Runestad
seeks public

State Rep. Jim Runestad has scheduled two public meetings to gather input on proposed child custody reforms. Runestad, chair of the House Judiciary Committee, is working on legislation establishing shared custody with equal parenting time as the starting point for all child custody deliberations in Michigan.

Runestad

"I want to get as much input as possible from people involved with the family court system throughout our state, including parents, attorneys and other experts," said Runestad, R-White Lake. "This information will allow me to move forward and make meaningful reforms that improve child custody laws in Michigan."

Public meetings will be at 6-8 p.m. Monday, Aug. 21, at Studio D2D, 401 Hall St. SW, Grand Rapids; and 6-8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 22, at Antonio's Cucina Italiana, 2220 N. Canton Center Road, Canton.

CONTEST

Three candidates up for three spots in city election

Matt Jachman
hometownlife.com

This year's election in the city of Northville is shaping up to be a no-drama affair.

Mayor Ken Roth is unopposed in a bid for re-election and there are only two candidates for two spots on the Northville City Council.

Barring any write-in candidacies, the three hopefuls on the ballot are shoo-ins for the positions they seek. The filing deadline for candidates to get on the ballot was July 25; the city election is Tuesday, Nov. 7.

Roth

Roth, a former Northville Public Schools Board of Education member who was first elected mayor in 2015, called the lack of challengers "a vote of confidence." An attorney and former prosecutor, Roth is seeking a second two-year term.

Running for council are incumbent Councilman Sam Ekong, seeking a second four-year term, and newcomer Patrick Giesa. Three-term Councilman James Allen, the mayor pro tem, is not running again.

Roth said the chief issues on which he'd focus in a second term are long-term financial stability, especially as it relates to Northville's obligations to its retirees, and infrastructure improvement and redevelopment.

"I look forward to putting my efforts into the next two years to continue to make Northville a strong, vibrant community that we can all be proud of," Roth said last week.

Ekong mentioned infrastructure improvement and Giesa noted legacy costs —

More trespassing arrests at ex-hospital

hometownlife.com

Trespassers continued to be arrested in droves at the Northville Psychiatric Hospital in recent days, including July 23, when police found a group of 10 people visiting the property without permission.

That incident occurred about 1:20 a.m.; officers found a group of eight men and two women, ages 19-25, at the site on Seven Mile, according to a Northville Township Police Department report. The suspects' hometowns included Wixom, Dearborn, Redford Township, Wolverine Lake and the city of Wayne, the report said.

Nine of the suspects were issued tickets for trespassing, which carries a fine of up to $500, and released. The 20th, a 25-year-old man, was arrested on multiple misdemeanor warrants, police said.

Other recent trespassing incidents include:

» The arrests of four males, three from Canton Township and one from Plymouth Township, shortly before 1 a.m. July 17. They were ages 17-21.

» The arrests of a 25-year-old Harrison Township woman and a 27-year-old Rochester man around 2 a.m. July 18.

» The arrests of three males, ages 17, 20 and 21, and a 19-year-old female, shortly before midnight July 20. Three of the suspects were from the Jackson area and the fourth was from Litchfield, Mich., southwest of Jackson.

The hospital, formerly a state-run psychiatric treatment center, is owned by Northville Township and township are exploring options for its future, including finding the funding necessary to raze it and address any potential hazards.

Officials worry about trespassing because of the possibility that people could be injured on the property due to the dilapidated condition of structures and the uncontained asbestos that has been found there.

NOVI POLICE BRIEFS

Windows, screens, door damaged as house is egged at least twice

Windows, window screens and the front door of a house on Nepavine Drive in Novi were damaged when the house was egged on at least two occasions last month.

The first incident was reported July 23, according to a Novi Police Department report. The complainant told police the house had been egged while she was on vacation with her family. A responding officer noted that three windows in the front and four in the back, plus a sliding glass door, had been struck by eggs.

On July 26, the complainant reported the house had been egged two nights earlier and that two window screens were ripped during that incident.

Paint ball vandalism

Someone shot paint balls at a 2004 Volkswagen the night of July 20 while the car was parked outside a home on Summer Lane.

Police said the driver's side of the VW had been hit by paint balls. The vandalism occurred between 9 p.m. July 20 and about 2 a.m. July 21, a police report said.

Wheels stolen

The wheels and tires were stolen July 21 from a Ford Fusion while the car was parked outside an apartment on Wellington Drive, at a complex in the area of Pontiac Trail east of Beck.

The 2017 Fusion had last been seen intact around 5 p.m., a police report said, and a witness noticed around 10:30 p.m. the same day that the wheels and tires were gone.

The Fusion had been left sitting on landscape blocks, the lugnuts left near where the car had been parked, police said.

NORTHVILLE POLICE BRIEFS

Clerk texts resignation from gas station, then arrested on larceny charge

A Dearborn Heights man who walked off his gas station job in the middle of the night — texting his boss to tell her he had quit — was arrested later that day for the theft of a $150 gift card.

The incident occurred July 18 at the Mobil station on Six Mile and Haggerty, a Northville Township Police Department report said. An officer responded to a report, just after 4 a.m., that the station was unattended and met a would-be customer there who said he had been waiting for 10 minutes, police said. A sign on the counter said the clerk was in the restroom, but it was unoccupied.

The officer found a Mobil work shirt, a wallet and a driver's license and, after locating a number through the police computer system, phoned the license holder. The man told the officer he'd suffered an anxiety attack while at the station and had to leave, but that he had improved and needed no medical attention, police said.

Meanwhile, a gas station supervisor was contacted. Police said she discovered the man had messaged her at 2:33 a.m., saying: "Just quit. Walked out. Got a way better job. PCE."

The supervisor reviewed the station's security video from around that time, which police said showed the clerk activating and pocketing a gift card for $150. An investigating officer later viewed the video, police said.

The suspect, questioned later in the day at the police station, claimed he had been mistreated as a clerk and had found another job, the police report said. He expressed concern that he had left the gas station unsecured, then admitted to taking the gift card and handed it over, the report said.

He was arrested on a larceny charge.

The suspect was later released on a $300 bond with an Aug. 9 date in 35th District Court.

Solicitor ticketed

A 22-year-old man from the state of Washington was cited for soliciting without a township permit the evening of July 19 after a complaint that he was going door to door in the area of Six Mile and Northville Trail.

Police contacted the man, who represented a pest-control company, a police report said. He said he had a permit to solicit in Novi but not Northville Township, but had stopped in the area in order to cover as much ground as possible.

Police issued a ticketed. The man is to appear in district court Wednesday, Aug. 9.

Owl infected with West Nile virus

Jennifer Eberbach
Livingston Daily

A great horned owl in Livingston County tested positive for West Nile virus, according to county health officials.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources discovered the infected bird last month. "One of our residents found it dead in the back yard and reported it to the DNR laboratory," Livingston County Environmental Health Director Matt Bolang said.

Laboratory technicians at the Michigan DNR Wildlife Disease Laboratory found West Nile virus in the owl while performing tests to determine what caused its death, which is unknown.

The laboratory did not report where in the county the owl was found.

"We've had West Nile virus in Livingston County for a number of years," Bolang said. "We call it endemic, which means it's here in the environment and some percentage of mosquitoes here carry it."

Twenty-four birds in the state have tested positive for West Nile Virus this year, according to a news release from county health officials.

No one in the county has been diagnosed with the virus this year, but there have been a few cases in past years, Bolang said.

"It has been detected in people's systems (in past years), but no one has died," he said.

While no other birds in the county have tested positive for West Nile virus this year, people do not often report dead or sick birds to the state, Bolang said.

To report sick or dead birds, which could be a sign of West Nile virus or other diseases, contact the Michigan DNR Wildlife Disease Lab at 517-336-5030 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, or 800-292-7800 after hours.

County officials say the best way for people to avoid contracting the virus, which can be spread to humans, is to protect themselves against mosquito bites.

One year later, fatal shooting of local nurse remains unsolved

Elisha Anderson
Detroit Free Press

Despite hundreds of tips, multiple rewards and repeated pleas for information, the death of a 31-year-old nurse shot while on a jog in northern Oakland County remains unsolved a year later.

Alexandra Brueger, an avid runner, was gunned down on a rural rode in Rose Township one year ago Sunday.

“We have no closure,” her mother, Nikki Brueger, said last week. “We’ve been consumed for a year now on why this happened and who did this.”

Alexandra, who went by nicknames Ally and Alex, ran 10 miles a day, her family said. She was shot in the back with a shotgun in the area of the 11200 block of Fish Lake Road around 2 p.m. July 30, 2016.

“Detectives are looking for any information, no matter how small, from anyone who may have seen Ally jogging that day or anything suspicious in that area during that time period,” Michigan State Police said in a news release. Police, who said

Alexandra Brueger, also known as Ally or Alex, was shot to death July 30, 2016, as she took her daily 10-mile run in the vicinity of 11240 Fish Lake Road, between Rattalee Lake and Rose Center, in Oakland County.

Brueger was known to run the same route almost daily, have received more than 200 tips so far — just not the one that will solve the case.

“We are hoping that someone will come forward with the final piece of the puzzle,” Michigan State Police spokesman 1st Lt. Michael Shaw said in an e-mail Friday.

He said the case hasn’t become cold and detectives work every lead they get.

Brueger’s mom called the person responsible for killing her only child a “coward.” Her daughter, who was 4 feet, 9 inches, and weighed 98 pounds, was shot four times in the back on a Saturday afternoon less than two miles from her home, Nikki Brueger said.

Alexandra Brueger worked at Providence Park Hospital in Novi and had a passion for writing.

“She was kind, thoughtful, considerate and she had a dry, witty sense of humor,” her mom said, calling the family’s loss “inconceivable.”

Multiple rewards are being offered in the case, including up to $8,500 for information that leads to an arrest from Crime Stoppers of Michigan and up to $5,000 from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

“This person is still out there,” Nikki Brueger said. “And people in our community are afraid, still ... If this can happen to our daughter, a mile and a half from our home on a Saturday afternoon, then it can happen to anyone.”

College official encourages difficult conversations as a challenge to perceptions

Too tall. Too dark. Too Latina. Growing up in New York City and then Rochester, there were many reasons why Stephanie Paredes, 35, didn't feel like she belonged. Now, she highlights excluded voices as manager of multicultural programs at the Rochester Institute of Technology, and co-founder of the Rochester Latino Theatre Company.

"When we build an inclusive environment for everyone to come together and talk to each other, we move from tolerance to acceptance," said Paredes, whose family roots are in the Dominican Republic.

At RIT, she fosters sometimes uncomfortable conversations between races, sexual orientations and backgrounds.

Those conversations can get messy, but it's important to have them, she said.

"I'm not afraid to talk about the harder conversations on our campus," she said, "because that's what a campus is for."

Conversations that challenge world-views and perceptions help students understand their world and the people in it, she said, and as those conversations occur, people will be more comfortable taking action for social justice.

"One of the things we love to do in Rochester is talk a lot about the issues," she said. "What I think we need a little bit more work on is the action side of things."

Paredes took action when she saw a need in the Latino community for better theater opportunities. She grew up participating in theater productions, but found herself often cast in stereotypical Latina roles. So she started a company of her own.

"We wanted everyone to understand the Latino story, told by Latinos," she said. Their first show sold out — "we realized there's a need for this," she said.

She stages performances that everyone can relate to, not just Latinos or Spanish speakers. Part of the benefit of inclusion is finding similarities, she said.

"Not losing the humanity amidst all of the messiness is so important," she said. "At the end of the day, we're people, and even if we don't agree on things, we're still people."

Q&A WITH STEPHANIE PAREDES

What does it mean to you to be an American?

It means that I recognize and respect the diverse people that have built this country and have made very important contributions to the social, cultural, political and historical arenas of American history. Being an American is freedom of expression without judgment.

What moment touched and motivated you to launch this effort?

For the Rochester Latino Theater Company, I was inspired to create a space where artists of color, especially Latino artists, felt supported, their voices heard, their presence felt and their talents exposed.

My work at RIT is driven by doing my part in creating global leaders. Students inspire me so much. They're curious and honest. I've always loved celebrating culture, learning about people and their experiences.

What gives you hope or what concerns you?

I am concerned that we have lost our humanity toward each other. It's so easy to hate and keep our distance from people and places that we aren't familiar with. It's easy to stay misinformed, boxed in and it may be comfortable to come to live in a bubble. However, we live in a world that at some point in your life you will not always be surrounded by people who look like you, talk like you, or even come from where you come from. My hope is that we will each have a turning point in all our lives where we continue to grow, restore and enhance our humanity towards each other. Difference shouldn't be a barrier.

What do you hope to accomplish through your efforts?

Love. Understanding. Acceptance. Change. Celebration. Community. Unity. Inclusion. I hope that through my work I can help others see the beauty of diversity and the importance of inclusion. It's not enough to invite diversity to your table if those voices aren't being valued, respected, and heard.

The Amazon warehouse work continues.

Amazon hiring warehouse associates

David Veselenak
hometownlife.com

Looking to join one of the newest companies coming to Livonia? Now could be your chance.

Amazon has launched a website for those interested in applying for jobs at the new fulfillment center, still under construction at 39000 Amrhein. The website, amazon.com/livoniajobs, had one position type listed July 24: lead fulfillment associate.

The company says those hired into the position could be responsible for various tasks at the center, including leading and training other associates; support management of department duties; planning inbound shipping arrivals; and ship packages using multiple companies, among other roles.

Pay begins at $14.70 an hour, with health care, 401(k) with company match, paid time off, overtime availability and an employee discount, among other benefits being offered.

“We insist on the highest standards. We work with the latest technology and innovative solutions. We train and develop the most talented, motivated teams around,” the company says in the job posting. “We analyze, improve and support initiatives that help drive continuous improvement. Join Amazon and become part of the we that gets stuff done in a fast-moving, fun environment.”

The jobs are the most recent to post at the facility. Amazon listed several other positions earlier this summer.

The fulfillment center, the first of its kind in Michigan for the Seattle-based e-commerce giant, is set to open later this fall and is expected to employ more than 1,000 regular employees. The city of Livonia just recently approved an industrial facilities exemption certificate, a tax credit, on the property for the next 12 years.

There has also been talk the company would work with Schoolcraft College to hire employees as well, though a college official recently said those talks were still in early stages.

Dan West, president of the Livonia Chamber of Commerce, said a boost to the city’s economy will see a jolt as a result of such hiring, including during the seasonal months Amazon will hire even more workers.

“Not only with Amazon looking to hire many full-time workers now, they will be looking to hire a number of seasonal workers for October through December,” West said. “All these workers who come to our city to work will be great for new spin-off economic opportunities with dining and shopping in and around Livonia.”

Amazon showcases new warehouse in Livonia

hometownlife.com

Amazon is typically pretty quiet when it comes to new construction and additional buildings around the country. It lifted that veil July 26 at its new fulfillment center in Livonia.

The Seattle-based company hosted a media walk-through of the new, 1 million-square-foot center being constructed at 39000 Amrhein in Livonia, the first time company officials have done so at one of its new buildings. The center will service Michigan, the Midwest and the rest of the country as a place where Amazon stores and ships the products it sells, from Kindles to kayaks.

“A lot of what goes into what we determine where we place our sites is the customer demand,” said Shevaun Brown, a public relations manager for Amazon in Seattle. “We’re seeing a lot of demand for Amazon shipments coming from this general region.”

The center will flow in a circular motion, Brown said, with deliveries entering through one side of the building, being sorted onto shelves and eventually prepared for shipping through the other side of the building.

The center is about the same size as other fulfillment centers across the country, said Fred Holwey, a Rochester Hills resident and a senior operations manager for the Livonia fulfillment center.

The center, which was unveiled in December, is the e-commerce giant’s first fulfillment center in Michigan. It operates about 70 such centers across the United States. The only other presence Amazon has in Michigan is a sorting center in Brownstown Township, which opened in 2015.

Workforce a big factor

Brown said the other big reason the company wanted to locate in Livonia is the workforce. She said the company noticed Livonia and western Wayne County was a great spot to hire dedicated individuals.

“There’s a lot of talent here locally and, when we create jobs, we want to make sure we’re doing it in a place where we’re seeing the enthusiastic, hard-working people that we want as Amazon associates,” she said. “And we’re seeing that here in Livonia and that’s a key reason why we want to come here.”

The center is expected to hire 1,000 permanent workers at the center and another 500 seasonal workers are expected at peak times throughout the year. In addition, the company has about 500 local construction workers building the center.

Joe Grasso likes cars enough that he was willing to take a train from his home near Philadelphia to Toledo, where he rented a car and drove to Plymouth for the Concours D'Elegance auto show.

"I was overwhelmed," said Grasso, 70, of Uwchland, Pa. "I come specifically to see the old cars, the Duesenbergs and things like that. I'm surprised at the number of museum-quality restored automobiles."

Grasso was one of thousands of people who enjoyed near perfect weather last weekend to visit the show at the Inn at St. John's on Five Mile Road in Plymouth. Crowd numbers were still being tallied, but executive director Diane Flis-Schneider said it was the largest crowd the show had seen since moving to Plymouth six years ago after years at Meadow Brook in Rochester Hills.

"We certainly set a record," she said. "We are the second oldest Concours and third largest."

This show was the 39th in metro Detroit. The show in Pebble Beach, Calif., is the oldest and largest. The Concours in Amelia Island, Fla., near Jacksonville, also is bigger.

The show features about 300 cars, which are selected based on their rareness and beauty, and about 400 volunteers to make it all work. The crowds are too large for the parking lot at St. John's, so visitors parked at Plymouth High School and rode shuttles to the event.

Flis-Schneider said the show draws a variety of car buffs, from young kids to old-timers who remember owning or driving some of the models now on display.

Milton Antonick, 81, of Royal Oak, got his start in the automotive industry designing Studebakers in 1960 before moving to Chrysler, where he was able to work on the Plymouth Barracuda and Roadrunner models, among others.

"For me, it's mostly about the memories you get," he said, noting he can point to different cars that friends or others he knew worked on.

Terry Drosz, 75, of Lake Angelus, volunteered at the event, but also brought his 1955 Chevrolet Bel Aire convertible.

He owned a hardtop version of the car when he was 19 and bought a beat-up one in 2004 to restore. He spent six years refurbishing it so that now it's a gypsy red and shoreline beige.

He's upgraded the car from its original state, including adding air conditioning, power brakes and radial tires, which make it safer and more enjoyable to drive, he said.

"My goal in restoring the car was that from 10 feet it looks original," Drosz said.

Fireworks show prompts woman's invention

Attending the Detroit Symphony Orchestra "Salute to America" concert and fireworks show at Greenfield Village over the Fourth of July holiday in Dearborn turned into a business for Stephanie Saia, 58, of Plymouth.

Saia and her family, like so many, look forward to the annual event that pays tribute to America and celebrates the armed forces. There is a considerable walk from the parking lot to the show, about a half-mile, for some.

Now Saia attends with little effort — thanks to her idea.

"I saw thousands and thousands of people carrying their chairs while pulling their cooler and wagon on wheels and it made me think why there wasn't something to make it easier to take portable chairs to outdoor events," Saia said.

After doing some research, she found there wasn't such a product — so she decided to create one herself. Once she came up with the idea, it then took a full two years to make her idea become a reality.

After countless hours spent on research, 10 prototypes, two trademarks, a patent and launching manufacturing, she affectionately calls her product invention, the "Chair-iot." Simply put, the Chair-iot is a weather-resistant creation of a wheeled carrier for portable bag sport chairs. And as her husband Steve said, "Why carry it, when you can Chair-iot?"

Chair-iot has become popular not only for families attending outdoor concerts but on baseball and soccer fields and at the beach. There is ample room for sporting equipment, jackets, umbrellas, even toys. Pockets were designed to carry beverages and snacks. The cost is $59.95. For $15 more you can get your bag embroidered with a company logo or family name.

"My goal is to have the Chair-iot sold in retail stores so people can easily purchase one as they would a portable chair," Saia said. "I'd love for it to become a household name, since it really makes life so much easier."

It is also a source of pride that this St. Clair Shores native has developed a fundraising program for the Chair-iot, in which a team, group or club will receive $10 in return for each Chair-iot sold.

"I want to give back and help organizations and schools," Saia said.

Those that have participated thus far are grateful that they can make more money for their cause than selling pizza kits, for example. As an additional benefit, any purchase by that organization benefits the group on an ongoing basis.

Colbeck set to join race for governor

Paul Egan
Detroit Free Press

State Sen. Patrick Colbeck, who officially kicked off his bid to become Michigan's 49th governor July 15, was an early supporter of U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas in the 2016 Republican presidential sweepstakes.

But Colbeck, R-Canton, became an enthusiastic backer of President Donald Trump after Trump won the GOP nomination and that enthusiasm hasn't waned.

"He's doing exactly what he said he would do and for that he should be applauded," Colbeck, who will be term-limited at the end of next year after eight years in the Senate, told the Detroit

Free Press in an interview.

Any difficulties with the Trump presidency relate to push-back from "entrenched special interests in D.C." as Trump goes about "draining the swamp," Colbeck said. "I support him 100 percent."

Colbeck, 51, an aerospace engineer who graduated from Detroit Catholic Central High School before earning bachelor's and master's degrees from U-M, is known as one of Michigan's most conservative state lawmakers.

He opposed Medicaid

expansion under the Affordable Care Act, the gas tax and registration fee increases that were central to the road funding deal, the state's funding of the grand bargain to ease the city of Detroit out of bankruptcy and some of the emergency funding for Flint in the wake of its drinking water crisis.

Colbeck opposes the Common Core education standards and was highly critical of Republican Gov. Rick Snyder when Snyder recently vetoed his legislation to place the words "Choose Life" as an option on state license plates.

Snyder is also term-limited.

Colbeck, who is to make his announcement at an event at the Yankee Air Museum near Belleville, has done more than cast no votes. On road funding, for example, he proposed a plan he said would free up more than $1 billion without raising taxes and pushed for use of alternative road building materials he said would last longer.

Supporters Lawrence and Lucille Fritz of Livonia describe themselves as "middle-of-the-road" conservatives. They see an integrity in Colbeck they say is rare among Lansing politicians.

"He is forthcoming and honest," and will say what he thinks regardless of the consequences, said Lawrence Fritz, a retired automotive engineer.

"He doesn't necessarily agree with me on everything," but "you get what you see with him."

Fritz's wife Lucille added that Colbeck "listens to all sides before he makes up his mind."

Lansing public relations consultant Matt Resch said Colbeck takes many positions that are close to the hearts of the Republican base, and that's a real strength in a Republican primary.

But Colbeck, like many other gubernatorial candidates, suffers from a lack of name recognition, Resch said. He's likely too conservative to win a general election in Michigan, particularly since he will also lack significant financial resources.

Colbeck joins a list of declared Republican candidates who include obstetrician Dr. Jim Hines of Saginaw; insurance agent Joseph DeRose of Williamston; Grand Rapids businessman Evan Space, and private investigator Mark McFarlin of Pinconning.

Two big names expected to join the race have yet to announce — Attorney General Bill Schuette and Lt. Gov. Brian Calley.

Colbeck said recent polling shows most Republican voters are undecided for governor.

Unlike him, Schuette and Calley are known political commodities, Colbeck said.

Voters "have seen what is on the shelf and they're not buying," he said.

Local firms travel to China to expand export opportunities

Business leaders from 10 Michigan companies traveled to China last week, meeting with prospective partners, distributors and buyers to increase export opportunities from Michigan to China. The trade mission was led by the Michigan Economic Development Corp. International Trade Office.

"China continues to be an increasingly important and viable market for a wide range of products and services," said

Jennifer Nelson, chief business development officer and executive vice president of MEDC.

"This trade mission will open doors for these companies by helping them identify and enter into new relationships there. These Michigan companies, with products ranging from pharmaceuticals to automotive components, will have a unique opportunity to reach new customers in the fastest-growing economy in the world."

Delegates from the export mission will be attending one-on-one company meetings in Beijing, Guangzhou, Shenzhen, Chengdu and Shanghai. The match-making events include customized appointments with prospective partners, distributors and buyers in each region. The participants will also receive in-country briefings about doing business in China.

Participating companies from the area were:

- » Chrysan Industries (Plymouth) – A global manufacturer of automotive lubricants and specialty chemicals.
- » Midwest Pharmaceuticals Inc. (Farmington Hills) – Pharmaceutical distributor specializing in sourcing pharmaceuticals in short supply for appropriately licensed clients. Midwest Pharmaceuticals offers a wide range of services, which includes: generic and brand pharmaceuticals, exportation of pharmaceuticals, API procurement and sales, over-the-counter products, contract manufacturing, and contract research organizations liaison service.

- » OPS Solutions (Wixom) – Manufacturer of Light Guide Systems (LGS), an augmented reality tool designed to make factory floors smarter, safer and better. Transforming manual assembly and manufacturing processes for companies around the globe.

MEDC's International Trade Program works to extend export opportunities to more Michigan companies and ensure they are connected with the resources to explore new markets, access existing export resources and increase global competitiveness.

In fiscal year 2016, the program facilitated $523.9 million in sales to 121 countries.

County conducts emergency preparedness survey

Oakland County residents and businesses can help the county update its emergency preparedness plan by participating in a voluntary online questionnaire, County Executive L. Brooks Patterson announced.

Feedback from the confidential 10-minute survey will enable Oakland County's Homeland Security Division to better serve residents and businesses before, during, and after an emergency or disaster.

"Oakland County has a continuous commitment to planning, training and exercising response capabilities for all types of disasters," Patterson said. "This voluntary and confidential questionnaire will assist our emergency preparedness staff in identifying which hazards are of most concern to our residents and businesses as well as which services the community may need during an emergency."

Some sample questions include:

- » If a disaster (i.e. snowstorm) impacted Oakland County, knocking out electricity and running water, would your household be able to manage on its own for at least three (3) days?
- » Do you believe that your household and/or place of business might ever be threatened by the following hazards? Please rate what hazards present the greatest risk.

- » What might prevent you from leaving your place of residence if there was an evacuation order? Please select ALL that apply.
- » In an evacuation, would you or anyone in your household require special assistance?

"The success of our response to a disaster will depend on how well we have prepared in advance," said Thomas Hardesty, manager of Oakland County Homeland Security Division.

"The more survey responses we receive from residents and businesses, the better we will be able to prepare for an emergency."

To fill out the questionnaire, go to <http://oakland.preparedness.sgizmo.com/s3/>. The survey will remain open until Sept. 1. For a hard copy version of the survey, contact the Oakland County Homeland Security Division at oakhds@oakgov.com or call 248-858-5300.

Businesses interested in having their employees confidentially participate in the survey in order to utilize the data to update their business emergency preparedness plans may contact Homeland Security Division to make those arrangements.

Oakland County adheres to federal requirements to update its emergency preparedness plans every five years in an effort to keep residents, businesses, and organizations well prepared and vigilant.

Oakland County last conducted an emergency preparedness survey in 2012. The purpose of emergency preparedness planning is to identify policies and actions that can be implemented over the long term to reduce risk and future losses.

U.S. Rep. Dave Trott introduced a bill calling for increased penalties.

Trott: Increase the penalty for genital mutilation

Todd Spangler
Detroit Free Press

With an investigation into the genital mutilation of girls in Michigan continuing, a metro Detroit congressman is calling for the federal penalty for committing such a crime to be increased from five years in prison to 15.

U.S. Rep. Dave Trott, R-Birmingham, introduced the legislation July 20 along with U.S. Rep. Carolyn Maloney, D-N.Y., calling for an increase in the prison time for female genital mutilation of anyone under the age of 18 and encouraging states to enact laws requiring health care professionals, teachers and others to report suspected cases of mutilation.

A version is expected to eventually be introduced in the U.S. Senate as well.

The measure is being introduced as an investigation which began with a Northville doctor being charged with genital mutilation in federal court in April has stretched to other states. As the Free Press reported last week, federal agents also have identified potential defendants in California, Illinois and Minnesota, according to court documents.

Dr. Jumana Nagarwala, 44, has been charged with cutting at least six girls, including four from Michigan. Five other people also have been charged in the case to date. Nagarwala has denied committing any crime, however, saying she removed membranes from the girls' genitals as part of a custom linked to a Muslim sect from India to which she belongs, but that no cutting took place.

A federal judge denied setting bond for her last week.

"The Centers for Disease Control estimates that more than 500,000 females in the U.S. have undergone or are at risk for genital mutilation," said Trott, adding that federal prosecutors believe that three physicians who have been charged in Michigan may be linked to as many as 100 mutilations.

"These doctors, and all those who commit these horrendous crimes against innocent children, must be held accountable for their unconscionable actions," Trott said. "We must protect our girls and this legislation increasing the federal penalty is critical to eradicating this barbaric practice."

Trott noted that the five-year penalty in the U.S. is weaker than those in some other developed nations, including the United Kingdom and France, where it is 14 years and 20 years, respectively.

Zeal Credit Union partners with HHS to kick off ninth annual Backpack Drive

Zeal Credit Union is partnering with Pathways to Potential, a program of the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services, to collect new backpacks and new school supplies for needy students in Michigan.

“This is our ninth year to hold a backpack drive that helps students be better prepared for the start of school,” said Tiffany Sweet, youth and community development coordinator for Zeal Credit Union. “We want to help children by giving them the tools they need to be successful in school and to feel good about themselves.”

In addition to new backpacks, everyone is welcome to donate new folders, notebooks, pens, scissors, pencils and other school supplies.

All of Zeal Credit Union’s 12 branch offices in metro Detroit will have collection boxes available through Friday, Aug. 18. For more details and location information, go to www.ZealCreditUnion.org/backpack.

All of the supplies will be distributed through Pathways to Potential, which removes barriers to success for students and families and delivers services where people need them by stationing MDHHS caseworkers called success coaches in schools.

Monetary donations are also welcome and can be made at Zeal Credit Union branch locations.

“Community partners like Zeal Credit Union are invaluable to Pathways to Potential as we work to keep children in school,” MDHHS Director Nick Lyon said. “It is difficult for students to succeed if they don’t have proper school supplies and our success coaches have seen that children are more likely to miss school if they don’t have the proper supplies.”

Sweet said, “The backpack drive is another of many ways in which Zeal demonstrates the credit union’s values of character, empathy and passion for members and the community-at-large.”

For more information about Pathways to Potential, go to www.michigan.gov/pathwaystopotential.

Zeal Credit Union is a full-service, non-profit financial institution with more than 61,000 members, assets exceeding $555 million and 12 full-service branch offices in metro Detroit. Members also have access to more than 5,000 shared branches and nearly 30,000 ATMs nationwide. # Woman, 80, adopted as a child, meets younger sister for first time

Two sisters unaware of the other's existence for most of their lives met for the first time July 20.

For Brighton resident Donna Collins, the moment was more than seven decades in the making. For the Rev. Jane Logston, of Leelanau County, it was closure to a mother's long held secret.

"I've waited all my life for this," Donna, 80, said as the two sat outside her apartment.

"It was a shock-a-roo," Jane said about learning of Donna, who is the oldest of seven children born to their mother.

Family secrets

Jane said two of her own sisters told her that their mother, Elizabeth Doerr, then-16, and Elizabeth's sister traveled to Detroit, where Doerr gave birth to a daughter she named Dorothy Jean Doerr. The baby's father was not in the picture.

As fate would have it, Elizabeth Doerr and Donna's eventual adoptive parents, Robert and Martha Bastien, had the same doctor, who apparently told the Bastiens the teen wanted to place her child for adoption. The Bastiens shared that they would like to adopt the infant, whom they renamed Donna Marie Bastien, and a private adoption resulted.

At age 8, Donna, who grew up an only child, enjoyed snuggling with her adoptive father as he told her stories, including one about a baby who had been adopted.

"That baby was you," her father said.

Donna was stunned.

"The more I thought about it, I became afraid that if I did something wrong, they'd send me back," the Brighton woman said. "My mother didn't want to discuss it. Any information I received was from my father and he didn't tell me everything until I was engaged."

"Everything," Donna said, turned out to be very little. Her father knew her biological mother's age when Donna was born, the location of her birth and a birth name. She believes he knew nothing more.

Donna dreamed about a reunion with her biological mother and she wanted to know more about the lady, but she had little to go on. Over the years, she would look up Doerr family names in the phone book and she'd write letters to everyone listed, but she never received a response.

"I wanted to meet her because I thought she was a brave woman to give up a baby and I wanted her to know what a good family I went to," she said.

Donna, who worked as a registered nurse at various hospitals, eventually ended her pursuit as she married Bill Collins and they raised their family. When they retired, the couple moved to Las Vegas where they lived for 21 years until returning to Michigan in 2013 to be near their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

A sister's search

Jane Logston, an ordained minister for the Bear Lake and Arcadia United Methodist churches, learned from three sisters that their mother, who believed she was on her death bed, confessed about 10 years ago that she had a baby girl at age 16 and that she had named the baby Dorothy.

It was a secret her mother had never told Jane's father and her siblings shared the secret with Jane about four years after their mother's death.

Jane was told the infant was placed in a Catholic orphanage that eventually burned so there were no records of the adoption.

"I had a midlife crisis, I think," she said. "I thought ... my mother had so many children, so I thought, 'What else was there?' I questioned my own self, you know what I mean?"

Jane wanted to find the older sister she knew nothing about, but her siblings and other family discouraged her. One family member said she'd tried to look, but found nothing and they speculated that the baby girl, who would by then be in her 70s, was likely dead.

At Christmas in 2016, Jane's husband, the Rev. Russell Logston, decided to give her an Ancestry DNA test as a gift.

"I thought it would be an interesting background to see what it tells us," Russell said.

Jane added: "I was hoping I'd see more relatives, but that wasn't the primary goal."

Meanwhile, Donna said a friend of hers, who is "heavy into Ancestry," was intrigued by Donna's story and asked her to take a DNA test, just to see if a connection could be found. The results showed she was "from middle Europe" and, sometime later, Donna said, she received a letter telling her "my mother was dead and she never remarried and I had no siblings."

"I don't know where they got this information and I think, 'That's the end of that,'" Donna said.

Donna also has since learned her biological father's name and that he died in 2006. She said his obituary shows he may have been a "great man," who owned 3,000 acres of land in Michigan and

"other holdings" and that he was heavily involved in his community through nonprofit organizations. She said he also is a World War II veteran.

Jane's Ancestry DNA results, however, were very different. She received a list of names that were possible DNA matches, but she recognized none of the names and she did not see the name "Dorothy."

However, Donna's friend who encouraged her to take the DNA test saw a match and she reached out to Jane, who was sitting at the hospital for a medical procedure when her cellphone received an email alert.

The email mentioned the name Dorothy Jean Doerr and read: "I believe you might be (Donna's) half-sister."

"My blood pressure shot up," Jane said, noting it alarmed the nurse.

It took a day or two, but Jane found her words and she responded to Donna's friend, who asked if Jane would like to "make contact" with her sister.

"I suppose I could have said, 'No,' but that would have been awful," Jane laughed as she grasped Donna's hand. "I said, 'Yes.'"

Making contact

Donna was stunned as she read the opening line of Jane's email.

"Hello," it read. "I'm your half-sister."

That was three weeks ago and the two sisters had been communicating via email when Jane asked if she could visit. Donna said yes.

"I was a little apprehensive," Donna admitted. "She's going to meet a little old lady."

Jane, who dressed in blue because it is Donna's favorite color, and Russell stepped off the elevator at Independence Village, where Donna and Bill live, and walked toward Donna who sat with some members of her family surrounding her.

It took a moment before Donna realized the sister she didn't know existed was within arm's reach.

The two hugged and Jane gave Donna a picture frame filled with photographs of her maternal family, including her mother from 1955 and at age 90 as well as a maternal grandmother. The sisters' mother died in 2012 at age 92.

Donna said she has learned some details about her biological mother that do not cast the woman in the best light, but she is grateful to learn more about the woman who made a tough choice to place a child for adoption. She said she is thankful that she had a good life with her adoptive parents, who will always be simply her parents.

Both Donna and Jane hope to build a sisterly bond, and Jane has already invited Donna and her new-found brother-in-law to visit their home.

Her husband, Russell, agreed, saying: "My Christmas present ended up being a sister."

"I'm not gift-wrapped, though," Donna said with a laugh.

Michigan's Home Builders Association gets together for a networking barbecue July 26 in West Bloomfield.

SUNNY ATMOSPHERE SURROUNDS BUILDERS GROUP

Terry Jacoby
Correspondent

The Home Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan hosted its annual barbecue for members and guests July 26 and everyone appeared to be in a great mood — and it wasn't just because they were gathered on a beach eating good food and enjoying each other's company.

There were plenty of hugs, handshakes, smiles and laughter. There also were plenty of folks politely stepping aside with their cellphones in hand, conducting a little business on the side — it was a Wednesday, after all.

The sunny setting and even sunnier atmosphere is a reflection of an improved economy, stronger new home construction permits, increased business and an association set on helping its members reach their goals this year and beyond. Michael Stoskopf, CEO of the Home Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, was pleased to not only see his members enjoying themselves, but networking with each other and forming a special bond that associations have the power to create.

He also was glad to see a bigger turnout — both at the barbecue and in the number of HBA memberships.

"The economy is a lot better than it was nine years ago and that just makes everything we do a lot better," Stoskopf said, taking a break from greeting members and talking about the association. "Our numbers are up in terms of membership and we have a lot more participation at our events such as this."

The HBA's membership has grown "significantly" over the last 12 months, from about 700 at this time last year to almost 1,050 by the time the chicken was done that day.

"Some of that is a result of the economy and some of it is because of the changes we've been able to make with our dues structure and things of that nature," Stoskopf said. "Getting more people involved in the industry, talking to each other, interacting with each other, doing business with each other, is a positive from a trade association standpoint."

Stoskopf, a native of White Cloud, Mich., and a graduate of Michigan State University, said there are "numerous" benefits to being a member.

"The top three benefits our members tell us are most important to them are business-to-business networking, current industry information and education and professional development," Stoskopf said. "As a trade association, one of the biggest things we provide is ongoing education."

New home construction permits peaked between July 2004 and January 2005 with almost 2,000 permits being issued in Oakland, Wayne, Macomb and St. Clair counties. But the peak quickly "fell off a cliff," reaching rock bottom in January 2006. The fall came quickly and hard.

In 2008, shortly after Stoskopf was hired, the HBA board wanted answers to two very important questions: How could they have seen this downward spiral coming and, more importantly, when will it be over?

"At that point, we were still falling off a cliff," said Stoskopf, who quickly went to work searching for concrete answers and a way to help better predict or at least prepare for such situations in the future. "I put together a model that looked at several different economic factors and tried to put something together I could use to help predict accurately out into the future."

The model, which includes numbers on North American vehicle production, unemployment figures, single-family home prices, crude oil price per barrel and other factors, has proven to predict with approximately 98-percent accuracy six months into the future. So during Wednesday's barbecue, Stoskopf could tell his members how many new home construction permits will be issued in December.

"We presented this in July 2009 and the model predicted the bottom would be in October 2009," Stoskopf said. "Then you have to wait for October. And when we got there, the numbers started to slowly go back up."

And while the numbers are still a few cliffs away from 2005, the numbers of new home construction permits issued have been on a steady increase.

"To have that knowledge six months in advance is an important tool to have," Stoskopf said. "Not that you run your business on that exclusively, but it's good to know what's coming around the bend."

William Phillips, the HBA's president and executive vice president for the Windham Development Group, has been on the executive committee for the association for eight years. Phillips has seen many changes — mostly bigger and better — in the industry during his 34 years with Windham.

"People are willing to spend more money on their homes, so where we used to see a home of 2,100 square feet, we are now seeing over 3,000 for many of them," he said. "The trend has really been to larger homes."

"Of course, all the materials are changing. Windows and walls are much more energy-efficient than they ever have been. The walls are now six-inch instead of four-inch. Energy-efficient and being green are major factors in new home construction."

And while the cost to being energy-efficient and being "green" comes with a higher price tag, the benefits quickly begin to pay themselves back over time.

"Cost of housing is up, but the efficiency is certainly better," he said. "Your utility costs will be lower and you will save money on your utility bills because of the more energy-efficient home."

Many of the changes and trends in new home construction are personal-preference driven. Some homeowners are looking to downsize after their kids have moved out, while others are looking for more room to raise a family.

"The biggest trend in the buying market is that the younger generation are buying their first homes later and therefore buying their first new homes even later than that," Stoskopf said. "Today's generation is buying their first home around the age of 32, when before it was 25 or 26. And first-time buyers typically first buy an existing home. It's not until the ages of 36 to 51 that you see people buying a new home."

Stoskopf says one of the places those new homes are going up at an increasing rate is South Lyon.

"South Lyon is one of the more popular areas," he said. "Macomb Township has issued more new home permits than any municipality for the last four years. Washington Township, Shelby (Township), Lyon Township and Canton are other areas seeing a lot of activity."

Phillips agreed.

"South Lyon is busting at the seams," he said. "Anywhere you can find an empty lot in Oakland County, you will find a new home going up. Oakland Township is another area where a lot of new homes are being built."

The annual barbecue Wednesday for HBA members at Walnut Lake Estates in West Bloomfield was centered around having a good time and the forecast for new homes and for the HBA shows more good times and better times ahead.

"Our membership relates directly to what's going on in the market," Phillips said. "We have a lot more sub-contractors joining the association because they want to network and be involved. It's really a major benefit to them and all our members."

Take some precautions ahead of vacation trip

It is vacation time, which means many will be leaving town for a little rest and relaxation. One of the nice things about going on vacation is you can slow down a little from the hectic pace that most deal with on a day-to-day basis. Unfortunately, one thing you cannot afford to do is let your guard down when you travel. Thieves and lowlifes in our society know that people are less on guard when they travel and they look at taking advantage of that. It is important to take some precautions when traveling in order to protect yourself. Here are some things to consider that will protect you and make it more difficult for the lowlifes to take advantage of you.

Public Wi-Fi has allowed people to access the Internet virtually anywhere they are. This can be invaluable, particularly when you're out of town and looking for information. However, identity thieves and the lowlifes are also out there trolling public Wi-Fi to attempt to hack into information stored on our phone or laptop. Use extreme caution when you use public Wi-Fi. At a minimum, never use public Wi-Fi to transact business and that applies whether you're on vacation or at home.

I'm amazed at the number of people who go out of town and post that information on Facebook or Twitter. It is nice to share pictures with friends and loved ones, but let's not forget that you're giving a wealth of information to thieves. The last thing you want to do is let them know where you are and what your itinerary is. After all, you're making it easier for them to take advantage of you. My advice: Wait until you come home to post your pictures and talk about your trip. Don't make life any easier for the crooks.

When you travel, there is no need to take every charge card you own. The more you take, the greater the risk you are going to lose something. Limit the number of charge cards you take on your vacation. In addition, it's important to make copies of the charge cards you are taking, so that if there is a problem — such as one of your cards is stolen — you have the information to immediately notify your charge card company. One other note regarding charge cards: If you are leaving the country, it may be a good idea to let your credit card company know where you are going, so there will be no problems using your card.

One last note: When you do go out of town, make sure you stop your mail. An overflowing mailbox is a clear sign to the thieves that you are out of town. It is very simple to hold your mail and you can do it online by at usps.com.

Going on vacation is wonderful and I recommend it for everyone. But in today's world, it is important to put some precautions into effect to protect yourself so you can enjoy your well-earned vacation. It would be nice if you didn't have to worry about these things, but that is not reality. Remember, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure!"

Good luck!

Does love conquer all? Attorney says yes ... and no

Jay Grossman
hometownlife.com

When love is on the rocks, it's time to see Henry Gornbein.

The Birmingham attorney specializes in Michigan family law, having handled thousands of cases over the years involving divorces, custody disputes, post-nuptial agreements and related matters. He contributes a monthly blog to the Huffington Post on family law and has written a book titled "Divorce Demystified."

His best advice? Try to work it out:

Q: What are some keys to a healthy relationship?

Gornbein: Do not let things fester. An issue that is ignored will grow until it becomes more and more unmanageable. Do not let issues that were problems in the past haunt you. If you cannot move on, then there will be continuing problems in your relationship. I have many cases where one spouse or the other will bring up things that happened years ago as if they happened yesterday. Try to learn from your mistakes and move on. Date each other, even if you are married. Set time out to enjoy each other. Compromise is important in any relationship.

Last but not least, always get the last word in by saying you are right dear or whatever you want dear!

Q: How can social media make — or break — a relationship?

Gornbein: Social media is treacherous. I lecture on this issue and, in the past four years, the number of marriages ruined by Facebook and other social media has risen from 25 percent to one-third of all marriages.

Be very careful of what you post. Be positive if you are going to be on social media. Remember that whatever you post will be seen by not only your "friends," but their friends as well. I have had people run off with former high school sweethearts who they reconnected with on social media. Clients have learned of affairs through social media and marriages have been ruined due to scams on social media. The click of a computer key can alter your marriage and your life.

Q: Why do men seem to get off easier when they're caught cheating on their spouses?

Gornbein: I believe that there is still a double standard regarding affairs. In addition, I have found over the years that when a man has been cheated on by his wife, for some reason his reaction is usually worse than if he is the one cheating. Hell hath no wrath like a woman scorned! The wrath of a man scorned is even greater.

Q: What are some of the major factors a married couple needs to consider before seeking a divorce?

Gornbein: It is important to proceed with caution. You must look at the economic aspects of a divorce. Can I afford to move on after a divorce? What about the children? Can we work together after a divorce in some type of shared custodial arrangement? Do I know enough about what is in the marital estate?

It is critical to consult with an attorney before deciding to proceed. A divorce should be a last resort, not the first. Have you tried counseling? Can the marriage be improved? What are your goals for the future? Is the grass greener? These are all important issues to consider.

Q: Why are so-called 'gray divorces' on the rise in America?

Gornbein: Gray divorces are usually marriages of 25 years or longer. They usually are couples who are in their 50s or older. Often the children are grown or on the verge of leaving the nest. There are more gray divorces because people are living longer. Often, a couple will stay together to raise children and then, when the children are out of the house, they realize that their goals are different. Perhaps they have little in common. I also believe the stigma of divorce is less today than it was 20 or 30 years ago. I see more and more gray divorces in my practice.

Q: Will the institution of marriage survive the 21st century?

Gornbein: I recently interviewed Wayne County Chief Family Court Judge Kathleen McCarthy and, in Wayne County, 70 percent of all child custody cases involve couples who have never married. More and more people are living together and not getting married.

I believe that marriage will survive. There is still a desire for many people to marry. For economic reasons, it makes sense. If you are not married, you cannot get Social Security as a spouse. You cannot share in pensions. You cannot have medical insurance through a spouse's employment. There is still a romantic ideal of marriage and that marriage license still has meaning.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Draining the swamp?

This is but one of the many campaign theme that President Donald Trump ran on and failed. In the last 6 months, Trump has fired 11 White House staffers, or they quit. This includes FBI Director James Comley who was fired. Six more are currently on the bubble.

This 11 includes Reince Priebus, Trump's belittled and embattled, Chief of Staff, who was fired Friday. Priebus was the shortest ever serving as Presidential Chief of Staff.

Thus far, the only swamp drained seems to be the one created by Trump.

Avoid labels

Headline disappointed

Vigorous discussions at town hall meetings of local and national issues are to be applauded. Fundamental democratic principles of civic engagement hopefully reveal the scope of both consensus and diversity in points of view. Whatever the political auspices of such meetings — political parties, elected representatives or citizens — they are applauded as part of Americans' freedom of speech and assembly, basic elements of responsible participation in democratic governance.

I was disappointed by the headline: "Left-leaning group holds health care town hall in Plymouth." Why was "left-leaning" necessary as part of responsible journalism?

Such headlines do not help our community overcome tendencies to view news reporting as inherently partisan. "Left-leaning" primes the reader for an account of a town meeting sponsored by leftist partisans.

I am not a member of Indivisible District 11. I never heard of it. Its website describes it as "...a community of politically progressive citizens whose mission is to advance the principles of participatory government in order to promote a better, more progressive Michigan 11th Congressional district."

"Progressive" has been construed as left-leaning recently, but over American political history it has been applied broadly both to political conservatives and liberals urging social reform to unlock social and economic progress. Think Teddy Roosevelt (Republican) or Woodrow Wilson (Democrat). Advocating for progressive reform by concerned citizens does not automatically translate as "left-leaning." Advocating for change that improves the social and economic lot of all citizens is not a partisan activity; it is patriotic civic discourse, a responsible contribution to American self-governance.

What happened at the town meeting? I did not attend, having been unaware of it. No statements from any of the 100 "concerned citizens" about the future of health care are quoted, which does not provide me insight into my neighbors' opinions. The account gives the impression of a wholly one-sided partisan affair, dominated by elected officials. Apparently Dave Trott was either not invited or chose to spend his time otherwise.

Trott's absence contributed nothing to healthy, patriotic deliberative democracy in Plymouth. Suppose Trott had convened the town hall and both spoke and listened to, would the headline state: "Right-leaning Representative holds health care town hall"? Surely not.

If we are to overcome hyper-partisanship in Plymouth and build a diverse, outspoken, respectful community, we ourselves — and the media — must move beyond unnecessary, imprecise labels that cue latent political emotions that divide and silence debate.

Lake Street Mercantile shutting down

LeAnne Rogers
hometownlife.com

A longtime fixture in downtown South Lyon is holding a big clearance sale before closing its doors next month.

Lake Street Mercantile owners Cindy and Lloyd Jones have decided to sell their building on Lake Street, just east of Lafayette and retire. Selling fabric and other quilting supplies, the store has been in downtown South Lyon for 15 years. The couple, married 53 years, declined to be interviewed about their plans but had sent out an email.

Former Oakland County commissioner and attorney Thomas Law is in the process of purchasing the mercantile building from the Joneses. His son, David Law, is a judge in 52-1 District Court in Novi.

"My son likes the community. I was looking for an investment and came across the building," Law said. "It's an attractive building. I looked at South Lyon — it's got a low vacancy rate. It's a good town."

After serving 25 years on the county commission, Law worked four years for County Executive L. Brooks Patterson. As a result, he was familiar with the efforts of Bob Donohue, who retired from Oakland County before joining the city of South Lyon as Downtown Development Authority/Economic Development Director.

"The seller said Bob (Donohue) was there — I didn't know. Bob is working hard and has different ideas on what to do with the building," Law said. "I haven't been to see him yet."

Nicolas Cetnarowski had so much fun at last year's Sunshine's Skills and Drills Football Clinic that there was no way his mom wouldn't bring him back for the fourth annual event.

"He just wanted to play football more (after last year's camp), he loves it here," said Lisa Cetnarowski, formerly of Canton, whose 13-year-old son was paired up with Conner Bell. "It's just fun, watching all the kids have a great time."

Nicolas, who has autism and is non-verbal, made the rounds with Bell — a Westland resident who is entering eighth grade at St. Michael Catholic School in Livonia.

"He loves to catch and throw," Lisa said. "Oh gosh, he just loves he socialization part of it. Besides, he loves football and baseball in general."

Judging from the smile on Bell's face, it looked like he was having just as much fun during the two-hour event held on the varsity turf field at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"It's just a really great thing for them, there's not a lot of things like this around," said Conner, whose dad Ryan Bell is an assistant varsity football coach for Plymouth High School. "It's just a great experience."

There were about 60 boys and girls with special needs on hand for the clinic, the brainchild of now-13-year-old Connor Sherman (a.k.a. Sunshine) and hosted by the Plymouth High School football program.

At the conclusion of the event (coordinated by Sherman, his parents, sponsors and coaches such as Plymouth assistant Brian Rochon), each camper ran through the inflated Wildcats head, crashed through a paper banner and received a trophy.

Campers and their families then were treated to refreshments and listened to a brief speech by Monica Merritt, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Gratifying

“It’s definitely amazing,” said Sherman, a quarterback for the Plymouth-Canton Steelers and entering eighth grade at Discovery Middle School. “Just to see the kids run around and they get a shot, too, because every kid gets an opportunity to play the sport of football.

“It just makes you feel good, giving every kid an opportunity to succeed.”

Now a few inches taller and with his hair cropped shorter than it was at the debut “Sunshine’s” in 2014, he loved making the rounds.

“I’m kind of roaming around right now, stopping in with a bunch of kids saying hi,” Sherman said. “They definitely love it. The No. 1 thing is when they knock over their buddy. They love that drill the most out of all of them.”

Over near the station where campers improved their agility by running through a rope ladder, Plymouth JV wide receiver Jacob Smith encouraged his buddy, Emily.

“I think she loving it. She’s learning so many new things, even though she’s been here (Sunshine’s) for three years now,” said an enthusiastic Smith, soon to be a sophomore. “She’s so fun to be with, she always makes me laugh.”

Fun is contagious

Asked for an example, he recalled an exchange. “She’s, like, ‘Wow, this is fun.’ I’ll be, like ‘You think it is? We can do it again if you want.’ She’s, like, ‘Yeah!’”

Smith then shook his head at what he witnessed from Emily as well as the other campers as they threw and caught passes, “tackled” their buddies or found a seam with a run.

“It’s just amazing, the kids are always energetic, they’re always happy,” Smith said. “I just love to do it. I do it for the kids, that’s why I’m here.”

That sentiment was prevalent all over the field, including from Plymouth varsity coach Mike Sawchuk.

“This is something I want to do as long as I’m here,” Sawchuk said. “I said two things this does in my mind. One, I don’t think kids get outside as much as they used to. So for them to come outside and just have fun playing the game of football is awesome for the campers.

“And the second thing is, as I started doing this, I see our kids having just as much fun, but I also see their brains spinning, going, ‘Wow, how resilient are the parents that do this 24/7?’”

Sawchuk added that the high school athletes “learn something from it, they learn how good they have it. Now they can give back and let these kids have a great day.”

The older folks working with the kids also seemed to be having a blast.

“You can see my brother (Terry Sawchuk) and our O-line coaches are into it and having a good time,” Sawchuk said. “They’re enthusiastic.”

Then with a nod in the direction of Connor Sherman, Sawchuk said, “He cut his hair, so he doesn’t really look like Sunshine anymore.”

Maybe so. But “Sunshine’s” clinic maintained its usual look of undeniable fun, friendship and football.

Sweden defenseman Gustav Lindstrom, Detroit’s second-round pick in the recent NHL Entry Draft.

Despite some nifty stretch passes by Lindstrom to spring offensive chances for Swedish teammates, the Team USA White split squad prevailed 4-3 Sunday afternoon before just under 600 fans.

Local players such as goalie Dylan St. Cyr (Northville) and forward Ivan Lodnia (Novi) made important contributions against Sweden.

St. Cyr, a Notre Dame commit, made 27 saves for the victory.

“It’s a great opportunity to even be here with a bunch of great players,” St. Cyr said. “Basically, I just want to play my game, don’t want to change anything and I think everything else will take care of itself.”

The 5-8 goalie, a two-year veteran of the U.S. National Team Development Program, came up with some timely stops, including one with about five minutes left in the middle period with USA White up 2-1 (on first-period goals by Max Gerlach and Quinn Hughes).

Lindstrom fed a stretch pass from his own end right onto the tape of Isac Lundestrom, who slid the puck over to right wing Jesper Boqvist for a one-timer that St. Cyr sprawled to block.

“We knew they had a good D-core there, they were getting pucks to the net,” St. Cyr said. “We just had to make sure we played good team defense and I think we did that really well.”

About two minutes later, Lodnia put USA White up 3-1 when he banged in the rebound of Jack Badini’s shot. The goal made up for an earlier tripping penalty that his teammates killed off.

“I took a couple penalties here and they’re not the greatest feeling,” Lodnia said. “But once you get to finally bounce back with a goal, it feels nice.”

Sweden cut the lead to 3-2 before the end of the period on a power-play goal by Boqvist, but the two-goal lead was restored again at 32 seconds of the third period, when Kailer Yamamoto jammed the puck past goalie Isak Wallin (20 saves).

Feeling trusted

A power-play goal by Sweden’s Linus Hogberg closed the gap to 4-3 with 7:31 left, but St. Cyr and his teammates were strong the rest of the way.

In the final minute, with Wallin pulled for an extra attacker, Lodnia was out for an extended shift and kept the puck deep in Sweden’s zone — preventing any chance at the equalizer.

“It means a lot, it definitely shows the coach trusts you in the D-zone,” Lodnia said. “I’ve been trying to emphasize being an offensive threat in the O-zone and be reliable in the D-zone.”

Lodnia, who played last season for the Ontario Hockey League champion Erie Otters, added that it’s great to be part of a tournament not too far from his home.

“I’m just down the street on Beck Road, so it’s really nice to be here,” said Lodnia, a 2017 draft pick of the Minnesota Wild. “I’ve been here a lot, watched a lot of games and played a lot of games here. To be playing at this rink in such a high competition it means a lot.”

The Showcase — essentially an audition for the 2018 International Ice Hockey Federation World Junior Championship — continued with each U.S. split squad playing Tuesday games against Canada.

Fletcher (George Washington University) took another ITA doubles crown.

Johnston is tied for the seventh most doubles wins (19) by a freshman in program history. His goal is to crack U-M’s singles lineup full-time in 2017-18.

“It’s going to be tough again, because we’re only losing two singles players,” said Johnston, who is training this summer under former U-M player Justin Rossi at the Novi Sports Club. “I should be fighting for that sixth spot. We’re getting four people (recruits), so we’ll see.”

As an added bonus to the 2016-17 season, the U-M men’s tennis team took a trip in June to France. It got a chance to play a French club team made up of college-age players.

“It was low-key, not that serious,” Johnston said. “We played a set of doubles and then an eight-game pro set of singles. The trip was kind of more to have fun.”

The U-M squad took a sight-seeing trip to both Nice and Paris during its seven-day excursion.

There were several highlights on the French trip for Johnston, but two stand out.

“Hitting at the Monte Carlo Tennis Club or going to the French Open, both of those were equal,” Johnston said. “We went for a whole day (to Roland Garros Stadium). It was cool. Very different. It was awesome. We watched the round of 16. We saw everyone: Andy Murray, (Kei) Nishikori, (Fernando) Verdasco, bunch of doubles players.”

Johnston reached most of his expectations last season as he helped the Wolverines finish with a 23-7 overall record as they earned their second consecutive trip to the NCAA tournament.

“Maybe play more singles matches, but other than that it was awesome,” Johnston said of his inaugural collegiate year. “I was getting playing time in doubles, playing pretty much every match and working hard. So it was a lot Gildon scored just two minutes into the second period, on a play set up by Brady Tkachuk.

Sasha Chmelevski and Jason Robertson then scored goals just 34 seconds apart midway through the period to stake goalie and Detroit Red Wings draft choice Keith Petruzzelli to a comfortable lead.

The 6-5 Petruzzelli (Detroit’s third round choice in the 2017 NHL Entry Draft) held the fort the rest of the way, other than Finland’s goal by Aarne Talvitie early in the third. He finished with 27 saves.

Closing out the win for USA Blue was Tim Gettinger, with a goal at 7:06 of the third.

SWEDEN 4, USA BLUE 3: In front of 559 Saturday at USA Hockey Arena, the USA Blue team jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first period, but could not hold on as Sweden rallied with three unanswered goals.

For the U.S., goals were scored by Brady Tkachuk, Sean Dhooghe and Brighton’s Logan Cockerill.

In net for the home team, Sweden victimized goaltender Keith Petruzzelli, who allowed three goals on 21 shots down the stretch.

USA WHITE 4, FINLAND 2: In the week-long tournament opener Saturday afternoon, goals by Max Gerlach and Casey Mittelstadt in the third period snapped a 2-2 tie and propelled the USA White squad to victory.

Other U.S. goals were scored by Evan Barratt (from Mittelstadt) and Jack Badini.

Goalies Jake Oettinger and Dylan St. Cyr (Northville) divided time between the pipes with St. Cyr stopping 18 shots for the win.

“We did really well,” said Johnston, who finished the year at 19-9 overall at No. 1 doubles and 3-0 at No. 3 doubles. “We got up to No. 10 in April. Lost 10-8 in a super tiebreaker to guys (Lopez and Stalder) who made the final four. It was so close. We were up 7-5 and lost 10-8.”

Johnston, a Novi resident, also posted a 6-2 doubles record in the Big Ten and finished with a 10-2 singles mark, where he played in the Nos. 5 and 6 flights.

Meanwhile, Johnston’s doubles success continued last weekend when he and U-M teammate Nick Beaty (Wayzata, Minn.) captured a summer Intercollegiate Tennis Association doubles event at Michigan State.

Johnston came to U-M with high credentials as five-star recruit who was ranked the No. 23 senior by Tennis-Recruiting.net.

As a senior at Northville, Johnston took the coveted MHSAA Division 1 individual No. 1 singles state title to cap a perfect 29-0 season after finishing runner-up to Novi’s Tim Wang (Columbia University) the previous two years (2013 and 2014).

“I’d say the biggest adjustment was just the overall intensity and work rate of just the whole thing,” Johnston said of his inaugural year in Ann Arbor. “The intensity is way higher in college and the players are just hitting hard, moving their feet harder, just working that much harder.”

JUNIOR GOLF

Kensington tour a hit with young players

M.B. Dillon
Correspondent

Jack McCarthy, 17, of Plymouth and Andrea Davis, 15, of Highland outdistanced the competition to capture the men's and women's titles in the Kensington Junior Golf Tour's Whispering Willows Junior Open under sunny skies July 25.

McCarthy, who's golfed for just three years, fired 2-over-par 72 after shooting 36 on both nines.

"It went pretty well. I made a lot of pars," said McCarthy, a senior who competes on Plymouth Salem's golf team. "On the first nine, I bogeyed one hole and, the next hole, I birdied. I hit a lot of greens and had a lot of two-putts. It was pretty much the same thing on the back side."

McCarthy was competing in his second KJGT tournament. He placed third with 80 at Washtenaw Country Club earlier in the month.

Hole No. 16, a par-5, was a highlight for McCarthy.

"I hit my drive off the tee into the trees. I hit a good second shot and my third shot was right next to the hole and I one-putted for birdie," he said.

Davis, a rising sophomore at Milford High School, carded a personal-best 90, despite seven three-putts, for the win.

"I was really hoping to shoot in the 80s. I shot a bogey five on the last hole. I had a bad tee shot or I would have had an 89," said Davis, who made Milford's varsity golf team as a freshman.

"The three holes before that I shot par, so I was expecting to shoot really well," added Davis, who shot 47 on the first nine and 43 on the second. "I parred a bunch of holes. Normally, I putt really bad, but I had a lot of two-putts, which made a lot of difference for the back nine. There are a lot of trees on the front nine. I didn't lose my ball, but I had to use shorter-distance clubs to avoid the trees and the creeks."

Peter Stassinopoulos of Novi shot 87 to win the boys ages 12-14 division.

"I was marginal on the front nine. I shot 45 with one three-putt," the Novi Middle School student said. "And then on the back, I hit a good first drive and started out pretty well. I only had one bad hole and shot better on the back. I ended up with a 42."

Stassinopoulos, who carded an impressive 78 at the recent KJGT Cattails tourney in South Lyon, said the highlight of his round was on No. 7, a par-3. Following his drive, "I hit a nice pitching wedge and lobbed it in for a par," he said.

The KJGT awards points for tournament play in four local county divisions. Heading into late July, Stassinopoulos topped the leader board in both the Wayne and Oakland races in his age group.

Damo Watson, 8, of Westland won the boys ages 7-11 nine-hole division with 42. Runner-up was Keating Holland of Ann Arbor, who carded 60. Watson, winner of the 2016 Oakland County division, is leading the Oakland and Washtenaw divisions this season.

Andrew Aigeltinger of Wayne and Evan Johnson of Grosse Ile both shot 80, vying for runner-up honors behind McCarthy. Aigeltinger won the tie-breaker by paring the tough second hole.

"I was pretty solid on the front nine and shot 2-over," said Aigeltinger, 17, who competes for Wayne Memorial H.S. and is leading the KJGT's Wayne and Washtenaw divisions. "On the back nine, I had a hole where I actually hit the ball too far into the creek and had to take a drop. So that kind of hurt my score."

Princess Wells, 18, of Macomb Township finished second behind Davis with 106. "I was driving everything well, but I couldn't really putt today," said Wells, who will join Northwood University's golf team this fall.

Brayden Niemiec, 13, of Canton was runner-up with 90 among boys ages 12-14. No. 17 was memorable. "I just missed a birdie on a par-3. I hit it 15 feet to the hole and it almost went in," Niemiec said.

The KJGT was established 12 years ago to give local junior golfers the opportunity to play organized, competitive golf at reasonable rates. Thirty tournaments are staged at top courses in Oakland, Livingston, Washtenaw and Wayne counties.

New this year is a developmental, non-competitive division for girls and boys ages 6-11.

The Kensington Tour is a hit with junior golfers.

"I love it. The players are all around the same skill set, so everyone has a good shot at winning," Stassinopoulos said. "It's a great program."

"I think it's fun," Davis said. "It's not super-competitive, so it's not intimidating."

"The tour is really good," Aigeltinger said. "This is my second year and I'm always meeting nice new people to play with."

MEN'S LACROSSE

Madonna loads up with key area recruits

Brad Emons
hometownlife.com

The Madonna University men's lacrosse program took its lumps during its inaugural season, but second-year coach Mike Walters is adding 23 new recruits to beef up his 2018 roster.

The Crusaders, who finished 1-11 overall and 0-7 in the

Gingell

Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference, are expected to make marked improvement with several area players, including three each from MHSAA Division 1 runner-up Novi Detroit Catholic and regional runner-up Northville.

"We are looking for all these guys to come in and make an immediate impact on our team," Walter said in a press release. "When you look at our roster, with these additions and the returners from last season, our goals of winning the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference, making it to the tournament and claiming a national championship are all within reach for this team."

Among the prized recruits from Northville are attacker Cole Gingell (58 goals, 40 assists), who started three seasons at CC before transferring his senior year; attacker Ty Kilar (28 goals, 50 assists); and defender Connor Wright, a four-year starter.

Catholic Central will be sending midfielder Chris Kovath and defender Mike Molchan, both three-year starters, along with goalie Collin Caid (Livonia).

Other area players in the fold for MU include: Orchard Lake St. Mary's midfielders Ian Rush (Livonia), who had 45 goals, 32 assists, and Frank Northville defender Connor Wright will be playing next year at Madonna University.

Dedvukaj (Farmington Hills), a three-year starter; South Lyon Unified attacker Sean Millane; Birmingham United goalie Gary Cutler (Southfield); and Novi midfielder Brendan Daschke.

Other Michigan recruits include midfielder Kyler Pearson (31 goals, 45 assists) and defender Hunter Keenan, both of Howell, along with Walled Lake Western attacker James McGrath (Wixom).

Among the out-of-state players signed by Walters include midfield and face-off specialist Zachary Bean and attacker Dylan Sibley, both from Montgomery (N.Y.) Valley Central; goalie Derek Amoth, Hopkinton (N.H.); defender Garrison Brackens, Fairfield (Ohio); attacker Tucker Brady, Cumming (Ga.) North Forsyth; midfielder Jordan Davis, Johnson City (N.Y.) Senior goalie Tyler Dohmeier, Middleton (Wis.); defender Donovan Maurelli, Centennial (Colo.) Smoky Hill; and defender Tyler Spanfellner, Kuna (Idaho) Bishop Kelly.

The Crusaders open their 2018 season Feb. 26 in Brighton against host Cleary University. The home opener is March 8 on the outdoor turf of the MU Athletics Complex against Illinois Benedictine College.

COLLEGE VOLLEYBALL

Albion College's Shuk focuses on off-court work this summer

With nearly 1,200 digs in the first two years of her volleyball career at Albion College, incoming junior Monica Shuk has earned her place as one of the top defensive players in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

At the midpoint of her collegiate career, however, the libero from Milford, who is concentrating in Albion's Carl A. Gerstacker Institute for Business and Management is just as focused on developing her professional skills in accounting. She responded to questions about her summer internship with Jacobs Technology, where she is the project account lead/associate for aerospace projects and selective automotive projects.

In her second year with the company, her role has expanded into an impressive list of responsibilities.

"In this role, I am responsible for budget estimates and then manage the budget throughout the project (concept to final delivery)," Shuk said. "I am also in charge of procurement needs for these projects and securing the proper senior management with approval and alignment. I analyze, examine and interpret account records, compile financial information and reconciled reports and financial data. My span of control on projects has me managing assets from $750,000 up to $20 million."

"I am also on an inventory control process improvement project that could be used corporate-wide by ensuring all material is accounted for and knowing the exact location for all of our materials without having to do a hand counted inventory," she added.

"I worked the summer of 2016 with Jacobs Engineering and I was concerned I would have the same level of responsibility," she said. "I was glad to see they were happy with my work and invited me back for another year and gave me bigger tasks."

Some of the additional responsibility, Shuk said, has introduced her to skills outside the realm of accounting and that makes each day at the office different.

"The whole internship is unusual really, in a fun and challenging way," she said. "Where else would you get a glimpse into the automotive client's perspectives one day and the next you are exposed into the mindsets of aerospace and NASA?"

Shuk is also developing her time management skills with two classes on top of her internship.

TINY HOUSE TEST DRIVE

Try one on vacation before taking the plunge

SARAH SEKULA
SPECIAL FOR USA TODAY

LYONS, COLO. There are many reasons people flock to the tiny town of Lyons, home to about 2,000 people. For starters, its location on the St. Vrain River makes it a mecca for whitewater kayaking. Not to mention, it is home to music festivals, epic mountain biking and has easy access to Rocky Mountain National Park.

Another draw is one you might not expect, but it certainly is attracting attention. It's called WeeCasa Tiny House Resort, a cluster of 22 tiny homes for rent (starting at $159 per night). Some are sleek and European, others are more whimsical. Each one is uniquely decorated, ranging in size from 140 to 200 square feet, and all are ready to roll. They are licensed as recreational vehicles, which means they are on wheels and can be on the move in 30 minutes or less.

As soon as I walk over to my wee abode, known as the Pequod, I realize why so many Americans have become obsessed with this phenomenon.

Outside: The curvy roofline and cedar shingles give it a cottage-like feel. Inside: There's an arched ceiling and stained-glass windows, two lofts connected by a plexiglass catwalk, a private bathroom and a kitchen where one of the drawer pulls is actually a fork. Despite its small stature, it sleeps four adults.

"I think tiny living in general is really something that people are fascinated with," says Kenyon Waugh, WeeCasa's "Wee-EO." "What we see is people leaving here energized to reduce the amount of things they have and the footprint they have and to really simply their lifestyles."

LILLIPUTIAN LIVING

WeeCasa is part of a growing number of tiny-home getaways across the nation from Oregon to New York that make for an unusual and Instagram-worthy vacation. Beyond that, though, some of the homes are models available for purchase, so spending time there can serve as a tiny-home test drive.

So much so, one visitor even brought her cat bed along to WeeCasa to see how it would fit in, and another whipped up a quiche to make sure the kitchen space was adequate.

WHEELHAUS

Fireside Resort in Jackson Hole, near Grand Teton National Park, offers 23 Wheelhaus tiny-house cabins for rent.

MT. HOOD TINY HOUSE VILLAGE

The interior of a model at Mt. Hood Tiny House Village shows the efficiency of tiny-house design.

Gregory Johnson, who has kept a close eye on the tiny-living moment for the past 15 years, says many people find it to be a great way to find a peaceful sense of renewal, even if it's just for a weekend.

In 2001, Johnson became enchanted with the idea of tiny living and commissioned Jay Shafer, owner of Tumbleweed Tiny House Company, to build him one a few years later. He also was inspired to create the Small House Society to help foster the growth of the tiny-living movement.

Back then, Johnson says, a Google search for small houses or tiny houses produced no results. Fast-forward to today, and those shrunken homes have sparked so much interest there is now an entire category of reality TV shows and documentaries devoted to the topic. There even are tiny-home jamborees.

With the sheer charm and design aesthetic of these homes, the intrigue is certainly there, but when it comes down to living in one full time, that's another story.

For Gerrie Stone, who lives in Watertown, S.D., and recently stayed at WeeCasa, it was a good way to bring her family from Nebraska and Colorado together. Although committing to tiny living does not appeal to her, she loved the community atmosphere. And staying in a Hobbit-themed tiny home was worth the trip alone. With its round door and windows, faux ivy and tiny chandelier, it was an instant conversation starter with fellow visitors.

ON THE RISE

The trend is poised to grow.

Right now, travelers can take their pick from such places as Fireside Resort in Jackson Hole, Wyo., which has 23 cabins for rent (starting at $225 per night) near Grand Teton National Park. With such names as Caboose and Light-Haus, the 400-square-foot homes all were built by Wheelhaus and serve as model homes available for purchase starting at $58,000.

Then there's Getaway, which offers tiny-home stays (starting at $99 per night) in New York's Catskills and in the forests of New Hampshire. The first thing you'll notice is the cellphone drop-box encouraging you to disconnect. Homes also are stocked with fun snacks (think: popcorn and s'mores by the fire pit) and simple meals.

They keep the specific location under wraps so renters won't stress about planning ahead of time, looking up restaurants and such. (Guests enter their starting zip code online, so they will know the approximate drive time.)

"People are yearning to find a counterbalance to the digital age," says Getaway founder and CEO Jon Staff. "Cities are great, but nature can provide things the city doesn't. Technology is powerful, but we can't be connected all the time. Tiny houses capture the minimalism and simplicity that went out of style ... but seems to be coming back in reaction to a world that has become too busy, complicated and stressful."

Throughout the year, more tiny-home hotels will open. Tumbleweed, for example, opened Mt. Hood Tiny House Village outside of Portland, Ore., last year, has a tiny-house village in Washington state and also rents tiny homes at camping resorts across the country. And, no surprise, more plans are in the works.

The same goes for Getaway. Their homes typically are booked several months out and weekend dates can book as much as six months in advance. They, too, have more homes in development.

Whatever these minimal dwellings lacking in the square footage department, they make up for it with tons of personality. And for vacationers who may find the quarters confining, a return from Lilliput is just a weekend away.

Cruise lines roll out routes, options

GENE SLOAN
USA TODAY

Cruise lines are continually tweaking their schedules. Sometimes it’s just the addition of a single port to a long-established itinerary. Other times it’s the roll-out of an all-new route.
Here, some of the more notable new itinerary announcements from the past few weeks.

PRINCESS TO OFFER L.A.-TO-SHANGHAI CRUISE ...
Princess Cruises has announced plans for an epic voyage from Los Angeles to Shanghai and back that includes stops in half a dozen countries.
The 60-day Circle North Pacific sailing on the Coral Princess kicks off Sept. 19, 2018, with a trip north to Alaska, where calls will include Ketchikan, Juneau and Kodiak. From there, the 1,970-passenger vessel will head west to Japan, stopping in Kushiro, Yokohama (near Tokyo), Osaka and Hiroshima.
Continuing westward, Coral Princess will visit Incheon (near Seoul) in South Korea and Beijing in China before arriving in Shanghai. From there, the ship will visit the Japanese island of Okinawa; Hong Kong; Halong Bay, Chan May and Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam; and Manila in The Philippines before returning east across the Pacific. It’ll make a two-day stop in Hawaii before arriving in Los Angeles on Nov. 18, 2018.
Fares for the voyage start at $8,399 per person, based on double occupancy.

... AND ANOTHER AROUND-THE-WORLD SAILING
Princess also has announced plans for another around-the-world voyage in 2019.
The 111-day sailing on the Pacific Princess will kick off Jan. 5, in Fort Lauderdale and include stops in 41 ports in 27 countries. It’ll end April 27, 2019, in Fort Lauderdale.
Pacific Princess already is scheduled to operate a 111-day voyage around the world in early 2018. While identical in length, the new trip involves a different route around the globe that includes a passage around Africa’s Cape of Good Hope.
The 2019 sailing will start with a passage through the Panama Canal to the west coast of Central America as the Pacific Princess heads to Los Angeles.
From there, the 688-passenger ship will cross the Pacific to Hawaii, French Polynesia, New Zealand and Australia before turning north to Asia for stops in such ports as Singapore; Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia; and Phuket, Thailand.

Continuing westward, Pacific Princess will visit Sri Lanka, the Maldives and the Seychelles on its way to South Africa. Other stops in Africa will include Madagascar and Namibia. Leaving Africa, the vessel will cross the Atlantic to Brazil and French Guiana in South America before returning to Fort Lauderdale.
Fares for the trip start at $22,879 per person, based on double occupancy and not including taxes, fees and port charges.
While Princess has offered lengthy world cruises for many years, the 52-year-old line began offering full circumnavigations of the globe only in 2015.

NEW WINDSTAR ITINERARY FEATURES FAROE ISLANDS
Windstar Cruises is out with an unusual new itinerary that focuses on some of the most remote North Atlantic islands.
Dubbed Secrets of the Faroe, Shetland & Orkney Islands, the seven-night trip begins and ends in Edinburgh, Scotland, and features visits to the Denmark-controlled Faroe Islands as well as Scotland’s Shetland Islands and Orkney Islands.
Windstar is planning just a single departure of the itinerary for now, on Aug.

PRINCESS CRUISES

Coral Princess will sail between Los Angeles and Shanghai beginning in 2018.

17, 2018. It’ll take place on the 212-passenger Star Breeze.
The voyage includes two stops in the Faroe Islands, in the towns of Torshavn and Tvoroyri. The ship also will spend part of a day cruising through some of the Faroe Islands’ rugged fjords and past Cape Enniberg.
The sailing offers day visits to Lerwick in the Shetland Islands and Kirkwall in the Orkney Islands as well as the mainland Scottish town of Aberdeen. The Shetland Islands are known for a windswept landscape that includes rugged cliffs and beaches, Iron Age ruins and Shetland ponies. The Orkney Islands harbor some of the oldest Neolithic sites in Europe as well as historic sites related to a significant naval role in World War I and World War II.
Fares for the sailing start at $3,499 per person, based on double occupancy.

HOLLAND AMERICA JOINS RUSH TO CUBA
Holland America is joining the growing list of cruise lines offering voyages from the USA to Cuba.
The Seattle-based company plans nearly a dozen sailings to the island nation from Fort Lauderdale starting in December.
The trips will kick off on Dec. 22 with a 12-night voyage on the 1,350-passenger Veendam. It’ll feature stops in the Cuban ports of Havana and Cienfuegos.
Ten other Cuba cruises will follow over the next four months, with all but one lasting seven nights. There will be a single 11-night trip.
The seven-night trips will include a call at Havana with a third of the sailings also including a stop at Cienfuegos.
Holland America is joining more than half a dozen lines that have started up Cuba cruises over the past year. The Cuba calls offer a chance for “people-to-people” exchanges between Americans and Cubans as allowed by U.S. rules governing visits to Cuba.
U.S. visitors are limited in the activities in Cuba under terms of the USA’s five-decade-old embargo. The embargo specifies that activities fall within one of 12 approved categories.
Fares for Holland America’s Cuba sailings start at $899 per person, based on double occupancy and do not include taxes and fees.

Turning tables on the travel industry

ON TRAVEL
CHRISTOPHER ELLIOTT

Maybe you've heard about Jason Puerner, or someone like him. Puerner, a transportation planner from Lakewood, Colo., says he recently rented a Chevrolet Cruze with a pre-existing scratch from Enterprise. After returning the vehicle, he refused to cough up $412 for repairs and ended up on the company's infamous "Do Not Rent" list. "They also threatened collections or legal action if I don't pay my bill," he says.

Blacklists are common in the travel business. Airlines keep lists of passengers who are forbidden from flying, hotels have comparable do-not-stay lists, and most prominently, car rental companies have no-rent lists.

Here's something you probably haven't heard: Some industry organizations are starting to keep tabs on companies that misbehave. And they're reporting them publicly. The results could help you have a better travel experience.

Puerner's blacklisting was a mistake, as indeed some listings are. Who can forget the government report that found more than one-third of the names on the federal government's terrorist watchlist are based on outdated information?

After I contacted Enterprise on his behalf, it rechecked its records. Sure enough, a previous renter's records verified that the scratch was there before he rented the Chevy.

"We sincerely apologize for the confusion, inconvenience and misunderstanding," an Enterprise representative told him.

When it comes to tracking the bad players, one of the most progressive trade groups is the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA). For years, it kept a list of "logo violators" — companies that claimed to be ASTA members but weren't.

The process behind the list is noteworthy.

"When a consumer sends us a question or complaint about a company, I always start by verifying its membership in ASTA," explains Genevieve Strand, ASTA's manager for government and industry affairs. "If it is using the ASTA logo and is in fact not a member, that Blacklists are common in the travel business. Airlines, hotels and car rental companies keep lists of folks who are forbidden.

KAREN BLEIER, AFP/GETTY IMAGES

OTHER LISTS TO WATCH

Airline: The authoritative American Customer Satisfaction Index tracks airline customer service performance over the years and can offer a reliable indicator of the reputable, and disreputable, airlines.

Car rental: This is a difficult industry to track. The best-known list is J.D. Power's customer service ranking, in its 21st year. Avoiding the low-scoring companies might be a sound strategy.

Cruise: You can get a pretty good idea which ships are unsanitary by reading the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Vessel Sanitation Reports before booking.

initiates our logo violation process."

Typically, that begins with a cease-and-desist letter to the agency warning that its unauthorized use of the logo misleads consumers. The logo violators aren't just falsely claiming affiliation with ASTA; in some cases, they're also ripping consumers off. I know because I've had complaints about a few of them from travelers.

For years, ASTA listed only a handful of companies and almost never spoke openly about the list. Now, under a new emphasis on helping consumers, it actively promotes its roster of rogue agents and its efforts to help travelers.

Some travel organizations are more discreet in outing bad operators, preferring to do it by exclusion. Consider the U.S. Tour Operators Association (USTOA) member list, available on its site: ustoa.com/member-directory.

The USTOA requires each member to set aside $1 million of its own funds to protect consumers' deposits and payments against losses arising from bankruptcy, insolvency or cessation of business of that member company.

I've talked with USTOA officials about their member list several times, and although they won't say the non-members could be problematic, I will. If you're considering a tour and don't see a USTOA membership, I'd advise extra steps to protect yourself, such as a good travel insurance policy.

The more interesting question: Which industry organizations don't name the bad players?

► Airlines, represented by Airlines For America (A4A), don't report the carriers that enrage customers with bogus fees and bad service. An A4A representative said reporting on underperforming airlines is best left to the government.

► The car rental industry, represented by the American Car Rental Association (ACRA), doesn't publish lists of ethically challenged car rental locations that ding their customers with bogus claims. An ACRA spokeswoman said that wouldn't align with its mission to "promote, improve and enhance the motor vehicle rental industry."

► The cruise industry trade group, Cruise Lines International Association, doesn't name potentially dubious cruise lines.

► Hotels and their trade group, the American Hotel & Lodging Association, are mum when it comes to underperforming properties. Thankfully, we've got reader review sites such as TripAdvisor to get real-time report cards on individual lodgings.

Fliers to USA seeing tighter security

Tougher rules for electronics in effect

BART JANSEN
@GANJANSEN
USA TODAY

Airlines and security officials warned about tighter screening that went into effect recently for hundreds of thousands of travelers who fly daily to the USA from hundreds of airports.

"Enhanced screening measures are in effect," the Canadian Air Transport Security Association said in a warning to travelers. If selected for random additional screening, travelers will have to remove electronics from protective cases and turn them on. The association urged travelers to make sure devices are charged before traveling.

Aeromexico warned its passengers to get to the airport three hours before direct flights to the USA for extra screening. The airline said the extra scrutiny is intended to confirm that the object is an electronic device and not a prohibited object. Electronics must be out of their cases and will be reviewed in the presence of the traveler, the airline said.

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security announced the measures June 28 to better detect explosives hidden in electronics and to thwart airport workers from smuggling bombs onto planes. John Kelly, the secretary of Homeland Security, called the measures a new baseline for worldwide aviation security.

The measures apply to 180 airlines flying to the USA from 280 airports in 105 countries. About 325,000 people fly to the USA on 2,000 flights daily. If airlines don't meet the standards, they could face a laptop ban for carry-on and checked bags on flights to the USA. No airlines in the world are under restrictions for electronics because they've all adopted additional security measures, the department said Thursday.

"The quick and decisive action taken by airlines, nations and stakeholders are a testament to our shared commitment to raising the bar on global aviation security," said David Lapan, a department spokesman. "As we continue to secure global aviation in the coming weeks and months, this communication and partnership between the private sector and the U.S. government will be imperative."

The department didn't detail the extra steps, other than to say travelers might see more 3-D scanners, more swabbing for traces of explosives and more bomb-sniffing dogs at checkpoints.

The measures came after a ban in March on electronics larger than cellphones in carry-on bags aboard nine airlines flying to the USA from 10 airports in the Middle East and Africa.

Those airlines were each removed from the ban this month. Extra security was visible for Qatar Airways in Doha, where laptops and their cords were swabbed for explosives and sealed in duty-free bags until passengers were aboard their flights.

The greater scrutiny for carry-on bags began two days after the Federal Aviation Administration issued information warning airlines about personal electronics in checked luggage.

The FAA alert Monday said security measures could encourage more passengers to pack electronics in checked luggage, but that remains a concern because of rare fires sparked by lithium-ion batteries in the electronics.

The FAA Tech Center tested electronics by placing heaters next to electronics in soft-sided bags and found that batteries could spark fires with hazardous materials in the luggage. Crew members and passengers would notice a fire in the cabin, but a fire in cargo might "create conditions beyond what the airplane was designed to manage."

The FAA said that generally, electronics such as laptops and cellphones "should be transported in carry-on baggage and not placed in checked baggage." If packed in checked bags, electronics should be turned off and packed to protect them from damage, the FAA said.

Saying grace

SPIRITUAL FOOD FOR THE SOUL

LORETTA FULTON SPECIAL TO THE REPORTER-NEWS

*“God is great, God is good,
Let us thank him for our food.”
And so it begins.*

For many, a lifetime of saying a blessing or “grace” over a meal starts as a child with that simple prayer or some variation of it.

A recent poll by the Washington Post-Kaiser Family Foundation shows that praying before a meal is one of the few things that unites Americans. According to the poll, 48 percent of the respondents said they prayed before a meal every day or at least a few times a week.

Amazingly, that practice is widespread across America, including rural, suburban and urban dwellers. Northerners, Southerners, Catholics, Protestants, Democrats and Republicans, all say grace at times, according to the poll and an article in the Washington Post.

The fact that such a diversity of Americans agrees on the practice makes praying before a meal one of the few things that unites Americans. Certainly, when it comes to politics across those same demographics, the numbers would be much different.

Carol Rogers, director of the academy for newborns to 5-year-olds at Aldersgate United Methodist Church, may have the answer as to why the practice of saying grace is so widespread. It gets people into a routine of praying.

“It’s just spending time thanking God,” she said.

Rogers, who has been director of the Aldersgate Academy for 26 years, said she got into the practice of praying before meals and at bedtime as a child.

“When I was growing up,” she said, “it was never an option.”

It’s not an option at Aldersgate Academy, either, and parents are aware of that before enrolling their children.

“Everybody get your hands up,” Rogers instructed a class of little ones just before noon on a recent weekday. They obeyed, clasping their hands in a prayerful manner, bowing their heads, and closing their eyes before reciting the meal-time prayer familiar to children of all generations.

From there, prayers get more sophisticated. Some are extemporaneous, others are memorized from liturgy books.

*“Bless us, O Lord,
and these your gifts,
which we are about to receive from your bounty.
Through Christ our Lord.
Amen.”*

That familiar prayer is said in Catholic homes across the country. The Episcopal Book of Common Prayer gives several alternatives, such as:

Or, “Bless, O Lord, thy gifts to our use and us to thy service; for Christ’s sake. Amen.”

The people polled for the Washington Post-Kaiser Family Foundation survey were all Christians of one stripe or another. But praying before a meal certainly isn’t reserved just for Christians. Other religions also incorporate a meal-time prayer into daily life, although it may be done a little differently.

In Judaism, for example, the “Norman Rockwell picture of the family with their heads bowed in prayer before a meal” is not standard, Monica Braverman, cantor at Abilene’s Temple Mizpah, wrote in an email.

That doesn’t mean that Jews don’t pray before a meal, she wrote, but the practice isn’t as common as it is in some Christian homes. A Jewish mealtime prayer, called a “bracha,” is food-specific. Wine, bread, fruit, vegetables, desserts, everything, gets its own “bracha,” Braverman wrote. It is typically short.

“This is said or sung at pretty much breakneck speed and on with the meal!” Braverman wrote.

However, a lengthier after-meal prayer called “Birkat HaMazon” is common, Braverman wrote.

It includes songs, psalms, and a series of praises and focuses on bread because it is considered the staff of life. The practice, Braverman wrote, dates back at least 2,000 years.

The survey about the practice of saying a blessing before a meal showed that the greatest percentage of people who do that are black Protestants, at 80 percent, followed by white evangelicals at 74 percent.

For Rio, Olympics leave mixed legacy

While games revitalized some areas, poverty, corruption remain

STEPHEN WADE AND RENATA BRITO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO - Neymar kissed the ball, delivered a gold medal and then wept with other Brazilians. Look no further if you're searching for an iconic image of the Rio de Janeiro Olympics. "It's the only medal that really mattered," Salvador Gaeta said while cycling in the deserted Olympic Park recently. "Every Brazilian will remember it."

Other memories have faded at home since the Olympics opened a year ago. A few expectations were met, but many fell short of those promised by IOC President Thomas Bach and organizing committee head Carlos Nuzman.

Bach boasted at the closing ceremony of "a Rio de Janeiro before, and a much better Rio de Janeiro after the Olympic Games."

Nuzman called Rio the next Barcelona, one of the cities clearly transformed by the games.

Save for minor cosmetic changes, a city fractured by mountains and searing inequality remains as it was. Violent crime mostly concealed during the Olympics is soaring, tied to Brazil's deepest economic downturn in 100 years and unpaid policemen leaving in droves. Brazil's military has been called in to quell Rio's violence.

Rio barely managed to keep it together for the Olympics, needed a government bailout to hold the Paralympics and then collapsed under a grinding recession and sprawling corruption scandals.

The games took place mostly in the south and west of the city, which remains white and wealthy. The rest is still a hodgepodge of dilapidated factories and hillside slums of cinderblocks, tin roofs and open troughs of raw sewage.

Brazil says it spent $13 billion in public and private money to organize the Olympics — some estimates suggest $20 billion — and many games-related projects since then have been tied to corruption scandals.

A look at the fallout since the Olympics opened last Aug. 5:

The good

The Olympics left behind a new subway line extension, high-speed bus service and a renovated port area filled with food stands, musicians and safe street life in a city rife with crime.

These probably would not have been built without the Olympics. But the games also imposed deadlines and drove up prices. A state auditor's report said the 9.7 billion real ($3 billion) subway was overbilled by 25 percent.

Igor Silverio lives near the port in a favela — or shantytown — and came the other day to kick around a soccer ball with his two young boys. The area in his youth was known for decay and drunkenness.

"For sure it's better," he said. But he "expected more from the Olympics."

"From my point of view, the Olympics only benefited the foreigners. Local people themselves didn't get much. The security situation isn't good, the hospitals. I think these are investments that didn't benefit many local people."

He said he skipped the Olympics because they were "too expensive" and located far away in the suburbs.

Standing outside the new subway line, 57-year-old domestic worker Isa Trajano Fernandes said public transportation had improved but was still deficient.

The bad

The Olympics left a half-dozen vacant sports arenas in the Olympic Park and 3,600 empty apartments in the boarded-up Olympic Village. Deodoro, a major complex of venues in the impoverished north, is shuttered behind iron gates.

Standing across the street, Jose Mauricio Pehna de Souza was asked if Rio benefited from the Olympics. "I don't think so, not us in Brazil," he said.

A $20 million golf course is struggling to find players and financing.

A few dozen golfers were on the course on a recent, sunny Saturday. The clubhouse is mostly unfurnished, and it costs non-Brazilians 560 reals ($180) for 18 holes and a cart.

Organizers and the International Olympic Committee say Rio needs time to develop these venues, and fault Brazil's recession for most of the problems.

A prosecutor several months ago disputed this, saying the Olympic Park "lacked planning how to use white elephant" sports venues. Many were built as part of real estate deals that have yet to pan out.

The park offers few amenities: no restaurants, no shade and nothing much to do except gawk at deserted arenas. City hall officials and the federal government say they're planning an event for Aug. 5 to "fill all the arenas" for the day.

The ugly

Rio organizers promised to clean up polluted Guanabara Bay in their winning bid in 2009. During the Olympics, officials used stop-gap measures to keep floating sofas, logs and dead animals from crashing into boats during the sailing events.

Since the Olympics, the bankrupt state of Rio de Janeiro has ceased major efforts to clean the bay, its unwelcome stench often drifting along the highway from the international airport.

"I think it's gotten worse," Brazilian gold-medal sailor Kahena Kunze said in a recent interview. "There was always floating trash, but I see more and more. It's no use hiding the trash because it comes back."

Some of the politicians behind the Olympics have been accused of graft.

Former President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, who wept when Rio was awarded the games, was convicted last month on corruption charges and faces a 9½-year prison term. He is appealing.

Another early booster, former Rio state governor Sergio Cabral, is in jail on corruption charges.

Nuzman, president of the organizing committee, was defeated earlier this year in an election to lead the Pan American Sports Organization. He ran on his record leading the Rio Olympics and finished third in a three-man race.

How to investigate a company's work-life culture

BY PETER JONES
THEJOBNETWORK.COM

We all know that to get where we want to be, certain sacrifices are required — especially when we are starting out and getting the engine going in our careers. That may mean late nights, extra hours and constantly going above and beyond what is expected.

You can be willing to do all this extra labor with a smile on your face and still want the possibility of working remotely for a week in the summer or an afternoon off to see your kid's recital. So, when you're job hunting, here are five ways of finding out (without alerting the hiring manager), whether your potential new company prioritizes work-life balance.

1. Reverse the reference check

They're going to be checking up on you, after all, so why not check up on them? Sift through your online network and see if you know anyone (or anyone who knows anyone) who used to work for the company and might be willing to chat with you. Avoid asking them to answer any of your questions in writing, but do ask them to be candid. Ask about the culture, the flexibility, the diversity and what they would have changed if they had the chance.

2. Stake it out

Try to schedule your interview for early in the morning or late in the day. If it's 7 a.m. or 7 p.m. and the office is crammed, despite being advertised as a 9 to 5 job, then you have your answer. While at the interview, be sure to look for signs of life outside of work: family photos, vacation memorabilia, etc. If you don't get past the lobby or the boardroom, ask for an office tour. Evidence that families and outside interests are prized in the office is a very good sign.

3. Social media stalking

Not the creepy kind, just the quick search. Try to get a sense from different tiers of employees, from executives to interns. Are people complaining? Working all the time? Taking vacations? Do they have families? What sort of press has been generated by the company or its employees?

4. Do your homework

Read up on companies to get a sense of work-life balance policies in your industry. Try Après, Glassdoor or Fairygodboss for starters. If you don't get this job, or decide you don't want this job, then you'll have a good idea of companies you might try next.

5. Ask around it

Direct questions can raise suspicions about your work ethic or intentions. Save them for after you receive the offer and are negotiating with human resources. And, in the interview process, ask questions that might get the answers you want without tipping your hand — questions such as what they love about the company that has nothing to do with their direct work, or the type of person who does best in that environment. You can also ask them to describe the company culture. Pay attention to what they're saying — and what they are not saying.

If you keep your wits about you, it is possible to glean quite a bit about a company's particular work-life balance — all without damaging your chances of getting the job.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
