, currently is performing a lead role in The Producers on Broadway.

Taylor in 1951 in Love Is Better Than Ever. In 1951, though, Parks was the first actor to admit that he had belonged to a Communist cell from 1941 to 1951, and although he was not officially blacklisted, he was dropped by Columbia and shunned by Hollywood. When he died in 1975, he was survived by Betty Garrett, his wife of 31 years, and their two children. ☆

A Backyard

David A. Mullany and his 12-year-old buddies just wanted to play ball that summer in 1952, but they kept fielding trouble. Broken windows, roughed-up shingles and then the worst: A baseball sailed through the arms of a mother hanging clothes on the line and it smashed her porch light.

When even tennis balls landed them in hot water, Mullany rummaged in the garage and found some plastic practice golf balls. Finally, they could play ball in peace in his backyard in Fairfield, Conn. (pop. 57,340).

Wiffle Ball sets retail for $2.99 to $4.99.

"We'd play eight hours a day," recalls Mullany, now 64.

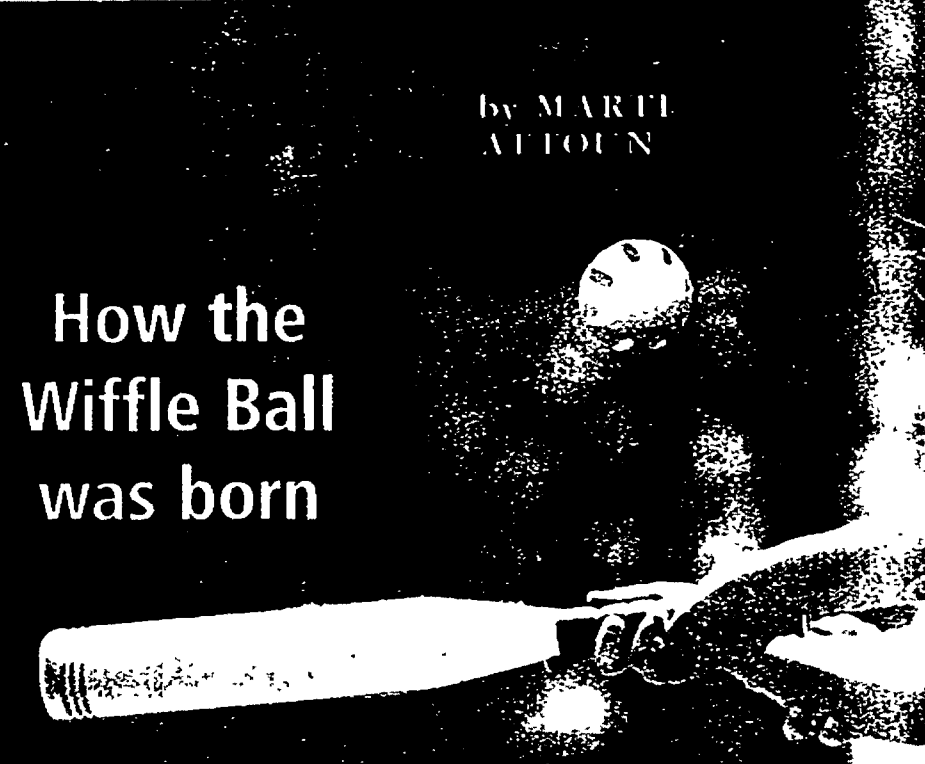

While the boys were no longer knocking out windows with errant baseballs, Mullany's father discovered another problem. "Dad could see us trying to throw a curve and screwing up our arms to get that rotation."

His father, David N. Mullany, had played for the University of Connecticut's baseball team and even scored a job with a pharmaceutical company because his pitching arm was needed for the company ball team. He knew about sore arms and decided to try to design a plastic baseball that even the smallest boy could easily make curve and one that could be whacked in a backyard without wreaking havoc.

The resourceful Mullany rounded up some hollow plastic spheres used to wrap perfume bottles and began carving holes in them while sitting at the kitchen table. "I'd try 'em out the next day," David A. recalls.

After about two dozen duds, one ball curved wildly when the boys threw it and

How the Wiffle Ball was born

Families have enjoyed playing Wiffle Ball since David N. Mullany introduced one of America's favorite backyard games more than a half-century ago.

It was a challenge to hit. The funny looking ball had a solid half and eight oblong holes cut in the other half. The kids wore out the homemade balls pitching curves, sinkers and risers—and the elder Mullany knew he had a winner.

At the time, Mullany needed some good news. His car-polish business had failed, but he kept it a secret. Every morning, he dressed in a suit and went to "the office," but he was really looking for work. Mullany had already cashed in a $2,500 life insurance policy, and with some of the money, he hired a company to manufacture the perforated plastic balls.

Meanwhile, the boys had devised rules for their modified backyard baseball game, such as ghost base runners so as few as two people could play, and they even had their own slang for when the broom-handle bat swung and missed—or "whiffed"—the ball.

"We called it whiffle ball, then took out the 'h' so we could save money if we needed to paint a sign for the company," David A. says.

In 1953, the first dozen Wiffle balls were sold on consignment at a nearby business. Mullany made and sold wooden Wiffle bats the next year. Woolworth stores soon placed orders, and Wiffle balls have been sailing through backyards and thwacking garages ever since.

The inventor's grandsons, David J. 39, and Stephen, 37, run the family business today in an unassuming brick factory in Shelton, Conn. (pop. 38,101), with 15 employees. Their father stepped down as president last year, but he still knicks a hand. Grandpa Mullany died in 1990.

"This business is very personal to us," David J. says. "I'll run into little kids playing and guys my dad's age who have stories about Wiffle Ball. People play it as a family."

The Wiffle Ball design hasn't changed one whit, but wooden bats were discontinued in 1972 and replaced with yellow plastic ones. The company sells three sizes of Wiffle Balls by the millions each year. Ball and bat sets retail for $2.99 to $4.99.

American Profile

favorite backyard games more than a half-century ago.

Millions of plastic half-spheres become Wiffle Balls each year.

Fans such as Mike Alessie, 38, of Milford, Conn. (pop. 50,594), have never stopped playing. He directs the Wiffle Up! tour, which attracted 570 teams with tournaments in 12 cities nationwide in 2004.

"It's America's favorite backyard sport," Alessie says. "It's kind of a cult now. The ages of the guys on the teams are 23 to 35."

David J. smiles when he hears such talk about adult teams. Of course, he and his brother still play Wiffle Ball.

"And on Saturdays, we'll come in to get the mail and start throwing the ball around," he confesses.

So far, they haven't broken a single window. ★

Harvest for All

Iowa farmer Steve Anderegg has never met Dallas wide, from the Midwest to the South.

The country is hungry, says Robert Forney, executive director of Farm Bureau Food Bank.

In 2003, in partnership with America's Second Harvest, which serves 50,000 communities

"We farmers truly believe it's a tragedy that in this country, where we raise the most abundant and safest supply of food, people go hungry in our own backyard."

Anderegg, a fourth-generation farmer in Mason City, Iowa (pop. 29,172). "A lot of people need that little extra boost."

Dallas and her sister Terri, 6, and grandmother, Becky, Taylor, are among the 23 million Americans who depend on extra help from America's Second Harvest. Each month, Taylor and 350 families pick up groceries at Good Samaritan, a community pantry in a humble building just off the town square in Lamar, Mo. (pop. 4,425).

"With what they give you here, you can stretch it and make it last," says Taylor, 41, who worked as a dishwasher until suffering the first of four strokes last year. She and her granddaughters live on $292 a month in government assistance and $400 in food stamps.

"I get vegetables here. Sometimes they've got meat," Taylor says. "I don't know what we'd do without them."

Rural poverty

Across rural America in the midst of some of the richest farmland, poverty is increasing the fastest, says Robert Forney, president and CEO of America's Second Harvest. "Rural children are hungry. Kids can't have enough to eat, and 15 percent of those served by America's Second Harvest live in rural areas. The poverty rate for rural children is 19 percent, compared to 15 percent for urban children."

"It's a serious unseen problem," Forney says. "Americans care deeply about their neighbors, but poverty is generally a private experience. It isn't talked about. The problem can be invisible."

The working poor make up the biggest group seeking help at the network's food pantries, soup kitchens and emergency shelters for battered women and the homeless.

"The majority are employed and go through life facing serious decisions: rent or food, utilities or food, transportation or food," Forney says. "You can elect not to eat, but you can't elect not to pay your mortgage."

Raising awareness of the hunger problem, along with food and funds, is the mission of Harvest for All, led by America's first harvesters—farmers who provide the nation's food supply—and America's Second Harvest.

"We're terrific partners," Forney says. "We have a common objective to use food that otherwise might go to waste."

Gathering and sharing America's bounty

Steve Anderegg of Mason City, Iowa, spearheaded last year's farmer-led food drive.

America's Second Harvest

The nation's largest hunger-relief organization

For 25 years, the mission of America's Second Harvest has been to create a hunger-free America. It distributes food and grocery products in every county in the United States through a network of more than 200 certified food banks and food rescue organizations. Its mission also is to increase public awareness of domestic hunger and to advocate policies that benefit America's hungry.

Waste not, want not

Nationwide, Young Farmers and Ranchers are spreading the "waste not, want not" message. In California, the group salvaged 600,000 pounds of perishable fruits and vegetables last year to give to the needy.

"As the price of commodities came down and farmers couldn't make a profit, we talked them into donating commodities—lots of squash and broccoli and cauliflower," says Sarah Mora, 31, program director for California Farm Bureau's Young Farmers and Ranchers.

With its elaborate distribution network, America's Second Harvest can act quickly to collect, refrigerate and redistribute perishable food. The very heart of the program is taking the overabundance in one region of the country and moving it to another region where it is needed, Forney says.

"In the summertime, in northwest Michigan, they have plenty of cherries, but on that same day in New York City, there are literally hundreds and thousands of people who could use those cherries," Forney says.

Rebecca Ferrari, 24, sales manager at Babe Farms in Santa Maria, Calif. (pop. 77,423), and chairman of the Santa Barbara County Young Farmers and Ranchers, telephones farmers to seek donations of produce that are on the brink of perishing.

"We'll pick it up and take it to the food bank in Santa Maria," she says. Volunteers solicit surplus fruits and vegetables from produce packinghouses year-round, but they made an extra push last November and collected 6,000 turkeys for Thanksgiving dinners.

Elsewhere, Georgia Farm Bureau members filled 600 grocery sacks with 8,000 pounds of staples, such as rice, cereal, and macaroni and cheese, and delivered them to the food bank in Macon last October.

"We were overwhelmed by the response," says Bob Ragsdale, assistant director of field services for Georgia Farm Bureau. The regional food bank was running low after helping hurricane victims, and October traditionally is a slim time for contributions.

By the bushel

Last summer, Casey Schlichting, 27, a district Young Farmers and Ranchers representative from Mason City, Iowa, found a creative way to spread the message about hunger in America. He drove his 1961 John Deere tractor in a vintage tractor parade across northern Iowa and pulled a food trailer. Along the 160-mile route, he collected 700 pounds of food and $1,300. At the end of the drive in Clear Lake, Iowa (pop. 8,161), Manufacturers Bank and Trust Co. matched the cash donations.

"The time it takes to help out is minimal," says Schlichting, one of hundreds of Young Farmers and Ranchers nationwide who volunteered 4,487 hours last year at soup

This fall, Schlichting plans to visit grain elevators to launch a "by-the-bushel" donation program for farmers to raise more money to feed the hungry. "After you get done at the end of the day, are you really going to miss 50 bushels of corn?" he asks.

In Kansas, Shawna Blanka, 35, a fourth-generation farmer in St. Francis (pop. 1,497) who chaired the Kansas Young Farmers and Ranchers last year, wants to start a similar donation program for wheat farmers. Bushels donated could be turned into cash or loaves of bread for food banks. The Kansas group collected 770 pounds of food and $589 last year for Harvest for All.

Casey Schlichting collected 700 pounds of food and $1,300 during a 160-mile tractor ride across northern Iowa last year.

Sharing the bounty

Providing meals for America's hungry families is becoming tougher because of growing needs. At St. Susanne Catholic Church in Mount Vernon, Mo. (pop. 4017), director Joan Ross says that sometimes 15 to 20 cars are lined up waiting for the doors to open.

"People get laid off and have no income," Ross says. "Some are disabled or just can't get a good-paying job. We have a lot of elderly people."

The pantry serves 300 families a month, including Shirley and Robert Karch of Mount Vernon, who work as school and hospital cooks and have three teenage boys.

"I make menus, and I just buy what I think will feed us. I buy the best bargains," says Shirley, 43. Even so, the family depends on the boxes of groceries—containing bread, peanut butter, canned meats and vegetables—provided by St. Susanne's.

"It helps us stretch the food," Shirley says. "It's kind of hard. You've got kids in high school and they eat a lot."

Steve Anderegg, who spearheaded the national 2004 Harvest for All campaign, believes there is room for everyone to share the bounty at America's dinner table.

"If you want to help, stop at your local Farm Bureau office and donate a couple of dollars or canned goods," he says. "We can end hunger here and then abroad." ✨

Twice-Baked Potatoes

4 large baking potatoes
1 cup milk
1 cup sharp Cheddar cheese, diced
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 teaspoon paprika
Green onions, chopped

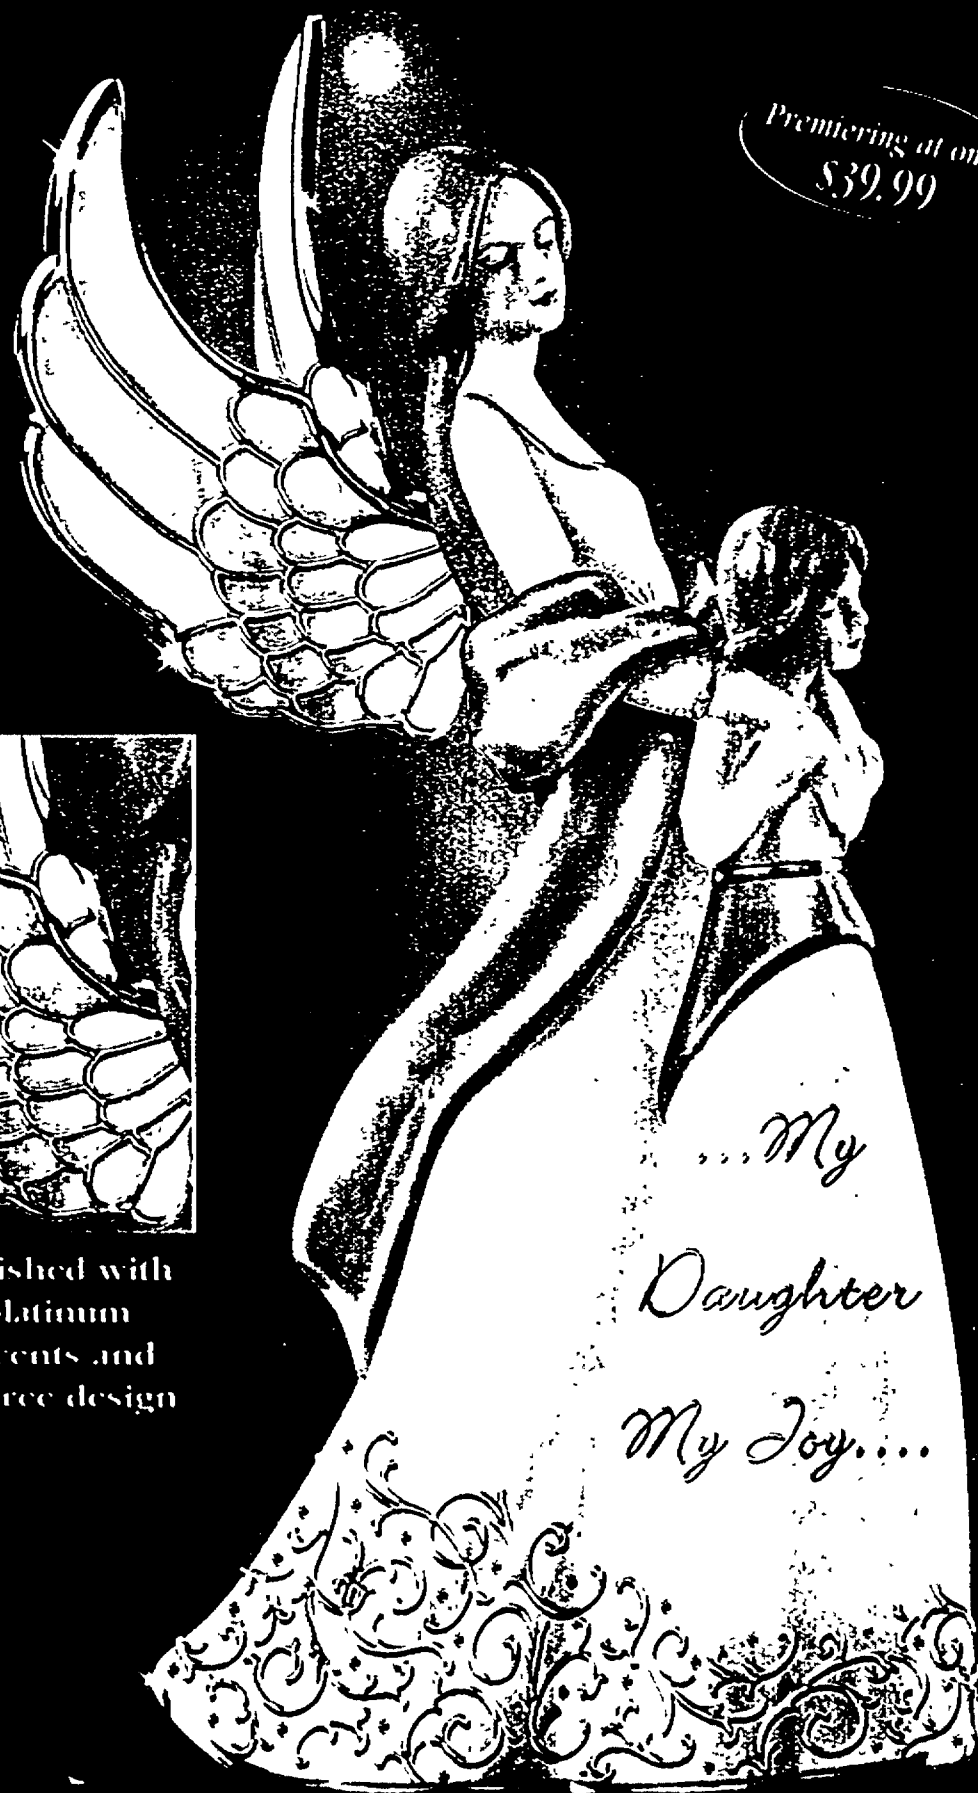

Scrub potatoes well. Puncture tops with a knife and cook on high in the microwave for 10 minutes. Check for doneness. Microwave longer if necessary, until potato pulp is softened. Preheat conventional oven to 350 degrees. Remove skin from top half of each potato. Scoop pulp into a mixing bowl, allowing a 1/2-inch "wall" of pulp to remain on the sides and bottom of each potato. Mix pulp with milk, cheese, salt and pepper; then spoon mixture into potatoes. Sprinkle paprika over the top. Bake in conventional oven for 30 minutes. Sprinkle green onions on top. Serves 4.

Shelly Fairchild debut CD, Ride, is a blend of country, rock and blues

by BEVERLY KEEL
Entertainment Editor

Ride of a Lifetime

Shelly Fairchild is having the ride of her life, fulfilling her dream of becoming a successful country singer. And she brings the listener along on this musical sojourn on her just-released debut album, Ride, which unveils her blues-soaked Mississippi Delta style effortlessly blended with both traditional country and all-American rock.

"It's been a crazy ride so far in my life with just all the different things I've done, from musical theater to singing background vocals, and I never knew where it would take me," says Fairchild, 27, a native of Clinton, Miss. (pop. 23,347). "I always wanted to be an artist and here I am! That is my explanation for calling the album Ride. I hope it does that for the listener: when they listen to each song, that they have a range of emotions, that they laugh at the funny stuff and the sad stuff evokes that emotion so it feels like a journey."

In songs such as You Don't Lie Here Anymore and Down into the Muddy Water, she reveals the swampy roar in her voice. "I know I have a lot of edge to my voice—well, to everything I do," says Fairchild, who has a penchant for riding Harley-Davidson motorcycles. "But I've always considered myself a country singer." And still a small-town girl at heart.

The daughter of a fireman and first-grade teacher, Fairchild was profoundly influenced

A Dream Come True

by ELAINE
HOBSON MILLER

P.K. Beville is a dream come true for elders living in nursing homes and assisted living centers. During the last nine years, the Alpharetta, Ga., woman has helped thousands of senior citizens realize their dreams, from riding a roller coaster to being reunited with a long-lost family member.

"A dream can be as simple as a new dress," says Beville, 51, founder and CEO of Second Wind Dreams, a non-profit organization whose mission is to let seniors know how special they are. "People in elder care facilities usually can't run out to a Macy's sale like the rest of us."

A geriatrics specialist for more than 20 years, Beville used to perform psychological evaluations of residents of long-term care facilities. During those evaluations, residents often spoke longingly about their desire to dance, visit an old homeplace or cook again, and Beville wondered why someone didn't make those things happen. In 1997 she stopped wondering and started Second Wind Dreams in the basement of her Alpharetta (pop. 35,139) home.

Yellow
e Mix

P.K. Beville helps nursing home resident Pollyanna Birchfield whip up a cake.

Since then, Beville and more than 450 volunteers and employees of nursing homes and assisted living centers have taken elders for blimp rides and to Disney World and have taught several seniors to swim. They arranged for one woman to ride a camel, another to direct an orchestra, and a man to play in the PGA Senior Golf Tournament.

In March, Pollyanna Birchfield's dream of baking a cake again was fulfilled. Birchfield, 87, a resident of the A.G. Rhodes Home-Cobb in Marietta, Ga. (pop. 58,748), used to bake every night, but age, failing eyesight and life in a nursing home made her dream seem like an impossibility. When employees of the nursing home found out about Birchfield's dream, they helped her make a cake to serve to her fellow residents.

"She hadn't baked a cake for 37 years," says Beville, who snapped digital photos of the event for Second Wind's newsletter.

"Mom loves sweets," says Pollyanna's daughter, Diane Hicks, who watched from the sidelines. "We had dessert every single night growing up."

Another Rhodes resident, 76-year-old Booker Linkhorn, also realized a dream through Second Wind's generosity. A former small-town baseball player, Linkhorn was in major league heaven two years ago when three nursing home employees took him to see an Atlanta Braves' game.

"I hollered, 'Hey, Sheffield, hit one for me,'" Linkhorn recalls, his eyes reflecting the excitement of hobnobbing with Gary Sheffield, the New York Yankees' outfielder who played for the Braves at that time. "He did and yelled back, 'That one's for you, Booker.'"

Although the focus of Second Wind is dreams, its mission includes changing public perceptions of elders and the aging process. "As people watch each dream unfold, they experience the perspective of older adults and gain a greater appreciation for their stage of life," Beville says. "Long after the dream has been fulfilled, its effects linger, giving all involved a 'second wind.'"

Second Wind Dreams, which is funded primarily through donations, has grown so fast that Beville left behind her six-figure geriatrics consulting job in the late 1990s. With her banker husband's blessing, she now volunteers 40 or more hours a week to Second Wind, which fulfills an average of three dreams a day in 41 states and two foreign countries.

Beville's own dream is for Second Wind to hire a full-time chief operating officer so she can free herself from fund-raising duties and return to making dreams come true.

"I love my work so much," says Beville, who believes her special empathy for elders stems from the helplessness she felt when temporarily paralyzed by polio as a child. "I love to hold elders, to brush their hair. I'm so enamored of the aging process and the miracle of that and how we see aging and how families handle it." ☆

Elaine Hobson Miller is a freelance writer in Asheville, Ala.

"You have a lot of accountability in everything you do. That's taught me you have to place that in your life, even if you are in a big city or going from a bus to a plane. You need stable, grounded people around you."

She co-wrote the song Tiny Town after she wasn't able to make it back to Mississippi for a cousin's birthday. "I really love my family and I'm close to them and it's tough," she says of being away from home. "It was my chance to tell my mom, 'I love you and appreciate everything you've done for me, but I have to follow my heart and dreams.'"

Those dreams came early for Fairchild, who began playing guitar at age 6 and singing in public at age 13. She landed the starring role in the musical Always, Patsy Cline at age 19 in Jackson, Miss., and later joined the national touring company of Beehive. "Even though I was a little afraid," she says of performing 27 Cline songs onstage, "I still had something burning in me that said, 'You can do this; just work hard. Don't let anybody stop you.'"

She moved to Nashville, Tenn., in 1997 and in 2003 landed a record deal with Sony Music. Despite her music success, she earned a cosmetology license in 2003 and now cuts her band members' hair. "In my brain, it was Plan B," she says. "Tammy Wynette had her cosmetology license until the day she died. It costs me $50 to renew it. For a little money, I have options." ★

"Breakthrough Discovery To Grow Beautiful Nails"

Even if you have never been able to grow strong beautiful nails

By Jana Lynn

You too can grow strong beautiful nails with Trind™ Natural Nail-Repair. I guarantee it!

Now it's so easy to grow the nails you've always dreamed of—even if you have already tried a number of other things without success.

Trind is Europe's leading nail care product for women who want beautiful nails without the expense and inconvenience of acrylics.

Trind is so effective that it has even earned "pharmaceutical" status in Switzerland. This allows Swiss doctors to prescribe Trind Natural Nail-Repair for their patients with nail problems.

Sweden's leading women's magazine compared Trind Natural Nail-Repair with nail care products from industry giants such as Clinique, Mavala, Cutex, and Kanebo. They chose Trind as the "best" of all.

What makes Trind Natural Nail-Repair so effective? It reinforces the protein molecules in your nails and regulates their moisture content to make them strong and flexible. That's why Trind nails never get brittle.

Even women that have never been able to grow beautiful nails before are amazed at how strong and flexible their nails become in only two weeks with Trind Natural Nail-Repair.

Until now, many women with problem nails have turned to acrylics for the pretty nails they wanted. But, they have soon discovered acrylics have problems of their own.

Acrylics cost hundreds of dollars more each year than natural Trind nails. They seem to pop off at the worst possible times—and they are often the cause of nail fungus.

It's so easy to grow strong, beautiful nails that won't break when you use Trind Natural Nail-Repair. It takes only minutes right in the privacy and convenience of your own home.

Your Trind Beauty Kit for nails includes one bottle of Trind Natural Nail-Repair (about a 4-month supply) and Trind's Nail-Magic 3-way buffer.

Plus, you get a FREE Gift just for ordering before the expiration date.

RISK-FREE GUARANTEE

I guarantee you will grow stronger, more beautiful nails with Trind™ Natural Nail-Repair than with anything you've ever used—at any price—or your money back.

Try Trind Natural Nail-Repair and Nail-Magic buffer RISK-FREE for a full 4 months—then decide. If you aren't delighted, return them for a full refund of every cent you paid.

Do you have any of the problems they used to have?

"Best nail product I've ever used. In the past five years I've tried nine different nail strengtheners priced from $1.89 to $39.95. My nails continued to peel and split until I tried Trind.

"Now my nails grow — healthy! — until they need to be cut because they get in my way."

Sonja Strickland
Kingsland, Georgia

"I never want to be without your Trind Natural Nail-Repair again! I used it even though I didn't really believe it could make a difference in my splitting fingernails. Ashamed of them, I'd keep my hands as hidden as I could when with friends.

"In just a few weeks I am really happily wearing pretty rings on my lovely nails—my very own!!"

Jackie Klinsky
Watsonville, California

"After exhausting so many products and methods to help my splitting, peeling and non-growing nails, I felt I had nothing to lose and decided to try the product. I'm so glad I did! Believe me, it works!

"My husband had two split nails that would not grow out and he too, decided to try TRIND. Now he adds his voice to mine, 'It really works!' I'm amazed at the condition and growth of my nails. It's unbelievable!"

Nikki & Addison Fritts
Delray Beach, Florida

"I have always had trouble with my nails splitting and peeling. But with your Nail-Repair the difference in them is amazing.

"Over time I have tried everything trying to get my nails to grow. This is the first thing I have ever used that actually did what it said it would."

Wanda L. Shults
Okemah, Oklahoma

"I'll admit to being skeptical. After all, over the years I had tried them all (Sally Hansen, Barielle, Naitique, etc.) and nothing helped my thin weak nails that split and cracked before they even reached the end of my nail beds.

"TRIND was going to be my last attempt to grow my own nails before giving in to the expense and risks of artificial ones. Imagine my utter surprise and joy to find TRIND works where all others have failed.

"This is the most wonderful and amazing product! At last I can enjoy the beautiful nails that before I had only been able to envy on other women."

Michelle Hogan
Harvard, Massachusetts

"I just can't stop looking at my beautiful nails!

"I have NEVER in my life been able to grow, sustain and maintain such healthy, strong and LONG nails! They were paper-thin after having acrylics removed and the regularly recommended products did not help me at all!

"I am a TV host of my own show called 'Vee on Venice' and needless to say I need to look my very best from head to toe for my viewers.

"So now I finally feel fully confident that my nails will film beautifully."

Vee V. Garry
Venice, Florida, Channel 21

"I stopped using acrylics but my nails looked terrible, so for two years I sat on my hands to hide my nails whenever I went out. Then I tried Trind Natural-Nail Repair and it seemed like my nails became long and strong almost overnight.

"Now people think my natural nails are acrylics. Every time I go to my manicurist she just shakes her head. She can't believe how well it's working."
