Red Wings ring bells for kettles

Continuing a holiday tradition, current and alumni Detroit Red Wings players and staff will serve as Salvation Army red kettle bell ringers Friday in Northville.

Autographs are available for a suggested minimum $10 donation. Fans who are unable to meet their favorite player or alumnus can support The Salvation Army by texting REDWINGS to 41444.

Red Wings will be available 4-6 p.m. Friday at two Kroger stores: 425 N. Center Street and 17447 Haggerty Road.

Funds raised during the 11th annual Red Wings for Red Kettles bell ringing competition will support The Salvation Army's STRIVE floor hockey program. Introduced in 2009, the program teaches the basics of the sport, team-building skills and positive sportsmanship behavior to children ages 8-12.

Since 2005, the Wings organization has raised more than $113,000 for The Salvation Army through Red Wings for Red Kettles.

Werth bids Northville Township farewell after 32-year career

Matt Jachman

As a kid, John Werth liked to sit in the police cruiser his father often took home and listen to the action on the police radio.

His dad, Paul Werth, was a detective on the Detroit Police Department's fatal accident squad for 16 years and spent about 25 years on the force. Young Werth also had uncles and aunts with careers in public safety in Detroit, both in the police and fire departments.

Though it wasn't until he was in college that Werth realized he wanted to go into law enforcement, the influences were there from an early age. "I think, somewhere there, it was ingrained," Werth said. Now, Werth is getting ready to retire after more than 30 years in public safety in Northville Township — nearly 22 years in the police department, where he went from patrolman to police chief, and the last 10 years as public safety director, in charge of both the police and fire departments.

The retirement, which will be effective Thursday evening, is in "perfect timing" with other events in his life, Werth said. "I'll be leaking to not waking

"I'll be looking to not waking up with my phone to my ear at three o'clock, four o'clock in the morning," said Werth, who plans to enjoy "me time" and family time, including daughter Meagan's upcoming wedding,

Northville resident Lisa Harthun is "derby strong."

It is a term she uses to describe not only the physical, but also the mental, strength she has developed as a member of the "D-Funk All-stars," a local roller derby team that is part of the Detroit Roller Derby League.

Since joining the league just two years ago, the 48-year old Harthun has gained an increased resilience that carries through both on and off the derby track.

"Roller derby has shown me that I can push myself to accomplish a great deal more than I ever thought possible. A few years ago, I never would have thought that I would call myself an athlete," said Harthun, who had never participated in a contact sport prior to joining the roller derby league.

Roller derby is a fast-paced contact team sport that requires speed, strategy and athleticism, according to the Women's Flat Track Derby Association, governing body of the sport. Played on a flat track, it can be done on any flat surface that is suitable for skating, such as roller rinks, basketball courts, parking lots — even airplane hangars.

Roller derby is pretty athletic, as evidenced by a recent women's game.

Werth is leaving the department of about 90 people to Todd Mutchler, deputy director of police services, or police chief. Mutchler and Werth attended the School of Police & Fire Staff and Command at Eastern Michigan University together and Werth has great confidence in Mutchler, who retired as public safety director in Canton Township earlier this year.

He started with Ray Garbarino, with whom he would later compete for the job of chief.

"We were the college boys. We were two of the first guys — I think two of the three — that had our bachelor's degrees," Werth said.

"They really instilled professionalism and really stressed the professionalism of everyone there and, frankly, our department thrived on that," he added.

The bar was raised higher after Chip Snider, who is now township manager, became police chief in 1990, he said.

JOHN HEIDER | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER Public Safety Director John Werth speaks to the media about a case in which a woman's body was found in a pond at a condominium complex.

Werth himself went from sergeant to chief in January 2001 and to public safety director in February 2007.

He saw huge changes in the township: the opening of the Meijer at Eight Mile and Haggerty, the opening, and closing, of the state's Scott Correctional Facility and the development of much of the area west of Sheldon Road. The population has swelled from 17,313 in 1990 to nearly 29,000 today.

Still, "It's a special community," Werth said. "It's a good, tight-knit community and it's a good place to work." Werth had toyed with the idea of joining a federal agency, such as the FBI, after getting local law enforcement experience, but decided to stick with the township.

Starting out, Werth worked as a patrol officer and then as a detective and also with two special Michigan State Police units that drew officers from several departments, one dedicated to narcotics enforcement and the other to investigating auto thefts. Those were good opportunities for a young officer to gain wide-ranging experience, he said

"When you're working those high-profile cases, you're helping an entire community," he said. 'Getting successful prosecutions there is very rewarding.'

Werth is also proud of helping spread the word about Northville Township around the state by staying active in law enforcement professional organizations. In 2015, Werth served as president of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police and pushed for the adoption of standards for the accreditation of police departments in Michigan.

The MACP program is a way for smaller departments that may be dealing with budget constraints to gain professional accreditation for less than the cost of a national accreditation program, he said. Northville Township is in line to be the first department in the state to be certified under the program.

"I think we left it in better shape than we got it," Werth said. "I'm very, very pleased where Northville Township is in the law enforcement community.'

In addition to daughter Meagan, whose wedding is planned for next summer, Werth and wife Nancy, a kindergarten teacher, have a second daughter, Jessica.

Northville Fire Department offers tips for safety during Christmas season

The Christmas season gatherings with family and friends, but also an increased likelihood of home fires and other household dangers. The Northville Township Fire Department is offering a fire hazard if not selected, decorated and cared for property. Christmas tree fires, though not common, tend to be more serious, according to the U.S. Fire Administration, a division of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

According to the National Fire Prevention Association, the nation's fire departments responded to an average of 210 home fires that started with Christmas trees each year from 2010-14. Each year, those fires together caused an average of six deaths, 16 injuries and $16.2 million in direct property damage.

In order to safely enjoy a Christmas tree in the home: » Choose a freshly cut mon causes of fires and carbon monoxide emergencies.

Having carbon monoxide alarms in the home is a must. Working carbon monoxide alarms will sound to alert a home's occupants when dangerous levels of carbon monoxide are present and will give people time to seek fresh air and call 9-1-1.

Remember also to clean the clothes dryer, water heater and furnace vents regularly and have those appliances serviced by qualified professionals. Also, make sure fireplaces are working properly, as they are a one of the leading sources of hazardous carbon monoxide levels.

Prepare for the upcoming season by follow-

» Don't overload electrical outlets or power strips with holiday lights.

» Keep candles away from anything that can burn, including holiday decorations.

» Keep portable heaters at least three feet from anything that can burn. Only use UL-listed heaters and those with tip-over protection.

» Have the chimney cleaned and inspected before it's used and also periodically throughout the year. Creosote buildup is the leading cause of chimney fires.

» Have the furnace inspected and serviced annually

» Clean your dryer, water heater and furnace vents regularly. Animals may seek refuge in the warm vents and cause carbon monoxide and fire incidents. The department also asks that residents assist others who may not be able to clear the snow from their sidewalks, driveways and fire hydrants. As Advanced Life Support providers, Northville Township's firefighter-paramedics know that every second counts in both fire and medical emergencies, so please make sure that your home is accessible at all times. » Dry trees ignite quickly and burn fast, so remove them from your home right after Christmas.

The winter season also warrants making sure there are working smoke and carbon monoxide alarms in the home. The falling temperatures lead to the increased use of furnaces, water heaters and fireplaces, all coming this checklist:

» Install a smoke alarm in every bedroom, in the hallway outside each room and on every floor.

» Install a carbon monoxide alarm on every floor of the home.

» Replace smoke alarms that are 10 years old or older.

» Develop and practice a home emergency escape plan.

» Clean the oven before preparing big holiday meals.

» Keep the Christmas tree watered and away from open flames.

Tipping Point presents 'The Santaland Diaries'

The Tipping Point Theatre will stage a holiday production, "The Santaland Diaries," by David Sedaris, for two shows only, Dec. 30-31, at the theater, 361 E. Cady St., Northville.

Starring Craig Bentley as Crumpet the Elf, the story is based on the true chronicles of David Sedaris' humorous experience as Crumpet the Elf in Macy's department store. From impatient parents to spoiled children, Sedaris recounts some of the truly odd encounters during the height of the holiday crunch.

If you aren't familiar with Sedaris' work, "The Santaland Diaries" is a perfect introduction to his comedic style. If you are a fan of Sedaris, then you know this is a mustsee cult classic for the holiday season.

The show runs at 8 p.m. Dec. 30-31. Tickets are $35 for the Dec. 30 show and $85 ($40 is taxdeductible) for the special New Year's Eve event, which includes a performance of live music by jazz pianist Mark LoDuca Sr. The New Year's Eve show features appetizers, including Rocky's Famous Meatballs, grilled vegetable tray, wasabi deviled eggs, imported fruit and cheese tray and salmon pâté with crackers and, of course, dessert provided by Rocky's of Northville, plus wine and a champagne toast close to midnight!

"The Santaland Diaries" is recommended for ages 14 and older and contains mature content and language, as the secret of Santa is exposed.

Bentley has performed the show on the national tour and regionally at Mill Mountain Theatre and Idaho Repertory Theatre. Locally, Bentley appeared in "The Explorers Club" (Meadow Brook Theatre) and "All's Well That Ends Well" (Water Works Theatre). During his 18 years in New York City, Bentley worked with many theater companies, including Ensemble Studio Theatre, Primary Stages, Rattlestick Playwrights Theater and The Transport Group. Bentley has a BFA from Wayne State University. He is a member of the Actors' Equity Association.

Dodworth Duo to perform at Northville Woman's Club

The Dodworth Duo, vocalists with the renowned Dodworth Saxhorn Band — America's premier 19th century brass band — will perform at the meeting of the Northville Woman's Club at 1:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 16, at the First United Methodist Church of Northville, 777 W. Eight Mile Road.

Vocalists Julie Craig and Ted Badgerow will present "Music of the Season" with songs and melodies of the 19th century. The duo is committed to bringing life to the songs of the 19th century — principally those of the Dodworth era (1835-95), an important and ever-changing period in America's past.

The duo's repertoire includes folk melodies of the railways and rivers and early American popular ballads of the time, songs of soldiers and civilians during the Civil War, songs of Steven Foster and more.

Soprano soloist Craig was a young artist at the Sugar Creek Symphony and Song Festival and played the role of Annina in its main stage production of "La Traviata." Since moving to Michigan, she has sung with the Michigan Opera Theater Chorus and has been a featured soloist with various groups throughout the area.

Badgerow, tenor, has sung professionally since 1971. In his 13th year with the Dodworth Saxhorn Band, he also sings with the River Raisin Ragtime Revue and is featured on its "Ragtime Detroit" CD. A long-time church choir director, Badgerow sings frequently throughout the area as the Stroller Extraordinaire and can be heard caroling with his soprano partner every year at Green-

Santa's helpers spread holiday cheer for area families at Civic Concern party

Maria Taylor Correspondent

Last Saturday, Santa's helpers were busy spreading holiday gifts and good cheer to families in the Northville area who might not otherwise be able to afford toys and gifts for Christmas — or the warm clothes and boots that become so necessary as snow and ice usher in the holiday season here in Michigan.

The good Christmas elves, otherwise known as members of the Northville Civic Concern, held their annual holiday distribution party Dec. 10 at Northville's Church of the Nazarene. The event brought together donors and needy families, who saw some of their Christmas needs met in the form of gifts from other families and local Northville organizations.

Marlene Kunz is director of the Northville Civic Concern. The entire adopt-a-family process is anonymous, she said. Clients fill out a "needs" list in August and then Kunz and her fellow volunteers try to get them matched with donors who can help out.

"They get to choose. Do you want a DTE (gift) card or a Consumers Energy card, a Meijer food card or a Speedway gas card?" she said. They also get to write down a few items they need, like a blanket, a coffee maker, winter boots or sheets."

"It helps with the daily stresses they have," said volunteer Nicole Tithof, who lives in Novi. The Civic Concern does community outreach yearround; Tithof oversees the Christmas gift-giving event. She originally got involved in the program through the schools, several of which participate. Winchester Elementary sponsored 15 families this year and Amerman and Ridgewood kicked in as well. The United Methodist Church adopted eight families and Our Lady of Victory did five.

Tithof said everybody who pitches in wants to help families with children. When she's talking to clients, she tries to make sure all the kids get something special. "I'm always, like, 'Look, it's Christmas — pick two toys, too,''' she said. Malesha Hodges is a Civic Concern client who's been coming to the holiday party for "a pret-ty long time." She lives at Northville Crossing mobile home park with her daughter and three sons and she spoke highly of Kunz and her work. "Marlene helps pretty much everybody," she said. "She won't turn anybody away — she's a good human being.' Sometimes Kunz gives her a call out of the blue, she said, just to make sure she's doing OK.

While Hodges chatted with Kunz at the check-in table, her kids headed off to find their gifts. In the church's big community room, tables were lined with everything from scarves and socks to stuffed animals, all organized by number so each family could find what was theirs. Her little daughter found one of her presents — a teddy bear that was almost as big as she was — and took it with her on her way to see Santa, who was waiting by a big Christmas tree at one side of the room.

Sarah Sutherland had her camera out and snapped a couple of photos of the family with Santa. All the photos were printed on-site so the families could take them home — along with some homemade cookies, baked by Margaret Zonca and her team of volunteers and set out in long rows of festive red and green boxes.

Twin sisters Samantha and Josie Ollis, both freshmen at South Lyon High School, sang Christmas carols. They've known Kunz since they were 4 and this is their second year singing at the event. "We came in to the (Northville Civic Concern headquarters) one day and started singing, then kind of just kept going," Josie said. "It's nice to see kids here," Kunz said. "A lot of people think young people don't care about this kind of thing, but they do."

JOHN HEIDER | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER Mark Fangmeyer helps to round up bags of gifts for families during the Civic Concern holiday distribution party.

Samantha said she's happy to volunteer, because she's seen firsthand how excited the children are when they get their presents. "Especially the little ones that still believe in Santa," she said. "I'm glad they have an actual Christmas, when their parents are maybe unemployed or don't have enough money for gifts for them." check-in counter, is carrying on a family tradition: Her mom has volunteered with the Civic Concern for 20 years. Business owner offers the why of shopping local

That makes a community unique? What allows a community to stay vibrant? The backbone is a diverse offering of locally owned and operated store fronts and restaurants. Nothing is quite as disheartening as going through a town and seeing empty store fronts on Main Street, only to find a brand new strip filled with national chain stores out by the highway. When our downtowns are filled with local vendors and restaurants, there is a feeling of life ... of growth ... of security.

We see the vibrancy of a community with the rebirth of the farmers markets, where locals sell handmade goods and veggies they grew nearby. Each week, we get to know each other better and form deep ties with our neighborhood. As a third-generation business owner, I have made some close bonds with my customers over the years. They know my family story; they even bring presents for my kids around the holidays.

There are several nationwide surveys that have studied the economic effects of small business on a community vs. the effects of national chains. Many of these studies show us when $100 is spent at a local business, about $45 of that initial amount stays within that local economy. When the national chains are examined, it is found that only $23 stays in the local economy. If you take that same $100 and spend it online, virtually nothing stays in the local economy.

Our local businesses can put so much back into the community because this is where we operate. Our accountants are just up the street, our employees live nearby, we invest with local media for marketing and support our neighborhood Little League teams.

When you shop local, you can typically expect to have a higher level of service from that retailer or a dining experi-ence that is totally unique. For example, often when you come in for an appliance part at my store, we will walk through the replacement to make sure it is a repair you want to tackle. Or when you need to purchase a new appliance, we listen first to vour needs and then address your wants. This ensures we find the right fit for you and not just push a product because that is what we want to sell. With every sale, we strive for excellence because there is a name and a family attached to our store. Our integrity is on the line with every person who walks through the door. So why buy local this year for the holidays? The answer is simple. You, as the consumer, have the power to make your community strong. With this power comes the ability to encourage new growth, creativity and develop a vibrancy that attracts new families to the neighborhood.

So this year, please consider getting your meats from your local butcher, buy your rolls from the neighborhood bakery (get yourself a sweet treat, too) and check local shops for that unique item that would be great for your Uncle Bob that he would truly appreciate. It is these types of simple actions that every day make the world a better place. Shop local. Support your community.

Legislation is working its way through Lansing that would require the state to notify local officials if another shutdown of a facility, like Ashley Court, were to take place.

Bill passed in response to Ashley Court closure

David Veselenak hometownlife.com

New legislation would require the state to notify local officials if another emergency shutdown of a facility takes place, such as what happened at Livonia's Ashley Court facility earlier this year.

The changes, pro-posed by state Rep. Lau-ra Cox, R-Livonia, is an amendment to other language that just changed some wording in previous legislation. The new changes would require the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs to notify either the local clerk or the local fire chief of the municipality where the shut-down facility is located.

"It just makes sense, especially in communities that are so densely populated like ours," Čox said. "We want to make sure those situations can be mitigated."

The legislation is a result of the shutdown of Ashley Court, 32406 Seven Mile in Livonia, which took place in May. The state ordered an emergency shutdown of the assisted living facility, requiring all its residents to evacuate the premises within a six-hour window. The closure caused some chaos in the area, draw ing in Livonia public safety officials to help manage traffic as people came to pick up their loved ones and move them to a new facility. Several residents were transported to other facilities by the Livonia Fire Department.

The day after, several local officials, as well as Cox, held a press conference regarding the shutdown. There, she expressed concern over the lack of notification over the shutdown then.

The bill was approved unanimously by the state House of Representatives and was set for a Senate hearing Wednesday morning. Cox said she was hopeful it would be passed through the Senate's Families, Seniors and Human Services Committee as well as the full Senate before heading to Gov. Rick Snyder's desk during the lameduck legislative session.

Since the shutdown, the facility on Seven Mile east of Farmington Road has remained quiet, though a white banner has been put up this fall concealing the name of the former adult foster care facility. As of last week, there was no license on file with LARA to operate and house residents at the facility.

Notifying local offi-cials, including safety officials, is a move that can help answer some questions, especially if surrounding residents have questions about a shutdown

Autographed Trump necktie is prized possession for family

Kim Harber has a Donald Trump story that will literally have you in knots

About six years ago, the Plymouth Township woman went to New York with a friend for a vacation weekend. They were strolling around Manhattan when they found themselves standing in front of Trump Tower.

"I wanted to buy something for my husband, so we went inside to see what we could find," she said.

It didn't take long before the two women came across a collection of Trump ties. Harber picked one out and took it to a salesperson who told her Donald Trump himself was go-ing to be in the building later that day and that he might be willing to autograph the necktie.

The two women returned to the store later that evening, where an autographed tie was waiting for Harber. "I looked at the front of the tie, turned it around and, on the back, it was signed: 'To Dan, kick ass, Donald Trump.' I loved it and my husband did, too, when I gave it to him," she said of the tie.

Mind you, this was back in 2010. Harber had no idea the man who signed her husband's necktie would one day become the nation's president. Her husband, Dan Harber, a local cardiologist, continues to wear the tie frequent- especially on Eleclv – tion Day.

"It's a prized pos-session," Harber said. "It's been a great con-versation with his patients ... my kids both think we should frame it and hang it on the wall."

Finding Dani: Missing woman's family, friends gather

Brad Kadrich hometownlife.co

More than a week after her daughter disappeared, Ann Stislicki cloaked herself in the warmth and comfort of friends and family on a cold night in Southfield and made something of a surprising request. "I would love to hear some laughter," she told a crowd of a couple of hundred people gathered Saturday evening for a candlelight vigil in honor of her daughter Danielle, last seen leaving this same complex more than a week earlier.

The details haven't changed: Danielle Stislicki, a 28-year-old Farmington Hills resident, was last seen around 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 2, leav-ing the Met Life Office building on Telegraph, north of 10 Mile, in Southfield. Her car, a 2015 Jeep Renegade, was found in front of her apartment building in the Independence Green Apartment Complex on Lincoln Court around 6 p.m. the next day.

Police called her disappearance "out of character and a concern to the family and police. They are asking the public for help with:

» Anyone who may have observed Stislicki and/or her vehicle leaving the Met Life office building/parking lot Dec. 2.

» Anyone who may have observed Stislicki and/or her vehicle arriving at her residence between 5 p.m. Dec. 2 and 6 p.m. Dec. 3.

» Anyone who may have observed her any time between 5 p.m. Dec. 2 and 6 p.m. Dec. 3, when her car was located.

» Anyone who may have seen or found a Samsung Galaxy Core Prime cellphone in a rose-colored case and kev chain with a charm and two keys.

But Saturday's vigil wasn't about the details of the case, as Ann Stislicki made clear from the outset.

"I'm not here to talk about the investigation or what is happening with that," she said. "(The vigil) is about people comforting each other and helping (Danielle) to come home. This is not a solemn event. It's a joyous event. It's important we focus on the unity of everyone who is gathered here to keep the light of Danielle shining."

The response to Dan-ielle's disappearance has been amazing. A Go-FundMe page was set up to establish a reward for information leading to her whereabouts. It started with a modest $10,000 goal; the total reward is more than $120,000 and climbing.

Family members talked Saturday about how important a role social media - Facebook, Twitter, Snapchat - has played in keeping Danielle's story alive and visitors to the vigil were urged to take a few moments to tweet or Snapchat about the event, using the hashtags #finddani and #lightthewayfordani.

West Bloomfield resident Elizabeth Knight called the week since Danielle's disappearance "kind of a crazy week" and said Saturday's gathering was about "people being here to support the family.'

"It's hard when someone you care about ... you don't know if they're safe," said Knight, who is Danielle's cousin. "We've been trying to do as much as we can through social media and traditional media, to keep her story out there. We hope someone has seen her and it's just a matter of getting to the right person.

In some ways, the vigil resembled any other. The Rev. Jamey Authier, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church in Shelby Township, offered prayers and scripture readings. Parents Ann and Richard Stislicki addressed the crowd, candles were lit and tears were shed.

BRAD KADRICH

In other ways, it was more upbeat. Chris Paliewicz, Danielle's uncle, played an upbeat version of "This Little Light of Mine" and got the crowd to join in interactively.

'This isn't a typical candlelight vigil song, but Danielle isn't a typical girl," Paliewicz said BRAD KADRICH to the crowd, inducing some of that laughter Ann Stislicki wanted to hear. "I think she would love this."

Cousin Mason Paliewicz agreed, pointing out that Danielle was pretty much always smiling "Danielle is always upbeat and happy," Ma-son said. "She's definitely had her share of problems, like everyone has, but she's always been able to keep a smile on her face.

Ann Stislicki acknowledged how difficult the week has been, but was determined not to dwell on it, at least not at the vigil. She said she's found tremendous support from many sources, often right when she needed it. "When you become weak and don't think you can push on any farther, there's someone there, there's a Facebook post or a message," Ann said. saying, 'We're going to help you.'' "There's someone who's

Sugar Rush a new sweet treat in Farmington

Maria Taylor Correspondent

Farmington's new retro candy store is tucked away at the back of the Village Mall But it's not hard to find if you follow your nose. 'We could smell the sugar from the Civic (Theatre)," Farmington resident Karla Aren said. She stopped in Saturday, along with her husband and teenage daughter, after hearing about the new store — Sugar Rush - on the Grow Farmington Facebook page.

Aren left the store with Red Hots, Lemonheads and Ice Cubes. "My boyfriend used to get me these all the time, with a Big Gulp," she said. "This is great - we need a little candy store in Farmington."

Colin Ayres is the owner of Sugar Rush. "We specialize in oldfashioned candy," he said.

Look around the store and it's a haven of throwback treats. Squirrels, Mary Janes, Cow Tales, Bit-O-Honey, Chuckles. Iridescent gumballs, shimmering pink, purple and yellow behind glass cases. (They're really popular for weddings, Ayres said.) Looking for a sugar high? There's cotton candy and a Pixy Stix maker. And, for chocolate lovers, there are Bun Bars and Lindt truffles.

Sugar Rush in Farmington is Ayres' third candy store location. The first one opened 17 years ago, in downtown Clawson

For Ayers, who lives in Warren, it was a case of being in the right place at the right time. "I was out in Berkley, having lunch with a friend, and we saw an open storefront,' Ayres said. The two started talking about what they'd open if they had that space. She mentioned a coffee shop.

Sugar Rush owner Colin Ayres helps customers Michelle and Alex Clarke.

Ayres said that was great, but there ought to be something for the kids, too — like a candy counter with toys and treats.

When they got back to his friend's house, there in the mailbox was a catalog for novelty toys. Ayres said it was like a sign. "I said, 'I'm going to open it — I'm doing it," he said.

And open it he did. True to his inspiration, the Clawson store stocked a mix of oldfashioned candy and retro novelty toys. "It was a blast," he said. "At that time, there were no other candy stores (in the area). We grew up with them and then they kind of disappeared.'

The store in Clawson lasted about 31/2 years. After that, he moved it to St. Clair Shores, working on and off in various management positions between times. But St.

Clair Shores wasn't an idea location, he said, because it wasn't in a downtown. So when he was in Farmington visiting a friend and saw a "for rent" sign at the Village Mall, he called the number and leased the space.

Sugar Rush opened the Saturday after Thanksgiving. Since then, Ayres said he's had a steady stream of visitors. "I'm already getting the same amount of people here as I did in St. Clair, when I spent $1,000 on advertising," he said. He chalks that up to being in a downtown with lots of people walking by. Alex and Michelle Clarke of Farmington Hills dropped in and bought a whole box of Chuckles minis — they're only 25 cents each - and a Charleston Chew bar. "They're hard to find in strawberry and chocolate," Michelle said.

Perusing the store, Alex noticed some Warhead-flavored candy canes. Ayres said sour candy is a real hit with today's younger crowd. "There ought to be a Warhead Challenge, like the Ice Bucket Challenge," he said, with a laugh. He said he gets a lot of teenage foot traffic from PLUS Skateboarding and he thinks they'll like the new candy he's ordered: Toxic Waste, which he said tastes "like Warheads, but worse."

For those who like their candy sweet, not sour, Ayres said his top sellers are classic candy dots (the store's logo) and Nik-L-Nips, the wax bottles filled with fruity syrup. Black licorice is also really popular, he said - and not just among the older crowd. "I had a girl come in, maybe 18 or 20 years old, who's been in Europe a couple years," he said.

"She learned to like black licorice because it's very prominent over there.'

Ayers keeps a notebook on the counter, next to the orange buckets on hand for candy collecting. If there's a specific kind of candy you're looking for, you can write it down with your name and number and he'll order it for you.

"If everybody likes it, I'll carry it," he said. That was the case with Idaho Spuds in Clawson, where folks couldn't get enough of the cocoa-flavored, chocolate- and coconutcoated marshmallow candies.

Those might show up in Farmington, too, because Ayers is planning to bring in a bunch of regional specialties, like Cherry Mash (cherry fondant covered in chocolate and crushed nuts) and Valomilk (chocolate cup with marshmallow cream).

In the middle of the room is a big dispenser with little candies like Tootsie Rolls. Everything in it is eight pieces for a quarter. That way, Ayers said, kids can come in and get a treat with their pocket change.

But make no mistake, he said: No matter your age, vou're always a kid when you're in a candy shop. "People always say the kids love this the most. I say, 'Don't kid yourselves. The adults love it just as much," he said. "You can't come in and not have fun. It's just a fun business.'

Sugar Rush is located at the back of the Village Mall at 33335 Grand River, by the parking lot on the Farmington Road side. It's open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday and Monday throughout the holiday season, with hours chang-ing in January.

USA TODAY NETWORK INVESTIGATION

Dangerous drinking water afflicts rural US

Broken system puts millions of Americans at risk with poisoned or untested water

Laura Ungar and Mark Nichols USA TODAY

RANGER, Texas - The leaders of this former oil boomtown never gave 2-year-old Adam Walton a chance to avoid the poison.

It came in city water, deliv-ered to his family's tap through pipes nearly a century old. For almost a year, the little boy bathed in lead-tainted water and ate food cooked in it. As he grew into a toddler - a time when he should have been learning to talk — he drank tap water containing a toxin known to ravage a child's developing brain.

Adam's parents didn't know about the danger until this fall.

Officials at City Hall knew long before then, according to local and state records. So did state and federal government regulators who are paid to make sure drinking water in Texas and across the nation is clean. Ranger and Texas officials were aware of a citywide lead problem for two years one the city still hasn't fixed and one the Waltons first learned about in a September letter to residents.. The city and state even knew. from recent tests, that water in the Walton family's cramped, onebedroom rental house near the railroad tracks was carrying sky-high levels of lead.

Destiny and John Walton got their first inkling of a problem when blood tests in June detected high levels of lead in their son's growing body. They first learned that their tap water contained lead — about 28 times the federal limit — when a USA TODAY Network reporter told them in early November.

Millions of Americans face similar risks because the nation's drinking-water enforcement system doesn't make small utilities play by the same safety rules as everyone else, a USA TODAY Network investigation has found.

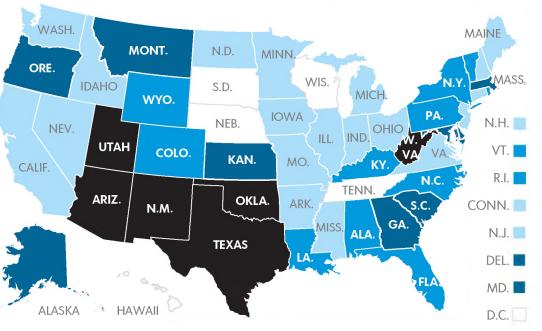

Tiny utilities --those serving a few thousand people or less - don't have to treat water to prevent lead contamination until after lead is found. Even when they skip safety tests or fail to treat water after they find lead, federal and state regulators often do not force them to comply with the law.

ten places - rural outposts, post-industrial communities and poor towns - are most at risk from the dangers of lead exposure, such as irreversible brain damage, lowered IQ, behavioral problems and language delays. Edwards said the effects of lead poisoning could make it even more difficult for families in these communities to climb out of poverty. "I'm worried about their kids," he said. "The risk of permanent harm here is horrifying. These are America's children." The Waltons fear lead has already harmed their son. At an age when other kids use dozens of words, Adam says just three: "mama," "dada" and "no." Destiny and John wish they would have known about the lead earlier so they could have protected him. "What's going to happen if my son's lead levels keep rising? What if the kid next door gets way sicker than my son? What's Ranger going to do then?" Destiny asked. "They've known about it for years now. ... Are they going to fix it?"

compared to a "tiny Flint."

Ranger's water system dates to the city's heyday nearly 100 years ago, when the discovery of oil attracted a population that historians say reached 30,000. Ranger is now a barren place with 2,500 people, abandoned buildings and a lonely Main Street where a mural of a steer-wrangling cowboy near an oil well fades away like the city.

With ever-shrinking tax rolls and median household income at about half the national average, there's little money to shore up a decaying infrastructure. Leaks spring daily.

Many residents rely on bottled water. They've heard through the grapevine that the city's water might be unhealthy. They can see for themselves it's not clean. While lead is colorless and odorless, algae in the water is not.

'Some days, it's more brown than green. It smells sort of like a sewer," said Vietnam veteran Bill Brister, who spends about $70 a month on bottled water. "We don't even give the dogs tap water."

Three years ago, the city found excessive levels of copper. Nine months after that, three of 20 sites tested over the limit of 15 parts per billion of lead. Under federal law, both required immediate action, but documents show the city waited until this fall to start planning to control corrosion. Testing this September found five sites above the limit for lead, the Walton home topping the list at 418 parts per billion. The federal limit is 15.

Ranger is one of about 130 water systems since 2010 that failed to take timely action, and one of dozens that took a year or more to start the treatment process.

City Manager Chad Roberts said Texas environmental officials pushed hard this fall after USA TODAY Network reporters visited Ranger and began asking questions. State officials insist the push came after a weekly review found that Ranger met EPA criteria for the state to take formal enforcement action.

Ranger took its first step toward reducing lead in November — nearly three years late — by giving the state a corrosion-control study that called for adjusting the pH of the water. State officials deemed the plan insufficient, however, and are working with the city to improve it.

As the city formulates its plan, residents continue to drink water that might be dangerous.

A boil notice was in effect in early November when Kay nalists spent 2016 reviewing millions of records from the Environmental Protection Agency and all 50 states, visiting small communities across the country and interviewing more than 120 people stuck using untested or lead-tainted tap water.

The investigation found:

» About 100,000 people get their drinking water from utilities that discovered high lead but failed to treat the water to remove it. Dozens of utilities took more than a year to formulate a treatment plan and even longer to begin treatment.

» Some 4 million Americans get water from small operators who skipped required tests or did not conduct the tests properly, violating a cornerstone of federal safe drinking water laws. The testing is required because, without it, utilities, regulators and people drinking the water can't know if it's safe. In more than 2,000 communities, lead tests were skipped at least twice. Hundreds repeatedly failed to properly test for five or more years.

» About 850 small water utilities with a documented history of lead contamination

BY THE NUMBERS

ists in both law and practice. State and federal water-safety officials told USA TODAY Network reporters that regulators are more lenient with small water systems because they lack resources, deeming some lost causes when they don't have the money, expertise or motivation to fix problems. The nation's Safe Drinking Water Act allows less-trained, often amateur, people to operate tiny water systems even though the risks for people drinking the water are the same

Officials in West Virginia, for example, labeled more than a dozen systems "orphans" because they didn't have owners or operators. Enforcement efforts for those utilities amounted to little more than a continuous stream of warning letters as utilities failed to test year after year. All the while, residents continued drinking untested - and potentially contaminated — water. "At the end of the day, it creates two universes of people," said water expert Yanna Lambrinidou, an affiliate faculty member at Virginia Tech.

All of this endangers millions of people across the country, mostly in remote and rural communities. Utilities like East Mooringsport Water, serving part of abayou town of about 800 people, where drinking water went untested for more than five years. Or Coal Mountain, W.Va., a remote 118-person outpost where a retired coal miner pours bleach into untested water at the system's wellhead in hope of keeping it clean. Or Orange Center School outside Fresno, Calif., where for more than a decade regulators let about 320 gradeschool kids drink water that had tested high for lead.

Individually, the communities served by small utilities seem tiny. But together, the number of people getting leadcontaminated drinking water, or water not properly tested for lead, since 2010 is about 5 million.

Virginia Tech's Marc Edwards, one of the nation's top experts on lead in drinking water who helped identify the crisis in Flint, Mich., laments that people in America's forgot-

'Tiny Flint'

Perhaps the best illustration of what can happen when evervthing breaks down at once is Ranger, where high lead and government inaction have converged in a pervasive contamination problem experts

Hodges, 23, said she drank straight from the tap because she was nine months' pregnant. dehydrated and out of bottled water. "I got really sick. I was throwing up all night," she said.

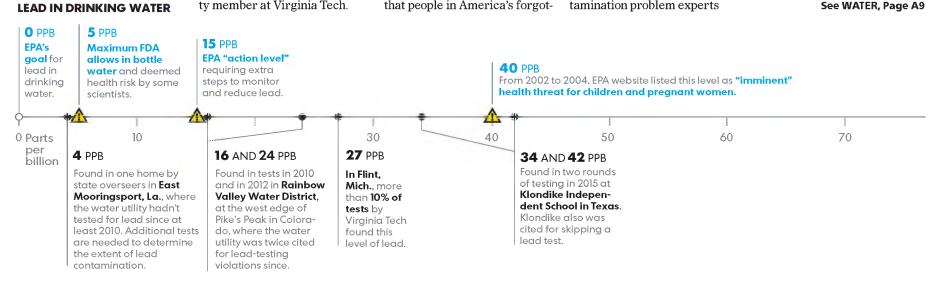

Hodges lives with her fiance and young children in a lowincome housing complex called Austin Acres. A tap at the complex has repeatedly tested high for lead, most recently at more than twice the federal limit. Hodges figures she should now get checked for the toxin.

Others fear lead exposure, too. Anita Baker, a 79-year-old colon cancer survivor in Austin Acres, has been using city water for cooking and making coffee but plans to stop after learning from a reporter that boiling the water concentrates the lead.

The Waltons - who squeeze into their one-bedroom home by putting the master bed in the living room — also drank lots of city water, in iced tea, Kool-Aid, diluted juice and by itself. Adam's highest blood lead reading was more than three times the federal cutoff to be considered elevated, and his 1-year-old brother, Andrew, also had slightly elevated lead levels.

cials say they have taken steps to speed Ranger's response. They sent experts to Ranger, referred the city to the EPA for formal enforcement in March, issued new citations in October and fined the city about $3,000.

The city raised water rates to pay for improvements and now promises to replace more of the old water lines, increase testing and seek grants for more upgrades.

"We are good with the state right now," Mayor Joe Pilgrim said, "and that's all that matters

Still, residents may have to wait years for clean water. After the state approves a reworked corrosion-control study, Ranger has two years before it must start treating its water. By then, Adam Walton will be almost ready for kindergarten.

Two standards

It's easy to see why a place like Ranger winds up with toxic water when you compare it to a typical large water system like the one in Louisville, Ky.

Louisville Water has about 435 full-time staffers, including a director of water quality and production with a Ph.D. in environmental engineering. Ranger has seven public works employees.

Louisville Water has an operating and maintenance budget of $127 million. Ranger's entire city budget is $3.2 million.

Some small utilities are even worse off.

In Colorado, near Black Canvon, the man in charge of providing safe water to 335 people is a farmer who spends most of his time tending to livestock, wheat, oats and barley

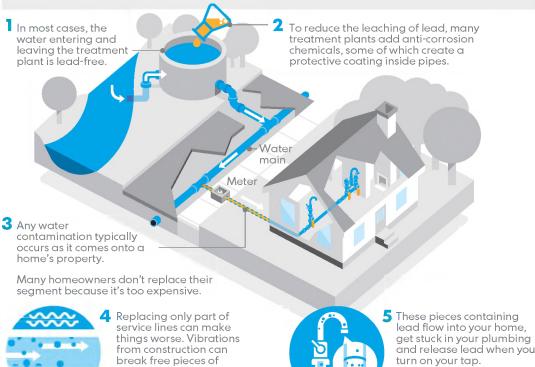

In West Texas, at Klondike Independent School District, water safety is handled by Superintendent Steve McLaren, whose first job is running a one-building school system serving 260 students. He wears many hats in the district amid cotton fields; he's been known to drive a school bus from time to time.

McLaren acknowledged he skipped required testing for lead and copper in fall 2014 because "some things just slip by." When Klondike did test last year, it found excessive lead in both rounds of testing

Generally, the bar for running tiny utlities is low. Certification for hands-on operators varies by state and typically involves passing an exam and getting continuing education credits. Some states require licensing but with varying qualifications. Minimum requirements in Texas are a high school diploma or GED and a training course in basic water operations. No experience

More than 7 million U.S. homes are estimated to have service lines made of lead that can leach into water. Millions more homes built before 1986 have solder and fixtures that can leach lead.

Source USA TODAY NETWORK research KARL GELLES, USA TODAY

"You might have to get more training to run a hot dog stand than a small water system." Paul Schwartz, Campaign for Lead Free Water protective coating.

Congressional Research Service report on the fund in November concluded that "a substantial gap remains between financing needs and available funds.

Recognizing resource constraints, the federal government lets small water systems play by more lenient rules.

Scattered throughout EPA regulations on lead and copper are specific provisions for small water systems. While utilities serving 50,000 or more people must always control corrosion, for example, smaller systems don't have to even plan for such treatment when lead is below the federal limit for two consecutive six-month periods. And they can discontinue treatment once lead drops below the limit

Utilities serving 3,300 or fewer can, if they meet certain criteria, test for lead as little as once every nine years.

Experts say such regulations make it easy for lead problems to go undetected and uncorrected in the very places that are most vulnerable to contamination.

You might think we have a lead in water law," Edwards said. "What we have is a national joke.'

Fresno, officials in charge let kids keep drinking the water for more than a decade.

State officials threatened to fine the school, but records show no more lead tests were done until 2012 and no action was taken. Three of those tests again found high lead. Two more years went by before California officials ordered the school to stop using the water and began shipping bottled water to students, while the school waits to be connected to the Fresno water system.

Ninety customers of East Mooringsport Water in Louisiana, are also waiting to hook up to a larger water system after at least five years of skipped tests

McCauslin, 75, hopes things will change when Blanchard, which has a new, $17 million treatment plant, acquires her community's utility. As she waits for the merger, she keeps doing what she's done for years -paying the bill for untested tap water and shelling out extra money for bottled water to drink and filtered, purified water for bathing.

Giving up

Residents in remote Coal Mountain, W.Va., have gone as long as anyone can remember with untested, questionable water. No one knows what contaminants it might contain.

Their wellhead is housed near a church, in a shed cluttered with empty bleach bottles. They've been left behind by Ravin Kenneda, a 65-yearold with a salt-and-pepper mustache and a baseball cap, who pours bleach into his community's water once in a while to keep it clean.

Ît's just stuff I've learned down through the years," he said from his front-porch swing as his granddaughter sipped bottled water.

He's no water expert, he concedes. "Someone's got to do it.

State and federal governments have pretty much given up enforcing drinking-water rules here and similarly tough cases, leaving residents to fend for themselves.

Coal Mountain's tap water comes from a coal company well abandoned in the 1980s.

work with them, but the problem is finding someone who's responsible," said Walter Ivey, director of West Virginia's Office of Environmental Health Services.

One option is for states to test the water. But Jon Capacasa, director of EPA's Region 3 Water Protection Division, said the law calls for utilities to monitor for lead and report results to states, and the obligation lies with them.

When utilities can't or won't, however, they often face little if any real punishment.

Notices and orders were EPA's weapons against Coal Mountain's testing violations for five years, after which nothing changed and West Virginia asked that no further federal action be taken.

Water-quality advocates say residents deserve better. Government "owes it to these people to at least provide clean drinking water," said Wyoming County Clerk Mike Goode, adding that the county is working on a proposal to help Coal Mountain. "It's bad. These people live in America. They have a right to good water.'

But Mila Darnell laments that such rights don't always extend to poor, rural Americans like her.

'We're a forgotten people," she said. "It hurts to feel ... like you just don't count.'

Minimizing risk

Roberts, the city manager, downplayed the danger from Ranger's water Roberts said small children and pregnant women probably shouldn't drink it (as the city said in a letter to residents). He said overall, "I drink it. ... I don't think it's a health alert serious enough for an emergency."

Roberts blamed homeowners' pipes, although he acknowledged the city's distribution system contains lead as well

Pilgrim, Ranger's mayor, agreed the water isn't unsafe, saying his city "has never put any of their people in danger. ... It's not an ongoing medical disaster to anyone in town for any reason.'

They are far from the only officials to minimize water problems.

Kentucky's Peter Goodmann, who directs the division of water there, used a similar rationale to defend many years of inaction when a tiny water system without an owner refused to test for contaminants. 'There's not much we could do because there's no responsible party," Goodmann said of Kettle Island Water, which was recently downgraded from a public water system because it's gotten so small. "Nobody's dying there, and there doesn't seem to be any public health effects.

The EPA would not allow senior officials including Peter Grevatt, director of the Office necessary

"You might have to get more training to run a hot dog stand than a small water system," said Paul Schwartz of the Campaign for Lead Free Water, a group of people and organizations working to rid drinking water of lead.

Many states, and the EPA, offer extra guidance and instruction. But not everyone avails themselves of this help, leaving many small operators with "a complete lack of training," Lambrinidou said. "Sometimes, they're cheating and they don't know they're cheating.

Some government funding is available for struggling utilities. EPA's Drinking Water State Revolving Fund, which includes a state contribution. has provided $32.5 billion through 2016 to water systems that applied for help. Another EPA program awards millions each year to non-profit organizations that provide training and technical assistance to small, public water systems. The U.S. Department of Agriculture also offers loans and grants

Edwards and others say the need far outstrips the money, and loans don't help utilities that can't pay them back. A 2013 EPA assessment estimates infrastructure needs for small water systems will total $64.5 billion over 20 years. The revolving fund's 2016 allocation, for systems of all sizes. was less than $1 billion, and a

A cornerstone of those 25 year-old lead regulations is testing. But the USA TODAY Network found that 9,000 small water systems together serving almost 4 million people failed to test properly for lead in the past six years, meaning the toxin could be there without anyone knowing. More than a quarter of those systems had repeat lead-testing violations.

EPA said it gives higher priority to immediate public health issues like acute contamination than testing violations

Money is a factor in skipping lead tests, which can cost around $50 per tap. Utilities must test from five to 20 locations, depending on how many customers they serve. A USA TODAY Network analysis found it would cost about $1.2 million to check the water served by every small utility that failed to test twice since 2010. Lead testing for every small water utility that missed even one test would cost about $5 million.

Ranger admits in a letter to residents to three years of skipped or incomplete tests. Roberts, who started as city manager in the spring, blamed lack of expertise and past neglect, saying "the ball got dropped for sure.

It also got dropped at Orange Center School in California, which skipped testing for nine years even after finding excessive lead in 2003. In the rural neighborhood outside

"Honestly, we just didn't have the money to do (testing)," said Edward "Pat" Turnley, who distributes monthly water bills to East Mooringsport custom-

The state cracked down several times, ordering the district to test three years ago and fining the community more than $43,500. But little changed. Finally, in late June, the state tested nine homes itself, and found lead contamination in two. More testing will need to be done to determine the extent of the problem.

East Mooringsport buys treated water from the nearby town of Blanchard, then stores it in old tanks. Resident Gladys McCauslin suspects sediment in the tanks is what makes her tap water brownish and gritty. Residents are warned to boil it before drinking or cooking.

'It makes me feel like I'm in a Third World country," she said.

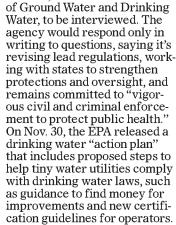

Water is pumped up the mountainside to an old storage tank hidden amid tangled trees, then flows down to homes. It's the subject of 19 water-testing violations since 1988, the most in the nation.

'We don't know what's in it," said Mila Darnell, 62, who is raising two 17-year-old grandsons with her retired miner husband. "I'm very concerned about lead or whatever else could be in there."

No doubt something is awry; the water stains the Darnells' clothes, stops up their shower head and sometimes smells like fish. Although they won't drink it, they do cook with it - boiling it first and hoping no one gets sick.

West Virginian officials say they can't do much beyond sending out advisories and issuing notices about watertesting violations because Coal Mountain has no owner or operator. The state labels Coal Mountain and about 15 other utilities "orphan systems."

"This happens, actually, across the country. We try to

For now, lead continues to taint tap water in places like Ranger. Katelyn Peters, who lives next door to the Waltons, doesn't see anything changing soon

"This is where I was raised. This is where I was planning on raising my kids," she said, watching three of her four kids chase each other in the front yard. "Now, I'm terrified. I would live anywhere else.

DERBY

The game itself involves players for each team scoring points during two 30-minute periods. Each team is allowed five players on the track at once: four "blockers" and one "jammer." The blockers are responsible for attempting to stop the opposing team's "jammer," who scores points for the team by passing opposing blockers on the track, Harthun said.

A special event

Harthun will join other women athletes Saturday, Dec.17, when the Detroit Roller Derby Winter Wonderland event will feature a match-up between the undefeated Detroit Pistoffs and the D-Funk All-Stars. Working in partnership with Operation Care Package, the group will be collecting non-perishable items, like beef jerky, hard candy and crackers, as well as donations of baby wipes, Chapstick and bug spray, for troops overseas. Scheduled for 6 p.m. at the Masonic Temple in Detroit, ticket prices are $12 in advance and $15 at the door. The event will also feature Santa mingling with the crowd and an ugly sweater contest. The Detroit Roller Derby Winter Wonderland is testament to a sport that is gaining enthusiasm among participants and spectators alike. The WFTDA contends that the flat track version of the sport evolved in 2001. It has quickly grown to encompass more than 400 leagues worldwide, including the Detroit Roller Derby League, which currently includes nine teams: four home teams, three travel teams, a recreation team and a junior roller derby team that will begin in 2017.

Harthun is one who made the conversion from spectator to participant.

"I was a fan of roller derby before I joined it. A few of my friends and I used to go out for a ladies night to watch them play at the Masonic It looked like so much fun," she said. Now an experienced player, Harthun goes by the name of "Brazen Kane" when she is one the derby track — a nickname she terms as an inverse correlation to her "soft-spoken, nice girl personality.' "This has been a very rewarding experience for me. I've gained a lot of friendships, lost a lot of weight and it has built up my self-confidence so much in the process," she said.

Jennifer McIntosh of Milford and West Bloomfield's Martha Goldberg both credit the sport with having a positive impact on their lives.

"Roller derby builds you up; it helps develop mental toughness. You get knocked down time and time again and it doesn't feel very good and pretty soon you realize that you want to be the one doing the knocking down. It makes me want to be strong," said McIntosh, 40. Growing up in Traverse City, McIntosh said she has always been athletic and enjoyed participating in team sports, including playing catcher on her prep varsity softball team. She has always been a fan of competition and likes hobbies that help keep her both mentally and physically healthy. "I have always believed that you need to set goals for yourself to keep moving through life successfully," said McIntosh, who goes by the moniker "Nuke Town,"

me to set goals for myself. I drink more water, I eat better ... it makes me want to be healthier overall," she said.

'Improving yourself'

For Goldberg, 43, the mother of three schoolaged children, roller derby has provided a rare opportunity for Zen-like concentration.

Playing roller derby "takes you out of your everyday experience. It is one of the few times in life that you are completely focused on others and improving yourself,' she said. "When I am on the track working on derby, all of the things that I am worrying about fall away."

While practice times vary from player to player, Goldberg said she practices four to six hours per week and participates in games about once a month.

Goldberg said she has been playing for four years. Currently a member of the D-Funk All-Stars, she points out that roller derby is one of the played roller derby prior to joining her team in her late 30s. "My children were in school full time and I finally had a little free time to squeeze in for myself. I was looking for something fun," she said.

She said she was drawn to roller derby in part by the spirit of camaraderie among team members. "I like the idea of women working together to accomplish a common goal," she said.

Support from everyone

McIntosh said that she, too, was drawn in by the friendly companionship of the league. She and her husband co-own a six-acre farm in Milford, complete with a horse, two dogs and three cats. A manufacturing engineer by trade, she now serves as a consultant in the manufacturing industry.

Despite her busy lifestyle, "as soon as I learned that they were forming a league, I knew I had to join," she said.

Although she had skated "when I was 9 years old at birthday parties," it took her al-most two years to learn ministrative assistant for a Northville accounting firm, playing roller derby has opened a new door.

Raising her two sons, now ages 19 and 21 and in college, Harthun enjoyed actively volunteering in their schools, for their sports teams and for the local community. As they grew older, "I was need-ed less and I sort of became at odds with myself. I needed something, but I didn't know what. I kind of challenged myself to do something that scared me," she said.

That is how in 2014, at age 46, Harthun found herself attending the Detroit Roller Derby Derby U., an event designed to introduce roller derby to a new crop of potential players.

"I did not only learn how to skate, but also how to play derby. My family thought that I was crazy to attempt this at my age, as well as it being my first ever contact sport. But I was looking for a challenge. I began my derby journey when most people retire from it," Harthun said.

While the playing the sport has been personally rare sports that allows for competition among vast age ranges.

"The community is very diverse. It's an exciting thing. There are not many sports where you can have a 19-yearold and a 47-year-old playing against one an-other," she said.

Roller derby is also very empowering, noted Goldberg, who serves as coordinator of the Teen Foundation Board for The Jewish Fund. "It is important for me that my daughter sees me working at something that I enjoy and helps makes me stronger," she said. Although she had roller-bladed in her youth, she had never to be completely comfortable in roller skates.

"I had to learn it all from scratch," she said, adding that "with new learners, everyone is so supportive and encouraging." Harthun agrees.

"I have never in my life encountered anything like this group of women. Someone is always there to help you up or give you a hug. It is absolutely amazing," she said, "I would not have gotten to where I am now without so much help from my teammates-.They nurtured me and encouraged me as I progressed along. For Harthun, an ad-rewarding, equally rewarding is the opportunity to participate in the fundraising and community outreach activities that are an integral part of the Detroit Roller Derby League, she said.

The way Harthun sees it, it is just one more way that roller derby is brightening the lives of those connected to it. "Roller derby really is special," she said. As Goldberg said, "It is not like anything else other people do.'

Travelers explore hidden gems of Balkans

Jay Young Correspondent

Question: What do Melania Trump, "Shark Tank" entrepreneur Robert Herjavec and "Game of Thrones" have in common? The answer begins in the Republic of Slovenia, the birthplace of the future first lady of the United States.

We recently returned from a three-week trip with Grand Circle Cruise Line, starting in the tiny country of Slovenia, which achieved its independence from Yugoslavia in 1991. About half the size of Switzerland, Slovenia borders Italy and Austria on its north and west, and Croatia and Hungary to the east and south. It is an intriguing mixture of the best of those cultures

Landing in the capital of Ljubljana, we visited its fascinating mix of churches, museums and public markets before traveling about 20 miles to beautiful Lake Bled, Slovenia's leading mountain resort. Situated in the Julian Alps, the area encompasses sweeping alpine panoramas, a fairy tale island located in the center of the lake and a popular spot for weddings, a cliff-hanging medieval castle and a four-mile promenade around the lake.

In day trips from Bled we visited Postojna Cave, the country's most famous natural attraction with its endless display of stalagmites and stalactites, and the 13th century Predjama Castle, which served as a stronghold for robber barons throughout its fascinating history.

Our next stop was Zagreb, the capital and largest city of Croatia and home country of Robert Herjavec's immigrant parents. Zagreb is a city with a rich history dating from Roman times. Our tour included medieval landmarks, such as the Cathedral of the Assumption, a colorful open-air market called Dolac and the Museum of Naive Art, displaying artworks by untrained peasants.

A day trip from Zagreb led us to the lovely Baroque city of Varazdin, a former capital of Croatia and home to several aristocratic families who built magnificent palaces and churches there. They later contributed furnishings to its centerpiece, a moated castle, which now serves as a museum.

From Zagreb we traveled south to Plitvice Lakes National Park, the largest national park in Croatia and one of the oldest in southeast Europe. Founded in 1949, over one million visitors each year come to view waterfalls and 16 interconnected lakes, which range in color from turquoise to green, grey or blue, depending on the mineral content of the water.

Arriving at Split, we embarked on our Grand Circle Cruise Line ship, the Athena, which would take us down the Adriatic coast to several Croatian islands, Montenegro, Albania and Greece.

Split is the second largest city of Croatia and largest port on the Dalmatian coast. Dating from the 4th century BC, when it was founded by Greeks, it has seen many rulers including the Romans, Byzantines, Venetians, Ottomans, French and Habsburgs. Split is best known today as the site of the huge Imperial Palace of the Roman Emperor Diocletian. Occupied from 300-313 AD by Diocletian, a Croatian native, the palace is built like a fortress with walls running 590 feet by 705 feet. Ironically, although Diocletian was a great persecutor of Christians, his Temple of Jupiter was later converted into a Christian baptistery and his mausoleum became a cathedral.

That night we set sail for our first Dalmatian island - Hvar. Blessed with having a large fertile coastal plain and fresh water springs, its hillsides are covered in pine forests, vineyards, olive groves, fruit orchards and lavender fields. Unique to the island are stone walls defining agricultural field divisions of the Stari Grad Plain, now a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Our next stop was the island of Korcula, reputed to be the birthplace of Marco Polo. The most populous Croatian island not connected to the mainland by a bridge, we learned it was ruled for centuries by the powerful city-state of Venice and is today known for ship building and fishing. Our next destination was the grand city of Dubrovnik. Regarded as one of the world's most exquisite walled cities, it is one of the most prominent tourist destinations on the Adriatic Sea and the setting for the "Game of Thrones" HBO TV series.

Dubrovnik's character reflects its storied past as an independent city-state called Regusa, whose fleet of ships carried trade between much of Europe and the Middle East. Although demilitarized to protect it from war in 1991, it was besieged by Serb and Montenegrin soldiers for seven months and suffered significant damage from shelling. Under UNESCO supervision, Dubrovnik was repaired with amazing speed and the only visible reminders of the war are pock marked bullet holes in some structures and new bright orange roof tiles.

The next morning we cruised into beautiful Kotor Bay, Montenegro. One of the youngest republics in Europe, (it achieved independence from Serbia in 2006). Montenegro is even more of a crossroads of cultures than Croatia. The result is a unique nation of rugged beauty with an historic linkage to Serbia that defies many of the preconceived notions of the Balkans.

The highlight of our visit was a boat trip to a beautiful baroque church, Our Lady of the Rocks, situated on a manmade island in the middle of the bay. My wife and I renewed our wedding vows in this gorgeous place on our 45th wedding anniversary – truly a memorable event.

If Montenegro was magical, our next stop, Saranda, Albania was sobering. Saddled with a paranoid Communist government, the country was isolated from the international community from 1945-1985. During that time, under dictator Enver Hoxha, hundreds of mosques and Islamic libraries as well as Christian churches were destroyed and the country was proclaimed the 'world's first atheist state." A sad reminder of those days is the 750,000 concrete bunkers scattered throughout the country in preparation for an imaginary invasion that never came.

Our next port of call was the Greek island of Corfu and an excursion to Achillion Palace, the magnificent villa and gardens built by Elizabeth, Empress of Austria in 1890. A popular figure, she retreated to Corfu to escape the constraints of court life in Vienna and immersed herself in the world of the ancient Greeks. Tragically she was assassinated by an anarchist in 1898.

Our last stop before passing through the Corinth canal and disembarking at the port of Athens was the ruins at Delphi. Thought to be the center of the earth by the ancient Greeks, the Oracle at Delphi was often consulted before important decisions were made and contained treasuries built by the great societies of the day to honor Apollo and other Greek gods. The nearby museum contains unmatched holdings, including the bronze sculpture of the Charioteer

Like the puzzle we started with, during this trip we put together pieces of history, culture, natural wonders and delightful people we didn't know existed, as we discovered the hidden gems of the Dalmatian coast.

How to protect your family members from scams

Jay Grossman hometownlife.com

Nobody wants to lose their retirement nest egg to a con artist, yet it happens all the time.

According to the Na-tional Council on Aging, approximately five million older Americans are abused every year and the annual loss by victims of financial abuse is estimated to be at least $2.6 billion. Nor is it a problem that's going away anytime soon, as an average of 10,000 baby boomers turn 65 years old every day.

Carol Guyton, a senior vice president with Bank the banking industry, mostly in the consumer area. Here are some tips and warning signs she provides to customers to avoid being the next victim:

Q: What are the most common scams and fraud risks that older customers face?

Guyton: The most common scams prey on people's trust. It could be a con artist who tells the person they owe a large sum of money and the con artist is willing to work with the person if they will make a "good faith" payment by with-drawing funds from their bank account. Another scam is getting the victim to wire or send money on the pretext that the person's child or another relative is in the hospital and needs the money. Also, money is solicited for fake charities. This often occurs after natural disasters.

Q: Is there a specific time of year this fraud is more frequent? Guyton: No, these types of scams are active year-round.

Q: What systems and safeguards are in place to protect elder customer's accounts from unauthorized access? Guyton: Bank employees are trained to recognize "red flags" such as: » Sudden changes in a client's bank accounts or banking practices. » Withdrawals of unusual or unexplained large sums of money. » Changes in a client's behavior.

» New signers are added or new joint accounts are opened.

» Confusion about account balances or activity or claim that some property is suddenly missing.

Q: What are the signs that loved ones or family members should look for that may indicate an elderly person is a target of fraud?

Guyton: I have personal experience in this area. I tell families when an elderly person is suddenly very close and trusting with individuals the family doesn't know or are not comfortable with, this is a huge warning sign. An example could be new neighbors or someone they've has met over the phone. I would encourage those with elderly family members to carefully observe and ask questions about who they talk to on the phone and whether they've received any visitors.

Be sure to let the person know you are only asking to make sure everything is in order. Also, if the relationship is close enough and applicable, ask to browse checkbooks and bank statements from time-totime.

Q: What are some of the more popular scams?

Guyton: Financial scams involving Medicare or health insurance ... online counterfeit prescription drugs ...funeral and cemetery scams ... investment schemes ... reverse mortgage schemes ... and, of course, lottery or sweepstakes scams. Unfortunately, it's a growing list.

Bailey Fowler, daughter of Colleen and Blaine Fowler of Northville, is studying in Ireland during fall semester 2016 through the Center for Global Education at the College of St. Benedict in St. Joseph, Minn., and St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn. Fowler is a junior elementary education major at CSB.

The Galway program gives students an opportunity to explore the history, culture, literature and religion of Ireland. While students are exposed to Gaelic as a living language, courses are taught in English. The focus is on a structured curriculum, leaving room for the exploration of unique opportunities presented by the intellectual and cultural resources of Ireland. Mother Nature made it pretty tough, but the folks who turned out Sunday for the 20th annual Compassionate Friends candlelight vigil have been through way tougher stuff than 10 inches of snow.

While the crowd was down a little, the occasion wasn't dimmed at all as a large crowd gathered in Plymouth's Kellogg Park for the annual vigil that honors the memories of sons, daughters, brothers, sisters and grandchildren who've left too soon.

"The event went well, even though the snow just kept coming down," said Gail Lafferty of The Compassionate Friends, Livonia chapter. "It was beautiful and the Memory Trees were exceptionally pretty with all the

In Plymouth, the event usually crowds Kellogg Park with hundreds of participants. This year, the huge snowfall limited the crowd to about 100. The event included the reading of names, including Lafferty's own son Max. There was poetry and song, and two Memory Trees were decorated with ornaments dedicated to the children.

"I'm sure the weather played a big part in peo-ple coming," Lafferty said. "We read 730 names and there were the same amount of ornaments split up between the two Memory Trees.'

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING CITY OF NORTHVILLE

The City of Northville Board of Zoning Appeals will hold a public hearing to receive public input on a variance requested by the property owner of 777 Eight Mile Road, Northville, Michigan, 48167. The applicant is seeking two variances to erect a new sign on premises zoned R1-A First Density Residential District, parcel number 48-002-99-0001-000. The City's Building Official evaluated the proposal, and has determined that the maximum sign area allowed for this sign is 40 square feet, and located 10 feet from the property line. The applicant is proposing to erect a sign of 75.53 square feet, and locate the sign seven feet seven inches from the property line. Therefore, variances for 35.53 square feet in area and two feet five inch distance from the property line are needed from Article 21of the Zoning Ordinance to allow erection of the new sign.

The public hearing will be held on Wednesday January 4, 2017, at 7:30 p.m. at the City of Northville Municipal Building, Council Chambers, 215 West Main Street, Northville, Michigan, 48167, 248-449-9902. The purpose of the public hearing is to receive public comment on the variance request. The variance application is available for review at the City of Northville Building Department during normal business hours of 8:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, local prevailing time. Written comments pertaining to the proposed variance requests will also be received at the above address

Grand Valley's Mencotti made almost all her goals

Only national title elude NCAA Division II's top scorer

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

When Grand Valley State had its streak of three consecutive NCAA Division II women's soccer titles snapped in the championship final earlier this month by Western Washington, 3-2, Gabriella Mencotti probably took it as hard as anybody.

For Mencotti, the nation's leading goal scorer for all NCAA divisions with 29 goals this season, it could have been something straight out of Camelot.

But the ride back from Kansas City turned out to be a different feeling for the junior forward, who played an integral role both as a sophomore and freshman in the Lakers' national championship runs.

A 23-2-1 overall record this season for the Lakers was certainly nothing to be ashamed of. And, in retrospect, Mencotti was proud of her team's effort. "I think having a couple of days to digest the loss was good," said the 2014 Northville High graduate and Novi resident. "But I think overall, reflecting on the season, we had an incredible season. A lot of players, especially our seniors, had great years and some of them even their best years so far. I think everyone stepped up and had a really good year. And it just happens sometimes where the end might not be good enough. But overall, it was a good experience for us to have. Looking back, I think it was a great year, no matter what."

All-America honor

Mencotti, who also recorded 13 assists this season, was recently named first team All-America by HERO Sports, deservedly so.

Manny Legace Jr. is starting to carve out his own legacy as a goaltender for the Novi High School boys hockey team.

The senior, who served as primarily a backup the past two years, continued his stellar early season play for the Wildcats as he turned away 44 out of 45 shots Friday night at Novi Ice Arena in a 3-2 upset win over Livonia Stevenson, ranked No. 2 in Division 2 and last year's MHSAA runner-up. Legace is the son of Novi's Camden Murphy is one of the nation's top butterfly swimmers.

Coming off its best finish in school history, the Novi boys swimming and diving team could be even better this season.

Make that significantly better. Although the Wildcats lost Area Swimmer of the Year Ryan Katulski to graduation off last year's squad that finished seventh (134 points) in the MHSAA Division 1 state finals and set seven school records, the outlook looks even more promising. That's because the Wildcats return a

That's because the Wildcats return a slew of talented performers and one promising newcomer who might be the best swimmer in the state in senior Camden Murphy, a University of Georgia signee.

"We are looking to have an exciting year and improve upon our seventhplace finish at last year's state championships," Novi coach Brent Pohlonski said. "Our boys have been looking forward to this season for a long time and they have put in a great year of training. Almost everyone came back faster than they were last year."

Novi's top returnees include state placers Siddhardha Kareddy and Joey Berman, both seniors.

Kareddy took seventh in the 100yard butterfly (51.15) after posting a school-record time of 50.81 in the prelims, while Berman was ninth in the 100 backstroke (school record 52.16).

Both were also members of the Wildcats' school-record and all-state (top eight) 200 medley (sixth, 1:35.21) and 400 freestyle (eighth, 3:11.71) relay teams.

Other key returnees include Philip Billiu, a state finalist on three relays, and Joel Kotyk, a state qualifier in the 200 individual medley. Both are seniors.

Other returning state qualifiers include juniors Alexander Yuan (200 freestyle), Max Williams (100 backstroke) and Preston Harrell (100 butterfly).

Red Wings, St. Louis Blues and Carolina Hurricanes before retiring from pro hockey in 2012.

Manny Legace Sr., who was a member of the Wings' 2002 Stanley Cup champs, now serves as a goaltending consultant for the NHL's Columbus Blue Jackets and runs Detroit Hockey Academy.

"He was here today," Legace Jr. said. "He gives me a lot of advice. I wouldn't say I take a lot of his talent, but I take a lot of my knowledge from him. That's where I get a lot of it from."

Novi, which improved to 4-2-1 overall and 2-2-1 in the KLAA Central Division scored all three of its goals in the opening period.

Derek Dubois opened the scoring for Novi at 2:05 of the opening period, when his close-range backhander slipped past Stevenson goalie Will Tragge. Assists went to Ryan Fonda and Anthony Luongo.

But the Spartans answered shortly after on a power-play goal from senior captain Justin Alton, from Kyle Lynch and Alex Walkuski, to make it 1-1.

But then the course of the game shifted radically, when Stevenson's Vince Decina was sent off for a fiveminute checking from behind penalty at 7:04 of the first.

Northville triumphs over Pinckney to open season

Wildcats win eight events in easy victory

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

Despite a season-opening 128-58 dual meet triumph to start the season Dec. 8 at home, Northville boys swimming and diving coach Rich Bennetts wants to pump the brakes.

"Nice to get a win to start off the year; they may be hard to come by for us this year," he said. "At this point, we have not even been able to really break down the races and the strategy because, quite frankly, we are so out of shape there is really no point to it yet. We are trying very hard in practice to get everyone in shape as quickly as possible, but when you sit around and do nothing for the better part of seven months, it doesn't happen overnight.'

The Mustangs won eight of the 12 events, led by Trevor Degroot, who captured the 200-yard individual medley (2:08.06) and 100 freestyle (51.91). He also teamed with Cameron Heaven, Jason Nit-kiewicz and Kirk Maibach for first in the 200 freestyle relay (1:34.20)

Other individual first-place finishers for Northville included Maibach, 50 freestyle (22.67); Thomas Rys, 1-meter diving (188.05 points); Nitkiewicz, 500 freestyle (5:13.00); and Roman Grossi, 100 breaststroke (1:09.85).

Northville's 200 medley relay team of Arthur Greenlee, Nikolai Arton, Nitkiewicz and Heaven also took first (1:43.91).

Pinckney was led by David Turner's win in the 200 freestyle (1:49.23) and 100 butterfly (55.20). He also helped the Pirates win the 400 freestyle relay (3:40.33). Pinckney's Zach Beckwith also won the 100 backstroke (1:07.15).

We will continue to challenge the boys at practice every day and I look forward to getting everyone in swimming shape so I can see what kind of team we will have," Bennetts said. "The divers did a nice job tonight and it looks like there are two or three freshmen that might be able to help us out come February. The returning team, minus maybe a handful of guys, is so out of shape that I can't really get a read on them yet. Hopefully, we can start to improve dramatically once we get in shape.

Novi sweeps opponents in double-dual meet

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

Novi swept all three relay events Friday night and brought home to its fans a double-dual meet boys swimming and diving victory over Okemos, 121-65, and Brighton, 132-53.

The Wildcats, who improved to 3-0 overall, also got individual wins from Brian Son, 200-yard freestyle (1:50.76); Siddhardha Kareddy, 50 freestyle (22.85); Joey Ber-man, 100 butterfly (55.08); and Maxwell Williams, 100 backstroke (57.67).

The foursome of Berman, Joel Kotyk, Preston Harrell and Max Robbins captured the 200 medley relay (1:45.57), while Berman, Aexander Yuan, Son and Kareddy were first in the 200 freestyle relay 1:32.03.

Novi capped off the meet with first in the 400 freestyle relay as Stephen Siitari, Kareddy, Son and Yuan were clocked in 3:25.64.

Brighton's Drew Panzl was a double-winner, capturing the 200 individual medley (2:02.00) and 100 breaststroke (1:00.90)

Okemos got wins from

Hunter Hollenbeck, 1-meter diving (254.80 points), Ewan Woolcock, 100 freestyle (49.78); and Alexander Eddy, 500 freestyle (5:12.44).

The next challenge for the Wildcats will be at 5:30 p.m. Thursday at Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook, where they will take on the reigning MHSAA Division 3 state champions.

Wildcats slip past Canton in dual meet

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

Senior Phillip Billiu earned his first individual state cut of the season by winning the 100-yard backstroke as Novi pulled out a highly-contested 96-90 dual meet victory over Canton.

The Wildcats won despite winning only three of the 12 events, as Billiu posted an MHSAA Division 1 qualifying time of 54.56.

Novi's other two individual winners were Adam Carozza in the 200 individ-ual medley (2:09.66) and Jack McClure in the 1-meter diving (177.20 points).

'I'm grateful for the challenge that Canton provided us in our first meet," Novi coach Brent Pohlonski said. "Every event was high-ly contested. This meet helped us see the weak areas that we need to work on if we are going to achieve our goals this year. I'm proud of how our team found a way to win after being challenged."

Canton's Dan Mullen figured in four first-place finishes, including sweeping the 200 and 500 freestyles in 1:47.45 and 5:00.26 (edging Novi's Joey Berman by 0.013 seconds). Mullen also teamed with Kyle Amick, Derek Goderis and Caleb Styles for a win in the 200 freestyle relay (1:32.13). The foursome of Amick, Goderis, Tristen Shao and Mullen was first in the 400 freestyle relay (3:20.74).Canton's 200 medley relay team of Shao, Richard Ling, Isaac Fong and Goderis was also victorious (1:42.68). Other individual winners for the Chiefs included Amick, 50 freestyle (23.18); Shao, 100 butterfly (55.47); Goderis, 100 freestyle (49.81); and Ling, 100 breaststroke (1:05.81).

A club swimmer with the Kingfish Aquatic in Waterford, Murphy owns the national age-group record in the 100 butterfly and recently joined the team after capturing the USA Swimming Speedo Junior Winter Nationals East title with a time of 46.84. Murphy also was ninth in the 200 butterfly (1:46.25).

Pohlonski has a talented freshman class to chose from, led by Adam Carozza (freestyle-butterfly), Max Robbins (freestyle), Seung Jae (Brian) You (breaststroke-freestyle) and Sam Stefanek (breaststroke-freestyle),

"The addition of Camden Murphy and our outstanding freshman class will, hopefully, elevate us to one of the top teams in the state," said Pohlonski, whose team is already off to a 3-0 start. "Our biggest challenge will be replacing our two state finalist divers, Jimmy Ciolli (10th) and Nathan Pellerito (12th). We will be counting on junior Jack Mc-Clure to lead a very young group of divers and help them develop quickly."

CC's new direction

Former Oakland University assistant coach Shawn Kornoelje takes over at Novi Detroit Catholic Central for Shannon Dunworth, who moved to Texas

Although state placer Matt Loniewski and state qualifier Andrew Campbell graduated, Kornoelje inherits a veteran squad that finished 11th in the Division 1 state meet with 68.5 points.

"After the last couple of weeks, just getting to know the kids and watch them train, I think we have a really huge upside," Kornoelje said. "My goal is to get as many guys qualified for the state meet as we possibly can and swim as fast as we can and see what happens."

CC's top returnee is junior Jonathan Lee, who placed fourth in the 100 breaststroke (58.10) and sixth in the 200 IM (1:54.87) at the state finals

Lee was also a part of CC's eighth-place 200 medley relay team (1:36.13) that included junior Tommy Wiaduck, who was a state qualifier in the 100 freestyle (48.48).

Other returning individual state qualifiers for the Shamrocks are senior captains Chris Barron (100 backstroke), Dan Vela (500 freestyle) and Logan Mills (100 breaststroke), along with junior Charlie Walsh (IMbutterflv)

David Debaacker, a sophomore, and Brendon Connelly, a senior, also were state qualifiers in diving, while Junior Jimmy Connor (200 freestyle relay) returns as well.

Among CC's promising newcomers will be sophomores Joe Cottrell (IM-backstroke) and Conor Brownell (freestyle), along with freshman August Phielking (IMfreestyle-breaststroke).

Northville's Kirk Maibach set a school record in the 100 backstroke last year.

"Depth-wise in the Catholic League, I think we're in pretty good shape," said Kornoelje, who was 36 swimmers on his roster. "We're just going to try and get better each day and each week and see where we end up in March.'

Northville retools

Northville finished 12th in last year's Division 1 state meet with 64 points and won the Kensington Conference meet, but lost state meet participants James Xue, Chris Geng, Shane Boran, Jack Breuch, Troy Stacer and Christain Field to graduation.

'We lost a lot of points not only to graduation, but we had some kids move out of state and some others that decided not to join the team this year," said Northville 18th-year coach Rich Bennetts, who guided the Mustangs to a 9-3 dual record last season. "Those are big losses, especially the ones that vou were not anticipating. However, we will not waste our time or energy on kids that aren't here. We will coach the kids that are here and want to get better. We have about six months of work to get done in a three-month season.'

Bennetts will rely on juniors Kirk Maibach and Trevor Degroot, along with senior Nikolai Arton, to lead the way.

Maibach earned all-state (top eight) honors in the 50 freestyle (sixth, 21.30) and also took 10th in the 100 backstroke (school record 52.33), while Arton finished 11th in the 100 breaststroke (59.94) and was Kensington Conference champ (59.91).

Both were members of the Mustangs' seventh-place 200 medley relay team (school record 1:36.65).

Meanwhile, Degroot was a state placer in the 500 freestyle (15th, 4:49.02) and helped the Mustangs take 11th in the 400 freestyle relay (3:13.11).

Other key returnees for the Mustangs include seniors David Alameddine and Thomas Rys (diving), junior Cameron Heaven (sprint freestyle) and sophomores Jason Nitkiewicz, (IM-butterfly) and Travis Nitkiewicz (IM-breaststroke).

Among the promising newcomers for Bennetts are Brian Ding, Curtis Lee, Andrew Lane, Craig Maibach and Nick Brown.

'Getting in swimming shape is priority No. 1," Bennetts said. "Then it is about teaching the kids the way we want things done and getting them to retain as much of that information as possible. The league is really good this year. Novi, (Livonia) Stevenson, South Lyon, Salem all have good teams. Our division (KLAA Central) is really good, we are looking up at everyone right now. Our team has not been in this position in about 15 years, so it will be interesting to see how we react. I hope we will fight hard to get better and be a much better swim team in February than we are now. We'll see how it all plays out."

Footloose: Maddox stars as Novi downs Rochester

New shoes help junior score game-high 27

Tom Morelli Correspondent

It's got to be the shoes. How else could one explain how Novi junior guard Traveon Maddox Jr. scored points at a relentless pace in the Wildcats' season opening 74-55 win Friday night against visiting Rochester? The 6-foot-4 Maddox sank 10-of-16 shots, including three triples, to finish with a game-high 27 points. That's quite an accomplishment when you consider that Maddox didn't even start the game after suffering an ankle injury in practice earlier in the week.

It turns out that the cause of the ankle injury was a pair of low-top KD9s (Kevin Durant's signature shoe), prompting Maddox to seek out a more protective set of kicks.

Donning a fresh pair of green LeBron Soldier Xs,

Maddox lit it up instantly, showcasing both his range and vertical to register 14 points by halftime.

Among his many highlights of the night came in the second quarter, when junior guard Trendon Hankerson threw a lob toward the basket for Maddox, who put it away with an extraordinarily freakish dunk that left many jaws dropped to the floor.

If Maddox is able to pro-vide Novi with performances like this the rest of the way, he may be sporting his own pair of sneakers by season's end.

'I've been practicing that dunk all summer and all fall, just working on my explosiveness, doing my squats and just trying to increase my bounce, Maddox said. "Today, I had a fast break and thought that this is my time, so I had to do it. I wanted to see the crowd go crazy.

While the offense played a big part in the Wildcats' win, they still went to work on the defensive end, beginning with a 16-2 effort to close out the first quarter.

It increased in the second quarter, with Novi securing a healthy portion of rebounds and steals to help ignite its fast-break attack.

After Falcons guard Ahmed Anthony knocked down a 3pointer with 4:15 left to cut the deficit to six, the Wildcats went on an 11-point run to make it 35-18 at halftime.

Running the break has been second nature for Novi, according to third-year coach Brandon Sinawi.

"The guys like to run," said Sinawi, whose team went 14-10 last season and won a Class A district title. "We have guys who like to get out on the fast break and that serves as their conditioning in practice. It's an opportunity for them to score easy baskets and we've preached on that since the end of the season last year. It's easy when you have guys who want to do it and can do it. It makes the game fun as well."

Due to their overwhelming lead, the Wildcats went to their bench more often in the second half. While they weren't able to replicate their results in the first half, Novi still outscored the Falcons 39-37 over the final two quarters and led by as many as 22 points.

Figuring out a way to slow down Maddox and the transition offense proved to be a difficult task for Rochester coach John Pleasant.

"In the second half, we did a better job," Pleasant said. 'We can't put ourselves in that big of a hole in the first half. They have a nice team and they absolutely killed us in transition. They had 17 transition points in the first half and that's going to hurt you.

"Traveon had it going, but then they came back with a couple other guys making shots. That's why you have to play team defense and hope to be able limit and contest shots and not give up open shots."

The Falcons (0-1) were led by senior post player Lamarxco Gulledge with 18 points, followed by a 14-point effort from Hunter Shattler.

For the Wildcats, other notable contributors were senior forward Alec Bageris (13 points, six rebounds) and Hankerson (eight points, five rebounds, four assists).

Novi shot at a 46-percent clip from the field (29-of-63), including seven 3-pointers, while going 9-of-16 at the freethrow line.

"Defensively, early on, we played really well and that led to our offense tonight," Sinawi said. "Traveon coming off the bench and him getting hot early helped us out. We have guys who can fill it up though, no question. What impressed me to most was our defensive presence in shutting Shattler down tonight and turning those defensive stops into transition baskets, getting to the free-throw line and taking care of points that way."

Lukomski keys CC victory over Farmington

Sophomore scores 20 points after getting surprise start

Brad Emons

Davis Lukomski didn't learn he was starting his first varsity game until five minutes prior to game time.

But the sophomore from Novi Detroit Catholic Central was more than ready as he made a quite a splash in his debut, scoring a game-high 20 points Tuesday night as the Shamrocks opened their boys basketball season with a 74-59 victory over Farmington.

"He's played pretty good for us this fall and worked out hard this summer," CC coach Bill Dyer said of the 6-foot-6, 185-pound forward. "No, he didn't surprise us. We got a lot of confidence in him. He's got a quick release and a knack for the game. He's got those natural instincts that you can't really coach."

Lukomski was an efficient 7-of-12 from the floor and showed his range by hitting three triples

Northville cruises by Tractors in a rout

Mustangs score first 18 points to cinch outcome

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

Sophomore guard Robert Johnson scored a game-best 20 points Friday as Northville rolled to a boys basketball victory at Dearborn Fordson, 58-24

The 5-foot-11 Johnson made 10-of-11 free throws as the Mustangs improved to 2-0 overall.

"It was terrific to see Rob go off tonight," Northville coach Todd Sander said. "He's really been growing up over the past couple of week. We really need him to continue to improve.2

Swedish exchange student Gustaf Tjernberg, a 6-foot-5 senior, added 11 points, including 7-of-8 from the line, along with 14 rebounds. Senior guard Jake Justice added 10 points and eight rebounds Fordson (1-1), outscored 18-0 at the start, got seven points from Hamze Alzavat. The Tractors were only 3-of-19 from the foul line (15.7 percent), while Northville was 19-of-21.

me," Lukomski said. "It kind of took away some of the nerves. Went out there, took my first shot and missed it, but remained confident and I got a three. The guy came off of me, I took it and made it. And I stayed confident from there and found myself wide open, so I kept shooting, making shots and it felt good.

The Shamrocks had to feel good about their 33-27 halftime lead, but felt even better after going on a 21-5 third-quarter run to stretch their lead to 54-32.

"We always talk about the first four minutes in the second half coming out with intensity and (CC) went on a 7-0 run," Farmington coach Terrance Porter said. "They took it from a six-point lead to a 13-point lead and it was hard for us to recover.

During that third quarter, CC got scoring from eight different players.

"We played together as a team pretty well," Lukomski said. "We haven't been together very long, but we played pretty well Our starters had good chemistry. We've been working together all week long and guys off the bench rebounded and did their part. It was a good team win.

The Falcons simply couldn't match up with CC's overall size, which not only featured the 6-6 Lukomski, but also 6-5 senior C.J. Baird (12 points) and 6-5 junior Christian Girgis, along with 6-5 sophomore Matt Harding and 6-4 senior Jack Morris.

"It was really our inability to rebound the basketball," Porter said. "They were more physical than we were. They got multiple attempts at the basket, which led to some of their wide open 3-pointers that they were able to hit.

Farmington broke into a full-court press at the end of the third quarter and the Falcons ended up outscoring CC 27-20 over the final eight minutes while creating 10 of CC's 13 turnovers.

But it was too little, too late for the Falcons, who got a team-high 16 points from senior forward Jordan Graham, along with 11 from junior Russell Norris. Senior guard Jay Kirby scored all nine of his points on 3-pointers in the second quarter.

"I told the team I thought we played extremely hard the end of the third and pretty much all of the fourth quarter, but we were forced to because we were down by so many, said Porter, whose team shot 24-of-62 from the floor (38.7 percent). "So we have to play that hard from the opening tap. It's a process and a learning curve and we'll get back on the practice floor tomorrow and watch film and we'll get ready for Friday night.'

CC also got 13 points from senior guard Gio Genrich as the Shamrocks shot 29-of-65 from the floor (44.6 percent).

"We tried on working getting the ball inside and use a little size for us," Dyer said. "It looked pretty good at times tonight. There's certain things we haven't quite covered yet. With only two-and-a-half practices (because of CC's long football playoff run) we haven't got a lot of stuff in. There's a lot of things we still have to get better at and maybe one of them is who is starting the game.

And one player who may have cemented his starting spot is Lukomski, who grew two inches this summer after playing last season for the CC freshman team. Lukomski was a post player during his grade school days at Plymouth's Our Lady of Good Counsel

'We told him about five minutes ahead of time," Dyer said of the sophomore's sur-prise start. "That helps, doesn't it? He knew before. For his first game on the (varsity) he played pretty great. Pretty proud and pretty happy for him.'

CC assembles strong case as No. 1 team

Talk about a home mat advantage.

Wrestling before a throng of more than 1,000 cheering students, preseason No. 1-ranked Novi Detroit Catholic Central put on an impressive display before the friendly faithful with a 48-9 dual match victory over Grandville in the school's annual assembly match.

When CC's 103-pounder Devon Johnsen took just 23 seconds to pin Grandville's Victor Rehmjor in the opening match, the roar of the Sham-rocks' student body was deafening, to say the least.

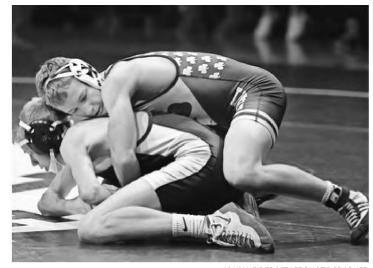

It wasn't quite the ancient Roman Colosseum, but it definitely had that feel as the Bulldogs found themselves in a 21-0 hole to start after 112-pounder Rhett Newton (18-1 technical fall), 119-pounder Derek Gilcher (pin in 4:29) and returning state champion Ben Kamali (16-6 major decision) each scored impressive wins for CC.

'It's very special," CC coach Mitch Hancock said of the annual season opener. "I compliment the Basilian fathers for allowing us to do this, along with our faculty, our staff. I think everybody here embraces the wrestling community. This environment here today has taken off and it's recognized by our national publications. People around the country know about the Catholic Central assembly match. You got to take your hats off to Grandville and coach (Ryan) Gritter for coming in and having courage to wrestle in this type of environment."

Grandville's 130-pounder Anthony Taylor momentarily stopped the bleeding when he decisioned CC's Stone Moscovic, 10-4, to score the Bulldogs' first points.

"It's a great atmosphere," said Gritter, whose team was ranked No. 5 in the Division 1 preseason MichiganGrappler-.com poll. "I think it's really cool that they do that for their student body. Their school spirit is huge and you heard that. And it's fun for us to come and have that experience also and put the kids in some adverse situations and see how they do. I have a couple of young guys. You put them in starting out and it can only get easier from there."

But things didn't get any easier for Grandville as the Shamrocks captured the next six matches, getting a pin from returning state champ Cameron Amine (145), along with decisions from returning state champ Kevon Davenport (135), Joe Urso (140), Aidan Wagh (152), Brendan Yatooma (160) and Tyler Morland (171), another returning state champ. Morland, who went 47-1 last season en route to the D-1 title, took on Cam Bush, the returning state champ at 152 pounds, and posted a convincing 10-0 major decision.

The CC senior was just happy to be back on the mat after suffering a knee injury while playing in the seventh game of the football season. The linebacker was lost for the season as the Shamrocks made a run all the way to the Division 1 state final.

"I'm definitely not in as good a shape as I'd like to be with only a week of practice," Morland said. "It's a work in progress. A little more practice and I would have been a lot better. I just got tired on my feet and didn't score as many points as I wanted to.

"Me and Cam (Bush) are good friends. He's always been smaller (weight class) than me. I just go out and wrestle. I didn't have any game plan really, just score more points."

Morland wore a protective sleeve on his knee, but showed no ill effects.

"He hasn't been on the mat a ton and to wrestle a state champ, who bumped up to wrestle him, and I thought he showed a lot of guts today," Hancock said. "I was proud of him. He looked really, really good on top. As a team, we've got to get in better shape and just get a little bit better with a game plan when we step on the mat.'

Grandville took two of the final three matches as Sam Greco (189) decisioned Dane Flynn, 8-3, while Ian Hall (215) outlasted Steven Kolcheff in double overtime, 2-1. In the final match, CC's defending state heavyweight champ Nick Jenkins won by major decision, 13-5, over Bryce Henning.

"I was really impressed with our 119-pounder Derek Gilcher, who is a freshman," Hancock said. 'And I was very, very impressed with our 160-pounder (Brendan) Yatooma, who had a nice win over (Jake) Paganelli after they bumped Bush to wrestle Morland. And our 215-pounder (Kolcheff) was in that double-overtime match with Ian Hall. We have three freshmen in the lineup and two won. And I thought we should have won all three matches. I like the energy the freshmen brought. A lot of energy and they wrestled tough

Although the majority of the CC student body could only stay for an hour before heading back to class, it was an afternoon to remember. "It's awesome," Morland said. "There's no better atmosphere when it comes to wrestling. It's as good as it gets. It's a lot of fun.

Meanwhile, Hancock was appreciative that Grandville made the 264-mile round trip.

"Coach Gritter is very, very intense and competitive," he said. "And his program is on the rise. He challenged those guys today and you could see that. They were very wellprepared and they were in good shape and well-coached."

Top-ranked Novi Detroit Catholic Central improved 6-0 overall Saturday by winning all five matches in the Westland John Glenn Rocket Duals.

The Shamrocks outscored their opponents, 347-27, including a 48-15 win over Glenn in the finals.

Other victories came against Allen Park (74-6), Clinton (75-3), Livonia Franklin (75-3) and Clarkston (68-0).

Notable victories for CC came from Rhett Newton, who decisioned Glenn's Kyle Borthwell, a thirdplace Division 1 finals finisher from a year ago, along with Joe Urso, who defeated Clarkston's No. 6-ranked Jake Rygielski, another state qualifier from last year.

"I thought our guys wrestled hard today and were aggressive," CC coach Mitch Hancock. "We had some good individual match-ups and learned a lot about where we need improvements. Overall, it's a good start to the year as a team.'

first coming at 7:50, when Loungo batted in a rebound from Zach Perpich and Fonda, followed by Cam Czapski's fifth of the year, from Perpich and Brandon Kour, just 27 seconds later to make it 3-1.

We took the five-minute; it was a penalty," Stevenson coach David Mitchell said. "We hit the kid from behind. Those are the rules and Novi did what good teams do, they capitalized on it.'

Novi made the most of its six first-period shots on goal. The Wildcats had just 11 total shots on the night.

"Honestly, our power play hasn't been working that well lately and we only had an hour practice yesterday after the Brighton game (Wednesday)," Novi coach Mark Vellucci said.

"We worked on special teams and we got pucks to net and I think we got a couple of rebounds there. When you're struggling on the power play, you try and get pucks to the net and get rebound goals like that. It was good.'

Legace then took over the game, making 19 saves in the second period alone before the Spartans finally got one through at 8:14 of the third, when Morgen Gray scored off a nice feed from Brendan Hall with Logan Dunham also assisting to cut the deficit to 3-2.

"The second goal was a tough one, but my team was playing so well, "Legace said. They were putting everything they had into it, blocking every shot they possibly could. I knew even when they got that goal we still had a good chance of winning still."

The Spartans didn't help their cause by taking a costly penalty with only 5:37 left and,

with just under a minute to go, Kour scored an empty-netter to close out the win after the Spartans pulled Tragge for the extra attacker.

When you get chances and you're going against a good team and a good goaltender, you have to capitalize on your chances," said Mitchell, whose team slipped to 5-2 overall and 2-1 in the KLAA Central. "And we were not able to do that tonight and those were the breaks. The sun comes back up tomorrow and we'll come back, move on and go forward. We learned from this and grow moving forward. Again, it was a very good high school hockey game and all the credit in the world goes to Novi."

Getting a split during the week against Brighton (3-1 loss), the top-ranked team in Division 1, and Stevenson, No. 2 in Division 2, bodes well for the Wildcats.

"We played hard against Brighton, it was 1-0 after the first (period) and we were in it." Vellucci said. "They're the top team in the state, one of the top teams along with (Stevenson). I think we made a good statement, especially tonight. We held on. We don't have the talented guys like they do and Brighton does, but we have guys that work their butts off. When you've got Manny in net, the boys feed off it and are confident. They push and they play harder for him."

And during the off-season, Legace Jr. was determined to wants to leave a legacy of his own going into his senior season

"After sitting my sophomore year and most of my junior year, it was just my time to shine and it feels great," he said. "There wasn't anything I didn't work on. I tried to get in shape the best I could, that was mostly the big thing.

These girls got some serious game

hometownlife.com

Whenever the subject of girls hockey comes up at Canton High School, Jessica Carpenter shoots straight and hits hard.

"I feel a lot of people think that girls can't check," said Carpenter, 16, of Plymouth. "They think guys hockey is so much more aggressive and a lot tougher than girls hockey.

"So whenever people ask me about hockey, I always try to prove them wrong, saying girls can be just as aggressive as guys can."

Carpenter is a pretty tough cookie herself, playing defense for the Compuware 16-Under girls hockey AAA team.

She and her hockey-playing siblings, including Honeybaked AAA players Julia and Jenna (not to mention 10-yearold Carly), are raising their sticks and raising their voices about the growing phenomenon that is women's hockey in North America.

And soon they'll be cheering loudly and proudly for their heroes on U.S. Women's Select Team — scheduled to face Canada at 4:30 p.m. Saturday at USA Hockey Arena in an exhibition game that essentially is a teaser for next spring's Women's World Championship (March 31 through April 7, 2017, at the same venue).

In the house

The game provides the Carpenter sisters and other girls who play and love hockey an opportunity to get an up-closeand-personal glimpse of U.S. women's hockey standouts such as Farmington's Megan Keller and Brighton's Shiann Darkangelo.

"It's a really great opportunity for us," said 14-year-old Julia Carpenter, a center for the Honeybaked 14U team, coached by her dad Larry Carpenter. "It'll be important for girls our age to see their role models get to play on the ice, not just on TV."

Hockey fans of all ages might be in for a surprise when they see the high quality of action unfolding in front of them.

"In the past, you can't catch them on TV," Larry Carpenter said. "So you have to watch them when they're streamed over the Internet, maybe catch the finals when they play in the Olympics.

"So to see them in person, it's just so exciting to have them there. It's high-quality hockey and it's great to have people realize that women can play at that high level and deliver such a fun, entertain-amazed at the quality of the hockey."

Agreeing wholeheartedly with them is Reagan Carey, USA Hockey's director of women's hockey.

"For those who haven't seen elite women's hockey, I think they'll be absolutely surprised and they'll be excited to watch one of the most competitive games in sports they'll ever see, let alone hockey," Carey said. "The rivalry between the U.S. and Canada is unmatched; they'll compete hard and they're out to win on both sides.

"So we're looking forward to bringing that energy and exposure to our sport for these fans. I guarantee they're not going to walk out of there disappointed."

Buzz building

The arena on Beck Road in Plymouth is certain to be packed and filled with energy that afternoon. Bringing it will be clusters of girls teams from area organizations such as Compuware, Honeybaked (based out of Suburban Ice in Farmington Hills) and the Livonia Hockey Association.

Larry Carpenter estimated that a contingent of up to 200 Honeybaked players, coaches and families will watch the game.

"Of course, we got tickets as soon as they were available," he said. "The girls had skated with Kendall Coyne and Megan Bozek (among 14 players from the silver medal-winning 2014 U.S. Women's Olympic team). When we found out that they were coming, we knew we'd be going."

Teams wearing Compuware and Honeybaked jerseys are sure to rub elbows with girls players from Northville High School, Farmington Hillsbased Little Caesars and the Livonia Knights. All of those organizations have bought large blocks of tickets for the game.

"We've got five of our girls teams that have bought tickets in some quantity," the Livonia Hockey Association's Mike Featherngill said. raring to go. He said the U.S.-Canada contest provides inspiration for girls who want to live the dream of playing college, pro (yes, leagues are starting to gain traction on the East Coast) and, perhaps, international hockey.

"It proves that they have a higher level that they can continue to play at after they stop playing in their local associations," said Featherngill, who has a daughter on the 12U Knights. "There's not a lot of role models for them to look up to as far as older hockey-playing girls other than what we would consider beer leagues for guys and for women, too.

"Outside of that, there is a professional women's hockey league, but it's only really big on the East Coast right now. So this gives them some exposure to a higher level of hockey with some older girls and shows there's still an opportunity to keep playing past whatever they want to do in high school."

It's tough hockey

Girls hockey is "growing immensely" at all levels, he added. In the Livonia Hockey Association alone, there are about 575 boys and girls playing for various teams. Out of that number, an estimated 120 girls players are skating this winter.

The exhibition game and 2017 IIHF Women's World Championship, hopefully, will give fans visual proof of what the Carpenters already know: girls hockey players are no pushovers.

"Our league is really competitive. We always go to Canada and we play against their teams and they're really tough teams," Julia Carpenter said. "I think we play against them really well."

Julia, also a Canton High School student, added that she isn't a star player for Honeybaked 14U, but likes to get into the dirty areas to score goals.

"I like being the one that makes all the little things happen in order to get a goal and stuff," she said. "It's a little more aggressive than I thought, but I like it to be aggressive."

For the Carpenters and many other hockey families in the area, the Dec. 17 contest serves as an appetizer for the main course — namely the main course of high-level women's hockey still about

Plymouth goaltender denies Northville

Mustangs tie game, but succumb to OT winner

Tim Smith hometownlife.com

Hockey coaches like Plymouth's Gerry Vento have seen it happen many times. A goaltender gives up one goal and then another, in the blink of an eye.

How the goalie – and his team – responds after that is anybody's guess. But Friday night against KLAA Kensington Conference varsity boys hockey rival Northville, Vento and the Wildcats got the best possible response.

Junior goalie Brenden Olepa bounced back in a big way after Northville's Daniel McKee and Ty Kilar scored within a 12-second span in the third, turning a 2-0 Plymouth lead into a 2-2 contest. Olepa made a number of key stops the rest of regulation and overtime, buying time for teammate Tim Baldwin's OT goal to give the Wildcats a 3-2 victory.

tory. "It was a great game to watch and be a part of," said Vento, whose team is 5-0-0 in the KLAA South Division. "Neither team backed down and the compete level was high.

"I thought Olepa was the best player on the ice and, when your goalie was is the best player on the ice, you always have a chance to win."

Olepa stopped 30 of Northville's 32 shots, to win the excellent goaltending match-up against the Mustangs' Brett Miller (31 saves).

Baldwin's winner was a snapshot from between the circles, ripping the puck past Miller's blocker. Assisting on on the deciding goal was Nick Yankee.

But Vento stressed that the way Olepa and his teammates hung tough after McKee and Kilar scored was something for the Wildcats to build off of.

"I was really impressed with the way we responded after giving up those two quick goals that tied the game," Vento said. "It would have been easy to pack it in and call it a night, but the boys dug deep and continued to battle."

Scholar-athlete

Mencotti, a finance major with a 3.75 grade-point average, also excels in the classroom. Recently named the National Soccer Coaches Association of America Scholar Player of the Year, she's contemplating life down the road and where it might lead after she finishes her Grand Valley State soccer career.

"Once my career is over, I haven't fully decided," said Mencotti, who played youth club soccer for the Michigan Rush. "I don't know if I'll look to play soccer after. I might look into that to play a little bit. School-wise, I plan on getting my master's and then just looking for a job from there. Maybe at some point, coach a team, even though its rec or club just to get back into it."

This season proved to be challenging in more ways than one for the Lakers, who in addition to Alexis Mencotti, lost three other key area players to various injuries throughout the season.

Starting goalie Emily Maresh (Northville), who starred as a freshman during the Lakers' 2015 NCAA championship run, missed the entire season and was red-shirted after undergoing hip surgery.

Walking wounded

Meanwhile, starting sophomore midfielder Samantha Riga (Plymouth/Livonia Ladywood) appeared in just five games before a leg injury ended her season early, while senior midfielder Gabbie Guibord did recover from a knee issue and returned to play in the final four.

It was the Bermuda Triangle of injuries.

"I think it was very tough. because everyone has a role on our team and some of those players who were injured had significant roles last year,' Mencotti said. "So adapting to that with Maresh not in goal, I thought Jen (Steinaway) stepped up and did really well. Guibord in the center ... she works harder than anyone I know. Having her sit out for the beginning of the season was very difficult, but when she came back it was good to have her back for end of the season. Riga was out for the whole season ... she was a vital piece to our formation up top. It was hard, but we were able to adapt, which was good.'

With one season of eligibility left, Mencotti believes the sun will rise again and the Lakers will challenge for another national title.

"It's going to be different, obviously, such an amazing group of seniors," Mencotti said. "It's always going to be hard to digest the fact and think how we're going to move on and what not, but I think with the returners, everyone is going to be a year older. They're going to have a year to grow, many of whom got plenty of playing time. And we've got freshmen coming in. It's going to be a good group and I'm super-excited for what's to come.

Mencotti, who had one goal and three assists during Grand Valley's NCAA tourney run, wouldn't trade this season for anything, other than that final match.

"Obviously, there's a lot of positives to take away, but the main goal was not reached," she said, "so definitely it was bittersweet."

bemons@hometownlife.com bemons1@twitter.com Plymouth opened the scoring with about two minutes left in the second period, on an unassisted goal by Jacob Balch.

The Wildcats then made it 2-0 with 15:04 to go in the third, with Jack VanDen-Beurgeury taking a feed from Nathan Stoneburg and finding the back of the Northville net.

The two-goal lead was very short-lived, however. McKee got one back with 13:51 remaining, from Nick Bonofiglio and Josh Mitchell.

Just 12 seconds later, the Mustangs (2-3-0) were celebrating again following the equalizer by Kilar (from McKee and Nate Czarnota.

For the final 13:39 of regulation, it was back and forth with goalies Olepa and Miller standing tall.

That led to Baldwin's winner, which sparked a happy mob scene along the boards.

Job-hunting while employed requires time, tact

BY DEBRA AUERBACH CAREERBUILDER

nyone who has searched for work knows that it's a fulltime job. When you're already employed but want to make a career change, you may wonder how you'll ever find the time. What's more, you have to conduct your search with some level of secrecy, assuming that your current company doesn't know you're looking.

Experts share these tips on navigating the tricky waters of job-hunting while you're employed.

Use automation to your advantage.

Donna Shannon, president and CEO of the Personal Touch Career Services, says the key to efficiency is automating the process. "For example, rather than searching through a website every day, have CareerBuilder email you the new jobs that fit within your search criteria," she says. She also suggests rotating which employment site sends you job postings each day so you receive new opportunities regularly.

your free time to your search. However, that could actually backfire.

"My No. 1 piece of advice for job seekers who are currently employed is to set aside one to two times per week to job-search and to really focus, whom you really trust and you think are in the position to advise you about where to look and where opportunities may lie," she says. "It's also a great idea to speak to former employers, assuming you left move on from your current job, that usually means you are not happy," he says. "A poor attitude at work can be a red flag to employers that you no longer want to be there. (Staying positive) also goes a long way in making the eventual separation amicable, since you never want to burn bridges with a former employer."

He also says you should search on your own time. "Don't use work hours or your office computer to conduct your job search. Many companies have tools that monitor web traffic," Mahan notes. Those tools can flag users who visit job boards and social networks.

Lastly, Mahan says, be selective when choosing references. "Recruiters may ask if they can contact your current employer. Sometimes, this is just a curveball to find out more about why you are leaving," he says. "Have a good canned response ready holiday-themed brand and regional r o m dealer ads for Audi, Honda, Toyota, Jeep, Ford, Chevrolet, Cadillac and others will ensue.

Just as auto brands face a big need and opportunity to move the metal now in what has become a hugely important December each year, it seems they may be rediscovering the role that television advertising can play in encouraging actual car sales as well as in creating brand awareness and impressions.

Much of the former role has been parceled out to digital advertising over the past decade, but campaigns like Lexus' annual "December to Remember," as well as some new data from the Video Advertising Bureau (VAB), suggest that many auto marketers are giving a closer look to the capabilities of TV. 'The truth is that TV and digital work together very well. Sean Cunningham, president and CEO of the VAB, told me. "TV has done a good job of fueling digital, which does an especially good job with dealer offerings. But too much of the attribution for success has been assumed to be digital. Now we're seeing more awareness that it was the wrong division of labor.

Consider the deluge of TV advertising for the crucial holiday promotion season that has emerged for the auto industry over the past several years, for the first time turning the period into a fertile sales period after it pretty much had been deadsville for most of the industry's history

"There was $161 million spent on Black Friday on automotive advertising on TV alone," Cunningham noted. "And the reason is that the industry knows right now is the period when they have to move those vehicles, an inordinate volume of units. And when you need to mobilize customers en masse, in a tight timeframe between now and the end of the year, they understand that TV is going to light up their online instruments and fill dealer showrooms with traffic.'

"Start Your Engines," a new study by the VAB that surveyed active auto shoppers in November, found that TV carried the most influence of all media throughout their decision process. It turned out that millennials were twice as likely to become aware of their local car dealership via TV (56 percent) than the next leading means, online search (26 percent), while 25- to 54-year-olds were 74 percent more likely, 53 percent TV versus 30 percent search.

And when it came to deciding to take a test drive, 40 percent of millennials and adults 25-54 cited TV as their primary motivator.

"These findings fly in the face of several automakers' recent requirements that 50 percent of local advertising go to digital media, said Evelyn Skukovich, VAB's vice president of strategic research and insights.

TV ads are pointing people to dealers power placing a

and putting them in cars. And most often it's TV ads that direct people to auto web sites, which is consistent with the catalyst role that TV plays in social media.

Indeed, more than half of shoppers visited an automaker's site after seeing a TV ad in the VAB study, versus fewer than 30 percenet for online search. This held true across demographics by a significant margin. Similarly, one in three were prompted to look up more information online after seeing a TV ad.

In the discovery phase, millennials cited TV at 47 percent and online search at 45 percent, while 25-to-54-year-old cited search at 46 percent and TV at 42 percent. Among both groups, TV held an advantage of 2-to-1 over social media and more than 3-to-1 over online video and magazines. The numbers were consistent across gender and demographics, with fully 57 percent saying they're in discovery until a

"In terms of discovery and consideration," Skukovich told me, 'people will be surprised to know how much TV ads have impact in terms of pushing them to the dealership and getting them in the car. The majority of people believe that online search is the big driver, but that's not necessarily the case.

Skukovich concluded: "A lot of brands that went away from TV are coming back to TV advertising, realizing its
