Students compete for Good Citizen Award

Julie Math, a senior from Northville High School, was chosen as one of this year's Good Citizen Award. Her parents are Marc and Carolyn Math. Her sister and brother are Craig and Rob. The Senior Class Council of the Northville High School honored Math as one of the Good Citizens.

The Northville Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the Chamber's Education and Community Development Committee recently announced the honorees for the Good Citizen Awards. This is an annual program to honor outstanding high school seniors.

These students have worked hard over the years to be eligible for this award. They must be able to show that they have been ethical, diligent and personal, already have a record of service, and who have shown activities and contributions to their community.

The selection was made on the basis of a ballot returned by teachers, students, and parents. The Student Senate of the Northville High School also had a say in the selection.

The Good Citizen Awards were established by the Northville Chamber of Commerce to recognize students who have shown outstanding leadership, contribution, and civic responsibility.
