Township awaits REI's decision on former prison site

■ Detroit already approved sale

By Pam Fleming STAFF WRITER

Northville Township Manager Chip Snider hopes Detroit Mayor Kwame Kilpatrick practices what he preaches.

With officials making a $2 million bid on 153 acres in the southwest corner of the township owned by the city of Detroit, Kilpatrick's adherence to his latest philosophy will be a key component in clenching the deal.

Real Estate Interest Group has already made a $3.8 million agreement to purchase the land that was formerly a Detroit House of Corrections site.

Detroit City Council members approved the sale to REI on Nov. 17, according to Sylvia Crawford, city of Detroit planning and development department.

But, Snider hopes the township may still be able to purchase the land, as the township has the cash on hand after selling 15 acres on the northeast corner of Five Mile and Sheldon roads last October to Northville developer Grand Sakwa Properties LLC.

In the township's possession, the land could be used for recreation purposes, kept as green space or be developed.

"I listened carefully to Mayor Kilpatrick's State of the City address," Snider said. "And he learly stated that one of his goals this term was to renew his rela-

The DeHoCo property has sat idle for years and is open land once farmed by prisoners.

Homes in the Arcadia Ridge subdivision north of Johnson Creek were built just east of hte porperty on land that was still farmed until just recently, said Jennifer Frey, director, community development, for the township.

Crawford said REI has a 60-day investigation period in which to determine if the property can be improved according to the developer's plans.

Not so funny

Wilkinson, 68, said he met the contest creator and fellow Northville resident, Bob Dorigo Jones, a couple of months ago at his laundromat. At that time, the business owner showed Jones, president of the Novi-based consumer watchdog group, his washer label, never anticipating the contest outcome.

The two men chatted about society's increasing tendency toward filing lawsuits, Wilkinson said. Jones told him about the contest Michigan Lawsuit Abuse Watch, M-LAW for short, created in 1997.

"Since then, the company has learned product makers live in constant fear of what will happen if someone gets hun while using their product and then sues."

Currently flanked by a nail salon and exercise studio, the Trader Tom's storefront blends unremarkably among neighboring retail and service outlets. But, the patrons say, the chemistry's inside.

LOCAL TALENT: Art House exhibit showcases Northville Arts Commission

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Dominique Moroz is inviting local art fans into her sunlit foyer.

The artist spent two years painting "Waiting for a Walk" showing her late dog perched by the front door of her Northville home. Part of her trademark technique, she blended oils on the large canvas to vary the texture and convey detail, like shadowing on the wood floor and reflections in the glass-front book-

"It's sort of a quiet, things-aregood piece," Moroz said.

The life-long painter and sketcher is sharing three of her works during the Northville Arts Commission's annual members exhibition at the Northville Art House, 215 W. Cady St., through

Many of the 55 pieces by local artists - painting, photography, sculpture and mixed-media - are available for sale. Moroz, who last week helped hang the sentimental portrait of her pet, Speckles, is sharing, but not selling, that painting.

Promoting the arts

Moroz and other artists -- Ellen Bennett, Gerardo Macias-Garcia, Andrzej Sıkora and Dawnice Kerchaerf — were at the Art House last week, preparing the exhibit for opening night Jan. 5.

Part of the exhibition committee, the volunteers carefully hung their works and those by their peers. The arts commission billed the inaugural show as an opportunity to share the work of supporters working behind the scenes to create a local art scene.

"We're trying to showcase all our local artists — our members — showing the talent that's in the community," said Bennett, another Northville painter.

Longtime local arts commissioner Sue Taylor said the group's mission is "to provide a vibrant cultural life for the entire Northville community and enrich the lives or our also offer an extension if REI needs it to do more research or surveying on the property," Crawford said.

"We do not want to get into a bidding war over this property," Snider said last Friday. "In government, if you rob Peter to pay Paul, you're always beholden to Paul."

However, he's hoping that, from one municipality to another, Detroit would like to see the land maintained for public use.

"I'd also like to think that REI, if they understood that we clearly want that land and we're willing to pay a reasonable price for it, that they'd give us the right to purchase it," Snider said.

Frey said the land is currently zoned industrial, with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad tracks cutting diagonally through the property.

However, industrial zoning has several options. "It can be R & D or research and tech," Frey said. "It doesn't have to be the site of a factory or building that houses heavy machinery."
This DeHoCo land is the last part of about 1,000 acres the city of Detroit once owned as part of the correctional facility that closed in

Frey said Detroit also owns a good deal of property on the south side of Five Mile Road in Plymouth Township, so the 153 acres in question is actually part of a larger parcel.

Mayor Kılpatrick is making an effort to sell off surplus lands to offset budget shortfalls in the city of Detroit, Snider said. Some recent deals have fallen through, including the sale of Rackham Golf Course in Huntington Woods and Camp

Brighton in Livingston County. The township hopes it can provide the city some needed cash if REI decides it does not want to develop the property.

Snider said officials could immediately close on the deal if the township should have the opportunity to acquire it.

"It'll be a simple line transfer with no tax implications," he said. If some sort of counter offer is to be made, township officials would have to seek the board's input first. Renaissance Strategies handled the purchase agreement for the township for the former prison site property, which was delivered to Douglass Diggs, director of planning for the city of Detroit. They have told us that the $3.8

million bid from REI has many strings attached to it," Snider said.

"We're offering an immediate purchase with no strings attached. It's the bird-in-the-hand theory."

Jones said. "Why? Because in America's unpredictable legal system, many judges allow personal injury lawyers to file lawsuits on almost any theory - no matter how ridiculous."

Wilkinson said his personal values line up with Jones' objective, citing a past experience suffering a serious - albeit unintentional injury during a chiropractor's adjustment.

You know the first thing everybody said? 'Sue him,'" he said. 'We're in a sue-happy country and it's wrong. "I've got to look in the mirror

every morning."
When Wilkinson purchased his washing machines, he asked the distributor's representative about the label.

"There's a reason for doing it the company's protecting itself," he said. "They told me the reason it's on there is a couple of guys got lit a up and one of them got in and the other guy turned it on.

"At 200 g-force, if it doesn't kill you, it's going to give you an awful headache."

After 15 years owning the laundromat with his wife, Sandy, Wilkinson said he's seen plenty of odd behavior. But, he said he's not afraid of washing machine fatalities.

"I've had little kids crawl into the dryer, but no one's going to turn the dang thing on," he said.

Last week, Wilkinson's usual routine chatting with laundromat customers was interrupted by calls from Associated Press and WDIV-TV4 news agencies.

On Jan. 2, the winning labels were selected from a list of finalists by listeners of the Dick Purtan show on Detroit radio station WOMC-FM.

"(Jones) told me a month ago I was in the top five finalists," Wilkinson said. "My wife got excited. I said, 'Don't get excited, we never win anything."

Group seeks more mentors and tutors

An hour a week can provide a lot

By Pam Fleming

An hour of your time a week · could provide a lifetime of change to a young person in your community. All you have to do is become a mentor, and Northville Youth Assistance is seeking more adults to participate in this worthwhile program.

"It only takes an hour a week to be that one person who can change everything for a child," said Suc Campbell, director of the program. "A mentor is a friend who doesn't judge, a person who listens and understands. A mentor is a role model who teaches responsibility and is someone to do things with.

"A mentor is a person who helps a child find a spark and follow his or her dream.

The reward? Knowing you've helped a young person live up to his or her potential. In fact, Campbell said more than 96 percent of mentors say they'd recommend becoming a mentor to a friend.

Northville Youth Assistance has been matching local children with mentors for more than 15 years, A recent increase in requests for mentors prompted a call for volunteers.

Volunteer mentors participate in a training program, then are matched with a Northville child between the ages of 5 and 16 and asked to spend an hour or so a week with the child, becoming a trusted friend and having fun together.

Northville Youth Assistance is a shared service between the city of Northville and Northville Township, with the support of the Northville Public Schools.

The purpose of this communityfunded program is to improve the lives of Northville's youth and their families through advocacy and program development.

The program provides a variety of programs that center around building resiliency skills in the community's youth to help prepare them for the challenges that lie ahead.

In addition to mentoring, NYA provides free counseling for youth and families in the Northville community, tutoring for elementary school children, homework help for middle school children, community service in lieu of suspension for middle school and high school students, youth empowerment classes

National Mentoring Month

To celebrate National

Mentoring Month in January, Northville Youth Assistance will sponsor a volunteer appreciation dinner from 6-8 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 30, at the Northville Senior Community Center, All volunteers, children with mentors or tutors and their families are invited to attend. Registration is required by calling (248) 344-1618 or sending an e-mail to youthassistance@twp.north ville.mi.us.

The next mentor training session will take place from 7-9 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 5, at Hillside Middle School For more information or to volunteer, call Northville Youth Assistance Director Sue Campbell at (248) 344-and speakers on parenting issues. A separate component offers first-time youthful offenders counseling, educational groups and community service as a diversion from the court system. "Research shows that when children grow up in unfortunate circumstances, the difference between those who grow up to be responsible, contributing members of society and those who don't is the presence of a caring, concerned adult in their life," Campbell said.

She said that adult can help a child become a responsible member "Imagine the satisfaction of being able to be that person for a child in our community." Campbell said.

That's what our voluniteers have the privilege of doing, and that's why we as a community are so grateful to them. They're truly, truly making a difference, every day."

Longtime mentor finds her role rewarding as young girl's friend

■ She's become one of the family

By Pam Fleming STAFF WRITER

Connie Orr of Novi is quick to not overstate her role as a mentor. Although she's been a friend to the same girl for about seven years through Northville Youth Assistance, she knows her place.

"You sort of know that you're not always calling the shots," she said. "You may have an it teaches you humility.

Her philosophy is to do the best she can and take pride in whatever the young person absorbs.

I'm thankful for what I may be doing," she said. Orr learned about Northville

Youth Assistance's mentoring and tutoring program from her husband, Craig, who had served as a mentor with the organization off and on for about a decade.

Sue Campbell directs the program now, and he knew the previous director, Maryellen King.

It was after she became an empty-nester that Connie decided to get involved.

"My kids were grown, so I went through the training," she said. "There's usually a period of time between the training and when they find what they believe to be your perfect match.

Orr doesn't know how they do it, but, "They always manage to match you up with the right per-son," she said. "I've only had one match, and it's the same little girl."

Kindergartener to teen

When Orr started mentoring her young friend, she was only in kindergarten. Now she's already in the seventh grade.

The mother of three sons -Reggie and Ricky Torrence and Jason Orr - she relished the thought of getting to spend time with a little girl.

"It's always been rewarding," she said. "She has a good family that has made me feel welcome. and their family knows most of my family. I think that happens over a long-term relationship.

Orr said her husband was a good role model as a mentor and that he always made sure as a male mentor that his little boy's father or stepfather did not feel threatened.

Mentors usually spend about two hours a week with the child matched with them, but it's really up to the mentor and mentee.

We do everything under the sun," Orr said, including making a trip to St. Louis to see Orr's relatives, visiting colleges and going bowling, to the movies and the library.

Northville Youth Assistance often provides free tickets to community or sporting events.

But whatever they do, just spending time together is what it's all about, Orr said.

Grant paves way for new nature area, park in township

■ Work will begin this summer-fall

By Pam Fleming STAFF WRITER

Northville Township will soon receive a sizable grant from the state to create a new nature area and park along Johnson Creek.

Cold Water Springs Nature Area - Linear Park is the name of the project that will encompass about 17 acreas along the creek that runs through the township.

The grant application to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources was submitted April 1,

Preliminary notification that the grant had been approved came to the township in December

An agreement will hopefully be forthcoming this month.

Traci Sincock, director of Parks and Recreation, said a $303,800 grant from the state of Michigan's Natural Resources Trust Fund will be provided, with a 50-perbution from Pulte Homes and the township for a total of $607,600.

The project will create direct access to Johnson Creek from Ridge Road between Five and Six Mile roads. The creek actually runs underneath the road.

Through an arrangement with Pulte, the township was deeded the property.

Important project for county

This is an important project for the township and the entire region, Sincock said, because it will make better use of one of the county's natural resources.

"Johnson Creek is the only cold water creek or stream in the western Wayne County area," she said. "It's a significant water feature not only because it's the only cold-water, spring-fed creek in the area but also because it's clean enough to hold fish habitat."

With the grant and additional funding, the township will be able to create direct access to Johnson Creek via pads and boardwalks. Nature kiosks are also part of the project as well as a bird watching park that will also connect the creek through Arcadia Ridge subdivision up to Community Park," Sincock said.

Currently, the township is awaiting authorization from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to go forward with the

"They have to pass legislation authorizing that the funds can be spent, and then the governor has to sign it into law," Sincock said. The funds can then be released to the department's trust fund.

The township will then be sent a project agreement for the board to approve.

After the board gives the project its blessing, township staff can work on hiring architects and contractors to actually do the

"We're hoping for a mid-tolate summer or early fall 2007 start on the project," Sincock

"It will be a passive, linear park that will also connect the creek through Arcadia Ridge subdivision up to Community Park."

Open Letter to all DFCU Financial Member-Owners

Restore Member Trust - It's time for a change in Leadership!

Dear Member-Owners,

DFCU Owners United is pleased to endorse three highly competent DFCU Financial members who are running for the credit union's volunteer board of directors. After fulfilling all the requirements mandated by the credit union's bylaws, Jesse D.L. Brunais, Linda M. Malec and Salvatore Mazzola have been notified by the DFCU Financial Board of Directors Nominating Committee that their names will be included on the ballot for the 2007 Board of Directors election.

Bruce D. Gearns, Ryan M. Hershberger and Ronald K. Seiler, endorsed by DFCU Owners United, also qualified to run for the board election. However, they have since notified DFCU Financial that they wish to have their names withdrawn from the ballot, and will lend their support to BRUNAIS, MALEC and MAZZOLA for the three announced open board positions.

Brunais, Malec & Mazzola pledge that putting members first is their #1 commitment. Each of these candidates has a passion for DFCU Financial Federal Credit Union, and they have expressed their displeasure at the recent attempt to change their credit union to a bank.

"It is no secret that DFCU's recent initiative to become a bank provoked very strong opposition from member-owners of the credit union. Early in 2006, I took the time to learn more about this ill-fated proposal by talking with others, attending informational meetings sponsored by DFCU Owners United, and reading industry related periodicals. The more I learned, the more my personal opposition grew. I now ask the members of DFCU for their vote as a candidate for DFCU's Board of Directors in order to help guide this great institution in an open and transparent manner as governed by the credit union's bylaws and policies."

—— Jesse D.L. Brunais, automotive product design engineer in Powertrain Operations at Ford Motor Company. A member of DFCU Financial since 1981, Brunais is a graduate of Michigan State University with a Master's degree in electronics and computer science from Wayne State University.

"I became re-involved in DFCU during the attempt to convert it into a for-profit bank. During that time, I also listened to members unhappy with other changes that seemed to be trending toward 'just another bank.' I was stunned because, as a cooperative, DFCU operates for the benefit of member-owners and should strive to be 'better than the competition' by returning earnings back to members with better rates on savings, lower rates on loans, and providing exemplary services so that over time, all members benefit. With your vote, I pledge to 'put members first' and to support continuing the great traditions of DFCU, its employees and members." ---- Linda M. Malec, human resources associate on the corporate staff at Ford Motor Company's World Headquarters. NOMI: New restaurant adds urban flavor to hometown scene

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Soft lighting, black chandeliers, smooth jazz: It's a new flavor for Northville.

Three weeks ago, Rachel Stern and Al Irish ushered their first guests in to NOMI, the new bar and restaurant they opened inside Northville Square on Main Street. The partners are hoping to fuse a stylish setting and right-size portions with hometown familiarity and personal service.

'We're trying to make it a place for a special night as well as a regular place to come and hang out and be with your friends," said Stern's spokesperson, Connie Gurss.

She said the reception has been warm to the American contemporary-style food.

A well-trained wait staff, executive chef and English mixologist are up-to-speed, she said.

More than tapas

Gurss said the restaurant owners planned the menu, setting and ambiance to appeal to Northvillearea patrons. Catering to customers will range from a special occasion dinner prepared table-side to providing high chairs.

"In the spring when it gets nice. we have the patio," she said. "It will be a great place to enjoy the downtown."

NOMI serves salads, soups, small plates and desserts intended for sharing, sampling of a variety of flavors or lighter meals. The bar features wine by the glass or bottle and specializes in freshfruit martinis.

With a top price at $15, small plates include Asian-style steak au poivre, Szechuan tuna and Chianti braised lamb shank.

'We don't want people to feel like it's a traditional restaurant where you come in and order a big entrée," Gurss said. "You can try more things. It's not limited to tapas, but it is something you can share and nibble.

"You can certainly come in at lunch for a soup and salad."

Something 'worldly'

NOMI's designer selected a slate floor, white onyx bar and intimate corner booths, evoking an upscale urban image. Gurss said the restaurant ambiance will change with the time of day and patrons' mood - from live music to televised sporting events.

"I think people are really going to enjoy the atmosphere," she said. "It's a little bit Las Vegas, a little bit South Beach, a little different than Northville is used to.

"It's something worldly, but still will work in a little home-

"He's not really competing with the others — it's a different kind of menu," she said, "We're not trying to be Birmingham

"We really want to accommodate what people here want. But we want to give them something a little different."

Another option

Owners of established downtown restaurants welcomed the new venue, named for its hometown NOrthville, Michigan.

"Anytime there's a new restaurant in the downtown area, I think it's a great addition to the community. said John Gallagher, co-owner of Little Italy on Hutton Street.

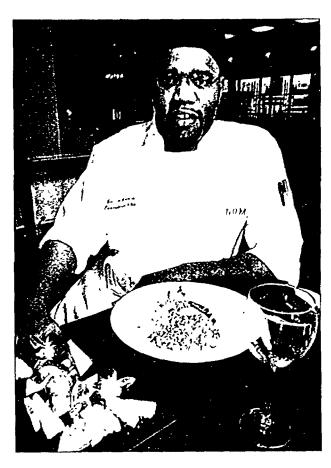

Ian Mackinnon, manager of the downtown landmark his father established in the family name. said NOMI is the type of establishment he personally would frequent

"There's always going to be competition," he said, "I think it's a great thing to bring a new demographic into town." Mackinnon said he expected the new restaurant would share his current chentele and draw new diners. "It brings new people into town and it's good for everybody," he said, "It's another great reason for locals to hang out in town.

Japanese firm to open $18M center in Northville Township

■ Abatement will be offered

By Pam Fleming STAFF WRITER

A Japanese firm, Meiden, which makes and uses automotive testing devices, plans to open an $18 million technical center in Northville Township in the near

The company, which will call the new testing facility the Meiden Technical Center North America, LLC, decided to move its expanded operation to the township rather than increase the size of offices in Novi.

The deal was a team effort between township officials and Michigan Economic Corporation, Development according to Dan Foster of Duff and Phelps, a consulting firm in Novi. Foster worked for the consulting firm Silverlode in Ann Arbor when he helped the township broker the deal.

The project is quite a coup for the township, as Meiden was looking at sites in both Michigan and Indiana.

"This is their first North America facility," Foster said. "It's great for the township and great for the state." The investment will include three elements - purchasing a building, making some improvements to the building and adding equipment.

Dynamometers test auto and truck engines, transmissions, as well as power train and chassis components and systems.

Foster had been working with Meiden on acquiring adjacent vacant parcels to build a facility. However, officials decided they would prefer to move into the existing structure.

"It was an existing building that was up and running but had been vacant for a couple of years," said Jennifer Frey, director of community development for the town-

Plans already submitted

The township recently received plans for the building expansion that will be reviewed by the planning commission.

Meiden worked with the MEDC on obtaining a tax abatement for its new facility.

"We have our own economic development corporation, which is required to comply with the MEDC standards," said Chip Snider, township manager.

Frey said Meiden will seek site plan approval of a small expansion of the existing building to accommodate the firm's equipment and so that it can comply with noise abatement requirements.

"I think they're committed to going forward with their plan," Frey said.

Businesses can only get a full and uses dynamometers, will tax abatement on a new structure.

A look at the parent company

Meidensha Corporation, Meiden's parent company, manufactures heavy, electric machinery. The company has four segments. The Industrial System segment offers electric substation equipment, automobile testing systems, logistics systems; motors and turbines for weaving machines and elevators; and computer components and network systems for information systems. Headquartered in Tokyo, Meidensha has 46 subsidiaries and nine associated companies.

Since Meiden chose to occupy an existing building, the company will receive only a partial abate-

District reviewing offer from teachers' association

By Renee Gates SPECIAL WRITER

Northville teachers return to school today without a contract and now with no scheduled bargaining meetings with the Northville Public School District. The district filed a fact-finding application receiving after Northville Education Association's last, best and final offer Monday evening.

"It's our hope [the district] will decide to come back to the table and bargain in good faith with us," said NEA chief negotiator Tom

According to the district, talks will resume upon completion of the fact-finding process.
"Further meetings will go forth after the fact-finding process is complete," Superintendent Leonard Rezmierski, PhD, said Wednesday morning. "Everyone will be involved in that process along the way."

The association is still doubtful. "I don't know if talks are going to happen," Silak said. "We had a regularly scheduled bargaining meeting [Monday evening]. The district asked for a caucus but never came back from the caucus. Instead they sent a mediator who said no new dates were sched-

Superintendent Rezmierski last week sent an e-mail to the teachers discussing school board negotiations. At Tuesday evening's school board meeting, Laurie Moore, Michigan Education Association unisery director, addressed the superintendent's email with a prepared statement to the school board, on behalf of Northville teachers.

"While we applaud your effort to attempt to bargain in public with our members, let me assure you that we are not interested in settling with a contract that will take our members further back than where they currently are," Moore read.

"We expect a fair an equitable contract and we expect that the district's bargaining team will return to the bargaining table and continue to bargain with us until such time as we reach a contract," she concluded.

Rezmierski said the e-mail. which was sent only to the teachers, was designed to inform them of the negotiation process

Tuesday evening as many as 300 teachers participated in a unity walk through downtown Northville and ending at the school board meeting. The meet-ing was overcrowded with teachers. CHALLENGE DAY:

Day-long seminar teaching local students real-life lessons

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Ever been suggestively whis-

. Been told to suck it up and take it like a man?

Looked at with fear because of your Middle-Eastern descent? Step across the line, please. Look back at your line of peers who haven't been. In the coming weeks, local students are going to take a one-day break from academics for lessons about power struggles — but not for car keys, curfew or ailowance. "Challenge Day," an exercise in acknowledging oppression and emphasizing empathy, is coming to a secondary school near you.

"It lets kids know how their behavior affects other people and how other people's behavior affects them," said Sue Campbell, director of Northville Youth Assistance. "The mission in that is: To be the change they want to see in the world.

"And for them to see they're responsible for creating the school of their dreams."

'A little bit at a time'

Challenge Day, a Californiabased non-profit organization, created a series of exercises designed to challenge students to change the world a little bit at a time Small group discussion leads into larger-group talk.

During this month and next. Northville Youth Assistance is footing the bill to bring the presenters to Meads Mill and Hillside middle schools and 100 Northville High School students.

Kids are welcoming the program's return at Hillside, said assistant principal Heidi Capraro, site of a third Challenge Day.

Campbell said students begin the day by finishing the sentence: "If you really knew me, you would know that ..."

Answers have ranged from "I'm not stupid. I have a learning disability" to "My grandpa's in the hospital and I'm really worried about him."

Coming soon

Challenge Day presenters, featured on Oprah Winfrey's show in November, will be presenting their program in Northville Public Schools. The $2,700 per day cost to host the non-profit, California-based organization will be funded by Northville Youth Assistance and local parent teacher associations.

Dates scheduled are:

Tuesday: Northville High School, 100 students.

"It would be nice to do the whole school, but it's just impossible with the numbers we have," said Sue Campbell, Northville Youth Assistance director. "One hundred kids were randomly selected and sent invitations."

Wednesday and next Thursday: Hillside Middle School, half the students attending each day.

Feb. 21-22: Meads Mill Middle School, half the students attending each day.

What can parents do?

Local educators encouraged parents to discuss Challenge Day with their children – but maybe not right when they get off the bus, said Hillside Middle School assistant principal Heidi

They might not want to talk about it that evening," she said: "That's a pretty heavy day."

Sue Campbell, Northville Youth Assistance director, said parents should broach the topic by asking their student what they learned during Challenge Day.

"What a chance to see how much your child has grown in one day," she said, adding there's always going to be a generabreak down their barriers in a smaller setting," she said, adding each group is led by a Challenge Day representative or trained adult volunteer.

"The adults are always surprised at how much the kids do open up, how much there is a need for a change in behavior at the school level, the need to treat each other better," Campbell said. "It's hugely meaningful to

"I hope we teach kids a lot more than academics here," she said. "I hope to teach kids how to be citizens — conscientious.

This is one day to focus on Campbell said teachers follow up Challenge Day's lessons the rest of the school year. The effects ideally will linger.

"At the end of the day, kids own up to past bad behavior," she said. "They finish the day pledging, 'I will not treat (him) that way any more."

Changed, for good?

Campbell said she knows her perspective has been altered by the group's "Be the change"

"I see kids I went through Challenge Day with and I look at them in a completely different way," she said. "And they look at me in a completely different way. "As adults, you see the facade they put around themselves - what they want you to see — they have to put that happy face on, that tough face As barriers break down, the tissue boxes come out, Campbell said. But Capraro stressed the day is not maudlin.

"It's also a day of joy, inspiration and hope," she said. "The kids look around and see the things they've gone through and the teachers and the parents have gone through - I think that was one of the more moving parts of the day. "It doesn't last just for the day. I think it's a bonding experience when the kids show their true selves."

Gratitude from Northville Civic Concern

Every year, kind-hearted members of our community "adopt" the individuals and families who are clients of Northville Civic Concern and provide them with Christmas gifts and essentials. This year's Christmas Depot was held on Saturday, Dec. 16, and was an overwhelming success.

I would like to express my deepest thanks to Northville Township for providing the building for the third year in a row and to the hundreds of volunteers who so generously adopted our clients, provided extra gifts, books, toys, clothes, food, decorations and time to make the holidays so bright for our community's less advantaged citizens. It is particularly gratifying to see such good will in our current economic times.

Thank you again, and God bless all for your help and charity.

Focus on leadership – not partisan politics

Back in 1975, along with some other Michigan folks, I was invited to visit Jerry Ford at the White House. Those were the days when some of us in the media were still getting used to calling the regular guy we'd known as Jerry "President Ford." Even "Gerald Ford" seemed a bit formal and strange. I had known Ford -- slightly - when I had run the Washington office of another

Michigan congressman in the mid-1960s. And by the time the '70s rolled around, I was the publisher of a bunch of newspapers.

Why was I invited? I always figured Jerald terHorst, the Detroit News political writer who was for a brief time Ford's press secretary, put me on the guest list. And I likely stayed on because, well, it's always prudent to be nice to newspaper publishers from your home state.

Phil Power

As we talked back and forth, I reflected that Ford as President was exactly as I had known him as a member of Congress. Solid. Direct. Straightforward. He was much brighter than the comedians made him out to be. He had perfected the masterful art of fiddling with his pipe to give him time to reflect on a question. I've met a fair number of Presidents over the years, but Ford's down-home demeanor in the White House was the least > pompous of them all. Ford's reputation as a President has steadily grown since the days when he sent his ratings plunging and made a lot of folks very angry when he granted a full pardon to former President

Nixon, one month into his administration.

But what was castigated as a cynical political deal back then has come to be regarded in the fullness of time as a vital step in ending the long national nightmare of Watergate.

Make no mistake about it - Ford was a staunch conservative Republican partisan. But he was a man who saw opponents as adversaries, not enemies. Richard Norton Smith, former head of the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Museum in Grand Rapids, put it this way: "In contrast to today, certainly President Ford never confused compromise with surrender, or moderation with weakness. And while he had adversaries, he was convinced that he never had an enemy."

That quality, one of sane moderation — and the pro-found lack of this essential quality in today's political environment -- is, I am convinced, what lay behind the extraordinary outpouring of respect and affection that accompanied his death and funeral last week in Grand Rapids.

The ability to disagree respectfully is a quality that was once the core of our political system. And it's a quality that has been very sadly largely lost in the scorched-earth partisanship of today.

Few know this better than former congressman and state senator, Joe Schwarz, a moderate Republican from Battle Creek. 'The outpouring of affection for Jerry Ford comes from the fact that the three-quarters of Americans who do not identify themselves as hard left or hard right are weary of the hyper-partisanship that has been the order of the day in Washington and in Michigan.

"Jerry Ford could take an idea and dispassionately evaluate it -- whether it came from a Republican, Democratic or Independent to see whether it worked. He didn't care about the ideology. He only cared about whether it worked," Schwarz told me.

Last summer, Schwarz, a man with impressive military, professional and intellectual credentials was defeated in the Republican primary by a hard right former preacher. That, he noted is a graphic example of the sea change that has happened in Michigan politics since 1980.

Both Jerry Ford and Bill Milliken (governor 1969-1983) two of our most effective political leaders over the past half century, would be toast today if they tried to run in a Republican primary election," he noted.

Today's Republicans hold everyone to a set of rigid litmus tests, he noted. What if someone concludes that they are in favor of any of these Affirmative action in university admissions. Embryonic stem cell research. Tolerance for gay couples.? What if a Republican is skeptical that abortion is always wrong?

Then, the former congress-man, Navy officer and CIA agent said, forget it. "The Republican Party has concluded that each of these issues is an absolute disqualification in running for office, not trigger points for reasonable discussion."

And he added, "it's going to hurt the party if it has any hope of breaking out of the hard-right trap it's in."

I agree. Last November's elections clearly represented something more than discontent with an unpopular Republican President and a failing war. The turnout among moderates and Independents was enormous, a rejection of the kind of harsh partisanship that has infested our politics and, maybe, a yearning for something more sensible, for common ground.

And I think the ground may be shifting.

Over the past couple of weeks, I've talked with a fair number of political leaders in Lansing. The change in climate is remarkable. Gov.

Jennifer Granholm is thinking hard about working with the legislature to resolve the state's current budget crisis, recognizing she can't do it alone. New Speaker of the House Andy Dillon, D-Redford, wants to discuss policy, not how to screw the opposition. And new Senate Majority Leader Mike Bishop, R-Rochester, is excited about trying to find ways for "legislators who want to do the right thing actually to do it."

Hopefully, the healing quality President Ford represented during his life can inspire and nourish or politics after his

Because kids can be hesitant to take medication in front of their friends, some will rely on quick-relief inhalers instead of daily medicine. CPR CLASSES:

Northville Fire Dept. offering two life-saving opportunities

By Maureen Johnston RECORD STAFF WRITER

Jim Allen knows a three-hour class will change lives. The Northville fire chief said the city for the first time is offering a combined class in life-saving techniques — cardiopulmi-nary resuscitation (CPR) and automated external defibrillator (AED) — this month and next. He said he scheduled the $40 instruction in response to resident requests.

CPR is something everyone should know how to do," Allen said. "You never know when you're going to need it - at home, out shopping. It could happen any time.

Not too long ago, a quick-thinking runner saved a fellow race participant's life when he collapsed on Cady Street, Allen recalled.

"When someone goes down and has no pulse, that's when you use it," he said. "He used a heartstart on him.

"He was back running the next

Equipment training

The fire department, in conjunction with the Southfieldbased Life Support Training Institute that provides the city's ambulance service, is hosting the training at city hall, 215 W. Main St., from 6-9 p.m. Tuesdays, Jan. 30 or Feb. 27.

The class will feature training in adult, child and infant CPR as well as the use of defibrillators, which Allen said are found in an increasing number of public places. Thanks to a recent grant, Allen said the devices are now available at the Northville Senior Center, Community Northville District Library, Allen Terrace, the Recreation Center at Hillside and city hall.

In addition to schooling participants in the hands-on CPR techniques, the class will familiarize people with the "heart-start" device, Allen said.

The City of Northville and its fire department hope to soon offer a course on cardio pulmonary resuscitation. Here paramedic Richard Hamilton, right, and EMT Ed Jankowski practice CPR on a dummy as first responder Chris Petres watches.

"The piece of machinery talks you through it — it analyzes the person's condition and tells you when the time is right, you get a shockable rhythm."

Checking demand

Representatives from the Life Support Training Institute, which trains the city's emergency personnel, will conduct the classes, Allen said. The two sessions are in response to demand.

"I get calls on a weekly basis," he said. "A lot of people have to have this for their job.

Allen said high attendance could prompt hosting similar sessions in the future. People shoveling snow, exercising or exerting themselves in other ways run the risks that may require knowledge of rescue techniques, he said.

"I've always wanted to be able to set this up," he said.

Participants in either session will receive and American Heart

Mustangs start 2007 with a 50-42 victory

By Jeff Theisen RECORD SPORTS WRITER

After not losing a regular season game in 2006, Northville started the 2007 hoop campaign in similar fashion.

The Mustangs used 27 points from Alvin Storrs to knock off Livonia Churchill 50-42 Friday on the road.

"Churchill just played a fabu-lous game," said Darrel Schumacher, Northville head coach. "They outrebounded us in the first half and caused all kinds of problems.

"It was a good eye-opener, I hope."

Storrs came out on fire, lighting up the nets in the first quarter for 13 points, pacing the Mustangs to a 17-14 lead.

The Chargers (2-3, 0-1) scored the first two buckets of the second quarter for an 18-17 edge, but Northville recovered to hold a slim 26-24 lead at the half.

The Northville (5-0, 1-0) defense took over in the second quarter, allowing just seven points in taking a 39-32 lead into the final quarter.

The Mustangs were never threatened in the fourth, and Storrs capped off the win with a steal and a dunk to end the scor-

Dan Kirkpatrick added nine points in the win. Bret Spencer, Greg Hasse and Mike Rogers each scored four points.

Storrs managed to get 27 points, but Schumacher said he didn't have his best shooting night of the year. Schumacher is looking for other kids to take advantage of the opposition's attempts to take Storrs out of the game.

"I don't think they think of him as any kind of a selfish player because if you're moving and you're open, he's going to get you the ball," Schumacher said. "We're hoping that our guys will start taking advantage of (Storrs) drawing a double or a triple team."

Schumacher said he hopes his team doesn't expect to just walk out on the floor and get a win. Every WLAA team is going to be gunning to knock off the Mustangs.

"That bullseye is huge," Schumacher said. "I don't think there is a weak team in the league. Anybody can beat anybody. You better come to play.

The Mustang JV (4-1) also recorded a win, 48-40.

The Mustangs are back on the floor 7 p.m. Friday at Salem.

■ Mustangs fall behind 3-1 before rallying for win

Submitted to the Northville Record

In their first match since the holiday break, the boys of Northville Varsity hockey proved once again that they are a come back team. At just six minutes left in the second period, the Mustangs were down two but came back to end the period tied at 3-3 and finished the game with a 5-3 win.

Lakeland was the first to score with almost five minutes left in the first period. The Mustangs responded within ten seconds. when junior TJ Hohl scored on a nice set up from senior Brandon Wales and senior Kyle Storey. ending the period 1-1.

Just a couple of minutes into the second period Lakeland sent one home from the blue line. Five minutes later, the Eagles scored again, putting the game at 3-1.

The Mustangs found their opportunity with six minutes left on the clock when senior Anthony Deneau drew a penalty against Lakeland. The referee's arm was up only a few seconds when junior defensemen Drew Lamoureux took a pass from senior forward Mike Garbarz and sailed it through the heavy traffic in front of the net to put the game at 3-2. Less than two minutes later. Wales won a draw back to Hohl who skated across the slot and fired it into the upper corner to tie the game 3-3.

Halfway through the third. Wales set up what would be the game-winner when he kept the puck inside the blue line, skated it in and dished it to junior Ross Richl who patiently held on to the puck until Lakeland's goalie went down and Right lifted it into the net. Wales followed up his playmaker with a goal on Lakeland's open net, ending the game at 5-3 Northville.

Mustang swim team knocks off No. 1

By Jeff Theisen RECORD SPORTS WRITER

The Northville swimming and diving team started its brutal schedule by taking on No. 1 Brother Rice on Saturday. The Mustangs (ranked No. 2) fell behind early but rallied to win the final four events and escaped with a 94-92 victory.

"It's a huge win for the program," said Rich Bennetts, Northville head coach. "It's not every day that No. 1 and No. 2 get to face off against each other. We were fortunate on this

"Both teams are going to be a lot better in March than they were on Saturday."

It appeared as though Brother Rice won the meet by touching out first in the final event, the 400 freestyle relay. But the final Brother Rice swimmer was called for entering the pool to early, disqualifying the Warrior relay team.

The combination of Chris Keady, Brodie Blickle, Will Blickle and Jon Bardsley finished in 3:16.77 to earn the event and team win.

"We went toe-to-toe with them. We got behind by a bunch early and slowly chipped away at them," Bennetts said. "One of the good things about scheduling all the top teams in the state is you get to see everybody. The state title could be concrete. something that we could accomplish." Keady had a strong meet.

Sports Medicine

Get fit without getting injured

It's that time of year again when the gym is uncharacteristically busy, filled with new yet determined faces. New Year's specials are all over the airwaves touting area health clubs to take advantage of all those resolving to get in shape.

As noble and truly healthy as this resolution is, invariably there are people who end up in the doctor's office with some sort some sort of ache in a muscle they never knew existed. Shoulder injuries are among the most common for the gym novice. The rotator cuff is a series of four small muscles surrounding the shoulder that strengthens at a much slower pace than the large muscles of the shoulder. Typically, within three to four weeks the large muscles are getting stronger and at this point can start to overpower the rotator cuff, usually causing a tendonitis. Every year, we always see a handful of people who lift too heavy, too soon and the shoul-der can't handle the weight. Because the shoulder relies so heavily on its muscles for stability, when they give way, it often results in significant ligament damage to the shoulder. usually during a shoulder or chest press exercise. While important with all joints, it's especially vital to warm up and learn how to properly tune the fine muscles of the shoulder when beginning an exercise program.

In our practice, it's not the New Year until you've seen four or five new back injuries by 10 AM. Similar to the shoulder, the back muscles often strengthen more slowly than other muscles in the body, leaving it vulnerable to strains. Two simple points can help avoid this common problem: 1) Stretch, stretch, stretch. While important for all muscle, it's particularly valuable in back injury prevention. 2) Strengthen the abs. These muscles complement the spinal muscles as the other 'trunk stabilizing' muscles and, unlike the back, are less prone to injury and respond quickly to strengthening exercises.

Running injuries are also uncannily common in January and February. These range from an ankle sprain due to a fall off a treadmill to the more typical knee, ankle and foot tendonitis. Treadmills and stairchmbers are the usual suspects when it comes to these nagging injuries. These are usually a result of increasing one's training too fast rather than a gradual progression in intensity and length of workout. As a general rule of thumb, a month is an appropriate length of time for building to a distance or time goal in cardiovascular training. Additionally, while the stairclimbers and treadmills are excellent from a cardiovascular standpoint, cycling and elliptical machines are easier in the

The most practical piece of advice is this: Take advantage of the personal training offered by most gyms. This perk is especially common as part of a beginner's New Year's resolution package. Most personal trainers I've encountered are very knowledgeable when it comes to starting people properly on an exercise routine. They tend to have a good feel for who needs to take it slow and who can ramp up their activities a little more quickly. In spite of all the pitfalls and potential injuries, the benefits of exercise and getting in shape far outweigh the small chance of injuries which, with the proper instruction, can often be reduced to almost nothing.

Dr. Sean Bak is a Novi resident and an orthopedic surgeon who specializes in shoulder reconstruction and sports medicine. Bak takes care of the athletes of Oakland University and several area high schools. His practice, Performance Orthopedic, is based out of Beaumont Hospital.

Hidden Spring Veterinary Clinic keeps pets healthy

By Kate Phillips SPECIAL WRITER

Curling up with a good book and two cats. Taking a walk, or playing fetch with a dog. Putting a funny hat on the family pet. There isn't anything better than pets. They share the happiest memories of life, and are still there with unconditional love even when times aren't so fun.

Hidden Spring Veterinary Clinic in Northyalle provides the same caring, personal treatment for family pets today as it has done for more than 30 years.

LIKE FAMILY

The staff at Hidden Spring have hearts large enough to include all of their clients humans and animals.

We treat our clients and their pets like they are a part of our family," said Carol Geake, DVM, owner of Hidden Spring.

"I am proud of the entire staff, because they make a serious difference in the lives of so many pets and their owners," said Janet Talbot, practice manager. "We get so attached to the pets we treat and feel the heartbreak whenever a pet dies."

Some vet practices send sympathy cards to clients who have lost a pet, but the people at Hidden Spring go one step beyond that

"We make a paw print of the deceased pet in clay as a personal memento for clients to remember their pets and give it to them in addition to a sympathy card," Talbot said. "I think it means a lot to them."

TWICE A YEAR

Hidden Spring Veterinary Clinic initiated a "twice a year for life" care plan to help increase the lifespan of pets. The practice has found that increasing examinations from once a year to twice a year helps educate owners and keeps pets healthier

The practice first piloted the program with senior animals and noticed astounding results. The pets were healthier and received more preventive treatments and the owners were happier with the level of care.

The program was extended to animals of all ages, because while aging pets need increased monitoring, young pets also need thorough care for health and behavior issues.

Talbot said that families sometimes decide to give away a pet due to problems with house training, teething, scratching and other behavior issues. The veterinarians can work on behavior training with families so that problems don't get to the point where the pet no longer welcome in the home.

Pets age much faster than humans, generally seven years to one, so it's important for pets to see the doctor more often. Bi-annual exams allow the vet to catch problems earlier so solutions are simpler and more effec-

HEALTHY TEETH

During dental health month, Hidden Spring is trying to increase awareness of dental issues in pets.

For example, hard pet food keeps an animal's mouth healthier than soft "people

HELPING OTHERS

The Hidden Spring family continues to grow. The practice also operates a pet adoption service in an effort to find good homes for healthy cats. The practice now has five cats that are ready for adoption.

These are all loving cats that need to be placed in homes as soon as possible," said Talbot. "I hope we can find them loving homes with new families.

It also recently started the Susan B. Galli-Angel Fund in memory of an inspiring long-time client who passed away last fall. The fund accepts donations from the community. and will use the money to help clients who can't afford services that their pet needs, and would otherwise go without.

"Providing a fund like this can mean the difference between life or death for a pet in need," Talbot said.

DECADES OF CARE

Dr. Geake started the business 35 years ago in a small office on Eight Mile Road, just west of Beek Road in Northville. Today, the practice operates out of a large modern facil-

With open fields, and horses grazing on the property, it's a tranquil atmosphere for what could otherwise be a stressful visit. Both animals and humans feel more relaxed after a walk around the grounds, or a minute resting in the beautiful waiting area.

The veterinary practice treats hundreds of dogs, cats, small animals and some exotic pets. The clinic's staff now numbers 20 members, including veterinarians Cynthia Eichman, Kim Berrie and Barbara Scheffler.

Several support staff members are licensed veterinary technicians, and have graduated, or are pursuing advanced veterinary training from Wayne County Community College.

The entire staff is pleased that Hidden Spring has been voted the best veterinary clinic for the past five years in the Northville Record People's Choice Awards. They view it as a positive indication of client satisfac-

Perfect clothing comes from a perfect fit

Alexander's Custom Clothiers provides fine suits, expert tailoring

By Kate Phillips SPECIAL WRITER

he key to a smart suit is great fit. At Alexander's Custom Clothiers in Northville, Alexander Hamka is part tailor part artist.

'My job is to make sure you get a perfect fit," said Alexander.

FITTING A SUIT

A beautiful suit looks terrible if it is ill-fitting. And it can look even worse with sloppy tailoring.

"I make sure that made-tomeasure suits fit like a custom suit," said Alexander, whose careful tailoring is in demand throughout the area.

The Northville tailor looks at the current trends and makes sure that clients get the fit that looks right on them, and keeps them looking updated.

Alexander was recently invited to be on the cutting team for a line of suits carried in his store. He'll soon be traveling to Montreal to provide input on the new designs.

The tailor suggests clients wear a suit that fits well when they come in for a suit fitting. It helps him take accurate measurements, and get an idea of what the client is looking for, or wants to avoid.

"I ask people about the clothes they normally wear," said Alex. "What they like or dislike about their wardrobe can help me introduce them to clothing they will

Not just any suit will do. A black suit just isn't quite right for an everyday business suit or important interviews. It looks better at more social occasions, such as weddings, Alex

All in all, the mainstay of a business wardrobe should be charcoal gray and navy suits, in solids or pinstripes.

"Then accentuate wardrobe with a suit in an earthtone," said Alex. "Earthtones make you feel good and add character and zeal to your wardrobe."

Part of Alexander's job is to make sure that customers get what they want and need. He asks customers questions about their preferences, lifestyle and the type of work they do whether they sit at a desk, are in front of a group or drive to client sites throughout the day.

A durable wool will look good even when getting in and out of the car a dozen times a day, Alex said. If the suit is for an interview or important presentation, perhaps a fine, soft cloth would make a big impression. A beautiful suit with luster and heavy draping could be perfect for social occasions.

DRESSING TO ACHIEVE

During hard economic times, Alex believes it is crucial to dress well at work.

Those who wear fine suits that compliment their body type are perceived as more professional, capable and hard working, and leave clients with a good impression of the company. Clients,

NOT ORDINARY CLOTHING

Alexander's Custom Clothiers can partner with those who are starting a new fitness routine. The right suit will help a client look like they've already lost weight, then the clothing will look even better once weight is

Alex helps create custom suits that complement the body shape of each client. Practically every piece of the suit is hand stitched to create a one-of-a-kind masterpiece. Custom dress shirts made of fine materials add just the right touch and are extremely comfortable for all-day wear

New book helps Realtors get the job done

The shift from a seller's to a buyer's market in many areas of the country isn't the only thing changing in today's real estate landscape. The influx of immigrants, the increasing influence of 20- and 30-somethings, and growth of technology and the Internet are all forces transforming the industry.

To help Realtors adapt to the evolving demands of this real estate market, the National Association of Realtors has announced publication of a new book, 1,200 Great Sales Tips for Real Estate Pros. The announcement was made at NAR's 2006 Conference & Expo Nov. 9-13 in New Orleans, La.

"This new book, as a go-to resource for every day and every deal, will help Realtors take their businesses to the next level in providing top-notch service for their buyer and seller clients," said Thomas M. Stevens, NAR president from Vienna, Va., and senior vice president of NRT Inc. "Real estate is a competitive business, and the professionals who differentiate themselves and can demonstrate their added value to the real estate transaction will succeed. As members of NAR, Realtors already set themselves apart from other real estate licensees through their commitment to a Code of Ethics and opportunities for advanced training and education. The tips in this book will further enhance their skills and experiences.

The book compiles information from REALTOR Magazine's past "List" issues, an annual series of tips and advice. The book includes information to help Realtors position and sell homes effectively in the changing real estate market, understand the needs and preferences of the next generation of homebuyers, and manage their businesses efficiently. It also provides a wealth of lead generation and sales tips, which are as important in today's market as ever before.

One trend that has transformed the way Realtors do business is the increasing influence of the Internet. An advance copy of the 2006 NAR Profile of Home Buyers and Sellers shows that 80 percent of recent homebuyers used the Internet to search for a home. That's a dramatic increase from only 2 percent in 1995.

. ' Realtors are responding to this demand by building their presence online. According to the 2005 NAR Member Profile, nearly half of all Realtor sales agents have a Web site for business use. The book 1,200 Great Sales Tips for Real Estate Pros provides tips for serving Internet-savvy buyers, including suggestions about incorporating video, establishing a successful blog, staging a virtual tour, creating podcasts, and even practicing tech etiquette.

The book also provides insights into serving a more culturally diverse clientele. According to the Joint Center for Housing Studies at Harvard University, immigrants have accounted for more than one-third of household growth in the United States since the 1990s, and more than one in 10 households is headed by someone who is foreign-born. Understanding how trends in home-feature preferences, decision making, and the home search process vary by culture is essential for Realtors who want to serve this expanding market.

For nearly 100 years, Realtors have been helping people achieve their dreams of homeownership," said Stevens. "With this book and other association resources, NAR supports our Realtor members as they work on behalf of homebuyers, renters, and sellers across the country.'

To order a copy, visit www.REALTOR.org/store and search by the book's title, or call (800) 874-6500, Monday-Friday, between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Central Time.

Realtor group recognizes national diversity efforts

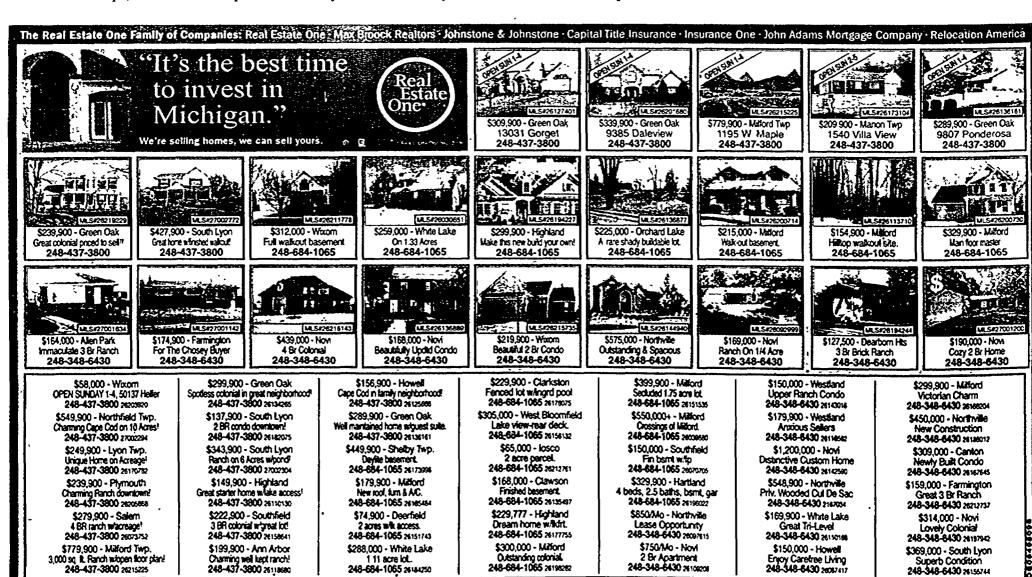

The National Association of Realtors recently announced the recipients of 12 Diversity Initiative Grants totaling $51,575. The grants are awarded to local and state Realtor associations to help fund their outreach efforts to minority consumers and bring more cultural diversity into association membership and leadership.

The Diversity Initiative Grant program was established by NAR to provide financial support for association programs and activities that position Realtors as leaders in their increasingly diverse communities. Grants of up to $5,000 are awarded twice per year to local and state Realtorassociations for their diversity activities. Since 2004, 53 grants totaling more than $154,000 have been awarded through the pro-

"Realtorsembrace diversity and play a positive role in building our communities," said NAR President Pat Vredevoogd Combs of Grand Rapids, Mich., vice president of Coldwell

A. Any privately owned business that operates at your community, including day care centers, gyms, and medical offices, are places of public accommodation and so must comply with Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Title III regulations say that both the owners of buildings containing places of public accommodation and the tenants operating those places are subject to Title III's requirements. You as the association and/or any on-site business that operates in your community may, in your lease, or in another contract, allocate the responsibility for keeping the businesses' place in compliance with Title III but both parties can be held liable for violations.

Q. I have recently read that the FDA recommends that people have defibrillators on hand to help someone in case of a heart attack. Our association is considering buying one and training someone, probably a board member, on how to use it. Do you think that is a good idea? A. Although having a defibrillator on hand might seem like a good idea, it is fraught with liability risks and your association may incur additional liability. First, someone must be trained in the proper use of the defibrillator. If a person uses it wrong and injures or kills someone, the association could be sued for having inadequately trained the person. Also, someone must be responsible for maintaining the defibrillator and making sure it is in working order. If the equipment malfunctions, the association could be liable. The association could also be liable if the person designated to respond to members' emergency calls for the defibrillator is late in arriving. In short, it is fraught with potential problems but you are best advised to get a legal opinion.

Banker-AJS-Schmidt. "By providing our local and state Realtor associations with the tools and information they need to carry out diversity initiatives, they are better equipped to meet the homeownership needs of our diverse society."

More than 20 Diversity Initiative Grant applications were received and the following 12 Realtor associations were named winners:

■ Southland Regional Association of Realtors, Van Nuys, Calif.

$5,000 to support training of minority committee members to enhance their effectiveness as future association leaders.

Metro South Association of Realtors, Morrow, Ga.

$4,075 to develop, recruit and train minority members as future leaders in the association.

■ Iowa City Area Association of Realtors, Iowa City, Iowa

$2,500 to provide a monthly lunch for members to learn about traditional and modern diverse cultural influences on consumer issues.

■ Chicago Association of Realtors, Chicago

$5,000 to increase the frequency of member instruction on fair housing, providing regular updates on best practices, legal reviews and suggested policies.

■ Lexington-Bluegrass Association of Realtors, Lexington, Ky.

$5,000 to create a program plan to promote diversity and prepare members to serve diverse customers in the area.

■ Northeast Association of Realtors, Chelmsford, Mass.

$2,000 to update the association's Web site to provide access to real estate resources translated into various languages and to hold two programs educating members about understanding cultural differences and working with diverse consumers.

■ Minneapolis Area Association of Realtors, Edina, Minn.

$5,000 to host a multicultural summit, with a documentary and panel discussions on race disparities.

■ Charlotte Regional Realtor Association, Charlotte, N.C.

$5,000 to develop a model program to heighten the knowledge among minority real estate agents of the benefits of being a member of the association and to create a stronger minority leadership presence in the association.

■ Cincinnati Area Board of Realtors, Cincinnati

$3,000 to create a diversity awareness program for brokers and office managers, which will provide them with the skills to address racial steering issues.

■ Columbus Board of Realtors, Columbus, Ohio

$5,000 to support a partnership with the African Community Organization that will provide language and cultural training to members working in communities with substantial immigrant African populations and homeownership training to members of the immigrant African community.

■ Realtors Association of Metropolitan Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh

$5,000 to hold a series of seminars to help Realtors learn about the increasingly diverse consumer base in the Pittsburgh area.

■ Washington Association of Realtors, Olympia, Wash.

$5,000 to develop an assessment tool for Realtor associations to understand their ability to work with members and consumers of various national origins.

Since 1999 more than 25 percent of NAR's new Realtor members have been minorities. In 2007, NAR plans to begin an ongoing campaign to encourage diverse members to enter the association's leadership ranks as well.

To help encourage minority members to become leaders of the Realtor community, NAR has created a new toolkit, titled Developing Diversity in Leadership. The toolkit provides tools such as talking points for member presentations, articles for publication in association magazines, and steps for implementing diversity programs. The toolkit also includes Realtor success stories and association case histories to help educate and guide Realtor members in taking on leadership roles at the local, state and national levels.

For additional information on NAR's Developing Diversity in Leadership toolkit or to download a Diversity Initiative Grant application form, visit www.realtor.org/diversity. NAR will consider grant applications twice in 2007; first round applications are due to NAR on April 20, 2007, and second round applications are due by Oct. 19, 2007.

MiRealSource inks agreement with Listingbook

Virginia Bratt, CEO of MiRealSource, announced that it has finalized an agreement with Listingbook, an organization which provides online services that connect agents and clients through an integrated platform of client management, sales productivity and direct marketing tools.

MiRealSource is a Michigan-based broker-owned multiple listing service. The agreement, which is exclusive to MiRealSource in the state of Michigan, gives all members free access to the Listingbook's basic services package. MiRealSource members will also receive a discount on the Premium Services package.

"MiRealSource is focused on providing members an outstanding value proposition," Bratt said. "With the addition of the exclusive Listingbook product, our members will be armed with the finest tools in the real estate industry."

Listingbook automates, tracks and analyzes client activities in an agent-managed, real time environment that encourages collaboration and communication.

THIS CREAT OUTDOOR CEAR

The North Face®

1) In the Northern Hemisphere, the north side of the mountain, usually the coldest, iciest and most formidable to climb.

2) Maker of premium outdoor gear, tested in the harshest conditions and trusted by many, including the world's top extreme athletes.

If you're The North Face," one of the top names in innovative, high-performance outdoor gear, a company rich in tradition and dedicated to exceeding customers' expectations, how do you test your product? Do you have machines pull and poke at it for hours, as "quality technicians" meticulously take notes? Do you outfit your Average Joe shoveling snow and have him report back? Do you put monkeys* in your parkas, give them backpacks full of your equipment, then wait and see what happens?

Heck no! If you're The North Face, you equip the world's most accomplished dimbers, skiers, snowboarders and explorers; then you send them on some of the most ambitious expeditions to the most extreme places on earth. Since 1966, The North Face² has sponsored over 100 expeditions in which athletes have explored not only their own limits, but those of the gear itself.

Extreme temps. Meraless winds. The tests have been real life, real tough. From the North Pole to the South Pole, the top of Mt. Everest to the Amazon jungles, whether reaching the summit, creating a new route or trekking thousands of miles, The North Face athletes and their gear have literally been around the world, while passing test after test.

Meanwhile, The North Face and their athletes have left behind more than just footprints on many expeditions. Through various humanitarian efforts, they've brought goodwill and left behind a better life for many of those whose paths they've crossed along the way.

Check out just a few expeditions The North Face' athletes have taken on:

Armour HeatGear. Ditto for baseball and softball players, who trust their UA ColdGear when winter refuses to give in to spring. And yet, the movement from cotton to performance apparel, started and led by Under Armour, is merely 10 years old.

Athletes swear by the moisture-wicking properties and the personal climate control provided by the gear, but there are also the studies and research that offer a little more scientific background to the benefits, mainly the advantage of shedding a sweat-soaked cotton tee, which can add two to four pounds of weight to your body.

Under Armour was born in 1995, in Byrd Stadium at the University of Maryland. It was there, in College Park, where the Terp's Special Teams captain, Kevin Plank, first had the thought: There has to be something better.

After warming up on the field then returning to the locker room twice before the game and again at half, Plank noticed that he and the majority of his teammates struggled in and out of their shoulder pads to swap drenched cotton T-shirts for fresh ones clean shirts that would be saturated after minutes on the playing field.

At the same time, Plank also took note that no one was changing out of their Lycra' spandex-based biking shorts, which had become popular undergarments on the gridiron for their compression properties. Most people just accepted this as a part of sports, but Plank had other plans. When his playing days were over, he set out to New York City's garment district to learn the cut-and-sew business. He was on his way to inventing the ultimate T-shirt.

Moisture-wicking fabrications were available before Plank visited his first fabric mill, and spandex was popular for a time in the 1980s. But to make base-layer garments durable enough for hard-hitting team sports, Plank knew Under Armour needed to offer the correct balance of moisture-wicking materials that provided compression, stretch and recovery. Nothing less would be acceptable.

Big E was so well received as the cornerstone for most DICK'S Sporting Goods' stores, Under Armour delivered its UA WOMAN manneguin shortly thereafter. This time, U.S. Olympic Soccer Player, Heather Mitts, became the model.

FAR COULD YOU RUN

Wait...that's like 400 extra pounds to carry. Run? Heck, you wouldn't budge an inch. Would be pretty sweet though. All your favorite songs to motivate you as you train and compete. Someone keeping track of your run, helping set your pace, providing real feedback in real time. A year ago, such an idea would have sounded like a bad joke. Today, it's no joke.

It's what you get when you take Nike," one of the biggest names in sporting goods innovation, team them up with Apple," a world leader in digital technology, and have them focus their talents on two of life's greatest passions: music and fitness. They call their brainchild Nike+ and it's the biggest thing to hit the running world since the first cushioned shoe. And it's got top athletes, celebrities and your neighbors all abuzz.

Check this out...the brains of this baby is an iPod* nano; it's tinier than today's tiniest cell phone, and fits securely into a sleeve on your arm. You take the sensor and receiver from your Nike+ Sport Kit, place the sensor in a special pocket in your Nike+ shoe and the receiver in your iPod* nano. Yes, it's that quick and simple to get started, and much lighter and less bulky than your traditional jukebox and workout partner.

ZUELZETT FOR

Put your iPod* nano earpieces in and you become immune to the gym noise, the crowd at the race, the sounds of the world around you, leaving you totally focused on your workout goals. You become immersed in your very own soundtrack, a playlist of songs you've picked out for your workout. Hundreds, even thousands of tunes, to help spur you on. And get this...you press the center button on your iPod* nano and your Powersong kicks in, giving you that extra boost when you need it most, when you want to push yourself to go that extra mile.

The rest of the second of the second
Meanwhile, your shoe keeps tabs on every step you take. The sensor inside sends your iPod' nano instant feedback, relaying to you display and spoken updates. You'll immediately know how far you've run, how far you have to go and how many calories you've burned. When you're done, you can plug your iPod' nano into your computer and log onto Nikeplus.com to sync and track your progress. The easy-to-navigate web page becomes your personal progress report, with literally no boundaries. Challenge your friends' times, whether your friends live in Valencia, PA or Valencia, Italy.

experience at DICK'S Sporting Goods with the latest Nike+ shoes,

And don't think for a second that Nike took anything away from their shoes to make all this possible. You can expect the same excellent quality, the same great style and the same outstanding performance you would normally get from any other Nike shoe. Only this time, your fitness routine will be so much easier and rewarding, and your friends even more jealous of you and your new shoes.

"[Music] seems to infuse strength into my limbs and ideas into my brain. Life seems to go on without effort, when I am filled with music." George Eliot (19th-century English Novelist)

There's something about music that gets the adrenaline pumping, the blood flowing and the mind.

There's something about music that gets the adrenaline pumping, the blood flowing and the mind tuned in to the task at hand. It can stir the warrior heart or calm the world-weary head. Recent research has even shown that listening to music while exercising keeps the brain alert.

PAULA RADCLIFFE TO RESECT OF F

"Whether it's a slow song, a fast song, hip hop, rock 'n' roll, samba, salsa...if it makes you feel good, it's going to inspire you to do something good."

Steve Nash (2-time consecutive hoops MVP)

It's as if music and workouts were made to go together, so it's no wonder athletes of all ages, amateur to pro, draw energy and inspiration from their favorite music.

"Music during training helps put your mind in one frame, it pumps me up and keeps me going." Lindsay Davenport (Triple Grand Slam Tennis Champ)

"You get fired up, your adrenaline gets pumping, everything's racing and your energy goes up." Tom Brady (3-time champion quarterback)

That's why Nike and Apple transformed a "jukebox" to fit on your arm and a "workout partner" to fit in your shoe, and called it Nike+. It's all the great performance of a Nike shoe plus all you need for a great workout.

"Sure, I'll sign it." you might say, "with the same penal from past years." OK, so you've been here before. Boldly vowing to shed those holiday pounds, knowing that come spring, last year's swimsuit will inevitably be too tight.

"I've tried the daily jog, the evening walks," you might say. "I even joined a gym; then I rarely went. I've tried diets from grapefruit to cabbage. Let's face it," you say, "another year, another broken resolution."

Not so fast. Not this year. Neither rain, nor sleet, nor dark of night — neither high dub fees, nor hectic schedule, nor lousy gym hours will keep you from the healthy body you desire. This year, you can stick to your resolution, and here's why:

As the price of high-quality fitness equipment continues to drop, more people are avoiding dub fees by bringing the gym home. With the ease, comfort and user-friendliness of today's machines, those same people are finally taking that life-changing step from vowing, to doing. And so can you.

When taking that step, it helps to understand what the body can actually do. "Your body is exceptionally skilled at never staying the same, and it loves to find the easiest way to get the job done," says Paula Franetti, Exercise Physiologist and Personal Trainer. "So, if you want to train your body to burn fat, get aerobically fit, or have more energy, you must consistently stimulate it to change."

Think of your body as a machine with the potential to maintain high fat-burning, muscle-toning operations. "Fitness machines themselves don't burn calories," Franetti explains, "but they're great tools to help make your body a better calorie-burning machine. That's why treadmills and ellipticals can be excellent ways to stimulate your metabolism and burn more calories."

Enjoyment. If you like running, hiking or walking, a treadmill could be the key. If you prefer a smooth, striding motion, such as sking or in-line skating, an elliptical might suit you better. "It's important you enjoy and are comfortable with your fitness activity," Franetti emphasizes. That way, you'll stay motivated from day 1 to day 401.

Goals. If you're looking for a total-body exercise, you'll like how an elliptical's dual-action resistance works the upper and lower body simultaneously. If you're looking for various calone-burning modes or weight-bearing exercise to help build bone-density, a treadmill might be your best choice.

Physical considerations. If you have back or knee problems, the elliptical's low-impact motion puts less stress on joints and allows for steady progress. "A treadmill is easy-to-use and good for all levels," says Franetti, "providing better intensity control, from walking all the way up to sprinting."

Variety helps you stay interested and constantly challenges you. Franetti recommends adding other equipment as you progress to mix up your routine and stay motivated. "Your body will adapt to what you do, so variety is important. With lots of options, you'll be in total control of making change happen."

Once you bring the gym home and can work out when, where and how you want, exercise becomes a natural part of your lifestyle — for good. "It's exciting to see how easily the body changes," says Franetti, "and so much faster when you work out smarter, not necessarily harder."

Snowboarders don't snowboard — they ride. They carve, shred and surf the mountain, wear baggy clothes, have their own lingo and that "yo, bro" attitude of the X-game set. Perhaps no winter sport is so self-consciously youthful. And yet in recent years, more older folks than ever have thrown their skis aside, strapped on a board, and taken a whole new trip down the mountain.

In mountain lingo, it's called "going to the dark side" – opting for a board over skis – and the number of Americans aged 55 and over making that choice has risen by 500 percent over the past five years, according to Snovsports Industries America. The National Ski Areas Association says there are now more than 200,000 U.S. snowboarders over Chickie Rosenberg, from West Orange, New Jersey, is one of the pioneers of this older generation of boarders. She took up the sport 17 years ago, when she was 50, and became the first female snowboard instructor at Killington. Now she encourages older folks, and especially women, to get out on the mountain.

"It's never too late to learn," she said, adding that the notion that the sport is strictly for "rad" adolescents is misguided. "I don't have any piercings," she said. "When I started, kids saw me as just another snowboarder, not someone their mother's age, and they still do. I don't think age matters in anything you do in life."

Rosenberg, who made the switch from skiing to protect her knees, has written two books on boarding, one for men, and another called Snowboarding for Women-a Guide to the Betty Shred Wannabe. She says for older folks and women, whose knees are more susceptible to injury, snowboarding can be a great way to enjoy the mountain. To coax them to ride, she offers "no-fall" classes. To most people who have learned to snowboard, that sounds like an oxymoron, sort of like "no-water" swimming. You don't just fall while learning to ride; you get whipped to the ground like a slingshot. When you catch an edge while moving down the mountain, your weight throws you off balance and you go down with a shwack! "It's called the snowboard slam," said Rosenberg and it's entirely unnecessary.

"This is often where male and female instructors differ," she said. "Men tend to think, no pain, no gain – that falling is part of the sport. I see falling as negative. If you're falling during a private lesson, your instructor is doing something wrong."

Unlike the younger generation of riders, hip dothes and aggressive moves simply aren't top priorities to the senior scene. Rosenberg says that's not the point It's about finding your rhythm, getting in sync with your tums. "It's about shifting your weight in fluid movements, not necessarily just zooming down the hill," she said.

Her real name, by the way, is Edith, but she's been going by Chickie since she was a child. Besides, she said, the name works better on the mountain. "Who would want to take a snowboard lesson from someone named Edith?"

I would like some information on David James Elliott of IAG. Is he married, how old is he and does he have any children?

—Ted Seefield, Munising, Mich.

Actor David James Elliott

The native Canadian, 42, is married to actress Nanci Chambers (who played Lt. Loren Singer on JAG), with whom he has two children. Elliott, who played a dashing U.S. Navy fighter pilotturned-lawyer on IAG from 1995 to 2005, recently was added to the cast of the CBS TV series Close to Home.

Whatever happened to Kathy Garver, who played Cissy on the TV series Family Affair? —Joel Gray. Charles City, Iowa

After Family Affair ended in 1971, Garver, now 61, appeared in various TV shows, had a small part in the 2001 movie The Princess Diaries, and also produced, narrated and provided character voices for a hit series of Beatrix Potter story cassettes and CDs. She's set to star in Soupernatural, a movie about what happens in a small town when the Messiah appears—as a server in a local soup kitchen. Married and with a teenage son, Garver lives in northern California.

Can you tell me what Yanni is doing these days? He seems to have dropped off the face of the Earth.

-Margaret Tobin. Albuquerque. N.M.

Not only has the romantic, one-named keyboard player not dropped off the face of the Earth, he's been performing all over it. A new DVD, Yanni Live! The Concert Event, captures one of the shows from his successful 2005 world tour. "It was an amazing night, and this DVD makes you feel as if you were there, front and center," says Yanni, 52, who lives in Florida.

I'm a big fan of Extreme Makeover: Home Edition. What can you tell me about Paige Hemmis?

–Ray N., Douglas, Ga.

The former wedding planner was born in Wisconsin, grew up in California, has college degrees in psychology and theology, and is completely self-taught in carpentry. Hemmis' favorite color is pink, the trademark hue of her tool belt and most of her tools. "I wanted to make a statement for women and girls everywhere that you can be feminine and still work in construction," she says.

Hooking with Heart

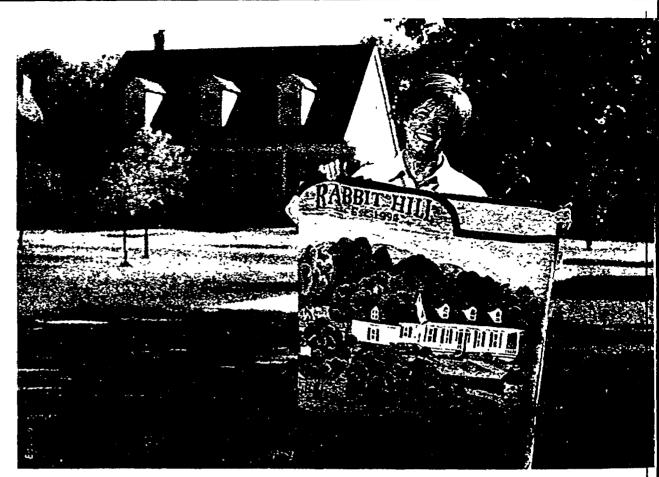

Susan Quicksall is doing her part to keep the primitive craft of rug hooking alive.

Carrying on a handiwork tradition that almost died out with her grandmothers, Quicksall had to learn the skill from books because she couldn't find anyone around to show her how to turn bags of rags into beautiful, handmade floor coverings. Quicksall now teaches rug hooking to eager students in her home in Oglesby, Texas (pop. 457).

"I wanted to get more people involved to grow my own hooking group," says Quicksall, 60, who runs a home-based needlepoint and pattern design business called Holly Hill Designs. "People like it because you can use the things you have, and because of the creativity. You can do it relatively fast, and have something you can use."

Her students have made everything from rugs to purses to elegant name badges using the traditional craft, which involves using a metal hook to pull pieces of fabric—traditionally wool—through the weave of a linen backing, creating a pattern on the front.

Susan Quicksall's "Rabbitt Hill" rug, depicting her home in Oglesby, Texas, took her some 500 hours to make.

Although the designs can be quite ornate, hooked rugs originally were made strictly to use as soft coverings for cold, bare floors. The craft all but disappeared when wall-to-wall carpet gained favor and as more women began working outside the home.

"It started when people didn't have anything," says Quicksall, noting that some of the earliest practitioners were sailors who used bent nails to pull strips of fabric through burlap to pass time at sea. The more Quicksall learned about the old craft, the more she marveled at the resourcefulness of early rug hookers.

"They had to use what they had for home décor," she says. "They really didn't have anything to beautify their home." For rug-hooking materials, "they used flour sacks, potato sacks and old clothing. They also used natural things they had in the garden to dye with, things they didn't have to go out and purchase."

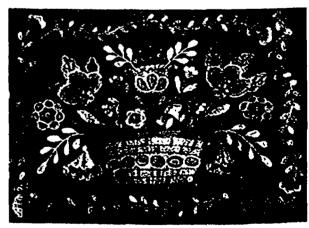

Rug hooking is different today, with refined, easy-to-follow designs and sophisticated tools. Quicksall supplies her students with a kit, which includes packets of wool strips, a hook and a pattern—drawn on Belgian linen, which resembles burlap—depicting a cottage and garden.

Her informal classes, held until 2005 at McLennan Community College in Waco, Texas, attracted schoolteachers, business owners and retirees. Now she teaches in her home, at workshops or during monthly meetings of Oglesby's newly formed Bluebonnet Rug Hookers guild. The 20-member group meets monthly to gab, hook and plan projects.

Interest in rug hooking is surging nationwide, says Carrie Martin, 49, an enthusiast in Covington, La., who represents regional chapters of the Association of Traditional Hooking Artists in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas. Her Wool Rich, Cash Poor guild will host the national ATHA Biennial Sept. 12-15 in New Orleans.

"The last time we hosted it was 1995," she says. "At that time in our region, we had 150 members. Now we have close to 400."

Martin, 49, attributes the rebirth to a trend toward more informal décor and renewed interest in crafting. Plus, hooking projects—especially smaller ones—are portable. "It's easy for women to take with them," she says.

Storytelling through rugs makes Quicksall's designs unusual. Many patterns feature flowers or an animal.

"Hers are usually pictorials," says Lisa McMullen, assistant editor for Rug Hooking magazine in LeMoyne, Pa. One design, Rabbit Hill, shows Quicksall's rural home of the same name as well as rabbits, deer and a dog and cat peering from the flowerbed.

Making Music with a Mission With a Mission

Bob Rowe bursts into a chorus of "This Little Light of Mine," and residents at the Grayling Nursing & Rehabilitation Community in Grayling, Mich., tap their toes and sing along—except for one woman, who slumps dejectedly in her wheelchair.

"I went over, kneeled down, looked right into her face and sang just to her," Rowe recalls later. "She lifted up her head really slowly, gave me the biggest wink you ever saw and grinned. Then she straightened up in her chair and started clapping and singing."

Such transformations are nothing new to Rowe, 51, a performer and songwriter who started Renaissance Enterprises in 1988 in Portage, Mich. (pop. 44,897). Through the nonprofit organization, nearly 30 musicians, theatrical performers, storytellers, painters and clowns bring the arts to shut-ins by presenting more than 200 shows yearly at nursing homes and other institutions in Michigan and surrounding states. Contributions from churches and other organizations and sales from Rowe's CDs help defray their costs.

Through the years, Rowe has witnessed hundreds of smiles light up the faces of withdrawn seniors and disabled residents as he croons such coax-a-grin classics as "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Goodnight Irene." He's seen elderly patients with Alzheimer's disease, who couldn't recall their own names, sing the entire lyrics to "You Are My Sunshine" without skipping a beat.

"We've had residents with dementia who were so agitated and irritable we didn't know if they could stay for the performance," says Ronda Bolin, activity therapy leader for Lakeland Continuing Care in St. Joseph, Mich. "Then Bob starts interacting with them, and soon they are laughing and smiling. He takes them to a happier place."

Rowe and his fellow entertainers sing nostalgic favorites from the 1930s and '40s such as "As Time Goes By," gospel standards like "Old Rugged Cross" and "How Great Thou Art," and Christmas carols. He insists that performers who volunteer through Renaissance Enterprises have "the right heart."

"Bob knows many residents by name, and he sings to them and makes them feel very special," says Kathy Libbrecht, activity director at Park Place Assisted Living Center in Kalamazoo, Mich.

Last September, the St. Bernadette Institute of Sacred Art in New Mexico named Rowe a 2006 Mother Teresa Laureare, citing his work and adding him to a prestigious list of previous laureares that includes former President Jimmy Carter, Archbishop Desmond Tutu and poet Maya Angelou.

Rowe says he always

Rowe says he always has felt "blessed" to perform for the elderly and disabled. As the oldest of six children growing up in Battle Creek, Mich., he was especially close to both of his grandmothers, one of whom helped care for Rowe's family for many years after his father suffered a heart attack. A great-aunt with two developmentally disabled sons further instilled his compassion for others.

"I saw my great-aunt in her 80s pushing two grown men to the toilet in their wheelchairs and shaving and feeding them without complaining," Rowe recalls.

When he was a teenager at Battle Creek's St. Philip Catholic Central High School, he accompanied the nuns to play guitar for shutins. Later, when traveling the country on the club circuit as a folk singer, he gave volunteer performances at local nursing homes.

"In 1980, I got a contract with a Catholic music publisher to publish my inspirational music in hymnals," Rowe says. "This is when I realized I wanted to do something more meaningful with my life."

After a show, nursing home residents with canes, walkers and in wheekhairs file past Rowe to shake his hand, hug him and ask for an encore visit. They look like parishioners thanking their pastor after a particularly touching sermon, which is not surprising.

When Rowe was younger, he wanted to be a priest. Now he has his own musical ministry, one that gives him the chance to witness miracles almost every time he plays.

Classic cars fill WestWorld in Scottsdale, Ariz., as the Barrett-Jackson auto auction gets underway. The event, which draws 200,000 car enthusiasts, is telecast live on the Speed Channel.

60,000 spectators were attending Barrett-Jackson.

The partnership came to an end in 1993 when Russ Jackson died, and his long-time partner Barrett retired the following year. In their place, Russ's sons Brian and Craig Jackson assumed the company reins. "When my father passed away, I took over more of the operations, and my brother dealt with the cars," says Craig, 47, who grew up around the event. "In the early years, I ran some of the different crews, the really glamorous ones like the trash crew," he says with a laugh.

Despite its early success, Craig's grand vision for the company often was at oxkls with Brian's strategy. "My brother and I butted heads on occasion," Craig says.

Everything changed in 1995 when Brian died of cancer. "Ultimately, on his deathbed, he said, 'You know what to do, just go do it.' So he basically told me that I was right with most of my thoughts and that I should just go with my gut. That was a hard thing for him to admit, but it was something I needed to hear."

Tom Barrett and Russ Jackson

Brothers Craig and Brian Jackson

Craig wanted to make the auction a larger-than-life event and brought in the most sought-after cars, improved the staging and in 1995, introduced online coverage. Two years later he put the auction on The Speedvision Network, becoming the first-ever collector car auction to be televised live. In 2001, Scottsdale officials proclaimed it Barrett-Jackson Week to honor the event, which drew 150,000 car fanatics who witnessed the sale of the star vehicle from the Batman Rations movie—the Batmobile. This year's auction, with all of its excitement and spectacle, will be broadcast live on the Speed Channel.

"Barrett-Jackson has evolved sort of like Vegas has evolved," Craig says. "You don't just go to a car auction to buy a car; it's a whole lifestyle, the atmosphere, the experience, making it as much fun for the wives as it is for the husbands, adding fashion shows and (Continued on page 10) charity galas. This year, the auction is going to have 40 hours of live TV. Think about that, how many events have 40 hours of live television?"

Despite its phenomenal growth, the auction has stayed close to it charitable roots and last year raised more than $2.5 million for children's charities.

"We're helping make kids' lives better," says Craig, who works closely with Childhelp USA, a nonprofit organization working to prevent and treat child abuse. "We help Carroll Shelby's foundation for kids that need transplants. And for the Make-A-Wish Foundation, we raised over $500,000. That will grant a lot of wishes. In fact, we've even had two kids whose wishes were to come to Barrett-Jackson. It gives you a feeling that it's not just about making money, it's about making a difference in our world."

Living out their dreams

Attendees Andrew and Constance Laux drove 2,900 miles from their home in Long Island, N.Y., to attend last year's auction. Along the way, they pulled a trailer carrying their red 1970 Plymouth Hemi Cuda.

"It's been a dream for my husband, who just turned 50, to come to Barrett-Jackson," Constance says. "We watch it every year on TV, and we've come with the best car we could find. And we're here at the best show in the world." For their efforts, the Lauxes' car sold for $189,000.

For Jim Rozum, 56, and his son Chris, 31, the event is a time to bond. "It's an opportunity for us to spend some time together," Jim says. "We really enjoy coming out here. This whole place is full of car people. You see all ages here—young, old. Everybody enjoys cars."

The pair hauled Chris's 1965 Ford Mustang GT convertible from Mitchell, S.D., and sold it for $66,000. "It spent two years in a storage shed," Jim says. "We were down here at Barrett-Jackson a year ago, and Chris says, 'Wouldn't it be fun if we fixed up my Mustang and brought it down here next year?"

"He knows every bolt on that car,"

Jim believes the auction's allure stems from being around cars that remind people of their youth. "People are buying the cars that they grew up with," he says. "That's why you see the cars from the '50s, '60s and '70s that are so popular here. When this Mustang was new, I was 15 years old. I remember sitting in one at the dealership pretending I was driving it."

Medicare Covers Erectile Dysfunction Correction

Nothing impacts the sexual health and well-being of a couple and their intimate relationship more than Erectile Dysfunction (ED). Therefore, any treatment used must address the needs of both people involved.

The male erection involves a very complicated interaction of many of the body's systems. The natural erection process can be interrupted by many underlying disease states and/or conditions.

The most common underlying causes of Erectile Dysfunction are: Diabetes, Hypertension, Vascular Disease, and Drug Interaction.

For many, the first-choice of treatment for ED should be Vacuum Therapy. Unlike drugs, pills, or injections, Vacuum Therapy is non-invasive and has no sideeffects. Negative pressure mimics the body's natural function and produces an almost instant erection.

This uniquely simple technology uses the body's blood to create erection much in the way the natural process works and maintains erection for sexual intercourse. The big difference is with Vacuum Therapy you control erection - with drug treatments the drug controls erection - not you.

In fact, Vacuum Therapy is predictable, reliable, and gives spontaneous results other treatments simply cannot claim. You and your partner will be able to control when, where and how long you want to be intimate.

Vacuum Therapy is also the only treatment that provides a significant therapeutic benefit while also creating functional erection.

Some men actually regain spontaneous erections as vascular health is improved using Vacuum Therapy. Countless couples have brought the joy back into their lives with the ED Vacuum Therapy systems.

Vacuum Therapy Systems are covered by Medicare and most insurance companies.* That means little, if any out of pocket expense to you! Call Discount Diabetic to order at 1-800-717-6689.

Changing lives

After years of organizing the show, Craig Jackson says he's found that The World's Greatest Collector Car Event is living up to its billing. "A lot of people tell me, 'You have no idea how much it's meant to us to have my son and I watch this auction and bond with each other," he says. "I've had families who've come out to the auction, who said this is their dream come true."

Nellie Jackson, who continues to work at the company's headquarters in Scottsdale, says she's heard just about everything. "A couple had twins," she says, "and they named one Barrett and the other boy Jackson. Isn't that great?!"

"That's very fulfilling, hearing those kind of stories," Craig says. "Just knowing that you've changed people's lives."

The 38-by-48-inch rug took her about 500 hours to complete and won second place in a reader-voted contest sponsored by Riig Hooking.

"It shows the terrain, the hills and things that are important to us-nature," says Quicksall, whose husband, Doug, is a master gardener.

Quicksall says she's found her niche with rug hooking. "It's where I feel the most creative, because it's from my heart," she says. "It tells my story."

A Thinner Dinner

Did you resolve to eat more healthful meals in 2007?

If so, this week's recipes, from American Profile's sister publication Relish, will help you get started.

Meatloaf is an all-time favorite, especially during the winter months when people like hearty fare. Preparing the dish with ground turkey breast rather than ground beef reduces fat calories considerably. The Turkey Meatloaf recipe, created by food writer Jean Kressy of Ashburnam, Mass., is packed not only with protein, but also with the healthful nutrients of spinach.

Serve the meatloaf with Maple-Glazed Brussels Sprouts, created by food writer Crescent Dragonwagon of Saxtons River, Vt., for a real nutrition and flavor kick. Available fresh year-round, each of these little cabbage-like morsels is loaded with vitamins A, C and K, plus a hefty dose of fiber.
