The Schlanser family has a long history of service in the U.S. Army, so it's in keeping with that tradition that Justin R.

Schlanser became a veterinarian — in the Army.

Lt. Col. Schlanser, who grew up in Northville Township, is one of more than 400 Army veterinarians and a specialist in wildlife and zoo animals Stationed since July in Vicenza, Italy, as the command veterinarian for U.S. Army Africa, Schlanser is planning several trips to the African continent, where he'll work with military, public health and veterinary experts in host countries on a variety of projects aimed at protecting both wildlife, the health of soldiers and the civilian population.

His 13-year Army career has taken Schlanser to posts across the country and the world, including deployments in both Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, Bill Bresler watched as the 2016 presidential campaign turned nasty and divisive, and couldn't help but notice Americans are "a divided people." But Bresler also believes this reality: The U.S. is a big country, with widely divergent ideas.

"This has always been true," said Bresler, a longtime photographer for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. "Even the founding fathers who wrote the Constitution were a mix of contradictions." In a time of heightened anger and divide, Bresler turned to what he knows best — photography — to show that everyone, despite their points of view, is an American. "We are all Americans," he said. "Whether

Budget presentation wins honors for city of Northville

The city of Northville was recognized last month for its budget presentation by an organization that represents thousands of elected and appointed government finance officials across the country.

The Government Finance Officers Association, or GFOA. awarded Northville its Distinguished Budget Presentation Award, which was accepted by Sandi Wiktorowski, the city's finance director and treasurer.

It was the city's 11th consecutive GFOA budget presentation honor and was for the 2015-16 fiscal year, which ended last June 30.

"This award shows the commitment to professionalism and transparency that Sandi and the city staff contribute to the budgeting process," City Manager Patrick Sullivan said.

According to GFOA, the award recognizes significant achievement that reflects the commitment of the governing body and staff to meeting the highest principles of governmental budgeting.

The city met nationally recognized guidelines for effective budget presentation, which require that a budget be developed to serve in four categories: as a policy document, a financial plan, an operations guide and a communication device. The awardees were chosen by a panel of judges who made sure the governmental organizations honored had budgets that followed 27 nationally recognized guidelines within those four categories.

the military mission to Afghanistan that followed the terrorist attack of 9/11.

"It's really been a great career. I've had the opportunity to do so many things that I never thought I could do while I was in veterinary school," Schlanser said recently by phone from Vicenza.

Schlanser is a 1996 Northville High School graduate who expected to follow an ordinary career path as a veterinarian. "I thought I was going to be a small-animal practitioner somewhere in Michigan and go from there," he said.

But, as he tells it, his father, Lawrence E. Schlanser Jr., researched different opportunities and suggested the Army veterinary corps.

"I had no idea the Army had veterinarians," he said.

The government paid for Schlanser's veterinary education at Michigan State University, from which he received his doctorate in 2003. He entered Army as a captain and headed to basic training at Fort Sam Houston (now called Joint Base San Antonio), where the Army sends its incoming medical personnel.

"We still have to meet the same standards that the rest of the Army meets," he said.

For the Schlansers, Army service stretches back generations. Lawrence Schlanser Jr. served during the Vietnam War, while his late father, Lawrence E. Schlanser, had an Army career, serving in both World War II (he was wounded by a land mine in Europe) and the Korean War and retiring with the rank of major gener-that overlapped.

His parents, who still live in Northville Township, are thrilled with his choice.

"We've been blessed that he's found his niche and enjoys serving the Army in that capacity, said his mother Nancy.

His stories have wowed people at family gatherings, she said. "We always told him he needs to write a book," she said. Lawrence Schlanser

Jr. recalled that his son is also a skilled musician, but realized early the struggles musicians face in making a decent living. "He went into science and never looked back, basically," he said.

Lt. Col. Schlanser, who also has a master's degree in public health from MSU, said that while animals are his specialty, his larger focus is protecting the health of soldiers and the public. Because they are trained to care for many different species, he said, veterinarians have a broad medical knowledge and can contribute to developing strategies that protect human Projects like animal conservation, keeping biodiversity high and understanding emerging diseases, more than 75 percent of which have animal origins, all positively affect human health, Schlanser said.

The Army veterinary corps also provides veterinary service to other branches of the military, as well as to the Secret Service, the Border Patrol and other federal Schlanser has fond memories of the Northville area, where he likes to visit downtown Northville, dine at the Tuscan Cafe and visit St. Paul Lutheran Church, which he attended while growing up. He plans a late January visit to see his parents and his children, Adam, 11, and Jaclyn, 8, who live in Plymouth.

'I've been very fortunate in my career, to go where I've gone and do what I've done," he said. "The military has sent me all over the place, but I do look forward to coming home."

gridge, who lived in Northville Township, spent his entire career as an educator in the district, starting in 1960 as a history teacher at Northville Junior High and retiring in 1997 as the principal of Meads Mill Middle School.

"He was going to come for one year, and we ended up staying forever," said his wife of 57 years, Margaret. "We fell in love with Northville.'

Longridge was the Northville High School assistant principal from 1968 to 1974, the principal at Cooke Junior High from 1974 to 1985, and spent the last 12 years of his district career as the principal at Meads Mill. "He loved all the schools he was in," his wife said.

With a passion for sports as a player, coach and fan, Longridge was also the high school basketball coach and assistant football coach early in his career. In 1962, Longridge led the Mustangs basketball team to the state semifinals, in which the team lost to River Rouge

Superintendent Mary Kay Gallagher met Longridge when she joined the district in 1985

"His compassion for students, passion as an educator and coach and strong presence as a leader was clearly evident from day one,' Gallagher said in a prepared statement. "He touched the lives of NPS children, staff and families and is most certainly a part of Northville's tradition of excellence and will be remembered with love and respect.

Longridge was raised in Dearborn and graduated from Fordson High School, where he was a three-year letterman in football and basketball, in 1951. He served in the U.S. Navy for four years, including sea duty aboard the U.S.S. Albany, and served in the Navy Reserve afterward.

He attended Eastern Michigan University, quarterbacking the EMU football team in the fall of 1959, and graduated with a bachelor's degree in education in 1960. He later returned to EMU for a master's in education, graduating in 1964.

Longridge was named Michigan's 1996 principal of the year for middle and secondary schools, and was the Oakland County basketball coach of the year for the 1961-1962 season.

His daughter, Karen Cullen, said her father enjoyed being a part of the community where he worked and knowing people there both personally and professionally. Margaret Longridge also taught in the district for five years, before having children, then taught in a neighboring district before retiring.

Longridge was respected by students, Cullen said; even those with disciplinary problems, she said, knew he was pulling for them.

Buses of school children are on the way, but in this quiet moment before the doors open, Suzanne Fischer has the exhibits at the Michigan History Museum almost to herself as she leads a couple of visitors through the museum.

In front of a floor-toceiling, hand-painted mural depicting scenes from Great Lakes Native American life, she slides open a door at child level to reveal artifacts depicted in the picture.

From the third-floor overlook, she stands next to a gigantic faceted Fresnel lens, used in lighthouses.

Standing inside the museum's realistic mockup of an Upper Peninsula copper mine, Fischer wants to make sure a photo of her doesn't include a large hand-painted "keep out" sign near the mine's entrance.

"We don't want to keep people out," she says. "We want to bring people in.'

That's a key part of Fischer's mission as the director of the Michigan History Museum System. Hired in early December, she oversees exhibits and programming at the state's flagship museum in Lansing and 10 regional museums across the state, including the lumber camp at Hartwick Pines near Grayling, Fort Wilkins and the Fayette Town site in the Upper Peninsula, the Civilian Conservation Corps Museum near Higgins Lake and the Walker Tavern Historic Site in Brooklyn

And she enjoys the opportunity to foster a love of history in others using actual artifacts.

Her goal for the state's museums is to make them more inclusive of all of Michigan's people.

Man is latest accused of trespassing at old hospital

Urban explorers, beware: A trip to the old Northville Psychiatric Hospital - especially if it's documented on social media — could land you in legal hot water.

About 300 people found that out last year, including Shane Kelley, a 28-year-old New Balti-

The sprawling, rundown psychiatric hospital on Seven Mile Road was open from 1952 until 2003. In the years since it closed, it has become somewhat of a mecca for urban adventurists and ghost hunters.

Trespassing is a misdemeanor punishable by up to 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Kelley could not im-mediately be reached for comment.

Tennies said Kelley is among about 300 people who were arrested in 2016 on charges of trespassing on the property.

The police department has a zero-tolerance policy when it comes to trespassers because the site can be dangerous, Tennies said.

"Safety is our primary focus," he said. "Due to the buildings deteriorating in their current condition, it's not an area where people should be traveling or exploring. We're concerned about people's safety. There's also concerns about asbestos in those buildings."

Ex-'Survivor' contestant gets prison for child porn

Ex-"Survivor" TV contestant Michael Skupin was sentenced Dec. 27 to one to four years in prison after he was convicted in November on four counts of possessing child pornography. Skupin, 54, of Farmington Hills and formerly of White Lake Township, was sentenced before Oakland County 6th Circuit Judge Wendy Potts, according to a news release from Michigan Attorney General Bill Schuette's office. Skupin was also ordered to pay $31,800 in restitution and serve probation for financial crimes relating to a Ponzi scheme investigation that then snared him on the child pornography charges.

Once out of prison, he will be required to register as a sex offender and he'll be restricted from using a computer outside of work purposes, according to the release.

Skupin, appeared during the 2001 season of "Survivor II: The Australian Outback" and also 'Survivor: Philippines."

Today's sentencing is a strong message to those who prey on children: no matter who you are or what you do, we will find you," Schuette said in the release. "The act of downloading and viewing images of children in sexually abusive situations is reprehensible, this behavior re-victimizes the child victims over and over.'

Skupin was initially charged by Schuette in February with counts of financial crimes of larceny by conversion and racketeering as well as the child pornography charges.

An investigation began into Skupin after victims from his alleged Ponzi scheme contacted a local news reporter. According to the attorney general's office, Skupin recruited investors and friends to take part in his "gifting scheme" called Pay It Forward.

Victims made cash investments in the scheme and their money would then cycle through a chart in which participants were eventually paid out of other new investors' money.

Michigan tower research helping save songbirds

Jennifer Dixon Detroit Free Press

More than a decade ago, 100 researchers fanned out across Michigan to count the number of injured and dead songbirds at the base of 24 communications towers during the peak of the birds' spring and fall migrations.

They concluded that the towers with steady, burning lights were more deadly to the birds than towers with flashing lights — and that by simply turning off the steady lights, they could reduce deadly bird-tower collisions by 70 percent. An estimated 7 million birds are killed annually in tower collisions in the U.S. — and most are songbirds that migrate at night.

It took years, plus the coordination of three federal agencies, to respond to the research coordinated by the East Lansing field office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. But now, the Federal Aviation Administration has changed its lighting standards for new communication towers, while the Fish and Wildlife Service recently began working to persuade owners and operators of existing towers across Michigan to turn off the burning lights or switch to flashing lights.

The lights are meant to protect aircraft of all kinds from striking these

There are thousands of towers across the country, used by broadcasters and communications and telecommunications providers. Only newly built towers are affected; replacing or turning off the burning lights is voluntary for existing tower owners. Owners of towers that have both steady and sufficient flashing lights can simply extinguish the steady lights. Experts say that could save owners money on maintenance and power costs.

Audubon Great Lakes, the Chicago-based office of the National Audubon Society that manages conservation work throughout the region to protect and improve habitat critical for birds during migration and nesting cycles, said it's also willing to use its chapter network across the Great Lakes to reach out to tower owners and operators about switching or turning off lights. Work could begin in 2017.

"We're really proud of the work of the office, done in collaboration with the state of Michigan and the Federal Communications Commission. We're really pleased we had an opportunity to do something that has nationwide implications for migratory birds," said Jack Dingledine, deputy field supervisor at the wildlife service's East Lansing field office.

It all started in 1998, when the Fish and Wildlife Service learned Michigan had plans to build a telecommunications network of 179

"We had some concerns about the potential impact of those towers on migratory birds, including the endangered Kirtland's warbler. which nests almost exclusively in northern Michigan, Dingledine

The agency approached the state, asking for access to the base of the towers so that researchers could measure the number of dead birds as they migrated between Michigan and the southern U.S., Central America and South America in the fall and spring.

The state also provided more than $100,000 in funding for the research. Led by Joelle Gehring, who was working on a post-doctorate at Central Michigan University at the time, researchers did their pilot work at six towers in fall 2003. In fall and spring of 2004 and 2005, for three weeks at a time, they counted dead birds at 24 towers from southwest Michigan to the Upper Peninsula.

And they found that towers that had flashing and non-flashing lights were significantly more dangerous than those with only flashing lights.

Gehring and two colleagues published their study in a scientific journal in 2009, then the Federal Aviation Administration, which regulates tower lighting, did its own research to ensure aircraft would still be safe if the non-flashing lights were turned off or replaced.

» In December 2015, the FAA changed its standards for tower lighting to eliminate the steady lights on new towers. Now, Dingledine says his office is working with existing tower owners across Michigan to persuade them to update their lighting.

He said the changes can actually save tower owners money, with reduced power and maintenance costs. » While the Federal Communications Commission licenses communications towers, it requires owners and operators to comply with standards set by the FAA.

Dingledine said there is some evidence the birds may be attracted to lights on the tower, especially in foggy weather, and then they collide with the tower or the wires that support the structure.

"The light can confuse them when they migrate," he said.

» But scientists aren't exactly sure why the steady lights are more dangerous than blinking lights.

Protecting these migrating songbirds is important because "birds are a harbinger of the health of your ecosystem. They are some of the most diverse species on earth, occur in every region of the planet and a good, healthy bird population means you have a good, healthy natural environment," Dingledine said.

 Caleb Putnam, Michigan bird conservation coordinator for Audubon Great Lakes and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, said the Michigan research is "one of the most important birdmortality-reducing research done in recent memory.'

He said bird experts have tried for years to address the issue, and Gehring was able to 'make a difference over thousands of towers. It's such a common sense solution to a huge problem.

» Putnam was one of the technicians who got up at dawn for three weeks straight to count dead birds at the base of a 1,100-foot-tall communications tower in southwest Michigan. The workers had to get to the site before day break, so they could find the birds before the raccoons and other scavengers got them.

"We found birds alive, with their beaks broken off." Putnam said. On some days, he'd find 10-20 dead or injured warblers. But if the birds hadn't migrated the night before, he wouldn't find any. And it wasn't easy spotting them in the tall grass that surrounded much of the tower.

» Saving those birds from tower collisions is part of the effort to "prevent future extinctions, Putnam said. "The challenge is that most of our songbird populations are in decline. Many of these species are lacking habitat in breeding areas, and as they get into the tropics, there is deforestation, coffee plantations, climate issues, all these other pressures on them.

"To not allow these species to migrate successfully twice a year, especially with this level of mortality, it starts to become a populationchanging pressure.'

Civics: State lawmakers want high school graduates to learn more

Lori Higgins Detroit Free Press

Quick, name one of the writers of the Federalist Papers. If James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, John Jay or their pseudonym Publius was one of your answers, congratulations! You're on your way to knowing as much about civics as an immigrant taking the U.S.

Naturalization Test. But if you can't name the authors and you have to fire up Google to figure out what the heck the Federalist Papers are, vou're the reason Michigan lawmakers are trying to make sure students graduate high school with a working knowledge of civics. The Federalist Papers, for the record, is a collection of writings that promoted the ratification of the U.S. Constitution.

The Michigan Legislature last week gave final approval to a bill that will require the state's social studies standards to cover the same material that those wanting to be U.S. citizens must know to pass the civics portion of the citizenship exam. plus the state high school exam also must test students on this material. The standards must be updated by May 1, 2018. The legislation now awaits an OK from Gov. Rick Snyder.

This is to heighten the senses as well as the understanding of why soldiers go to war, as to why we go and vote, as to why we live in a world of democracy," said Peter Lucido, R-Shelby Township, the primary sponsor of the legislation.

The rules go beyond what the state now requires. Michigan's graduation requirements mandate students pass a onesemester civics course. But the law isn't very specific, simply requiring the course to include "the form and functions of the federal, state and local governments and shall stress the rights and responsibilities of citizens.

The new rules essentially mean students will need to understand the same material that's covered in the 100 questions that are part of the civics portion of the U.S. citizenship exam. Questions on the test run the gamut, from American government to American

They include questions such as: "What is one reason colonists came to America?"

"What is one responsibility that is only for U.S. citizens?" "What is one power of the states? 'Who was president during World War I?" and "What are two ways that Americans can participate in their democra-

The real exam is given orally and applicants for citizenship are asked 10 of the 100 questions. They must answer six out of the 10 correctly to pass, according to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, the federal agency that oversees legal immigration into the U.S.

Late-night talk-show hosts often illustrate the lack of civics knowledge by randomly questioning people on the street about things such as the name of the vice president or the name of the president. But advocates for students taking the citizenship exam are far more concerned about test data showing students nationwide are struggling with basic civics awareness.

On the most recent National Assessment of Educational Progress exam, just 23 percent of eighth-graders were proficient in civics, 18 percent were proficient in U.S. history and 27 percent were proficient in geography.

A 2014 survey of 1,416 adults, by the Annenberg Public Policy Center of the University of Pennsylvania, found a similar lack of knowledge: » Just 36 percent could name all three branches of the U.S. government, while 35 percent couldn't name any branch.

» 27 percent didn't know it takes a twothirds vote of Congress to override a presidential » 21 percent incorrectly believed a 5-4 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court is sent back to Congress for reconsideration.

» More than half of those surveyed didn't know which political party controlled the U.S. House and Senate at the Lucido's bill, in its original form, would have required that, in order to graduate, students would have to pass an exam that includes questions similar to all or some of the questions on

It passed the Michigan House on a bipartisan basis on a 82-27 vote in the citizenship exam.

Finding health, happiness and success around habits ealth, happiness and success directly result from our habits.

We are not talking about the harmless or inconsequential habits, but a pattern of behavior that repeats over and over again and keeps us stuck. It is an established pattern of being, of feeling, of living or relating and is deeply wired in our psyche and has deep neurological grooves that are difficult to overcome with affirmations, willpower and discipline alone.

There is no doubt how hard it is to change these patterns of behavior! Much harder, though, is to live a life that does not look like anything we wanted because of our habits.

Habits are learned; we are not born with them. And when something is learned, it can be unlearned. Denial. resistance and rationalization are natural parts of the process, as long as we are not stuck in it forever. We have countless examples and inspiring stories of people making radical changes in their lives. They change the way they view themselves, they change the direction of their lives, they go back to school to finish their education, they leave that job that was sucking the life out of them, they leave that toxic relationship, they kick the worst of addictions and much more

We all have that fire inside of us waiting to be lit. Once we discover that fire, it is no longer possible to live any other way.

Changes that stick are the ones made from deep within. Habit patterns are a symptom of our deeply held beliefs about ourselves, about life, about relationships, about health. about money and other things that affect the quality of our life. We know that in order to eradicate the symptoms completely, we must treat the root cause of those symptoms. Until we dive deep and change our beliefs, any change we make on the surface level will only be temporary. Our beliefs are a result of our past experiences, conditioning and old structures

Meena Puri GUEST

COLUMNIST

Habits are learned; we are not born with them. And when something is learned, it can be unlearned. Denial, resistance and rationalization are natural parts of the process ...

(that we once had to establish because they served a purpose then). Once they served their purpose and no longer represent us now, they are no longer needed. However, they become part of our conditioning and will continue to control our behavior unless we evaluate them from time to time and discard them once they have served their purpose and are no longer needed.

in that sense, habits by themselves are not good or bad, they merely feed the belief patterns that we are holding in the subconscious. The subconscious does not judge the habits, it simply does what it needs to do to maintain the status quo — the belief. A habit is a good habit if it is taking us in the direction we want; if it isn't, then it simply is a distraction away from our goals. It is up to us to decide our direction and evaluate whether a habit/choice/ action is taking us in that direction.

Before doing the deep inner work that is necessary to make long lasting changes, it is important to establish a mental frame of mind that can serve as a foundation to make these changes.

Self-discovery

The No. 1 thing to realize is that changing habits is not about selfimprovement, rather it is about self-discovery. It is a much kinder and encouraging way of thinking and it actually is the truth. It feels exhausting to think that we continuously have to improve regardless of where we are in our journey. It can feel like chasing our tails at times. The question to ask is: "Is this habit a true representation of me?" Anything that is not a true representation of who we are will naturally fall off as we move more and more toward who we truly

Replace an old habit

Replacing an old habit with a new one works much better for our psyche than getting rid of the habit. Taking away something creates a vacuum and the subconscious will fill it with something else unless we consciously fill it with what we want. A common example of that is weight gain after someone quits smoking. As life changes, what we need also changes. Therefore, it is good to review our habits from time to time to see which ones are no longer in alignment with our growth and our goals and replace them with the ones that are.

Refrain from negative self-judgment

Habits are not a moral compass to judge ourselves or others by - bad habits don't mean that you are a bad person. It just means that we have been there done that and it no longer holds our interest. Ultimately, we are not our habits. An over-identification with our habits is a mental trap that keeps us stuck in the same pattern. The negative self-judgment makes us feel the familiar bad inner feeling that acts as a magnet for the same old habit that we are trying to change. So, putting a positive spin on this, even on temporary basis, and believing that we can change the habits works to our advantage and becomes a catalyst in doing the deeper work to make the changes

Remember your potential

Our potential is always greater than what we have accomplished today. Just because we can't do something today does not mean we can't do it tomorrow. Self identification is important for us to find our purpose in life but the negative self identification can be detrimental. "I am just a lazy person," "exercise is not my thing," and "I have anxiety or another disorder," are sure ways to remain stuck.

We only know what we know. We never really know our potential until we put ourselves in the challenging or unfamiliar situations and realize we can do far more than we thought. Then we begin to see ourselves differently and more than what we once thought of ourselves. Attaching negative labels and adjectives to ourselves only undermines our potential as human beings and becomes a major mental block in uncovering that potential and really serves no purpose. We are all a certain way until we are not! We can break free of these mental limitations and labels that we impose on ourselves. Because self identification is important, find the one that is going to uplift you, make you more of who you truly are and take you in the direction of your goals. The whole of life is a learning process. Just because you don't know something today does not mean you won't tomorrow. Actually, you can and you will.

difficult as it may be, it is important to consider all five areas.

In estate planning, it's important to review all your documents, including your will, trust and power of attorney. You need to make sure they are accurate and up to date. If you do not have any of these documents, now is the time to do them. Remember, estate planning is not just planning for your death; it's also planning for family emergencies. The more you keep judges, courts and lawyers out of family affairs, the easier life is. Having up-to-date estate planning documents can make handling a family crisis easier on your loved ones

From an investment standpoint, it is always important to make sure your current investments match your individual goals and objectives and risk tolerance level. Investors who do not have a game plan are gambling and we know what happens to most gamblers they lose. Now is the time to review your portfolio to make sure it reflects your current goals and objectives.

When it comes to taxes, always remember your goal is not to lower your taxes, but to be smart with them. That means different things for different people. For example, for many it may mean converting traditional IRAs into Roth IRAs. For those with children, it may mean taking advantage of the Michigan Education Savings Plan. Remember, taxes are more than filing your tax returns; it's making sure you handle transactions properly and take advantage of opportunities such as retirement saving accounts or even available flexible spending plans.

When it comes to risk management, the important thing is to identify risks and decide if it is a risk you can assume or need to deal with. Insurance is one way of covering risk, but not all risks need to be insured. Furthermore, when it comes to risk management, for those of you with homes and cars, it's important to review your coverage to make sure it still fits your needs; shop your coverages around. Remember, when reviewing your coverages, don't forget about your deductible. Raising your deductible is a great way to lower your premium.

In addition, when reviewing your risk management needs, don't forget about life insurance. Not everyone needs life insurance and there are many people who continue to pay on policies they do not need. The question is not whether or not we are going to die, because we all know that answer. The question is will anyone lose financially if you die? If the answer is no, vou don't need insurance.

Lastly, it is always important to review your debt situation. Not all debt is the same. For example, some debt is tax-deductible while some is not. The key is to review your debt situation and make sure you're being efficient with it. Even though everyone's debt situation is different, one thing I can tell you is if you have charge card debt, it is a type of debt that needs to be extinguished as soon as you can.

Getting and keeping your financial house in order is not easy, but it must be done. We live in a time where everything changes at a rapid pace and we have to be able to respond accordingly. The consequences of not keeping your financial house in order can be severe, not only to you, but also to your family. Therefore, as we start the new year, spending time and getting your personal financial affairs in order will help make 2017 a good year for you.

ACADEMIC ACHIEVERS

Study abroad

Several Northville and Novi students at Miami University spent the summer 2016 semester studying abroad, including Anastasia Darragh of Northville, who studied in South Africa: Kelsev Dietrich of Novi, who studied in Italy; John Evans of Northville, who studied in Cuba.

Honors

Leah Bruce, Meg Bruce and Marisa Maino of Novi achieved the dean's list at Belmont University for the fall 2016 semester. Eligibility is based on a minimum course load of 12 hours and a quality grade-point average of 3.5 with no grade below a C.

Graduates

Bo Cheng of Novi graduated with a doctorate from the University of Alabama at the winter commencement.

Michigan students will learn to save lives with CPR

Lori Higgins Detroit Free Press

Cindy Kuhn's son is alive because his best friend learned how to perform CPR during health classes at Novi High School.

Now all Michigan students will receive instruction in cardiopulmonary resuscitation thanks to legislation approved in December.

'You just never know when you're going to need it," said Kuhn, a fifth-grade teacher at Novi Meadows Upper Elementary.

About 357,000 Americans each year suffer cardiac arrest outside of a hospital, and only about 8 percent of them survive, according to the American Heart Associa-

In 2010, Kuhn's son Brett went into cardiac arrest while a freshman at Central Michigan University. He was 18 and received life-saving CPR from best friend Chris Slack, a freshman at Western Michigan University who was visiting the CMU campus. Both graduated from Novi High where freshmen learn CPR during health classes, Kuhn said.

Few Michigan schools require such training, but it will become the norm beginning in the 2017-18 school year. The new Michigan rules mandate that the health classes required for graduation be altered to include instruction in CPR and automated external defibrillators.

Michigan would become the 36th state to require such instruction. In Michigan, students will be required to only learn hands-only training, meaning they would learn to do chest compressions but wouldn't be required to learn things such as mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. They would only need to receive the 30-minute instruction once between grades 7-12.

I am an American We Are One Nation

TEACHING CIVIL DISCOURSE TO OUR KIDS

A small effort that could help heal an electionfractured nation radiates from a center in Virginia

GABE CAVALLARO

USA TODAY NETWORK

As Americans, we are a diverse population. Historically, we have embraced that diversity as what brings us together and truly makes us one nation encouraging all to seek life, liberty and happiness. By sharing our individual differences and finding commonalities, we can work to unify the nation. One thing unites us: We are all Americans. Each week, this series will introduce you to an exceptional American who is making a difference to unite, rather than divide, our communities.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. - n the campus of Thomas Jefferson's university and in the shadow of his home, Monticello, former social studies teacher Meg Heubeck channels the founding father who sought to unify a nation after a nasty, corrosive election in 1800.

Heubeck wants to resurrect civil discourse. She and her small project aim for a more cooperative America by focusing on those who have yet to vote.

Heubeck, 48, represents the many quiet leaders that the USA TODAY Network will profile throughout 2017 in the wake of the divisive presidential election. She's an American taking real strides to make civic conversation comfortable again.

"We're Americans — that's the thing that holds us together," she says. "Politics shouldn't be something you lose friends and family over."

She has connected with 70,000 teachers across the country as director of instruction for the Youth Leadership Initiative at the University of Virginia Center for Politics, giving them full lesson plans. In one, students play a board game that forces them to understand the compromises it took to write the Constitution. Another uses a mock election and e-Congress simulations to model what actually happens in Congress.

It's meant to prepare students to be lifelong citizens and constructive participants in American democracy. "Discussion, debate and compromise — everything we do has an element of that," Heubeck says.

ск says. She learned that lesson as a social studies teacher for 12 years in low-income areas of Baltimore and again in travels to post-civil war Sri Lanka in 2009 and to Afghanistan in 2011.

She says that sense of "them" and "us" — tribalism really — that she so often hears was a key determiner in 2016's schismatic course.

"You have to make a choice whether toengage or isolate, and I've made a choice to engage, to inspire other people because I see what it's done for me," says Heubeck, who grew up in Jarrettsville, Maryland, with a father who taught atrisk students.

She's also teaching her 10-year-old son, Remmer, to understand different points of view.

The earlier educators can teach children about the American political and civic system and help them understand the election process, the more likely they are to participate later, says Larry Sabato, director of the Center for Politics.

The Youth Leadership materials are available for children as young as kindergarten age. Elementary school teachers can register online and access all the materials for free.

Heubeck's election resources have been used by Julie Strong, a social studies teacher at Albemarle High School in Virginia.

Seniors in Strong's AP Government class developed a better understanding of the political processes before casting their first ballots as new adults.

"We try to put everything in one spot so teachers can find it," says Heubeck, who joined the program in 2004. The program is operated by a mish-mosh of state funds, donations, partnerships, word-ofmouth and unpaid interns.

The next step for concerned citizens, Heubeck says, is to get involved: "We can't cry and hide in the basement. We've got to do something and have that faith in one another."

Q&A WITH MEG HEUBECK

What it means to be an American

Meg Heubeck of Waynesboro, Virginia, leads instruction projects for the Youth Leadership Initiative at the University of Virginia's Center for Politics. The daughter of a teacher and a social worker, she grew up in the suburbs of Baltimore and later spent 12 years as a teacher herself.

What does it mean to you to be an American?

It means that you have the ability to change things. It means that you have the power to make the country what you want it to be. It means the freedom to vote without worrying about going to jail. It means being able to discuss the challenges we face without fearing legal repercussions.

What moment touched and motivated you to launch this effort?

The exact moment was when I heard one of my colleagues saying their family wasn't talking to each other at Thanksgiving because of the election. I had been working on this topic since the summer, but that's the instant I realized I had to do something. It's going to be really serious business. I want to start rebuilding those relationships. Let's start now.

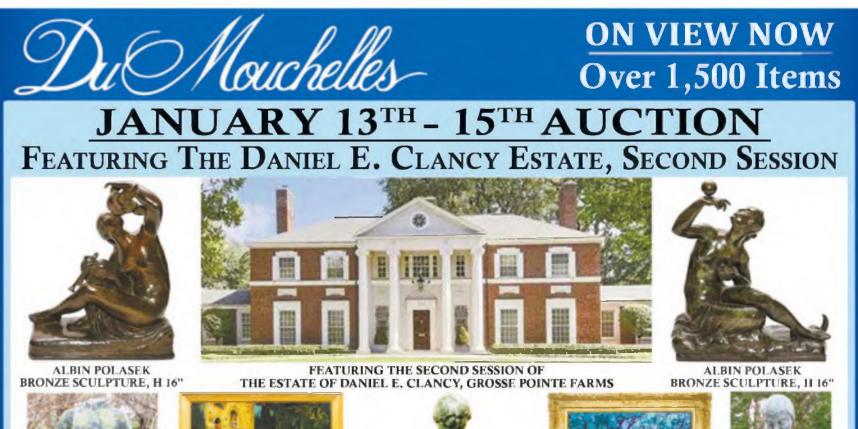

What gives you hope or what concerns you?

We've been through this before in American history. We've had elections that have been tumultuous. We've had candidates who have been unusual, like Andrew Jackson. The way our government is set up protects us from the volatility of strong personalities. We will be OK. But one thing that gives me concern is the sectionalism between the regions of America that don't talk and don't share experiences. It could cause a rift if we don't do something about it.

What do you hope to accomplish through your efforts?

I hope to bring back a spirit of discourse, debate and compromise that I think is missing. We can do that through civic education and working with students. I think that makes our democracy a lot stronger. ... These are required skills for the 21st century. I want them to internalize that they can make a difference. We need an increase in voter turnout among young people. That would be fabulous. And more young people running for office!

NORTHVILLE GETS PAST DEFENDING STATE CHAMPS

The Northville girls basketball team won its own holiday tourney after upending Class A defending state champion Warren Cousino

Mustangs defeat Warren Cousino in rematch of last year's quarterfinal contest, 62-51

Brad Emons hometownlife.com

The Northville girls basketball team may not have been on Santa's radar screen during Christmas, but it is now.

The Mustangs pulled off a stocking stuffer Dec.

28 by stunning defending Class A champion Warren Cousino, 62-51, in the finals of the Northville Holiday Tournament.

Northville (6-1) put a dragnet around Georgia Tech signee and Miss Basketball favorite Kierra Fletcher, limiting the senior guard to 10 points on 4-of-13 shooting while avenging last year's 41-29 state quarterfinal loss to the Patriots (5-2).

The Mustangs overcame an early 8-1 deficit and led wire-to-wire in the final three quarter, thanks to sterling efforts from a host of players, led by 6-foot senior forward-guard Jessica Moorman, who scored a game-high 19 points.

"Our defense was really strong tonight," said Moorman, who was all over the floor. "After the loss last year, we wanted to get back this year and I think our defense tied everything together.

Although Cousino got 18 points from sophomore guard Kate McArthur and 13 from sophomore guard Mackenzie Cook, the Mustangs made sure Fletcher was contained.

"We were just trying to keep a kid in front of her, get her to give the ball up and make sure she didn't get the ball back," Northville coach Todd Gudith said. "When she did, we wanted to have two or three kids running at her to keep her from getting to the rim. She's not an outside shooter, she's a slasher and attacker at the rim. We wanted to keep her as far away from the rim as possible."

After taking a 14-12 lead after one quarter on a basket by Brianna Drummond, Northville increased its edge to 32-23 at halftime thanks to a long 3-pointer at the buzzer by junior point guard Kendall Dillon, who finished with 13 points.

Cousino cut the deficit to 45-40 after three quarters, but the Mustangs didn't flinch even when Dillon was carried off the floor after her ankle buckled on a drive to the basket.

Drummond, who added seven points off the bench, came on to make two free throws and the Patriots never got closer than five points the rest of the way.

"Kendall was having a really good game, so it was a bit scary for a couple of seconds," said Moorman, who went 8-of-11 from the field. "But then we composed ourselves and decided to finish out that quarter for Kendall. It ended up pretty well.'

Northville also got contributions offensively

The 6-foot-1 senior might as well be 6-foot-11, because he continued to making his living in the paint Dec. 28, scoring a game-high 23 points as the host Mustangs captured their own holiday tournament title with a convincing 67-50 win over cold-shooting Howell.

Justice, posting up a majority of the time, went 10-of-13 from the field and 3-of-4 from the foul line as the Mustangs improved to 4-3 overall.

Jake's like a bull down there. But he's unselfish, too, so when he does get double- or triple-teamed down there, he'll find open players," Northville coach Todd Sander said.
Justice scored 11 of his 23 points in the opening quarter as the Mustangs led, 23-18. After picking up his second foul, he went to the bench and did not score until the third quarter, when he rang up 10 more as Northville built a 55-39 advantage

"He's a special player and he's really effective around the rim," Sander said. "Actually, it may have benefited us. He had to sit a lot in the first half with foul trouble, which kept him fresh, and he was able to come out and play the entire second half."

CC's top quarterback Brown transferring to home district

hometownlife.com

Austin Brown, Novi Detroit Catholic Central's starting quarterback both as a freshman and sophomore, is transferring back to his home school district.

The 6-foot-1, 180-pound sophomore, who broke his leg in the Shamrocks' MHSAA Division 1 state semifinal victory over Romeo, will enroll the next semester at Madison Heights Madison High School, where his father Jimmy Brown has been athletic director the past eight years.

Brown guided CC to a 13-0 record this season, completing 61.5 percent of his passes (72-of-117) with 14 touchdowns and only two interceptions before going down during the first half while trying to run for a touchdown near the goal line in a 17-0 win over Romeo.

Brown, who was replaced in that semifinal game by sophomore Marco Genrich, underwent surgery prior to CC's 49-20 state championship loss against Detroit Cass Tech at Ford Field, where senior Dillon Dejong got the

"Obviously, it wasn't football-related," Jimmy Brown said. "They went 13-0 and made the finals, so it really didn't have anything to do with that. I mean, you can't get any better than Division 1 and 13 wins in a row, so it really didn't come down to that."

from senior center Brook Adams (12 points) and junior guard Roan Haines (nine). Haines moved into the backcourt with Moorman after Dillon went down.

"Obviously, that's a big blow to lose your point guard," Gudith said. "She's the one who handles the ball the most. And with seven minutes left, there's still a lot of time for them to come back and it was still a really tight ballgame. I think our kids were a little shellshocked first couple of possessions, but then we settled down and, basically, brought the ball up as a group collectively and did nice job handling the pressure."

Northville was 11-of-24 (45.8 percent) from the free-throw line and 24-of-48 from (50 percent) from the field.

Although the Mustangs committed five early turnovers, they had 14 for the game.

"The biggest thing is trying to break their pressure," Gudith said of the Patriots. "They try and speed you up and have a lot of athletic kids. First couple of trips, we fumbled the ball a little bit, but once we broke their pressure, we got some easy attempts at the basket and the kids did a nice job finishing at the rim.

For the Patriots, who return four starters, there may be some state championship hangover. It was the second time this season Cousino had been beaten by double digits, with the other loss coming against Birmingham Marian (56-42).

'We beat them in the quarterfinals and that's why they were tough tonight ... they wanted that one," Cousino coach Mike Lee said of the Mustangs. "As much as a regular season game can give you, they had a chip on their shoulder. And obviously, we know there's a reason why we wear a target on our back because, if you're the state champions, teams are going to come for you. And they played great today. Hats off to them."

Both Fletcher and McArthur fouled out in the final minute. The Patriots were 20-of-56 (35.7 percent) from the field and committed 14

Tonight, we were a little sluggish on defense," Lee said. We like to press. I don't know if it's back-to-back games, but we didn't have the legs. We had to get out of our press early. It wasn't about offense. If we score 50-some, we should win most of the games we play.'

Although Northville earned its biggest win to date, the Mustangs hope Dillon can make a speedy recovery.

"It's just a high ankle sprain but, thankfully, we don't play until (Jan. 10). So we got almost two weeks and she's going to need all that time probably to heal and, hopefully, she'll be ready when we play (at) Salem," Gudith said. "She took her player off the dribble a lot and took it to the rim. She produced and also was able to feed her teammates. She's a big part of the offense. She runs everything."

First-round win

Adams paced a balanced scoring attack with 14 points as the Mustangs held up their end of the bargain in the opening round Dec. 27 with a 63-30 win over Oxford.

Northville led 33-14 at halftime and 47-21 after three quarters against the Wildcats (1-4)

Other top scorers for the Mustangs included Jasmin Prince, nine points; Moorman and Haines, eight each; and Ellie Thallman, six.

Oxford's Madelyn Morris scored 15 points to lead all scorers.

Northville had a total of 26 field goals, including one 3pointer, to go along with a 10of-12 effort from the free throw line.

Senior guard Colin Latta scored eight points.

Northville, which came into the two-day holiday tournament with a three-game losing streak, regrouped to outscore its two opponents, 133-73.

'Offensively, I think we did fine," Justice said. 'We have to work more on our defense. I think everyone is smart enough to know where help is, how you're getting there. We just have to talk and communicate more and just get into a rhythm on how we play defense.

And it appeared the Mustangs did that, limiting the Highlanders (4-3) to 23.4 percent shooting from the field

"I thought we did a nice job of covering their shooters and I was impressed with the game plan that coach (Sean) Turner and coach (Ed) Kritch came up with," Sander said. "The big thing is that we didn't have a lot of time with zero practice in between, so we had a little bit of time today to prep for Howell. It makes it difficult, but our team really bought in and did a nice job executing what we asked them to do.

Howell's lone player in double figures was junior guard Johnny Shields with 13 points, while senior Dan Zolinski and sophomore Josh Palo added eight apiece.

The Highlanders struggled from the 3-point line.

"We were 3-of-30," Howell coach Nick Simon. "For our team, I'd say, that's probably a strength offensively, so that's a big shock. Yesterday we shot 11-of-22, so it was just one of those nights. All shots I liked. They just didn't go in and they're a good team and good offensively. If our shots aren't falling and theirs are, that's how you get a score like it

Howell also had problems defending the undersized but strong Justice in the post.

"He's really efficient, for sure," Simon said. "He's a great player. He played great (the previous day). He was tough to stop, for sure."

Northville doesn't return to action until Tuesday, Jan. 10, when it hosts Salem in a KLAA Central Division clash.

'We've had a rough couple of weeks and we've had different lineups and different combinations," Sander said. "Some games guys play a lot, sometimes they don't, but the guys have hung together. It's been great and it will be nice to get a few days off after two wins.

Justice was Northville's valuable sixth man a year ago, when the Mustangs finished

"The thing with our team is that we're always trying our hardest," he said. "We got to get back in the flow of things because, when division play comes up, we're trying to be perfect. So we work every day and we just try and get perfect after the three losses we had, trying to get back in our rhythm. Because last year, we did pretty good. We've got to live up to that expectation."

USA HOCKEY

U.S. goalie Dylan St. Cyr of Northville gets some defensive support from Grant Mismash, blocking a shot taken by Trinity's Liam Feeney during Friday's matinee.

U18 squad rallies in third for 6-3 triumph

St. Cyr makes 21 saves to lead U.S. past Trinity

Tim Smith hometownlife.com

The first shot of Friday's matinee hockey game eluded goaltender Dylan St. Cyr to put the U.S. National Team Development Program Under-18 team into a quick hole.

Although the U.S. team quickly responded to go up 2-1, Trinity College did not quit - scoring twice within 42 seconds late in the second period to go up 3-2 entering the third.

But grinding to overcome adversity is something the 5-foot-8 St. Cyr and teammates have been able to do quite well in recent weeks.

Such was the case in the holiday week match-up against the Bantams, with the U.S. twice rallying from deficits to post a 6-3 win

"It's about being able to bounce back from goals," St. Cyr, of Northville, said about the way the team persevered Friday. "It's being able to pick each other up when others aren't playing so well — as myself on the first goal. I think I could have had that one back.

"But my team was there to bail me out and get six goals tonight, which was huge.

The U.S. scored four times in the third period to erase the 3-2 deficit and post a fifth consecutive win. Tying the game just seven seconds into a power play was forward Michael Pastujov (Michigan), who tipped in a blue line blast by defenseman Quinn Hughes at 1:01.

'The power play's got to be a catalyst for our team, especially in a game that can go either way," U.S. head coach John Wroblewski said. "It's a confidence-builder."

After St. Cyr made a couple of timely stops on an ensuing Trinity power play, the U.S. took the lead for good at 7:30 on a one-timer from the left circle by Grant Mismash, wiring a centering pass from linemate Brady Tkachuk.

Scoring later in the period were forwards Sean Dhooghe and Randy Hernandez. Making Dhooghe's insurance goal happen was assistant captain Scott Reedy, who won a puck battle near the Trinity blue line and threaded a nice pass.

(Reedy) does a lot of good things for us," said forward Josh Norris, who scored his team's first-period goal and finished with four points. "He does a lot of little things not everyone recognizes. He's huge for our team."

Group effort

Norris concurred with St. Cyr about the never-say-die makeup of the team, evident throughout the winning "Over the past five games we've won, we've come together better, we've trusted each other," said Norris, a Michigan commit from Oxford. "When you're able to work as a group of five, it makes it a lot easier on everyone on the ice. It's more fun to play like that, too.

For Wroblewski and his squad, the first home game in three weeks provided an opportunity to show home fans the kind of product on display during the recent hot streak — including 5-2 and 7-5 United States Hockey League wins Dec. 16-17 at Madison.

And St. Cyr (21 saves), in goal for three of those four victories, showed the moxie that has helped him lower his goals-against average to less than 3.00 entering the Trinity

With about four minutes remaining in the first, he held firm to turn aside a backhander taken from the right circle by Ryan Cole and stopped the final nine shots he saw in the opening period.

In the second period, St. Cyr did not see much rubber as his teammates turned up the offensive heat, peppering Morin and finally breaking the deadlock with 9:28 remaining. Norris sent a crisp cross-ice pass to linemate Graham Ślaggert, who slid the puck past Morin (31 saves)

The U.S. enjoyed a 17-7 edge in shots in the period.

But the Bantams tied and went ahead 3-2 on back-toback goals a half-minute apart. The equalizer, with 3.18 to go, was an unassisted goal by Charlie Zuccarini. He cut in from the left half-wall, deked St. Cyr and flipped the puck high into the net.

Firing back

At 17:14, Trinity — a team in the New England Small College Athletic Conference took advantage of an oddman rush and a carom off the back boards, with Ethan Holdaway cashing in.

That seemingly lit a fire under the U.S., whhich came out shooting and scoring early in the final period, with the Bantams unable to re-

"It's definitely a good characteristic to have," Wroblewski said about his team's ability to turn the page. "The resiliency and wherewithal to know you can persevere through a tough game. It's hockey, it's tough to predict what's going to happen."

Getting the Bantams off to a promising start in their first-ever game against the NTDP was Connor Hegarty, who ripped a shot from the right point past St. Cyr less than a minute into the con-

The U.S. needed only two minutes to respond, as Norris set up shop in front of Morin and found the mark with 17:05 to go in the first. Drawing assists were defenseman Tommy Miller (West Bloomfield/MSU) and Pastujov.

The U18 squad is now 13-5-0 since Nov. 1 and is back in action Friday at the University of Maine and Saturday at the University of New England.

The team returns to USA Hockey Arena for games at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Jan. 13-14, against USHL opponent Green Bay STOEVER SUITS UP: Another goalie from Northville, Christian Stoever, was St. Cyr's backup against Trinity, with Adam Scheel temporarily with the U.S. NTDP Under-17 team.

BACK HOME: Meanwhile the U17s play home games for the first time in a month, facing Chicago (7 p.m. Friday) and Youngstown (7 p.m. Saturday)

The U17 team, coached by Danton Cole, plays an additional four home games before the end of January, beginning with a 2 p.m. tilt on Martin Luther King Jr. Day (Monday, Jan. 16) against Muskegon.

Darkangelo brought all the intangibles for FSU

Brad Emons

Anthony Darkangelo's worth to the Ferris State football program during the past four years went well beyond the statistics and accolades.

The 6-foot, 232-pound line-backer led the NCAA Division II playoff semifinalists in tackles this season with 62 solo, including 11 for loss and one sack, to go along with 81 assists and one forced fumble.

The 2013 Novi Detroit

Darkangelo

Catholic Central High grad also made all-Great Lakes Athletic Conference three consecutive years.

three consecutive years.
But that's only a part of his story.

"He was the guy, without question, our leader," Ferris State coach Tony Annese said. "He made simple decisions from what uniforms we wore on the road, to home, and to how guys conduct themselves and represented the team, both on campus and in the community. And obviously, he led our defense in a multitude of ways. He was, for sure, 'the' guy, absolutely 100 percent, 'the' guy we relied on to really be the driving force and help us having the success we had.'

And when it comes to No. 38, it really boiled down to all of his intangibles.

High character

"The strength training, the commitment to excellence ... all of those things are things he brought to the table," Annese said. "And there's certainly going to be a void there. Without Darkangelo, there's certainly a lot to overcome from a guy that commands a lot of respect. He was almost like an assistant coach, truthfully, a guy that had that respect from everyone."

Darkangelo was one of the big reasons why the Bulldogs (12-3) made a run all the way to the national semifinals before falling to eventual champion Northwest Missouri State, 35.20

During a second-round 38-17 win over Colorado Mines, Darkangelo matched his regular season high with 14 tackles. The following week, the Bulldogs avenged a regular season loss by knocking off previously unbeaten and GLIAC champion Grand Valley State on the road, 47-32.

"The only thing better you can ask for is the win and go to the national championship, right?" said Darkangelo, who helped FSU to an eight-game winning streak. "There were ups and downs. At the beginning of the year, we kind of had to find who we were as a team, I'd say, and everybody said it was going to be kind of a down year for us because (of) losing such big-name people like (Justin) Zimmer, Jason (Vander Laan) and people like them. But I think after we found out what kind of team we were and who we wanted to be and how good we could be, it showed the team we were. We made a run to the semifinals and it's the second time Ferris had ever

Shamrock days

During his days at CC, Darkangelo helped the Shamrocks to two straight MHSAA Division 1 state finals. He was a two-time all-state player and rushed for a total of 2,574 yards and 34 touchdowns during his prep career.

The Brighton native was part of Annese's second recruiting class.

When I went to Ferris, they weren't very good, maybe a little above .500," Darkangelo said. "And obviously, with coach Annese in there and feeding us a mission of 'this team is going to be great if you just buy in to what's going on.' My freshman year (2013), I got to play a little bit. We went to North Dakota State (56-10 loss in the opener) and we were a good team, but we still needed to get some missing parts. And then my sophomore, junior and senior year — each year — we just got better because we had four-year guys that were under coach Annese that were just buying in. Every year has been better for us."

During the 2014 season, Darkangelo emerged to become an impact player for the Bulldogs' defense and evolved into a force. He was the team's second-leading tackler.

"He's got a great nose for the football, he's a great tackler (with) great tackling skills, great balance, great block destruction," Annese said. "It doesn't matter who's out there trying to block him. If he's got an offensive lineman, he'll take him on and make the tackle at the point of attack. He's got the entire package when it comes to all those things."

Doing his part

As a junior, Darkangelo took on added responsibilities both on and off the field.

"I've always tried to be a leader and I was captain last year," he said, "and I helped to lead as much as I can and learn from those guys, I guess. This year, I was the only returning captain. A captain isn't everything but, obviously, it is because people look to you as a leader and the coaches think you can lead the team."

Darkangelo also had a great support system from his teammates, including four with Catholic Central ties.

Among those also contributing to the Bulldogs' success this season were junior defensive end Dylan Roney, a transfer from Navy who had 44 tackles (including 6.5 sacks); junior defensive lineman Chris Okoye (23 tackles, including five for loss); sophomore defensive back and special teams standout Danny Collins (10 tackles and one fumble recovery); and freshman red-shirt defensive back Alex Bock.

"Dylan is my best friend; he's been my best friend since high school," Darkangelo said. "He went to Navy and, as soon as I heard he was trying get out of Navy, because it wasn't a fit for him, I got on the phone and told him he didn't have a choice of where he was going. We got him at Ferris and he's obviously a good player. It's good to him have.

"And Danny (Collins) and (Chris) Okoye ... I'm friends and I went to (high) school with them and they're both really good football players, too. Danny is good, hopefully he'll get more playing time this year and start for the team, and Okoye has been rotating and starting. It's good to have guys around and guys that care. All of them are traveling and playing. It's almost like I opened the pipeline for CC to Ferris, kind of in a way. It's awesome."

Pro aspirations

Darkangelo's next move is to get a tryout with an NFL team. Currently working out at Phoenix Athletics in Howell, the linebacker is in the process of finding an agent with the aim of getting a look at a combine or pro day.

Former FSU standouts Jake Lampman and Justin Zimmer just finished stints with the New Orleans Saints, while Jason Vander Laan was signed late in the season by the New York Jets.

"It's been one of my dreams since I was a little kid," Darkangelo said. "I've had the dream of NFL since I can remember. It's exciting to be done, but it's sad at the same time because, obviously, you don't want to be done with college. But at the same time now, I'm excited to pursue something because it had to end at one point, right? It was going to come to an end regardless and now it's an exciting time to move forward and do something I've dreamed of since I was a little kid. I have the mentality that if I work as hard as I can, I think it's going to turn out right for me.

And one person who thinks Darkangelo can fulfill his NFL aspirations is Annese.

"I would never doubt him," he said. "If there's a guy that can do it, it's him. I would never doubt Anthony and his determination to make something happen. He certainly is a linebacker with a lot of passion. He'll run around and hit you and make plays. His work ethic and determination is something I would never doubt."

Although the Bulldogs fell one victory shy of playing for an NCAA Division II title, it was a highly productive and satisfying four years in Big Rapids. Ferris went 42-8 during that period, including 25 straight regular season victories, a pair of GLIAC titles and three straight NCAA playoff bids.

"If you ask anybody, you'd obviously want to win the national championship," said Darkangelo, who majored in integrative studies and business. "I think it's been one heck of a ride for me. It's a bittersweet ending a little bit. We went on this sweet ride, but it's like, 'Wow, my Ferris State career is over.' But you're also happy for what you accomplished as a team and as an individual."

Shamrocks finish only two points behind top school

Novi Detroit Catholic Central took runner-up honors as only four points separated the top three teams in last week's Medina (Ohio) Invitational wrestling tournament.

Wadsworth (Ohio) took the team title, edging the Shamrocks, 213-211, while Massilon (Ohio) Perry was a close third with 209. Ohio schools Oak Harbor and Genoa rounded out the top five in the 44-school field with 156 and 133, respectively.

Catholic Central got individual titles from Kevin Davenport (132 pounds) and Nick Jenkins (285), as both wrestlers went 6-0 during the two-day tournament Dec. 27.29

Davenport ran his record to 18-0 with a 10-1 major decision over Wadsworth's Luke Baughman in the finals, while Jenkins improved to 18-1 with a 1-0 decision against Moe Debyan of Hilliard (Ohio)

The Shamrocks' Ben Kamali reached the finals at 120 pounds before falling to Graham Shore of Casstown (Ohio) Miami East, 10-4. Kamali is 14-2 overall.

Among CC's third-place finishers were Cameron

Amine, 17-3 on the year, lost his semifinal match to Massilon Perry's Gary Define, 4-3, in overtime, before bouncing back to win by major decision over Dylan Mansour of Oak Harbor. 9-0.

Ross, 10-3 overall, fell in the consolation final to Richmond's Tyler Marino, 4-3.

Other top finishers for CC included Aiden Wagh, fourth (152); Rhett Newton, seventh (113); and Dane Flynn (195), eighth.

The Shamrocks will host the CC Invitational beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 7.

BROWN

able to be a little more supportive and spend more time with his younger siblings," Jimmy Brown said. "I think it was just being away from home. He was literally there from six in the morning until eight at night and really wasn't spending a lot of time around here. With breaking his leg, I think it just kind of all hit him all at once and put him through another mindset mentally."

Jimmy Brown said he tried to convince his son to remain at CC.

"I wanted him to kind of think about it before he did it, because I really didn't want him to go, to be honest with you, because I thought he was in a great position," Jimmy Brown said. "You got to appreciate the fact that he was looking out for his younger siblings, so it's kind of bittersweet, the whole thing, because CC was good to him, good to our family. I really don't have one bad thing to say about the whole thing. It was top-notch, the administration, coaches everybody was great, including (basketball) coach (Bill) Dyer.

Brown also played significant varsity minutes during his freshman year as a point guard on CC's basketball team.

"This is the first time he's ever had to sit out a sport since he was probably 6 years old and not being able to roll into basketball with coach Dyer and everybody else, I think that kind of crushed him," Jimmy Brown said. "It was a pretty big setback."

Jimmy Brown said his son's recovery time remains uncertain.

"He had the surgery and the plate put in," Jimmy Brown said. "It's healing up nicely, but he'll still be in a boot for a couple of weeks, then he has to go through therapy and, obviously, you don't know how that's all going to pan out."

Once Brown is able to return, he'll be going to a Division 7 school that finished 6-4 and made the state playoffs under first-year coach James Rogers, a former cornerback at the University of Michigan. Madison lost its pre-district playoff opener to eventual state runner-up Detroit Loyola, 45-12.

As a ninth-grader for CC Brown earned his first start in the third game of the 2015 season, eventually leading the Shamrocks to a 9-3 record, a co-share of the Catholic League's Central Division title and district championship. CC's playoff run was ended in the regional final by Division 1 state champ Romeo, 40-29. (Theo Day, who eventually transferred to Dearborn Divine Child and led the Falcons to a Division 3 state semifinal berth this season, was CC's starter for the first two games of the 2015 season before being replaced by Brown.)

CC coach Tom Mach, who just completed his 41st season, could not be reached for comment, but CC athletic director Aaron Babicz wrote in an email last week: "Austin Brown has decided to transfer to the school where his father works.
His younger brother will be a freshman there in the fall as well. We are disappointed that he is leaving, but wish him the

Jimmy Brown said the decision to transfer was difficult on many fronts.

"It was hard for him because of his relationship with Mr. Babicz," Jimmy Brown said. "He felt like he was letting coach (Tom) Mach down. He and coach Mach talked it out. He's leaving on good terms and I'm happy about that. It's not like there was any animosity between him or anybody on that side of town because, as far as I know, the past two years I haven't heard of any kind of rift from any kind of coaches or anything like that, any players or any dissension.

"I know everybody's kind of upset, but honestly everybody we talked to — the A.D., coach Mach, the players — everybody kind of understands Austin's loyalty to his family. It came down to a personal thing with him and that was pretty much it. We wanted to make sure we did it respectfully, not leave and not say anything."

Push your productivity when working remotely

BY DEANNA HARTLEY CAREERBUILDER

t can be difficult to concentrate in an office setting, but being a virtual worker can pose its own set of challenges, as you can be more prone to distractions and interruptions. Keep these simple, practical tips in mind when you work remotely to increase your productivity.

1. Have a dedicated workspace. "You have to put vourself in the mind frame to work, and your environment is a powerful tool to help you do that," says Michele Mavi, director of internal recruiting and content development at Atrium Staffing. "Having a specific workspace allows you to leave things in place so you can pick up right where you left off in the morning. No scrambling to find your notes from the day before or wasting time getting set up and settled in."

Jenna Luchau, director of project management at Scorpion, an internet marketing company, has a dedicated office space free of TV and other distractions. "When I enter my office in the morning, I am 100 percent dedicated to the workday and what I need to accomplish, just as I would be if I worked in the corporate office," she says.

suggests setting a timer to know when it's time to log off and get back to work.

4. Pinpoint quantifiable objectives. "When working remotely, or in any autonomous job, it's important to have clear and quantifiable results," says Michael Decatur, who works remotely for Truxx, a crowd-sourced ride-sharing platform. "There can be lots of distractions when working remotely, and it's nice to have the flexibility to work where and when you need to, but in my experience, it's really important to have quantifiable goals to the best of your ability."

5. Stay connected. In addition to using technology, Shroy suggests striving for some face time with co-workers, even if it's on a quarterly basis. "It's easy to feel disconnected while working remotely, and it's important to maintain relationships," she says. "I believe that in our virtual world, connecting faceto-face and developing work relationships is still important."

2. Set regular office hours and have a daily routine. Megan Shroy, president and founder of Approach Marketing, a virtual public-relations and marketing agency, says setting a schedule for yourself can help pace the day. "It's easy to see 5:30 p.m. come and go or work right through lunch when you're in the comfort of your own home," she says. "Try to set a regular schedule, including what time you will start and end your day, and build in a regular lunch break where you my morning by reading my emails while I eat breakfast, followed by a 15-minute session where I outline my tasks for the day," says Kristopher Johnson, a digital marketing strategist for The Gantry Restaurant & Bar in Sydney. "Doing this daily has created a habit that allows for a seamless transition into my workday." One routine that Gene Caballero, co-founder of the online lawn-care booking service GreenPal, has established is getting dressed every moming as though he's going into an office. "By doing this, I stay in a routine, and it allows me to get in the mind-set that my workday is about to get started," he says.

3. Limit distractions. Social media can be a big distraction to remote workers. That's why Beth Adan, senior publicist and graphic designer at public-relations and socialmedia management agency Three Girls Media, shuts the door and logs out of her personal social-media accounts when working from home.

Maura Thomas, a speaker, trainer and author who founded RegainYourTime.com, recommends that remote workers turn off push notifications on social media. If you're using it as a break during the day, she a year earlier. By comparison, Ford's U.S. have to pare production at a few inventories stood at nearly 650,000 plants in January to get stocks back units, about 10,000 vehicles fewer than a year earlier, while Fiat Chrysler's from November 2015.

that are creeping up and could make to give, especially with GM's car lines, because stocks of many of its hot-selling trucks and SUVs are below par. Inventories of the Chevrolet Cruze compact reached a 121-days supply at the beginning of this month; Chevrolet Camaro, 177 days. The industry likes to work with a 60-day supply typically.

Seeming to recognize the implications, GM's incentive spending in November increased by an average of about $1,300 per vehicle over a year earlier, according to the J.D.:

Still, in its most recent sales release, GM cited positives such as "the industry's best average

GM's inventory as of December 1, "ahead of plan selling down our at 873,200 vehicles, was the highest 2016 model year inventory." The for any month since February company also sees itself in a "position 2008, according to Autodata. It of strength with the planned launch had ballooned by 28 percent since of key new products, like the all-August 1 to the highest level in nine new Chevrolet Equinox, into the heart of the market," said Kurt more than 182,000 vehicles over McNeil, GM's vice president of U.S. sales operations.

GM and the rest of the auto industry also might start benefiting from tailwinds that seem to be building behind the U.S. economy. But GM could be spared greater inventories were nearly 597,000 units, In early December, in GM's sales down by more than 62,000 vehicles press release, Mustafa Mohatarem, the company's chief economist, Both analysts and competitors said, "All economic indicators show warned that something would have significantly improved optimism about the U.S. economy including consumer and business sentiment, which continue to drive a very healthy U.S. auto industry. We believe the U.S. auto industry is well positioned for sales to continue at or near record levels into 2017."

> Mohatarem's comments came even before a new spate of positive economic indicators which seemed to point to growing financial optimism as the inauguration of Donald Trump as president nears.

These included an upbeat Gallup report on Americans' confidence in the economy, pushing its index into positive territory for the first time since March 2015. It reflected "a stark transaction prices" and its being change in Americans' confidence in views they expressed in most weeks over the past nine years," said the venerable research organization.

A Trump Bump indeed could help the U.S. auto industry keep sales growth affoat not only for 2016 but also for 2017, giving it a chance to extend the recovery into a ninth year — something that few foresaw as a possibility as recently as a few months ago.

Another developing factor could specifically help reduce GM's excess of sedans: higher demand specifically for high-mileage cars after three years in which $2-gallon-and-up gasoline pushed fuel economy down as a purchase consideration on most consumers' lists.

The reason this could develop rising gasoline prices.

the U.S. economy from the negative is that gasoline prices are on the rise again in some parts of the country in the wake of multiple deals by countries around the globe to cut oil production in the coming months, giving them the prospect of eliminating a worldwide glut and forcing oil prices higher again.

> While it's unusual for gasoline prices to rise during the low-demand winter months, some analysts believe the new output-cutting deals within OPEC and between non-OPEC countries, including Russia, could cause pump prices to approach $3 a gallon in parts of the country in early 2017.

In GM's view, there could be no better vehicle than one of its overstocked, high-mileage Cruze models to help customers cope with
